Summary: When tourists on a fishing charter in Key West, Florida, discover a human arm, suspended detective Andrew Yancy takes the case.

The episode begins with a Narrator/Captain Fitzpatrick's introduction of James Mayberry, an inexperienced fisherman with extremely deep pockets. Being that James pulls a severed arm, shooting the rod, he likely won't be forgetting his first time at sea any time too soon.

The Narrator then introduces viewers to Andrew Yancy, who has been purposely ignoring his ringing cell phone all morning and is described as the simplest of men. It isn't long before Yancy is joined by his mysteriously incessant caller, Rogelio. Their ensuing conversation reveals that although Yancy is currently suspended, Rogelio apparently has something in his car that Sheriff Sonny Summers wants him to escort to Miami. Even though Rogelio assures Yancy there is no faster way back to reinstatement than by getting on Summer's good side, Yancy continually refuses the offer. As the Narrator further introduces Rogelio as Yancy's former partner, he also tells viewers that over the years he has learned exactly how to get what he wants from Yancy. It's merely minutes later that this is proven true.

After briefly learning that the arm likely belongs to a white male in his mid-40s, Yancy learns that Summer is afraid the arm deter tourists. Although Yancy assures him that absolutely nothing could hurt Key West tourism, Summers remains adamant about pawning the discovery off on Miami. Apparently, he's already made plans for a press conference the following day to announce as much. Yancy agrees to take the arm if Summer reinstates him. Summer claims that it is Bonnie Witt and her testimony that is preventing his reinstatement.

Yancy delivers the arm to Doctor Rosa Campesino and immediately feels the need to inform her that the middle finger pose was random rigor mortis. Despite Yancy's charm, Rosa is clearly not an idiot and his day only worsens when he learns that he won't be pawning the arm off on Miami. A brief call with Rogelio leads him to a marsh where he considers ditching the arm as advised but decides otherwise.

As if to remedy the disaster that will ensue with him not ditching the arm, Yancy invites Bonne over for dinner where he tries to convince her to drop the charges. Although they make love in the shower, she shows no signs of dropping the charges. Things only get stranger when the mention of Doctor Clifford Witt shines a light on why she is pressing the charges in the first place. Their evening is abruptly ended when she discovers the arm in the icebox.

It is at this time that the Narrator switches the story to Neville Stafford in the Bahamas. Neville is immediately introduced as an even simpler man than Yancy and his one-room shack confirms the assessment. Just like Yancy, Neville has a partner as well, but his turns out to be a monkey named Driggs. Neville's dreams of the simple life are dashed by a single visit from Mr. Knowles who tells him that his half-sister has sold the property to some real estate mogul named, Christopher.

Yancy has a brief encounter with his new neighbor, Evan Shook before Rogelio shows up asking about the arm. Yancy initially claims that he disposed of it as ordered but it doesn't take Rogelio long to get the truth out of him. It turns out that not disposing of the arm was a smart decision due to Eve Stripling wanting to honor her husband with a funeral and the works. He not only drives several hours to deliver the arm but he questions her like a suspect.

Yancy later discusses his suspicions with Rosa who isn't in the best of moods at the time because she spent the entire morning autopsying a 15-year-old girl shot by her mother's boyfriend. Her mood isn't improved when she learns that his true intentions are to get background on Nicky Stripling. It isn't long after telling him about Nicky's involvement in insurance scams that she realizes he's actually managed to cheer her up. Despite this, she turns down his offer of lunch, claiming that she is already involved with someone. Matters only get worse when he returns to Key West to discover that he's been fired for snooping around.

Merely hours after being fired for poking around the Stripling case, Yancy decides to attend the funeral. He not only notices two Feds in attendance, but he also has an interesting conversation with Caitlin and Simon. Although Caitlin is quick to admit that she didn't have much of a relationship with her father, she is just as fast to accuse Eve of masterminding his death.

Completely out of ideas, Neville spends the remainder of his money and the night buying drinks for several friends, including Willy. Much to his surprise, their drunken debates lead to a possible solution — a visit to the island's most feared Voodoo practitioner, The Dragon Queen. He will later learn that he needs a piece of clothing worn by the developer which prompts a break-in. He narrowly escapes thanks to an assist from Driggs.

