Summary: Sandy postpones meeting up with an old friend in order to get closer to a new student. Norman struggles in his home life.

Sandy Kominsky began his class by giving a big speech about what acting means. He explained that every actor is really playing God by the way they create everything they do in a scene. He convinced his students to embrace their acting creations and love them the same way that God loves His creations. Sandy went to lunch with his friend and agent, Norman Newlander. Sandy was informed that he didn't get offered a role in some upcoming network sitcom. But Norman dismissed network sitcoms as pointless drivel and stated that Sandy should be happy he didn't get the part.

The next night at acting class, Sandy announced that he had canceled the Tuesday night class which focused on sitcom acting. Sandy called up one of his new students, Theresa, and asked her to deliver a monologue she had been working on. She had been working on the eulogy from Steel Magnolias. He then asked Theresa to put her own spin on the eulogy. Sandy asked his students for their opinions on Theresa's performance. One of the other students, Lisa, pointed out the variance in emotion between the two performances. Sandy and Lisa went out to dinner and she asked him about other famous actors that he had coached. Lisa was asked why she was pursuing acting. She revealed that she minored in theater at college and wanted to return to those happy days of her life. Lisa began to cry when she started talking about her failed marriage.

The next day, Sandy's daughter, Mindy, was disappointed that Sandy had not gone to visit Norman's wife, Irene, whom was dying of cancer. Sandy was also accused of being afraid of death, but he stated that he was looking forward to the great adventure of the afterlife. Sandy went to Norman's house to visit Ilene. She was very happy to see Sandy and loved the flowers he had brought.

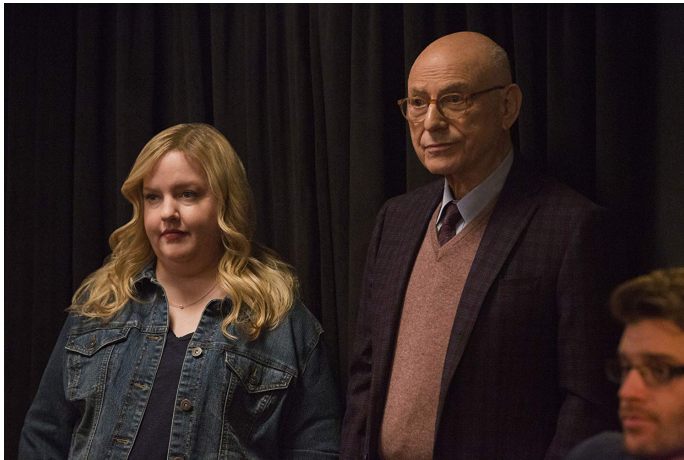

Ilene asked Sandy to watch over Norman when she died. She also asked to see Lisa, as she wanted to see if she was a good match for Sandy. At his class, Sandy led his students through a relaxation exercise. Lisa asked Sandy out on a date and he accepted. Later that night, Sandy went to Lisa's house and met her son, Matthew. During the ride to dinner, Mindy called and informed Sandy that Ilene had been rushed to the hospital. Sandy took Lisa along to the hospital to meet Ilene. Sandy arrived at the hospital and learned that Ilene had died and he attempted to comfort Norman.

Summary: Sandy helps Norman organize an event with complicated arrangements and invites Lisa on an unusual date. Norman is a hit with Sandy's class.

Sandy and Norman returned to Norman's home and they immediately began to look through all of the old pictures of Ilene. Mindy called and tried to convince Sandy to spend the night with Norman, but Sandy resisted doing so. Sandy asked Norman to call his daughter, Phoebe, but Norman was angry over Phoebe not visiting her mother the whole time she was sick. Norman went to bed and Sandy left, but Norman convinced Sandy to stay for the night. During the night, Norman woke Sandy up and wanted to begin planning Ilene's funeral. Norman gave Sandy Ilene's written instructions for her funeral.

However, Sandy quickly rejected some of the more absurd requests.

Sandy went and taught his class and brought Norman along with him. Sandy began to give a monologue about his feelings about Ilene's death. Norman overheard the monologue and stormed out onto stage and began to explain his feelings to class. The class erupted into applause at Norman's bravery. Later that day, the pair went to pick out a coffin, Norman was upset at the prices of the pre-built coffins. Norman insisted on a custom built coffin, but he got angry over the name, Woody, of the salesman. Sandy took Norman aside and tried to calm him down. He decided to send Norman to the car while Sandy finished up the arrangements. The next day, some of Sandy's students performed a scene from the laugh-free comedy they had written.

Lisa sought out Sandy after class and the pair discussed the scene that had been performed. They discussed the impending funeral and the arrangements that had been made. Sandy invited Lisa to come to the funeral with him and she accepted. At the funeral everyone enjoyed the musical stylings of Patti LaBelle and a comedic routine by Jay Leno. Last but not least, a drag queen Barbra Streisand look-alike performed. Sandy recounted the story of how he and Ilene first met. He then followed it up with how he introduced Ilene to Norman.

