Summary: After a terrorist attack on the US Capitol during the annual State of the Union Address kills the President and his cabinet, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Thomas Kirkman, having been named the Designated Survivor during the address, is sworn in as President of the United States. He is soon thrust into a world he could not possibly comprehend.

Secretary of State Tom Kirkman and his wife, Alex, are in Washington trying to talk their daughter into going to bed over the phone. She wants to know when they are coming home. They sit back and relax to watch TV. It goes fuzzy. The Secret Service come in. Kirkman goes to the window to see explosions happening outside.

Earlier that morning, Tom makes breakfast for his family. His son isn't thrilled. He's a bad cook. Tom wants him to come home after school to watch his sister, he has the State of the Union to attend. Tom heads to work. He is talking to his assistant about the bug event.

Tom meets with a member of the cabinet, Charlie. Tom finds out behind closed doors that he will be offered an Ambassador Ship under the UN. Tom isn't thrilled.

Tom's wife, Alex, is angry. She wants him to fight against what is clearly a demotion. She doesn't want to move the kids, Penny and Leo. Tom agrees. He is going to make this work.

Back to the present, Tom and Alex are being rushed to safety now that he is a designated survivor. The Capitol has been attacked with no word on the president or his detail. The Secret Service gets word that the Capitol and the Congress are gone, they have been killed, making Tom the president of the United States.

In a bar, onlookers watch the TV reports, the capital is burning with sirens in the background ringing out. An FBI agent gets into her car and leaves.

Tom and Alex are sworn in as the president and first lady. They are quickly separated with Tom going to service operations, a command center with dozens of people working on securing the situation. Tom asks that everyone take a moment for their fallen friends.

Tom wants to go around the table to meet everyone. No one is allowed to talk to the press. Tom's head is spinning, he isn't sure what to do. He runs to the bathroom and gets sick. A speech writer, Seth, is in the other stall. He doesn't know that he's talking to the new president, who he thinks needs to step aside. He calls Kirkman by the wrong name, Kirkland, calling him a follower, not a leader. They come face to face. Seth is embarrassed. He tells Seth he has 52 minutes to write a speech for the public.

The FBI is working with EMS who is digging through the rubble for survivors. They don't know who is responsible yet for the explosions. They start moving on collecting evidence. The city is a disaster of ash, fire and rescue crews.

The speech writers are all upset that Kirkman has become the president. Meanwhile, Tom is trying to figure out how all of this happened. Alex also thinks it's surreal. Penny is scared. Alex wonders if they should run, get out, now that they are a target. An agent interrupts them, Leo isn't at his friend's house. They need to track him down.

Tom meets Major Cameron, who teaches him where all of the nuclear weapons are located. All 3 pages of US enemies are denying responsibility.

Leo is busy clubbing and selling bags of drugs. After making an exchange, the Secret Service show up and take Leo in. They pinged his phone and found him. Leo wants to know where they are going, he thought he was headed home.

Emily Rose, Tom's assistant, is trying to get to him but she isn't on the list. Seth is going over the speech with Tom and Alex. Seth reminds him that he can't be relaxed, he needs to be stronger than ever before. He is speaking to the world.

It looks like the Ukrainians are rushing to cut off the oil supply while the US is down on their luck and in turmoil.

Emily has made it through the gates and she wants to see Tom. She wants to be by his side when he needs her the most.

The General wants to do something to show force, to show US enemies that they are still strong even if they are down. Tom is against it. He doesn't want to do anything just yet, even if the whole table is against him. He gives the General the go ahead to prep his bombers.

Leo tells Penny he is scared but their dad isn't. Tom overhears this. FBI Agent Wells is on her cell, trying to find someone she loves. A bomb is discovered in the rubble. Everyone runs for cover as a bomb sniffing dog and an officer circle around it.

The bomb squad goes in, suited up, to remove the bomb as the FBI looks on. They clear the scene after it is determined to be a dud.

Tom meets with the Ukrainian ambassador, he wants them to pull their destroyers back. He threatens to attack Iran if he doesn't dock his destroyers. He means business and doesn't want to get off on the wrong foot. Tom gives him 3 hours to pull back.

Some of the FBI thinks its ISIS while Agent Wells thinks otherwise. She thinks its someone, a group, who do not want to claim credit for the attacks because they have more planned.

Tom tells Alex that he has to do it. She tells him that she is always on his side.

Harry and the General meet to talk about how they can remove Tom. He isn't experienced. The US is in a state of war, the General reminds him. They have to do something.

Seth brings Tom the speech and takes his glasses as he goes live to speak to the American public about the change in office and the attacks.

Summary: Hours after the attack on the Capitol, President Kirkman steps into his new role as commander-in-chief. In the midst of the chaos and confusion of the situation that threatens to tear the country apart, he's also faced with dangerous challenges and adversaries, in addition to the shocking news that he wasn't the only designated survivor.

The FBI are heightening security in every location following the discovery of bombs in the rubble in last week's episode.

President Kirkman is making his first address to the nation. News reports call Kirkman's speech ineffective in the wake of the attacks.

He watches the coverage before making his way to the West Wing as everyone stares at him as he passes by. He has a briefing in the Oval Office. Planes and trains are on lockdown. They are looking at groups that have the ability to bring explosives into the capitol.

Chaos breaks out as everyone disagrees on a strategy. Kirkman leaves the room unnoticed. He hides away in another room, telling secret service to give him a moment. A large desk he sees a placard with his title on the chair and one for the president. He chuckles at the irony of the situation.

He commands his assistants Emily and to help him put together a cabinet and to keep him up to speed on what is happening out there.

Meanwhile, Kirkman's speech writer Seth is making his way down the street with a backpack. The police stop him on foot and question him about what is in his bag. He shows ID and they let him go.

Kirkman meets with Seth. The president wants to apologize to him for writing a speech he delivered ineffectively. News reports interrupt them with stories of police locking down on Muslim neighborhoods. Kirkman finds out that the Governor has handed those orders and he isn't backing down from the president who disagrees with his approach.

Kirkman has 175 personal phone calls and a congresswoman who he discovers is also a designated survivor. Kirkman sits with her, sharing his doubt in his leadership. She is determined to get through this just like they did when 9/11 happened. She wants him to make it his house and lead the way as he sees fit.

Kirkman's assistants hunt for cabinet members, arguing the whole time. Kirkman and his wife talk about the Governor's lack of respect. They are interrupted with word that it was Al-Sakar who blew up the capitol. His men are 75% confident that it was Al-Sakar.

Law informant is informed that they need to reach out to their sources now that they think it is Al-Sakar. Agent Wells gets pulled in by the deputy director and reports that she doesn't think it is Al-Sakar. She thinks someone is setting them up.

The president and Alex get ready to go to the capitol with Kevlar vests on. Alex is breaking down she is so nervous. Kirkman asks the secret service agent what his code name was when he was in charge of HUD — "glasses, sir."

They arrive to see all of the rumble, the clean-up crew, and the cameras. It is a surreal sight. Kirkman talks with the deputy director. Kirkman takes the vest off, he wants to protect confidence.

At the White House, Penny is watching her dad on TV at the capitol. Kirkman takes a megaphone and thanks the men and women who are cleaning up the rubble. He observes their dedication. Meanwhile, the crowd takes notice of their phones, alerted by breaking reports of a Muslim teen beaten by police in Michigan. Some of the crowd grows angry, a scuffle breaks out and Kirkman is rushed off.

The deputy is upset that Agent Wells has given him all the facts. He will tell Kirkman about her theory if she can prove it.

Kirkman wants to know what he can do to make the Governor stand down. Every order he could put into effect will how he appears to the public. Alex is angry at Leo for leaving Penny alone to see her father on TV.

The general and Aaron are still in cahoots, discussing how they can get rid of Kirkman. Alex tries to help her husband find a solution to the Michigan problem. A call comes in, the boy from Michigan just died.

Kirkman meets with Royce via Skype, commanding him to stand down. Kirkman tells him that he picked up three classified operatives and if he doesn't stand down he will be obstructing a federal case. Kirkman tells his team that it was all a bluff after Royce agrees to stand down. Kirkman pulls Seth aside and asks him about his morning. Kirkman talks to him about his doubts about Sakar. He offers Seth a ride home with the secret service. He declines.

Kirkman asks his assistant for the number of the Michigan boy's parents. Sitting in a dark room with the TV on mute, Kirkman makes the call, apologizing while getting emotional.

Kirkman returns to the capitol to shake hands in the dark of the night, thanking everyone for their service.

In the makeshift FBI tent, we see who Agent Wells longs to see in the form of a picture on a missing persons board. She is alerted to news that there is a survivor in the rubble.

Summary: The FBI's investigation into the Capitol bombing continues, with Agent Hannah Wells starting to develop her own theories as to who's responsible. Meanwhile, President Kirkman and his staff deal with a high-level security breach of the White House, which they try to keep secret as Tom prepares for his first TV interview as POTUS.

The episode starts with Hannah watching as a survivor is pulled out of the mess at the Capitol. The guy is in bad shape. It's a Congressman named Peter McLeish. So far he's the sole survivor that has been found. The guy is a decorated war hero and very popular.

Emily, Aaron and Seth watch it on the news as Kirkman comes into the Oval. He thanks them for coming in early. Seth is working on the former President's eulogy and he says his son Tyler is coming in to help. Aaron says they're looking for verification on the source of the attack.

Emily says he's got an interview with Elizabeth Vargas. The lights flicker and everyone begins to panic. Aaron says there should not be a blackout. They worry they might be under attack. The lights come on but the phones are dead and they realize it's a digital intrusion.

They show that someone is headed for the Oval. Ritter goes running. Ritter tells him to get away from his computer. They tell him the White House was hacked and gather up all the computers. Later, Kirkman gets an update and Seth says the public won't like this.

Kirkman asks what they were after and Ritter says they don't know who it was yet or what they were after. Kirkman worries it's the same people that bombed the Capitol. Seth wants to cancel Vargas but they decide it looks bad. Aaron pushes Kirkman on choosing a Chief of Staff.

Kirkman scoffs at him and sends his team out. Hann is at the office looking at the board of victims from the attack. McLeish is moved over to the blank survivors board. Hannah wonders how the guy survived. Atwood says it happens.

Hannah wants to go talk to McLeish and get his statement. Atwood reluctantly agrees she can go. The only computer hacked was Kirkman's. They find a file on Kirkman's computer that looks like it came from overseas.

Aaron hassles Emily about being a bit late to work and she says her boyfriend proposed that morning. Aaron says that always happens after a disaster. Emily says he wants her to say yes so he can get Chief of Staff. Aaron denies it and says she's lucky.

Aaron and Emily meet with Kimble about cabinet choices since she's all of Congress. She asks about the security issue that morning. She says she saw the IT staff moving computers from the West Wing. They fib to her but then Aaron and Emily are called away from the meeti Kirkman tells Aaron and Emily that no data was taken, but something was left. It's a message from Majid Nassar and it confirms that Al-Sakar is taking credit for the attack. General Cochrane is smug and says now they know the enemy. Hmm. Seems a little too convenient doesn't it?

Why not just post the video online? Does this remind anyone of the Mandarin from Iron Man 3? Is that an actor? The military people tell him that it's a match for Majid Nassar. Kirkman asks why not just release it on Al Jazeera like normal and says it doesn't feel right.

Another adviser tells him that sometimes the group takes credit for attacks that they didn't do. Kirkman asks them for doubts. Atwood stands and says one of his agents has a theory that the evidence was manipulated to point to Al-Sakar intentionally.

Atwood says his agent is solid. Cochrane asks for his orders. Kirkman thinks and says keep the video quiet and find Nassar right now no matter what cave he's hiding in. Kirkman shows the video to Kimble and say since she's Congress, he wanted to loop her in but doesn't want it to go public yet.

Kirkman says it could prompt a national call to arms. Kimble thinks it's a good idea but Kirkman says uniting American through war may not be the best route. Kimble says she'll do what he asks and wishes him luck with Vargas and the interview.

Hannah goes to meet McLeish at the hospital and asks how he is. He says he's lucky to be alive. Hannah asks about the events of the night. McLeish says he was sitting in his seat watching the president speak then everything went black.

McLeish asks why is he the only survivor. He surprises her when he grabs her and pulls her closer and says please let me know what you find out. Kirkman meets with Tyler, the dead President's son. Seth is there too and asks for Tyler's input on the eulogy.

Tyler says his father was a great man but he was just dad to him. He says he had the hardest job in the world but was still always there for him and now he's not.

Alex and Penny unpack Leo's stuff for him and chat. Penny finds a packet of pills and hands them to Alex who covers for him. She opens the drawer and also finds a thick roll of cash. Emily gives Kirkman last-minute notes and Aaron is there too.

Kirkman sits for the interview with Elizabeth Vargas who brings up Royce and the near-riot. Kirkman is very positive. Vargas asks about how he was HUD secretary and now President. Kirkman says he never had Presidential aspirations.

Vargas asks him about President Richmond firing him the day he died and asks if he has no business being President of the United States. Kirkman steps away to speak to Aaron and Emily. Aaron says he has no idea how they got that info.

Emily says tell the truth and says he wasn't fired. Aaron says don't admit to it. Aaron and Emily bicker and she says he can't start his presidency with a lie. He goes back and takes his seat. Kirkman asks her to ask the question again.

He says he was offered an ambassadorship and had not accepted yet. Vargas asks if the President wanted him gone and Kirkman says yes. Hannah looks at footage of the Capitol and at McLeish in his seat. The footage cut out before the explosion.

Hannah looks at another angle and sees a woman with a camera and Hannah asks to download the woman's cloud. Hannah says to get it and says this is the greatest act of terror since 9/11. She says they have to play dirty and tells him to hack the account.

Leo searches his drawer for his pills and cash and Alex confronts him and asks if it's MDMA. She says her son is a drug dealer and says it's possession with intent and says his little sister found it and it would have killed her.

Alex has to leave for the funeral but tells Leo they are not done with this. They head to the funeral. Kirkman asks Alex what's up and she says it's Leo but it can wait. They head inside where the President's body lies in state. Seth hands him his speech.

Tyler approaches and says he saw his interview clip and says his dad fired him and he won't let him use his dad's funeral as a PR stunt. Emily says he can't do that and says you're the President. Kirkman says they'll respect his wishes for now.

Kirkman tells Alex what Tyler said. Tyler takes the podium and says his dad loved his job and the people he worked with and says he has someone there that his father spoke about with great respect. He introduces Kimble. Alex says this is bad. Kirkman says this is what you get for being honest in DC — opportunists.

Kimble takes the podium and delivers the eulogy that Kirkman should have. She called Richmond her friend. She makes a passionate speech that earns her a standing ovation and Kirkman has no choice but to stand too.

Outside, Ritter tells Alex that Leo left the White House. Kirkman gives Kimble the cold shoulder. Seth, Aaron and Emily check in on social media that shows a wave of negativity about Kirkman. Ritter takes Alex to Leo who went back to their old house.

Leo tells Alex he doesn't know why he did it. He says he knows he screwed up and people do stuff without reasons. Alex says the White House did not cause their problems, those problems were already there. She says she didn't tell his dad yet.

She tells Leo to be at family dinner and they'll deal with it then. She grabs a pic off the fridge and leaves. Kirkman leaves a voice mail for Tyler when Seth comes in to chat. He tells him that he ran in some staffers that were close to the President.

He says Tyler hadn't talked to his dad for the last two years. Seth and Kirkman see a leak of the video and the Pres says he thinks Kimble leaked the video. He's angry and wants her on the phone now.

He says Tyler hadn't talked to his dad for the last two years. Seth and Kirkman see a leak of the video and the Pres says he thinks Kimble leaked the video. He's angry and wants her on the phone now. Kirkman brings her in and reams her.

Kimble says she didn't leak the video but says it's good for him. She says it will take the attention off his Vargas interview. Kirkman says that group may not have done the attack. Kimble says like it or not he has to act and is the Commander in Chief.

Kirkman asks if it's true she doesn't want to be President and she says "for now" then makes it clear, she'll run later. Atwood calls in Hannah and asks about the hack she asked for. He says this is not the wild West. He says she jeopardizing the case.

Hannah says she understands. Atwood says Scott Wheeler is among the confirmed dead. Hannah is stunned and tearful. Atwood tells her sorry. She was involved with Scott and is surprised Atwood knew. The guy was married and she says he told her he was leaving his wife.

Hannah says she went too far but Atwood says the hack request was just one bad call. He says make good ones from now on. Hannah agrees. Aaron hears from his team that the Al-Sakar video has changed the conversation. He tells Kirkman that it changed things.

Kirkman tells Aaron he knows he leaked the video. Aaron says he did the best thing for him. He says the country will unite behind him and Kirkman says he's not ready to declare war and they're still not sure. Kirkman says that was insubordinate to him when he leaked it.

Aaron says lots of people would love to see Kirkman fail but he wants to help him thrive and succeed. Aaron says he thinks he made the best move for him and then offers him a letter of resignation and says he can accept it any time. Kirkman takes it from him.

Tom stashes the letter in his desk and then Tyler shows up as requested. Kirkman sits to talk to him and says he owes him an apology. Kirkman says he has a story for him and Tyler asks if it's the one where he got fired.

He tells him that his dad was at a recital of his last year hidden away in the back and says he talked an hour in a cabinet meeting about his performance. Kirkman gives him a program and says he gave them out to all the cabinet members and says his dad was so proud of him.

Tyler asks if he can keep the program and thanks Kirkman and calls him Mr President. Tyler leaves. Hannah sits crying in her car later. Her phone chimes — it's Chuck the FBI hacker. He says she needs to come see the video feed ASAP.

Kirkman calls Emily in to talk and says she was right to tell him to be honest and says he's been thinking about his Chief of Staff position. He says he's going with Aaron. She's stunned. He says he needs someone who can think differently from him and her.

Kirkman says he still needs her and this position is beyond what they expected and he's scared. He says he's scared he'll fail the nation and is going to appoint her as his special advisor so she has full access. Emily thanks him and says she'll speak up when she disagrees with Aaron.

She thanks him and goes. Kirkman looks at the clock and says — family dinner — and sighs. Aaron is in his new office and pulls out a bottle to celebrate. Emily comes by to congratulate him. He says she got a fiancé and he got a job but she says she told the guy no.

Emily tells Aaron not to get too comfortable because that position gets replaced all the time. Kirkman sees the empty table and goes to sit. The door opens and Penny comes to hug him. He asks why she's up so late. Alex says they waited up.

Alex says Leo is over at a friend's house. But Leo is there and says he changed his mind. He sits down and says family dinner. They smile. Hannah comes to see Chuck who says he hacked the cloud. The woman caught two photos before the explosion and in the second one, McLeish is gone.

Chuck says the guy wasn't there and that's how he survived. Kirkman calls Aaron and says he forced his hand today by releasing that video so now he needs to make sure they find Al-Sakar fast. Aaron agrees and says good night.

Aaron meets a woman who hands over a file on Kirkman. He asks if there's anything good in it and she says it depends on whose side you're on.

Summary: The prospect of war hangs over Kirkman when he learns who is behind the attack on the Capitol, while at the same time he deals with brewing domestic troubles. As Emily is tapped to monitor the situation at home, Alex feels uneasy about her decision to reach out to Hookstraten for help.

The episode starts with a chase in a city far away. A man dials a satellite phone and logs onto a website. He types say Nassar location confirmed. Men take him and take the laptop. At the White House, Kirkman talks to Aaron for an update. Aaron says Kimble is there and she presses him for an update on Nassar. He says she doesn't have clearance for all the info. Emily comes in and says Governor Royce is arresting Muslims again and says he's an illegitimate president. Kirkman doesn't like it.

Emily says the Muslims are planning a peaceful protest. Emily says we need to do more. Kirkman says let's send a legal observer and Aaron offers to send someone from AG. Emily says she'll do it and Kirkman asks if she's sure. Kirkman says get on a plane.

General Cochrane says they found Nassar. Hannah looks at a report on McLeish going home from the hospital and Hannah tells her boss that the guy lied and wasn't in his seat when the blast went off. Hannah says his timing was too perfect.

Atwood asks if he made a mistake putting her on this assignment and she says there could be more to this. He asks if she's doing this from a grudge. Emily tells the guy in charge of the Muslim protest that she's on her way to observe the protest.

Kirkman gets an update from their undercover operative. He's the one that was taken at the show's opening. He gave them a location of a compound on a two country border. Cochrane wants to blast the compound to bits. They tell him the agent has been out of contact.

Kirkman asks if the agent is in the compound and he would die if they bomb it. Kirkman says they shouldn't kill him. Cochrane pushes for the bombing. Kirkman ponders and pauses. Aaron asks for his orders. Kirkman says they won't bomb one of their own and says wait til the agent makes contact.

Kirkman pushes on Cochrane and tells him to stand down. Kirkman wants to talk to the local president in the country where Nassar is holed up. Aaron calls Emily and tells her to be careful since things are tense in Michigan. She asks if he's worried and he denies it.

Emily's plane lands and a motorcade is there surrounding the plane with armed men and Governor Royce. He steps up and she introduces herself. She says she came to observe the protest and he says get back on the plane. He says he has enough without her there interfering.

She says it's not his decision to make. Royce says the state of Michigan is off limits to Kirkman's presidency. He walks away. Hannah shows up to McLeish's house and introduces herself to the wife. She's allowed inside. His wife shows him the collection of cards that keep coming.

McLeish says he was lucky. Hannah says she's there to update him on the investigation. She shows him the photos showing that he wasn't in his seat when the blast went off. He says where was I and Hannah says that's what she's asking. His wife speaks up and says she was at home in Oregon.

The wife says she took her eyes off their daughter at the mall and she was gone and says she was texting him and then someone dropped the child off at security. She says that's when she heard about the building. He asks why she's asking all of this and if he's done something wrong.

Hannah says she's just trying to find out what happened. Hannah leaves and makes a call to her hacker buddy at the FBI. Ritter calls Alex and tells her Maria Serrano is on the phone and says she's her lawyer. Maria tells Alex her kids were taken and she's about to be deported.

There's heat at the press conference. The acting press secretary — Carter Dunne — is sweating under the attention from the press. Aaron tells Seth to go fix this now. Royce holds a press conference at the airport and claims Kirkman's presidency is false and says he was elected Governor and will protect his state.

He calls him a fraudulent president. Aaron calls Emily who is on the ground now. Emily updates Kirkman on what happened and says she should come back to DC. Kirkman says he has to deal with this and yells for Wyatt and says he has an idea.

Alex gets a security update and Secret Service assigned to her and she was going to leave but Kirkman calls her out about Federalizing the National Guard. Alex cites the law that would allow him to do it. Alex says declare a state of emergency in Michigan and notify General Hammond.

Alex says forcing a Governor to cede power is a major precedent. Kirkman says it's a tipping point and he can't let Royce set up a police state. Hammond is on the line and Kirkman tells him what he wants. He tells him to federalize the Michigan national guard.

Royce continues his bombastic speech and Kirkman tells Emily what he did with the guard. She asks what's next and he tells her to meet with General Nunos who will give her safe escort to the protest. He thanks her. Aaron tells him the cabinet is waiting.

They have the president of Algeria on the line. The man says Nassar is not in their country. Kirkman disagrees. He says he's sorry and can't be of help. Kirkman says notify us if things change. Cochrane says he's lying and Kirkman agrees.

Aaron says the president may be lied to. Kirkman says they will wait on contact but in 12 hours he's ready to pull the trigger when the deadline for contact passes. Seth gives Carter some tough advice on dealing with the press. He gives him some examples.

He tells him to tame the press beasts. Royce is on TV when Aaron shows up and finds Kimble waiting. She asks if he recalls that she and Royce are old friends. Aaron says they have it under control. Kimble says Kirkman is flailing. She says the leaked video is the only reason Kirkman is acting at all.

Kimble says Aaron is smart and people might appreciate what an asset he is and Kirkman won't appreciate him. She calls Kirkman a footnote and Aaron says it's a pleasure seeing her and dismisses her effectively.

Alex chews out Duncan for the Maria fumble. He says Homeland is taking advantage of the closed courts and arresting people. Alex is angry at all of this and says if she was there, it would not have happened. Duncan says things changed and she couldn't help it.

Duncan reminds her she's the First Lady. Emily waits on the plane and Aaron texts to check in. She asks if he's worried. She hears sirens outside and Humvees pull onto the airfield. Emily texts that the cavalry is there. Royce is stunned.

The guard comes out weapons drawn. Kirkman watches as Emily calls. She says she's going out now. She hands the phone to Nunos. He takes the phone and calls him Mr Kirkman not President and says they refuse the order to federalize. He says their commander in chief is Royce.

He hands Emily back the phone and walks off. Kirkman says this is unbelievable. Kirkman tells Alex about Cochrane and the Michigan debacle. He says he never thought he'd have to decide who lives and who dies. Alex hugs him and reminds him their first night when she wanted to leave.

She says too much is at stake and says trust your instincts. He says if someone left a manual, this would be easier. She says past presidents were just people like him trying to do their best.

Kirkman tells Emily to go home because she's in the middle of the coup. She says Royce is a bully and they need to stand up with him. She suggests offering Royce a sit-down. Kirkman doesn't want her at risk and she says trust me and I'll get him to DC. Kirkman agrees.

Seth watches Carter deal with the press. Carter mentions getting rid of Royce and the press goes nuts. Seth groans. Carter walks off the podium and someone jokes the Kirkman White House. Seth takes the podium and says Carter is not feeling well.

He says the top news story is about Islamophobia gripping the nation and opens it up for questions. Emily gets a call that the permit for the protest has been revoked and the people are at risk for arrest. Emily says bring the protest here to the airport where Royce is.

Hannah gets McLeish's phone records. She sees a gap in time that draws her interest. The protestors stand between Royce and the plane. Royce tells them to leave if they have no permit. Aaron and Kirkman watch the chaos on TV. Aaron says it's going to turn into Selma.

Kirkman says Royce can't risk this. Emily approaches Royce and asks if this is what he wants and says he won't be the hero of this story. She says fly with me to DC for a sit down with Kirkman. She says this didn't work for George Wallace and won't work for him. She asks how he wants to be remembered.

Aaron tells him there's a second mutiny and they go confront Cochrane. Kirkman asks Cochrane why he generated an act of war. Cochrane chews him out and says he did what needed to be done. Kirkman says you're not president and says he agreed to a timeline.

Cochrane says sacrifices are worth making and chews him out. Kirkman says that's a good point and relieves him of his command. He tells him he's fired. Cochrane storms out. On the plane, Emily talks to Royce and he says she gave him no choice.

Royce says Muslims blew up the Capitol and took down the twin towers. He says she thinks she knows better. Emily says Kirkman is thoughtful and reasonable. Aaron comes to Seth and says he heard about a rising star and says he needs Seth to be press secretary.

Aaron says we need someone like you. Seth asks what that means and Aaron says he's the son of Muslim immigrants and Seth asks if he wants him to be Kirkman's pet Muslim. Aaron says take the job and Seth tells him to go away. Aaron says okay and goes.

Alex goes to meet with Kimble who says she can't change policy that fast. Alex reminds her she's on the immigration committee. Kimble says call Maria as a witness to her committee and that will give her immunity for now. Kimble says that's a favor.

Kimble says she hopes that she would return that favor someday. Alex ponders and agrees. Hannah works out and Atwood shows up. She asks for reassignment. She says she checked his story and it all checked out and she wanted him to be guilty.

Hannah tells Atwood that McLeish is just a lucky guy for surviving while Scott didn't and she has to deal with it. Atwood calls her a pain in the ass but says she's one of his best agents. She asks to go to Michigan to work on Civil Rights violations. He says sleep on it and if she wants it, she can give it.

Kirkman goes to greet Royce and Emily at the airfield. Royce says he and Emily had a nice talk. Kirkman says all Americans are owed protection. Royce goes to interrupt and Kirkman says he conspired with the National Guard and has him arrested for treason.

Royce glares at Emily as he's led away. Emily is stunned. She had no idea. Emily tells Kirkman he lied to her. Kirkman says Royce broke the law and is going to jail. He tells her he did what he thought was best for the country and this sent a message to every other governor.

He tells her she did a great job and doing the right thing doesn't always make you feel good. She walks off. Aaron tells Kirkman that the agent's body was dropped on the steps of the embassy in Algiers. Kirkman comes to see Seth in his office.

Kirkman says Aaron told him he turned down the job and Kirkman says that's a shame. Seth says others are more qualified and he says Carter had good experience too. Kirkman says today's crisis was racially motivated but tomorrow's might not be. He says he trusts Seth.

Seth takes the job and Kirkman says tomorrow is going to be a big and busy day. He tells Seth to get some rest. Emily goes to Aaron and asks if the arrest was his idea. He says no but he wishes it was. Emily asks for a drink and says Kirkman is turning into a different person.

Aaron says Kirkman will do things she won't agree with and says she does a good job. They chat and lightly flirt. Seth takes the podium and greets the press. He says he's the new Press Secretary and jokes with the Press Corps and says he didn't want the job but they're called on to serve.

He says none of us is perfect but we do our best and says this house is worthy of our best. We see Alex gets Maria free and her kids back to her. Kirkman walks the halls and looks at a historic portrait on the wall. He says our best has been good enough.

Seth then makes a couple of quick announcements. Hannah lies in bed looking at photos on her phone of Scott then gets a call from an unknown address. A woman says find room 105 and you'll understand more about McLeish.

Kirkman goes to the war room. He asks if they got a positive ID on the agent's body. He tells the Admiral in charge to proceed with the attack on Algeria and says prepare us for war.

Summary: President Kirkman attempts diplomacy with Algeria, but fails, forcing him to make a difficult decision that will define his years in the White House. Meanwhile, more secrets than answers are uncovered as Hannah continues her investigation into the Capitol bombing.

The episode starts with President Kirkman lying awake in bed. He checks the clock and then his phone buzzes. He answers and Aaron tells him it's time. Chernow meets with Aaron and Kirkman to give them the update on the attack to take out Nassar.

Seth comes in as Chernow leaves for the ops center. He reminds Kirkman about an awards ceremony later. He tells Emily to take point on Congress and keeps her out of the loop on the coming attack. Chernow says they'll be in and out before Algeria knows.

Chernow gives them the timeline for him to decide if the mission is a go. POTUS says it's a go. Chernow makes a call. One of the advisors says they need to abort because Nassar has moved and is not at the target they're about to hit.

He says Nassar left two minutes ago. They tell Kirkman that Nassar was warned by the Algerian foreign ministry. Aaron says they tipped their hand. Kirkman says find Nassar then curses and walks out. Atwood finds Hannah in her office working on the bomb case.

She says she needs to find Capitol Room 105 and says it's not on the building map. She says she'll let him know if the lead pans out. Atwood says MacLeish is being honored today and Hannah asks to tag along. Atwood says she's a horrible liar but takes him along.

