Summary:	When a hospital trustee dies on Dr. Hank Lawson's watch, he is shunned by the medical community. Later, at a party in the Hamptons, he saves the life of a guest and stumbles upon a new career as an on call doctor for high society.

The episode opens with Dr. Hank Lawson playing basketball with some friends on his day off. A young man collapses on the court and Hank improvises a way to immobilize him using available sporting equipment, before rushing him to the emergency room. While treating the young man at the hospital, another patient arrives requiring his attention. The new patient is an older, influential 'friend' of the hospital, and one of the hospital administrators insists that he treat him immediately. Hank stabilizes the older man, and over the objections of the administrator, returns to the younger man's case, who is not responding to the attentions of the younger, inexperienced doctor.

Later after work, Hank meets his fiancée for dinner and a romantic evening. The telephone interrupts them and he is called to a board review after the older patient dies. The hospital fires Hank and he sinks into a depression with no prospects for employment with the black mark on his record. Even his fiancée blames him for letting the hospital trustee die, and asks to postpone the wedding. Hank is angry and recommends they call off the wedding. Evan comes by and insists that Hank needs fresh air, and they should go to the Hamptons to a party he has the inside scoop on.

The party happens to be at Boris Kuester von Jurgens-Ratenicz's estate. Evan pretends to be a German relative of Boris' and manages to gain them entrance to the party. While partying, Hank hears about a young lady, April, who has collapsed. The resident concierge doctor assumes she has had a drug overdose and prepares to treat her when Hank interferes. He notices other symptoms and talks to her date which leads him to believe she has ingested insecticides. At his host Boris' insistence, 911 is not called and Hank uses medical supplies available to him to revive the young lady. Boris wants to know who Hank is and Hank tells him his story. Boris offers him payment and his guest cottage for the summer, but Hank refuses both and insists he is only there for the weekend. While Hank is waiting for his car to be brought around, he meets an attractive young woman named Jill, who happens to drive the same make of car as Hank. Hank and Evan start driving away when they discover a briefcase in the back seat of Hank's car with a solid bar of gold inside as payment from Boris.

The next morning, Hank receives a phone call about an emergency situation. When he arrives at the address, he is met by a teenager named Tucker Bryant, who is standing in front of a wrecked Ferrari with blood on his shirt. The blood is not his however, but belongs to his girlfriend Libby. Libby turns out to be quite the hypochondriac, and spends time on the Internet looking for diseases that match the symptoms she thinks she has. After Hank treats Libby for her scrapes suffered in the car crash, Tucker collapses. Tucker turns out to be a hemophiliac, and the accident has caused his heart to be traumatized, causing it to not circulate blood to his brain. Hank again uses available supplies to drain the area around the heart of excess blood allowing his heart to start beating normally again. Once Tucker is resuscitated, he is evacuated by helicopter to a major hospital in New York City.

While Hank is out, April comes by the hotel to return his jacket and thank him for saving her life. She tells Evan that she thinks she is in love. While Evan tries to put the move on April, who is waiting for Hank to return, another young lady knocks on the door looking for Hank, an attractive young Indian woman named Divya, who is applying for a job as a physician assistant.

While interviewing Divya, who tells him he can make quite a bit of money as a concierge doctor to the rich, her receives yet another emergency call from a Ms. Newberg. Divya offers to drive, saying she has some things that might come in handy. When they arrive at the address provided, they find themselves at Hamptons Heritage hospital. Ms. Newberg is inside at general admitting trying to get treatment. The hospital staff insists she is at the end of the line, not in any immediate danger. Hank asks her what her problem is and she says she has a flat tire. Hank is puzzled by this until she opens her blouse to show him a deflated breast implant.

Ms. Newberg insists that Hank fix her problem, but he demurs, insisting that he not affiliated with the hospital and does not have the equipment to deal with it. Divya chimes in that she can get whatever equipment he needs, and Ms. Newberg says she will pay him whatever it takes, but Hank starts to walk away. Just then, Jill Casey arrives, a hospital administrator that he met at Boris' party. She says the hospital has no problem with him treating Ms. Newberg, as she is a thorn in their side. Hank and Divya discuss a solution for Ms. Newberg, but the only quick solution they can think of is to drain the other implant to match the damaged one, until they can be redone properly.

Evan proposes that he is the CFO of HankMed, and Divya wants to discuss her title, but Hank is adamant that he is not cut out to be a concierge doctor. As he thinks about his future, he receives a visit from Jill. Jill talks about how there are regular people in the Hamptons that need help too. She also reveals that she knows the details about what happened at his old job and she sides with Hank, telling him that he did nothing wrong and the death of the older patient was just bad luck. Hank is smitten with her and decides to stay. After Boris tells him the offer still stands, he finds out that the guest cottage that Boris offered him would be vacant because the previous concierge doctor, Dr. Silver, is being kicked out.

There Will Be Food

Guest Stars: Gillian Jacobs (Tess Premoli), Andrew McCarthy (Marshall Bryant), Christina Gausas (Sheila Montgomery), Michael Mulheren (Jim Harper), Victor Cruz (Fisherman), Elijah Moreland (Hampton's Renter), Orlando McDonald (The Server), Patrick Boll (Seersucker Man)
Production Code: RP103
Summary: A ballerina loses consciousness after Evan feeds her hotdogs and other foods she had to give up to maintain her dancer's physique; vulnerable Jill exposes some of her feelings to Hank after funding for her free clinic falls through.

The episode opens with Evan nagging Hank about his sloppiness. Hank gets a call from Jill, who has a friend who needs treated but is too proud to ask. The house call makes him late for his scheduled appointment with Tucker to remove his stitches. Tucker and Libby convince Hank to attend a retirement party as a way to drum up business.

The retirement party is actually for a famous ballerina, Tess, who gave a performance at the party, moments after she awakened from being unconsciousness on the floor. Evan flirts with Tess, and takes her away from the party to eat some junk food that she has been craving for years. After sampling a hot dog, Tess collapses. At the party, Jill has an encounter with one of the prospective benefactors for her free clinic, who backs out of his commitment. Jill is depressed that her clinic is dead before it ever got started.

Hank examines Tess, but he cannot explain the fainting spells, other than maybe not getting proper food and rest. The next day, Tess comes to Hank's home and confesses that she is on various medications. Hank recommends she agree to a full blood workup for proper diagnosis. Later, Hank makes a call on Jim Harper, who he suspects has Hepatitis C. However, Mr. Harper is confrontational, and wants nothing to do with doctors. Hank got Mr. Harper's name by reading one of the letters from Jill's free clinic project. Jill is furious at Hank at this breach of privacy. Hank tries to convince her that sometimes you have to break the rules to get the job done, but she stalks off.

Hank arrives at the Bryant home, meeting Tucker's father for the first time. Hank takes the opportunity to criticize Mr. Bryant fathering skills. Mr. Tucker responds by firing Hank. Jill brings Hank some excess medication as an apology. Hank takes the medicine to Mr. Harper and convinces him to accept treatment. Evan cooks a fancy meal for Tess, but she collapses again, and Hank has to extract some food caught in her esophagus.

After Tess recovers, she confesses she has had this type of reaction to food before. Hank decides to try an experiment, and have Tess connected to a heart monitor while she samples various foods. Hank diagnoses a very rare condition where certain foods affect her heart. She will need a pacemaker, but should be fine.

Hank and Jill have dinner on the beach. Jill tells Hank that she hasn't given up on the free clinic. Hank tells her that in the meantime, if there are any needy patients that need help, give him a call.

Strategic Planning

Season 1
Episode Number: 3
Season Episode: 3

Originally aired: Thursday June 18, 2009
Writer: Andrew Lenchewski

Show Stars: Jill Flint (Jill Casey), Paulo Costanzo (Evan Lawson), Mark Feuerstein (Hank Lawson), Reshma Shetty (Divya Katdare)
Recurring Role: Campbell Scott (Boris Kuester von Jurgens-Ratenicz), Dieter Riesle (Dieter)
Guest Stars: Patricia Mauceri (Benny's Mom), Margaret Colin (Lucy Everett), Dreama Walker (Melody Everett), Guillermo Díaz (Benny), Kerry Bishe (Emma), Christine Ebersole (Ms. Newberg), Julissa Bermudez (Maxine), Sharon Washington (Nancy), Kether Donohue (Ali), Aaron Dean Eisenberg (Kendrick Everett), Kathleen McElfresh (Family Aide)
Production Code: RP102
Summary: The son of a senator turns ill and his mother doesn't want him sent to a proper hospital for privacy reasons. Meanwhile, Evan attempts to recruit more clients.

Hank and Evan jogging along the beach. Evan is trying to convince Hank that more aggressive marketing is needed for "Hank Med." Hank is content with the word-of-mouth approach. To prove his point using a "flirtation tactic," Evan approaches pack of dogs under the control of a professional dog walker named Benny. Evan's plan fails, and one of the dogs bites Benny in the hand. Hank provides first aid and advises Benny to seek medical attention.

While Hank and Evan are returning from their jog, two deer cross their path and disappear into the woods. Hank then receives a phone call from a wealthy U.S. Senator's wife, Lucy Everett. She wants Hank to do a complete physical exam on her son, Kendrick, who is headed to Notre Dame to play football. Lucy tells Hank the physical must be kept confidential and away from any hospital. She has outfitted a room in her home with the necessary medical equipment. Hank and Divya perform the exam and Kendrick is given a clean bill of health.

Hank receives a call from Benny. He never went to the hospital and his hand has become infected. The treatment involves drainage of the wound by a skilled hand surgeon so as not to damage any nerves, arteries, or tendons. Hank takes Benny to the emergency room and with Hank's help, Benny is immediately admitted.

Back at the Everett home, Kendrick is practicing football when he experiences blurred vision. Hank and Divya arrive to find Kendrick with additional symptoms that indicate a major neurological problem. Hank believes that Kendrick should be taken to a hospital but his mother opposes this idea. She tells Hank to diagnosis the problem without involving any sort of publicity. Hank needs a portable MRI machine which Divya quickly locates.

The mobile MRI belongs to the hospital where Jill is the administrator. Hank must request use of the machine but can't give Jill any information about where it is going and what it will be used for. She loans Hank the MRI machine but is not happy with Hank for imposing on her clout at the hospital.

The portable MRI is taken to the Everett residence where it is used to aid Hank in a diagnosis of Kendrick's illness. The results of the MRI are negative and so is a spinal tap. His condition worsens when he goes into respiratory arrest.

Meanwhile, Evan pushes ahead with his marketing strategy. He approaches Ms. Newberg, Hank's former "flat tire" patient, with a proposal for 24/7 medical access. She says she will consider it and then introduces Evan to her granddaughter Emma. Evan invites her to a reception at Boris' mansion. Two other young ladies are at the party and they all end up in a hot tub. However, the hot tub was not properly disinfected and all the participants end up with a severe rash.

At the Everett household, Hank and Divya are perplexed as to what could be causing Kendrick's illness and rapid deterioration. As it happens, Hank remembers a conversation he had with Melody, Kendrick's sister. While she and Kendrick were playing football, she tackled him and he hit his head on the grass. Recalling the two deer he saw after his jog, Hank believes he knows what is causing the teenager's failure to respond. An exam of Kendrick's ear canal reveals the source, a deer tick. It had attached itself inside the ear and injected a neurotoxin, present in the tick's saliva. The substance accounted for Kendrick's neurological deficit and once the tick was removed, he quickly recovered.

On leaving the Everett place, Hank and Divya notice that Evan has been trying to reach them concerning his and the young ladies' rash. After viewing the rash via cell phone, Hank makes the diagnosis of hot tub folliculitis and Divya tells Evan to apply a towel soaked with vinegar, a common remedy. Evan is distressed about how he will appear to his guests. However, this doesn't stop him from pushing his strategic marketing plan. Evan tells Hank that he already contracted with a client, Ms. Newberg. Hank's skepticism appears to be overcome when he sees the retainer fee Ms. Newberg is willing to pay.

Hank visits Benny who's recovery is going well. Jill invites Hank for dinner in the hospital dining room. Before they can finish, Jill is called away.

In the closing scene, Hank runs into Boris who inquires about the Everett's. Hank sticks to his confidentiality pledge but thanks Boris for the referral. Boris tells Hank he has big plans for him.

Summary:	On the day that Hank had previously planned to get married he spends time with Jill. Meanwhile, a Tuberculosis scare at a high-end Italian restaurant leads to a mysterious illness for the head chef, and Evan and Divya learn to work together.

At a restaurant, Allison, the owner, experiences temporary dizziness and disorientation. When HankMed arrives to perform required TB tests on the restaurant personnel, Allison takes Hank aside and tells him about the issue. He recommends a full physical and some diagnostic tests. Even though the restaurant takes all of her time, he badgers her until she agrees.

Divya does the TB test followup at the restaurant since Hank wanted a day off for himself. When she asks for Valentina, she discovers she is missing. Allison experiences another mysterious medical attack while meeting a lover in the refrigerator. When she comes out into the restaurant, Hank is there with Jill waiting on a table for lunch. Hank tries to talk to her but she does not know him. Hank thinks Allison has had a stroke. Back at Boris' estate, Evan is practicing his golf game when he notices a truck arriving with some type of chamber on a trailer.

When Allison arrives at the hospital, Hank describes the symptoms to the on call emergency room doctor, who takes over since Hank has no hospital privileges. Evan snoops inside a building where the chamber was delivered and discovers a large aquarium with a shark in it. Divya tracks down Valentina at a suburban home, and Evan arrives to translate with his spotty Italian. Allison's lover arrives at the hospital and gives Hank a time line for when Allison's stroke occurred. When Hank and Jill go to Allison's room to get her started on medication, they discover she has left the hospital.

Evan's translation skills proves to be poor, especially since Valentina is very nervous and worried about losing her job. Divya has a hunch and checks her upper arm and notices what appears to be a vaccination. She decides to take a chest x-ray and hauls a portable x-ray machine into the house, verifying that Valentina is not infected. Hank and Jill find Allison at the restaurant, in the walk in refrigerator where the stroke occurred.

Hank scrounges supplies to construct a way to raise Allison's core body temperature at the restaurant. Even though more than 3 hour from the time of the stroke has passed before they found her, Hank decided to give her the medication anyway, reasoning that her reduced body temperature had slowed her metabolism and giving them more time.

Back at Boris's estate, Evan arrives home to find Boris waiting for him. Boris asks if his privacy has been violated. After a time, Evan finally understands and acknowledges that it has not. Allison's memory returns, indicating the medication was working.

Hank and Jill are picnicking on the beach. They start talking about each others past relationships. They decide to take things slow.

No Man is an Island

Summary: A pregnant woman wants Hank to stay on her family's private island to deliver her baby. Meanwhile, Jill tries to call Hank, but is unable to as the island has no coverage.

Hank and Jill are having a romantic moment when they are interrupted by Evan, who has landed a new client. Rob Grant and his very pregnant wife want Hank to join them for a weekend on their family island. Unfortunately for Evan, the family only wants Hank, until Evan convinces them he can be a nanny for their two younger children. Even though she is due in three weeks, Claire surprises Hank by telling him she wants him to deliver her baby on the island this weekend.

At the island, Hank and Evan discover only a one person staff, and Claire insists on confiscating all technology devices, trying to get the family to interact. Evan convinces Arlo to go for a ride in the truck with he and Will, the caretaker, but the truck crashes and Will has a compound leg fracture. At the hospital, Jill is under pressure to replace a retiring ER physician, and her first choice Hank, is undecided. Jill texts Hank for a rendezvous, but Divya shows up, since she is covering Hank's calls. Divya discovers Hank was offered a job at the hospital.

Evan tries bonding with Arlo, by getting his Nintendo reinstated and learns why Arlo is so morose and remote. Will takes a turn for the worse after he takes a blood thinner that he forgot to tell Hank about. Will needs a transfusion, so Hank tests everyone for compatibility. Arlo turns out to be the only one, and he wants to volunteer to do something right, since he is convinced he always screws things up. The transfusion works, but Hank still needs to relieve the pressure on the brain, so he uses a drill to make a hole in Will's head.

Evan revives the satellite phone that was damaged in the truck crash and calls for a Medivac chopper for Will. Hank decides to turn down the ER job. Jill is disappointed, but understands his reasons.

Show Stars: Reshma Shetty (Divya Katdare), Paulo Costanzo (Evan Lawson), Jill Flint (Jill Casey), Mark Feuerstein (Hank Lawson)
Recurring Role: Ezra Miller (Tucker Bryant), Meredith Hagner (Libby)
Guest Stars: Arden Myrin (Bonnie Day), Christine Ebersole (Ms. Newberg), Tijuana Ricks (Carrie), Brian Berrebbi (Bruce), Charles E. Gerber (Rabbi), John C. Vennema (Dr. Adams), Olga Merediz (Esperanza), Ato Essandoh (Antwon), Patricia Hodges (Mira)
Production Code: RP106
Summary: Hank finds himself needing to quarantine the guests from a party and considers making a call to the County Health to announce a possible outbreak. Elsewhere, Evan makes some interesting facts concerning Divya's personal life, and Jill wants to keep her relationship with Hank under wraps.