Sandy decided to look after Norman for the remainder of their lives. Finally, Norman went up to give his eulogy to his wife. Norman, understandably broke down into tears rather quickly, but managed to finish his heartfelt speech. As he was wrapping up, his daughter, Phoebe, arrived and interrupted the proceedings by tripping over her luggage. Lisa expressed her gratitude to Sandy for bringing her to the funeral.

Summary: While Sandy contends with a worsening prostate problem and conflict between his students, Norman deals with his troubled daughter, Phoebe.

During the dinner after Ilene's funeral, Norman managed to upset a rabbi who had come to the service. Norman also expressed his disdain that Sandy invited Phoebe to the funeral. Lisa and Mindy recalled when Phoebe used to babysit Mindy and they decided that Phoebe would not be fit to raise children of her own. Sandy went to use the restroom and Norman expressed concern at the frequency with which Sandy was going. Sandy dismissed his concerns, until he realized the small amount of urine that he was actually producing. Phoebe decided to give a toast to her mother, but she quickly made an insensitive remark about Ilene's charitable causes.

Sandy returned to the service and Mindy decided to talk with Lisa about her concerns over her father's prostate. Sandy found the conversation too uncomfortable and left the pair alone. Meanwhile, Norman was approached by an attendee, Diane, who needed her coat so that she could leave. As it turned out, Phoebe had passed out drunk on top of the coat pile and Norman was unable to retrieve the coat, so he offered to buy Diane a new one. Sandy returned Lisa to her home and went home to try and rest. Before he could leave, Sandy was struck with the urge to urinate again and had to go in Lisa's garden. At class the next day, one of Sandy's students, Jude had decided to give a racially tinged monologue from a black character. Most of the students found the monologue to be racist as it was being performed by a white student, but Sandy refused to weigh in.

Later that day, Sandy went to Norman's house because his maid had called Sandy and said Norman appeared to be hallucinating. Sandy asked Norman if he had a urologist that he preferred and it was revealed that Norman had already given the information to Mindy and Sandy had an appointment scheduled for later that day. At the urologist's office, Sandy attempted to flirt with the receptionist, but was quickly rejected. Sandy attempted to make conversation with the other men in the waiting room, but he was quickly educated on the etiquette of waiting room conversation.

Sandy was given a prostate exam and his doctor learned that Sandy had an enlarged prostate. Back at Norman's house, he found out that Phoebe had stolen some of her mother's painkillers. Norman grilled Phoebe about her plans for the future, and she expressed a desire to stay with Norman for a while. The next day, Norman went to the dry cleaner and picked up some of his shirts, it turned out that the dry cleaner still had one of Ilene's dresses from awhile ago, which caused Norman to break down into tears.

Summary: Sandy and Norman turn to each other for support as Sandy waits for his test results and tension between Norman and Phoebe ramps up.

After class, Lisa confronted Sandy about the incident where he urinated on her bushes. She made certain that Sandy was receiving treatment for his apparent prostate issues. Sandy asked Lisa out for lunch, but Lisa had already had plans with someone else. Norman returned home and hung up Ilene's dress, Phoebe tried to convince Norman to do something with Ilene's expensive wardrobe. Mindy decided to confide in Lane about Sandy's prostate trouble. At the grocery store, Sandy called the urologist and asked about his test results, but they hadn't come in yet. Norman observed how similar Sandy's situation was to Schrödinger's cat. Norman asked the butcher for his finest ham.

During the car ride back to Norman's house, the pair discussed how similar their health situations were to the theory of entropic decay. Norman also talked about how Kegel exercises could help tighten up their prostates. The pair attempted it, but it didn't seem to help them in any noticeable way. Back at Norman's house, the pair discussed happy memories of their marriages until they noticed Phoebe floating facedown in the pool. Phoebe was attempting to relax and was not dead as they had feared. That night, at class, Lane asked about Sandy's condition and offered some of his alternative medicinal methods. Sandy called Lisa and asked if she would like to go out for dinner that night, but Lisa refused his offer once again.

Later that night, Sandy asked Norman if he wanted to join him for a night out. Sadly, it was too late in the evening for Norman as he was getting ready to go to bed. Sandy went to the local bar and was ignored by the both the bartender and the other patrons. He managed to find an older man who offered him some advice on how to pick up the women at the bar. Sandy went to the restroom and made note of how powerful the other men's urine streams were and decided to compliment them on their healthy prostates.