Kirkman honors the first responder that found the only survivor. He says his code name is Phoenix but McLeish truly rose from the ashes. POTUS reads off facts about McLeish's past and calls him an inspiration to them all. Hannah glares.

Aaron pulls Kirkman aside and Seth takes over the room. Kimble intercepts Seth and asks when will the IS respond to the bombing. She asks to talk to the president and he says he's busy then walks off. Atwood recommends Hannah check with the architect of the capitol.

McLeish speaks to Hannah on his way out. Kirkman gets an update and Chernow says he's hiding in a hospital so we can't do an airstrike. He recommends a Navy SEALs strike team.

Kirkman considers and Chernow shows him satellite footage. They tell him about the danger of Al-Sakar future attacks. They tell him they want to take Nassar alive if they can but Kirkman worries about the risk of the attack and he asks to speak to the man in charge.

Kirkman says he'll go see the man who's putting his life on the line. Aaron talks to Emily about the awkwardness this morning and she gets short about it. He asks if he she knows Jeffrey Myers and she says no. He says he heard the name with the Kirkmans.

Hannah goes to see the architect and asks about room 105 — he calls it a hideaway office and says they are assigned by seniority. He says Teddy Kennedy's was like a clubhouse. He says the blueprints were lost in the bomb but he gave digital files to the men working the case.

Kimble gets facetime with Kirkman and she asks about him firing the Joint Chiefs chairman and arresting a governor. She says she knows something military is happening. Kimble asks if they're going to war and says this is not a dictatorship.

Aaron says the helicopter is here. Kirkman says he'll notify her as soon as it's appropriate. He thanks her for her continued vigilance and leaves. The SEAL team is running a simulation as Kirkman watches. The commander walks Kirkman through the operation they'll carry out.

He says his men train for missions like this all day every day and says the SEALs are impressive. Kirkman asks about the individual team members and their families. Kirkman asks the odds of success. The commander says we'll get it done. Kirkman presses.

The commander says 50/50 because of what we don't know. He says we do know Nassar is there so we have to do it now. He says God may have mercy on Nassar but the Navy SEALs will not.

Hannah goes to see Hector and he says he's working on his McLeish's location at the time of the bombing. He was in room 105 and then mentions there were renovations. He says they don't know what was being done and Hannah says try and find out.

Kirkman greets two of the SEAL team members and says your country thanks you for your service and I do too. He says get home safely. They head out. Kirkman asks the Commander how he feels and the guy says no SEAL has been captured or a body left behind.

Kirkman says Nassar alive is optimal but if it's too risky, take him out and get your men out safely. The commander salutes him then heads off. Hannah goes to see Kimble who says she's a fan of the FBI. Hannah asks her for access to the renovation plans.

Kimble asks what she's looking for. Hannah says they think the construction entrance may have been used to get the bombs into the building. She lied. Hannah thanks her and goes. Kirkman sits watching video of the men progressing. Alex comes to sit with him.

He says they won't land for almost three hours and says he put 20 men in harm's way. Next morning, Kirkman meets with McLeish in the Oval Office and is told Kimble is running late. McLeish says he's never been in the Oval Office before.

Kimble shows and is surprised to see McLeish there. He says since they are Congress, he wanted to notify them that Commander Max Clarkson is leading a team of SEALs to try and obtain or kill Nassar. McLeish says he approves. Kimble says he doesn't need their approval.

Kimble says the legitimacy of his presidency depends on this. She says he'll be Reagan or Carter. Aaron asks if Kimble is threatening to deny her support if it doesn't work out. She tells Peter to come along but he wishes him luck. Aaron recommends putting in McLeish as speaker instead of Kimble.

Aaron gets a call and says they're on the way. Aaron says a SEALs chopper went down. They head to the command center. Chernow tells Kirkman that one of the Blackhawks hit a sandstorm and they had to do a combat landing but had one injury.

Clarkson says they can move forward and tells Chernow to let him do the job. Kirkman nods and Chernow says do it. Aaron tells Seth to deny any military action. Seth gives a press briefing and says Michigan is good. He denies any action in Algeria.

They ask him about the Lexington and Seth moves the conversation. Emily and Aaron talk to McLeish about being Speaker of the House. He says he doesn't want the job. McLeish says he came to serve and the speaker position is about power for power's sake.

McLeish says there is no higher calling than to serve your country and he did it in uniform and now in Congress. McLeish says he'll support the President but not as Speaker. Kimble meets with Hannah and says there were upgrades to offices on the first floor.

She says Margrove was a new contractor that worked on the renovation but they never worked there before and now the company is defunct. Kimble says she'll give her the information if she'll keep her updated. Kimble hands her an envelope.

Alex talks with Emily who says she's not there on a social visits and mentions Jeffrey Myers and that Aaron asked about him. She says he's in Federal prison and they dated once. She says Aaron is just doing his job to check out possible opposition research.

She says her husband knows everything and Alex says she'll talk to Aaron herself. Aaron updates Kirkman on the SEALS mission. Kirkman says he'll come down to operations. The SEALS move in on the hospital. Kirkman gets an update. They head to the building.

Atwood comes to see Hannah for an update. She says McLeish and she has proof. She tells him to listen. The SEAL team is inside the hospital. People are screaming. They head for the basement. Hannah tells Atwood the men who renovated it are all dead.

The SEAL team heads down. They see a kid and check a room. The camera feeds get spotty. Chernow says that happens underground. The team finds signs that Nassar is on the move. They engage with some men that have guns on children.

Hannah says all eight men that worked on room 105 are dead within the last two months. Hannah says Hector recreated the room from debris. It's reinforced steel girders. McLeish was basically in a bomb shelter inside the Capitol building.

Hannah says this is not her imagination. She says only one man survived. Hannah says McLeish survived by design. She says he's in on it. Nassar is there and says put down your guns and holds a gun on a little girl. The SEALS don't.

There is an explosion and McLeish says it could be a flash bang. They lose contact with the SEAL team. McLeish was in on the bombing and now he's in the room when the SEAL team operations goes South. Chernow says they have Nassar in custody.

Kirkman is thrilled. He and Aaron hug it out. Kirkman thanks Chernow who says there was one casualty. He says SEAL team leader Clarkson was shot and killed. Kirkman sits down stunned. Later, he tells Alex that Clarkson shielded two of the children with his body.

He says they caught Nassar with no civilian casualties and the kids he shielded survived. He says Clarkson died on his orders. Alex says he made the right call and says casualties are inevitable. Emily and Aaron talk with Seth about McLeish turning down the speaker job.

Kirkman comes in and Emily says McLeish turned down the speaker job. Aaron repeats McLeish's statements. Kirkman suggests offering McLeish the open VP job. Aaron finds Alex in his office. She mentions Jeffrey Myers.

She says Tom knows every detail of her past with Myers and asks why it's a political issue. Aaron says Jeffrey has been telling everyone in prison that he's the father of her son. Alex looks stunned. He asks if Leo knows the President might not be his father.

She shakes her head no. Hannah and Atwood are out for a walk and she asks if he believes her. He says he does but doesn't want to. She says she's told no one else and he says these people killed so many and tied up the loose ends.

He says we don't know who to trust so you can't tell anyone. Dawn crests in DC and Clarkson's body is brought off the military transport. Kirkman is there to pay his respects. Marino is there and greets him. Kirkman says he came to pay respect and thanks Marino for his bravery.

Marino says he's just doing his job. He says Clarkson wasn't supposed to be in the raid but took the injured man's place. He says he saved the mission and us. Kirkman says he should have waited. Marino says don't say that and says Clarkson deserves their honor and respect.

He says don't ever question your decision and says none of them did, not even Clarkson. Kirkman walks out of the hangar where the coffin is draped with a flag.

Summary: A shooting at a Governor's summit disrupts President Kirkman's plans for the election of a new Congress. Agent Wells and Director Atwood try to get information from Majid Nasser about the Capital Bombing and his role in it. Back at the White House Chief-of-Staff Aaron Shore and Presidential Adviser Emily Rhodes offer the position of Vice President to Congressman Peter MacLeish.

The episode begins with Majid Nassar in cuffs with a bag on his head being taken into a detention facility. He's put into a cell and the news report that he's being held in an undisclosed facility. Aaron tells the President that Nassar isn't talking but says the raid is a win.

Aaron and Emily fill Kirkman in on what to expect at the event of governors. Alex shows up and he compliments her. He's meeting all 50 of the state governors at a dinner. Seth talks to reporters at the event and Lisa Jordan, a new correspondent catches Seth's eyes.

The reporters ask Seth about cabinet nominations but then POTUS shows up and that ends the talk. Aaron and Emily greet MacLeish and his wife Beth. Beth steps away and Emily and Aaron talk to him about being Vice President. He says he would be honored.

Kirkman shakes hands all around the room. Governor Nichols of Arizona says it's a great chance to get to know him and she brings up Royce then says it's disconcerting and calls him a colleague. Kirkman says Royce didn't give him much choice.

Aaron encourages him to go after her. Kirkman takes the stage and greets the governors and talks about the terrorist act and pulling the country back together. He says they all want to rebuild the Capitol and their country and says he can't do it alone.

Kirkman says he's a registered independent and they all laugh. He says he has a unique opportunity to affect positive change and bridge the divide. He talks about much-needed common ground. Shots ring out and everyone panics.

Someone is firing onto the outside of the White House. They grab Kirkman and get him to safety. Ritter shows back up and asks what happened. They tell him it was a lone shooter and he's in the park and POTUS is safe.

Ritter gets a shot at the guy but then is himself shot. He sees a helicopter from above. Later, Kirkman paces and frets about Ritter. Seth says Ritter was hit twice and the vest stopped one bullet. He's heading into surgery. Alex goes to check on the kids.

Turns out it was a Chechen national that fired on the house and the guy posted on social media about his allegiance to Nassar. Kirkman says Al-Sakar attacked again and asks what's next. The security council argues over how to get answers out of Nassar.

Kirkman tells FBI's Atwood he can have a crack at the guy. Emily asks him to start vetting MacLeish as a VP candidate. Atwood says it will take some time and she says it's a priority. Emily takes a call and runs to Kirkman. Ritter is out of surgery and doing well.

Alex asks her husband if the shooter was aiming for her. He says he was trying to hit anyone that he could. Emily tells them Governor Rivera won't let Syrian refugees land in Miami. Atwood tells Hannah about the White House and MacLeish.

She says he has to stall. Atwood says they have to deal with Nassar. Hannah says Nassar didn't do the bombing and Atwood tells her to get him to admit it. Alex and Kirkman meet with Governor Rivera about the refugees. He asks why he's not letting them in.

Rivera says the attack on the White House changed things. Alex says those people aren't extremists and says they have been vetted several times. Rivera asks if Kirkman is going to have him arrested then says his people are protesting so the answer is no.

Aaron says Rivera is under pressure and to give him time. Kirkman says find another place to land the plane. Alex goes to call ICE to find out more. Kirkman greets the room full of governors and says he's grateful they're back today after last night.

Nichols interrupts him and says they don't know what he stands for. Mennuti stands and says he knows the president from way back and says he's a fine man but most don't know him like he does. Mennuti asks him to let them know him.

Nichols says they need questions answered and then he'll get his Senate appointees. Kirkman says he's not on trial here but the governor says he is now.

Aaron and Emily tell Kirkman not to do this but he says he has to get the governors on board. He says he'll answer whatever they want to ask. Aaron says it's a bad idea but Kirkman won't be dissuaded. Seth holds a press conference and he's asked about Nassar.

Lisa asks Seth about Kirkman losing the governor's support. He says he won't comment on rumors. Lisa approaches him after the conference and asks if they had a moment last night. He says yes but she's press.

Alex has her assistant help her with the search for where to place the refugees. Aaron pulls her aside and she says there are 300 refugees being denied basic rights. Aaron says this is very political. Atwood takes Hannah in on the down low to see Nassar. He says she has one shot.

Kirkman goes to face the governors. He takes a seat. Nassar is left with Atwood and Hannah. Atwood says the sooner he answers questions, the sooner they will be done. Hannah tells him to look at her and asks if he knows his rights.

She says those rights only apply in the US and says Pakistan wants him and says it's his last shot. Nassar says six years ago US Maverick missiles killed his wife and daughters. He says he never even found their remains.

He says she can't break him. Kirkman addresses the governors and says he knows they have questions. Nicholas asks if he's impulsive. She then asks about his HUD overhaul. He says the department was stagnant and he needed leaders not civil servants.

Then they ask him about firing General Cochrane. Kirkman says he advanced a military operation without his permission. Kirkman responds to questions about Royce saying he's seditious. Nichols says maybe he doesn't like people who don't agree with him.

Atwood says they know all about Nassar. Hannah says Al-Sakar brought down the temple of democracy then says Al-Sakar was a small leech and took credit for bombings they didn't do. Hannah says he doesn't have the skills to pull off the Capitol attack.

Nassar describes the makeup of the bomb. Hannah says she was fed that info too. Nassar says Al-Sakar did this. Mennuti stands to defend Kirkman and reminds them that they caught the mastermind Nassar. Rivera says Kirkman has no real experience.

Nichols says he's the president simply because he was the designated survivor. She says the former president didn't even want him in his administration. Nichols asks why he should be the president. Kirkman says he can't. He stands and says they may be right.

He says maybe he should not be president then walks out. The room is in shock. Chaos breaks out. Aaron tells Kirkman to fight back. Kirkman says he was designated survivor because the president didn't want him at the address.

Aaron says he wasn't impressed with him at first and barely knew his name but now he believes in him. He tells him he's the only chance the country has. Alex comes in and POTUS thanks Aaron. Alex says one of the refugees just went into labor. She says work on Rivera.

Hannah tells Nassar he pulled off the unimaginable and says one bomb didn't go off and a Congressman survived. She says whoever blew up the Capitol wanted MacLeish to live then she asks why he's taking credit for something he didn't do.

Alex works on Rivera about the pregnant woman in labor. He agrees to let in the wife and husband off and says then send the plane back. Rivera says his people are frightened. Rivera says quit while you're ahead and she backs down.

Hannah says the attackers wanted to stay anonymous so they gave him info to take credit. They let him know they know about his other family in Dubai including his mom and another son. Hannah says his family is going to Pakistan too and it won't be pleasant.

Nassar snaps. He says the man told him he wanted the same thing — death to America. He says he doesn't know his name. Hannah threatens his family again. He says Catalan. Nassar says if you tell anyone, he'll kill you too.

Kirkman tells the governors he has wrestled with the question of why he should be president. Kirkman says he can effect change and promote unity. He says he can't do it alone and can't fight with them anymore. He says he can step down.

Kirkman says it's their moment to choose and to decide what side of history they want to be on when the dust settles. The governors talk amongst themselves. Nichols and Rivera approach him. They tell him his words were thoughtful.

Nichols says show is what you're going to do. She asks about the refugees in Florida and says the threat to our country for unchecked immigration is great. Nichols asks to stop all immigration. Nichols says our security is worth the sacrifice.

Rivera says enough of them believe this to stand in the way of his Congress. They tell him to choose immigration or Congress.

Kirkman talks to Rivera and Nichols in the oval. Nichols says not permanently, just until things settle. Rivera says their people are scared and the plane represents a larger issue. Nichols talks about the illegal problem that has been a concern since the attack.

Kirkman asks if the rest of the governors will get behind him if he turns the plane back. Nichols tells him the majority will. Atwood and Hannah are back at the FBI talking. They run a search on Catalan. They find nothing. Atwood tries another spelling. Nothing.

Atwood wonders if Nassar lied. Hannah says maybe Catalan is above Atwood's clearance level. Emily talks to Aaron who's embroiled in a report. He says he was researching MacLeish and says things look good. Alex tells Kirkman she found a place for the plane in Missouri.

Kirkman says it's too late. The plane is heading to Toronto. He tells her he had to make a deal and says he had to give them something to get Congress. Kirkman says Canada is fine for them. She chastises him on principles.

Kirkman says he has no obligation to the country. She says she's not angry at the President but is disappointed in her husband. She walks out. Kirkman sits in the Oval when Emily and Aaron come in and says he looked at MacLeish since the FBI said it would be delayed.

Aaron encourages him to move forward with the VP nomination. Kirkman says he'd like to get to know him personally not just as a file. Emily asks if he's okay and Kirkman says it's fine. Kirkman calls Ritter at the hospital. He asks how he's feeling and Ritter says lucky.

Kirkman thanks him for going above and beyond. Ritter says he just did his job and says it's an honor. He says he's going to watch his team crush Tom's. Seth approaches Lisa and says he never has time off ever. She asks for a comment on Leo Kirkman not being the President's son.

Atwood gets a call as he and Hannah approach the detention facility. They run inside. The news talks about the governor's summit and Senate appointees being submitted. Alex tells her husband you always have to disappoint someone. He tells her about their dinner guests.

Atwood and Hannah run into the facility. A soldier says he found him like this when he brought him dinner. They see vomit on him. It looks like he might be poisoned.

Summary: As President Kirkman attempts to negotiate a spy trade with Saudi Arabia and Russia, the First Lady is confronted by a man from her past who claims to be her son Leo's biological father who then tries to extort a lighter prison sentence from her in exchange for keeping quiet. Agent Wells makes a shocking discovery in her investigation of a lead provided by Majid Nasser.

The episode starts with dead Nassar's crime scene and photos being taken. Hannah stands outside the door upset that he was killed. Atwood wants everyone's name that was there, all camera footage, and all evidence.

Atwood says whoever blew up the Capitol killed Nasser. She says they need to press on with the only lead they have. Atwood thinks the killers will come for them too. Kirkman holds a press conference about the Yankees game after 9/11.

He has the US Track and Field team there and thanks them for competing. Kirkman talks to Coach Weston who is a record-breaker himself. Wyatt calls Kirkman because MacLeish is there. Weston tells him they believe him.

The Kirkmans and MacLeishes sit down to dinner and share their meet cute stories. Emily and Aaron sit in his office. The game is on and they talk about MacLeish as VP. She wants Kirkman to hurry up and nominate him for the position.

Aaron takes a call and goes to alert the President. MacLeish's wife asks what it's like living in the White House. Aaron pulls Kirkman out and tells him about Nassar's death. He tells POTUS that he was poisoned and they call Atwood to the White House to explain.

Kirkman comes back in and tells them he can't finish dinner. MacLeish offers to help him in any way that he can. He leaves them. Hannah tells Atwood to tell him everything they know about MacLeish. She says he has closer ties than Nassar to the bombing.

Atwood is admitted to the Oval and finds MacLeish there with Kirkman. POTUS explains he asked him to join them since he was on the security committees. Atwood says they don't have a lot of intel yet and he says Nassar wasn't cooperative before he died.

Kirkman chews him out for not getting answers. Atwood says he wishes he could say more. Kirkman asks why he said he has answers. Atwood gets cagey and then leaves. Kirkman tells MacLeish that made no sense and MacLeish says he's sure the FBI is on top of it.

Kirkman comes to bed much later and tries not to wake Alex. She says he's late to bed habitually now. He says he got the feeling Atwood was lying to him. She says give him some time. Kirkman tells Aaron to stay on top of the investigation.

Emily says Coach Weston was arrested in Russia for carrying vials of HGH and says it's an embarrassment to the nation. Atwood meets Hannah and tells her he needs to meet with POTUS without MacLeish there. She has nothing more on Catalan.

She says she's going to see another source today. Emily makes calls about Weston. Seth asks to see POTUS. Aaron says he has no time to talk to him. Seth says this is about Lisa and Leo's biological father. Aaron says Seth can see POTUS now.

Seth talks to Kirkman and he says he knows about it and he refused to take a paternity test since he and Alex were happy. Emily says the guy was in prison for tax evasion over $46 million. Kirkman asks what the reporter wants and Seth says just a comment.

Kirkman says hold her off as long as you can. Aaron says Alex already knows about this. He says he talked to her and Alex told him she'd talk to him. Kirkman comes to confront his wife angrily. She says he's been busy and Alex gets back in his face.

Alex says maybe they never should have kept the truth from Leo. Kirkman says Seth will buy them some time. Alex says she can go talk to her ex and try and fix it. Kirkman gets a call and says the Secretary of State is there with Paulson.

He goes to the ops room. They tell him they need to talk about Weston. She says they need to get him back home immediately. Turns out the coach is really CIA. Wow.

Hannah goes to meet a contact of her and he says the CIA doesn't want to play with the FBI. She name drops Catalan and her contact asks where she heard the name. He takes her outside and says stay out of it or else. He says the guy is a mercenary and traitor.

Hannah asks for more and he says walk away and that's the best thing for her. Kirkman meets with the Russian Ambassador Petrov to discuss Weston. He says it's a shame to meet under this circumstance. He says Weston violated serious laws.

Kirkman asks why he brought a ministry representative. Petrov says they both know Weston is a US asset. Kirkman says they don't see eye to eye and then says both countries should deal with this quickly and quietly. He asks what Petrov wants.

He says he wants all US nuclear weapons out of Turkey. Kirkman says no and Petrov says Weston will face the Russian courts. The press asks Seth about Nassar and where he is and then they ask about Weston. Seth offers assurances there too.

Seth speaks to Lisa afterwards and pulls her to speak privately. He says can you please hold the story for as long as possible. He says he's begging. She says 24 hours and that's all she can do. He thanks her and she goes.

Hannah updates Atwood. They are stunned to see MacLeish show up at the FBI. He asks to speak to Atwood. Hannah steps out. Atwood says another unexpected meeting. MacLeish says he knows he's vetting him for VP and hands him his service records, medical exams, and tax returns.

Atwood asks if those are official documents. He says they have to do their own vetting too. Atwood tells MacLeish what's not on paper also matters and the impressions we leave behind. He says that's the true measure of a man.

MacLeish says neither of them want the wrong person in office. They spar verbally and MacLeish thanks him then goes. Hannah comes back in after he leaves. He says that go guy gave them 10 years of papers they never asked for. Hannah says he something to hide.

Weston makes a public statement that's a confession. Emily has an idea for how to save Weston. She suggests a different trade. They get to work on it. Alex goes to see Myers at his prison. He remarks that she did well and she says he didn't. She asks what he wants.

Alex says he's always working an angle. He says he wants her to get him out or else. Hannah and Atwood wonder how to connect MacLeish to Nassar. She thinks Catalan is the connection. Atwood gets a call that says his son is missing.

He says to call the police and ends the call. He tells Hannah what happened and he leaves. Hannah stares at a photo of MacLeish and ponders. Aaron and Emily walk Kirkman into a meeting. He meets with the Saudi ambassador.

Kirkman asks him to make a deal. He works with the Saudis and Russia. He offers to give back four Saudi nationals to the ambassador. He asks for the Russian agent they picked up in Riyadh. Kirkman plays middle man and both ambassadors are intrigued. All three want their spies back.

Alex tells her husband what Myers wants. She says Myers wants him to get him out of parole. She says he's an opportunist with a credible threat. Kirkman says he never thought he'd be dealing with this again. He says he feels like his son.

Kirkman says he should have listened to her back then and got tested. He says Leo has a right to know who his real father is. His phone buzzes. He has to go to command ops. Atwood meets his wife Yvette who is in a panic looking for his son.

He sends his wife home and says he's going to go find him. Kirkman is told the spy exchange is happening right now. They watch the feeds and Kirkman is told the Russians never put Weston on the plane. Hannah calls Atwood and he worries this is about MacLeish showing up.

He says MacLeish's kid was taken the night of the attack. He says this is his fault. Kirkman is shown footage of Mishkin who recruits FSB assets and he's with Weston. He made contact and now it looks like Weston is a double agent. That's why he didn't come home.

Hannah goes back to her CIA friend and demands he tell her about Catalan. Hannah tells Tim she's out of time and says someone is in trouble that she cares about. She begs him. He says he'll try. Petrov comes back to see Kirkman who tells him that he played him.

Kirkman congratulates him and Petrov says maybe Weston just liked Moscow. He tells Kirkman he'll understand better when he's been in the game more than a month. Kirkman says nothing is more dangerous than a pawn that thinks it's a queen. He sends him away.

Seth goes to see Lisa and says he has an exclusive for her. He tells her Kirkman is a good man and he never asked for this job. He says she's wrecking a 17 year old's life. He offers her the inside scoop on Weston. She's intrigued.

Aaron gives him a folder of work and Emily asks about MacLeish. They push him on nominating the VP. Emily says the country needs good news. Kirkman says he's waiting on the FBI. Aaron tells him Atwood has been out of the office on personal business all day.

Kirkman finds his son and tells him that he loves him. Hannah is in a parking garage. She hears a loud noise behind her then the squeal of tires. She pulls her gun. She finds an envelope on the seat of her car with a CIA folder inside.

She reads the file on Catalan and remembers seeing his face among the soldiers at Nassar's prison. Hannah tries to call Atwood but he's at the ball field looking for his son. A woman approaches him and shows him a video of his son.

Atwood pulls his gun and she says shoot me and he dies. She also threatens his wife. Atwood says he'll kill her if she wants them. She says do what I tell you. She says tell no one about this then says make an appointment with the President and do what I tell you. She says she'll be in touch and walks off.

Summary: A national emergency forces Kirkman to consider canceling the election to vote for a new House of Representatives; at the same time, he also deals with fallout from a leaked report of Majid Nassar's death.

The episode starts with Nassar's body being prepared for burial. An army man tapes the procedure. His body is loaded into a helicopter that takes off. Seth tells the press corps about the elections for the House of the Representatives and says please get out and vote.

Seth is asked about a flu breakout and then one guy asks if Nassar is dead. Chaos breaks out in the press room. Aaron was listening and Emily comes in too. The reporter says a source at an air-base told him he was dead. Seth has no choice but to confirm but denies any talk of torture.

Aaron and Emily run in panicking and Kirkman says he and Seth talked about this. Aaron says they have to address this. He says Atwood will be there soon to talk. Hannah looks at photos of the suspect and a guy comes in asking about Atwood but then he shows up.

Hannah heads to his office and asks if Luke is okay. He lies and says he was just at a friend's house. He denies there being anything to it. Hannah says she's there for him. She sees two phones on his desk and one buzzes. He asks for privacy and she leaves.

Atwood says look into the Wettle case. She asks why but he won't say. The blackmailer calls and says to wait in your office and Luke will be okay. He's terrified. Hannah asks Tom to get her stuff on the Wettle case so she can keep on task.

Kimble asks why she wasn't told about Nassar and he says it's being investigated but they don't know what happened. He says it's bad and he knows it but they need to focus on the elections and rebuilding the company.

Kimble agrees to help get the Congress seated then she leaves. Aaron comes in and says it's an emergency. He has someone from the CDC with him — there's a synthetic toxin that's been released. It's ricin. It's an act of bioterrorism.

A group updates Kirkman on the Kansas City victim and they don't seem to be related. Homeland Security is working on her and Emily wonders if it's Al Sakar seeking retribution for Nassar's death. Mike walks Leo into school and a reporter accosts Leo and says Kirkman isn't his father.

Mike has the guy hauled away. Mike says crazy stuff happens and advises him to ignore the rumors. Leo goes into school. Atwood gets another school and is told to go to his car. He demands proof of life. She hands Luke the phone. He says hi to his dad.

Atwood is sent to an old abandoned factory and Hannah follows at a distance. He goes inside and she creeps up to follow. Atwood gets onto an elevator and Hannah takes the stairs to the roof. She looks down on him talking and pulls out a camera.

The woman hands Atwood a paper and says do this when you meet with Kirkman. He says no. She says he has an hour and his son will be safe at home — or not. Atwood says they won't get away with it but she walks off. Someone spots Hannah on the roof through a scope. It's a guy in a car.

Kirkman talks to his wife about the ricin attack. Leo comes home — he skipped school. He asks if he's his real father. He says a reporter asked him at school. Kirkman asks him to sit but Leo won't and asks why a reporter said that. Alex tries to calm him down.

Leo asks if they know who's kid he is. He storms out. Alex says give him a second. Kirkman gets a call about the ricin and they found the link. They are all poll workers and the ricin was put on voting machines. Kirkman says it's an attack on the election.

Kirkman meets with his team and they worry if all the machines can be vetted. Kirkman wants to find a way to save the election. Aaron says they need to try. PTOSU agrees. He says to put together a joint task force and mobilize them immediately.

He says to keep it out of the press. Kirkman tells Seth about the reporter confronting Leo. Seth says he'll find out what happened. Hannah runs out of the warehouse and sees Atwood's car is gone. Her phone rings and it's Tom. He says the Wettle case was closed eight years ago.

He says a drug cartel kidnapped someone's kid to get off at trial. It worked. Atwood was leaving her a bread crumb. Tom helps Hannah track Atwood and they realize he's headed to the White House. Hannah takes off to try and intercept him.

Ricin has made the news and Seth talks to the lady reporter about the Leo story. She says she killed it but that doesn't mean someone else looked into it. Seth says Jared works for her paper and he walks away annoyed.

Hannah pulls up at the White House after Atwood but they won't let her in. Hannah calls Atwood and leaves a voice mail telling him she looked into the Wettle case and can help him. He doesn't listen to it and heads in to talk to Kirkman.

Kirkman asks for answers about Nassar. He says the guy was poisoned and he did it. Kirkman asks what is he saying. Atwood confesses again. Kirkman asks why would he do it. He says he knew they wouldn't get anything from him so he did it for his country and family.

He said his son shouldn't have to live in a world with that kind of evil. He says he acted alone. He tells Kirkman to press the button and he kneels. Secret Service comes in and surrounds him with guns drawn. They hustle Kirkman out and then arrest Atwood.

POTUS meets with Aaron and Emily and the toxicology screen supports his confession. Kirkman says it doesn't make sense. He says to reach out to Atwood's colleagues and then he's told Walter Lynch is the ricin poison suspect and has been arrested.

They found ricin and a list of polls in his house and he posted anti-government messages on social media. Aaron wants to go public but then he's told he's part of the Liberty Defenders and other members of the group might have poisoned other machines.

POTUS gets another update that one of the poll workers just died from the toxin. Seth brings Jared to the White House who's excited to be there. Seth says he will be banned for life if he ever sandbags the President's son again.

Jared says Lisa gave him the tip and told him to run with it. Seth kicks him out. Hannah can't find a match for the woman's photo. Hannah gets a call from Aaron and he asks her to come to the White House on urgent business about Nassar's death.

Aaron, Emily and Seth come see POTUS to decide about the election. Seth says they have to have the election. Kirkman says only one person can poison a station and infect thousands. POTUS wants to have a press conference and Aaron says an election has never been canceled.

Alex comes in and says she has the paternity test results but Leo wants to talk to him alone. She says she didn't look at it and hands him the envelope. Kirkman says he's afraid he's going to lose his son. She hugs him. He goes to see his son.

Kirkman says he doesn't need to open it because he's his son from the day he was born and that doesn't change anything for him. He tells Leo he'll always be his father and never mentioned it because it didn't matter to him but it might matter to him so he's sorry.