The episode opens with Hank and Jill in bed after a romantic night together. As Hank is deciding on breakfast, Tucker shows up wanting to talk, thinking his girlfriend Libby is pregnant and cheating on him. Ms. Newberg calls, requesting Hank come to check on her maid Esperanza, who is coughing and has symptoms of pneumonia. Hank treats Esperanza and says he will followup the next day. Ms. Newberg invites Hank to her Bark-mitzvah party for her dog.

At breakfast the next day, Hank is called away again by Ms. Newberg, who is concerned for Antwon, her decorator. Hank diagnoses Antwon with pneumonia, the same as Esperanza. After Hank leaves, Jill is confronted by Dr. Adams, an administrator with the hospital, warning her that she needs to not mix her personal and professional lives. Divya is called to treat Ms. Day, who turns out to be the person hired by Divya's mother to plan Divya's engagement party. Afterward, Divya takes Evan to the car dealership recommended by Tucker, where he is shocked by the prices. Evan badgers Divya about her wedding until he discovers that her marriage is arranged, and she is not real excited about it. At the Bark-mitzvah party, Ms. Newberg collapses.

Hank diagnoses Ms. Newberg with the same pneumonia as Esperanza and Antwon. Tucker takes Evan's advice and snoops through Libby's purse, where he finds birth control pills. Hank and Jill discuss their relationship, and Jill wants to keep it private. Hank is then called when Esperanza collapses. Hank finds out that Divya diagnosed Ms. Lay with pneumonia also. Hank talks with Antwon who reveals he was recently in China, so Hank decides to quarantine everyone at the party in case all the patients have SAARs.

Hank and Jill disagree about how to handle the infection. Jill decides to call County Health, while Hank tries to diagnose the infection. The party guests rebel and try to leave just as the police and County Health teams arrive to enforce the quarantine. Hank discovers Ms. Newberg's dog is also sick, and theorizes he is patient zero. He convinces Ms. Newberg to let him operate on the dog to find the underlying cause.

Hank gets some sample fluid from the dog, but he needs a microscope which they don't have. Hank manufacture's one from a jeweler's loupe and other household items. He discovers that the problem is not viral, but bacterial, and can be treated. Tucker and Libby make up, after Evan talks with Libby. Jill and Hank make up, and Jill decides not to worry about what people think about their relationship. Ms. Newberg gives Hank a car for saving her dog's life, and Hank gives the car to Evan.

Summary: Hank helps out with victims from a car accident who have injuries which are not apparent. Elsewhere, childhood pal returns to the Hamptons after receiving a job offer from Boris. Also, Divya's examines her relationship a little closer with her fiance after he comes for a visit.

The episode begins with Hank giving Boris a physical checkup. Hank declares he is as fit as a 25 year old. Afterward at the beach, Jill introduces Hank and Evan to her friend Katie, who is in town to meet with Boris about funding for her research. Divya gets in an accident when a woman drives her moped in front of her. Divya calls Hank to treat the woman, Sofia. Later while relaxing, Hank gets a call from Boris. Hank arrives to find Katie with a laceration on her leg, apparently from a shark. Katie claims to have been having a late night swim, and Boris says he will notify the authorities about the apparent shark attack.

When Hank returns home, Evan reveals that Boris has a shark in his basement, a secret he was supposed to keep. Hank confronts Boris about the shark, and Boris tells him it is there for research. Divya meets her betrothed, Raj who is in town for work. They talk about their upcoming wedding, and agree they cannot postpone it again. Evan meets with Sofia's husband Javier, who refuses to pay his bill, saying he was overcharged. Divya steps in and tells him it is on the house. While Divya and Evan argue outside, Sofia drives up and crashes into Divya's car.

Hank recommends Sofia get an MRI to determine what is causing her vision blurring problems. During the MRI, Sofia screams in pain as a metallic object buried in her chest is being drawn out by the MRI's magnets. Sofia tells Hank that she wants it removed, and after removal, Hank guesses it is a tracking device.

Evan confronts Javier again when the credit card he provided bounced. Javier reveals he is going broke, and gives Evan an expensive antique weapon as payment. Evan offers to do a financial review to make up the difference in cost. Hank tells Boris the results of the blood work that he took during his physical, and he found nothing out of the ordinary. Boris seems guarded by the news, so Hank orders more tests without Boris's knowledge. Divya calls Hank when Sofia's condition worsens, an X-ray reveals radiation poisoning from the GPS device.

Katie tells Jill that she is leaving, that she can't do her research the way Boris wants. She advises Jill that her relationship with Hank might not survive the summer, like her previous relationships. Hank speaks to her when she leaves, and discovers her research has some human medical implications. When Hank checks on the blood work results, he discovers the results have disappeared.

Hank and Jill decide to slow their relationship down, based on their uncertainty about where they will be after Labor day.

Summary: Hank treats a children's book illustrator with a heart condition. Divya is treating a software guru who just married a swimsuit supermodel. Hank and Jill deal with the fact that Hank seems to be going down the same road as her ex-boyfriend.

The episode begins with Evan giving a presentation to Hank and Divya on business development for HankMed. Hank and Divya are not excited and take the first opportunity to leave. Evan tags along with Divya on a house call to a former swimsuit model and her husband Alan. Hank goes to Hamptons Heritage to drop off a sample at the lab where he runs into Jill. They discuss setting ground rules for their on again, off again relationship. When Jill is called away, Hank talks with Zack Kingsley who is checking out of the hospital. Hank encourages him to stay because of his heart condition, but he is insistent he must go home to make a living. When he finds out that Hank is a private physician who makes house calls, he hires Hank and leaves, to Jill's chagrin.

At Zack's house, he explains that he and his wife Julie write and illustrate children's books, and they are under a severe deadline to finish their current book. Hank gives him a complete physical and continues to harangue him about his health, but Zack emphasizes he needs to get through the next three days. Alan tells Divya he has allergies, but after his wife leaves to go shopping, he reveals he is having pain in the groin area, and thinks it is a kidney stone. After Divya's blunt reaction to this revelation, Evan encourages more tact. She then recommends doing some lab work and prescribing antibiotics. Later at home, Hank gets a visit from Jill who is furious that he poached a cardiac patient from her hospital.

The next day, Evan tries to give his presentation again but Hank interrupts with the medical review. He agrees with Divya's diagnosis and treatment for Alan, and says he is going back over to Zack's house. Evan insists on coming along because Hank's tendency to treat patients with just a handshake agreement is not good business. When Hank arrives at Zack's he senses something wrong. Zack has developed deafness and stumbles getting off a ladder. Zack confesses he has stopped his medication because it makes him feel bad. Hank speaks with Julie and asks her for help to get him some proper treatment. They go to talk to him and find him unconscious with blood coming from his mouth. At Alan's, Divya tells him that the lab work did not find anything, and she needs to do a physical examination if she is going to find his problem and get him back on his honeymoon. Again he complains that she is an assistant, but she bullies him into an examination.

Hank resuscitates Zack and manages to get the fluid out of his lungs. He agrees to go back on his medications. Alan has finally had enough of Divya, and Hank has to make an appearance. After an examination and speaking with Alan, Hank concludes he has a disease that was transmitted by a tropical sand fly from his greenhouse.

At a public preview reading for the Kingsley's new book, Hank runs into Jill again. Hank notices one of the cartoon posters is off, but Jill doesn't see it. Hank apologizes again about Zack, but Jill bemoans that these types of things are going to continue to happen, like it did with her ex-husband. Hank gets an emergency call from Julie that Zack has collapsed. Suddenly Hank has an epiphany, and realizes the cartoon poster is yellow instead of white, and that Zack is toxic.

When Hank arrives at Zack's, the paramedics are there treating him. Hank argues that their treatment is going to kill him, because the herbal tea he has been growing in his garden is foxglove, which slows down the heart. Hank convinces Julie to accept his treatment and it works quickly. Zack revives and is able to make it to the preview reading.

Evan tries a third time to give his presentation, but Divya is nowhere to be found, and Hank escapes. Hank goes to Jill's office and apologizes again. This time she accepts and the episode concludes with a romantic interlude in her office. As the camera fades, Jill receives an unseen text message from her ex-husband, saying he is back in town.

Summary: During an equestrian show, a young girl falls from her horse and is complaining of strange symptoms which makes Hank believe her father is hiding something. Elsewhere, Divya weighs over telling her dad the truth about her job, and Hank meets Jill's ex-husband.

The episode begins at a equestrian horse show, where a young girl experiences disorientation while riding. Hank and Evan are planning on attending to watch Divya ride in the event, and to support the fundraiser for Jill's clinic. While Hank heads to the first aid tent, Evan hands out business cards and tries to drum up new clients. Evan runs into Divya, who is refusing the advances of a slightly inebriated older man. Divya is not working this event for HankMed since she is hiding her employment from her parents who are attending the event. Evan steps in and convinces the man to leave, but he returns and takes a swing at Evan, missing and dislocating his elbow. Hank fixes his elbow, but when Jill discovers that the man, a doctor from Hamptons Heritage who is there to provide medical services is drunk, she fires him. Hank is then called to attend Beth, the young lady rider who was disoriented, who has vomited but insists she is fine.

Beth's father is the stable manager, and gets upset when he discovers Hank trying to give her something for her upset stomach. Hank discovers that Beth is under considerable pressure from her father to win a blue ribbon. Divya introduces Evan to her parents as a classmate from Wharton business school, but he freezes up when trying to speak with them. While riding in an event, Beth falls from her horse. Her father rushes up saying she just had the wind knocked out of her, but Hank insists on taking precautions for a potential spinal injury.

Hank's examination rules out a spinal injury, but he still worries about a possible concussion. Privately, he suspects Beth might be taking some kind of illegal drug, and has Divya take some blood and urine samples for testing. Beth's father becomes increasingly agitated with this news, since he was previously suspected of issues involving performance enhancing drugs in his capacity as equestrian coach for some of the Hampton's rich residents. When Jill returns to the hospital, she finds her estranged husband Charlie in her office. He tries charming her, but she is still angry with him for taking off when she tried to divorce him.

Divya's father, who is allergic to wasps, gets stung. He tries an epinephrin injector, but it fails to release. Divya sends Evan to fetch Hank and in the meantime, she performs a tracheotomy to allow him to breathe. Divya is despondent as the ambulance takes her father to the hospital, because now she will have to face her parents and tell them about her medical career.

Hank receives the laboratory report on Beth, she has performance enhancing drugs in her system. Hank confronts her father, who denies giving her anything. He clarifies that the scandal he was associated with was about horses, not riders, and that he used chili pepper on the legs of horses as a pain reliever, and that treatment was later banned. Beth comes forward and admits she took ADHD drugs that she got from a friend. Her father is upset and tells her that she can't ride in the next competition.

The next day, Hank is heading to the horse show when he encounters a man standing on the side of the road next to his crashed motorcycle. Unbeknownst to Hank, the man is Charlie, Jill's husband. He has some thorns in his hand from the crash and Hank uses rubber cement to remove them. Evan goes to the hospital to visit Divya's father, and against Hank's advice, he butts in and reveals that Divya is a physician assistant for HankMed.

In the paddock, Beth is dressed for riding and begs Hank to clear her so she can win and prove that her father is a good trainer. Hank refuses and tells her it is not her responsibility to rescue her father's career. Hank asks her to remove her helmet but she seem not to know how. As she rushes away, Hank has an epiphany that she is having seizures. He tells her father that she is experiencing Jamais Vu, the opposite of Deja Vu, where you feel like you are performing a task for the first time, even though you have done it countless times before. They notice Beth's riderless horse galloping away and rush to the stable, finding Beth having convulsions from a seizure. The seizure eventually stops, and Hank assures them that it can be controlled with medication so she can lead a normal life and continue to ride if she wants to.

At the hospital, Divya is furious with Evan for butting into her business. Evan cannot understand why she doesn't come clean with her parents and praises her for her skills at medicine and basically starting HankMed from scratch. She tells him her parents have planned for her to be enter the family real estate business since she was child, but she hates that business and loves medicine. Evan suggests she tell her parents the same thing. When she does, they accept it since she will soon be leaving the Hamptons anyway to return to London to marry Raj.

At Jill's office, Hank offers to help the hospital with their ER doctor shortage until they hire someone. They are starting to get romantic again when they are interrupted by Charlie, wearing green hospital scrubs. Jill tells Hank that Charlie was hired as the new ER doctor without her knowledge. Charlie then drops the bombshell that he is Jill's husband, not yet ex-husband.

Recurring Role: Campbell Scott (Boris), Meredith Hagner (Libby), Bruno Campos (Charlie Casey), Ezra Miller (Tucker Bryant)
Guest Stars: Rachael Emrich (Bridgett), Andrew McCarthy (Marshall Bryant), Kevin Brown (Lance), Anna Wood (Anna), Peter Scanavino (Mr. Blackman)
Production Code: RP110
Summary: Hank has to deal with Marshall Bryants's abuse of alcohol and prescription drugs after visiting his son Tucker for his seventeenth birthday. Marshall has other ideas than traditional rehab and after trying to do things his usual quick way almost ends up dead.

The episode opens with Hank wrapping a present for Tucker Bryant's 17th birthday. When Hank arrives, he discovers Jill already there and that the party was canceled because Tucker's father was returning home. Marshall Bryant arrives with a new assistant, Bridgett, and gives his son a present of a two week safari. Suddenly, Bridgett collapses and is barely breathing. A look through her purse reveals multiple prescription bottles. Hank and Jill drive her to the hospital where she is treated by Jill's husband Charlie. Evan and Divya are performing a physical examination on the owner of Club Tangerine. Divya points out that Evan has never had a female friend, which Evan realizes is true. He decides to change that with the young Polish woman who is a valet for the club.

At the hospital, Tucker reveals to Hank that his dad is drinking too much and needs help, and asks Hank to talk with him because Tucker believes his dad respects Hank. But, when Hank drops by their house later to check on Bridgett, he confronts Marshall about his drinking and about the prescription pills that Bridgett had, which were in Marshall's name. Marshall dismisses Hank's concerns and fires him again from being Tucker's doctor. Evan goes back to the club and talks with a lot of ladies there trying to just make friends. When he leaves, he waits for the same valet girl and invites her to hangout with him on his day off, and to include her boyfriend if she wants.

Hank gets called back to examine Tucker, who has fallen and has some bad bruises, which are dangerous for him since he is a hemophiliac. Tucker's girlfriend Libby admits calling Hank herself after Tucker and Marshall argued and Tucker fell rushing away from his dad. Hank insists that Tucker not stay in a dangerous environment so Libby says he can stay with her.

The next day Marshall shows up and asks for help to get clean. He admits he has a problem and says he has always tried to hide his problem from Tucker, but the previous night was a new low. Hank agrees to help and meets with Marshall and Tucker at their home to discuss a treatment. Marshall has decided on a quick fix weekend detox that Hank does not support, saying it is a short cut and dangerous so he leaves. Evan takes Anna, the beautiful valet girl, on a friend day at the beach. Evan is struggling to treat Anna as just a friend, and the problem gets worse when she takes off her bikini top.

Jill comes over to see Hank and says she feels guilty about the open check that she got from Boris for her clinic. She admits she is the one that 'lost' Boris's blood sample from the hospital, the one that Hank had drawn a while back for his physical and was going to use for more extensive blood tests. Hank receives a panicked call from Tucker. When he arrives, he finds out that Marshall has gone ahead with the quick fix detox, and was now unconscious and had no heartbeat. Hank uses the defibrillator and manages to bring him around. At Tucker's request, Hank does not call for an ambulance and promises to stay and help with the detox. In the morning, Marshall finally wakes up and is washing up in the bathroom. He thanks Hank and hands him a container of drugs that he had hidden. As Hank leaves he pockets another bottle of pills without Hank seeing.

Evan is awakened in the middle of the night by Anna, whose skin has turned blue. Divya determines that the medication that Anna is taking makes her photo-sensitive, and the day at the beach caused her skin discoloration. Later, Anna's large boyfriend shows up accusing Evan of cheating with Anna. Anna says that is crazy since Evan has a girlfriend, Divya. Divya is surprised, but goes along with the story, but the boyfriend isn't buying it. Divya then kisses Evan to prove it, and Anna and her boyfriend leave.

Hank returns to Marshall's place to drive him to a rehab facility, the second part of his treatment. When he arrives, he discovers that Marshall has decided to take Tucker on the safari trip that he promised. Hank strongly disagrees, saying he should keep the momentum going to reduce the chance of a relapse, to no avail. As they prepare to leave, Tucker discovers some pills in Marshall's jacket, and cancels the trip, instead driving his dad to the rehab facility.