At the same time, Yancy appears to be plotting a scheme of his own by having a local beekeeper, Miguel, plant a beehive in the chimney of what appears to be a vacant house. He follows that up with a visit to Captain Fitzpatrick to question him about sharks. This eventually ends up with them at the bar where Yancy meets Fitzpatrick's first mate who actually pulled the arm from the water, Charles Phinney. Yancy's interest only grows when he learns that Phinney recently quit, claiming that he came into a load of cash. After joining Phinney at his table and insulting him in front of Madeline, he storms off into the approaching storm where he is eventually shot by someone on a motorbike.

Neville and Driggs visit the Dragon Queen and YaYa. She appears to appreciate his straight-to-business approach as well as the offering of liquor. Before warning him that the developer might die, she hints at him returning for a different type of business. He doesn't offer much of a response to that but as for the developer, he says whatever is God's Will is God's Will.

The episode ends with Yancy and Madeline watching as the paramedics uselessly attempt to pump life back into Phinney while Neville races to watch Christopher's plane land. It appears to do so without incident.

Summary: Caitlin meets with Yancy to discuss her suspicions about her stepmother Eve. Yancy learns of Eve's secret boyfriend.

The episode begins with Andrew Yancy learning from his lawyer, Montenegro/Monte, that Doctor Clifford Witt has dropped all charges. He is so excited with the news that he doesn't even inquire about any of the details. His streak of luck appears to continue when on his way out, he notices Evan Shook being overrun by angry bees. It only takes a brief call from Caitlin, with assurances that Eve Stripling murdered her father to change things.

In the meantime, Eve has her sights set on getting Neville Stafford off her property and recruits Christopher. While Christopher orders Egg to hasten Neville's departure, Rosa Campesino continues looking into the missing watch. These efforts are soon sidetracked by a call from Mel Campesino, confirming their later plans.

Rogelio quickly tires of Yancy's nagging as they pull into the Key West Station. Yancy appears to be on an all-new level of annoying now that he thinks he's getting his badge back. It's only minutes later that Sheriff Sonny Summers helps him realize his oversight. As it turns out Yancy is getting his badge back, but he's being assigned to restaurant inspection detail. Neville and Driggs's luck doesn't appear to be much better when they return home to find that their house razed. Even worse, he's given ten minutes to collect his belongings and get gone.

Bonnie Witt meets Yancy at the station to claim that she's being forced to leave town but refuses to tell him why. This soon becomes unimportant to him because he realizes they are being followed. After getting dropped off, the vehicle nearly runs him over. Elsewhere, Neville returns to the Dragon Queen's to air his grievances but loses his nerve. When she interrupts his departure, he does tell her that her magic isn't working. He assures him it will in time.

Although Rosa meets Mel and several of her friends at a local bar, she can't keep her mind off the missing watch from the Stripling case. Yancy flexes his new authority by shutting down Brennan. While doing this, he sees Madeline but doesn't get a chance to speak with her because she is gone before he can even go attempt to go after her.

Things continue to get worse for Neville when he joins Willy and Ollie to discover that Christopher has literally transformed their favorite bar overnight. Willy and Ollie don't appear to find the new place as off-putting as Neville, but Charles's brief argument with Egg suggests he isn't happy with the changes either.

By the time Yancy sits down for dinner that evening, Rosa has managed to uncover the make and model of the missing watch. Much to her surprise, Yancy not only refuses to get involved but he blames her partly for his current predicament before hanging up on her. Her subsequent call with her mother doesn't go much better but this time it is Rosa who does the hanging up.

Much to his credit, Yancy attempts to forget about the case but has little success. After discovering that Rogelio is even less interested, he ends up at Peninsula Rentals where he doesn't have the most productive meeting with Brittney. After receiving a call from Caitlin about being late for their meeting, he leaves empty-handed. He continues to separate him from the case but Caitlin appears determined to convince him that Eve is responsible for her father's death. It doesn't take him long to realize that she does make a compelling case but doesn't take the debate.

Egg pays Charles a home visit after learning that he's stolen what he thought he was owed from the bar's register. At the same time, Eve receives Caitlin's threatening message about turning her in to the insurance company for murdering her father. Christopher offers to go with her and even mentions having K.J. Claspers fly them, but she is gone before he even gets out of the shower.

