Summary: A bodyguard, who's had a history in Afghanistan after rescuing a train from a suicide terrorist bomber, is assigned to protect the home secretary.

Sergeant David Budd, an Afghanistan war veteran and Police officer, is on a train to London Euston when he foils a suicide bomber's plot to blow up the train. Due to his actions, both terrorist suspects avoid being shot, enabling them to be arrested. His heroism results in his promotion to serve on the detail of Julia Montague, the Home Secretary.

There is tension between the two, with Montague's steadfast support of the Iraq War and War in Afghanistan and plans to infringe civil liberties by updating RIPA conflicting with Budd's experience as a soldier. Her ex-husband and Chief Whip Roger Penhaligon suspects her of exploiting the terrorist threat, and that she intends to launch a bid to replace the Prime Minister.

Meanwhile, Budd struggles to deal with both his PTSD and his deteriorating relationship with his wife. Budd meets Andy Apsted, an old army friend, in the anti-war Veterans Peace Group. Apsted is disgusted with his friend's new career.

Summary: With the UK terror threat level raised to severe, Home Secretary Montague holds secret meetings with the Director General of the Security Service, side-stepping her own Minister for Counter Terrorism and the Police. Specialist Protection Officer Budd is on high alert as Secretary Montague's hard-line stance on national security propels her further into the public eye. With his home life becoming more difficult, it appears as if Budd's natural animosity towards the Home Secretary is beginning to fade.

Stephen Hunter-Dunn, Director General of MI5, informs Montague of intelligence suggesting a terrorist plan to attack Budd's children's school, in retaliation for his foiling of the train bombing. He advises her to keep it secret, fearing a member of the police might have leaked Budd's information to the terrorists. Montague later controversially transfers investigation of the foiled bombing to MI5.

The attack on the school is prevented by a police armed response vehicle, but the terrorists manage to detonate the bomb in the street, killing five police officers. Budd's family is relocated to a safe house, and although he is removed from Montague's detail, she insists that he be reinstated. She also arranges the offer of a place at a special school for Budd's son.

Returning from a COBRA meeting, Montague's car comes under sniper fire that kills her driver, but she and Budd survive due to the car's armour plating. Budd pursues and corners the sniper, revealed to be Apsted, who kills himself.

That evening, Budd and Montague have sex. The next day he is instructed by Sampson and his superior, CSU Lorraine Craddock, to record Montague's meetings. They also tell him she had prior knowledge that his children's school would be a target.

Summary: As the capital shudders in the wake of the recent attacks, Specialist Protection Officer PS David Budd is under more pressure than ever to keep the Home Secretary Julia Montague safe.

Montague is given a tablet by a man named Richard Longcross, containing compromising information about the Prime Minister.

Budd is unable to find Longcross in the Police National Computer, causing him to suspect he is with the security service.

Montague corners the PM at Chequers unannounced, and appears to blackmail him into organising a reshuffle that would allow her to take his place.

Budd is interviewed by Counter Terrorism Command detectives Sharma and Rayburn, who seem unconvinced by his account of the sniper attack. RIPA 18 passes the third House of Commons vote.

Travis meets Penhaligon to express concern about Montague's relationship with MI5.

Budd and Montague's sexual relationship begins to deteriorate when he accidentally attacks her during a PTSD fit.

Before Montague gives her speech at St. Matthew's College, she tells Budd that she knew the name of his children's school because it had been one of many possible targets. She tells him that she wants him by her side, not because it is his job, but through choice.

As she is giving her speech, Budd sees her PR advisor Tahir Mahmood outside the auditorium, but allows him in after checking his briefcase. However, seconds later, as Mahmood is approaching the stage, a bomb explodes before Budd and Knowles can reach him, leaving Montague's fate uncertain.

Summary: The events of the night before play out for the Home Secretary Julia Montague and her Specialist Protection Officer David Budd.

It is revealed that Montague, Knowles and Mahmood were killed in the blast. Mike Travis, Montague's junior Minister of State, is appointed Acting Home Secretary and transfers responsibility for investigating the bombings back to Counter Terrorism Command. The police believe that Mahmood was responsible for the bombing, although CCTV is not conclusive that the explosion emanated from the briefcase.

Budd falls under suspicion for not spotting the bomb when he spoke to Mahmood. DCI Sharma and DS Rayburn interview him and search his property.