Hank receives an invitation from Boris to come to his penthouse in New York City. When he arrives, Boris tells him he might be saving Hank's life.

Summary:	Hank is in New York dealing with Boris' illness and the chance he might lose his medical license. Meanwhile, Divya and Evan are contracted to meet an unknown person for medical work and deal with an emergency involving the mysterious persons Captain and Mistress while on a yacht at sea.

Boris tells Hank that the Gardners are out to revoke his medical license, the family of the hospital trustee that died when Hank was treating him. Hank says he is not worried, he did nothing wrong, but Boris insists he should be worried. Hank calls Evan to get his lawyer's phone number and Evan tells him they have a new client so exclusive that he won't reveal his name until he and Divya get there to treat him. Hank eats breakfast and goes to talk to Boris again. Boris says he is happy stayed and agreed to accompany him. They shake hands but Boris can't release his grip.

Evan and Divya arrive at the dock to find a sailboat and it's captain waiting to take them out to the main boat to treat his boss. However, he insists they sign non-disclosure agreements before they leave. Another passenger arrives, Kylie, who is the mysterious client's mistress and quite unhappy that she has to ride on the sailboat instead of the helicopter. Kylie reveals the name of their client, Gary Pastotnik, a man reviled by everyone in the Hamptons because he convinced the wealthy to invest with him, then he stole their money. Divya is annoyed because HankMed will be treating a fugitive.

While walking to the Festung Bank, Boris deflects Hank's inquiry about his condition, preferring instead to talk about Hank's situation. Boris offers to help, but Hank says he and his lawyer will just sit down and talk with the Gardner's. Boris is dubious. Once they reach the bank, Boris reveals that he owns it, and takes Hank into the vault. Hank finds out that the disease that Boris has is genetic, and that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather all died from it, at approximately the same age as Boris is now. Hank asks why Boris invited him to New York and is so concerned about his medical license. Boris says he wants Hank to stay with him as his personal physician, and help him with the progressive disease.

At Hampton's Heritage hospital, Charlie tells Jill he will sign the divorce papers but he wants ten minutes of her time. He has Jill meet him in the patient room where they first met, when Jill was hospitalized. He tells her he knows she still loves him, but she says it is over and leaves.

On the sailboat, Divya continues to harangue Evan, accusing him of being selfish and only worried about money. Kylie comes over, complaining of being seasick and gets her blouse caught in some rigging. She pulls on the rope, dropping a sail and releasing a boom which strikes the captain and knocks him across the deck, breaking his ribs and causing a flailed chest. They try calling the Coast Guard, but they don't know their own location. The captain's condition worsens, and they contact Hank who is just about to meet with the Gardners. Hank talks Divya through a procedure using fish hooks and pulleys to pull his ribcage back to his chest wall. Divya and Evan accomplish the procedure as a Coast Guard helicopter arrives.

Boris congratulates Hank and advises him to accept his lawyers help. As Hank declines and leaves on a walk, Boris removes a syringe from his briefcase and gives himself an injection. Boris is out walking in Battery Park talking with his lawyers when he experiences disorientation. He dismisses his lawyers and calls Hank, telling him he is blind. Hank arrives and finds rashes on his arm and neck. Hank figures out Boris has given himself injections and deduces that is what the shark he acquired was for. Boris comes clean and says he is trying to regulate his immune system. Hank gives him some steroids to decrease his bodies inflammatory response, and tells him the blindness and other symptoms will go away as the foreign proteins leave his body. Boris tells Hank that his medical license is safe, but he won't say for certain how that was accomplished.

Charlie shows up in Jill's office with the divorce papers, but they are not signed, and he asks for one more chance. He tells her she is the only one he ever loved, kisses her and leaves. Hank stops by and tells her the trip to New York made up his mind that he wants to stay in the Hamptons once the summer was over, and wants to be with her. She says she doesn't think she can be with him right now because she has to figure things out with Charlie.

At home, Hank receives a visit from Boris who gives him a file on his medical history. The documents are in German, and Boris says he never promised treating him would be easy.

Summary:	Hank treats a hallucinating woman. Meanwhile, Charlie and Jill move in together, while Divya and Raj anguish over their engagement party.

The episode opens on a Sunday with Evan relaxing and Hank reading company e-mail. Hank finds out that their check bounced when trying to buy a portable EKG machine and he tells Evan to fix it. He then begins to read through Boris's family medical history. Evan interrupts to discuss the impending loss of Divya when she gets married. They agree that they will have to find a new physician's assistant, but will never find another Divya.

At Hill Manor, Zoey Hill is walking around, seeing hallucinations when she crashes through a plate glass window. The next day, Zoey and her sister Amy are giving Divya and Raj a tour of Hill Manor in preparation for the engagement party they are planning to hold there. Both Divya and Raj are disturbed by the state of Hill Manor, however, and plan on finding another venue. Divya notices Zoey's injured leg, and calls in Hank to look at it. Amy tells them that the manor is causing Zoey's hallucinations and cough because Zoey wants to turn it into a bed and breakfast. Zoey reveals the problem has been going on for two weeks. Hank and Divya do a complete physical, including a CT scan and cannot find the problem. Divya suggests maybe mental illness, but Hank says there is no family history, so he wants to rule out all potential organic sources.

Jill arrives home to find Charlie inside, cooking a meal. She asks him why he is inside her house, and he says he has been living at the hospital and wanted a home cooked meal, plus his name is on the lease too. He tells her to continue to sort out her feelings, because he isn't going anywhere. She agrees to let him move back in for two weeks. Evan is on the phone with the bank, trying to sort out the bounced check. He finds that there have been a number of withdrawals without his approval. Hank returns home for some supplies and Evan returns with him to Hill Manor to help look for mold. In the attic, Evan discovers not mold, but bats. Later, Evan gets a text message from an anonymous source saying that funds are being put back into his account.

Hank runs into Jill looking for a card for Divya's engagement party. She starts to talk about Charlie, but Hank stops her and tells her he doesn't want to hear about him. He says if being with Charlie makes her happy, then he is happy. If she decides to leave him for good, she knows where he lives, but don't expect him to wait. Divya and Raj are talking about their future. Divya thought the problems at Hill Manor were a sign, and could provide an 'out' to their arranged marriage. She is concerned that they are not marrying for love. Raj tells her that they have been friends for 20 years, and their marriage will grow into love.

Hank, Evan and Divya are talking about Zoey's condition. They have discovered a cause for the cough but not for the hallucinations. Hank takes the opportunity to tell Divya that there will always be a place for her at HankMed. Evan gets a panicked call from Amy about her sister. When they arrive at Hill Manor, they find Zoey on the roof having hallucinations. Hank tries to get her down but she leaps off, fortunately landing in a pool. Hank decides they need to do a spinal tap to rule out encephalitis. He also says they are going to stay the night, since that is when the hallucinations happen. When Amy goes to make Zoey her nightly iced tea, Hank discovers Amy putting cough syrup into her drink, which is the root cause of her hallucinations.

At the engagement party, Divya tells Hank and Evan that she is not going to go through with the engagement, and says she is going to piss off both families. At the last moment however, she chickens out. Evan gets a phone call with bad news about HankMed's finances. He tells the unknown caller that he can't believe he is doing it to him again. Jill is looking for Hank at the party, wanting to tell him something important. She finds him alone with Zoey on a bench, and from a distance, it looks romantic, so she leaves.

Evan finally admits to Hank that HankMed is broke, and that he got scammed with an investment he made, but he won't reveal with whom. Hank is furious, and says he is surprised it took Evan so long to let him down, and he doesn't know if he will ever trust him again. Hank stops by Jill's house to find out what she wanted to tell him. Charlie answers the door and lies to him, saying Jill was not him. Hank get the message that Charlie doesn't want him to see Jill and leaves. Charlie goes back inside and lies to Jill about who was at the door. She tells him to pack up and leave. When Hank returns home, he finds a note from Evan saying he is off to see Eddie R. Hank figures out that it was their father who took their money.

Guest Stars: Kyle Bornheimer (Spencer "The Spaz" Fisher), Jason Kravits (Dr. Irving), Gabe Doran (EMT #1), Berto Colon (EMT #2), Amy Chang (Nurse), Lisa Wood (Tesla woman)
Production Code: RP201
Summary: Dr. Blair, who mentored Jill, tries to have her fired. A son tries to break free from his inventor father but his way of doing things turns out to be dangerous.

The episode begins with a quick recap of last season's finale where HankMed was left bankrupt due to Hank and Evan's father stealing money from the company. Divya Katdare meets with Boris and tries to call Hank to let him know of the meeting, but he ignores the call. Apologizing to Boris for Hank's unavailability, Divya leaves and attends another patient, Spencer. Spencer's arm is acting up and it is tense. After the examination, she prescribes Ativan to him. Spencer wants to know if there is a Hank in HankMed and realizes that he is 'playing hookie' too.

Hank tries to call Evan but it goes to straight to voicemail. Later, Evan says that their father is going to the bank to give back the money that he took, but that was 2 hours ago. Hank doesn't want to believe it and calls Evan a sucker. Hank questions Divya about the location of a green folder and she jokes about him not calling to let her know that he was not going to show up for Boris nor Spencer. Divya says that she worries about Hank but not so much about Evan. Hank wants to know how broke they are after their recent loss of money. She tells him that if they don't get some money fast, then they are in trouble. Divya blames Evan because of her paycheck bouncing. Divya doesn't want to talk about her engagement with Hank and they leave.

Evan is asleep on the couch at the hotel when Divya calls. She calls to let him know that she can't understand his handwriting and that he needs to return. She also tells him that she went through with her engagement after all. Hank meets with Boris and tells him that he had issues with family and that he lost his file. He apologizes that he missed the appointment but Boris is not really interested until Hank reads the file. At Hampton's Heritage Hospital, Dr. Blair is attending to a patient when Jill Casey enters. They talk about how the patients might be happy with the changes and help that they are getting, but the doctors are not. Dr. Blair tells Jill that something has to be done about Jill sleeping with doctors and making them leave.

Hank asks Divya what they are going to do about their financial situation. A rejuvenated Evan appears and says that they don't need to worry about numbers because that is his area, and he has a plan. The first step is to face reality. Spencer Fisher calls and tells them he has had an accident. They rush over to see what is going on. Evan shows up in a 'hey check me out' car and Hank is disgusted. We find out that Spencer is an infomercial guy called 'Spencer Spazz' and that he is the one that promotes products on television. They enter his home but Spencer is nowhere to be found. Spencer yells 'Follow the Lights!' and floor lights illuminate, making a path leading to Spencer, who is trapped.

Spencer is freed from his predicament to discover that he has thrown out his back. They lower him onto the ground and Hank gives condolences for his father. Evan compliments Spencer on all the products that were created and Spencer says that they're his dad's and that he only marketed them. Hank runs some tests on Spencer and finds out that he only had a back spasm. Evan pushes a button and they get sealed in the room. Hank and Divya stare sternly at Evan and he says that the buttons were just begging to be pushed. Spencer speaks into a controller and the doors open again. Hank gives Spencer his diagnosis and tells him that he needs to take it easy. Evan shows Hank a huge medical supply room and we find out that Spencer was trying to dismantle the panic room that his father spent so much time in because it serves no purpose. Spencer tells Hank and Evan to take the medical supplies but they don't need them, but they might know of someone who did. Back at the Hampton's Heritage Hospital, Dr. Blair is enjoying her lunch break when Jill walks in. She accuses Dr. Blair of filing a formal complaint against her. She says that she used to turn to Dr. Blair for help in times like this. Jill says that Charles quit but Dr. Blair says he left because she slept with him. Dr. Blair continues to go on about her fling with Hank as a case of 'bad judgment'. Jill says that her judgment served the hospital well and that the relationship between her and Hank is over. But a nurse walks up and says that Hank is in Jill's office.

Jill returns to her office and tells Hank that their best surgeon, Dr. Blair, hates her and that she is 'ruining the place' according to Dr. Blair. Hank says that his meeting is strictly business. Jill tells him that Charlie is gone and the divorce is final. Meanwhile, back at HankMed, Evan is making calls to secure some clients and is not having any luck. Hank and Jill are on their way to Spencer's house to look at the medical supplies. While speaking with Spencer on the phone, Hank hears him operating power tools, something that he was instructed not to do. Upon entering Spencer's house, they find him against the wall, with a nail through the edge of his hand. Hank gives him Lidocaine and pulls the nail out quickly. Jill is overwhelmed with the quantity of medical supplies and Hank tells Spencer not to worry about the room right now. Spencer talks about how his dad had two sides to his personality, the bright side and the paranoid side. Spencer is worried that he is going to go crazy, just like his father. Hank tells him that he just needs to stay away from the room.

Evan is still trying to make HankMed money and wants to pitch his next idea, but Hank is not interested. Divya tells Evan that he needs to let the dream go and face reality. She tells Hank that she has to go to London for her engagement. Hank visits Boris and tells him that he reviewed the file and he is ready to help, but the question is how. Boris tells Hank that he has been to many doctors with no results. Hank proposes being Boris's primary care physician, or 'quarterback'. He is going to start at the beginning to get to the root of the problem.

Evan and Divya go to Spencer's home again on another call and they discuss her engagement on the way. They find Spencer trapped again, this time halfway in the panic room and halfway out, with the door literally crushing him. Hank rushes over and they find out that Spencer is bleeding internally as well as externally. Their plan is to quickly release the pressure from the door and then rush him to the hospital. Divya tells Hank that it is impossible to do but he disagrees. Meanwhile Jill meets with Dr. Blair to respond to the formal complaint. She says that Charles left on his own and that she didn't fire him. Dr. Blair however, wants more than that. Jill receives a call from Hank but she ignores it. He calls again and this time texts '911'. Jill excuses herself and Dr. Blair complains by saying 'What could be more important than saving her job?' Hank asks Jill to locate a M.A.S.T box, which are inflatable trousers he needs to help Spencer.

Back at Spencer's house, Evan is elected to crawl through the narrow opening and find the door release, a plan he is not happy with. After the door is released, they get Spencer out and put a bandage on the gash that is on Spencer's side. With the inflatable pants, Spencer's vital signs stabilize and they rush him into the ambulance. Jill has rounded up an escort to minimize the travel time to the hospital. At the hospital, an annoyed Dr. Blair states that because of the doctor shortage, she is acting chief of Emergency Services. She tells Hank that it is best for him to go with them based on all the information he gave.

Divya compliments Evan on his part in Spencer's rescue. They speak about his father, with Evan stating that he always felt under appreciated. He feels good that he gets this off his chest. Hank figures out that Mercury poisoning is the reason why Spencer's father was paranoid and experienced liver failure. Spencer is going to be fine and doesn't have to worry about mental illness. Later, Boris gives Hank a business card for Dr. Marisa Casseras of Cuba. Before he leaves, he gives Hank a football as a sign that he can be his 'quarterback'. Evan is dropped off in his car that he just sold. He says that he is in mourning because he sold the car. They throw the pigskin around, happy that Spencer will be okay. Walking into their home, they see that they have a guest. It is Eddie R, Lawson, their father. He gives them the check that they have been waiting for and Hank punches him in the face.

Production Code: RP202
Summary: After having her heart broken, Newberg's stepdaughter lands in the hospital with a condition directly related to her relationship woes. Divya attempts to bring romance into her relationship with Raj.

Continuing from the last episode, Hank is patching up his father (Eddie) who is impressed at what he and Evan have accomplished. The check he gave them didn't cover the whole amount that he took, but Evan is certain that his father will cover it. Hank is not convinced and tells his father to leave. Eddie stumbles around and Hank worries he might have a concussion. Hank and Evan insist that he stay the night. The next morning, there is no sign of Eddie and Hank finds some packages with painted mugs and bobble heads in them. Hank knows it is Evan's idea. Evan is excited that they are there and he says that people will want to buy them. Eddie is still nowhere to be found and Evan is certain that he will come back.

At a welcome back party of a top client's daughters, Hank meets with Jill and Ms. Newburg. Jill reveals that they are no longer seeing each other and Ms. Newburg introduces her daughter Blake to Hank. Blake meets with her new yoga instructor boyfriend James, and Blake tells him she is used to her mother trying to set her up. As Jill and Hank walk on the terrace, they see Divya and Raj together and remark how they are making their arranged engagement work. Hank finds a Hank MedHead, as Evan calls it, and tells Evan to destroy them all. Jill says that the bobble head would sell nicely at her yard sale and enlists the HankMed crew to help. James rushes up and tells Hank that Blake is in trouble. They find her lying on her side hyperventilating.