Kirkman slides the envelope over to him and says open it or don't and I respect your choice but I love you. Leo says he has homework to do. Kirkman listens to the news about the woman that died. Her daughter is speaking and says her mother wanted to help the elections.

He sees a photo of her and then Seth tries to calm the press that has been waiting. Kirkman shows up 45 minutes late. He greets the press and says law enforcement is working on it but many Americans are still scared. He says one poll worker lost her life.

He says many poll workers were scared and didn't show up, but she did. Kirkman says he just spoke to her daughter and says her mother would not have let fear stop her from carrying out her civic duty. He says he's been advised to cancel but she inspired him.

He says the elections will go forward as planned and he will vote tomorrow as well. He says we owe it to Mindy and others that gave their life to protect their democracy. He says we can't and won't live in fear. Kirkman tells Kimble about Atwood's confession.

MacLeish is there too. POTUS says they're checking into Atwood's confession. Kimble says the new Congress can investigate but MacLeish says that's not a good idea. Kirkman disagrees. Lisa greets Seth and he confronts her about lying.

Lisa says she didn't run with the story and says it's news. She says she likes him but she won't choose him over the truth. Hannah gets a text from an unknown number that says tell Mr Shore nothing. She sits down with Aaron and he tells her about Atwood's confession.

Hannah says that's not possible. Hannah is visibly upset and Aaron asks to help them understand why he murdered Nassar. She asks to see Atwood but is told no. Tom traces the text that she got. He has someone hacking it for him. He gives her a phone number.

Leo talks to Mike and worries about his dad voting at the polls tomorrow. Mike tells him his dad called him every day to check on him after he joined the Secret Service. Leo says he knows what he's doing but Mike says his dad made him who he is today.

Mike says he didn't know him until he was three and his mom married him. He says he never met his bio-dad. He says those tests don't tell you who your dad is, just biology. Leo looks at the envelope and considers it.

It's election day and Kirkman is ready. He and Alex head to the polls talking about Leo. Neither knows if he opened the test results. Kirkman says when he took the oath of office the only thing he was scared of was what it might do to the family.

Alex says their new house can't hold any secrets. They pull up at the poll. Kirkman gets out smiling with Alex and his staff and they all go out to vote. Inside, it's pretty empty. Seth says maybe it'll pick up later. Aaron isn't so sure.

Kirkman talks to Alex about the election once they're back home. He worries about electing a Congress with so few voters. Leo comes in and looks upset. He says he couldn't sleep last night with that in his room and hands back the envelope.

Leo says he doesn't need to open it, he knows he's his dad. They hug it out. Leo leaves and Alex says he's her son and Kirkman says not funny. Aaron comes to get POTUS. Kirkman opens the envelope. He reads the results.

Kirkman sees the news that the election has picked up and most say it's because POTUS went to vote. Seth calls it a victory for democracy. Kirkman meets with Lisa and offers her the test results and says he's his son's biological father. He lets her stay in the press corps.

Lisa is happy to still have her credentials but Seth is cold to her. Hannah calls the anonymous texter who won't meet her but tells her to look into 11:14 pm. MacLeish goes to see Kimble and tells her he won't support an investigation.

Kimble realizes that MacLeish is hoping that Kirkman will fail and he'll land in the White House. Kimble says when she takes him down, she'll take MacLeish down with him. The black-mailer meets MacLeish and she says stay on top of fallout and further investigation.

She tells him he's a heartbeat away from the presidency. He asks how many more people need to be destroyed and she says just one. She walks off.

Summary: President Kirkman deals with classified government documents being leaked online by a group that have taken refuge inside a foreign embassy that's beyond his reach. Meanwhile, Hannah is running out of time to prove MacLeish's involvement in the conspiracy before his confirmation as vice president.

The episode starts with a guy transferring data to a hard drive at his office and then going into the bathroom and pulling a chip from his laptop. He places it inside a fake coin and leaves the NSA with it in his pocket.

Kimble is on TV for her announcement as the new Speaker of the House. Alex tells her husband that Kimble is intimidated by him. 160 independents have been voted into Congress. Aaron comes in and asks Emily if Kimble has hurt them yet.

Seth comes in and asks if they checked their emails. They find out about the NSA security breach and dig into it so they can fill the President in. Hannah sees they're cleaning out Atwood's office. Chuck asks what's up and John Forstell, the head of Internal Affairs shows up to talk to Hannah.

Gabriel Thompson is the guy who stole the data and he was an analyst at the agency for 20 years. Aaron says he took a prototype hard drive and could have stolen a terabyte of data. Aaron says the NSA is tracking him down.

POTUS says they need to get ahead of it. Hannah sits down with John and he says her friendship with Atwood might hurt her since she was at the prison when Nassar was poisoned. Hannah asks why he's investigating given the confession.

John asks who killed Nassar if Atwood didn't. He threatens her with a federal prosecutor. He says he's going to see Atwood today and says their stories better match. Hannah calls Chuck for the MacLeish files and asks him to come to her house.

Seth tells Aaron the press wants to know who killed Nassar. Aaron says POTUS meets with the FBI today. Emily shows them that Gabriel dumped data on WikiLeaks and there is dirt on the members of the last president's cabinet.

Seth says it looks worth than it is. Aaron says it's mostly pay for play. Seth says the blowback has been minimal and most of the people are dead except Kirkman. Aaron says Kirkman's files haven't been released.

Aaron asks if there is anything to hide. Kirkman says no secrets. Emily asks about the paternity. Aaron asks why wouldn't he release records for Kirkman when he did everyone else. POTUS says the priority is to find Thompson and stop the leak.

Chuck meets Hannah and she tells him that MacLeish is wrapped up in the bombing of the Capitol. He says she made a good case and she says she need hard evidence and John is on her right now because of Atwood.

Chuck starts going through her files. Hannah says if he doesn't want to help, it's okay. Chuck says she's usually right so he's on for the ride. Kimble threatens a new Congressman and doesn't want to flatly endorse what the president wants.

It's MacLeish's confirmation hearing and Kimble wishes him luck. He calls her back and asks what she has against him and POTUS. Kimble says she doesn't trust people that have power handed to them. She walks away.

Chuck hasn't found anything but Hannah says her source is always right. Chuck wonders if it's a date, not a time. He shows her a file on MacLeish's military file where he won a Bronze Star. Chuck says MacLeish saved most of his men.

Hannah says they need to look beyond the letter and talk to the men who served with him. Seth tells Emily that MacLeish is doing well. There's another WikiLeaks dump and Aaron mentions one on Senator Hazelton.

Seth and Emily read it and raise their eyebrows. They go to POTUS. There's a memo about Hazelton being a lecher and Emily is the one that wrote the letter. Hazelton wants her fired ASAP.

POTUS and Emily meet with Hazelton and she says sorry and it has nothing to do with Kirkman. Hazelton says she's scared and that's why she said sorry. Kirkman says he wants to move forward. POTUS wants to focus on the leaker not the leaked info.

Hazelton tells him again to get rid of Emily today or he'll block any legislation he wants. He leaves. Emily says Kirkman has to let her resign. MacLeish is still in his hearings. He talks about all the ways he served the country.

Hannah watches the hearing and is annoyed. Chuck has contact info on the eight members that served with him. She splits the list with Chuck and says you do one state, I'll do the other. She hands him a burner phone and he says he's not a field agent.

Hannah tells Chuck he's the only person besides Atwood she trusts. John goes to see Atwood and asks why he waived his right to an attorney and he says he's guilty. He says he hid the poison in a salt packet in his pocket.

He says there is a blind spot in a corridor he's known about for years. Atwood says Nassar was Muslim so he could see that meal was halal. Kirkman watches the interview and John is there with him. Kirkman asks if he thought Atwood could do this.

John says sometimes people leave us no choice. Aaron pulls POTUS for an NSA update. Gabriel is in the Venezuelan embassy and they can't touch him since there's no extradition and that's considered foreign soil.

The Venezuelan ambassador won't hand over Gabriel. Seth says they still have to deal with Hazelton. MacLeish is asked about his Bronze Star in Afghanistan. Hannah is with one of the soldiers and asks him the same question. Chuck also talks to people.

The stories all seem identical. All use the phrase "he's a hero" and MacLeish denies it and says he's not a hero, but the man he is today. Hannah says they all got the same talking points when she speaks to Chuck. She has one interview left.

Emily comes to see Aaron about Hazelton. She says POTUS won't fire her so Aaron needs to accept her resignation to protect the President. Seth comes in on a close moment between them. He hands them a folder of press requests about Nassar's murder.

Aaron goes to the Venezuelan embassy with an idea. She talks to Sarah, one soldier's wife and says her husband had a bunch of letters and awards in it when it was shipped home after he died. Aaron meets with Gabriel at the embassy.

Gabriel asks why he's there and Aaron says he knows what he wants. Gabriel says CNN thinks he wants radical anarchy. Gabriel offers him five minutes with the president. Aaron says he's going after people close to POTUS but not the president.

Gabriel says he had to hang Emily out to dry to get his attention but says he can save his career. Hannah goes through the foot locker. She finds a photo of MacLeish and Catalan is in the photo with him. She calls Chuck to update him.

Hannah needs access to a special database and he says he's been shut out of his account. John from IA is coming for him. Chuck tells her to find a way to finish it and he crushes the SIM card from the phone she gave him.

Aaron tells him that Gabriel wants to meet him and hands over proof that Emily told the truth about Hazelton. Aaron says Gabriel will stop leaking if he meets with him. POTUS says get Hazelton over there now but isn't certain about Gabriel over.

Hannah calls Kimble and says please delay the MacLeish hearings and says she has a lead that could hurt him but needs time. Kimble asks how much time and Hannah says as much as possible. Hazelton shows up irate when he sees Emily in the room.

Hazelton asks why she's still here. Kirkman says he won't let her go and says he has proof that what Emily says is true. He says Gabriel's leaked information is 100% accurate and hands him proof of him getting inappropriate with a teenage page.

Hazelton says it's extortion and Kirkman says no, what you did is extortion. POTUS tells him he needs to retire and spend time with his family. Hazelton glares at Emily who gives him stone face. Hannah goes into a diner and meets her CIA contact.

She shows him the photo of Catalan with MacLeish. She asks if he has MacLeish's CIA file. He says someone buried the file and he dug deeper and found this. It was written by an agency liaison and says the ranger unit massacred three villages full of people.

MacLeish is a war criminal not a hero. She tucks it into her pocket and leaves. Alex comes to see Kirkman happy about Emily. He says he's reading Gabriel's psych profile. POTUS is upset about Gabriel and Atwood and says it doesn't add up.

POTUS says he wants to talk to the guy despite all the reasons not to. He says the guy is smart and not crazy. Kirkman says Gabriel knows he'll go to prison after he comes out of the embassy. Alex encourages him to look deeper.

Gabriel is brought to the White House. Mike has him empty his pockets, they cuff him and take him inside. They sit him with Kirkman and Mike stays put. POTUS says they'll take you to prison soon and he knows that his daughter died in the Capitol bombing.

Gabriel says children should never die before their parents. POTUS offers condolences then asks why sacrifice all this to talk to me. Gabriel says he needs to make sure an attack like that won't happen again. Gabriel says he researched Kirkman thoroughly and he's a good man.

Gabriel says there is a fake coin in that bag and the hard drive is in it. He says he didn't make copies. Gabriel says there are bigger problems than him. Gabriel whispers about file 1280-C and then he's taken away.

Kirkman hands Mike the hard drive and says find out why that man sacrificed his life to get this info to me. Mike loads the drive into an air gapped laptop and runs encryption software. Mike tells Kirkman he rotated through the tech department before.

Kirkman tells Mike to keep it between them. Aaron tells POTUS about Kimble delaying the hearings. Kirkman calls MacLeish in to task what she might have on him. Kirkman notices him rubbing his hands together strangely.

Kirkman says fine and MacLeish tells him Hannah seems obsessed with him and she was close to Atwood and he's worried she might be feeding Kimble conspiracy theories. He leaves. Hannah calls Kimble and says she has the evidence and is on her way.

Kimble thanks her and says her witness is on the way. Emily comes to see Aaron and thanks him for saving her job. Aaron admits he wanted her to stay around. He asks if she'll have dinner with him after work and she says okay.

Hannah races down the road with her blue lights flashing. Mike finds the file that Gabriel told them about and they see it's the plans for the Capitol. Hannah almost hits a cab and she stops and is t-boned. The file shows a plan of how to blow up the Capitol.

It was created by the Pentagon to assess security vulnerabilities. Kirkman says someone handed the blueprints to Nassar for the Capitol bombing. He says there's a traitor among them.

Summary: Shocking information related to the Capitol bombing case gives President Kirkman reason to suspect there could be a traitor in the White House, which he asks Emily to quietly investigate. Meanwhile, concerns are raised about Congressman MacLeish.

The episode starts with Hannah's car crash. She's in bad shape and someone comes to check on her. Someone tells her help is on the way then spots the classified folder. He starts to strangle her — she gets her foot on the gas and escapes his grasp. She staggers away.

He goes to the car and grabs the file. Kimble is pressured to continue with the hearings but she wants to wait on her witness. She tries to call Hannah. The man is chasing her. He stops and calls someone and reports that he lost her. Hannah sees she's bleeding from her side.

She gets farther from the site. Kirkman and Alex look at the file that shows the explosion was based on a plan from the government as a threat assessment. He says it was to show the weaknesses. He says someone gave the blueprint to Al-Sakar. He says only her and Mike know.

Kirkman says they can't call anyone until they know more. POTUS says she needs to leave with the kids until it's safe. Alex says they don't know where is safe. Kirkman says they can't trust anyone. Kimble is threatened if she doesn't join the hearings ASAP.

Chuck comes home and finds Hannah there. She says you can't let them find me and tells Chuck not to call anyone. She faints in his arms. The committee approves MacLeish and should be a lock for VP. Seth, Emily and Aaron all toast this progress.

Seth talks about MacLeish's staff he's bringing. Aaron and Emily know some of them. Emily and Aaron watch the news on the new VP and she says she thought Aaron was going to target her but he saved her job. Aaron says he didn't think she could handle it.

Aaron says he was wrong about her and is learning from her. They kiss. POTUS is freaking out. Mie comes in and brings in Dr. Enright, the guy that wrote the plan. Kirkman shows him the explosion plan. The doc confirms and says he has nothing to do with the explosion.

He says he wrote the file to try and prevent his not to cause it. POTUS asks why he didn't come forward. Enright says he can see the explosion when he closes his eyes and says this is a conspiracy and he was scared. Kirkman says okay then says he needs to know who had access to it.

He says it's ORCON classification and the DOD security team had it and so did NORCOM and General Grady. He says he wrote it two years and six months ago when General Cochrane was the head of NORCOM.

Hannah wakes in Chuck's bed bandaged and alive. She goes downstairs and sees the news that MacLeish was confirmed as VP. He asks if she's okay. She asks if he glued her wound and where he learned to do it. He says YouTube then says MacLeish will be sworn in.

She says they have to stop it and Chuck says Atwood is in prison, someone tried to kill her and he's been suspended. Chuck says she almost died and asks what else can they do before they drop this? She asks Chuck why he's in the FBI. He says to help people.

Hannah says she did it to piss off her father who's a surgeon. She says she walked out halfway through grad school and wanted to help too but in her own way. She says they have to stop them and she's scared too. She says if they quit, the others win.

Chuck says she's never been scared in her life. He agrees and says what's next. She says they can't talk to Kimble and then says they took the evidence. She says the woman who's been calling me but Chuck says he's out of his office and she says get creative to find her.

Mike brings in Cochrane to see Kirkman. He shows him the plan they found. Cochrane says it's a reenactment and POTUS says no, it's a defense plan. Cochrane says he's never seen it before and POTUS says that's not true. He says he's the only one on the list that lived.

Cochrane says he never read the file and says it was reclassified by SEC DEF before he accessed it. He says it had never happened before and says he must have been given orders and that's from the White House. POTUS says he'll be detained for now.

Cochrane says this is a serious problem and he's willing to help if he'll take it. Emily wants to schedule hearings for the cabinet. Aaron brings up the kiss and he asks her for a date to an Elvis impersonator. She loves Elvis and agrees. She has to go see POTUS.

Kirkman pulls her in alone and says she can't tell anyone what he says. He tells her about the capitol plan. He says someone in the last president's administration was in on this and hands her a list of names. Aaron is on the list. He had clearance to know the file existed.

POTUS says she has to help him find the traitor. At a press briefing, Seth won't give them answers on Nassar. Seth wants to talk about the VP swearing in. He ignores the traitorous reporter Lisa. She asks why he didn't call on her and he says he didn't see her.

Seth says he can't get to everyone and says she can send him an email. Lisa says she gets that she betrayed his trust and says it's her job to ask questions and his job to answer. Seth glares. Emily looks at the list POTUS gave her and thinks.

Aaron comes into the room and she hides the list. She makes up an excuse for why Kirkman asked to see her. He reminds her about the date and she says she has to work late. Aaron asks if she regrets the kiss and she says no, she's just buried in work.

He's trying to hack info on cell towers to locate the call. His hack was detected and he's racing while they chase him and try to track him. He scrambles. He says it came from a burner phone purchased in DuPont Circle. She heads out.

Kimble comes to see Kirkman and he asks about the info she had on MacLeish. Kimble says six weeks ago, an FBI agent approached her and wanted access to the blueprints and then told her she had evidence on MacLeish then never showed up.

He asks her name and says MacLeish told him she was obsessed with him and it was personal. Kimble says she didn't strike her that way but says she hasn't heard from her since. He asks why she wanted the capitol blueprints and she says it was part of the investigation.

POTUS interrupts MacLeish who's working on security plans with Mike for the swearing in. Kirkman asks Mike to find Hannah for him ASAP. Hannah is ready to go out. She's got gun in hand and leaves Chuck's place.

Mike meets with Foerstel to ask about Hannah and tells him why he wants to see her. He tells Mike she totaled her car and fled the scene last night. He says he pinged her phone and tried local hospitals and can't find her.

He hands Mike a file on her. He thanks him. Hannah is at the store asking about surveillance footage. The guy takes her in the back to show her. She gives him the date of the phone purchase. She sees a Virginia license plate and calls Chuck to run it.

Seth holds another press conference about the swearing in. Lisa asks about a suspect in custody about Nassar's murder. Seth says the investigation is ongoing and he can't comment. The room explodes and he ends the conference and walks out.

Emily comes to talk to the White House correspondence tracking team. She looks for a specific date on who contacted SEC DEF from the White House. The woman pulls the records and says the call was made from Charles Langdon, the Chief of Staff.

Mike fills POTUS in on Hannah's car crash on the way to the hearing. He says Hannah has had a difficult time and Atwood made notes about her compromised judgment over her boyfriend's death. POTUS says she's crazy or knows something and wants to see her.

Hannah heads to a house in Virginia. She spots the car from the footage in the garage. She pulls her gun and checks out the house. She hears a loud noise and heads around the house. She goes to the front door and opens it.

Inside the furniture is covered and she sees someone running and goes after them. The person is in the woods but she makes them stop. It's Langdon. She says everyone thinks you're dead. He says they won't stop searching for them.

He says it's bigger than you think and someone in the woods fires on them. They take cover. Hannah takes down the shooter. Langdon drives off while she's distracted.

Hannah goes to the guy she shot and searches him. She calls Chuck and says she has a security key card and describes the logo. He says maybe Metway Security. She gives him the code from the card. She sees a neighbor walking her dog. The woman dials 911.

Seth tells Aaron and POTUS that Lisa knows someone was arrested. Kirkman says the FBI handed in the report and it confirmed Atwood killed Nassar. He says Lisa is keeping them honest. He says let's give her an exclusive but she has to wait until tomorrow.

Aaron says he's sorry about Atwood. Then he asks about what Emily told him why she was working late and Kirkman is clueless. Aaron knows Emily lied. Foerstel calls Mike and says he got a phone call saying Hannah shot someone.

Kirkman wonders what the hell is going on. Mike says the Feds are monitoring DC to try and catch her. Mike says he can't explain her actions and the others might be right about her. He says they shouldn't underestimate her. Chuck calls to warn Hannah about the search.

Chuck tells her what the key card accesses. It's a window facing the platform and she thinks they're going to try and kill Kirkman at MacLeish's swearing in. Security sweeps the area for MacLeish's swearing in. Kirkman and Alex prepare to leave and he's worried.

Alex encourages him not to go through with this but he says they don't have hard evidence against MacLeish. Beth comes to see her hubby and says it's time to leave. She asks what's wrong and he says he doesn't know if he can go through with this.

He says they need to rethink but Beth says this is a great day for all of them and what they've been working for and he asks at what cost. She says at any cost necessary and says he was chosen to survive to restore this nation to the empire it once was.

Beth says their friends placed faith in him and he can't be weak right now. She says tell me you agree. He says okay. She says let's go. Hannah races for DC. The president is on his way to the ceremony. Seth talks to Lisa and says she'll get an exclusive soon.

Bags are checked and people are screened to get into the ceremony. The assassin scans his key card into the building. It's Catalan. He's in the room to take the shot. POTUS arrives and the crowd cheers. The assassin gets the gun out that was left for him. He assembles the rifle.

He prepares to take the shot. Hannah races on. Kirkman takes the stage and greet MacLeish first. Emily gets a call from the switchboard woman who says Langdon wasn't there the day the call was made to SEC DEF. He was out of the country. The woman says it was Aaron that made the call.

Aaron pulls Kirkman onto the stage. He greets the crowd warmly. Hannah is still driving wildly to stop the assassin. POTUS talks about the chaos after the explosion. Hannah is in the crowd working her way through. The sniper is ready to take the shot. MacLeish comes up to be sworn in.

Emily stares worriedly at Aaron as this happens. The sniper trains his scope on Kirkman. The swearing in is almost done. Mike is alerted to Hannah's presence. Hannah sees the open window. She raises her gun and shoots at the sniper. Secret service tackles her. The sniper gets on shot off.

Yearwood (WHMO Doctor), Jeff Lillico (Wyatt), Mary Grant (Trauma Team), Richard H. Strobel (Command OP's Suit)
Summary: America reels from the aftermath of the shooting on the steps of the Capitol; Emily struggles with the knowledge there may be a traitor in the White House; and Hannah grapples with her decision to reveal what she knows about the conspiracy behind the bombing.

The episode kicks off with Hannah rushing to President Kirkman's speech — she has just discovered that there will be an assassination attempt. When she arrives, Kirkman is taking the podium, and there are thousands of people in the crowd. In a window of a nearby building, Hanna spots a sniper gun aimed at the President.

In a split second, Hanna whips out her gun and fires at the sniper. Meanwhile, security officers rush Hannah when they see her gun, completely unaware that she is trying to save the President, not kill him. Chaos ensues, and the crowd begins panicking. President Kirkman tackles Alexis to protect her when shots ring out.

After the dust has settled, Kirkman notices blood on Alex and thinks that she has been shot — suddenly he makes the realization that it's his blood, and Alex is just fine, he's the one that was shot. Medics rush the President to a nearby hospital, which has already been locked down by secret service agents. The doctors say that the bullet was a clean shot and exited through his back. They just have to run X-Ray to make sure that there was no internal damage.

Meanwhile, Hanna Wells is in a world of trouble. John Forstell sits down with her in an interrogation room — he tells her that they have her for killing a man, and leaving the scene of an accident. Not to mention, they found a key card in her pocket that opens the building where the sniper was located, and if she doesn't have anything to say, she'll be going down for conspiracy to kill the President. Hanna refuses to chat with Forstell and tells him she already gave her statement.

Emily and Seth are finally allowed in to see the President, he tells them to get word out to the press and begin dealing with the media. Everyone is in an uproar because the shooter is still at large.

Peter gets a phone call and learns that Kirkman is alive. After he hangs up, he warns his wife that the plan was a total fail, and if the cops find the shooter they were working with — then they are going to be totally screwed. His conniving wife reassures him they have nothing to worry about.

After meeting with President Kirkman, Emily takes Alex aside and tells her that they have a situation. She didn't get a chance to tell the President before the shooting, but a call came from the White house to kill a report, and it was from Aaron's office. Emily is freaking out — Alex tells her that right now her job is to keep Aaron as far away from her husband as she can.

President Kirkman has to go under anesthesia and in to surgery, they have no choice but to invoke the 25th Amendment and put Vice President Peter MacLeish in charge of the country until Kirkman is awake and functioning again. Meanwhile, Mike heads to the interrogation room to try and talk to Hanna Wells. He tells her he knows that she had info on MacLeish for the President and he needs to know what it is.

Vice President Peter has his hands full as soon as he takes over. Of course his wife is right there whispering in his ear. The stock markets are crashing, Kirkman's people want Peter to issue an executive order and shut the market down for a day. But, he absolutely refuses. He tells them to make a press release and tell people that America's business is just fine, and not to panic.

Mike returns to the interrogation room, he says he has an update and reveals that the President is in surgery and invoked the 25th Amendment. Hanna freaks out when she realizes that Peter MacLeish is the current President of the United States.

Kimble storms in to the Oval Office and tells Peter that he's making a huge mistake not shutting down the stock markets — it's going to be a total disaster. Kimble sees right through MacLeish, and she warns him that she will be watching his every move and has no problem taking her suspicions to the Core.

Hanna wants to answer Mike's questions, but she can't because they are being watched via the camera in the interrogation room. As Mike is leaving, she jumps on his back and pretends to attack him, and whispers something in his ear.

VP MacLeish gets word that they have found Kirkman's shooter, and he has barricaded himself in a building. He advises the troops going in to "Shoot To Kill." Obviously he wants the shooter killed so that he can't be traced back to him. Aaron argues with MacLeish and tells him that they need the shooter alive so they can get answers. MacLeish ignores everyone — and watches via live feeds as the army officers shoot the sniper that nearly killed the President rather than taking him alive.

Alex and Seth are staying close to Kirkman, and sipping coffee together in the waiting room while they wait for the President to come out of surgery. Alex breaks down in tears and cries to Seth, she blames herself for Kirkman getting shot, because she's the one that convinced him to take the job.

Mike tracks down Chuck, thanks to the tip from Hanna while she was pretending to choke him. He shows him a picture of Catalan. Chuck explains that Catalan and MacLeish were in the same army together, the Vice President knows the shooter.

The White House is a total mad house. While Emily is trying to straighten everything out, Aaron corners her and demands to know why she was looking in to his phone archives. Emily says she's "not at liberty to say" and he needs to speak to the President when he comes back. Aaron is freaking out, he knows he was being investigated for something.

At the hospital, Kirkman's surgery is getting a little hairy. The bullet knicked an artery and the President was bleeding out on the surgery table. Luckily, they were able to patch him up and get him out of the woods.

Catalan is dead, but Peter MacLeish isn't so sure that the shooting won't be tied to him. His wife gives him a pep-talk and reassures him that if there are any more problems, they will "remove them" just like they did Catalan.

Tom Kirkman is out of surgery, his wife Alex rushes to his side so she can be there when he wakes up. The next day, the stock market is crashing, just like everyone told Peter it would if he didn't shut down the stock market. Alex gives her husband an update and tells him that the doctors removed all the bullet fragments and there's no permanent damage.

Alex admits to Kirkman that MacLeish opened the stock market, and there are some complications. President Kirkman freaks out, he needs to restore confidence and let the people know that he is okay. While Seth is holding a press conference in front of the hospital, Kirkman opens his door and waves to the crowd outside. Immediately afterwards, the stocks begin to rebound, and everyone is thrilled. Except for Peter MacLeish.

Mike shows up at Tom's room and everyone clears out. Mike has pulled some strings and brought Hanna to Kirkman's bedside. Once Hanna and Tom are alone, he demands to know everything she knows about Peter MacLeish.

Herbert (Alvin Joyner), Godfrey Giocada (Anesthesiologist), Andrea Runge (Captain Betsy Kassabian), Wes Berger (Desk Sergeant Koslowski), Brendan Beiser (Surgeon), Raven Dauda (Yvette Atwood), Mary Grant (Trauma Team)
Summary: President Kirkman works with Agent Wells to try to learn more about Vice President MacLeish's role in the bombing. A Congresswoman Hookstraten becomes suspicious of recent events and confronts the Vice President. Meanwhile FBI Director Atwood's worst fears are tragically confirmed.

The episode kicks off in President Tom Kirkman's hospital room — his security officer has just brought Hannah Wells to speak to him face to face. While Hannah is in the middle of explaining that Charles Langdon is very much alive, and faked his death, Alex walks in and interrupts. Hannah refuses to finish talking in front of the First Lady.

After Alex excuses herself, Tom lets it be known that he doesn't like hiding things from his wife. Mike actually agrees with Hannah Wells though, he tells Tom that it's time that he "tightens his circle," this is a matter of national security and the more Alex knows will put her in danger. Hannah and Mike leave to devise a plan to bring down MacLeish, Tom orders them to come back and fill him in when they have a strategy.

Meanwhile at the White House, Aaron and Emily are still bickering because he found out that she was investigating his phone calls from two years ago. They put their differences aside though, because they have bigger problems, apparently Vice President MacLeish has called his own press conference, and nobody knows why or what he plans on saying.

There is no acting attorney general, so Hannah decides to think outside of the box and find him some legal counsel. Back at the hospital, Alex and Tom watch MacLeish's press conference, he raves about Tom's miraculous recovery and taking down his shooter. Alex is offended that Tom has nerve to hold a press conference on his own.

After the conference is over, Alex tells Tom that Emily came to her while he was in the hospital and revealed that Aaron is the one that made the phone call to the Pentagon. Tom is upset that Emily is involving her in White House business, and he refuses to believe that Aaron would betray him. Hannah needs more proof before she can take MacLeish down. She decides to pay Jason Atwood a visit in prison. But, he isn't interested in recanting his statement and helping them take down MacLeish, it's too dangerous. Jason shouts at Hannah that if she wants to help, she will help find his son Luke.

Tom calls Emily to his hospital room to discuss Aaron. He tells her to keep what she found confidential. Tom doesn't think that Aaron is a traitor, but he doesn't want to go public with what they found until he can prove Aaron is innocent for sure.

MacLeish stops by the hospital to see Tom, the President and Mike manage to keep their composure and not let MacLeish know that they are on to him. Afterwards, MacLeish fills his sneaky wife Beth in on their meeting. She reassures MacLeish that they will never be discovered, and she has people cleaning up all of the loose ends as they speak... including Hannah Wells.

Tom explains to Aaron that he ordered Emily to vet him, and keep it quiet. Aaron feels guilty after their chat, so he tracks Emily down and makes amends with her. They seem to be on good terms now, but things are certainly still awkward between them.

Hannah Wells is working close with another FBI agent she trusts to try and dig up more dirt on MacLeish. She decides to rattle some of the men that went to Kunar Province with MacLeish. She tracks down a man named Alvin Joyner at a garage he works at. She questions Alvin about the mission, and the manifest says there were more people involved, Alvin gets cagey and clearly paranoid when he realizes that the FBI is on to them.