The next day, the PM announces that Montague is dead. CCTV from the House of Commons shows adviser Rob MacDonald handing Mahmood the briefcase. Before he is interviewed by police, Travis tells him to stick to their pre-arranged story. Budd attempts to commit suicide, but fails because someone has replaced the bullets in his hidden pistol with blank rounds.

Returning to Montague's hotel, he discovers the security footage has been tampered with to delete Longcross's visit.

On orders from Sampson, he accompanies Rayburn to interview Nadia about who had supplied the explosives for the foiled train attack, but she does not identify the bomb-maker among the pictures she is shown, which include one of Mahmood.

Summary: David's theories about a conspiracy at the heart of government look increasingly plausible. But concerns about David's psychological health are raised, and allegations about his and Julia's professional conduct come to light.

Analysis has established that bomb was not in the briefcase, but under the stage, throwing into question Mahmood's culpability. Rayburn discovers that CCTV footage from before the attack has been altered, and has Budd create an E-FIT of Longcross.

Apsted is identified by SO15, with his past as an army EOD officer raising suspicion that he might have been the bomb maker.

Nadia identifies Longcross as the man her husband met with.

Budd researches the kompromat Montague was given, and ambushes Penhaligon at his constituency surgery, accusing him of trying to steal the tablet while she was in hospital.

Hunter-Dunn denies any association with Longcross to Travis, but still refuses to share information with the police.

MacDonald gives a voluntary statement revealing that he and the party leadership planned to embarrass Montague by altering her speech, but never intended to harm her.

Budd meets with a gun dealer and attempts to acquire the same type of sniper rifle used by Apsted.

Luke Aikens (the man who collected Dyson after she was fired) is revealed to be a figure in organised crime and another party who would be targeted by RIPA 18.

When information regarding Budd's relationship with Montague and his attempted suicide is leaked to Craddock, she suspends him from duty and revokes his firearms license. He visits Montague's flat and finds the tablet hidden in a photo frame.

Guest Stars: Daniel Moore (SO15 Officer), Rosie Jones (Police Officer), Gina Gangar (Passerby), Oliver Devoti (PS Mason / SCO19 Officer), Kerri McLean (Surveillance Officer), Chike Chan (Daniel Chung — Expo Officer), Sarah Malin (Nadia's Solicitor), Bella Padden (Ella Budd), Matthew Stagg (Charlie Budd), Frank Gardner (Reporter), Mishal Husain (Reporter), Martha Kearney (Reporter), Susan Rae (Reporter), Sophie Raworth (Reporter), Nick Robinson (Reporter), Justin Webb (Reporter), Vicki Young (Reporter), Thea Balich (Ava Eddingham), Steve Doyle (DPG (SO6) Police Officer), Steve Owles (Police Officer), Kamahl Sami-Miller (Shane (College Protestor)), Dywayne Thomas (DPG (SO6) Police Officer)

Summary: Principal Protection Officer David Budd has made a major breakthrough in the investigation into the attack on the Home Secretary, but his enquiries have put him in mortal danger. With the clock ticking and no-one left who believes him, David attempts to prove his innocence. But the evidence against him begins to stack up.

Aikens abducts Budd who wakes in a suicide vest of the same type that Nadia had on the train, but fitted with a dead man's switch. He emerges onto a street and police officers arrive at the scene.

Meanwhile, the police suspect Budd's involvement in the conspiracy via Apsted. They move him to a park away from buildings. MI5 is monitoring the scene; suspecting that he is being watched, Budd gives false information about the location of the kompromat, and MI5 sends Longcross to retrieve it.

However, Budd has booby-trapped the flat with tear gas, which temporarily blinds Longcross, who is then arrested. After a stand-off, Vicky runs towards Budd to prevent the police from shooting him.

Still wearing the vest, Budd leads the police to his flat, where Vicky gives them the kompromat and the blank rounds that confirm Budd's innocence. The explosives officer helps Budd disarm the vest.

Budd flees to Dyson's flat and forces her to get Aikens to meet his police insider. Budd follows him and discovers that the insider is Craddock. She confesses to providing information about Montague's movements that enabled her assassination. She admits to choosing Budd to be Montague's PPO because his background made him a perfect fall guy.

Nadia is interviewed again and reveals that she lied about recognising Longcross's e-fit. She is an engineer who built the explosive devices. She had remembered Budd's description of his children, which led to the attack on their school.

The kompromat is leaked, apparently by Sampson, and it is implied that the Prime Minister and the Director-General of MI5 will resign.

In the final scenes, Budd starts occupational health treatment, and he and Vicky travel with their children to visit his parents.