Hank examines Blake and her lungs and heart sound normal. James explains that they were doing a yoga pose and a little 'extra routine' and it happened. Hank advises her to take it easy. The crew is at Jill's yard sale and everyone is getting into the spirit. Evan buys a couple of belts from a woman named Sherrie, but his flirtatious efforts are thwarted when he discovers she is married to a big muscled police officer named John. Jill and Divya are discussing Divya's love life and Divya admits that their culture doesn't believe in sex before marriage. Jill tells her that she needs to find out their compatibility before they are married. As they are driving away, Evan tells Hank that he can see the chemistry Hank has with Jill when a police officer pulls them over.

It is the same police officer from the yard sale, John. He tells Hank to step out of the car and go to the squad car. He tells Hank that he has a rash and doesn't want his wife Sherrie to know. They schedule a time for John to meet at Hank's office.

Blake is doing yoga when Ms. Newberg reminds her about her follow up with Hank. Hank sees that Blake has a rash on her neck and she tells him that it was probably reaction to a pheromone cream she is using. She also tells Hank that she has been taking diet pills, sleep aides, and anti-depressant pills. Hank sets Blake on a treadmill and says that they are going to monitor her heart for 24 hours. On the way out, Hank gets a call about his father. They find him in a car and he appears either passed out or dead. Hank breaks the back window and Eddie wakes up. He says that he took an Atavan and that he was sleeping in the car because he did not want to waste another dime until he paid back Evan and Hank. They tell him he can stay one more night at their house.

John arrives for his appointment to get his rash examined. Hank gets a call from Jill and it turns out that Sherrie also has a rash, and in the same area. Meanwhile while jogging, Divya wants to talk to Raj about their 'compatibility' and Raj says that he has been thinking about signing a prenuptial agreement. This is not what Divya had in mind but she agrees. Hank visits Blake again to get the readout from the heart monitor. She admits that she has not been wearing it, but agrees to wear it after Hank scolds her. Evan is home with Eddie and they talk about what happened to their money. Eddie says that it was an investment that he gambled on but it went sour. He says that they will get their money in a week or so. Hank enters and says that he doesn't want to ever want to be like his father. Eddie tries to say that his mother was his life too, but Hank says that Eddie left when Hank's mom got sick. Eddie leaves to 'take care of some business'. Evan is upset that Hank can't give up his grudge against their father. Evan says that Eddie is a great father and that he is trying to make up for his past mistakes. He tells Hank that it was 20 years ago and that he forgives him, but Hank won't.

John is meeting with Divya when Sherrie arrives. She followed him and thinks he is having an affair with Divya. Divya objects to this, and then Hank walks in. He has their test results and it came back as a positive for Syphilis. They are both certain that one cheated on the other and Sherrie leaves. Meanwhile, Evan is trying to rekindle the father and son relationship with a round of golf with Eddie. However, Eddie is going to be playing with two important people who have health problems and want to help Hank and Evan get new clients.

Divya meets with Blake and removes her heart monitor. Blake receives a text message from James and he says that he has to break up with her. Blake is devastated and she runs to Ms. Newberg for sympathy, who had just entered with finger sandwiches. Meanwhile, Hank is helping Jill move furniture around in her garage and they sit down and share a beer. Hank and Jill look into each others eyes and start kissing. Hank closes the garage door and his phone rings. It is Ms. Newberg and Blake has had a heart attack. She is rushed to Hampton's Heritage against Ms. Newberg's opinion and Hank says that it was not a heart attack but 'broken heart syndrome' brought on by a lot of stress. Divya meets with Raj and says that she doesn't want to prepare for a divorce when she isn't married yet, talking about the prenuptial agreement. Divya then tells him that the compatibility she was talking about was physical compatibility.

Back at the house, Hank is puzzling over the syphilis test that John and Sherrie took. Hank recognizes Evan's belt when he comes in announcing that he just signed two big clients. Evan tells Hank that the belt is Armadillo. Hank puts the pieces together and announce they have 'Hansen's Disease' also known as Leprosy. Back at the hospital, Hank gives Blake his prescription and tells Ms. Newberg and Blake that they need to get along better. Evan is watching a video he made for HankMed when an envelope arrives. It is a check from Eddie with the balance of the money that he owed. Hank and Evan go to Ms. Newberg's 'Thank You' lunch and she tells them that Blake went back to cooking school. She declares that she has stopped playing matchmaker for Blake and focused on finding someone for herself. She reveals she met a man a couple of days ago. Hank and Evan meet the man, it is Eddie.

Summary:	When the star of a popular film franchise collapses, Hank discovers his patient's illness is caused by the very thing that's made him famous. Meanwhile, Eddie surprises Hank and Evan with the news he's staying in the Hamptons.

The episode opens with Donald and his agent talking about a new role that he will be doing as 'The Garbage Collector'. Donald defers on the role until his sister and adviser Faith can review the script. His agent asks if he can come to her son's birthday party as 'The Garbage Collector' and Donald agrees. As Donald is driving he is pulled over by a police officer for weaving. Upon getting out of the car his size intimidates the officer. The officer asks him to take a field sobriety test. Donald's legs tighten up and the officer, thinking he is coming at him, tazes Donald and he falls hard to the ground. Hank and Evan happen to be passing by when they notice Donald on the ground barely breathing. Hank convinces the officer that Donald is in trouble and he needs the handcuffs removed so they can get him to his feet. He then treats his abrasions and verifies he is okay.

Hank is talking to Ms. Newberg and she says that she is not going to replace his mother and that his father and her are only dating. She says that Eddie told her about the money issues and that she is not worried about it. Hank leaves to see Boris when his father arrives. At Boris's home, Hank wants to take a sample to see which direction they should take in the treatment. He states that there are number of places that are doing good work, including Cuba. After Hank leaves, Boris goes over to his cigar case and uncovers letters that he received from the same doctor that Hank was talking about.

Evan is expecting Donald to stop by and upon answering the door, Faith is there first with Donald right behind. Faith starts rattling off his symptoms, then realizes that she should be quiet and let Donald do the talking. Evan takes Faith outside and he finds out that Faith and Donald are brother and sister. He then takes her to a restaurant and she talks about how she is always the one that takes care of things. She takes some vitamins, as she calls them, and leaves when her phone starts ringing. Her increasingly bizarre behavior has Evan thinking that he might need rescued so he calls Hank and asks him to call back in 5 minutes. Faith comes back after the phone call and has forgotten the conversation they just had.

At Donald's home, Hank follows up and tells Donald that is a little anemic but normal. However, Donald has his hand under hot steam and doesn't realize that he is getting burned. Hank then goes to see Jill and asks if they have a big MRI machine for Donald. She knows of one, but it turns out to be used for horses. Back at Boris's tennis court, Evan and Eddie R. are playing a game and Evan refuses to pick up his phone knowing that it is Faith. A delivery man arrives with medical supplies and Eddie signs for them, thinking they are for Hank. As Evan is carrying boxes in, he finds Faith there, thinking that Donald had an appointment. Faith has completely forgotten the previous day and suddenly realizes today is the day of the birthday party that Donald was supposed to go to.

At the party, Evan talks to Hank about Faith and her constant forgetfulness, but Hank doesn't care. He meets Donald in the tent and tells him that the kids in the Hamptons have seen it all. Donald however, has a plan. Donald comes out in his 'Garbage Collector' costume but the children are unimpressed. Hank plays along and throws a plastic bottle in the garbage can. They role-play which involves Hank being picked up and thrown in the trash. But before Donald can throw Hank in the trash, his legs lock and he falls backwards on Hank, and he can't feel his legs.

Back at HankMed, Hank is walking around with bags of ice on his sore neck. Evan is making a HankMed travel pack for Faith and says that he is trapped with her. Hank blows him off and finds the boxes of medication from Germany addressed to Boris that Eddie signed for. Boris informs Hank that Eddie has been making himself at home around Boris's place and he is the one who signed for the medicine. Hank apologizes for Eddie and says it won't happen again. After Hank leaves, Boris makes a point with his assistant to find out more about Eddie R. Lawson.

Meanwhile Evan, Hank, and Divya visit Donald and Faith for a barbecue. Faith tells Evan that she has been offered a job working at a law firm. Evan is shocked that she is a lawyer and that she needs to find herself and follow her dreams. She walks away saying that she forgot to take her vitamins. Jill arrives, saying that 'Donny', as he likes to be called, invited her. Hank gets a little jealous and Jill admits that she would be jealous too if he was laughing with another girl. Hank sees that Donald is struggling a bit at the grill and offers to help. Donald asks about Faith and Evan says that she went to take her vitamins. Donald sees her over the railing, collapsed on the floor.

The party rushes to her side and Hank goes into action by unblocking her esophagus by putting a balloon down her throat and pulls out her vitamins in a clump. Hank guesses that she has a gastric bypass surgery and that she has not been following the diet. Faith confirms his suspicions and this explains why she was suffocating on her vitamins. Her memory loss was due to a lack of vitamin B1, and not staying with the recommended diet. Faith asks them not to tell Donald..

Evan enters HankMed playing the air guitar on his tennis racket. Hank says that he needs to stop playing tennis because Boris and him had a run in when Eddie signed for Boris's packages. Evan says that Hank is only being mean to Eddie R. since he came back and that you don't bite the goose, you pet the goose, referring to Boris. But, before Hank responds, he gets a call from Jill about Donald. Hank rushes over and finds that Donald uses adhesive cream for his dentures. The brand he uses has high levels of Zinc, explaining the low levels of copper in his system and his other symptoms. Hank prescribes that he use adhesive cream without Zinc and go on trashing the bad guys.

Faith and Donald thank Hank and Evan, telling them that their professional relationship is over and that they are keeping it brother and sister only. Hank meets Eddie R. to talk about their relationship. He thinks that Eddie should leave and Eddie tries to defend himself by telling that he was a good father. Hank responds with the fact that he walked out. But Eddie tells Hank that he is not going anywhere. Hank goes for a run and is almost hit by a car driven by an attractive woman. She tells him she has a meeting with Boris. In the last scene, she is walking with Boris while he looks over her resume. He is hiring her as a concierge doctor!

Summary: Boris flies Hank to another country, where he and another doctor research potentially life saving gene therapies. Back in the Hamptons, Hank's temporary replacement, Dr. Emily Peck, rubs Divya the wrong way.

Evan is showing Hank another of his marketing ideas: monogrammed carry bags as Hank is preparing for a one-day trip to New York City to help Boris with a genetics trial. Hank is taking Boris' private jet and Evan ultimately convinces Hank to let him tag along.

Once they are on the plane Hank realizes the flight is longer than a trip to the city. They land in a tropical island and Boris is there to greet them: "Welcome to Cuba."

Boris tells Hank he felt the need to trick him in order to get him down there. He has arranged for a doctor to cover Hank's work for the weekend. Boris tells him Dr. Caseras (Marissa) has diagnosed him with a hereditary mutation that will eventually destroy his brain, muscles and bones. Marissa has a clinical trial down in Cuba and Boris wants Hank to help him with the pre-trial testing.

Back in the Hamptons, Divya meets Dr. Emily Peck, Hank's replacement for the weekend. Emily shows Divya a note from Boris and makes a crack about her being late.

Evan is upset Hank won't have any time to hang out with him while they're in Cuba. Evan goes exploring by himself and finds a man selling scuba trips. When he is lacking cash a Canadian woman named Mindy pays for him as she needs a "dive buddy." She is in Cuba with some girlfriends and they are more interested in working on their tans than scuba.

Boris brings Hank to Marissa's facility. She thanks Hank for encouraging Boris to explore genetic testing but doesn't seem to like the fact Hank is down there with him.

Hank tells Marissa she's lucky to have a man like Boris as a benefactor. She thinks he is suspicious and doesn't seem to care for Hank's concern over the safety of her trial.

While scuba diving Evan and Mindy seem to connect. They encounter a Man O' War and manage to safely swim back to the boat. Once on deck Mindy accidentally whacks Evan in the head with her air tank and he falls in the water.

Hank is called to the beach and uses pieces of a beach bag to use hair braids to close the cut on his scalp. Mindy and her friends leave.

Before an appointment with Alan, Emily doesn't have any interest in Divya providing her with information. Alan continues to have migraines and Emily orders an MRI. Divya thinks it is a mistake but Emily does not care.

Boris takes Hank and Evan to dinner. Evan is frustrated things didn't take off with Mindy. Boris takes them to a square where Marissa is handing out the medication he had had delivered to the house last episode (for which Eddie had signed).

Divya goes to see Jill and asks about Emily. Jill looks up her sparkling resume on the hospital server.

That night Hank is very interested to watch Marissa and Boris dancing romantically. He is upset that it appears Boris is in a relationship with his doctor.

Hank confronts Boris about Marissa while performing a biopsy. Hank also isn't thrilled Boris is funding her research.

While Evan works on purchasing some cigars he runs into Mindy. She seems happy to see him but already has plans for the evening. Evan trades his cell phone for the cigars. We see that a shadowy figure was watching this whole transaction.

Alan's test results come back normal, but he is frustrated his headaches won't go away. Emily gives him an injection of Botox to help what she believes to be tension headaches, and offers to inject the Botox for its more popular use: getting rid of wrinkles. Divya is upset that Emily is advocating cosmetic surgery to patients.

Hank tells Boris his lab results make him a strong candidate for the clinical trial. He wants to do some research into the trial while Boris wants to charge into the trial immediately. Boris seems to agree they should wait.

At a party Evan tells Hank he thinks the Cuban government might be following him. Hank meets a pretty girl. Mindy comes running into the bar to tell Hank her friend Susie is in bad shape.

Susie is having complications from several plastic surgeries and Hank takes her to the hospital. Hank pretends to be Susie's cousin and helps the local doctor. They determine she has the bends (caisson disease) due to a combination of anesthesia and scuba diving.

Mindy thanks Evan for helping her friend. She says she's going to have some free time coming up. Evan is disappointed he's supposed to leave in the morning. The two kiss and appear they will spend his last night in Cuba together.

The next morning Hank arrives as Mindy is leaving. Evan borrows Hank's phone to go buy more cigars, the goal being to give them to their top clients. Hank looks through one of the windows and is disturbed to see Boris starting the clinical trial.

Boris tells Hank he "made a decision." He thought Marissa's plan made sense and so he chose not to wait. He asks Hank to wait through the trial. Hank says no and chases Marissa into the parking lot. Hank tells her it's clear that she still loves him. She seems to agree and is happy to be treating him again, even though the situation isn't ideal.

Emily gives Divya her card for the next time they need help. Divya rips it up and tells her she isn't professional.

Before boarding the jet, Hank tells Boris he hopes everything works out for him. Hank will continue to look for a cure. Evan is not on board the plane.

Evan is off looking for his cigar dealer. In an alley a man grabs Evan and throws him into a car which peels off as the episode ends.

Summary:	Boris's experimental treatments leave Hank scrambling to save his life. Meanwhile, Divya and Dr. Peck aren't finding it easy to work together.

Before leaving Cuba, Hank reiterates to Boris that he thinks participating in Marissa's study while also involved with her is a mistake.

A blindfolded Evan is taken to a remote location by the guy who sold him the cigars (Oscar) and another man. Oscar's sister Carmen, the bartender, is there to meet them and she seems surprised the men have Evan.

Hank calls Divya with an update. He's not sure where Evan is but will be leaving soon for the Hamptons. Emily will continue to fill in.

Carmen's uncle had his hand stuck in the gears of a machine. Glancing at Evan's "HankMed" bag the two men thought he was Doctor Hank. When Evan tells her she needs to call an ambulance Carmen says she cannot: "He's already dead."

Carmen rushes to Boris' place to get Hank.

Divya and Jill wait in line at a coffee shop. While putting up with a jerk from the city, Jill invites her to go see a band at a beer garden. Divya passes and leaves when she gets a page.

We learn that Carmen's uncle is a writer in hiding and pretending to be dead to avoid government attention. While Hank assesses the man's finger Evan finds out the cigars Oscar sold him were fakes. Using dental floss Hank is able to get the uncle's finger out without any major damage.

Divya goes to her appointment and finds Emily has beaten her there. Emily says she thinks Divya is threatened by other women and probably doesn't have any close female friends. Divya counters that she was hanging out with Jill. Emily thinks that means her comments from the previous episode were simply personal.

Carmen has been posting her uncle's writings online from the nightclub where she works. Hank notices something strange with Carmen's uncle's hand and eyes.

Oscar and his buddy are playing dominoes and want Evan to join. Evan is still mad he gave up his cell 'phone for fake cigars. Oscar says he will get it back when they return to town.

Hank thinks Carmen's uncle has a heart issue. He needs an echo-cardiogram but they are too scared to take him to a hospital. Hank says he has another option.

Evan and Oscar go to see the man to whom Oscar gave the phone. The man doesn't want to sell it, but may agree to play them in dominoes. Evan says he used to play and they move over to the table.