Speaker Hookstraten is snooping around, she knows that something is fishy about MacLeish. She corners Aaron and demands to know why they took out the shooter instead of questioning him. After some badgering, Aaron reluctantly admits that MacLeish ordered "Shoot To Kill," even though they could have taken the shooter in to custody without incident.

Just like Hannah predicted, Alvin Joyner reaches out to MacLeish — he's paranoid after a visit from the FBI. MacLeish wants to pay Alvin a visit and do a little hand-holding and reassure him that everything is okay. His wife Beth warns him that it is a horrible idea, she thinks it's time to eliminate the problem and kill Joyner, but MacLeish doesn't want to hear it. Meanwhile, MacLeish's problems are just beginning — the FBI has finally found Luke's body.

A lawyer shows up at the precinct and claims she is there on behalf of Hannah's family to represent her, they inform her that Hannah has been released. The lawyer texts Beth and tells her that Hannah is no longer in custody. Beth puts two and two together and realizes that Hannah is the one that visited Alvin and set him up.

Meanwhile, Hannah is watching MacLeish and Alvin's secret meeting in the secretary. She records their conversation and gets more than enough to arrest him. Hannah runs out with her gun drawn and tells MacLeish he is under arrest. Before Hannah can take him in to custody, Beth shows up. She shoots and kills her husband, and then shoots herself in the head and takes her own life.

Tonight's episode of Designated Survivor ends with Tom being released from the hospital, where he gets a standing ovation on his way out the door.

Summary: As President Kirkman continues his investigation into why Beth MacLeish murdered her husband, he learns that his Chief-of Staff leaked confidential information to the media. Agent Wells speaks with one of MacLeish's former compatriots in an attempt to find out why MacLeish was involved in the Capital Bombing and how. In the midst of all that is happening around him, the President also has to deal with being separated from his children as Alex decides the White House is not a safe environment for them and wishes to take them to Camp David.

The episode kicks off with chaos at the White House, President Kirkman is livid when he hears that Beth McLeish killed her husband, the Vice President, and then turned the gun on herself. How did Hannah and the FBI not intercept her?

President Kirkman summons Aaron, Seth, and Emily to the White House in the middle of the night to fill them in on McLeish's death — and give them a chance to prepare for the media firestorm.

Alex is shocked when she hears about the Vice President's death and his wife. She's worried about their kids. Alex wants to know what happened, but of course Tom can't share the details. She's noticeably flustered that her husband keeps boxing her out.

President Kirkman holds a press conference, he explains to the room full of reporters that Peter McLeish was shot and killed by Beth, and then she committed suicide. Tom leaves out all of the details of the FBI being there, and says that MacLeish was just visiting a soldier's gravesite that served with him in Afghanistan. Obviously, the press has a ton of questions, but Tom refuses to give out any more info and excuses himself.

While the staff is dealing with the madness at the White House, Hannah slips away to attend Jason's son's funeral. She offers her condolences to a devastated Jason.

Emily and President Kirkman are busy trying to get his meetings together for the day. With the McLeish's deaths and Tom's almost assassination, they need to get some stability in Washington before the people begin to lose faith.

Abe Leonard, a well-known reporter who is a big fan of exposing the government, confronts Seth during the press conference. He knows that McLeish gave a "shoot to kill order" on the assassin that tried to kill Tom, rather than let the FBI come in and interrogate him. Seth avoids his questions, after the press conference, he tells Tom that there is a leak in the White House.

Tom orders his staff to find out who is leaking confidential information. But, Aaron already knows who the leak is. He storms in to Hookstraten's office and confronts her, she admits that she told Abe Leonard. Aaron is livid, he shouts that he told her that in confidence.

Aaron reluctantly heads back to Kirkman's office and explains that he is the leak, he had no idea that Hookstraten was going to feed the information to the press. Tom tells Aaron that he should take a week off, he's clearly exhausted and not making smart decisions. Aaron awkwardly leaves, Tom insists he's not in trouble, but that doesn't seem to be the truth.

Tom calls Emily in to his office and explains that he sent Aaron home for the week, he wants her to step in as his Chief of Staff until Aaron comes back. Emily agrees, and then has an uncomfortable chat with Aaron as he tells her everything she will need to know to do his job.

Meanwhile, Seth is working on a project of his own. Abe Leonard is moving forward with the story about Peter McLeish's "Shoot to Kill" order, and the conspiracy to kill the assassin rather than question him and find out who he was working for. Seth is determined to discredit Abe Leonard, and remind the public of how many times the reporter has been wrong in the past. Hopefully, his readers will think that he is wrong again about this story.

Hannah is determined to get to the bottom of who McLeish was working for, and why he wanted the President dead. Obviously, that's a little difficult with Peter and Beth dead, but she still has one piece to the puzzle. She sits down with Joyner, the man that served in Afghanistan with Peter, in the interrogation room to try and get some answers.

Tom finally gets a break from work to chat with Alex, and she blindsides him and reveals that she has decided to take the kids away from the White House. She thinks it is too dangerous to have their family there with everything that has been going on. Tom begs her to reconsider, but before they can talk any more Mike interrupts, they need the President for another urgent matter.

Hannah sits down with the President and explains to him what she learned from Joyner. Apparently, in Afghanistan, McLeish and his troop were ordered to escort an Army Major to meet with an Afghan war lord. The Major was none other than Lozano, the man that tried to assassinate Tom. The meeting went South, the warlord took Lozano's money, and a shoot-out ensued — the soldiers wound up killing innocent women and children trying to get out of the compound.

Joyner ran into Lozano later, and he pulled a gun on him and demanded to know what had happened and why he took the troop to meet with the warlord. Apparently, Lozano told Joyner that he's an undercover CIA agent, and the bags were filled with $5 Million in cash. Joyner and the rest of the troop wanted to kill Lozano for what happened, but McLeish jumped in and saved his life.

Hannah thinks that the failed mission might be what radicalized McLeish. He and his risked their lives, and lost some soldiers doing what they were ordered, and in the end they looked like the bad guys and their sacrifices weren't even acknowledged.

The next day, Tom takes his daughter Penny to school. He watches the motorcade of black SUV's pull up to her school, and all of the secret service men escort her inside. He realizes that Alex was right, this is no way to raise a child. He heads back to the White House and tells Alex that he understands why she wants to take the children out of Washington.

Hannah stops by Jason's house to check on him — he's sleeping on the couch and doesn't look like he's gotten up in days. Jason explains that he was fired, he lost his son, and now his wife left him. Hannah tries to convince Jason to help her find Luke's killer — he's not interested in what she has to say and tells her to get out.

Abe Leonard stops by the White House to confront Seth — he knows that he planted stories in the news to discredit him. Abe taunts Seth and tells him that he just confirmed the story was right, or else he wouldn't have been trying so hard to make him look wrong.

After Abe leaves the white house, he stops by the bar to harass Kimble. He laughs that the smear campaign isn't going to stop him. Kimble warns him that he might not want to underestimate Seth. Abe isn't interested, he vows to prove that there is a connection between McLeish and the shooter that almost killed the President.

That night, Alex and the kids fly out of Washington. Tom puts them on the plane and they share an emotional goodbye.

Tonight's episode of Designated Survivor ends with President Tom Kirkman holding a press conference — he says that he wants to be honest and open with the people. He confirms Abe Leonard's story and that Peter McLeish did send out a shoot to kill order when the FBI was bringing in the assassin. He goes on to apologize to the American people, and reminds them that they must stay united.

Aaron is heading up to his apartment in the dark, and a man in a hat approaches him — it's Charles Langdon. Hannah and the FBI are watching their meeting on surveillance footage.

Summary: President Kirkman learns from Agent Wells that Former White House Chief of Staff Charles Langdon is still alive and claims to have new information about the Capital Bombing. Upon hearing this, the President is surprised to learn that his Chief of Staff, Aaron Shore, has handed in his resignation despite Kirkman's objections. The President names Emily as Aaron's replacement. After meeting with Langdon, the President becomes more determined to bring the conspirators to justice and gives Agent Wells the power to do whatever is needed.

The episode kicks off where we left off last week. Aaron is headed home late at night, and Charles Langdon emerges out of the shadows. Aaron's obviously shocked since Charles is supposed to be dead.

Charles rushes Aaron in to a church across the street — there are about a dozen people inside the chapel for a late night mass. Charles tells Aaron he needs him to do him a favor.

Meanwhile, Hannah and the FBI have been tailing Aaron. When they spot Charles Langdon, they rush in to the church with their guns drawn. The FBI's too late — Charles slipped out the back door before Hannah could capture him.

At the White House, Seth and Emily are meeting with President Tom Kirkman — they have some meetings lined up for him for potential cabinet members. But, everyone is pretty apprehensive about joining his new administration. Former President Moss has agreed to sit down with President Kirkman tomorrow and give him some recommendations. Mike interrupts their meeting to fill Kirkman in on the Charles Langdon drama.

Hannah has Aaron in an interrogation room. Aaron swears he had no idea Charles Langdon was alive, and this was the first time that he saw him. Aaron explains that Charles Langdon wants his help getting him a deal and immunity in exchange for information — he wants a new identity.

Hannah and Mike meet with Tom and fill him in on Charles Langdon's request — he says there's no way he is cutting a deal with Langdon. Hannah thinks that cutting a deal with Charles may be helpful, after all he is the only person who can tell them about the conspiracy and who was trying to kill Kirkman.

The next morning, Seth stops by Emily's office to give her a bullet proof vest to congratulate her on being temporarily promoted to chief of staff. Emily laughs it off and rushes off to Tom Kirkman's office.

Kirkman calls Emily to his office to discuss a situation brewing in Aruba. A guerilla warlord named Atsu Kalame broke a cease-fire with the government. Apparently, he's a really bad guy, is known to use child soldiers, and has a militia army of over 10,000 soldiers. Tom has a special interest in Naruba, he was working there years ago, he tells her to reach out to state — the US needs to help the innocent people.

Meanwhile, the FBI cuts Aaron loose so he can meet with Charles Langdon again and discuss a deal. Hannah picks Langdon up and brings him in for questioning.

Langdon explains that it all started four years ago, he met a woman named Claudine Poyet at a ball. He fell for her, but she had other things in mind. Apparently, Claudine worked for a contracting firm, and he was feeding her intel for work. He gave her information on the Capital threat assessment, and she used it to pull off killing the President. Charles has one picture on his cell phone of Claudine sleeping, Hannah recognizes the woman in the photo immediately.

President Moss arrives at the White House to meet with Kirkman. Kirkman is thrilled to sit down with Moss — but he has some tough criticism for him. Moss says that Kirkman was given an impossible job and lectures him about how he is running the country since taking over. The conversation gets awkward — and Moss makes himself right at home. It's clear that Kirkman's expectations of the former President were let down.

Aaron sits down for more questions from the FBI. He realizes he is in a ton of trouble, and Langdon used him to get the threat assessment file for Claudine Poyet. The trail leads to Aaron's computer.

Alex returns to the White House, she left the kids back at Camp David and came back to check on Tom. He fills her in on his horrible meeting with President Moss earlier. Before they can catch up anymore, Mike interrupts and tells Tom it's time for him to sit down with Charles Langdon.

Kirkman finally gets to see Langdon face to face. President Kirkman screams at Langdon over how many lives he cost. Langdon explains that during the day of the State of the Union, he wasn't even there — he was blackmailed in to naming Kirkman the designated survivor that day. Someone wanted to make sure that Tom wound up the next President of the United States, and they killed a lot of people to make it happen.

Langdon explains that the night of the bombing, he tried to make a run for it. But, Claudine and her people hacked his car and forced him to crash in to the river. The FBI confirms his story, they found the car in the water.

Kirkman wants answers — he needs to know who is behind the conspiracy, or else he's not cutting a deal. Langdon swears he has no idea who wanted Kirkman to wind up in the White House. But, he points out that Kirkman was the least qualified of all of the cabinet members, and that's why they wanted him in the office, to make the United States weak.

President Kirkman meets with his staff and the Colonel to discuss his options in Naruba. Russia is dragging their feet and the United Nations is skeptical about getting involved. Kirkman is determined to stop a potential genocide though, so he orders his troops to get in to position in Naruba and pull out of Ethiopia.

Later that night, Tom and Alex sit down to have dinner with former President Moss. Shortly after they kick off their evening, Emily rushes in and interrupts — she has bad news about Naruba. Apparently, Kalama took 15 American aid workers hostage, and if the US troops try to stop him he will kill the hostages. Now, Tom has to decide whether or not save the 15 Americans or the 100,000 Narubians. Aaron stops by his office and bumps

Aaron stops by his office and bumps in to Seth. He quizzes Aaron about what's going on with him and the FBI. Aaron won't answer any of his questions, he gives him a letter and asks him to read it over.

President Moss has advice for Kirkman — he warns him that he has to save the 15 Americans before he worries about the people of Naruba. Moss tells Kirkman to buy back the hostages by lifting sanctions against Kalame's millions of dollars. Kirkman doesn't like negotiating with terrorists, but he reluctantly agrees to Moss's plan.

Aaron sits down with Kirkman and informs him that he is resigning, and Seth is already distributing his resignation to the press. Kirkman begs Aaron to stay now that Langdon has cleared his name. But, Aaron insists on leaving, he would only hurt the White House if he came back to work because his reputations has been run through the mud by the FBI's investigation.

Emily and the Colonel barge in to President Kirkman's office, the negotiations with Kalame are complete and he has agreed to hand over the American prisoners — they have choppers en route to pick up the hostages. Kirkman watches the extraction through live feeds, all 15 hostages are handed over without a scratch on them. Then, Kirkman makes a bold move. He promised Kalame he wouldn't attack his troops, but he didn't say anything about the infrastructure. He orders the troops to bomb the bridges to prevent Kalame's troops from getting in to the city's capital and killing any more innocent people. After the drama in

After the drama in Naruba is handled, Kirkman offers Moss a position as his secretary of state since they worked so well together dealing with Kalame. Moss happily accepts the position — retirement isn't all its cracked up to be.

Tonight's episode ends with Kirkman meeting with Hannah. He authorizes her to use whatever means necessary to find the people responsible for the conspiracy. Hannah promises not to let him down.

Summary: As President Kirkman releases an agenda to reset his presidency, Alex makes a controversial public statement that threatens to derail it. Meanwhile, FBI agent Hannah Wells unknowingly finds herself in the center of a dangerous trap while getting closer to the truth. While the country still mourns the loss of their Vice President.

The president is having a press conference. He would like to reset the clock and begin his 100 days now. He will hold a town hall meeting at the local college. He wants to get back to governing with the crisis behind them.

Hannah is still looking for Claudine and her relationship with Langdon. She is working with Chuck who manages to pull fingerprints off a wine glass in a picture. He runs it through the database.

Seth and Emily help direct the team as they receive calls on hot button issues. The president shows up. They tell him they are getting calls and building support for his upcoming town hall meeting.

Aaron is running through the park. He gets a call. His cousin is in town. Meanwhile, the first lady holds her own press conference on the issues of woman. She takes a round of questions. She answers one question on practicing law and one on gun control.

Hannah visits Jason. She tells him that she knows who killed Luke. She knows where the woman is and she needs back-up.

The president watches the news. Media outlets are attacking the first lady's gun comments. Emily and Seth advise him to talk to the first lady. He goes home to see her. She apologizes. He tells her to publicly walk back her comment. She smiles. She is game for walking it back.

Aaron and his cousin go to visit a Congresswoman. He has vouched for her and hopes to get her a job.

Hannah and Jason are in the car. They almost get into an accident. Jason loses his temper and gets out. Grabbing the guy through the window. He is just a reckless driver, Hannah tells him. She wants to take him home. She needs a partner not a loose cannon. He walks home.

Hannah pulls outside of a bunch of dark buildings with her gun ready. She makes a call. The place looks cleared out. She doesn't know someone is watching her through a camera.

The team preps the first lady for her conference. She tells Tom she isn't good at playing the submissive wife role. She loves him so she will do this. She does great at answering all of the questions.

Aaron and his cousin are going for a walk. She wants to know why he left the White House. She reminds him that he came to DC to make a difference. And that is why she came too.

Chuck tells Hannah that a company Brown Reading is still paying the taxes on the building that has been vacant for 10 years. She asks him to check it out. She smells gas. They run for it as the building explodes. They make it out okay, but Chuck can't hear.

The president does a practice run with questions from the public with his team. He tells Emily to talk to him like a person, not the president. They want him to be personable and not sound like a professor. Seth throws a question about pornography at him.

Its town hall night. The president answers questions about taking office. He makes a joke about being shot. He answers questions about how to tell kids that they will be safe again. He answers a question on factory jobs honestly. He gets a gun control question from a crying lady. How will he prevent criminals from getting guns? He answers it with passion and a promise that he will do everything in his power to deal with the issue.

Aaron arrives at the office of Madam Speaker. He wants to work for Buchanan and Associates. He wants to be a lobbyist. She wants him on the inside. He doesn't want to be. She wants him to work for her.

He meets with several senators. He wants to create a partnership. He tells Bowman that he wants to come to a consensus on gun control. Before leaving the white house, Bowman talks to the press about passing a bill that will back the president into a corner.

Hannah returns to the building. Jason is waiting in the dark for her. They team up and go in together. She sees a computer monitor with video paused of her. Shots are fired. A woman comes out of nowhere. They fight. Jason comes from behind. He aims the gun at the woman. Hannah wants to take her in, but Jason has a hard time controlling his temper. He fires 2 shots, missing her and scaring her. She whirls around and shoots. Jason and Hannah shoot her dead.

Aaron runs into Emily and tells her the news. She wants to know how he could work for a republican when he is a democrat. With Tom as an independent and president, Aaron doesn't think party lines matter that much.

Hannah looks through the woman's computer. She had plans to blow up lady liberty and the golden gate bridge.

Strobel (Senator)
Summary: President Kirkman forms an unlikely alliance in the hopes of passing his first bill while Agent Ritter is briefed by FBI Agent Hannah Wells about a new alarming threat to the nation.

The episode kicks off with Hannah Wells meeting with President Tom Kirkman's Head of Security. Hannah shows Mike the files that she recovered from Claudine, it looks like she was planning more attacks, and somehow she got confidential government files on the Golden Gate Bridge, the Hoover Dam, and the Statue of Liberty.

Mike fills Kirkman in on what Hannah discovered, they currently have men searching all three locations without raising any red flags. President Kirkman heads to a press conference to discuss his very first bill that his cabinet is pushing through — he's trying to enforce stricter background checks on gun permits. But, first, the bill need to be voted on by Senate and get a majority. Meanwhile, Aaron is working with Kimble

Meanwhile, Aaron is working with Kimble Hookstraten, and they have their own issues to deal with. Aaron thinks that Kimble needs to push back against Bowman, before he pushes her out of her spot as the leading Republican in Congress.

Kirkman and his team gets to work trying to secure votes. They have the Democrat votes locked in, but they will still have to get at least 5 Republicans to vote their way in order to get the bill through the Senate. Hannah discovers that Claudine [AKA Brooke Mathison] has made several trips to North Dakota over the last few years. She tells John that she's travelling out there to snoop around, and has decided to take Jason with her. John warns her that Jason Atwood isn't the most stable guy these days, and highly recommends she takes someone else with her, but Hannah won't hear it.

Hookstraten meets with Bowman, and tries to get him in line and remind him that the Republicans need to have a united front. Hookstraten points out that Bowman's stunt with the bill could backfire in his face. Bowman is cocky, and not interested in what Hookstraten has to say, he scoffs that she's just a member of the old guard and should "get with the times."

After working the phones all day and trying to secure votes, Emily heads to the bar and runs in to Aaron. She explains she had a tough day at the office, and finding a Republican to vote Kirkman's bill through is easier said than done. Aaron thinks that he and Hookstraten may be able to help them, but it's going to cost them, and Hookstraten has her eye on vice President.

Kimble Hookstraten is eager to put Bowman in his place, and score some brownie points with the White House. After meeting with Kirkman, Kimble calls a press conference and announces that she is supporting the President, and urges her fellow Republicans do the same when its time to vote on the background check bill.

First Lady Alex is busy working the public to get their support, and campaigning hard against gun violence and she bumps in to Bowman. He mocks her about trying to campaign to get the bill passed, but Alex brushes him off and says she just wants to stop the violence and save innocent lives.

Hannah and Jason arrive in North Dakota, and they hike to the location that Brooke was visiting. When they arrive, they are shocked to find themselves standing in an open field, surrounded by nothing but trees and grass for miles. Something seems off.

Kirkman, Moss, and Emily work hard, running around Washington like chickens with their heads cut off, trying to secure the last three votes before bill goes to Senate. Kirkman has his hands full trying to convince a Senator from Alaska to get on board. He promises her that he can find her a spot on his staff if she loses the reelection over siding with him.

Seth is freaking out — he learned that the First Lady was meeting with Senator Hunter to discuss another policy she wants to push through, and then exchanged words with Bowman in public. Emily warns Seth that it's between Tom and his wife, and they can't get involved, Emily tells Seth not to tell Tom what happened until after the vote is over.

Moss, Tom, and his team gather around the TV in the office to watch the Senate vote on the bill. And, it's not going well. The Senator from Alaska didn't have the guts to vote against the Republicans. She choked at the last minute and voted against the bill. Another republican woman shocks everyone and votes for the bill. The bill is passed with a vote of 51-49.

In North Dakota the next day, Hannah and Jason return to the site — they got a phone call and learned that there are infrared photos from a plane that show a missile buried underground, that's why the field seemed empty. Hannah and Jason head back to the field and find a hidden tunnel that leads underground.

Alex and Tom sit down to meet Senator Vandenberg. It turns out that Vandenberg had witnessed Alex standing up to Bowman the other day, and it inspired her to do the same.

Underground, Hannah and Jason discover the massive missile that Brooke had stashed away, and they also find cases of bombs that are identical to the ones used to blow up the Capitol. There are enough explosives in the bunker to blow up three more Capitols.

Stevens (Husband), Meghan Allen (Lead Woman), Shawn Storer (Man in Overcoat), Sophia Walker (Olivia Abram), John Tench (Owner), Chuck Shamata (Senator Charlie Krauss), Abanoub Andraous (Translator), Lorne Hunter (Utah Man)
Summary: As President Kirkman struggles to put together a new Supreme Court, FBI Agent Hannah Wells goes undercover and discovers much more than she ever could have imagined. Meanwhile, Seth Wright has to contend with journalist Abe Leonard, who returns from the Middle East with an explosive story.

Hannah is on her way to Driggs with Jason still working the private mission Tom sent her on. Meanwhile, a reporter by the name of Abe Leonard is overseas researching who was really behind the capital bombing.

Emily tells Tom that the house looks like it is going to pass the gun bill. He agrees it is good news. Now he wants to focus on reestablishing the Supreme Court. Julia comes in to give him the 9 nominees.

A reporter Abe Leonard, who has just returned from looking into Al Sacar, comes to tell Seth that it wasn't them who blew up the capital. They didn't have the people or the smarts. He plans to publish the story tomorrow and would like a response from the white house. Seth tracks down Emily to tell him about Abe. Their seals took out the wrong guys. This is bad for the house.

The president sits down with the senate. Senator Bowman would like to choose his own nominees. The room grows chaotic. Tom demands they all take their seats. He tells the room that they have a broken government. They need to put the Supreme Court back together. Tom tells Bowman that he doesn't want to be an obstructionist. He will talk to the press to tell them that Bowman is holding up what needs to be a speedy process. Tom agrees to pick the ninth seat nominee.

Jason and Hannah are traveling through North Dakota. They get out in town. A local tells them that a storm is coming.

Julia tells Tom that he cannot let Bowman win.

Hannah and Jason enter a bar. They ask the owner about all of the cars with different state license plates. He tells them that they are all True Believers. They all get together on a plot of land. No-one really knows what they do besides have bonfires.

Abe shows up at the Speaker's office. Aaron is there working. Abe wants to know why he left Tom. Aaron doesn't want to say. Abe asks her about a candidate for VP she chose not to back as well as what Agent Hannah Wells is up to. She refuses to comment at all. Aaron leaves and calls Hannah.

Aaron is waiting on a park bench. Someone else shows up, not Hannah. The man who interrogated Aaron before. Reluctantly, Aaron tells him what he knows about Leonard, who relays all of the information to the president. Tom doesn't want to take Leonard in, it's a free country. They just have to see what he publishes.

Aaron meets with Emily. He tells her the Speaker wants the VP slot. Emily tells him it is a possibility and that's all she can say.

Leonard's editor kicks back his story. They won't run it yet until he finds more solid ground to stand on. His article sounds like conjecture.

Leonard plans to track down Wells. She is on to something.

Hannah thinks they found the cell. She talks to what appears to be a local. He tells her he isn't. She asks him about how to find a campground. He tells her he can't help her. She pretends to drop her map and lifts a book, Pax Americana, out of the side pocket of his pants.

Leonard is working at his desk. Someone sends him a video link. He shows a shooting with Agent Wells in the backdrop.

Julia is waiting for Tom in his office. Tom comes in. Emily follows shortly. Bowman has said no to their ninth seat choice. They have a plan B — Julia. She is flattered.

Hannah and Jason camp out in a cabin watching the campgrounds. Hannah looks over the Pax book.

Julia returns to see Tom. She can't be his ninth judge. She has early onset dementia. Tom is shocked. She believes in what they are doing. She wants to see it through. He agrees and apologizes that she is going through this.

Hannah and Jason drive to a bridge that is being guarded by men with shotguns and a woman who tells them that they are on private property. They leave.

Leonard leaves his office. He senses that he is being followed. He stops on a path and takes a selfie, getting the man in the photo. When he turns around the man is gone.

Tom reconvenes the meeting with the senators. He has Julia explain that they will not supply a 9th judge. They will go forward with the 8. The senators all agree.

Seth concludes his daily press conference. Leonard is there. He tells him to have the FBI stop following him. Seth tells him he needs help. Leonard chuckles and tells him to back off.

Tom and Julia share a beer in the oval for her clever idea. The grandfather clock alerts her to the hour. She needs to get to NY, she has class in the morning. Before she goes, she tells him to remember her like this.

Leonard finds an envelope on the hood of his car. He gets a call from an unknown number. They have something they need to discuss. The man tells him to meet him in front of the Roosevelt Bridge in an hour.

Hannah and Jason camp out in the woods, watching from a distance. It's dark. The True Believers light a circle of bonfires. A chopper makes a landing. It's Lorenzo who gets out. Hannah is in shock!

Summary: As President Kirkman considers candidates for Vice President, Kimble Hookstraten finds herself embroiled in scandal. Agent Wells and Jason Atwood return from North Dakota with a critical new lead while journalist Abe Leonard's investigation takes an unexpected turn.

The episode kicks off where we left off last week — Hannah and Jason have just discovered what appears to be a secret community meeting in the middle of the night in a field. They're shocked when they see that Lozana is very much alive. Then men at the meeting notice Hannah Wells and her partner spying on them. They chase them down and a shootout ensues, Hannah and Jason make it out, but not unscathed, he's bleeding from a gun shot wound.

Abe Leonard gets a phone call from the mystery tipster that has been leaking him information — the tipster tells him that the White House is covering up the Capitol bombing and to look in to the name Jason Atwood. Abe is determined to track down the tipster, all he has is a license plate to go on, but when he traces the license plate he learns that the tipster was driving a White House car and most likely works there.

At the White House, Kimble and President Kirkman are signing the gun control bill that they pushed together through Senate. After the signing, Tom takes Kimble aside and tells her he wants her to serve as his Vice President. As soon as they do their vetting — they will make an official announcement.

Hannah heads back to the office and fills her boss and the Chief of Security in on what she and Atwood saw — they have a tough time believing that Lozana is alive. Hannah is determined to prove it, she heads to the morgue to take another set of prints off from the body that they identified as Lozano. Washington is buzzing with Kimble

Washington is buzzing with Kimble Hookstraten and President Hookstraten's budding new partnership. However, Jack Bowman is seething. He meets with a shady guy named Liam Price who claimed to have "something good" for Bowman. A few hours later a story about Kimble hits the internet titled "Hookstraten's Turkish Delights."

Aaron, Emily, and Seth begin panicking over the Hookstraten news story, the press is alleging that several years ago she took bribes from Turkish leaders for an aid package. Kirkman thinks that it's all smoke and mirrors, and he's not buying it, he wants to talk to Kimble about it in person. Aaron is fuming, he tracks down Jack Bowman and accuses him of planting the story.

Mike pulls Tom aside and warns him that there is a chance that Lozano is alive. Hannah discovered that the body in the morgue doesn't belong to Lozano. Apparently, someone hacked the database and switched Lozano's fingerprints with the man the FBI killed to make him appear dead. Tom sits down with Tom sits down with Hookstraten, she insists that nothing illegal happened with her deal with Turkey. While she and Tom are chatting about it, they get bad news. Emily rushes in and says that the Ethics Committee just opened a formal investigation into Hookstraten's trip to Turkey.

Despite Emily's warnings, Tom won't let go of the idea of Hookstraten as his Vice President — even if she is one of the most hated women in the news right now. Tom wants the White House to stand by her, and help clean up the publicity mess. Emily has Seth call a press meeting to try and clear up some of the negative rumors about Hookstraten.

Jason Atwood is trying to enjoy a cup of coffee at a diner when Abe Leonard tracks him down. Jason refuses to speak to him and heads to his car — Abe trails behind him rattling off questions about the Capitol bombing. Jason hits him in the ribs and gets in his car and rides off.

Jason fills Hannah in on his meeting with Abe Leonard — he rants that Abe knew some things that were never released to the public, he has to have a leak at the White House. Hannah tells Jason to lay low and heal his arm, he's no good to her until his gun shot wound is healed up.

Hookstraten summons Liam Price to her office — he proudly admits that he leaked the story. Apparently, it was payback for her firing him. Hookstraten points out that she fired him because he was taking money from lobbyists, and she can still go public about it.

Hannah pours over surveillance footage, and she finds proof that Lozano left the building very much alive after the FBI thought that they had shot him dead. Mike meets with President Kirkman and warns him that they were right — Lozano is still very much alive, and could still be trying to take him out. They're going to tighten security.

Hannah finally gets the ID on the body in the morgue that's not Lozano, apparently the dead guy is named Desmond Legarth, and he has ties to a business man named Patrick Lloyd and his company Browning Reed. Hannah meets up with an old source of her's to get intel on Patrick Lloyd.

Hannah and Foerstel track down Patrick Lloyd at his ranch to question him about the bombs they found on his property a few days ago. Lloyd claims that they were all purchased by his company Browning Reed before he dissolved it, and he has all of the proper permits on them. Lloyd is very patriotic, and despises the American government. He rants about oppression of the government before he rides off, and Hannah recognizes what he is saying from the manifesto that she and Jason found at the secret meeting in the woods that Lozano was attending. The pieces are starting to all come together.