Yancy continues to try to stay away from the case but can't get the meeting with Caitlin out of his mind. This eventually leads him to Eve's house in Miami where Rosa has also just shown up to question Eve about the watch. Much to her surprise, it is Yancy who greets her at the door. They are only spared a few minutes before the Gardeners show up to help themselves to refreshments. Yancy and Rosa seek concealment in the shower and after a good bit of joking; they discover blood and bone shards in the drain. At about the same time, the Gardener discovers them but Caitlin proves to be quick on her feet by pretending to have just purchased the home.

Feeling out of options, Neville flies to Key West to get his money from his Sister, Samara. It doesn't take long to realize they don't have the best relationship but agrees to give him the money. Caitlin is equally surprised when Eve shows up at Simon's church with the request to speak. Despite Eve's tactful approach, Caitlin remains distrustful until she discovers that Eve didn't pawn her father's wedding ring, she is actually wearing it as a charm on her necklace. Eve further alters her image by telling Caitlin that she was named a beneficiary in Nicholas's will. As those meetings took place, Yancy and Rosa were busy collecting the bone shards and making plans to get them tested the following morning.

Yancy returns home where he is confronted by Oklahoma State Bureau Agent, Johnna Russell. As it turns out, Russell is there looking for Clover Chase/Bonnie Witt, who just happens to be a former English teacher wanted for sexually assaulting a student. Bonnie apparently jumped bailed and eluded police for nine years. She would likely have remained undetected if it wasn't for Yancy's YouTube video with Charles Witt becoming such a hit. He doesn't get much time to digest this due to the death wails of a nearby baby deer trapped in Shook's construction work. Russell not only helps him free the deer but gives him a ride to the vet as well. Despite the late hour, Yancy practically leaves the man with no option but to treat the deer.

The episode ends with Ya-Ya and the Dragon Queen performing a ritual on the beach. As they speak and chant, it becomes clear that Neville, Yancy, and Rosa's lives are about to implode.

Summary: Yancy and Rosa continue their search for more information about Nick. Caitlin confronts Eve, leading to a shocking revelation.

The episode begins with Andrew Yancy and Rosa Campesino deciding to question Madeline after confirming that the discovered bone shards are a match with Nick Stripling. Before they can do that, however, Yancy must inspect Samara's restaurant. This is where he meets Driggs and Neville Stafford and ends up cutting them a break.

Madeline immediately attempts to run again upon immediately seeing Yancy but he is prepared this time. Madeline explains her fleeing as past drugs charges.

In addition to admitting that, she also tells them that Charles Phinney was paid to stage the arm incident. She even has the cooler the arm came in, which just happens to be emblazoned with Nick Stripling's company logo, Midwest Mobile Medical.

After Samara gives Neville his take from the sale of his home, Neville returns to Andros with intentions of clearing his mind with a day of fishing. That is ruined by Christopher, who has not only cut his John boat free but shoots at him. At the same time, the Dragon Queen receives more disrespect from Andrea Wendell as she attempts to help her mother, Hope with the crossing over of family patriarch, James Wendell. She and Ya-Ya later discuss the younger generation and their blatant disrespect.

Yancy goes as far as to don a tie before he and Rosa pay a visit to Nick's medical supply company. Their trip is sidelined with a very brief phone call from Bonnie Witt, but it doesn't take long before they get back on track. It is at the medical company that they meet Donald Davis, who immediately assumes Yancy to be a fed, given the tie. Although Yancy and Rosa spend several minutes inflating Donald's ego, it ends up working against them once he decides to take his job more seriously. After discovering several prescriptions written by Israel/Izzy O'Peele, Yancy and Rosa are forced to make a quick exit through the rear entrance. They do escape but Yancy sustains a vicious dog bite on his right butt.

Neville attempts to air his grievances with the Dragon Queen are sidelined thanks to James's funeral. This leads to him visiting Dawnie and Lulu to seek lodging for the evening. Despite Yancy's injury and the urgency to question Israel, he makes Rosa make a special stop at Detective Johnny Mendez's house, where he unearths his mailbox and throws it in the front yard. The Narrator/Captain Fitzpatrick informs viewers that Mendez is the reason Yancy isn't a cop anymore but doesn't expand.