Divya meets Jill at the concert after all. They seem to get along and discuss relationships.

Hank sneaks Carmen and her husband into Marissa's clinic. When Carmen walks away the uncle tells Hank that she is single and encourages him to pursue her. Hank sneaks him into a room but finds no gel necessary for the machine procedure.

Jill asks Divya about Hank. Divya mentions that he is in Cuba. The annoying guy comes over and starts hitting on Divya. She turns him down and they get up to leave.

Hank looks for Marissa. Instead he finds Boris who is having his treatment done. Boris seems a little off but tells Hank he's fine. Boris instructs Hank to take one of the echo machines and do the test at his place.

Hank loads the machine into Carmen's car but tells them to head to Boris' place without him. He goes back upstairs hoping to run a quick test on Boris but learns that he is already coding. We see Boris seizing in his bed. Fluent in medical Spanish, Hank immediately takes over and works to get Boris stable. Marissa walks in and Boris tells her he wants Hank to treat him. Hank isn't sure what is happening to Boris and is treating for several possibilities. Hank thinks Marissa should re-infuse Boris with some of his old bone marrow she had collected.

Evan and Oscar win the domino match as a team and get back the phone. Evan feels bad about being so grouchy earlier and gives Oscar the phone.

Boris' condition has greatly improved. Marissa comforts Boris and Hank leaves.

Jill and Divya leave the concert. They appear to be building a friendship. The annoying guy from earlier approaches them again and Divya ends up deftly incapacitating him with a kick to the kidney.

The test reveals that Carmen's uncle is fine but needs six weeks of IV antibiotics. Hank takes Carmen aside and assures her they must get the medicine for him. She makes a pass at Hank but he turns her down, citing professionalism. They nearly kiss but are interrupted by Marissa, who has shown up and is furious her equipment is helping "an enemy of the state."

Hank ends up talking Marissa down, telling her that Boris gave the go-ahead and took the risk of allowing them to use his place in order to protect her clinic. Marissa agrees to get the man drugs, which can be self-administered.

Divya and Emily go to lunch. During the meal a boy chokes on a piece of pasta. Divya ends up helping the boy while Emily sits in her chair doing nothing. She tells Divya as long as the problem was being taken care of there was no reason for her to risk a lawsuit. Divya assures Emily that it isn't women she has a problem with, it is her.

Oscar gets Evan some Dominican cigars. Carmen and her family leave Boris' place. After Hank gives Carmen advice for her uncle's treatment they kiss.

Sitting with Boris and Marissa, Hank assures her she made more progress with Boris' condition than any other doctor. Boris asks to be cleared medically and to stay for a few weeks, but just to spend time romantically with Marissa.

Hank and Evan board Boris' plane. Hank tells Evan that he was always jealous of the way Evan made their mother laugh. The brothers agree they make good traveling partners as the private flight attendant produces a box of genuine Monte Cristo cigars.

Back in the Hamptons Hank, Evan and Divya smoke a few of Boris' Cuban cigars while discussing the time they were apart. Emily shows up with some hand-written reports from her visits and is very complimentary to Hank and Evan. Then she drops a bombshell: she has decided to stay in town and open a competing concierge medical practice.

Summary:	When Tucker's best friend returns to the Hamptons, his reckless behavior causes Tucker to suspect the worst, but Hank realizes a medical condition is to blame. Meanwhile, Divya treats a woman who fears her job as a winemaker is on the line when her symptoms hinder her palate – but learns the problem is much less complicated than she first thought.

Open with Tucker and his girlfriend parting ways before he hops into his Ferrari and heads off to a winery to meet his best friend Oliver just back from college. They decide to race the sports car and forklift Oliver is driving. During the short race Oliver had trouble staying conscious.

Eddie is late meeting Evan for lunch. They discuss the fact Hank still doesn't want to see Eddie. Eddie gives Evan a picture from his childhood, the "best day ever," according to Evan. It is the two kids sitting with Eddie.

Hank arrives at the winery looking for Tucker. A woman points Hank in the right directions before slamming some pain pills. Divya notices and the woman, Kim the winemaker, says she's been having headaches.

Hank takes care of a hematoma under one of Oliver's toenails. We learn that they've been friends since they were little. After Hank takes care of the toe Oliver is completely asleep. Oliver (whose family owns the winery) has been fatigued since he returned to help prepare for a re-launch after switching to biodynamic grape production. Switching to the more environmentally friendly way of doing business was Oliver's idea, in fact, and he is scheduled to give a speech at the party. Tucker points out that Oliver had been having issues oversleeping while still at college. Hank guesses mono and wants to do a tox screen.

Divya learns Jill is going to the winery part as well. Jill has been nauseous and has been having cravings. Divya purchases a pregnancy test for Jill and Evan sees this at the check-out and jumps to an erroneous assumption. Jill's test comes back not pregnant.

Evan tells Hank about Divya buying the test and is assuming she is pregnant. Evan invited Eddie to the winery and Hank isn't happy. Evan shows Hank the picture. Evan remembers they were on a treasure hunt, which leads to a . . .

Flashback: The kids are standing by a fence as it appears someone is cutting a lock with bolt-cutters.

"I don't remember it that way," Hank says.

At the party, Hank and Jill have an awkward conversation. Hank then sees Tucker and Oliver and tells Oliver mono was negative and symptoms don't add-up for narcolepsy. Hank suggests an MRI but Oliver declines.

Divya sees Kim still pounding aspirin. She tells Divya her health insurance coverage hasn't kicked-in yet. Evan walks over and starts prying about the possible pregnancy test. At this point Kim discovers that Evan might be a super-taster (more taste buds than the normal person). Evan is excited he has a "superpower," Divya is annoyed.

Tucker finds Oliver drinking wine in the vineyard. He seems drunk, is chugging a bag of chips and is acting weird. Eventually Tucker (who is a hemophiliac) angrily breaks a wine bottle and begins bleeding from his hand.

Hank takes care of Tucker's hand. Oliver leaves and Tucker complains to Hank about how his friend is acting. Tucker suspects drugs.

Kim gives Evan a private tasting and discovers he is an outstanding taster. She complains to Divya that she's been unable to taste. Several years ago her sense of taste improved dramatically after a medical procedure, which led to her entering the winemaking field. Two days ago all the wines started tasting the same. Divya demands she have a CT scan.

Eddie runs into Hank. He is pushing his new energy company to potential investors. Hank asks about the treasure hunt picture. Hank remembers Eddie's car getting repossessed, while Eddie tells him it was actually falsely impounded.

Flashback: Young Hank is fed through a window. Before grabbing Eddie's keys a large Rotweiler shows up and starts acting territorial, chasing him to the top of a filing cabinet. We hear Eddie's voice tell him to use what he can find.

Eddie tells Hank that was the day he knew his son could do anything. Hank is still upset at the memory. Divya shows up and tells Hank about Kim.

Moments before Oliver's speech Tucker tells Hank he cannot find his friend. Hank tells Tucker about his father blowing their family's money and tells Tucker he understands what it's like if he's having money problems. Oliver's parents take the mic and introduce Oliver. Hank notices that they are more fair-skinned than their son. This gives Hank an idea. After a call for Oliver's lab work, Hank tells Tucker his friend has a treatable disease related to his adrenal gland. They need to find Oliver immediately.

We cut to Oliver sitting above a fermentation tank. He gets up too quickly and accidentally falls in.

Before Kim is about to have her CT scan Evan admits to thinking Divya is pregnant. This leads to Divya having a revelation: Kim is pregnant.

Hank and Tucker find Oliver in the bottom of the fermentation tank. Eddie walks in to help look. Despite Hank's warnings about the toxic fumes Tucker jumps right in after his friend and immediately passes out next to him. Hank and Eddie find a fan and use it ventilate the tank from below. Father and son start making a pulley as we get a...

Flashback: Young Hank also makes a pulley, this connected to a magnet in order to grab a set of car keys off the wall.

The fan helps revive Tucker, who places the harness around Oliver. Hank and Eddie pull Oliver to safety. Oliver's breathing is labored. Hank helps pull Tucker out as Eddie watches Oliver. Tucker seems okay, but Oliver has an airway obstruction and is turning blue. With help from Eddie finding materials from the room, Hank constructs a makeshift way of intubating Oliver and saves his life. Eddie is impressed. Hank calls Eddie Dad.

Divya tells Kim her taste should come back within months. Divya references leaving the country when she marries and Evan tells her he's not sure if they can operate the company without her help.

Oliver and Tucker are loaded into ambulances. Eddie is super-proud of his son's work.

Hank tells Tucker that Oliver will be fine. Tucker asks about Hank and Eddie working so well together. Tucker tells Hank that his grandfather is leaving him the family's money and placing him in charge of his father's allowance. Hank thinks Tucker can handle it.

Hank has a blindfolded Evan test his sense of taste on cereal. Evan tells Hank that he was right about the treasure hunt when they were kids. Hank contradicts him, saying that Evan was actually right.

Flashback to the treasure hunt day: Both kids look happy as they pose for the picture with Eddie.

Summary: Hank helps out a food truck owner who is displaying strange, anti-social behavior, while Evan is a "faux beau" for a young woman who doesn't want her parents to know she's dating a much older photographer.

Open with Jill eating from a gourmet lobster, macaroni and cheese truck. Proprietor Mac tells her he had a fender-bender. Mac says he and his wife Donna have been having trouble. Jill tells him that he could have called Hank. When she tells him that she gave Hank's number to Donna, Mac says that he and Donna are speaking.

Jill tells Hank that the hospital is dragging its feet regarding her family clinic and it could be five years until it even opens. She asks him about Emily staying in town and running a competing concierge practice.

Evan tells Divya he is thinking about buying a new Jaguar. They get a call at the house where Mac and Donna are staying. Donna broke her ankle. She tells him she's not comfortable there and admits to tying Mac to a piece of furniture while he was asleep so she could pack up the truck undisturbed. Hank sees Mac fall into the pool while struggling to free himself from a deck chair. He dives in and rescues the man. Donna tells Hank and Divya that Mac has been shamelessly flirting with every woman he sees since they arrived in the Hamptons. They are recently married and live in Queens, and Mac's wealthy cousin gave them use of his house for the Summer.

We see a young woman named Paige, a "rich heiress," talking on the phone with her mother and trying to convince mom that she has a boyfriend. Paige meets Hank and Evan on the beach and tells them she called two doctors to work on her boyfriend (who is considerably older) Graham who sliced his leg while kiteboarding. Emily is already there and finishing up with the stitches.

Divya is having dress issues during the fitting of her wedding gown. Her mother informs her that she plans to consult her spiritual leader.

Before Hank leaves, Paige asks him if he'll pretend to be her boyfriend for her parents' sake. Her parents wouldn't understand Graham's age. Hank says he's not interested.

Hank notices Graham standing on top of his car fastening his board. Emily tells Hank she checked him for a head injury and he's fine. We see that Graham clearly is having some sort of balance issues.

Evan convinces Paige that Hank will never say yes, she agrees to let him pose as her more age-appropriate boyfriend instead. Though she's dated Graham for 16 months, Paige now needs money from her parents to go on a trip with Graham and must show them proof.

Hank goes to see Graham, who has burned himself in his dark room. Hank looks at the chemicals which Graham has been using since he was a kid. He has accidentally mixed two of them to form a dangerous explosive and Hank suggests he has his eyes checked.

While Divya works on Donna she has another fight with Mac. Mac complains the medicine his wife gave him isn't working.

Paige takes Evan to get a makeover, followed by the two taking a bunch of digital effects photos making it look as if they are enjoying one another's company during youthful pursuits, and have a real relationship. During this process she ends up kissing Evan. Evan seems to be falling for her.

Divya tells Hank she has concerns about Donna and Mac. An obviously upset Evan returns home and calls himself a "dirty whore." Divya asks Hank to test the medicine Donna was giving Mac.

Emily arrives at Hank's place, upset with him for stealing Graham. She says that Hank "stole" Graham. Hank mentions her slaughter of the English language. She mentions that he had a mountain biking accident before the kiteboarding incident. She thinks it's age-related, Hank disagrees. Whoever is right has to buy the other one dinner. Jill arrives and is introduced to Emily. Hank gives Jill advice on making her family clinic happen.

Evan tells Hank and Divya he is easily seduced by money and fame. To push himself he is going to sell his Jaguar and give the money to the company. Divya realizes she has misplaced her engagement ring but where.

Divya goes to Donna's looking for the ring. They spot blood on the stairs and rush inside. Mac is fine. The blood was from Donna's ankle and it appears Divya's ring is inside her cast. With Mac covered in macaroni and moving about strangely Hank suggests a neuro-exam.

Evan goes to Paige's place and runs into Graham who has found evidence of them kissing in the camera booth.

Mac's symptoms since they've arrived in the Hamptons – anti-social behavior, need to touch, increased appetite – have Hank concerned. Donna mentions that Mac's truck was his when they were in New York.

Evan tells Graham about the pretend relationship and the reason for it. Graham keels over and asks Evan to call Hank.

During an exam Hank suggests Graham is having strokes in his eye. At this point Graham has an embolism in his "camera eye" and Hank ends up having to drain fluid and to save his eyesight with a make-shift emergency procedure.

Divya tells Hank that Mac does have a neurological condition, which they can take care of. Divya's ring is actually inside Mac's stomach, along with a key and other inedible items.

Divya's mother notices her ring is missing. Her mother's spiritual leader told her that Divya is destined to love another.

Jill and Divya talk over some macaroni and cheese. We see Mac is doing much better.

Hank and Emily have dinner. They seem to be hitting it off. When they discuss the dinner bet, they agree it's a split so Emily suggests that they go "Danish" on the bill. Hank points out that the correct word is "Dutch." He then tells her that she mixes up her words when she's flustered. Hank mentions that the other alternative is that she has a neurological condition. Emily proceeds to kick his butt in a game of pool.

Hank buys Evan a new, more modest van. Paige pulls up and tells Evan that her parents are coming to town and she needs him to meet them since Graham, upset at the revelation of the charade she planned, has left her and gone off to another part of the world for another robust adventure.

Hank goes to see Jill at the hospital. She proposes that Hank's company run her new clinic. He appears to like the idea.

Summary: Jill and Divya go out clubbing in Manhattan, while the Lawsons give Raj a last-minute bachelor party. The next morning, both groups of people try to figure out what exactly happened the night before.

Hank wakes up in a hammock next to Emily. The two mysteriously reference the previous evening and kiss. A man with a busted nose runs up and tells Hank "thanks for nothing."

Divya and Jill wake up in the back of a cab parked by the water. Jill says "now that is what I call a bridal tea." Each have gotten tattoos.

Evan wakes up in the yard. He seems to recall something and looks over a railing at Divya's fiancé Raj face down on the lower level. He runs to Hank and tells him a stripper stole my van "and I think I killed Raj."

Dissolve to "24 Hours Earlier"

Hank and Evan arrive at a case. They are meeting Divya there because she needs to leave early for a bridal tea her mother is throwing for her in Manhattan. Evan expresses concern about the arranged marriage.

The case involves a man complaining of sinusitis over the last year. It is a CEO named Ken. Hank asks about pressure in the nose, but the man says that it is pain. Hank isn't treating Ken very nicely and Divya notices. Hank says he will write a refill Rx for Ken.

Outside Hank tells Divya he knew Ken from junior high. Ken bullied Hank, stealing his lunch money and breaking his nose. Hank has always dreamt of getting even.

Jill arrives at Hank's place. Before heading to the city for Divya's tea, she wants to take the guys to a potential test case for their new clinic.

They go see a woman who dislocated her shoulder at the gym. Hank puts it back in place. The woman says she's only part-time employed. Evan spots a portable stripper pole, which the woman says is her roommate's.

Divya meets them on their way out of the house and leaves with Jill for the tea. After the girls leave Evan holds up the dancer Karma's business card and tells Hank they should throw Raj a bachelor party.

During Divya's tea her sister says she has to leave because her husband needs him to pick him up for an earlier flight. Divya wants to join her on the drive so they can spend time together.

Outside her sister tells her that she's actually leaving to look at an investment opportunity. Her husband is really in Miami. After her sister leaves Divya and Jill decide to enjoy the city.

The shoulder patient shows up to dance for the party. It turns out she was lying about having a roommate, and that she is Karma. Hank and Evan look outside and see that Raj has invited a massive group of people.

Divya and Jill have an animated cab driver named Aristotle who claims he will show them all the best night clubs. Divya gets a call that her sister is having a medical emergency. They arrive at the hotel and find her "coworker" unable to breathe. Divya sticks him with an epi pen and he seems to recover. He tells her he used a new coconut-based lotion and Divya writes him a prescription. Divya smells the same lotion on her sister and realizes she is having an affair.