Hannah is determined to prove that Lloyd is the man behind the Capitol bombing and planting Tom in the White House. Foerstel tries to warn her that taking down Lloyd is not as easy as it sounds — he's protected legally, financially, and his team is evasive.

Tom calls his daughter at Camp David to check in on her and his wife Alex. His daughter is thrilled about a woman being his Vice President, Tom doesn't have the heart to tell her that it may not work out.

Hannah heads back to her motel room late at night — but she can tell that someone else has been there. She rushes to her car, but a man dressed in black grabs her and stabs her in the neck with a syringe. Her limp body is loaded in to the back of a van and the van speeds off. Tonight's episode ends with Abe meeting with the tipster in the dark parking garage — he tells Abe to check the White House log for the day after the shooting.

Tonight's episode ends with Abe meeting with the tipster in the dark parking garage — he tells Abe to check the White House log for the day after the shooting.

The tipster calls Lozano and tells him that everything is back on track — Lozano is riding in the van that just kidnapped Hannah.

Summary: As the White House gears up for President Kirkman's first international summit, Kimble Hookstraten faces her toughest political battle yet when her speakership is challenged. Meanwhile, Alex wrestles with whether or not to bring the kids back to Washington.

A van speeds into a parking lot and pulls a tied up Hannah out and puts her into the back of a semi-truck. Lloyd gets a text that says, "The package is out for delivery." The president speaks to a group of students touring the white house. The teacher tells the president that the grant that funds the student's group may be cut. He asks if the president can help and he will look into it. Mike worries because he hasn't heard from Hannah. He finds her car in a hotel parking lot but her room is empty. All her things are there but she is gone. Emily and Seth talk about his upcoming trip to NATO.

Kimble testifies in front of the ethics committee and asks that they review her record and reputation when they vote. Mike reviews the hotel parking lot footage and sees that Hannah was kidnapped. He immediately alerts the president. Hannah was getting close to a case involving Browning Reed, a military contractor and thinks he was involved in a conspiracy.

The president is briefed about the French's concerns about nuclear weapons. There is an opportunity to stop the arms race and start to stand down. They will need other countries to cooperate but it is worth a shot. Wells tries to break her chains but is unsuccessful. A guard brings her food and she demands to speak to Lozano. Kimble lets the president know she hopes her testimony went well and she will continue to do her job. He asks her to look into getting the grant continued that funds the students program. Unfortunately, the Ways and Means committee is in charge of that grant. The leader of the committee is also the chair of the committee investigating Kimble. She can't be of any help. She suggests the president reach out to him himself.

The president meets with the head of the Ways and Means committee and asks for his help in approving the grant. He refuses to work with him. Lloyd makes a speech against the government and the crowd goes wild. Kimble gets word that the committee is going to vote 9 to 3 against her. The CIA plant a bug on Lloyd and follow him after he finishes his speech.

The president and his team meet to prepare for the summit. Emily reports that she is working on getting the grant extended. Kimble meets with the leader of the Ways and Means committee and says she will resign if he will extend the grant for the education program before she goes. Whittaker meets with Lloyd while a CIA agent listens in. He outlines their plan and admits to kidnapping Hannah. The agent is killed by one of Lloyd's guards before he can report what he found out back to the president.

Mike realizes that there is a traitor that is working with Browning Reed. Alex tells the president she wants to move the kids to Washington to be with them but he isn't sure. They are interrupted before they can finish their discussion. Kimble tells the president she has decided to resign both the speakership and her seat. He tries to convince her to stay but she is firm in her decision. She did however get the grant program extended. He refuses to accept her decision.

Seth continues to gloat to Emily about his upcoming trip on Air Force One. Mike doesn't want the president to leave the country but he insists he has to go to the summit. Alex and the president talk and he shares that he feels guilty about what is happening with Hannah. The president and Alex watch the students perform and he announces Kimble will be his nominee for Secretary of Education.

Hannah works to pick the lock on her chains. The president and his team board Air Force One and Seth is thrilled to get his picture with the president. Hannah gets out of her chains and escapes the semi. She realizes that she is being held on a ship in the middle of the ocean.

Show Stars: Kiefer Sutherland (Tom Kirkman), Tanner Buchanan (Leo Kirkman), Natascha McElhone (Jessica Kirkman), Adan Canto (Aaron Shore), Italia Ricci (Emily Rhodes), LaMonica Garrett (Mike Ritter), Kal Penn (Seth Wright), Maggie Q (FBI Agent Hannah Wells)
Guest Stars: Rob Morrow (Abe Leonard), Reed Diamond (John Forstell), Terry Serpico (Patrick Lloyd), Romina D'Ugo (Lucy Fernandez), Geoff Pierson (Cornelius Moss), Mercedes de la Zerda (Nadia Espinosa), Allison Feliciano (Janine), Dwight Ireland (Reporter), Carrie Beale (Lieutenant Colonel Jackson)
Summary: President Kirkman's first international summit is derailed when journalist Abe Leonard publishes an explosive article. Meanwhile, Hannah Wells uncovers the conspiracy's next target.

Hannah hides as her captors realize she has escaped. She sees a small boat she can use to get off the ship. Seth gets airsick while on Air Force One. Cornelius speaks to the President about the upcoming summit. The President wants to put a new initiative on the table at the summit. Emily runs into Aaron at a restaurant and talks about the summit. She wishes him luck.

The President and Cornelius review all of the key players they will see at the summit. They need support for their nuclear reduction plan. Hannah works to get off the boat by breaking into the radio room.

She sends out a mayday and then is recaptured. The President and Cornelius address the world leaders about the nuclear decrease. While no one commits they are interested.

Mike brings in a computer whiz who works to figure out who is deleting all of the Browning Reed files. It is the only lead Mike has in finding out who the mole within the agency is. Abe Warner publishes a story that the administration got the wrong people behind the bombing. All of the President's people say they have to issue a strong reply that Abe is wrong. The President can't because Abe is correct. The wrong people were arrested and blamed for the bombing.

Cornelius is very angry with this news. He can't believe there is a mole in the white house and the President wasn't honest with him. The foreign allies want to meet with the President and demand an explanation. Lloyd and Whittaker talk about the Abe Warner story and think everything is falling into place. They also believe Abe has served their purpose and they are done with him. The coast guard is able to decipher Hannah's message and send out a search party.

The summit does not go well for the President. Very few of the allies want to discuss the President's initiative until they know the truth. The President can't offer any more information. Abe is called into a meeting with the FBI. Emily calls and teases Seth about getting sick on the plane. The Coast Guard can't find the ship Hannah is being held on.

The President thanks Seth for defending him during the press conference. The allies refuse to discuss the President's initiative any further. The president and first lady talk about the situation and she offers him support. The FBI and the Coast Guard get a lead on the ship. The Prime Minister of France agrees to meet with the President. She will support him at the next summit. Whittaker enters the computer system to erase the remaining Browning Reed files and Mike thinks he has him but he is able to escape before his true identity can be revealed.

The President and Cornelius review the trip on the plane back to Washington. Cornelius is proud of him but they still have a big issue to face when they get home. The media calls the day the worst in his Presidency so far. The FBI intercepts a ship as it enters the port in Boston but Hannah is not on it. Hannah wakes up in the back of van and realizes it is loaded with explosives.

Strobel (Pentagon Guard)
Summary: Hannah Wells must stop the conspiracy from carrying out a final attack while President Kirkman authorizes a nationwide manhunt for the mastermind behind it all.

The episode kicks off with Hannah driving a van like a mad woman. She spots a lake near the Capitol building and drives off the road, she hops out of the van at the last minute — the van careens in to the water as the bomb is going off, luckily no one was hurt.

The FBI arrives seconds later and arrests Hannah Wells, she insists that she's being framed. While she is sitting in cuffs Forstell arrives, he orders the FBI agents to release her immediately on behalf of the President.

Forstell and Hannah head to the White House and meet with President Tom Kirkman. Hannah explains that someone planted evidence in her apartment and made it seem like she was the bomber. They're certain that Patrick Lloyd is responsible, they agree to bring him in. Forstell warns them that they don't have enough evidence yet, and will probably have to release him tomorrow.

While the FBI is coordinating the raids, Tom sits down in his office to watch TV. Aaron and senator Bowman are in a heated debate on live television over whether or not there's an FBI cover-up at the White House and if Tom is hiding it from the people. Aaron defends Tom, and insists that he's the most honest President they have ever had.

Lloyd is at his house. He receives a cryptic message from his White House snitch stating that "Lozano has the package." Whatever they are planning, Lloyd tells them to execute. The FBI arrives with Hannah a few minutes later, but Lloyd is gone. The FBI is shocked to discover a sophisticated underground tunnel leading out of his house. Lloyd makes it impossible to track him, suddenly Hannah begins receiving notifications from all over the country of his credit cards being used and sightings of his cars.

Back at the White House, Seth has more bad news for Tom Kirkman. He tells Tom that Abe Leonard is running another story, he has sources indicating that Jason Atwood was arrested for killing Nassar and it was covered up. Tom shocks Seth and tells him to set up a meeting with Abe, he wants to speak to him face to face.

Meanwhile, the snitch, Jay Whitaker, is executing whatever plan that Lloyd ordered. He slips in to a room and plugs his laptop in to the mainframe. Mike gets word that the hacker just created an ID in the Pentagon for someone, but they have no idea who. It looks like Whitaker just got Lozano access to the Pentagon building.

Tom Kirkman sits down with Aaron in his office. Tom reveals to him that there's a traitor in the White House, and he was responsible for the Capitol bombing, and it wasn't Langdon. Tom wants Aaron to go back over his records and see if he can figure out who the traitor is.

Lozano slips in to the Pentagon building with a briefcase, thanks to his new ID. He sits down at a computer and begins pounding away on the keyboard. Abe Leonard arrives for his meeting with the President. Abe scoffs that Tom is wasting his time and he's not "staying silent." Tom tries to reason with Abe and asks him to hold his story, it's incomplete. He shares a photo with him of FDR, it was taken right before he passed away. But, the press never printed it because they wanted America to stay strong and not panic over the state of the Presidency.

But, the press never printed it because they wanted America to stay strong and not panic over the state of the Presidency. Aaron pays Cochran a visit, he's sporting a fancy new ankle monitor and can't leave the house. Aaron explains that there's a traitor in the White House, and he needs his help.

Hannah gets a member of Pentagon security on the phone, they can't find Lozano in the building because their security cameras are down. Hannah warns them that this is a matter of life and death — they need to find Lozano now!

Hannah spots Lozano in his car leaving the Pentagon and she turns around and chases after him. After a high speed pursuit, Lozano crashes his car in to some dumpsters and makes a run for it. Hannah chases him in to an abandoned building and they fight tooth and nail. Hannah punches Lozano and he falls a floor down and spears himself on something metal. She climbs down and leans over Lozano, as he takes his last breath he whispers to Hannah that "it's not over, there's no victor without sacrifice." Abe shows up at Seth's office. Seth is shocked when Abe reveals that he's going to honor the President's request and hold he story for a little while, but not indefinitely. It looks like Tom's speech moved him.

Hannah returns to headquarters, badly bruised, and deflated because there's still no news yet on what Lozano was doing at the Pentagon. She sits down at her computer and is shocked to see an email from Jason, he sent it before he was killed. She opens the email, and its full of photos of Whitaker and a recording proving that he was the snitch working with Lloyd.

Tonight's episode of Designated Survivor kicks off with Tom briefing Seth and Emily on Whitaker — they raided all of Lloyd's cells, and Tom seems to think that this mess is behind them. Although they still haven't found Lloyd himself. He tells Seth to set up a meeting with Congress, he's ready to tell the people what is going on. After the meeting, Tom corners Aaron and basically orders him to come back to the White House.

Before he meets with Congress, Tom has to choose a designated survivor, naturally he chooses Cornelius Moss. Tom takes the podium and delivers his speech, which he wrote himself, explaining the bombing and Lloyd's group of followers, and their mission to make America great again. When he's finished, he receives a standing ovation and is greeted by his kids.

Summary: Now, one year into office, Kirkman is a Commander-in-chief determined to rebuild the capitol and capture the terrorists behind the catastrophic attack on the United States. When Ukrainian nationalists hijack a Russian Air flight, the president is faced with a hostage situation in which his diplomatic skills are put to the test.

As President Kirkman begins to feel confident about the reconstruction of Capitol Hill, he is plagued by bad press and low approval ratings. Lloyd is still on the loose, and he's taking a hit in the press because of it.

Emily brings him a candidate for a new political director, and the applicant, Lyor Boone, doesn't make the best first impression with the rest of the gang. He's weirdly direct (albeit brilliant and accomplished) and manages to rub everyone the wrong way on the first day of his probationary hiring. Of course, Emily is rooting for him, but Seth and Aaron don't like him one bit, citing his lack of social grace and overt attempts at being the "square peg in the round hole." He wins Kirkman over at the end of the day though, and he's hired after offering brilliant advice to everyone, including the President.

Boone isn't the only visitor that day. Author Elias Grandi has been waiting around the White House all day to meet with the President. Grandi is a journalist who is often combative and adversarial of Kirkman, and is on the short list for a very prestigious literary prize. He's annoyed at getting the run around by the White House staff, and by the time Kirkman does show his face, he outright declines the prize. With a charming chuckle, Kirkman reminds the journalist that he's not asking him to "stand down," but instead he wants him to continue to "stand up."

With the Kirkman White House flagging in the polls, Seth becomes disillusioned about his efforts there. He takes a meeting with a Dax Mentor, a super rich, private sector, car guy, only for the exec to offer him a cushy job as marketing director. Seth mulls it over, and in the meantime, is a super grouch to everyone around, including the very folks with which he's supposed to intercede with — the press. He winds up apologizing to the press corps, but only after Emily finds out about his interview and forces him into an ultimatum: love this administration or leave it.

Meanwhile, two Ukrainian terrorists have hijacked a Russian plane and are making ridiculous and unreasonable demands. The plane contains hundreds of American citizens, including the President's longtime friend and fellow Peace Corp worker, Russell. Kirkman feels responsible for the life of his friend, but even more so since they left things on a sour note, many years ago.

Kirkman is motivated by the idea of saving his friend's life, so he resolves to solve this crisis as easily as possible. He initiates diplomatic talks with both countries, but it becomes clear pretty quickly that neither side are interested in a quick resolution. After a little digging, it comes to light that Russia paid the Ukraine to take the plane in an attempt to justify a catalyst for war.

Kirkman isn't having any of it, and plays hardball with the countries' ambassadors. He even raises his voice a little. It's probably the added tension of trying to save his buddy's life. He threatens both Russia and Ukraine into backing off, and the hostages deplane immediately. All except his good Samaritan friend who stays back to help a sick man with his oxygen tank. Then, right after the rest of the passengers leave the plane, there is an explosion killing both the President's friend and the man he was trying to help.

Kirkman has to make a very hard phone call to his friend's widow, but she bears no hard feelings. In fact, Kirkman is inspired to give a speech to his staffers, thanking them for their service to the American people. He even manages to squeeze in a little mini-eulogy for his dead friend.

Hannah is hot on the trail of Lloyd, globe-hopping in order to bring him to justice. In Amsterdam, however, she meets a fellow spy, a Brit, and they join forces to further track Lloyd's movements. They get pretty close, too. They follow a trail of bitcoins to a warehouse in which he had left only moments earlier. They find all sorts of money, passports, and plane tickets. He could be anywhere in the world, and now they are almost back to square one when it comes to apprehending him.

While Hannah and her new British colleague, Damian Rennet, are digging around Europe hoping to bag the culprit for the terrorist attack on Washington the year prior, Lloyd has escaped again. In fact, Lloyd turns up in DC in the final moments of the episode, thinly disguised in a ball cap and backpack. He's certain to wreak havoc here, but we'll just have to wait until the next episode to figure it out.

Summary: FBI Agent Hannah Wells finally closes in on Patrick Lloyd, but when the president decides to take action during the White House Correspondents Dinner, members of the Homeland Security Council threaten to derail their plans.

In a busy parking lot with hundreds of people around, public enemy number one appears in broad daylight. He finds a car, hops in and takes off.

Gathered around Chuck's computer, Hannah, Aaron and Damian all bear witness to Lloyd's D.C. presence on surveillance footage. Hannah and Damian move to check it out while Aaron relays the information to Emily, Lyor and the President. How to proceed on informing the rest of the population is the topic on the table. Kirkman does not want the public to know and Emily and Aaron have the pleasure of explaining this to Senators Feller and Crowling of the Homeland Security Council. Feller of the "Show Me" State lives up to his state's motto, declaring that the people must be informed of what's going on.

Travis Lloyd, Patrick's son, sits across good cop Hannah and bad, scary, British cop Damian. He's easily spooked into giving the last known whereabouts of his father and where he's known to be headed. Chuck is already on it, following the vehicle from overhead. Hannah calls bluff and says, "not him," before rushing out of the door. Little does she know, we have all seen Lloyd do exactly what she finds to be far too obvious.

Information that the HSC have visited the White House and Senator Feller's name is attached, so Kirkman takes it upon himself to meet with him and firmly remind him to refrain from spreading "fake news." Feller is officially in timeout. Meanwhile, the First Mother-in-Law has been spooked in her own home. Hannah and Damian find a distraught Mrs. Booker on her porch after Lloyd has made a mess of things. She's unharmed, just startled. This makes things a lot more personal for the President.

An old abandoned stretch of land is found to have ties to Browning-Reed. Here is where Hannah and Damian uncover the stolen blue sedan. Shots are fired and Damian is immediately hit. Surely fans aren't the only ones missing Jason right about now. Hannah follows Lloyd on foot where he nearly escapes into an old, rusted bunker door. Sometime between the narrow escape and our scene cut back to the White House, Lloyd has posted a video where he states some bold demands. Kirkman is to give a speech giving Lloyd amnesty in front of a national audience. If his needs are not met, then the entirety of the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area will be at risk of losing their lives to sarin gas. Aaron suggests they fly an unmanned drone and drop a bomb on the bunker, taking out both Lloyd and keeping the military out of harm's way.

The time has come for the Correspondent's Dinner and everyone is dressed to the nines. Appearances are everything in time of a crisis. Quite the opposite of the bunker scene where a bandaged Damian's light bulb turns on. "An escape hatch," he wonders. He and Hannah spring into action. Bingo! Down the hatch they go.

Snooping Senator Cowling gains a bit of intel from Emily during the dinner as everyone anxiously awaits the President's speech. With the news of a drone being used against a civilian, Aaron is swiftly called away from a perfectly good party before a judge to defend the Administration's efforts against Lloyd. The Posse Comitatus Act states that the President cannot call military action against an American civilian and since there is no concrete evidence against Patrick Lloyd yet, she's packing quite the punch against the administration's strides to finally gaining some sort of justice. Aaron does his best to find even a shred of humanity left in this stern-faced woman who is all about the book, but the use of a drone may be shot down before it gets off the ground, literally.

As Aaron fights for the drone, Kirkman realizes that Pax Americana is all about revenge for Lloyd. "He's blaming us," he says. Political ideology is not a priority for him. He seeks revenge for the system that took his father and son from him. Time for Kirkman to step in. In true Kirkman fashion, the President sits down face to screen and speaks with Lloyd personally, man to man, father to father. Kirkman puts it simply, challenging Lloyd to take America to court, seek judgement in the appropriate place. "You're not fit to judge me," he barks, believing that he has already won.

Hannah and Damian stumble upon a trip wire which triggers an explosion in the bunker. Not to fear, though. Both are alive and well, but empty handed.

Aaron may not have found a way through to Senator Cowling herself, but her representation, Attorney Kendra Daynes, is another thing. During her argument to the judge, she makes it obvious that the "military" cannot act. He calls for a quick recess and calls Emily. They need simply to have another entity make the call, the FBI. "Engage," says Kirkman. John gives the order and we have our second explosion of the night! The bunker is obliterated.

Crews search through the rubble and there is no evidence of gas. It was all a bluff and now Kirkman must make his speech to the American people. Lyor and Emily advise him not to mention what's just transpired, but he delivers the news anyway. Luckily for Seth, who has been tirelessly working over unfunny jokes all episode long, the speech is nixed. Instead, Kirkman takes to the Oval Office where he addresses the nation head on. "Lloyd has been neutralized," he states. Kendra enters the Oval Office where Kirkman offers her an "overworked and underpaid" position as White House Counsel. They shake on it and the President of the United States retires to his family's quarters where he gets to tuck his daughter in for the night.

The night isn't over for Hannah, though. Workers have found Lloyd's computer, half-melted and mostly fried. It seems Lloyd was uploading something when the bomb hit, but there's no way of telling what it was.

Summary: President Kirkman is faced with a viral pandemic, which could kill countless Americans, while FBI Agent Hannah Wells and M16 Agent Damian Rennett discover evidence that could change the lives of members of the first family forever.

Emily and Seth are walking the halls talking about alien species visiting the White House. Emily thinks it is a great idea. Meanwhile, Kendra holds a press conference about the resurrection of a statue of a figure who was a slave holder. Reverend Dale stands to speak. The statue is a reminder and should not be moved. The room breaks out in chaos.

Hannah is working with Chuck on Lloyd's case. Hannah visits the scene of the crime with their London consultant. She looks over the wreckage trying to retrace Lloyd's steps. What was he looking for? Hannah finds a document. It looks like Lloyd left something behind instead.

Aaron and Emily talk by video with a doctor dealing with a dangerous viral outbreak. She has a possible treatment source. She tells them to widen the quarantine area.

Seth and Lyor arrive in a room of the White House to see an unveiling of a special frog that has been named after the president. Lyor is disgusted. They can't name it after the president! Seth stands by.

Emily consults with the president about the viral outbreak. The possible solution has not been approved by the FDA. The president wants to move on this. People are dying. They have access to 10k doses. Emily says that that is enough to contain the outbreak.

Hannah meets with the First Lady. Hannah shows her numerous documents that Lloyd touched. The first lady is surprised to see the heart transplant paperwork for her father. She is surprised her mother saved it. Her father was lower down on the donor list, but was bumped up.

Aaron gets a call. The 10k doses of treatment never arrived. Their source, Mr. Macky, sold it to someone else. Emily points out that she is sure he sold it for more money. The White House sends Kendra to intervene in court by forcing Mr. Macky to give over his 10k doses.

Hannah and her team look over the documents. They think they have something.

The president personally checks in on the viral outbreak.

Hannah and her consultant go to check out a location where Lloyd might be or might have been. They enter into the dark warehouse. An explosion occurs. The fire department shows up. The authorities want to know why they are on private property after hours. Hannah refuses to answer. She is working a federal investigation. She tells them to call the White House.

Seth addresses the media. Seventy-four people have died from the outbreak, but they are doing all they can to aggressively contain it. The president checks in with Tammy about the outbreak. Tammy needs more medicine. The virus is moving fast. Tammy thinks that Macky has more doses and he is holding back. Emil gets on it.

Lyor can't stop staring at the frog. Kendra comes in. Lyor tells the frog's owner that the frog is stupid. Seth interrupts. He needs Kendra to update the room about the statues. She brings Lyor with her, who gets the whole room in an uproar with his opinions and cynical views. They all demand he leave.

Aaron talks with Hannah about her breaking into the warehouse. Hannah doesn't want to share too much. She is working on something that involves the president's family. She can't involve him. The president meets with the Reverend about the statue. The president had to compromise. He kept the statue up but had to move it to an area with less traffic. Emily interrupts. Macky has arrived.

The president meets him. He is angry at Macky for misleading them all. He wants the rest of the doses. Macky has been making the drug. But he isn't happy about handing it over. He wants the money he is owed. Releasing this drug now will divulge his recipe and ruin his patent. Because the president ruined Macky's reputation, he will fix it for the medicine. The president holds a press conference introducing Macky as somewhat of a hero.

Hannah and Chuck find out more about the person who was bumped on the transplant list so that the first lady's father could get a heart. They leave to find the man.

The president speaks with Tammy. Things are getting better. Not for Tammy though. She is suffering kidney failure after trying to too high dose of the drug. The president wants her to come home right away for treatment. She refuses. Good soldiers stay until the last shot is fired. She signs off.

Summary: Tensions rise between America and Mexico when a Mexican citizen is shot during a border dispute regarding Mexican trade imports. As a result, Kirkman and his staff must work quickly to resolve the situation and create a new trade deal.

The same detective who questioned Hannah after the explosion that hurt Damian questions her again about her finding Little's lifeless body. It's "above your pay grade," she smirks, but he's not having it. This needs to be the last time he finds her at the center of all the action. She's advised to keep Counsel Daynes in mind and hopefully she will have her back just as she has the President's.

At the Mexican border, vehicles are lined up as far as the eye can see and protesters are causing quite the spectacle, until a Mexican national barrels his truck thru the barricades and is killed by patrol gunfire.

It just so happens that the administration is looking for a huge trade deal to be confirmed as this happens. Mexico is the leading area of trade with the States and Americans are concerned for their jobs, Lyor reminds us. Tensions are undoubtedly high as Emily speaks with the trade envoy, Mr. Arronte, who looks for a "better deal" as these border blockades not only keep foreigners from entering the US, but also keep Americans from leaving. There won't be any halfway point met between the governments until Kirkman can come up with one of his Hail Mary counterattacks.

Lyor speaks with a representative of the Labor Union, referring to him as a dinosaur, someone in fear of being extinct soon. They talk of symbolism. Not that of the Mexican driver pummeling through the blockades, but he himself as a symbol. If he walks away from his job, from the situation, he'll be deemed unreasonable. Unfortunately, it is during a press statement that Seth, and the audience, find that out that the driver was shot and killed by an American gun. Rallies are now in danger of sprouting up unless something changes and fast.

A vase given to Rutherford B. Hayes by the Imperial Chinese Court has been broken and lays in pieces on the floor in the West Wing. It's odd, but there are more pressing matters to be discussed right now. Kirkman enters the Oval Office to find his friend, Dax Mentor, the ridiculously rich, private sector car manufacturer owner. He's brought a model of a brand new electrical car that hasn't even hit the assembly line yet. The way the camera zooms in on this thing must mean there's some significance that will be shown later. For now, I'm unimpressed.

Hannah sits in Kendra's office where she advises her to get all the information she can from Mrs. Booker. Hannah needs everything about the possible bribery she made years ago involving her husband's surgery. That would be incredibly wrong of her to ask of a 70-year-old woman, though. So instead she must ask her daughter, the First Lady.

Aaron walks into Senator Flores' office and finds his cousin Nadia. Surprise! She now works for the senator and has been sent to speak on her behalf. Aaron attempts to debate with her on the pressing concerns, but Nadia may not be up for the job. Could it be because she's not ready or because it's her family sitting across the table? Either way, he thinks speaking with the Senator face-to-face would be best.

Kendra now sits between Hannah and First Lady Alex who is not happy, thinking she's being played for a fool. This bribery suggestion is absurd. Her mother was only a secretary and by no means in a position of great weight that a contractor, looking for big business, would want to bribe. She finds this to be nonsense and Hannah cannot argue that with the little information she has at this time, so she and Kendra make their leave.

Union Representative Paul Zalesky is on the news, saying the President is more concerned with globalism than the American worker. The American worker cannot believe in him if he doesn't believe in them. "Stegosaurus," mumbles a frustrated Lyor.

There's another snoopy reporter pestering Emily about the broken vase. She thinks there is more to it than just a simple accident. Emily brushes her off, again, but the reporter notices Kirkman's young daughter playing with a fidget spinner and running through the halls. Aaron finally get his sit down with Senator Flores who gives her word that she will publicly support the President. This is great, but another personal issue is put on the table. Sending his cousin to meet with him was a low blow and it will only close doors for her in the White House, not open them.

Mr. Arronte and Union Rep Zalesky are both at odds, but speaking with the mourning widow of the Mexican driver, Jose Menez might just bridge the divide and appease both sides. Could it be that easy?

Alex sits with her mother Mrs. Booker and confronts her about the bribe allegation. Without hesitation, she answers "yes." She was in fact a secretary, but she also had access to the bid specs. Her husband was going to die and she broke the law in order to save his life. Had Kirkman run for his presidency, she would have probably come forward, but let's be honest. Nobody saw this hit or miss administration coming, unless you were reading previews for an upcoming show named Designated Survivor. Perhaps we should cut the First Mother-In-Law some slack.

At the last minute, good old President Kirkman sees the shaking hands of Mrs. Menez and walks her back to the Oval Office. There will not be the expected press conference today. Instead, she will be allowed to say whatever she likes. He asks her to talk about him. Jose had just started working as a truck driver three weeks ago. This strikes Kirkman as interesting and he asks for information on the trucking company from Emily.

She, in turn, tells him that he may need to speak to his daughter Penny. Penny apologizes for breaking a watch, but not a vase. If she didn't break it, then who did? Kirkman confronts Mrs. Dunning, the woman who pointed the finger at Penny. She believes that children sometimes "gild the lily," and bend the truth, but parents should hold to their skepticism.

Kendra presents the First Lady with an FBI subpoena, for her mother. Alex is very worried about her mother and her inability to handle a closed hearing. Kirkman does his best to reassure her that they will weather the coming storm like they have everything else in the last season and few episodes. She doesn't look to be very confident, but what else can you say to the President of the United States?

Mr. Arronte sits awaiting the President's presence. He is the trade envoy and one of his businesses is Transport Transaccional. Arronte approved Mr. Menez's employment three weeks ago. He is also the reason for the armed blockade but insists the intent was not for the deceased to lose his life. Kirkman orders him to go back to his president and tell him that the trade deal they have on the table is "fair and reasonable," plus he is to resign from his position. Now it's all up to Zalesky.

Aaron's pride proves to have led him in the wrong direction as he accuses Nadia of using their personal relationship to open doors in the White House. Well, Nadia was the one who applied for the job. She suggested she speak with her cousin on the matter, but the senator never knew of their family connection. It seems Aaron forgets what everyone is fighting for, what he and his fellow Mexicans and Mexican-Americans are fighting for. He has been so busy, Nadia claims, that he forgets he built the ladder in which he climbed to his American status.

In the Oval Office, Kirkman sits with Zalesky and notices that model car Dax left. I guess this is the moment of significance. Perhaps having that dinner he had to reschedule can provide an opportunity to appease both sides, giving both something without anyone losing anything.

Mrs. Dunning finds that a woman in the White House has been streaming live video to family overseas who is infatuated with the building. It faces the exact corner in which that ill-fated vase once sat. It turns out, Lyor was running through the hallways, trying to add to his ten-thousand steps for the day. He suggests there may be a way he can somehow prove it was an accident in order to claim insurance coverage. She says they can further discuss it over dinner. Paying for the vase is well out of any budget, so a gluten-free dinner it is.