Sandy left the bar as he realized he didn't belong there. Back at Norman's, Norman noticed that Phoebe had stolen one of her mother's purses and Norman accused her of stealing her mother's items in order to sell them for drugs. Norman kicked Phoebe out of the house and ordered her to never come back. Sandy went home and tried to find some pornography that he was interested in, Norman quickly called and they discussed the situation with Phoebe.

Sandy was awoken in the morning by a phone call from his urologist. Sandy was told that he did not have terminal cancer, but he did have benign cancer. Norman then called and expressed concern over his decision to kick out Phoebe. Sandy began to become concerned when Norman accidentally expressed his belief that Ilene was still conversing with him. It was suggested to Norman that he go back to work as it had been two years since he had been in the office. Sandy went to the park and began to compare his life to that of all of the people he observed. Mindy called and reminded Sandy that he had a class beginning soon. However, he asked Mindy to cover the class for him.

Norman walked into his office building, and was quickly greeted by every person who worked there. Norman called for a meeting with all of his senior agents to begin as soon as possible. At class, Mindy was performing her one woman show about her father and step-mother. The students were deeply intrigued by Mindy's performance. Sandy went to Lisa's house and told her about the diagnosis from the urologist. He then tried to convince Lisa to take their relationship to the next level. Lisa was slightly concerned about Sandy's motivations, so she refused to begin this stage of their relationship immediately.

Norman kicked off the meeting by thanking everyone for their kind condolence emails. Back at Lisa's house, Lisa had decided to have sex with Sandy and the encounter was successful for both parties involved. Sandy recited every medicinal product he was on as Lisa was concerned that he was using Viagra. Back at the meeting, Norman tasked his agents to find Sandy a role, but they were saddened by this assignment. One of the clients, Elliott Gould, was meeting with Norman and pitched his newest script, One Foot In The Grave. The script was an action film very similar to Taken, except it took place at Disneyland. Sandy arrived and Norman told him that he had landed Sandy a leading role in a commercial. Sandy shot the commercial that was advertising a reverse mortgage, but he struggled with delivering the lines. He expressed his concerns over the concept of a reverse mortgage. Norman called and told Sandy that Phoebe had overdosed and was in the hospital. Sandy quit the commercial and went to be with Norman.

Norman and Sandy were in the car driving Phoebe to a rehab center on the south side of Anaheim. They discussed the last time Phoebe had been placed in rehab. She had strongly disliked that place. Phoebe had been to seven different rehab centers before, but she couldn't recall which one she liked the most. The trio stopped at a diner and witnessed a father having a fun time with his young daughter. Mindy called and told Sandy that she had just received a letter from the IRS which stated that Sandy owed three years worth of taxes. Mindy was concerned that they did not have enough money to cover the taxes. They finally arrived at rehab and Phoebe checked in as Phoebe Newlander, which came as a surprise to Norman. Phoebe promised Norman that she would get drug-free and become a daughter that Norman could be proud of.

Sandy and Norman left the rehab center and went to find a hotel to stay in for the night. The pair discussed the recent suicidal thoughts that Norman had been dealing with. Sandy tried to convince Norman that he had a lot of things to live for, but he was unable to convince him. However, Sandy was finally able to tell Norman that he was dependent upon him for his own well-being. Norman assured Sandy that he would not commit suicide. The pair arrived at combination hotel/casino. They rented one room for the night and went for a nice dinner of steak and red wine. That night, Sandy had a nightmare about his rough financial situation and awoke to find that Norman had left their hotel room. Sandy ran down to the casino to try and locate Norman and found him at the bar.

The next day, Sandy called Lisa and explained the situation. Lisa was angry that Sandy hadn't called in a week and she hung up on him. The pair started to leave the hotel, but Sandy decided to try out one of the slot machines in the hopes of winning enough money to pay off his tax debt. Sandy promptly lost and they left. On the trip back to Los Angeles, Sandy revealed that Lisa had just broken up with him and Norman tried to offer some relationship advice. Norman complimented Sandy's car and tried to convince Sandy to re-enact the ending of Thelma and Louise, but Sandy quickly convinced him otherwise.

Norman was dropped off back at home by Sandy and wished Sandy good luck in prison. Sandy went to his classroom and found Mindy packing up her possessions and preparing to leave. Mindy was angry at Sandy's poor handling of his finances. Back at his house, Norman tried to convince himself to give Sandy the money.

Norman finally decided to give Sandy the money with no strings attached. He hoped that it would drive Sandy crazy that he would be unable to pay back Norman. Sandy went to the IRS office and tried to convince the tax inspector that he was unable to pay his taxes due to the death of his accountant. The inspector informed Sandy that if he sold the building he teaches from that the debt would be paid off. Sandy received a phone call from Norman and learned that he was being gifted the money by Norman. The pair went to lunch and Sandy refused to take Norman's money, since he wouldn't be allowed to pay back Norman. Sandy went back to his classroom and called Lisa.