Dieter tells Hank he took the liberty of "supplementing" Raj's guest list. Boris apparently is doing well in Cuba and suggested expanding the guest list. Hank runs into Ken, who Evan clearly remembers from the old day. Hank pretends not to remember him. Ken says he didn't realize who Hank was.

Divya's sister tells her that her affair is how you make an arranged marriage work.

Evan asks Raj about his social life in a somewhat inquisitive manner. Hank runs into Emily. Karma grabs Raj for a private dance.

Divya tells Jill she's worried her arranged marriage will end up like her sisters. She calls Raj.

Karma walks out of her private dance with Raj and tells Evan "I'm pretty sure that doesn't happen all the time." Evan, who has Raj's phone, looks down and sees a text from Divya which reads "I love you." Evan covers for Raj by responding: "Love you, can't wait to marry you."

Divya shows Jill the text she thinks is from Raj. Aristotle appears and Divya says she wants to celebrate. He will show them around in exchange for a check-up for his acid reflux.

As Karma dances around the pole, a drunken Ken wanders towards the stage. She accidentally kicks him directly in the face.

Hank cleans up Ken's massively broken nose. Emily suggests Hank wait before realigning the nose. Hank does not listen. Karma will not tell Evan what happened with Raj, but says she needs to find him because "we have unfinished business." Dieter tells Evan that the room in which Raj got his private dance is equipped with video surveillance.

Divya and Jill drink and dance at a club. Afterwards they find Aristotle returning to the cab from yet another trip to the bathroom. Divya thinks he might have something more than reflux.

Hank and Emily sit and talk alone. Eventually they start to kiss.

"Back Where We Started"

Hank and Emily are kissing in the hammock. Ken arrives and tells them his nose won't stop bleeding. Hank sees that he is leaking spinal fluid and needs a CT. Evan arrives and grabs Hank.

Jill and Divya are unable to wake Aristotle at the wheel. Apparently he stopped for donuts and is unconscious in a hypoglycemic coma. They rush him to the hospital.

Evan tells Hank that he has found Raj on the floor in a pool of blood. Evan recalls seeing Raj talking with Karma and ran at him in anger, causing Raj to fall over a ledge. Hank quickly realizes that the red liquid is a Bloody Mary. Raj wakes up and remembers Evan trying to run towards him but being too drunk and falling on his face. Raj dragged Evan to a chair and simply passed out later with a drink in his hand. Raj tells Evan that Karma went home.

Ken has his CT with Hank and Emily in the room. The results show that Ken has had a miniature toy sword in his sinus cavity since childhood. Evan correctly guessed that Ken fought with his brothers over action figures as a kid and one got shoved up there. This is the cause of the his sinus pain.

A recovered Aristotle tells the women he wanted one last hurrah. They run into Hank and Evan who are wheeling Ken into the hospital. Raj runs up saying he remembers allowing Karma to borrow Evan's minivan. Raj gives Divya a kiss and tells her he'll see her later. Ken apologizes to Hank for the way he acted when they were in middle school.

Evan and Hank discuss Raj's dance with Karma. Evan wonders whether he should watch the surveillance tape of Raj's dance. Hank says he shouldn't. Evan seems a little concerned about Hank's possible involvement with Emily.

Divya has found the note from Dieter and tape of the private dance. As she glances at the note, Karma walks in to return Evan's van. She congratulates Divya on having such a great man in Raj. Divya starts to watch the tape and Evan runs in. Raj declines the dance, instead offering Karma work at one of his hotels and saying complimentary things about Divya.

The tape then cuts to a drunk Evan dancing on the stripper pole by himself. Badly.

Summary: Evan gets roped into a hunting trip while playing "faux beau" again to impress Paige's parents, while Hank discovers that his new young patient's mother is a familiar face from Hamptons Heritage.

Open with Emily showing Hank an article where Heritage Hospital blasts Jill and Hank's community clinic. She tells him no one wants to see their doctor in the paper and he points out she took out a full page ad. They start to fool around which leads to her admitting having a fear of intimacy.

Early the next morning Hank, Evan, Divya and Jill visit Jim a patient who suffers from Hepatitis. On the way the discuss fighting back against the negative press. Hank brings Jim more meds and treats a wound on his ankle.

Hank drives Jill home and on the way spots Dr. Blair. Jill tries to hide, but Blair walks over to the car and discusses the article. Blair thinks the smart thing to do is wait a few years for the hospital to set up the clinic, Jill is worried there are no guarantees they will ever open it. Blair thinks she and Jill can do good work together.

Hank goes to see Jamie, a divorcee who thinks his 7-year old son Jake gets sick every time he returns from visiting his mother. Hank examines Jake and doesn't find anything wrong. Jamie is worried about allergies and Hank orders a scratch test.

Paige meets with Evan to brief him on an upcoming lunch with her parents. She thinks keeping the current lie going will be easier than telling her parents (particularly her father) the truth. Paige's father is William Collins, a retired general who is the CEO of a Fortune 500 defense contractor and possible presidential candidate. Her father is a man's man and Paige coaches him in matters bourbon and hunting.

The lunch with William and Paige's mother, Ellen, seems to go well. Evan ends up saying a few nice things about Paige that weren't scripted. Afterwards they get to talking about hunting and before Paige can stop them there is a hunting trip scheduled for Wednesday. Complete novice Evan is petrified.

Evan tells Hank and Divya the plan is for him to pair-up with Paige and have her do all the shooting. He also hints that he is starting to really like Paige.

Hank arrives to see Jake's mother and is stunned to see she is none other than Dr. Blair. Blair tells Hank she's never seen Jake sick and thinks he's grown out of the allergies Jamie worries about. We see Jake playing with the girls he likes, Olivia. Once again he tells Hank he feels fine.

Hank is woken up in the middle of the night by a call from Emily. She wants him to come over because she is "lonely."

At the beginning of the hunting day William insists that he hunts with Evan and they have a men vs. women contest. William gives Evan instructions he doesn't understand.

Both Blair and Jamie are distractions as Hank tries to conduct the scratch test. Divya takes the bickering parents away and Hank sees that Olivia has written "POO" on Jake's chest. Jake says he doesn't understand girls. Blair and Jamie return during the test and again cannot contain their arguing around their son.

William criticizes for resting his gun on a tree when he goes to the bathroom.

Emily runs into Jill in town. Emily has positive things to say about the clinic and offers her services.

Evan screws up again, this time making noise right as William is about to shoot. William demands he stay behind him, but after Evan turns around William is nowhere to be found. We see the women are about to end their day and find Evan and William. Just then we hear a shot and what sounds like Evan yelling.

Hank is called to see Jamie and Blair. Once again they are fighting over Jake's health, with Jamie refusing to let him go to his mother's house because he always returns sick. Upstairs Jake is feeling sick. He throws up on Hank's shoes and says he feels better. He's thrown up several times that week but not told his parents because he thought it would make them fight. Divya pops in to tell Hank that Evan has a "912" emergency. Hank sends Divya.

We see that William has accidentally shot Evan in the behind (a "flesh wound") after losing track of him. William is upset because gunshot wounds have to be reported and this won't play well with the press. William says he doesn't care for Evan and starts to offer to pay him to leave his daughter alone with the women come running.

Hank tells Jake's parents he's been withholding from them. They both admit Jake's had trouble with the divorce. He's begun to fear the dark and won't sleep with his door closed. Blair can't believe she missed her own son's illness.

Divya pulls the pellets out of Evan's behind. Hank walks in and basically everyone laughs at Evan. Evan tells them he shot himself when he propped his gun against a tree, it fell over and went off.

Emily and Hank meet at night near the beach. They begin to kiss, but Hank's phone rings. It is test results about Jake which have him confused. He is called again, this time it's Jake saying his parents are both unconscious in his room and he doesn't know what to. Hank keeps has Emily call 911 and rushes to Jake's home.

With help from Emily, Hank is able to give Jake's parents oxygen and get them conscious. They are suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning which has come from a faulty hot water heater attached to a new hot tub. The heater has been piping carbon monoxide into Jake's room and his fear of the dark probably saved his life.

On their way out of town William attempt to give Evan a check "for your medical expenses." Evan turns him down.

Jake is excited to tell Hank that "POO" meant Property of Olivia. Blair thanks Hank for his good work and gives him a bag of homegrown tomatoes. Blair tells Hank she hasn't changed her mind about the HankMed clinic and now wants to take the clinic back immediately.

Evan begins to tell Hank about how he got shot but changes his mind at the last minute. Evan then tells Hank that Emily has stolen Jake as a patient.

Hank confronts Emily about Jake. She doesn't really apologize, saying she's competitive and Jamie was worried Hank was too chummy with Blair. During the conversation she unbuttons her shirt and the start fooling around on the couch.

Paige brings Evan payment for lunch and hunting with his parents. He tells her he no longer wants to take her money which leads to her asking him out on a real date.

On the way to see Jim Jill tells Hank she wants them to move forward and that Emily volunteered. Jim's liver test numbers are spectacular and his ankle has completely healed.

Summary:	When two lottery winners arrive in the Hamptons, Hank treats them both for conditions that appear to be related to their newly lavish lifestyle. Meanwhile, Divya finds herself taken aback by her attraction to a documentarian she meets when she and Hank are called to the home of a kidney transplant patient.

In a small town somewhere (we know so because it has a water tower) a man named Roy comes home and announces to his wife Ginnie that they have won the lottery.

"What are we gonna buy first?" she asks.

Cut to an enormous house on an estate in the Hamptons. Ginnie welcomes Hank. Roy hurt his wrist helping the movers but Hank's there for the wife, who's having an allergic reaction to her fake gold jewelry.

Evan hears that Roy put all his money in one bank and offers up his financial planning services.

The couple, who are adorable and very "aw shucks" about their new riches, invite the boys to the renewal of their wedding vows that weekend. Everyone will be there, she explains. She invited the entire neighborhood.

Hank and Evan discuss Boris' impending return; he's bringing Marissa.

Evan whines about Eddie being out of touch for his birthday three days ago. They walk into the house and Evan is greeted by a surprise party.

Later that night, Evan thanks his dad for coming, tickled to see him.

Hank finds Jill, saying he wants to talk about Emily. She assures him they don't actually need to talk about it. Good talk.

Divya brings him a present, but Paige butts in with the same watch the CEO of Goldman Sachs was wearing when he testified in front of Congress.

Divya tells Jill things are going great with her betrothed.

Evan soaks it all in, happy about Paige, his watch and the fact his dad actually came to his birthday - even if the real thing was three days ago.

Divya and Hank check with a maid, whose boss Adam called them because she was nauseous yesterday. She brushes off his concerns, but he tells Hank she had a kidney transplant two years ago.

They video-conference with her doctor, who worries she's not taking it easy. The doctor mentions that Adam is the donor.

Evan visits with Roy to talk about his finances. Roy says he'd be happy just sticking it under his mattress. He's worried about "the lottery curse" and losing everything. He's out-of-sorts.

Hank drops by his dad's super fancy beach pad. Hank awkwardly thanks him for coming to Evan's birthday. The phone rings and Ed excuses himself. Hank looks around.

He finds pages of Boris' stationary with practiced signatures in his name on them. He leaves.

Hank visits Roy, who's starting to freak out about his wrist. Hank examines it. He sees a scratch on Roy's hand. Hank wants to run a blood test. Roy says it's just about the worst pain ever. Hank sends Evan for the portable CT scanner, saying he needs to test Roy for necrotizing fasciitis, the terrible flesh-eating virus.

"Woah, that might qualify as a lottery curse," Evan says.

Back at the house, Boris pulls up, super cheery.

Hank asks Evan if he mentioned Boris to Eddie. He wonders if he threw the party to steal the letterhead.

Back with Tally the maid, Divya tells her her kidney function is fine, but suggests she get some rest. Adam insists she go lie down.

At their place, Hank gets word that Roy doesn't have a flesh-eating virus, but he doesn't know what the problem is.

Paige drops by for Evan, whisking him away for a couple massage. He begs off, saying he needs to work on Roy's financial planning.

Back at Adam's house, he tells her she's like family. And he's the only one who matched. "When the universe puts something like that in front of you, it's hard to deny," he says.

Hank phones Roy, who's feeling much better on his antibiotics, despite a small cough. He says none of the neighbors have RSVP'd yet.

Hank hears their parrot Walter squawking in the background and thinks he might know what's making Roy sick.

Back at Adam's, he tells Divya that Tally's pain has gotten worse. Her kidney hurts.

Hank tells Roy and Ginnie that Roy might have parrot fever. They're mostly upset to learn their parrot might be sick.

Divya calls for Hank, who rushes over to see Tally. Her levels are normal, so they're thinking it's not kidney-related.

Divya goes for the ultrasound. Hank sees that it's diverticulitis and says she needs to go to the hospital. Divya volunteers to go with her and Adam.

Hank checks on Boris, who's doing fine. He tells her Marissa is moving to the Hamptons. Boris takes a call from Marco and is upset that the travel ban between Cuba and the United States hasn't been lifted.

At the hospital, Jill notices that Adam is sort of hot. Divya pretends she hasn't noticed but is psyched he's a documentarian.

Divya checks in with him. She asks him why he gave her his kidney. He says he used to call Tally "Mama." His own mother disapproves of pretty much everything he does. The family is all personal injury lawyers. Divya says she can imagine not doing what's expected of you can be trying.

The next morning, Jill busts Divya leaving Tally's room. She slept there overnight. She claims she was concerned for Tally.

Ginnie worries that no one's going to come to their renewal. Evan wishes Paige was there, but she's ignoring him.

Roy comes out, his hand is swollen and inflamed. He says if he had a saw he would have cut off his hand by now.

Hank drains fluid from Roy's hand and tapes his wrist. But he's not missing their vow renewal for anything.

Divya stops by the hospital and runs into Adam. He's carrying flowers that he awkwardly gives to her. He asks about the ring on her finger. They both seem upset when she says she's engaged.

Ginnie tries not to freak out that no one is there. Jill comes in and Ginnie "introduces" her to Hank.

Roy and Ginnie renew their vows. Ginnie gets choked up. Divya walks in late and seems somber about the whole thing.

Outside, the entire attendance is just four people. Hank sees Roy eating tons of rich food and asks for the microscope. It's not parrot fever - he has gout. "King of diseases and the disease of kings," Hank explains.

He has to change his diet.

Evan sits alone and mopes. Finally Paige comes in followed by what seems like the whole neighborhood. She brought a few friends. She tweeted it.

She did it for Evan.

Hank jogs up on Boris at home. He's glum. Marissa's not coming. She's been arrested. Boris says he can't help.

Hank drops by Eddie's. Hank asks him about the forged signatures. Hank tells him he doesn't want an explanation.

Hank tells Eddie that Boris operates at a level beyond his reach. Eddie enjoys that Hank is worried about him.

As Hank is leaving, Eddie tells him he used the stationary for the party invitations.

At the estate, Divya, Hank and Evan play a game of laser tag amid the shrubbery. Divya doesn't just win, she rules.

Eddie joins them. He announces to Evan that he's a nincompoop. He's finally realized he got Evan's birthday wrong. He apologizes and is ready to leave. The boys invite him to play laser tag, but he says he has somewhere to be.

Walking off the property, Eddie meets Boris as he slowly drives by and attempts to introduce himself. Boris knows who he is.

"Exactly" who he is, Boris says meaningfully and drives away.

"You don't know the half of it," Eddie says.

Production Code:	RP211
Summary:	Tensions grows between Hank and Emily when they care for a patient together but disagree on the course of treatment. Evan concocts a cyber retaliation plan against Emily, who has managed to direct web traffic to her site.

Evan is panicking because Emily has purchased every web address that is close to HandMed.com. Emily hears him refer to her as "the succubus" as she arrives to meet with Hank. Evan seems at this point to realize that Hank and Emily have a budding relationship.

Divya meets with a woman she would like to replace her with HankMed. Evan arrives at the end of the interview to complain about Emily. This chases the candidate away. Evan is shocked she already knew about Hank and Emily.

Hank and Jill make a house call to see Stanley a 30-something gamer who has a recurring cold with other symptoms. While there Stanley serves them with a cease-and-desist order from Blair. Aside from being ill he is a process server.

Hank and Divya visit the Philips family. Ted is a wealthy businessman who is in the Hamptons with his wife and children to pick up his father so he can join them for part of their worldwide travels. It turns out Ted's father is Dr. Philips, a renowned surgeon.

Evan has lunch with Eddie and complains about Emily 'though Eddie barely pays attention. Eddie thinks he can help by using a friend who is a computer hacker. Eddie gets a 'phone call and leaves quickly. Evan sees him meet a man in a red hat. The two leave together.