Kirkman sits for dinner with Dax who he asks to provide electrical cars to Mexican drivers who have been one of the leaders in air pollution for decades. The trade deal goes through and Kirkman, Lyor, Emily and Seth all sit and pat each other on their backs in celebration. Meanwhile, another celebration is happening as Aaron enters a room full of family where he's greeted with warm hugs.

Hannah finds her boss John sitting on a park bench. He informs her that he'll have to investigate the Eric Little death as he's now found more evidence involving the First Mother-In-Law and paperwork from her previous employer in 1987.

The First Mother-In-Law is obviously not ashamed of what she did years ago for her husband's life, but what cost will she have to pay now that things are coming to light? Digging even deeper, what will Hannah find with the bribery and who else is a player in this circus of criminals?

As the drama continues to unfold at the White House, a representative announces to the world that the President regards the American people as "suckers."

Suckers

Show Stars: Kiefer Sutherland (Tom Kirkman), Natascha McElhone (Jessica Kirkman), Paulo Costanzo (Lyor Boone), Adan Canto (Aaron Shore), Italia Ricci (Emily Rhodes), LaMonica Garrett (Mike Ritter), Zoe McLellan (Kendra Daynes), Ben Lawson (Damian Rennett), Kal Penn (Seth Wright), Maggie Q (FBI Agent Hannah Wells)
Guest Stars: Elana Dunkelman (Natalie), Bo Martyn (Tiffany Gimble), Michelle Nolden (Catherine Cray), Jenny Raven (Sasha), Joe Vercillo (Goal-tender)
Summary: When a senator appears on the national news and misrepresents a private conversation with the president, Kirkman must win back the American people's trust, while MI-6 Agent Damian Rennett joins forces with FBI Agent Hannah Wells to help solve an international murder.

A woman jogs through the woods while reciting into a handheld recorder when she hears rustling in the woods. "Hello," she calls out. "Is someone there?"

Kirkman is playing hockey contrary to real life golfing beliefs, presidents have other favorite pastimes it seems. In the locker room, Kirkman and his friend and senator Carson speak about bailouts for Wall Street and mentions that the American people are suckers in a ill-thought out sarcastic comment to prove his point. They shake hands and Mike briefs him on the murdered journalist.

At the White House, Aaron, Emily and Hannah walk the halls talking about the murder. Hannah enters her office to find none other than -sigh- Damian, alive and well. He and Chuck have been investigating Charlotte Thorn, the murdered jogger, whose upcoming speech on illegal arms has been leaked.

Victim's Rights Advocate, Alice Roland, interrupts Tom and Alex who are discussing who Mrs. Booker's lawyer should be. Back to Roland, she pleads for Kirkman to hurry along with his efforts on getting monetary relief for those middle-class workers who do not wish to work until they're 75 years old. Kirkman agrees, but, in normal Kirkman fashion, wants to do things his way.

Lyor meets up with Emily, Kendra and Seth who were cracking jokes to turn the conversation back to something direr. Senator Carson has repeated the president's words out of context, saying "I'll make a stipulation that the American people are suckers." In walks a White House secretary. The Senate Minor and Majority leaders, the House Speaker and the House Minority Leader are all calling at once. Lyor dubs them "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Kirkman cannot deny the claims because he knows he said the words, but how can he make the American people believe that despite his words, he is working for them not against them?

Seth attempts to round up the press and calm everyone down, but they have officially named the issue "Suckergate." Lyor wants Kirkman to lie and say he never said what he did in order to preserve what he's done so far. Kirkman refuses.

Hannah and Damian speak with the British Embassy about Charlotte's speech and the names she meant to expose. There was one name that was missing: Darius Cray. He called the night before and found his way off of the list. They find him to question him directly and he looks like every evil antagonist from any Scooby-Doo Mysteries cartoon. He finds himself being offended, stands up, buttons his jacket and walks out saying he will call his lawyers if necessary.

Senator Krantz delivers names of her own list of candidates for judges now that Kirkman believes he's the President of "suckers." These people can't be deemed toxic simply because they never endorsed Kirkman.

Alex sits across from Kendra in talks of her mother's bribery subpoena. She wants to be sure that her mother is in the best of hands and Kendra assures her she's experienced and good. All she asks for in return is her trust.

Senator Carson speaks with Kirkman in the Oval office where he asks the president to retract his statement, but he didn't tell a lie, so he feels that he shouldn't have to take back what he said. Things escalate quickly and now it's a shouting match between the two men and Emily as Lyor looks on nervously. Carson suggests the President begin talking to his civilians as if they were his friends.

Media has taken Suckergate by storm and administration ratings are dropping quickly. The fallout will only get worse unless Kirkman stabilizes the base by using Lyor's silver bullet. He hands over a folder with information on Senator Carson, but Kirkman won't budge on his morals. They will find another way.

Seth fends off a young woman from the press who has been tipped off on the fact that someone involved with the White House has been issued a subpoena.

After a failed meeting with several individuals, including Dax, Kirkman is pretty down in the dumps. Mike points out something important. The President doesn't do anything when someone slings mud his way. What he should do is sling hope. That's what the American people wish to see.

Meanwhile, Hannah and Damian are on Cray's boat, sniffing around with their guns out. Hannah's gun goes up and points at Damian. He was so close to catching another bullet, but this time it was actually a good thing he was there. His bullet finds its way to a masked man behind his partner.

The masked man was Cray and on his boat Hannah and Damian found an arsenal of weapons. Now in custody, he's being linked to Charlotte's murder, but isn't talking now that he's recovering from Damian's gunshot wound. Lyor wants a press release, but Seth believes they should wait until ballistics can confirm that Cray's gun was the same one that killed Charlotte. Kirkman stops their bickering and puts forth his own plan. He wishes to do an OTR, on the road. He wants to get close to the American people and show them up close that he's fighting their fight.

Alex enters the courthouse to find Kendra. She wishes to second chair and work alongside her mother's representation. "I can't stand by," she says. This will either be the best decision, or it will end in shambles. John, Hannah's boss, stands opposite Kendra as they argue over Mrs. Booker's alleged bribery. Alex jumps up and sticks her neck into the argument, overstepping Kendra's first chair on the matter. Kendra takes the First Lady outside and tells her to step down, respectfully.

As he walks outside to greet a crowd of civilians, Kirkman spots Alice. She says she hears the bill has been pronounced dead. He says that's not true. She asks if he can promise that the people will be taken care of. No, he cannot promise that. "Then you're right Mr. President," she answers. "We are suckers. For trusting you."

Lyor, again, points out that there is a perfectly good solution to this and eyes the folder on Carson. Kirkman picks it up, reads, gives a heavy sigh and nods to give the green light.

Meanwhile Kendra now stands alone as Alex sits in the pews behind her. Kendra argues that the hospital record was obtained illegally. John says that Hannah removed the document while investigating Patrick Lloyd, plus she works for the White House. The judge rules in favor of Kendra, saying he isn't subpoenaing Patrick Lloyd.

Hannah receives a knock on her door. It's Damian. He's shipping out soon, but stopped by to say "thanks." This is already awkward and gets even more so when Damian goes in for the kiss. Hannah follows suit, kissing back but receives a call about developments in the Charlotte Thorn case. They both end up in the White House and are joined by Aaron and Chuck who pull up footage of Darius Cray moving guns from a location by van.

The moment of truth has everyone on the edge of their seats. Lyor, Seth, Aaron and Emily all sit and stare as Kirkman sits on Carson Kramer Live, addressing Suckergate. He fails to use Lyor's bait against Carson and admits that, yes, he told the truth. He believes the American people are suckers for believing in the American dream, but he includes himself in the fact that Americans believe in better tomorrows despite the obstacles they face, and this is why Congress must back the pension bailout bill. "Our boss may have just pulled off the greatest escape," laughs Lyor.

Senator Carson enters the Oval Office where he announces to the President that he will support the pension bill. His wife Sonia has ovarian cancer and this bill will undoubtedly help his family. Carson also admits that he had an affair, but he and Sonia are now seeking counseling. Well, guess what was in Lyor's little blue folder? The photos of Carson and his woman on the side. Kirkman advises him to take care of the issue now before it gets out. From here, Kirkman speaks with Senator Krantz who he reveals her secret. Her husband was one of the perpetrators who pocketed money. She now works as an advocator for those who deserve the money they earn. He finds that they both share the same luck and with that lucky, they should pay it forward.

Two Ships

Guest Stars: Geoff Pierson (Cornelius Moss), Mykelti Williamson (Admiral Chernow), Gregory Smith (Will Griffin), Brian McNamara (Dave Rhodes), Jake Epstein (Chuck Russink), Michelle Nolden (Catherine Cray), Cariba Heine (Peyton Lane), Rochelle Aytes (Senator Cowling), Bonnie Bedelia (Eva Booker), Ali Hassan (Ambassador Darzi), Lauren Mandel (Co-Worker One), Brian Quintero (Co-Worker Two), Seann Gallagher (Oliver Bandy), Samora Smallwood (Radar Officer), Jenny Raven (Sasha), Steven Pigozzo (Senator Ray Damone), Ryan Field (Ross), Lauren Mandel (Co-Worker One)
Summary: When a U.S. Navy ship containing secret surveillance becomes stranded in enemy waters, President Kirkman must negotiate the crew and ship's release. If captured, the technology on board would create a massive threat to national security. Meanwhile, Chief of Staff Emily Rhodes reconnects with someone from her childhood.

There is a hideous storm brewing in the Persian Gulf where an explosion has just occurred on an American vessel, the U.S.S. Verona. Aaron informs Kirkman that it collided with a garbage barge. Thanks to some literal trash, 16 people have lost their lives. Of course, the nation of Kunami is not happy with the news of a U.S. ship in their waters. The captain of the ship is no more, so the highest in command, Lt. Will Griffin, who informs the President of the conditions. Kirkman assures him that they will do all they can as fast as they can.

Hannah and Damian have taken a break from canoodling to speak with Ms. Peyton Lane, the same woman who gave the tip that led the duo to Darius Cray. They inform her that Cray's wife moved an incredible number of Euros from her husband's account just after he was shot. She leaves to speak to the Prime Minister about the situation. This gives Damian an uncomfortable way to turn the conversation to their kiss. "Are we going to talk about this?" Nope. Hannah doesn't want to and she leaves before it can go any further. She's all about business.

Aaron speaks with the Kunami Ambassador who is visibly upset and presenting a wall to any possibility of a rescue mission for the victims on the Verona. He makes a pretty interesting point as Aaron pleads. If a Kunami ship were off the coast of New York City, there would be no thought of negotiations because it would already have been shot down to the bottom of the ocean long before the words of peace were spoken. Is this a reason to keep Kirkman from extracting those victims? Apparently so, because there is now a blockade surrounding the Verona, keeping them in and the entire world out.

To switch gears, Kendra informs Kirkman about his mother-in-law's hearing. There is no stopping John, though and the longer this goes on, the more involved Mrs. Booker will have to become.

Here's a little personal story on Emily, finally. After being absent for 23 years, she tells Seth that she has dinner plans with her father. She doesn't care to see him, but she's been putting it off for a while. Seth assures her the worries of the nation will still be around when she gets back. Sitting with her father, he looks to still be more focused on himself. His excuse (even though he says it isn't an excuse) for leaving is that he and her mother were not in love. A teary-eyed Emily brings up birthdays without receiving cards from him and his response is weak. "I didn't know what to say." Her response? "How about goodbye." He comes back with a beaten-up clipping of a young Emily who won the spelling bee when she was 13 years old.

Hannah and Damian sit across the table from Catherine Cray and her lawyer. She claims she has nothing to do with her husband's business. Yet Hannah lets her know quickly that the minute Darius takes the stand implicates that his wife had something to do with his crimes. Chuck enters the room and pulls Hannah and Damian out to show them that Peyton Lane has been taken hostage. If Darius isn't extradited to Malaysia, then she will lose her life. Catherine has a lot of explaining to do.

Meanwhile, the Kunami Ambassador has taken to the press to announce that the U.S.S. Verona was an instrument of God, sent by America to spy on their peace-loving country. Yes, he said all of that. Needless to say, the Verona will need a little more than hope and a prayer to send its inhabitants back home to American soil. One thing is for sure, the "war ship in exchange for a weapons program" is definitely off the table.

The diplomatic front is a slow one. There is the possibility of the ship's coordinates proving they were not in Kunami waters before the monsoon, but that also fails to be a productive plan. The military is ready to take action and strike the blockade down, but Kirkman is a lover, not a fighter.

While all this is happening, Emily's dad is wandering around the West Wing because she's been a little carried away with work. He's been making quite the impression on the staff, though. Perhaps this will help him win his daughter's love and affection.

Hannah and Damian meet with Cornelius and they tell him of their beliefs that Catherine is behind the Thorn murder and the Lane kidnapping. Malaysia is out of the question, though, because if Cray finds his way there, all he will get for his crimes is "a slap on the wrist" or at best, a house arrest because he has major holdings in East Asia. Cornelius makes a call to the British Prime Minister while the duo set off to find Ms. Lane.

Kendra sits with the First Mother-In-Law, telling her just how things have gone from bad to worse. While the subpoena is squashed, the hounds will come to find her if she does not sign a document saying that she had not had any contact with contractor Eric Little for at least three decades. Her husband was a lawyer, so she knows how this can cause her to be surrounded by even more scrutiny, but Kendra assures her that she will be by her side with the best solution to the problem.

Emily's father is having a conversation with Seth who, when the Press Secretary leaves the room, suggests just how attracted he is to his daughter.

Senators have been assembled in the Roosevelt Room to discuss the program that can possibly bring the Verona home. They don't believe the regime has "turned over a new leaf" and reluctantly will take the topic to the Foreign Relations Committee. Lyor calls this a "duck and cover" strategy and Kirkman agrees that they won't be able to save the victims in time at this rate. Mike finds the two in the hallway, "the Verona is sinking." It's now or never.

"We're taking on water faster than we can get rid of it," Lt. Griffon reports. They only have about five or six hours before the Verona sinks. Griffon and his men are proud of have served the country and are willing to give their lives for it, but Kirkman makes it known that this sort of sacrifice will not be made today. On the other hand, Congress has turned down the program and urges diplomatic efforts to press on to free the Verona. They need another option which prompts the President to ask for information on the recreation of the Verona's collision.

Hannah and Damian stand with Chuck in front of his computer as they try to pinpoint Peyton Lane's location. Mike walks in with a package for Hannah. It's a mobile phone with a number to call: the kidnapper. Before she says too much, she looks over at Damian.

The recreation of the Verona's collision is now up on screen in the Situation Room. I'm sure we could have done this a long time ago, but it turns out that the garbage barge deliberately rammed the ship. Kirkman presents this to the Ambassador who sticks to his guns, saying that the U.S. was invading after turning his country into a pariah. This is much bigger than one war ship. This is a grudge that the country has against the American nation and he's threatening to bring in neighboring allies against America in the name of war. Kirkman makes a decision and tells the Admiral to deploy a rescue ship. Kunami can have the vessel but "we're bringing our people home." Oh, and he also adds a minor note: "If they engage, take every ship they've got." So "Diplomatic Kirkman" is now, "All About Business Kirkman!"

Everyone sits in the Situation Room listening to the rescue mission and watching the satellite broadcast of the Verona. All casualties are accounted for and the rescue ship will be bringing those stranded back home.

Kendra sits with Mrs. Booker again. More beans are being spilled from this woman. She claimed she had no contact with Little for 30 years, yet now reveals that he came over a few weeks ago for around two minutes, which I suppose she didn't find odd. This was such a small amount of time it just happened to slip her mind. This is not good at all.

Hannah, Damian and Chuck watch on as Peyton mentions her siblings. This can't be right, though, because she's an only child. No, Peyton has had training in these sorts of things and is signaling that she's been taken to an isolated area. Hannah and Damian run out of the office before Chuck can finish directions to her whereabouts. The FBI swarm the building and open gunfire on the kidnappers before I can even finish typing out this sentence. Peyton is safe.

Emily has been warming up to the thought of her father being around again, but it hasn't been for the reasons she's been hoping for all these years. He simply wants the President to help him get his new fancy corkscrew up and running. Yes, he wants an endorsement of sorts, using Emily to, once again, think of himself. She walks out on him to get back to work.

All of the Verona crew is accounted for on the Wykoff except for Lt. Griffin who assures the President that he is staying behind. He wishes to stay in order to see the VDR is destroyed, otherwise the Kunami will get their hands on some very important information. Kirkman tries his best with that soothing voice of his, bringing up home and family, but Griffin has made up his mind. "Verona out," he says as the screen goes black.

Hannah and Damian are back in the presence of Mrs. Cray and her lawyer. The kidnapper's burner phone could be traced back to her hotel room. She may be guilty of kidnapping, but Charlotte Thorn was not her doing. "I needed her," she says. She was obsessed with her husband and the attention he grabbed because it took all of it away from her. Catherine was able to operate without scrutiny. So then, who did kill Charlotte?

Emily sits working and is visibly down in the dumps. Aaron passes by the open door with a smile and a salute. Lyor drops a drink on the table for her and leaves. Seth comes in with an impressive spread of food for all to enjoy. He is the one she confides in. "You know what I meant to him?" she says, "a corkscrew." Like the funny guy he is, he lifts her spirits by saying, "You're the greatest thing since sliced bread." Simple, but just what she needed. In return, she gives him a kiss and a hug.

Hannah and Damian confirm that Catherine was telling the truth. Chuck pulls up the surveillance cameras outside Thorn's hotel room and zooms in on a man who visited her that night before she died. Secretary Cornelius Moss!

As Kirkman leaves the Oval Office to the First Family's residence, Kendra comes in with what she tells Mike is "bad news." He suggests she wait until tomorrow because The Man has dealt with quite enough today.

Guest Stars: Geoff Pierson (Cornelius Moss), Reed Diamond (John Forstell), Jake Epstein (Chuck Russink), Tanner Buchanan (Leo Kirkman), T.J. Ramini (Nuresh Sahin), Cariba Heine (Peyton Lane), Troy Caylak (Turkish President Fatih Turan), Bonnie Bedelia (Eva Booker), Clark Backo (Ava), Elana Dunkelman (First Journalist), Louisa Martin (French Representative), Hamza Haq (Peter Jan), Dwight Ireland (Reporter), Vanessa Smythe (Second Journalist), Blair Williams (Secretary General), Nikki Roumel (Sibyl Sadik), Bo Martyn (Tiffany Gimble), Jennifer Vallance (UK Representative), Marcello Castiglioni (Italian Representative)
Summary: When a Turkish activist ignites protests in the U.S., Turkey's president demands his extradition while the first family unknowingly finds themselves in the center of a battle that could threaten Leo's future.

Protestors gather outside of the Turkish Embassy in the name of a man who has killed civilians of his home country, yet has done nothing on United States soil to warrant being extradited. Kirkman needs to show the world that the alliance between Turkey and America is a necessary one.

Our former kidnapped informant, Peyton Lane, is being interrogated by Hannah and Damian about Secretary Moss' presence at Charlotte Thorn's hotel room. It appears the two were having an affair before Thorn's divorce was final. In the Oval office, things are heating up between young Leo and his significant other, Sybil. Kirkman walks in on his son just as he's about to go in for the kill.

The First Lady and the First Mother-In-Law sit with Kendra about the upcoming hearing. They are betting on the fact that Forstell has no information on Mrs. Booker's recent meeting with the deceased Eric Little and all hands will be wiped clean of this annoying matter.

Back to the American-Turkish press conference. All is well until Turan goes off-script to announce that the States are harboring a terrorist. In the Oval Office, Turan turns the tables and suggests that things may be different if Turkey were to welcome Patrick Lloyd to their soil. Kirkman, of course, disagrees and states that this is entirely a different situation. This doesn't sit well with the Turkish President and he suggests that maybe their bases are better suited for the Russians now.

Leo and Sybil walk hand-in-hand down the sidewalk and are approached by an angry protestor who offers them to hold signs. When they refuse, the man becomes belligerent and Leo pushes him to the ground. It would have been nice if his bodyguard would have stepped in before this happened, but he's whisked away before anything more can happen.

Emily, Aaron and Lyor finally inform Kirkman of Secretary Moss' affair with the deceased Parliament member. He is then told that this issue with the Turkish offense needs to be dealt with and finally a video has surfaced of Leo's assault against the protester. The guy has hired an attorney. There's a civil suit brewing, and it smells like a setup.

Hannah and Damian sit across from Secretary Moss, asking about his whereabouts on the day in question. Everyone just wants to do what the man was doing with she-who-is-now-dead. As expected, the man isn't talking. "Are you suggesting I need a lawyer?" he asks. "I don't know sir," Hannah replies, "do you?" Damian just sits there, looking back and forth like every other viewer.

The NATO committee sits in a meeting. Well, they attempt to conduct a meeting, but Turan decides to kick and scream and have a fit. He accuses POTUS of being a criminal for harboring a criminal. He stands and claims that NATO no longer supports his country and what it stands for. So now Kirkman is faced with quite the dilemma: allow Turkey to walk and take its military bases that help support the nations with it or release the so-called criminal back to his home country.

Emily is now trying her hand at speaking with Secretary Moss. On the record, he is asked about his personal relationship with Lane. Moss claims that she wanted a ring. Technically, she was still married and had a ring, so she didn't receive a new one. Moss went to her hotel room in hopes of reconciling, but reconciliation was not reached. After her death, Moss checked himself into a rehabilitation center, but will not state why. Emily is forced to suspend Secretary Moss until further investigations can be fulfilled.

A meeting with Kendra, the First Mother-In-Law and Forstell is seen and is switched back and forth with another one featuring Kirkman, Seth, Lyor and a member of the press. Everyone is on the topic of what transpired years ago involving Eric Little. Kendra and Lyor attempt to text each other to make sure that things are going smoothly on each end, but Forstell notices and keeps things on track. He gets awfully close to asking Mrs. Booker about what happened six months ago, but instead makes inquiries about a trip taken. Mrs. Booker, like her son-in-law, is charming and knows just what to say. It seems that both parties have convinced their opponents of their innocence.

Then the ball drops as Mike confronts Kirkman with news. He has just shaken the hand of the Turkish man everyone has been on the fence about. He won't be extradited and is still welcome on U.S. soil. It seems, though, that an even setup was underway the whole time. Young Sybil, Leo's girlfriend is related to Turkish President Turan and looks to have been planted.

"I'm tired of you people always telling me that my hands are tied!" yells Kirkman who has just been told he can't make it known what Turan has been doing. Instead, he requests a meeting with him.

Damian annoyingly eats the rest of Chuck's chips as he and Hannah look over photos of Charlotte Thorn who looks to be wearing a familiar ring. A ring who Peyton Lane now wears. The cat's out of the bag. Peyton was in love with her and had to watch her fall in love with another man. She went to Charlotte that night, hoping that they could finally be together but was turned down. So, as history now has it, she shot and killed her. Off to prison she now goes in handcuffs.

Again, in the Oval Office, Kirkman lays down the law for Turan. He will back the Turkish man in question to the fullest and help him in painting such a bad picture of his country that the people will ultimately turn against their president. Turan is to remain in NATO, renew the leases on the bases where the missiles are held and keep his distance from both him and his family or he'll unleash an uncanny resemblance to Liam Neeson's "I will find you" determination.

A calmer and collected Kirkman now sits with Secretary Moss as he finally opens up about his relationship with Charlotte. He says that after her death, he realized just how much he cared for her. "I started spiraling," he says. After being on a straight path of sobriety, he slipped and checked into rehab to prevent going down that dangerous road again. He hands over his letter of resignation, but good old Kirkman refuses it. "Do what you have to," he says, "but when you're ready, your office will be waiting."

Damian just won't quit. Hannah sits and relaxes with a glass of wine when she gets a knock on the door. There he is. "We have unfinished business," he announces. Shirts fly off and lips are locked. As these two do what new couples do, Leo is mourning the loss of his relationship.

Kirkman has a father/son talk and apparently, it's just enough time for Damian and Hannah to finish up their activities. Hannah is all smiles now after Damian tells her he's found a job with the British Embassy and will be staying in town.

From Leo's room to his own, Kirkman walks from one targeted family member to another. Alex just received a subpoena from Forstell. All that mumbo jumbo about the trip she took with her mother six months ago led them right where he wanted them. The money for the trip came from an account Eric Little had in place under Alex's name. Now it's her turn to be set up.

Summary: While on a secret mission to Afghanistan, President Kirkman meets with two infamous warlords and must determine whom he can trust to hand over territories to the United States, while Seth has a run-in with Washington D.C. police that puts his job, reputation and future in the White House on the line.

The episode opens on Air Force One as Aaron informs the President that they are 30 miles out and about to go dark. Emily is in charge at the White House while Kirkman is out on a covert mission, it seems. She calls Seth and says she wants to meet his mother. Yep, they are officially dating. One thing for sure, I did not see that hookup coming. He and his brother are in the car when, suddenly, they're pulled over by the police and Seth hides a prescription of Modafinil.

Kirkman arrives in Kabul, Afghanistan where he's welcomed to an eruption of applause by U.S. troops. "I had to get out of Washington," he says. "It's war there." No joke! Breakfast is served. Kirkman joins Harry, a soldier and recipient of two Michelin stars. Aaron soon pulls the President away to meet with Hannah who is also traveling with him and Kabul Station Chief Agent Dean who briefs the President on their mission. There are two high profile leaders in the region who they are looking to approach with peace rather than be the cause of a second coming of 9/11.

The next morning, Kendra bails Seth out of jail for possession of 200 tabs of an illegal drug. She warns him of the legal dangers and, back at the White House, Emily benches him until everything blows over. Things end up in the air. Looks like the couple are already having their first bout and it's a pretty serious one. Way to go, Seth.

Back in Kabul, Kirkman meets with one of the men in question, attempting to extend a partnership to change the nations' relations. Mulla Bahri, or as he would rather be known Zowan Haleek, "the young one", suggests a faster method of change that involves monitoring him via technology. It can't be that easy. He leaves, and Hannah walks up but is met by Mike who stops her from handing off intel. Why the sudden cut-off?

Seth is benched for the prescriptions and Kendra finds that Lyor has a secret wife. Not only is there an unknown marriage, but his Vegas wedding has now led to his misfiling income taxes. He has to get an annulment rather than working in the White House as a tax cheat and temporary Press Secretary.

Now Kirkman sits with the second man in question, Mullah Fayed, who wants the US troops to leave, but the President isn't backing down so easily. He states the nation wants money and support. This meeting isn't as pleasant as the first. He's accused of not being trusted after meeting with someone who doesn't hold onto Afghanistan's history and traditions.

Lyor is taking quite the different approach as Press Secretary. He hits the media with sarcasm and brutal honesty, singling individuals out for "flip flopping" by not keeping a job. Bold move. Meanwhile, back in Afghanistan, a suicide bomber has struck, and the base is running amok. Kirkman should be returning to U.S. soil, but Phoenix is not rising as Mike announces to his team. Nope, the President would rather stay and ride this out.

No one seems to be listening to Hannah on this trip. She's attempting to give insight and advice on what moves to make and the whereabouts of Agent Dean, yet no one cares to consider she may be right. In reality, I can see how this would most definitely happen. She's not a military expert, but for the purpose of this show, one must always listen to Hannah Wells.

Lyor introduces Emily and Kendra to his wife Julia where she is handed the annulment papers. Instead of signing them then and there, she promises to get them back at her earliest convenience. Odd, don't you think? The President calls Kendra for an update on Alex's subpoena. The account was created at the same time Alex and her mother were vacationing. He's obviously upset that he didn't see this coming, but the most important thing is how they handle things moving forward. No time to speak with Emily, he has to get back to work.

Hannah and Mike are en route to find Agent Dean, arguing about who better serves the President. Mike, all of a sudden, finds the conspiracy theory "bogus" and says he jumps in front of the President to save him from a bullet. Hannah tops him, stating her job is to keep the bullet from ever being fired. Just then an IED explodes on the road and both American heroes jump out of the jeep, armed and ready for whatever is coming their way.

Night has now fallen over Kabul and word of Hannah and Mike has reached the President. Bahri and Fayed have expressed their condolences which Kirkman dubs "crocodile tears." He now has to figure out how to entice one of them to admit his guilt in their second round of meetings.

Hannah and Mike reach their destination after overpowering enemy shooters. Written in blood, Hannah finds the numbers 1802. Agent Dean is alive and they are on his trail. Dash cam video of Seth's arrest has surfaced, but he refuses to testify. Kendra is looking to pull tricks from her sleeves to fight probable cause against a police officer's claim to a right to search Seth's vehicle. Of course, she'll figure it out, but how?

Kirkman stands before Bahri who claims Fayed is an animal who has killed many of his followers. Bahri provides interesting insight into a business Mullah Fayed owns, though. He says that his opponent manufactures the chemical necessary to create the bombs. Fayed denies these claims that they were made for bombs. Yes, he manufactures the chemical, but for medical purposes. He stands toe-to-toe with Kirkman, saying he had high hopes for their meeting, yet he is met with the same enemy he has always had, one who calls him a liar. Which man should be taken seriously? Which man actually is lying?

Micheal, Seth's brother, enters Emily's office where she bursts his bubble and confronts him about the Modafinil. Seth is covering for his brother who would never have a shot at graduating med school were this to stain his record. There is nothing he could do now as Seth has made his decision. In court, Kendra confronts the arresting officer for his failure to meet arrest quotas for his department. Plus, he also applied unsuccessfully for the Detective Department. Toss a "furtive gesture" and 14 illegal vehicle searches made this year in the mix and the judge has no choice but to dismiss Seth's case. She did it!

Hannah and Mike walk up on an abandoned car and find a severely wounded Agent Dean hidden in the bushes. He's hurt, but he's alive. They get him to safety.

Aaron hands Kirkman more intel and he knows now who to trust. Yes, the chemicals led them on a trail straight to Fayed, but footage of Bahri's compound shows vehicles with Pakistani plates. Radio chatter spoke of "the little one" repeatedly. Bahri planned the attack and pinned it on his adversary. He's been caught red-handed and what does he do? He blames his actions on Americans, but Kirkman strikes back. "You attacked my country," he says, "September 11, 2001." He orders soldiers to take him away.

Julia returns with her annulment paperwork and sits with Emily. She says she's fine with the status quo. What? In what sounds like a horrible story of a trip taken years ago, Julie recalls how literal her husband is and how she would rather him than any other normal guy. Emily still suggests she help him save money by signing the papers. Kendra walks in on Lyor playing a game while on call with someone in various languages. He hasn't signed his papers either. True love comes in all shapes and sizes, I suppose. Seth checks in with Emily who is still upset over his actions. "What am I supposed to do when this lands on my desk?" she asks. He wants her to do the right thing.

Before Kirkman leaves the base for his trip home, he visits Harry who hands the President a cheesecake and a very sad story of how his wife died three years ago of lung cancer and he wasn't home for his family. His daughter never forgave him, and they haven't spoken in a year. Poor Harry believes he doesn't have a home to go home to, but Kirkman reassures him that he can always go home so he's recommending that he get some leave to return to Philadelphia.