Later that evening, while Rosa and Yancy learn about Izzy and Nick's ghost-patient scam, Neville confronts the Dagon Queen about the lack of results from her curse. Izzy refuses to say anymore once he learns of Phinney's death. Yancy leaves him with his contact information. Neville's meeting doesn't go much better thanks to the Dragon Queen blaming the curse's failure on his lack of belief. He gives her an extra $500.00 to speed things along. Although she and Ya-Ya take the money, they tell him he will need to sacrifice something that he loves to prove his faith. Without thinking twice, he gives them Driggs.

Izzy is clearly scared after learning about Phinney's death, which leads to him calling Eve Stripling. Much to his surprise, she does make him feel better but claims to not be able to do much for him unless he comes to Miami. The conversation ends with him promising to seriously consider the trip.

Elsewhere over ice cream, Yancy shares Christopher's Tour brochure that he took from Izzy's refrigerator. With the knowledge of Christopher's last name, Grunion, they make plans for a later background check. Yancy attempts to fill the remaining time with what Rosa refers to as 'small talk,' but she loses interest quickly.

In need of a place to spend the night, Neville visits his uncle Charles, which nearly leads to him getting shot again. They very briefly discuss their shared problems with Egg and Christopher before Charles makes him promise to sleep on things before making a decision. Neville agrees.

Yancy continues to be a thorn in Evan Shook's side when he likely destroys any hopes Evan had of selling his home to Barb and Buzz. He does this by cleverly playing up the viciousness of the neighborhood dogs, using his own wound.

True to his word, Neville spent the entire night thinking about his problems with Christopher. He even spends several hours the following morning thinking about it while fishing. Yancy is practically doing the same thing when he receives a call from Madeline, with fears that she's being tailed. He gives her a brief lesson on how to pick up a tail which surprisingly enough appears to make her feel better. It's only seconds later when he receives a text from Izzy that he wants to talk.

Rosa doesn't know it, but her meeting with Officer Murphy reveals that she now has a tail of her own, Detective Mendez. After briefly mentioning her lack of success with finding any information on Christopher, she inquires about Yancy. Murphy describes him as a human anchor but otherwise, a decent guy.

Yancy meets Sheriff Sonny Summers and Regelio/Ro at Stoney's Crab Shack to pick up his department-issued vehicle. This is where he not only learns that the Stripling case has now been officially deemed an accident thanks to Caitlin, but Ro has been poking around the case as well. Yancy's next visit is with Caitlin where he accuses her of declaring the death an accident so she and Eve could split the insurance money. She denies the claim and her expression suggests that she's genuinely hurt by his harsh remarks.

Yancy arrives just seconds after Izzy is shot in the head. After a very brief discussion with Izzy's neighbor that reveals nothing helpful, Yancy calls Rosa. Surprisingly enough, Rosa is right in the middle of a debate with Mel Campesino about him. Their conversation reveals that Rosa has not only been thinking about dating Yancy but Heather the Weather Girl hasn't shown up for work.

Yancy ends up at the morgue after failing to get Rosa on the phone. It appears that in his haste to get away from Izzy's apartment, he's ripped open his stitches. He and Rosa discuss the case while she reinforces the stitches. It's not long after he fails to reach Madeline on the phone that he and Rosa end up racing to the t-shirt shop where she works.

After giving it a lot of thought, Neville breaks into Christopher's office. As soon as he finds a USB stick hidden in the far reaches of a desk drawer, Egg shows up. Neville tells Egg that Christopher is ruining the island but he doesn't appear to care as long as he's getting paid for his work. Despite that, it only takes Neville pulling out Charles's revolver to get him to back down. Neville slugs him in the face on his way out.

Becoming more and more concerned for Madeline, Yancy calls and asks Ro to swing by her work. It turns out he's right in the middle of doing dishes after having dinner with Montenegro/Monte.

Caitlin pulls a weapon of her own when she unexpectedly visits Eve to accuse her of killing Nick. Rosa appears to become more attracted to Yancy after seeing how much he fears for her safety. Madeline ends up being perfectly fine and Ro arrives shortly after he and Rosa do.

The episode ends with Eve refusing to admit to Nick's death because he is still alive. This is when it is revealed that Nick is actually Christopher and he's missing an arm.

Summary: A flashback reveals Eve and Nick's origins, how Yancy got suspended, and Nick and Izzy's nefarious business dealings.