Evan examines Philips, who tells him he's had emphysema for 16 years after smoking two packs of cigarettes a day. Philips quit six months earlier. They want him to make the trip with his family and Hank suggests several drugs to help with his symptoms. Philips asks about Theophylline, which a past doctor prescribed for him. Hank advises against it because of the many side-effects. Philips says it was the only drug that made him feel better and Hank agrees to call in a pulmonologist.

Divya finds out Stanley's results will be in the following morning. Hank learns the only pulmonologist within a three-state radius is Emily. Evan hates the idea of them working together. Divya thinks it's a great idea. Once Hank leaves, Divya tells Evan she's convinced getting Hank and Emily together will be the best way to break them apart.

On the way to Philips's house Divya calls Stanley after his tests come back looking scary. He is lying on the floor in some pain.

Hank and Divya walk into Philips' place to find him watching old surgery videos with Emily. Hank learns that Emily approved his occasionally smoking cigars and this leads to an argument between the doctors.

Evan calls Divya and tells her he is with Stanley at the hospital. Divya hears one of Philips' granddaughters's coughing. Hank believes Philips may have given her pneumonia.

Blair apologizes to Jill about the injunction, telling her it "wasn't personal." Jill responds that Boris, the biggest benefactor, wasn't as understanding. Blair examines Stanley and says he needs to get to surgery immediately. Stanley hands Evan his laptop, "saying my life is in your hands." Jill tells Evan she made up the story about Boris.

Hank arrives to find Philips covered in sweat. Tests reveal he's having a heart problems, which Hank doesn't understand based on his meds. Emily arrives and tells Hank to his surprise that she gave him Theophylline

While in bed upstairs Philips says he helped himself to a few extra Theophylline pills beyond Emily's prescription. Hank asks Emily to leave but she does not. Hank intubates Phillips but it does not seem to work. The doctors (and Divya) work on Phillips overnight and finally pull him out of danger the following day.

Evan drops by to see Eddie at his new place. Eddie's hacker buddy rigged it so that when you log into Emily's site you are directed to an embarrassing childhood picture. Eddie hurries Evan out the door. Evan wants to invest and Eddie asks for cash.

Phillips wants Hank to let his son know he won't be able to finish the adventure with them.

Ted is upset at how sick his father got. Divya and Emily explain that he overdosed on Theophylline.

Evan tries to explain to Hank the problems with him seeing the competition. Hank tells him there is no reason to worry.

Phillips tells the gang his cough never went away. Hank notices a rash on his chest and they immediately run to stop Ted and his family. They catch them just before boarding their private jet. It turns out Phillips has whooping cough which he got from his granddaughter Maddie.

While Evan waits at a restaurant for Eddie, Stanley shows up. He apologizes for having to serve them. Evan suggests maybe Stanley should quit his job if he hates it so much.

Hank and Divya treat Phillips and Maddie for the cough. Maddie's mother tells Hank they never immunized her because of the controversy. They think Maddie must have gotten the cough on one of their adventures.

Outside the house Emily apologizes to Hank for screwing up. Hank consoles her and offers to cook her dinner. She passes, since she is flying to see her family in the morning. She tells Evan she wants a truce on the "digital warfare."

Blair tells Jill the hospital is dropping its lawsuit. Blair says she thinks patient care is always the most important thing.

Divya tells the guy the only other option for someone to join HankMed is Emily. Hank thinks it's a good idea.

Eddie stops by the house later that night looking for Evan, who is out. Hank tells Eddie he can wait and offers him a beer. They watch baseball together and both seem to enjoy the experience.

Jill goes to see Boris. He is upset that she used his name and jeopardized his privacy. He is furious.

Evan pulls in the driveway in time to see Eddie leaving. Evan follows him and sees him meet with the red hat guy again.

Recurring Role: Christine Ebersole (Ms. Newberg), Henry Winkler (Eddie R. Lawson), Campbell Scott (Boris Kuester von Jurgens-Ratenicz), Dieter Riesle (Dieter), Brooke D'Orsay (Paige Collins)
Guest Stars: Rena Sofer (AJ), Paola Turbay (Dr. Marissa Caseras), Patrick Heusinger (Adam), William Mercado (Waiter)
Production Code: RP212
Summary: Divya is surprised by her reaction to Adam's failing health. A gossipy socialite patient doesn't stick around long enough for Hank to make a diagnosis.

Open with Boris calling Hank to his side. He hasn't been able to sleep in days and needs some help from Hank to get through the next few busy days. Boris wants amphetamines but Hanks advises an IV.

While sitting near the beach with Jill, a woman literally falls into Hank's lap. Her name is AJ and she's having problems with one of her ankles. Hank diagnoses a sprain and gives her a card.

Eddie and Ms. Newberg announce to the boys they will be moving in together.

Shortly afterwards Eddie looks stunned and starts hyperventilating. Eddie thinks the move has caused anxiety and Newberg says Eddie's been working hard to launch Blue Sky. Evan looks over and sees the red hat guy sitting at the bar.

Adam (he of the one kidney) calls Divya to say he's been feeling sick

AJ brings Hanks over to say she's been feeling "spacey and nauseated." She admits to Googling Hank and asks him about still being single and living on Boris' estate. She seems to be fishing for info about Boris but Hank politely says nothing.

Eddie is avoiding taking a stress test. Evan tells Hank about seeing Eddie with the red hat guy the other night. Hanks thinks they should confront Eddie.

Paige asks Evan about not being invited to his family brunch. Evan says he's still working on his relationship with Eddie.

Hank brings Divya to AJ's place. Looking inside the front door they see her collapse and break through the glass to get to her. After recovering AJ says she got dizzy after standing up. Hanks suggests a blood pressure issue. Hanks tells AJ he's not sure what her problem is in a diagnostic sense but wants to give her an MRI. She isn't happy to hear the MRI is at a hospital.

On their way out Hank refers to AJ as a yenta mouth, in terms of the gossiping. Divya noticed that her Pollack painting was hanging upside down. Divya gets some of Adam's test results and leaves to see him.

The red hat guy pops into Eddie's car. He refers to Eddie having an outstanding debt he hasn't completely paid.

Divya tests Adam and finds out he has high potassium levels. He starts to have chest pains and heart palpitations. Divya gives him an injection and calls 911.

In the hospital Adam tells Divya he caught Malaria while in Afghanistan. It seems to have caused problems when combined with having donated a kidney. Adam continues to flirt with Divya, who tells him he'll need some dietary adjustments and a medication. She tells him his condition usually leaves 1/3 of patients okay, 1/3 with stable but impaired kidney function and 1/3 with renal failure. It seems as if Divya is having feelings for Adam.

Boris returns from business and literally carries Marissa off the helicopter.

AJ comes over for a meeting with Hank. While waiting she grills Evan in her gossipy way about Eddie. Hank arrives and it is clear AJ was actually supposed to go to the hospital.

Hank gives Marissa an exam and we learn she is five weeks pregnant. She doesn't want him to tell Boris.

Hank and Evan speak with Eddie. His stress test was fine but he has high cholesterol. They ask him about the red hat guy. Eddie is in debt to some "unappealing characters" because he wanted to pay them back as soon as possible. He apologizes. When Eddie leaves Evan seems dubious about Eddie's story. Surprisingly Hank seems to believe their father.

Paige offers to bailout Eddie's company. Evan refuses to take her money. He then invites her to an upcoming family gathering.

Divya tells Hank that AJ never got her MRI. They are handed a formal invitation to meet with Boris that evening. Evan runs off and Divya tells Hank about feeling scared when Adam crashed.

Paige and Evan golf with Eddie. He tells Evan he really likes her. Evan tells Eddie about the meeting with Boris.

Jill tells Hank she's never heard of AJ, despite the fact she said she's been coming to the Hamptons for years. Hank suddenly thinks AJ has a fainting disorder.

Divya sees Adam, who has gotten better and is ready to leave the hospital. He thanks her for saving his life and they end up kissing.

Hank and Jill go to see AJ. They find her house completely empty.

Hank and Evan are dressed and ready to see Boris. Eddie shows up and asks to crash the party and maybe pitch Blue Sky to Boris. After a quick consultation the boys agree.

Divya tells Jill about the kiss with Adam. She admits it's a connection she's never had with her fiancé.

During the meeting Boris tells the guys that Eddie is "a criminal and a liar" and after being convicted of a crime by the SEC he became a confidential informant against Boris. He's been spying on Boris and his home and stealing from him. The man in the red hat is Eddie's federal agent contact. Boris has conducted his own investigation to ensure that Eddie acted alone. AJ was Boris' investigator and she determined the boys did not help Eddie. At this point Eddie clutches his chest and falls over. Hank says he thinks Eddie is having a heart attack and asks Evan to call 911 as the episode ends.

Summary:	Following Eddie's heart attack, Hank and Evan discover things they didn't know about their father. Hank treats Jill after she collapses at a golf tournament and Divya still hasn't decided what to do about her feelings for Adam.

The episode opens with Eddie hallucinating about being on the beach with Hank and Evan. Eddie has had a heart attack and Hank must use a defibrillator to restart his heart. Eddie is taken to Hamptons Heritage hospital where the doctors manage to stabilize him. Divya runs into Adam, who is infatuated with her after they kissed before. Divya makes it clear she thought it was a mistake.

HankMed is contracted to provide medical services at a local charity golf tournament. Jill is playing in the tournament and is paired with gold pro Jack O'Malley. The rest of the foursome includes a married couple, Nan and Dick, who seem to have a drinking problem and are a bit out of control. Evan is leaving to go home and Hank asks him not to speak to Boris about their father. When Evan returns home, Boris gives him a package for his eyes only and tells him he will call tomorrow.

At the hospital, Hank and Evan are speaking with Eddie about changes he needs to make in his lifestyle. Evan is anxious to hear Eddie's side of the story. Eddie was doing some money laundering using HankMed funds that Evan loaned him. When he inadvertently signed for medical supplies headed for Cuba, he was arrested and agreed to work with the SEC to determine whether Boris was involved in legitimate business. Evan keeps pressing Eddie until his heart monitor goes off, so Hank makes him back off.

At the golf course, a golf cart crash produces some cuts and scratches on Jack and Jill was thrown from the cart. Hank takes the opportunity to speak with Jack about a condition he suspects Jack might be suffering from. However, Jack is aware of the condition and cannot stop playing golf to get it fixed and risk losing his sponsors.

Evan steals Eddie's phone and gets the name of his lawyer. The lawyer reveals that Eddie was going to leave the country to avoid sentencing until he came to the Hamptons and decided that being with his boys was more important. After that, he decided to work with the SEC to hopefully make his sentence disappear.

Hank does some research on Jack's condition and discovers a new drug just approved by the FDA and proceeds to give Jack injections in his hands. Jill asks Hank for cortisone for her aching back and will not listen to Hank's advice to just get some rest. He gives her electrical stimulation to loosen her back. She later collapses on the course after completing a long putt. Hank is called again and discovers she has been bitten by a black widow spider.

At the golf course, Evan is participating in a hole in one contest when Boris calls, making him pull off his shot. His shot goes in anyway, and he wins a huge boat. He immediately leaves to meet with Boris, who offers to help Eddie leave the country. Afterward, Jill stops by to let Evan know that as an employee of HankMed, he is not eligible to win the boat.

Hank, Evan and Eddie are relaxing on the beach. Evan tries to hint to Eddie that he might want to leave the Hamptons and recuperate elsewhere, but Eddie and Hank are insistent that the Hamptons is the place for him. Hank pleases Eddie when he offers him a mulligan in their relationship.

Guest Stars: Melissa Fumero (Brooke), Liz Holtan (Mikell), Max Meisel (Share House Frat Boy), Eric Morris (Kyle), Paola Turbay (Dr. Marissa Caseras)
Production Code: RP214
Summary: Jill's backyard is overtaken by jetsetting reality TV show stars, where the various health problems are complicated with the 24-hour cameras. Dr. Peck returns with a new deal, while Marisa tries to keep her pregnancy and career under control.

Hank and Evan are having a video conference with Divya from London who is preparing for her wedding. She officially gives them her three week notice. Afterward, Hank gets a call from Jill whose car was towed. They are filming a reality show at the complex where she lives and Hank offers her accommodations at his place. Before they leave, there is an accident on the water and Hank and Jill team up to rescue the injured woman. The producer gets the rescue on film, but Hank refuses to sign the release form. Evan and Paige are trying on period swimsuits for a Gatsby party at the Blackstone Club. Paige and her family are members of the exclusive club, but she tells him he can bring a friend along.

Hank speaks to Boris and Marisa about the requirements for Marisa to practice medicine in the United States. Boris is concerned about Marisa, she seems depressed and homesick. Hank, Evan and Divya returns to the set of the reality show for Craig, who is complaining of dizziness and blurry vision. Craig wants to stay in the beach house where the show is filming and Divya volunteers to stay and monitor him. Evan finds out from the producer that Hank refused to sign the release to appear in the show so Evan promises to try to convince him. Hank lets the producer know that the injured woman, Brooke is okay and has no spinal damage.

Emily comes home late at night. She quietly goes to Hank's bedroom and climbs into bed only to find Jill there, with Hank staying on the couch. The next day, Hank and Evan ask Emily to join HankMed as an equal partner. Emily expands on the idea and talks about franchising the concierge practice, saying she met with some financial backers in California who are eager to invest with her as the focal point. Hank agrees to consider it. Evan talks over the franchising idea with Paige, worried that Emily is taking over. Paige advise that Evan be aggressive and control the agenda.

At the reality show, Divya tells Hank that she watched all of the DVD footage with Craig in it. She could not find any evidence of drug abuse, but the symptoms indicate that. Craig reveals that he suffers from excessive sweating, so he had shots injected into his arm pits. Hank tells him that the drug can result in botulism.

The TV show producer Terry is upset because he is not getting much cooperation at locations around the Hamptons. Evan suggest he follow Hank around instead, but Terry says he still has access problems. Evan tells him he can get him access to the Blackstone club.

Hank talks with Marisa about the infection that was revealed by the blood work. There is concern about when she contracted the disease, and if her unborn child is infected. Also, Hank discovers the disease has the side effect of increasing the chance of a male child to 2 to 1. This is very important since Boris's disease passes from father to son, and he has adamantly refused to have children, wanting his disease to stop with him. Hank arranges an MRI at Hamptons Heritage that shows no problem with her brain so antibiotics are indicated. They must wait, however, to do tests on the fetus to see if it has the infection. Boris watches them talking through the windows and realizes they are keeping something from him.

Evan arrives at the Gatsby party with the cast and crew of the reality show. He asks Paige if they can enter and film and she is surprisingly receptive, but says she has to get permission from the executive manager. Later, after the crew is given permission to film, Evan finds out that Paige is not happy about the way he used their relationship to take advantage of her. One of the cast gets ill at the party, with the same symptoms as Craig. Hank discovers that the underlying cause for the illness was not Craig's injections, but from a spoiled jar of salsa.

That night, Hank and Emily are talking in bed. Hank assures her that Jill was just a house guest. Emily tells him she knows better, and knows there are unresolved feelings between the two, but she doesn't want to talk about it. The next day, Hank is going into the main house to give Marisa her antibiotics. He encounters Boris who asks him what they are hiding from him. Hank insists that Boris must speak with Marisa.

Summary:	Hank makes a house call to help a teen singing prodigy. Hank and Emily have their biggest fight yet and Eddie just has to insert himself into it. Evan finds himself in a sticky situation with Paige's father, the General.

The episode opens with Evan preparing an elaborate apology for Paige, only to be discovered by her father the General, and Paige not at home. Hank is called to examine Natalie, a 14 year old young lady who is a musical prodigy and is unhappy her parents are forcing her to stay with them in the Hamptons. She has been complaining of a sore throat along with nausea. Hank leaves and goes to his father's house to find him being examined by Emily, and refusing to say why.

Back at Evan's house, Paige shows up with a smile. She has forgiven him but has been enjoying his efforts to gain her forgiveness. She asks him to join her at her house because her father has business guests coming over and her mother is away. Divya is awaiting a fax regarding her wedding arrangements. She finds a troubling fax that takes her to Adam's house. The fax contains lab results from another doctor that indicates a decline in his health, and since HankMed is still listed as his primary physician, they received a copy of the results. Divya goes to see Adam, but he thinks it is a personal call. When she tells him it is strictly a medical issue, he sends her away. While driving home, Hank speaks to Evan on the phone, who lets it slip that their father is seeing another physician specifically to avoid sentencing.

While waiting for Paige at her house, Evan accidentally opens a hidden panel that opens into a secret room. He manages to get himself locked in, just before the General arrives in the main room with his defense contractor guests. Evan overhears a private conversation between the General and his guests that he was not supposed to hear. Divya speaks with Hank about Adam's medical condition. Hank is upset with her that she went to treat him when she admitted that Adam was the patient she was personally involved with, and forbids her from treating him again.