Three-Letter Day

Summary: It is a special day at the White House. On this day President Kirkman takes three letters from the huge amount he receives from the general public on a regular basis and assigns certain members of his staff to look into the requests in them. Hannah and Kendra are assigned to look into an anonymous pardon request for a death row prisoner. Emily and Aaron's assignment is to look into a military widow's request for a posthumous Medal of Honor for her husband. Seth and Lyor are assigned to investigate the mysterious death of two of a beekeepers' colonies which the keeper believes is being caused by a nearby airfield.

It's letter day for the team. As per the president, the team breaks up into groups and works on three requests from the general public that the president handpicked himself. Seth and Jay need to help a man with his dying bees, Kendra gets a death penalty case while Emily works on something special with Aaron, a woman looking for war recognition for her dead husband.

Kendra reports to the president on Alex's mother's case. They have problems. It's the fake bank account and wire transfers that were set up in Alex's mother's name. Meanwhile, Hannah is sitting at a St. Luscious bank. She plans to try and open an account in someone else's name with a certain bank officer. She wants to get to them. She sits with one of the employees who tells her there is no way she can do that. She offers a premium as a bribe to meet the officer but it doesn't work. He sends her away. A man follows her outside. She confronts him in the alley and gets the name she is looking for.

Kendra and Hannah meet with the man on death row and his son in a separate meeting, collecting facts on the case. They ask the son how they can speak with his sister but he is quick to tell them that is a bad idea. Hannah tells him they need to look into everything if he wants them to help save his father's life. He agrees to cooperate.

Seth tries to talk to Emily, but she continues to evade him. He finally gets her while she is getting coffee. He needs to know if she told the president about his drug bust. She tells him it is an evolving situation.

Seth and Jay meet with the beekeeper. Jay speaks insects, so he is excited to hear that the bees cannot find their food because of the FAA. Seth and Jay go to the FAA, who is thrilled to meet with them on behalf of the president. They inform the women that they are there for the bees. Her face drops. Not this again. She practically had to get a restraining order on the bee guy.

Kendra and Hannah track down the daughter of the man on death row. She is strung out and doesn't want to talk, telling them to go away.

Aaron and Emily meet with the colonel about the woman who would like her dead husband to receive the medal of honor. The colonel admits that the soldier was in the battle they fought in Kandahar. He also shares that he changed the files to show the soldier was doing recon because he doesn't think he deserves a medal. The soldier seduced his wife and broke up their marriage. Emily talks him into awarding the dead soldier. The colonel agrees but also shares that he will tell the dead soldier's wife all about his extramarital affair.

Hannah is walking down the street when a car comes out of nowhere and tries to run her over.

Emily and Aaron report to the president. Aaron doesn't want to award the medal because he would rather leave the wife in the dark about her husband's affair. Emily disagrees. The president would like to meet with the wife. Before Emily leaves the Oval she shares news about Seth with the president. She tells him she regrets not coming forward sooner. He tells her he already knew. He is disappointed she kept him in the dark. He asks her what she thinks he should do about Seth.

Hannah tracks down the banker. She goes to his home. Someone must have tipped him off because the TV is on and the microwave is running but he is nowhere to be found.

Seth and Jay arrive on the doorstep of the beekeeper. They have learned that the FAA did their part so someone else killed the bees. The wife answers the door. She needs to change quickly. Her husband isn't home. She goes upstairs. Jay goes through their kitchen. He knows she is the bee killer. He finds royal jelly. He knew he was right.

The president meets with the widow and her son. He tells them in the Oval that their investigation was inconclusive, but he asked them there to give them a flag and to tell the son what a hero his father was.

The beekeeper arrives home. Seth and Jay decide not to rat out the wife and tell them there is no longer a problem with the FAA. The man breaks down and admits that he killed his wife's roses. She admits she was the one who killed the bees. The two fight. Seth and Jay watch amused before sleeping out the front door.

Kendra meets with the man on death row. He will not be pardoned unless he comes clean. Kendra tells him what she thinks — he is covering for his son. His son tried to buy drugs on the night of the murder and he took the blame. The daughter won't talk to them because she knows the truth. The man refuses to come clean. He would rather stay in prison for the rest of his life.

Seth comes to Emily. He needs to see the president. He wants to give his notice. Emily tells him no. The president won't accept it. Emily admits she told the president to fire him but he won't. They kiss.

The president is stuck in the death row case. He doesn't know what to do. He decides to stop the man from receiving the death penalty but if he wants to get out of jail he needs to come clean.

Charlie has a lead on the car that tried to run Hannah over. The son of the man on death row tried to kill her. She heads to the garage to find the son. She tells him she knows he was the one to kill the man all those years ago and maybe his father covered for him then but he is in trouble now. She cuffs him.

Line of Fire

Season 2

Episode Number: 31

Season Episode: 10

Originally aired: Wednesday December 13, 2017
Writer: Keith Eisner
Director: Chris Grismer
Show Stars: Kiefer Sutherland (Tom Kirkman), Natascha McElhone (Jessica Kirkman), Paulo Costanzo (Lyor Boone), Adan Canto (Aaron Shore), Italia Ricci (Emily Rhodes), LaMonica Garrett (Mike Ritter), Zoe McLellan (Kendra Daynes), Ben Lawson (Damian Rennett), Kal Penn (Seth Wright), Maggie Q (FBI Agent Hannah Wells)
Guest Stars: Elana Dunkelman (Fourth Reporter), Seth Mohan (Non-descript Man), Birgitte Solem (Secretary Anne Pilson)
Summary: It's Christmas Day and President Kirkman is alerted to a group of religious extremists who refuse to evacuate when a forest fire threatens to engulf their cabin. Deploying Emily and Aaron to help diffuse the situation, Kirkman must act quickly to save multiple lives at stake. Meanwhile, the First Lady finally gives her testimony to the FBI director, while what happens next changes the lives of the Kirkman family forever.

It's Christmas, and Hannah wakes up to a sleeping, and presumably naked, Damian. She grabs his phone, plugs it into her laptop to download some info and hides it in her robe just before getting caught red-handed.

One Remy Lucas tells news viewers that wildfires in Shenandoah are raging on, but asks when the federal government will be pulling out. Aaron is in the thick of things when he gets a call from the President, telling him to pack up and head back home. Before he and the fireman in his area can leave, a fireman knocks on a cabin door. He instructs the people inside to leave the area. "We're on a religious retreat," the main guy says before turning back to the others inside. "You know what to do." They begin boarding up the windows and turning over furniture. Emily, back at the White House, suggests that they're a cult.

In the Situation Room, Kirkman is briefed about the people in the cabin. Is it a hostage situation? Is it a cult? Either way, they're asking to speak directly to the President, but in the meantime Aaron makes a stop on his behalf. The leader wants a little girl, Grace, who is hospitalized, to be released to her mother so that God's will may intervene. Until this happens, he and the rest of his group will remain on the mountain until the fires take over. Aaron insists that anyone who wishes to leave follow him. They, instead, lock hands and stand their ground.

Tensions are high between the President and First Lady as they just don't talk like they used to. He turns to her, looking like he wants to say so much, but walks away. She finally looks up from her studies for her own case, as if wishing that he would say what he wants, but nothing comes of it.

Emily looks on at the sick little girl at the hospital with Carrie. She urges her mother to consent to leaving her at the hospital for open heart surgery, but she does not want to interfere with God's will. Kirkman is put into a sticky situation as Kendra, Seth and Lyor help advise him. He doesn't want to upset Christians who back the mother's choice and no one wants to create an uproar in the media. Again, he must talk to the leader in the cabin.

Chuck finally stands up to Hannah about Damian. "He's suspect," he says. His superiority has always been an issue for me, too, but Hannah insists that she can handle herself. Let's hope she can.

Well, Kirkman's chat with the cabin leader proves to be a waste of time. They don't seem to care about the pending doom of fire creeping up to their door. As soon as word reaches them of the baby's release, only then will they evacuate.

Kendra speaks with Forestal who hits her with a possible deal via a no contest plea. "This is the price of me stepping down," he says. Alex wants to take the plea and walk away, taking the fifth to everything. Tom is worried about her reputation and life being ruined forever after. "You are innocent," he says in perfect Kiefer Sutherland fashion, "and that's where I stand." End of conversation. POTUS has left the room.

Hannah meets with Aaron who shows her surveillance footage of warehouse fire she and Damian investigated. Our British two-timer was at the sight two hours before he went back with Hannah, cutting the fence to plant the explosion which means he could be charged with arson. Aaron knows Hannah is compromised and that is why he wants to step in to catch this guy in the act.

Kirkman pulls a trusted, and best open-heart surgeon, into the Oval Office, urging that he do all he can to save the little girl's life. He'll do what he can, but he can't make any promises.

Damian, still believing he's pulled one over on an FBI Agent, tempts Hannah with a trip to Maui for Christmas. Hannah hands him a watch. It looks simple and unassuming enough, but I wouldn't doubt that she's had it bugged.

Success! Kirkman has successfully convinced the mother to allow her little girl to have the surgery.

Hannah and Chuck are tracking Damian's watch. He's in her apartment, sitting down at her laptop with no idea that we can see right up his nostrils. Hannah hurries out.

Again, Alex is doing her studies when the President comes in to wish her good luck with the subpoena, but his brief visit ends with his wanting to make the last few weeks up to her. No matter what happens, he says he will take the night off once she returns from her hearing so that they can spend some quality time together.

Grace's mother Carrie has been given quite the decision. Her religion forbids her to use the help of man to aide her child, but what about her own blood? The baby needs a blood transfusion and her blood is the only one that can help. Emily convinces her to do the right thing and lend her blood.

Alex and Kendra arrive at what was supposed to be a secret hearing, but they are met with a crowd of reporters. The First Lady could easily leave and go home, walking away from everything because now things have been compromised. Nope! No matter what, Alex wants this investigation to end today.

Baby Grace makes it through surgery. Carrie is overjoyed, as she should be. Kirkman informs the cabin people of the news and they are evacuated promptly. I suppose it turned out to be a good thing that they were holed up there, otherwise, Grace may not have gotten the attention she needed, but they were still annoying. The President decides to visit Grace himself.

Alex has done her research and has done it well. Her testimony consists of all the things Forestal has done at the expense of the FBI in the name of this investigation into the First Lady and the First Mother-In-Law. In a fit of rage, Forestal shouts for the recorder to be turned off. Got him!

Aaron calls Hannah to his office where he informs that Damian is trained MI6 gone rogue. Of course, in classic Hannah style, she rushes off to bring him in for questioning, alone. She finds him on a bridge near a cathedral. They kiss under snowfall. "So what is this surprise?" he asks. "That I know," she replies and pulls a gun on him. He tries telling her that he has to show her something that will explain everything, but he has to reach into his pocket. "You reach for it and you're dead," she says. Damian ends up in the river with one bullet to the chest. What did he have in his pocket?

The President looks on at baby Grace who is surprisingly happy after such a risky heart surgery. He apparently misses a call from Alex who wants to tell him that she beat the investigation, she's free and she loves her husband. Hannah now sits, crying at a bar as Damian crawls out of the river and opens his coat to reveal a bullet lodged in his bulletproof vest.

The motorcade is taking a happy Alex back to her husband when a truck pummels into her side of the car. Mike, banged up, tumbles out of the driver's seat as fellow Secret Servicemen find a horrifying scene in the backseat. Tom receives the call and drops to his knees, screaming.

Summary: After 10 weeks of grief, the President's senior staff insists he see a therapist to help deal with his loss. Hanna and Aaron are part of a trade delegation to Cuba but the trip doesn't go well.

Tom is meeting with his therapist who is asking him about Alex's death and the man who ran a red light and killed her. A knock on the door comes. Delegation is here, an assistant tells him. Tom tells his therapist he needs to reschedule.

Emily deals with the team. They are concerned about the president and the paperwork that is piling up. Emily reminds them that it has only been 10 weeks since Alex was killed. Meanwhile, Aaron tells Hannah she is back on probation following the death of Damian.

Emily and Seth meet in the office. He wants to go on vacation but she isn't sure she can get away. He begs her to.

Tom is back in the chair. His therapist asks him who he blames for Alex's death. Tom recalls when he became president. He blames himself.

Hannah and Aaron are traveling on a bus in Cuba for trade delegations when the bus is taken hostage by men with machine guns. The men know that Aaron is from the White House. Aaron can understand what they are saying. They plan on killing them all. Hannah asks them to release the children and the elderly. They aren't willing to.

Back at the White House, Tom is briefed about Hannah and Aaron but is reluctant to make a hard decision. The team is getting nervous about his abilities. He hasn't been his normal confident self since Alex died.

Seth addresses a room of reporters. They want to know what the president plans to do to save the hostages in Cuba. Seth cracks a bit under pressure and fires back. When he gets odd the Tom is listening to the last voicemail Alex left him over and over. He heads back to therapy. He is asked about his kids. He doesn't want to talk about he tells the therapist as he recalls in his mind telling his daughter that her mother is dead. They cry together. He rocks her. Leo was in shock. He lashed out at Tom telling him that his mom hated it at the white house.

Hannah asks to go to the bathroom. She escapes to the outside while Aaron stages a fake fight. She runs for it but doesn't get far when she runs into two men with guns. She takes them out but is suddenly surrounded by a dozen more.

Tom thinks back to when Emily helped him plan Alex's funeral. He had a hard time focusing. He admits that his wife's death did traumatize him but he will not let that affect his decision making as the president.

In the situation room, Tom tells the general to move forward with taking control of the hostage situation. He doesn't want to pay a ransom after all.

Tom talks with the hostages by video as they threaten Hannah's life. The video feed cuts out but Emily picks up on a signal Hannah gives, the sign of the cross. They connect it to an investor with the last name Cross. They dig into his background and realize that the Cuban president is paying of the rebels who have taken Hannah and Aaron and the others hostage.

Tom confronts Ortega by a video about his collusion. He tries to deny it but Tom tells him he is going to let the Cuban people get their own justice.

With that behind them, Seth asks Emily what they are doing in their relationship. She feels like it is moving too fast. She admits she isn't sure about their relationship. He tells her to call him when she knows.

Tom meets with the man who killed Alex in jail. He will make it his mission to ensure that the man knows what he did wrong and what he took away from Tom and his family.

Hannah is putting on night cream when Damian comes up behind her with a gun. He tells her they need to talk.

The Final Frontier

Guest Stars: LaMonica Garrett (Mike Ritter), Donna Garner (Serena), Mckenna Grace (Penny Kirkman), Hiro Kanagawa (Richard Kim), Kim Raver (Dr. Andrea Frost)
Summary: After a missile intending to bring water to the stranded astronauts in space is hacked, the President must work with the Russians to help save their lives and find the culprit.

Hannah turns around to look at Damian. He tells her he is going to put his gun down so they can talk. She tells him if he does she's going to kill him. He tells her she won't, she knocks him out.

The president heads into the office to talk with a group of astronauts who are on a mission in space and out of water soon. He tells them that they are working hard to get a missile to them with water. They should see it in no time.

Aaron and Hannah talk to Damian. He wants to tell them some time-sensitive information. They want to know his questions to the Russians. Aaron tells him to start talking. He shares that he was enlisted to prevent another Cold War years ago and yes, he is indirectly responsible for tipping off the banker and indirectly killing the First Lady. Now he is here to redeem himself. He tells them that their space agency has been hacked.

Tom meets with the Russian ambassador. He wants them to help bring the astronauts home and to do that they need to find the hackers. Damian gives Hannah a lead, a retired hacker who knows those possible to be able to pull this off. Hannah tells Aaron that she thinks he is playing them. Aaron doesn't care. They need anything they can get.

Tom meets with the ambassador again. He commands he move fast and launch a Russian missile or Tom will expose Damian for the spy he is on TV. Tom gets word that the hackers have turned the temperatures up on the space station. The astronauts are already dehydrated.

Tom's daughter comes home from school. She got into a fight with another girl in school for the second time. Tom tries to talk to her. She says it won't happen again but she is tired and wants to go lay down.

Tom meets with Dr. Frost. He hopes her expertise will allow them to save the astronauts. Meanwhile, Damian brings Hannah to meet a hacker who can find their suspect. He gives them a name and then tells Damian they will never speak again.

Hannah and Damian find themselves at a flower show. The hacker is an avid Orchid lover. When Hannah walks up to him with Damian, he freaks and makes a run for it. Damian shoots him outside and takes him down. While laying on the gurney, the hacker tells them it wasn't him but he did analyze the code.

Dr. Frost helps the team, directing them on how to manually change the space station's temperature. It works!

Tom tells Emily about his daughter's troubles. She respectfully tells him that he just needs to be there for her while she gets through the loss of her mother.

Hannah and Damian find out who the hacker is from Chuck. He is a plumber. None of it makes sense. They head to his house, but his wife tells them he is dead. They go through his things.

Tom meets with the principle. She tells Tom that Penny is lashing out at students who are bullying others. They just need to channel her response in a positive way.

Hannah brings Damian into custody. He tells her he is sorry. She asks him if he was reaching for a gun that night on the bridge. He tells her he wasn't.

Tom calls Moss in and asks him why he cut a deal with the Russian Ambassador. Tom is angry, but Moss tells him he had to do it because since Alex died he has been over cautious, indecisive and more. Tom tells him that he is undermining his authority. He dismisses him and his services.

The team meets with Tom to decide how they deal with Moss' dismissal. After, Tom sits with Penny for dinner. They talk about missing Alex. A video of Tom threatening the man who killed his wife goes viral.

Agent), Joey Coleman (Evan Beeman)
Summary: When a video of the president visiting prison leaks to the media, his team works to minimize the fallout. Meanwhile, a surprise White House demonstration has deeper ties to the president than anyone first realizes.

The team and the president watch negative press footage of him threatening the first lady's killer. They all try to come up with a game plan on how to deal with it. Meanwhile, a group of people are taking a tour of the White House. One woman asks if they are in the east wing. They tell her yes. They all sit down, protesting. Lyor catches wind and comes to see them. They are being handcuffed by security. Lyor stops them. He tells the people to go on with their protest. He catches up with Seth and Emily, telling them that arresting the protesters would only make the president look more like a monster.

Tom and Kendra meet with the board of one of Alex's causes. Tom shakes hands with a man who he seems to be uncomfortable with. He introduces Kendra to him, it is his brother.

Tom meets with the leader of the protester. She is from the Ochio tribe who was relocated years ago and now again. She comes to see Tom now because he was the young architect who was responsible for displacing them the first time.

Tom welcomes Billy, a former architect colleague who was his first hire, into the office. He meets Emily. They discuss the Ochio people.

Aaron and Hannah continue to question Damian. They are still trying to find out who hacked the missile. Damian gives up his handler. Hanna meets her in a park and asks her if she would like to pool their resources. She is willing to cooperate if they return Damian. Hanna isn't willing to do that.

Tom meets with the tribe leader and the developer. He tries to mediate a land swap, but neither party wants to agree.

Lyor and Emily talk in the hall as they look at the protestors. Meanwhile, Tom's brother is making the trustees board meeting difficult.

Lyor, Seth and Emily watch the bad press of the Ohio leader on the news. They need Tom to fix this. Emily meets with Tom and Kendra. They try to figure out what they plan to do.

Kendra reports to Tom that his brother is holding up Alex's wishes. Tom pulls his brother aside. His brother admits he is holding up the process in order to gain time with him. Tom thinks he is difficult and self centered. They talk about the past. Tom is still angry Trey took off and left him behind to care for their sick mother. He asks his brother to sign off on Alex's wishes and leave.

Lyor cannot stop wondering what one of the young men from the tribe is writing about on his computer. He goes up to him. He is writing a college essay and for the same college Lyor attended. Lyor is very interested and starts to give him tips on topics.

Tom meets with Billy and tells him the $20 million settlement is not going to be the answer.

Trey hangs out with his nephew. Leo asks him to stick around. He needs to deal with the issues he has with Tom. Meanwhile, Lyor continues to tutor the young man on how he needs to approach his essay with more flare.

Hanna brings Damian to the place he will be staying. He tells her he really did care about her. She doesn't care.

Trisha finds an old letter that was sent to Tom long ago. Billy hid it so that they could take on the contract. They needed the money. Tom is upset. He dismisses Billy after hearing a handful of excuses.

Tom thinks about something the tribal leader says about a treaty. After some research, he saves the people's land. Lyor reads the young man's final draft and is thrilled.

Damian goes downstairs in the dark to get something. Someone is waiting for him. Hanna comes out of nowhere and shoots the person. Chuck has uncovered a connection between Damian and the hacker. Chuck is ready to shut down his computer and bring his findings to the FBI when his computer lights on fire. The hacker set it to overheat.

Leo asks Tom about him and his brother's relationship. Leo gives Tom a speech about family, one Tom cannot agree with.

Tom holds a press conference apologizing to the people for his out of line threat to Alex's killer. After his speech, Tom meets with Trey to apologize to him. Trey admits that he couldn't live up to being Tom's brother. So he was bad. He isn't going to run anymore though. They will get through it together. The next day they visit Alex's grave together.

Show Stars: Kiefer Sutherland (Tom Kirkman), Natascha McElhone (Jessica Kirkman), Paulo Costanzo (Lyor Boone), Adan Canto (Aaron Shore), Italia Ricci (Emily Rhodes), LaMonica Garrett (Mike Ritter), Zoe McLellan (Kendra Daynes), Ben Lawson (Damian Rennett), Kal Penn (Seth Wright), Maggie Q (FBI Agent Hannah Wells)
Guest Stars: Breckin Meyer (Trey Kirkman), Jake Epstein (Chuck Russink), Chelsea Harris (Tricia Sims), Aunjanue Ellis (Eleanor Darby), Nora Zehetner (Valeria Poreskova), Clyde Kusatsu (Japanese Finance Minister Omono), Ryan Hollyman (Congressman Gary Sharpe), Catherine McGregor (Governor Emma Sinclair), Bayley Ungurain (Janet), Dana Thody (Reporter), Jenny Raven (Sasha), Greg Ellwand (Senator Glen Alexander)
Summary: President Kirkman enlists the aid of D.C. mayor Ellenor Darby to help curb panic when a blackout threatens to shutdown the government. But, is that the extent of the relationship?

Emily and Lyor meet up with the Japanese minister in hopes to extend a 600 billion dollar bond payment owed to Japan. Unfortunately, Lyor ends up insulting the poor man and he decides not to give them the extension. To add on to that unfortunate news, Emily and Lyor get stuck in the elevator of that building because they just so happen to be there when the city loses all of its power. But luckily for them, Kirkman's younger brother, Trey, who we met in last week's episode, is apparently an old friend of the ambassador and convinces him to give the president the extension in addition to staying to watch out for his older brother.

But before that issue gets resolved, the nation's capital is in full panic mode: there's almost no power throughout the whole city (other than the White House and a few shelters) and the people are starting to riot by breaking into stores and setting fires in a fear-inducing apocalyptic way. President Kirkman contacts D.C's mayor, Ellenor Darby, who is just as concerned about the people lashing out. Tom suggests bringing in the national guard, after getting advice from Aaron, who serves as both acting chief of staff (because Emily is nowhere to be found as she's stuck in an elevator) and national security advisor.

Mayor Darby refuses and wants to fix the problem without turning D.C into a militant city and wants to solve it by utilizing local resources because she knows that bringing soldiers to patrol the city would fix the problem but it would take away the people's trust in its community and subsequently, the community's leaders. To compromise, Kirkman and Darby go into the city to talk to the people to ensure them that they were a community and that they were doing everything they could to get the power back on.

Coincidentally, the power comes back during one out of many of their speeches. After the crisis is averted, Kirkman announces to the world that he's found someone to nominate for vice president, which he didn't even want to do in the first place. And the candidate he chooses is none other than Mayor Darby.

Meanwhile, the power outage causes Damian to escape from his safe house without his ankle monitor, which malfunctions from the blackout. Agent Hannah Wells, Chuck, and Aaron all work together to eventually find him after he's shot a man who was apparently going after Hannah for killing his brother, his brother being the guy who tried to kill Damian in his safe house last week. But before they catch up to him, they find out Damian went to the Russian Embassy before tracking this guy down, apparently to tell Valeria not to kill Hannah.

Apparently Valeria was just using this guy's grief and desire for revenge as a way to serve her and Russian interest by killing Hannah. What I still don't understand is whether or not was Valeria was protecting her asset (AKA Damian) because it's in the Russians' interest or if she was jealous of Hannah. In last week's episode, she seemed to have hinted that there may have been something between her and Damian but maybe I interpreted that wrong. But either way, Damian's definitely got more information about the entire situation and conspiracy than he lets on and Hannah and Aaron have definitely caught onto that.

To get the lights back on, Chuck uses his IT skills to figure out that that the person behind the power outage is, of course, the same hacker that's been behind this entire conspiracy. How he figured it out is still a little fuzzy to me but I think it had something to do with the hacker wanting them to be able to fix it eventually.

Man), Grace Hwang Kaye (Pink Lady), Tom Williams (Reporter), Jenny Raven (Sasha), Leona Son (West Hun Chiu Child #1), William Sun (West Hun Chiu Child #2), Kelly Seo (West Hun Chiu Soldier #1), Tony Kim (West Hun Chiu Soldier #2)
Summary: President Kirkman travels to Camp David to broker a peace treaty between East and West Hanchu, while Seth and Emily take a look at their relationship and decide how and if to move forward as a couple.

President Kirkman goes to Camp David to help negotiate a peace treaty between opposing neighboring countries with the threat of possible nuclear weapons with thousands of people at stake on the battlefield, including 5,000 U.S. soldiers. Apparently, there's been chatter about the east side having a nuclear weapons program, and the fact that the country is governed by the frustrating and easily angered dictator, Chairman Kim, doesn't help.

The delegations continue to hit bumps in the road and Tom calls in Dr. Frost, head of Apache Aerospace, to help negotiate a deal, which involved the company giving both countries a technologically sound defense system. The east side is unable to pay upfront so they eventually come up with the plan of Apache Aerospace leasing them the money.

As soon as it seems like the situation is resolved, Chairman Kim finds out that his son, Joon, is in U.S. custody. But he's there on his own volition; the war has apparently been enveloping his family to the point where he's afraid of his own father. But Chairman Kim is still furious and no longer trusts Kirkman so he's forced to call in former President Moss for help, who both parties trust.

In exchange for refuge in the U.S., Joon gives Agent Wells any information he has about East Han Chiu's rumored nuclear program. Turns out, they are already in possession of nuclear weapons and they're secretly being stored a few miles from where the U.S. soldiers are, which derails the peace treaty. Again.

Upon learning about the nuclear weapons, Kirkman exposes the facts at the table and forces Chairman Kim to sign the peace treaty, despite the fact that the terms have changed. Instead of both sides gaining a new defense system, East Han Chiu is to dismantle the nuclear missiles and a peacekeeping force will see to it that Chairman Kim honors those demands. He reluctantly signs the treaty but is still angry about all of it. So angry in fact that Agent Wells and Aaron find out that he's brought a dirty bomb onto U.S. soil.

Meanwhile, there's been another mole in the White House but on a smaller scale than it was last season: someone's been leaking sensitive information to the press. Emily gets Chuck to illegally search a particular journalist's cell phone records (for the sake of national security) and they find out that former President Moss is the leak. They eventually tell Kirkman, who confronts him face to face. Moss basically tells him that he only did it because it was the right thing to do. He wasn't doing all of this undermine Tom but instead, he did it for America in the name of patriotism.

But because leaking that kind of information to the public is still illegal, Tom tells him that he's handing it over to the Justice Department. Moss basically responds by saying that he's going to fight back, and he's going to fight back hard. As borderline extremist as the patriotism part of his explanation sounds, he adds a good point about Tom's staff basically being his "yes men" and that he's not open to criticism.

With Alex gone, people around him have pointed out that Tom has isolated himself from everyone else and at this point in his presidency, he really needs someone to oppose him, at least every once in a while because he can't and won't be right all the time.

Guest Stars: Reed Diamond (John Forstell), Aunjanue Ellis (Eleanor Darby), Jake Epstein (Chuck Russink), Tom Choi (Chairman Kim), Dillon Casey (Detective Blakey), Dan Jeannotte (Greg Bowen), Morgan Kelly (Simon Day), Rick Roberts (General), Kim Raver (Dr. Andrea Frost), Ali Hassan (Ambassador Salimi), Jsin Sasha (Arturo Rojas), C.J. Byrd-Vassell (Deep Fryer Guy), Vanessa Burns (Shelly), Daniel Jun (Joon Kim), Lachlan Murdoch (Lead Bomb Tech), Dwight Ireland (Second Reporter), Martin Roach (Defense Secretary Nick Wooster), Byron Abalos (S.A.C. Jack Grimes)
Summary: President Kirkman and his staff have credible intelligence that a dirty bomb is on U.S. soil, thrusting the president into a high-stakes effort to find the bomb and stop it from detonating. Meanwhile, at the White House, Emily approaches Chuck to help her with something that has damaging and illegal consequences.

Aaron informs President Kirkman that there's a dirty bomb on U.S. soil so everyone chases down any and every lead they can find. They start looking at East Han Chiu first because they seemingly have the most motive, especially after Chairman Kim's outburst over the treaty.

But because they don't know where the bomb is, when it's going to go off, or who's behind it all, they send President Kirkman and his staff to the emergency bunker. Which leaves a persistent reporter trying to find out what they're all trying to hide (all they really know is that the President and his staff are in the east wing instead of the west). But because they don't want to cause a huge panic, they decide not to tell the press about what's really going on. It isn't until after they diffuse the decoy bomb and the other one goes off that Kirkman addresses the public.

Agent Wells continues to interrogate Kim's son, Joon, who found refuge in the states as well as told her that his father was already in possession of nuclear weapons, giving East Han Chiu motive and resources. Then, Joon passes out (when Detective Blakey isn't looking) from what looks like some type of poison. But it turns out it was just baking powder and he escapes while he's held up at the hospital, making him suspect number one.

Meanwhile, the FBI work with Dr. Frost, who returns again for this episode, because they want to use her advanced technology to find the bomb and the bomber. Eventually, they find the suspected bomber, who they find dead from radioactive poisoning and they disarm a decoy bomb, just as it's about to go off. The only thing is they don't know it's a decoy until it's too late; the bigger bomb goes off at the same place the decoy was at, killing 6 federal agents in the process, including Director Forstell. But thankfully, there are no civilian casualties because the investigation into the bombing sanctioned off the area from civilians and press, who were also there when the bomb went off.

Meanwhile, Kendra confronts Emily about the Moss investigation because Emily authorized Chuck to go through the reporter's phone records without a warrant. Emily stands by what she did because it was a matter of national security. However, Kendra knows they can't argue with the evidence they found against former President Moss because Emily obtained it illegally and she knows that he'd use it against them. Which ultimately makes it problematic because that is the only evidence they have against Moss.