The episode begins with Caitlin learning that her father, Christopher/Nick Stripling, is still alive. After the brief reunion, the story goes back in time to reveal how Nick and Eve Stripling's worlds collided. It turns out that Eve was a struggling actress while Caitlin was a budding model. At just 17 and being a con man himself, Nick was cautious about Caitlin's career path, which eventually leads to him escorting her to a modeling agency club party one evening. This is where he meets Eve, which doesn't go his way at first but after he recognizes her from an auto insurance commercial she recently done, he has her eating out of his hand and vice versa. Although Nick and Eve will eventually go on to get married, she and Caitlin never really appear to bond.

Right around the time that Nick and Israel O'Peele made their joint venture into the Super Rollie Scam; Andrew Yancy was still a suit-wearing detective with his nose to the grindstone. Nick wants to bring Eve in on the scam and to do so they arrange a whole elaborate scenario where Eve pretends to uncover their scam on her own and threatens to turn them in. Right at the right of the moment, they reveal the truth to a much-relieved Izzy.

Johnny Mendez was still a beat cop at this time but it was his scam with the Crime Busters Tip Line that put Yancy on his trail. It is later revealed that Mendez had a whole network of associates who would report old crimes to the tip line and collect on the rewards. This discovery begins Yancy's campaign to bring down Mendez. Not from lack of trying but Yancy's campaign would only turn out to be half successful due to the department's fear of embarrassment. Mendez would get passed up as detective for several years while Yancy surprisingly gets shipped off to the Keys.

Yancy would eventually adapt to the Keys lifestyle and his relocation gets him even closer to his father, Jim Yancy, who is constantly preaching at him about letting things go and opening up to nature. On one particular fish outing, Jim tells him how it was an encounter with a blue manatee that got him to adopt that sort of mantra. The blue manatee story is apparently one that Yancy has heard several times. During this time, Yancy would also meet and build relationships with Rogelio Burton/Ro and Bonnie Witt.

To celebrate the success of their scam, Nick and Izzy plan a joint family vacation to Andros. It was on this trip that Eve realized her dream of opening a resort on the beach. She would soon make this Nick's dream as well, which is where their problems began. After dramatically increasing their scooter sales, the Department of Justice would come snooping around their business. It didn't take them long to realize something wasn't right.

Although Izzy and Nick had plenty of time and resources to go on the run, Eve wasn't having any part of it. Nick certainly wasn't willing to go down for his crime, so this eventually led to him faking his death. Yancy's relationship problems are no better at the moment because this is right around the time that he discovers Bonnie's husband, Doctor Clifford Witt is a pill-pushing domestic abuser. Nick's extremely brief and estranged call with Caitlin would reveal that she was just beginning to conquer her drug addiction thanks to Simon. Izzy's addiction was just taking off and his current situation certainly wasn't helping matters.

While Izzy plots the staged discovery of Nick's arm with Charles Phinney, Nick has an unpleasant encounter with YaYa and the Dragon Queen. Phinny would eventually leverage Nick for more money. If not for Eve, he would have likely paid and forgotten about it but she convinces him to handle the matter differently. Izzy will later suffer the same faith.

Immediately after killing Izzy, Nick will go into a bit of a depressed state. Upon returning to Eve in the parking garage, he will question their actions for the first time. This leads to a bit of an argument that Heather McNally just happens to overhear. Eve's killing of Heather puts the story back in the present.

Nick spends time with Caitlin while Ro receives a call from Detective Mendez confirming that he can now close the Phinney case. From the situation that Mendez describes, it doesn't just appear that Nick killed Izzy but he's also framed him. At the same time, Yancy and Rosa Campesino conspire about how they can keep Izzy's case from getting written off as a suicide. Much to his surprise, this discussion quickly goes from an autopsy to a romantic encounter.

Nick and Eve's afternoon on the beach with Caitlin doesn't go nearly as well when they begin conspiring about how to deal with people who might get in their way. Despite Yancy being at the top of both their lists, things immediately become confrontational when Eve mentions Caitlin. There's a bit of arguing but Eve eventually convinces him that she was just throwing around ideas.

As Rosas learns about Heather's death and Mel Campesino replacing her as the station's weather girl, Mendez gets a visit from Izzy's neighbor. Mendez has already written the case off as a suicide and maintains that assessment until the neighbor recognizes Yancy's photo on the wall.

Although he's just been named a prime suspect in a murder case, Yancy is in an even worse place when the episode ends. While leaving a message to Rosa that Christopher and Nick could be one and the same, he's attacked from behind by Nick.