As far as finding the culprit behind the dirty bombs, Agent Wells and Detective Blakey find Joon in a warehouse that the suspect was in hours earlier. After getting nothing from the initial interrogation, the bigger bomb goes off, leaving Joon as the only suspect and assumed culprit of the bombing. After Hannah threatens him with the death penalty, Joon reveals that someone called him and told him that they had his girlfriend and that they'd kill her if he said anything. Other than that, he has no other information about the bomber or the people behind it.

But fortunately for them, they still have the other suspect to look into. They eventually find Joon's girlfriend tied up in an abandoned apartment and look into the bomber's bank accounts and find that shell companies paid him, those shell companies trace back to the Kumani government. And it just so happens that the financials of the abandoned apartment where they found Joon's girlfriend correspond to that same shell company.

After this discovery, President Kirkman meets with the ambassador, who claims that there's no way that his government would do this but still knows something but refuses to share what he knows. Furious, Tom heads to the general and orders for the U.S to engage, which is what I assume, is their unofficial declaration of war against Kumani.

Summary: Following the deadly bomb explosion inside a D.C. metro station, President Kirkman declares war on Kunami. When the emir of that country sends his ambassador to negotiate, FBI Agent Hannah Wells learns the emir is hiding something that could have deadly consequences.

Following last week's episode, President Kirkman publicly declares war on Kunami after discovering the country's involvement with the dirty bomb, Kunami's ambassador tries to negotiate a peaceful surrender but refuses to claim responsibility, and FBI agent Hannah Wells discovers just how involved the ambassador is in all of this.

The president addresses the public again by saying that the Kunami government is responsible for the bomb and that they launched missiles to key areas of Kunami's country in response. He adds that they are now at war with them, which sets of a whole PR situation because now, the U.S is now in the midst of a war and not everyone's all that happy about it. And it's not just the public who isn't a fan of Kirkman's forceful attack; Lyor doesn't like the perception of it all and Emily also disagrees with his tactic, which makes Tom doubt whether or not he's the one who should be making all these decisions. Perhaps extending that to whether or not he's the right person to be president.

Throughout the entirety of the episode, Kunami's ambassador meets with the president and his staff, trying to negotiate with them by saying that they'll peacefully surrender because they know that they can't win (being that they're a relatively small country). But they won't apologize for the bombing, which isn't something Kirkman or his staff will compromise and therefore leads to the ongoing war being fought on Kunami soil.

Part of that war effort involves none other than Hannah Wells. Chuck, Hannah, Detective Blakey, and Aaron (with the help with Damian, might I add) look at what the bomber was doing days before it went off via security cameras. They follow him to a hotel where he spends far too long of a time in the bathroom, which obviously pointed to him meeting with someone. They look closer at the footage and discover that he was meeting with Greg Bowen, who we know as someone working for Chairman Kim. They eventually bring him in for questioning and find out that he's actually been working with the emir and helped pin it on East Han Chiu.

This leads to Hannah going to the battlefield with other soldiers to meet with a rebel leader who wants to overthrow the emir. But not long after they arrive, they're bombarded with Kunami soldiers. Hannah and a fellow soldier, sergeant Sims become separated from the rest of the group and are left looking for the rebel on their own.

During their short journey, they're helped by a man who just turned out as just another enemy planning to lead them to an ambush. Hannah figures this out relatively quickly and they eventually find their way to the rebel. But sergeant Sims calls Hannah out on her recklessness and obvious irritation and it's been adamantly clear since the beginning of this episode that she's angry about Director Forstell's death. Which was admirable but a little confusing because yes, he was her boss, but they didn't seem particularly close.

But regardless, they use the imposter's phone and contact the white house to inform that they're safe and still en route to the rebel leader. Once they find the rebel, Hannah discovers that they've been duped; turns out that the ambassador is behind the bombing but did it on his own so that he could take over Kunami.

But unfortunately, this means that Kunami, as a country anyway, isn't responsible for the bomb, therefore shouldn't be put in a war that was only instigated by one person acting on his own volition. In response, Tom revokes the ambassador's diplomatic credentials and he abdicates from the throne.

Summary: As more leaks surface from President Kirkman's confidential therapy sessions, Vice President Darby meets secretly with the Cabinet, leading to attorney Ethan West looking into the president's past.

First off, the FBI looks at the senior staff as potential suspects in the leaked tapes investigation by confiscating their phones after IT's already cleared their computers of any potentially suspicious activity. However, this particular hack changes the public and other government officials' perception of the president. As the episode progresses, more and more tapes leak, which weakens. Among them are multiple revelations about Tom's mental health, like his depression, anxiety, possible PTSD, and only being able to connect with Dr Andrea Frost.

Ultimately leads VP Darby and the rest of the cabinet to vote Kirkman out of office. But before the papers are signed, Tom and his staff protest and VP Darby brings in Michael J. Fox's character, Ethan West, and will be a part of the show for the rest of the season. Kirkman and his staff's only hope is to take part in a hearing of sorts to argue why he shouldn't be kicked out of office, which would then be facilitated, or more accurately, prosecuted, by West.

Meanwhile, Damian meets with his old Russian handler to obtain any info about Gamine, the only name that the FBI is able to use to identify the hacker. From this, they're able to discover bank routing number. After Chuck does his IT magic, the investigation connects the hacker to none other than Dr Andrea Frost.

But as Agent Hannah Wells and Damian are on their way to their next clue, someone (who we don't get to see, of course) in a black car starts shooting at them and Damian steps in front of Hannah and goes down. Hannah calls for an ambulance and then the scene cuts off until we see her at the hospital meeting with the doctor. The only problem? The scene of Hannah confronting the doctor, who I'm assuming is the surgeon, is completely inaudible. As in, all we get to see is Hannah's reaction after the doctor tells her whatever he went there to tell her, therefore meaning that we have no idea if Damian's alive or not.

Summary: Attorney Ethan West calls on President Kirkman's closest advisors and staff as he begins his investigation.

After last week's episode, Hannah Wells is angry over Damian's death. Her anger gets the best of her and she tries to storm into Kirkman's office with blood still on her shirt, determined to tell him that Dr. Andrea Frost is the hacker. But the proof they have isn't enough to really prove that she's guilty. But regardless, she confronts him later anyway, without more evidence, and Tom basically accuses her of jumping to conclusions, especially since Andrea's someone Tom considers as one of his closest friends. But it's not a complete waste as it's enough for Tom to become at least a little suspicious of her.

But despite the lack of evidence, Hannah confronts Dr. Frost and accuses her of being the hacker, slandering her name in public. But this is after Aaron vouches for her because she hasn't steered them wrong so far. But after this incident, it makes Dr. Frost, expectedly, whether she's guilty or not, angry and Tom ends up firing Hannah at the end of the episode.

Meanwhile, the 25th amendment hearing officially starts while Kirkman's staff tries to negotiate with two senate leaders about an agreement about the budget for medical research. The news of the hearing somehow leaks to those officials, yet strangely not to the press, and they assume that the president will no longer be the president by the end of the day, making them feel entitled to change the terms of their agreement. After Tom shows up during one of their meetings though, they finally agree to the terms that was already previously agreed on.

At the hearing, Ethan West questions President Kirkman about his mental health, his family, his quote unquote "obsession with loyalty", and all the decisions he made as president after his wife's death. The trial pretty much lasts the entire day, bringing in witnesses ranging from his younger brother, Trey to former president Moss, who Tom fired earlier this season.

Tom, fully expecting to be kicked out of office by the end of the day, answers every question thrown at him honestly and the board decides to keep him as president. Mostly because of his staff's loyalty to him and what Ethan called his "obsession for loyalty", which was honestly a pretty lousy argument anyway: he expects loyalty from the people he gives it to.

Summary: President Kirkman negotiates with a foreign government to release an American held overseas, while attorney Ethan West continues his investigation.

The episode begins with finding out that the hacker, known as Gamine, is actually Dax and NOT Dr. Frost, President Kirkman and his staff deal with trying to get an American kid out of Bhutan, and Agent Hannah Wells decides to go after Damian's real killer, without the support of the U.S government.

President Kirkman and his staff try to negotiate a deal with Bhutan in order to get a teenager, arrested over a small graffiti charge, out of the country. But Bhutan wants to negotiate in order to obtain some land so they can use it for mining oil. But things get complicated when the country's ambassador gets murdered at an event Kirkman is holding.

It also doesn't help that Ethan West, who's back fighting for this teenager's safe return home, constantly bad mouthing Bhutan's prime minister to the press. But eventually, they work together and the negotiations rule in their favor and the kid gets to come home. As far the ambassador's murder goes, Chuck and Mike work together to find his killer and the killer turns out to be someone who killed him over a different piece of land.

Meanwhile, Kendra is working on getting her old mentor, Steven Flannery, to become a judge, in what I'm assuming is for the Supreme Justice court. After vetting him, they find a few accounts of past workers accusing him of sexual discrimination or misconduct claims. All of which turn out to be relatively innocent. But he also has a bit of a past with Kendra so she starts to wonder if what happened between them was consensual or coerced. Still confused about which one it could've been, she decides to pass on giving him the job.

After Hannah got fired last week, she decides to investigate Dr. Frost herself, with Chuck's help of course. So really, Chuck is working double duty in this episode, with the investigation into the ambassador and Hannah's independent investigation into Dr. Frost. Hannah goes to Dax, who, if you don't remember is another one of Kirkman's closest friends and is big in the car manufacture business. She gets him to distract Andrea while she breaks into her house and gets Chuck to hack into her computer systems. She finds what she's looking for gets out of there as fast as possible.

Only thing is that she was actually looking into Dax. And apparently Hannah getting fired in last week's episode was a complete hoax: it only happened because Kirkman found a bug in his office in the model car that Dax gave him and needed to find more proof to prove that Dax was the hacker. And Hannah and Chuck found it. After illegally breaking into his house and hacking into his enormous computer system but I guess something they're just going to brush over as it being a matter of national security.

After the FBI arrest Dax, Hannah and Chuck go over the data they got from his servers and connect the dots to find out that he worked with Damian's Russian handler, Valeria Poriskova. Except the target was Hannah, not Damian. But now that they've found the hacker and relations with Russia are settled, Hannah knows that she's not going to get the support of the FBI or the U.S government if she were to go after Poriskova. But she wants to make her pay for killing Damian so she resigns from the FBI and decides to go after Poriskova herself.

Summary: White House Counsel Kendra Daynes ends up in a dangerous situation putting another staffer's life at risk, while Hannah Wells unexpectedly takes a trip to find answers.

The episode starts with Kendra at her house with Trey, who apparently spent the night with her. Later we find out that the both of them want to see where this goes. Trey leaves her house but comes back because he left his wallet. When he gets there, someone's broken into Kendra's house and trashed her living space and he goes upstairs to find Kendra with a bat and the intruder long gone. A detective and Mike Ritter from secret service hunt down the culprit and we find out that it has something to do with an old case from when she was a DA. Basically, she flipped a murderer for intel on a drug cartel and sent him into witness protection. The intruder wanted justice for his brother but gets caught by the detective and Mike and the situation seems resolved.

Except it wasn't. The FBI bring in the killer but he's killed by a sniper as he's taken into custody, and the sniper turns out to be the guy's father. Turns out they were both working together and they blame Kendra for letting him go after murdering their family member and destroying their family. But after the home invasion, Kendra didn't feel safe to go back home so Emily goes to her house to get her things so she can stay at her place for the night. And the sniper ends up shooting Emily, but I'm assuming he thought it was Kendra.

Meanwhile, Hannah is off trying to find Valeria, AKA Damian's handler and the person responsible for his death. Valeria trashed Damian's apartment as well as Hannah's but didn't find whatever it was she was looking for so Hannah convinces Aaron to let her look at Damian's personal effects. She finds an old letter she sent him that said to meet at their spot so she goes there and finds a USB and a key hidden in the park bench. She basically finds a fail safe of sorts in the form of a video that Damian made if he were to die addressed to Hannah. He reveals that he has a daughter and he wants her to go to London to protect her. And she immediately calls to buy a plane ticket to London.

On the more political side of things, the new election is coming up and new candidates are starting to come out of the woodwork as Kirkman is still undecided about whether or not he's going to run for a second term. Meanwhile, he's trying to get a bill passed but both political parties pressure him into picking a side, being that Tom is a registered independent. In the end, he stands his ground and gets both parties to agree and to sign the bill.

Other than that, Kirkman goes after President Moss through another investigation involving Moss leaking sensitive information to the press and he gets Ethan West to facilitate all of it. West interviews everyone, Moss included, and he comes up with the conclusion that Tom got Agent Wells to look into Moss. In fact, he seems a little obsessed with the fact that Hannah's become Kirkman's "Swiss army knife" as he puts it.

But after all that, Moss goes on the offense saying that he did all of those things to protect Americans from Kirkman and his recklessness. And that none of the information he leaked wasn't sensitive information. In addition to that, he announces to the public that he's running for president again.

Kennedy (General Jake Fleming), Bayley Ungurain (Janet), Jalen Gomes (Local Boy), Linda Goranson (Old Woman), Elijah Sandiford (Teenager)
Summary: As President Kirkman continues to deal with the turmoil surrounding the hacker and congressional investigation, a natural disaster threatens the lives of two White House staffers. Meanwhile, Kirkman's closest allies are surprised when the president makes an announcement no one saw coming.

Tom and Mike go to visit Emily in the hospital. She has 13 stitches. Tom reports back to meet with his lawyers and West to hear the charges brought against him for the actions of Hanna. If he promises not to rerun they will drop the charges. He has until the end of the day to decide.

Lyor and Seth meet with officials from Taurasi. They talk to the governor about remaining as part of the US. Meanwhile, Aaron cannot get in touch with Hanna. She has gone off the grid.

Hanna visits Damian's daughter at private school. She enters Amy's room. The girl in there tells her Amy has left on a spring holiday. She doesn't know how to get in touch with her. Hanna accuses her of being Amy when the girl hits her in the face and runs.

A tsunami has been detected off the coast of Taurasi. Tom is brought to the situation room where he is told. Lyor and Seth are missing. There are 15k tourists that need help and 8k locals. Tom meets with some senators. They offer $3 million only, pointing out that Taurasi wanted to cut ties with the US.

Hanna calls Chuck for help finding Amy.

Emily has returned back to work. Kendra brings her the news that Lyor and Seth are still missing.

Hanna tracks down Amy. She runs but is cornered. Hanna proves she knew Damian and tells Amy she needs to protect her from someone who is looking for her. Amy goes with her.

Lyor informs the team he is safe but Seth is still missing.

Amy and Hanna are headed to Damian's storage. Meanwhile, Tom meets with the governor video to tell him he is trying to get more aid.

Hanna and Amy arrive at Damian's safe. It has been broken into. Amy tells her there was a list inside of names and she has memorized all of them.

Tom's son comes to see Emily. He got into Stanford but his dad doesn't know he applied. He doesn't know how to tell him.

Emily has gone behind Tom's back at an event and has asked for funding. Tom is angry.

Tom speaks with Emily. He tells her that he cannot have her talking to the Chief Justice. He is already in legal turmoil. Kendra comes in with bad news — he cannot get the aid he wanted.

Lyor finds Seth. He is okay. They both meet with Tom video along with the governor who must put on paper that he is a protector of the US. That way Tom can get him aid. He does so. Tom brings it to the senators. They cannot believe he is asking for $3 billion.

Tom and his son talk about Stanford. Tom has known for a while. He wants him to go. His son wants to stay with him and Penny, his sister. But Tom insists he go.

Hanna brings Amy back to her dorm. She wants Valera, the enemy, to know she is home. She wants her to come so she can take her out.

Emily gives Tom her resignation. She has made too many mistakes. Tom has a hard time accepting her letter, but does.

West arrives to see Tom. He tells him that he was given a job offer. He doesn't want to take it. It has made him realize that everyone around him is a schemer. But Tom isn't.

Valera shows up. They fight. Valera stabs Hanna in the leg. She chases after her. Hanna is forced to shoot her dead.

Tom tells the governor that aid is on the way. Meanwhile, Hanna takes Amy with her home. Seth tells Lyor he is glad that he is okay. Lyor gets awkward.

Tom arrives at his press conference. He addresses the nation. He announces he will run for re-election as an independent.

Hanna plugs in the zip drive she took from Valera after she shot her. Emily is seen in a video giving Valera something.

Originally aired: Friday June 07, 2019
Writer: Neal Baer
Director: Chris Grismer
Show Stars: Kiefer Sutherland (Tom Kirkman), Adan Canto (Aaron Shore), Italia Ricci (Emily Rhodes), Kal Penn (Seth Wright), Maggie Q (FBI Agent Hannah Wells)
Guest Stars: Mckenna Grace (Penny Kirkman), Lauren Holly (Lynn Harper), Anthony Edwards (Mars Harper), Christopher Jacot (Alan), Julie White (Lorraine Zimmer), Elena Tovar (Isabel Pardo), Angela Thompson (Protester for Change), Naomi Snieckus (DNC Chair), Jake Foy (Felix Silva), Benjamin Charles Watson (Dontae Evans), Jennifer Wigmore (Dianne Lewis), Kent Sheridan (Senator Carlin), Leanne Poirier Greenfield (Protester #1), Jim Pagiamtzis (Reporter), Andrew Di Rosa (Executive Assistant OIC)
Summary: Now running for office for the first time, Kirkman and his nascent campaign stumble out of the gate. Wells gets a critical reassignment.

One month after announcing that he would be seeking a second term — as an Independent — Kirkman found himself dealing with the fallout of a SOTU in which he got a bit hot, after someone in the crowd crowed that he was “illegitimate.” Kirkman’s sharply voiced message was simply one about draining the swamp, but opponent Moss and the media turned it into a question of his composure.

Still on Kirkman’s team are Seth Wright (as press sec) and Aaron Shore (NSA advisor), while D.C. journeyman Mars Harper has succeeded Emily as chief of staff and Aaron’s girlfriend Isobel has come on board as the director of social innovation. (Clumsily) on her way out is VP Eleanor Darby, who voices displeasure with both the president’s decision to run and the absence of her ideas from his SOTU speech. Worse, Darby won’t even stick around to help get the key votes needed for an infrastructure bill! The Royal Pains guy is also gone.

Since resigning, Emily has been in Florida tending to her ovarian cancer-battling mother. As such, she is quite surprised to come home one night and find Hannah lurking in the shadows. Hannah cues up the video of Emily surreptitiously meeting with Valeria, but Emily explains that she was simply back-channeling some information to Russia on behalf of POTUS. Hannah heads back to D.C. to be grilled by FBI brass about her activities, including the tapping of calls without warrants and killing someone on foreign soil. Shortly after she is asked to turn in her G-man badge, Hannah makes the acquaintance of CIA bigwig Diane Lewis, who invites her to join the agency and look into a bioweapon threat that, among other things we soon shall see, has left a field filled with dead cardinals.

Ready to brave his first campaign trail, Tom calls in veteran campaign manager, Lorraine Zimmer, for a meeting, and is quickly impressed by what he sees. Alas, Lorraine says she has no idea who Tom Kirkman is and she can’t sell a brand she doesn’t understand. So she goes to work for Moss again. Tom and Seth (and social media guru Dontae) head to Iowa to take some of the oxygen away from Moss, only to find that their event has been sabotaged by their rival. As they look to instead glom onto any other, well-attended event, Dontae points out the trending #TheSystemIsBroken hashtag he started, named for POTUS' infamous SOTU outburst. That leads them to a protest at a nearby abandoned mall, where Tom doffs his jacket and tie and speaks/listens to this crowd of disenfranchised Americans. That "man of the people" moment goes viral and impresses Lorraine enough to bring her to Team Kirkman. Now about her salary...

Other tidbits from the episode: After they collaborated nicely on an addendum to the infrastructure bill that would help Puerto Rico, Aaron asked Isobel to move in with him. Relieved that he wasn't proposing marriage, she said she will think about it.

Tom spoke with daughter Penny about the fact that he didn't check with her before announcing his running for election, and how he will need to travel more for the campaign. All told, the father/daughter scenes served to note that "Little P" isn't so little a girl anymore.

Seth begged Emily to come to D.C. and serve as the "Kirkman whisperer," given POTUS' recent rough patch. Later, after consulting Emily, Aaron and Seth on his chances of winning, and having sensed something was "off" without her around, Tom asked Emily to stick around. Seth meanwhile got promoted by Mars to communications director, and Dontae will now report to Seth.

Mars one night came home to find his wife Lynn passed out in the bedroom, after she took too many opioids.

Summary: A heated debate over child marriage roils Kirkman's staff. Opioid addiction hits home for Mars. A biohacker turns Wells onto a chilling new threat.

Aaron is uncomfortable when he's deemed the hottest latino politician. He's dating Isabel but haven't issues identifying with his heritage.

Mars has to deal with his wife's opioid addiction. She has an incident at a store and he checks her into rehab.

Kirkman is avoiding Super Pacs so he gets an endorsement from a Saudi official and finds out that the man's wife is only 14 years old. He causes a stir coming down against child marriage.

A saudi spokesperson comes to speak about their cultural differences and reminds him that Child brides are also an issue in the States.

Kirkman wants to establish a bill against that but he struggles in being able to do so without infringing on religious freedoms..

When it's time to propose his bill at a rally he backs down against Penny and Emily's wishes and under the advisement of Lorraine.

Emily doesn't trust Lorraine and wants to be part of the campaign.

Lorraine is dealing with another divorce with a young husband who wants all her money.

Isabel gets to speak to Kirkman about the child bride issue.

Seth finds out he has a college aged daughter from donating his sperm from back when he was in college. She reaches out to him.

Lorraine tells Aaron he should run on the ticket as VP.

Hannah is six months into her job as an analyst and wants out in the field. She notices some bioterror concerns.

She's finally taken off desk duty to investigate. She meets Eli a scientist and finds out even more about an avian virus that caused the dead birds and could be a deadly strain being formulated for a bio terror act.

They track down a colleague of his to look further into matters but he's the same guy who was locked into his lab and died. His lab is now scrubbed clean and he's gone.

Dontae tells Emily he didn't vote in the last election and he puts together something to show them why so many millennials didn't vote.

Summary: A political attack on Kirkman puts privacy and transgender rights in the spotlight. Aaron weighs a major decision. Wells and Eli track a bioterrorist.

Aaron grapples with whether or not he wants to be VP. Lorraine is still trying to convince him, and he's afraid he's being used just because he's Latino.

But when Tom doesn't mention it to him at all he starts realizing he wants it. He speaks to Tom about his concerns, and Tom reassures him that while he can't pretend like it isn't a factor, it's beyond that.

He also assures Aaron that if his heritage is brought up in any way that makes him feel uncomfortable, he'll nip it in the bud.

Aaron is not prepared for how invasive the vetting is..

News breaks about Tom's sister in law being transgender and it makes national news with both political sides coming hard on him for different reasons about this secret.

Tom reaches out to Sasha who is in Paris being harassed and he has her come to DC to not only help the campaign but more importantly get the reporters to leave her alone.

Sasha and Tom talk about his acceptance of transgender people and his understanding of it. It's still something he's learning to adjust to but he is willing and able to do the work to understand.

Sasha wants to stick around and be there for Penny who got her period for the first time and hadn't spoken to Tom about it even though the school called to inform them.

Isabel wants to take on Big Pharma to get them to reduce their prices for things like insulin for which they profit 100%

Seth meets his bio daughter for drinks.

Lorraine finds out that Moss has the alzheimers gene and wants to leak it because she feels the American people need to know and also as retaliation for Moss leaking things about Sasha.

Kirkman rejects it but the news leaks anyway and after suspecting it was Lorraine and her telling him it wasnt, Lorraine figures out it was Emily.

Mars goes to therapy with his wife. She blames him for everything and says he used her to get to her political figure father.

Later it's shown that Mars is having an affair.

Hannah and Eli go back to the lab and discover something they alerts them the room was scrubbed clean because of small pox. They head to get the vaccination.

Summary: Emotions run high after despicable fake news goes viral, Isabel makes waves with a controversial appeal, and Wells finds a clue pointing to conspiracy.

Someone suggested Kirkman had his wife killed and that she was a Russian spy. He doesn't want to dignify it with a response.

Emily's mom is getting sicker. Her cancer is spreading.

Hannah thinks the apartment complex was poisoned through the air system.

Isabel wants to propose pardons. One man is an anti government political activist in Puerto Rico whose words sparked an attack which killed people. It's a controversial choice no one wants to do.

Mars proposes a policy change that decriminalized drug addiction and provides them with help it cuts down on addiction.

Seth's rant against journalism about journalists having No ethics anymore gets him benched for the day.

Lorraine puts Aaron up to pressure isabel about the activist she wants to pardon. They fight and he implies he is the reason she is where she is and her work isn't as important.

Mars mistress Reena gives him an ultimatum. His wife wants to have sex when he gets home but he cannot perform.

Dontae didn't tell his new guy that he's HIV positive and never apologized. They have a conversation about stereotypes and being uninformed. They break up.

Penny looks into the death of her mother.

Emily's mom wants help with assisted suicide.

Kirmann flips the switch in the debate and comes out on top when his opponents rely on smear tactics.

Aaron is upset that Isabel didn't show up for him at the debate anyway despite their disagreement. Aaron and Emily comfort each other and then sleep together. Lorraine catches Emily leaving Aaron's room.

Hannah and Eli stake out where they think the male nurse Crawford will be since they also found him on footage at the apartment building where people were sick. They find him. Hannah shoots Crawford when he caught them going through his stuff, and he tries to shoot them. He claims it's bigger than it seems.

Aaron and Isabel make up. He apologizes but he doesn't say anything about cheating.

Hannah recognized Crawford's tattoo it's a white supremacist symbol for Heil Hitler.

Lorraine stirred things up. She's behind all the Alex rumors to stir up sympathy for Kirkman.

Summary: A stray Russian bomber jeopardizes Seattle, Mars crusades against a drug company, and an event from Aaron's childhood vexes Kirkman's campaign.

The marital situation has gotten out and Tom debates whether or not to stick things out with Aaron or let him and Emily go since she knew about it.

They get sidetracked when a Russian aircraft seems to have gone off like and is doomed to hit Seattle. Aaron has to come up with a solution to resolve everything without starting a war with Russia.

They have military intelligence to hack into the aircraft and redirect it. So they do so. Lorraine is annoyed when she cannot use this to win over voters because of it being a security issue.

Aaron gives an incredible speech that gets him back into Kirkman's good graces where he embraces his identity.

Isabel is proud of him and he tells her about sleeping with Emily. She leaves him.

Hannah investigates further when she realizes a south African white supremacist is connected to everything. When she looks into another lab, Momberg uses nerve gas on her and kills her. Then he blows up the building with Hannah in it.

Seth and Dontae take Sasha to a trans support group to encourage her to use her voice and combat the media attacks.

Emily's mom wants Emily to assist her in suicide.

Summary: Kirkman mobilizes a frantic hunt for the bioterrorist. Lorraine plays hardball and pushes the opioid epidemic into the campaign fray.

Detwiler is who Momberg called after he killed Hannah. He was also the FDA commissioner under Moss.

Kirkman speaks at the CIA ceremony honoring Hannah. He and all the agencies are determined to capture Momberg before he attacks.

Momberg norovirus wants to infect a water supply to get as many people as possible.

Eli friend from lab was killed but she did a thesis on nanorobotide and put smart dust on him to track him. They track him down but he releases all of his work online to ensure others can follow in his steps before taking a cyanide pill and killing himself.

Isabel stays in the office. Seth invites her to sleep on his couch. Since she broke up with Aaron.

Sasha offers support to Tom.

Lorraine wants Isabel and Emily to work together. Isabel lashes out at Emily for sleeping with Aaron.

Lynn is touched by Mars taking on the opioid crisis by ruining FlagKind the company that sold the drugs she got addicted to.

Eli source had someone come to him working for momberg. He didn't help but suspected that someone else was willing to.

Kirkman may have to invoke martial law because the governor of Texas had a press conference informing the public about the ongoing plot to potentially kill all of the people of color in the country. He doesn't want the news out until it's resolved.

Momberg took cyanide pill when they went to capture him.

Emily figured out Lorraine has a mole in the Moss camp.

Davis Eli's source lets him know the guy who came to his office looking for bioweapons is a Phil Dunton Moss' campaign spokesperson.

Summary: Trailing in the polls, Kirkman weighs forcing the FBI's hand over the bioterrorism plot. Emily struggles with her mother's final wishes.

Phil under FBI surveillance.

They don't know if Moss is involved. Phil won't say because he still wants Moss to win in Hope's of a pardon.

FBI is an independent contractor. Kirkman cannot interfere without looking like he is abusing his power. But he wants to know if Moss had a connection to the terrorist plot.

Mars speaks to Vargas at the FBI and prompts him to move quickly regarding an urgent matter. He reminds him that the FBI fkd up the investigation and if not for Hannah Houston would've been under attack. It cost her her life.

Isabel sleeps on Seth's couch at his home. He wants her to go on the campaign trail to help Kirkman win votes in Florida during the final leg because Kirkman is behind Moss. She tells him about Aaron sleeping with Isabel.

Feds raid Phil's house to arrest him.

Isabel agrees to go to Florida but she doesn't want anything to do with Aaron.

With the Phil arrest Lorraine wants to send Kirkman to Texas instead of New York to win over undecided votes who may want to jump ship after the thwarted terrorist attack and Moss' potential connection to it.

Seth arranges to meet Stephanie's mother.

Carrie refuses pills.

Eli discovers the bio agent wasn't meant to kill people of color but to sterilize them. Genetically sequenced to sterilize minorities and change the demographic.

Moss denies knowing anything about Phil or being close to him.

Lorraine is annoyed Tom brought Sasha with him to Texas because it may cost him votes. Tom tells Sasha he cannot have her introduce him.

Isabel's parents are coming to meet Aaron in Florida. She hasn't told them about the breakup and it gives Aaron hope.

Detwiler has been asked to resign from boards after the scandal.

Mars and Lynn are in a good place.

Emily says goodbye to her mom and helps her die.

Seth meets Riya. They hit it off. She wants connections to get Stephanie into Harvard.

Emily's mother dies. She calls the ambulance and they work on her at the hospital until Emily answers that her mother has a DNR.

Things go well with Isabel's parents. Mars goes to taunt Detwiler. The FBI barges in to arrest him. They flipped Phil and he admitted Detwiler funded the whole thing.

Kirkman's speech goes over well in Houston but Penny is upset he didn't let Sasha introduce him.

Dontae finds out Lorraine's mole is Myles and he gives her a video she wants to leak to the press.

Dontae finds out about the Pegasus software and wants Emily to investigate.

Leaked video footage shows Moss stirring up the sentiment that white people will be the minority and they don't want that. It basically means he fell in line with the genetic genocide.

Emily realizes Lorraine did use Pegasus Israeli spyware to tap into Moss's phone.