Hank tracks down Emily to talk to her about his father. He tries to tell her that his father can be devious, and she doesn't need to fake any results for him or his father's sake. She is put out by the accusation, and leaves. Paige rescues Evan from the secret room and he tells her he overheard her father and friends talking about overthrowing a government. Paige laughs and tells him the guests are trying to talk her father into running for public office, but she doesn't think he will do it. Paige and Evan go outside to find he father upset with loud music being played by his neighbor, who turns out to be Natalie, the young lady Hank is treating. Natalie's parents have rigged a generator to provide power for her band while they rehearse for a recording session. While they lose power again, a utility building where the generator is located explodes. A reporter shows up and grills Evan about the General, and Evan lets slip that if the General ever runs for public office, it will be because the general public asks him, not for special interests.

Divya speaks with Jill about the possibility she could be a kidney donor match for Adam. If so, it could be the universe giving her a sign of their connection. Jill tells her if she wants to break her engagement, just break it and don't look for a sign. Hank follows up with an examination of Adam when he notices some gym equipment. He informs Adam that high physical activity could be the cause of the indications of decline that was revealed in the lab results, and recommends he take a few days break.

Hank returns to Natalie's house when he receives a text message from her saying she is feeling worse. She is outside playing with her neighbor, the General's, dog, who is carrying around a section of deer hide that came from a deer the General has been tanning. Hank notices spots on her hands and has a hunch that Natalie has been exposed to the anthrax bacteria. Next door, Evan is talking with the General when he has a coughing spasm, and Evan notices black splotches in the handkerchief he was coughing into. When Hank arrives and examines the General, he notices singed nostril hair, indicating the General was close to a fire and not exposed to anthrax. The General admits it was he who accidentally blew up the utility building, when all he wanted to do was stop the noisy music. Hank's closer examination of the General reveals a more dangerous situation, and an ambulance is called for. The band starts playing again and Hank has another hunch that the hides covering the drums is the source of the bacteria, especially since the drummer was also starting to get the spots on his hands.

Hank's father calls him and Emily to his place to try to mend fences. He admits that his lawyers told him that a medical issue could help minimize any sentence he would receive, and that having family member for a doctor made any results look suspect. Hank apologizes to Emily and says he doesn't know what over the line for her means and that he barely knows her. She refuses to reveal any more private information about herself and he says that is not acceptable, and that if they are going to move forward with a relationship, he needs more. She tells him that is all there is, but that he got closer to her than anyone else has, and they break up.

Later, the General is hosting a party at his estate, where Natalie is the guest performer. He, Natalie and the drummer are all recovered from their medical issues. The General confesses to Evan that he is surprised by the support he is receiving about running for office, and says he would not have seriously considered running without the shot in the pants. Evan jokes that they are even.

At the end of their busy day, Hank and Divya are talking about their respective relationships. They reflect that they seem to have advice for others, but cannot seem to get their own love lives straight. The episode ends.

Astraphobia

Season 2
Season Episode: 16

Originally aired: Thursday February 10, 2011
Writer: Andrew Lenchewski, Stuart Feldman
Director: Ed Fraiman
Production Code: RP216
Summary: Hank treats a park ranger who is experiencing memory loss; Divya investigates the case of a storm chaser who has a history of bone fractures; Evan is irrationally afraid of a coming storm.

The episode begins with a group of scouts camping in a park and being told scary stories over the fire by a park ranger Pete. The weather turns threatening so the scouts return to their tent. The ranger notices a flashlight from someone walking off the designated trail and tries to follow but stumbles and falls.

The next day, Evan brings in some bags filled with emergency preparedness supplies in preparation for the inevitable late season storm. Hank tells Divya about Evan's fear of thunderstorms as an explanation for the emergency kits. HankMed receives a call to respond to a scout with poison ivy when Pete stumbles into camp with no memory of what happened to him. Hank examines Pete and can find no cause for his short term memory loss, but Pete's hearing seems to be ultra-sensitive.

In the parking lot, Evan is talking to Stacy who is a storm tracker. She thinks there is major instability in the atmosphere and a big storm brewing. Divya comes outside to use her cell phone but has no luck. Stacy offers the use of her satellite phone in exchange for Divya removing her cast.

Back at Hamptons Heritage, Jill is briefing the hospital staff in preparation for the upcoming storm. Hank and Divya bring Pete in for the MRI and Hank stops to talk with Jill and gets a date. When Pete takes off his watch in preparation for the MRI, Hank notices a burn mark under his watch. Hank theorizes that Pete was struck by lightning.

Divya takes an x-ray of Stacey's wrist prior to removing her cast. She notices something unusual about the break and wants to talk with the doctor who set wrist before removing the cast. Stacey is frustrated by this and leaves.

Hank runs a series of tests on Pete who is anxious to leave the hospital. Hank wants to repeat the tests in 48 hours as a precaution against future symptoms but Pete doesn't want to stay. Hank relents but insists on driving him back to the park.

Hank looks up the technical term for Evan's irrational fear of lightning and thunder, which is Astraphobia. Hank is concerned since he has never seen Evan this distraught.

Later, Hank and Divya go back to the park to check on Pete who is back with the group of scouts. Pete hears some banging and grunting that Hank and Divya cannot hear. They investigate and find Stacy building a platform in an non-designated area, and when confronted, she slips and falls from the platform onto the ocean bank below. Hank and Pete pull her back up and falls onto of Pete, breaking a rib and getting a buzzing in her ear. Hank questions her about broken bones and discovers she has a history of injuries. He notices on the x-ray a problem with bone density and wants to do a full workup but she is insistent on getting ready for the storm that is supposed to strike that night.

Hank and Jill are driving to dinner when Hank reveals he has broken up with Emily. Pete calls him and tells him that his sensitive hearing is gone and he feels like he is no longer connected to nature. Hank arrives at the park but is not at the lodge. He runs into Stacy who is packing her car to head out to the storm. She hasn't seen Pete and says the awkward fall she had earlier is enough for awhile. Hank remembers the buzzing in her ear she mentioned and when questioned, Stacy confirms it happened when she touched Pete. Hank theorizes the buzzing came from Pete and that he might be in big trouble. They find Pete standing on the standing on the platform overlooking the beach, apparently hoping to get struck by lightning again and regain his connection to nature. As Hank approaches, Pete collapses.

Hank thinks Pete has a tear in his carotid artery which caused a clot. Jill cannot get a cell signal, but Stacy comes through again with her satellite phone. At HankMed, Divya thinks Hank is at dinner and leaves him a voice mail about Stacy's lab results, confirming she has Osteomalacia, but the cause is unknown. She tries to leave to go home, but Evan finds any reason to keep her there, fearing to be alone. Divya theorizes that the cause of Evan's distress is not the storm, but the changes coming at the end of summer.

The ambulance takes Pete away and Stacy goes with him, a budding romance beginning. Hank and Jill are driving back when a tree branch falls in front of the car causing them to leave the road and getting stuck just as the rain begins. Hank goes through Evan's emergency bag which surprisingly came in very handy in their stranded situation. Back at HankMed, Divya has an epiphany about the cause of Stacy's illness, which prompts Evan to say she is turning into Hank.

The next day at the hospital, Divya meets with Pete and Stacy and tell them the good news that their conditions are under control. Divya and Evan are concerned about Hank and Jill, and Pete says he can call in a search team, but Evan has the idea to use the GPS locator that he placed in each of the emergency bags. When they arrive at Hank's car, they find Hank and Jill lying together asleep in the car.

Summary:	After swapping her high stress lifestyle for the laid back vibe of the Hamptons, Hank's latest client fears she may never learn to relax – until Hank discovers a medical condition is to blame.

Last Winter: The episode opens with a flashback to when Hank was an ER doctor and he had to relay the bad news to Jess Walsh that her friend had passed away from an aneurysm.

Present day: Hank is making a house call but no one is home. Divya drives up to Hank's surprise, but she tells him her fiance Raj is arriving the next day. He is arriving for a party they are throwing for friends in New York that cannot make the London wedding. She asks his opinion about her wedding gift to Raj, fearing that it wasn't personal enough. They hear the sound of an approaching plane and notice it land on the water on the beach side of the house. The pilot turns out to be the same Jess Walsh from last winter, and she wants help from Hank to make sure the same thing that happened to her friend does not happen to her.

Jess reports she has been feeling anxious, dizzy, nauseous, and has been having trouble sleeping. She tells Hank and Divya that she quit her job in the city, took flying lessons and moved to the Hamptons. Quite to her surprise, she feels worse than she ever did in her high pressure job in the city. She admits she used to take various drugs, including anti-depressants, but she completely stopped everything. Hank feels she has a condition that arises from going cold turkey off the anti-depressants. He recommends starting her back on the anti-depressants, as well as some blood pressure meds and gradually weaning her off them. They notice the adjacent field and Jess shows them her other planes, as well as her own runway. Divya mentions that Raj always wanted to learn how to fly, and Jess offers to give them both lessons.

Hank stops by to see Marissa and she tells him she has still not told Boris about the baby. She admits that she has always wanted a child, but knows that Boris doesn't want children. Marissa finally tells Boris, who takes the news stoically. He admits relief at finally knowing why Hank has been treating Marissa, but says he has to leave immediately for an important meeting in Manhattan.

Evan and Paige are having ice cream and talking about Divya and Raj's arranged marriage. Evan wonders why the two of them have never spent a full night together. Paige reveals why; she snores. Evan insists on her staying the night and finds out the hard way how bad her snoring really is.

The next morning, Hank leaves a message for Boris to call him. Evan stops by and drops some hints to Hank to see if he heard Paige's snoring, but Hank slept soundly. Paige comes in and Evan doesn't have the heart to tell her.

Jess takes Divya up in the airplane and begins to black out, sweating profusely. Divya keeps her conscious long enough to land the plane. Hank stops by to check her out by doing a neurological exam. He cannot find anything obvious so needs to do further tests. Jess objects, saying she has flying lessons to give. Hank grounds her, and warns her that the FAA could take away her license permanently unless she is cleared by a neurologist.

At Divya and Raj's party, Hank discovers that Evan forgot to get their present for Divya as he promised, so he hustles away to find something. When Divya and Raj open their personal gifts for each other, they discover they both bought wristwatches for each other.

That night, Evan prepares several surprises for Paige, designed to help with her snoring problem. He gives her expensive Italian lingerie, but she discovers he has sewn a tennis ball to the back of the nightie, to keep her from sleeping on her back. The fact that Evan went to such trouble charms her, even though she is disturbed by him ruining the negligee. Later, Evan makes an emergency call to Hank, desperately needing help for Paige's snoring. He says he hasn't slept in days and can't spend the rest of his life like this. Hank catches Evan's unintentional revelation that Paige might be the one for him, but Evan refuses to admit it.

The next day since Hank is in New York, he tracks down Boris. He tells Boris that Marissa needs him, and that there is a chance a cure will be found for his disease, if not in time for Boris, then in time for his child. But Boris is not happy because he had promised himself that his disease would die with him and not be passed on to future generations.

Jess is in New York, drawn to her old place of business as a stock broker. She starts having a panic attack thinking about the friend she lost and calls Hank. She begs Hank not to take her to a hospital, because that is where her friend died. Hank makes her focus her breathing, and the attack passes.

Divya and Raj are reviewing the videos that their guests made for them. They watch Evan and Paige's charming message, and Raj wonders how long they have been a couple. Raj then reveals that Divya's father's business is having problems and the wedding has taken on more importance for appearance sake.

Evan has a new idea, a full face mask for Paige to wear while she sleeps. Paige is humiliated, but Evan assures her everybody has a weakness. She says maybe she should investigate surgery, and Evan says he knows a great doctor.

Hank and Divya arrive to see Jess. Hank thinks she may have something wrong with her adrenal glands. They arrive to find Jess preparing to fly to New York to meet with her friend, who she has forgotten has died. She also does not recognize Hank or Divya. Hank checks and her pulse is racing. They rush her to the emergency room and tell her about her adrenal glands. They order an MRI after her blood pressure is under control.

Hank does an examination of Paige but does not find any inflammation or polyps. Her uvula appears to be abnormally long so Hank recommends she see a specialist. He discovers the couple eat ice cream as a nightly ritual, but he tells them dairy products can make snoring louder.

Hank is talking with Jess as they wait for the plane that will fly her to New York for her surgery. She tells her she should be back in the cockpit in six weeks, but she worries that she will have no customers. He tells her that he will be one, but not to thank him until it actually happens. She congratulates him on leaving the big city rat race like she tried to do, and he assures her that she was also successful in moving to a less stressful life.

That night, Evan is surprised when Paige's snoring is greatly reduced, but he can't sleep because of all the coffee he has been drinking. She awakens, thinking her snoring is keeping him awake, but he assures her that her snoring is much less, and in fact adorable. He tells her that she is perfect, and that even her little imperfections are cute. With trepidation, he tells her that he loves her, and to his relief, she tells him that she loves him too.

Divya and Raj are talking about the wedding, and Raj is trying to take on some responsibilities. Raj reveals that he promised her father that he would be back to work right after the wedding and that their honeymoon would have to be postponed. Divya is becoming increasingly alarmed about the wedding, honeymoon, and leaving the Hamptons and inadvertently, blurts out that she kissed a patient.

Evan and Hank arrive home with their present for Divya, a tandem bicycle. They see a moving van and assume Marissa is leaving. When they get to their door, they see movers packing their stuff and realize that Boris is kicking them out.

Summary:	Hank has a new patient who has been diagnosed with MS, but Hank starts to have his doubts; Jill is offered a new job that will take her away from the Hamptons for six months; Divya and Raj take dance lessons for their impending wedding, but their instructor falls ill with an infectious disease; Eddie must make a life changing choice.

The episode begins with Hank and Evan accompanying their father to his sentencing hearing. He and Ms. Newberg have taken the boys in after Boris kicked them out, and have told them they can stay in Ms. Newberg's house during the winter when she and Eddie move to the city.

Divya and Raj are taking dance lessons in preparation for their wedding. Tensions between them are still high after Divya's inadvertent revelation about her inappropriate behavior with a patient.

Jill is being interviewed then offered a job to help launch mobile medical clinics in South America by Ben Richards, CEO of the Richards Foundation. She is surprised by the offer, and the quick turnaround Ben requires. She notices a problem he has with reading and he admits to be suffering blurry spells. When he tells her his doctor is out of town, she recommends Hank.

Eddie comes out of the courthouse shocked by the outcome of his hearing. In 48 hours, he has to go to prison.

Hank is examining Ben and hears he thinks he is suffering a relapse of his MS condition including numbness and weakness in his limbs. He has had the condition for some time, being diagnosed in college.

Hank, Evan and Divya are having a HankMed meeting, finishing up old business. When they are done, they each shake her hand and thank her for a great summer. Somewhat disappointed, she starts to leave when they, along with Jill, surprise her with a cake as a going away present. Evan reveals that he and Paige will be attending her wedding in London. Eddie walks by as they hug, extremely depressed and retrieves something from the refrigerator and leaves without a word. Everyone is concerned but Hank thinks he will be okay.

Hank and Jill walk outside talking about Ben and the offer she received. Hank says he can cover their clinic and is surprised when she tells him she would have to leave in three days.

Divya and Raj continue their dance lessons with Niko. He encourages them to dance with passion. Divya tells Raj he should seek passion too, but he says her father works him so hard he doesn't have time for it. She laments the fate her father has for her too, wedding, then babies and more babies. She notices Niko's increasing coughing and asks to examine him, but he insists it is just a cold and bids them continue their tango practice.

Evan returns from talking to his dad and tells Hank he doesn't think his dad had any effect. He then confesses that Boris had offered to help his dad leave the country and avoid prison. Hank is surprisingly not angry with him and tells him he did the right thing in not telling their dad about the offer. Hank figures his dad should pay for his mistakes and then start a new life and not be on the run forever. Unknown to the boys, Eddie is eavesdropping on their conversation and learns of Boris' offer.

The next morning, Eddie is in much better spirits. He promises to join his sons for one last day of golf on his last day of freedom. Hank tells him how proud he is for taking responsibility. Eddie says it is because of his sons, because he is weak when he is alone.

Boris and Marisa are having an argument when Eddie shows up. As Marisa leaves in anger, Eddie thanks Boris for the offer, saying Boris is taking a risk. Boris tells him he is doing it for Hank and Evan, saying they would be better off if her were not around. Boris tells him his driver will pick him up at 5 PM that day.

Hank arrives at Ben's benefit to check up on him. Jill tells him that she is taking the offer that Ben extended to go to South America and work for his foundation. Ben arrives and tells him his condition is worse but Hank tells him he doesn't look scared, and his guests at the benefit need to hear that.

Divya and Raj arrive for their dance lesson and find Niko bedridden, so weak he cannot stand. Divya notices blood on the tissue Niko uses to cover his mouth while coughing. She asks Raj to get her bag from the car and dial 911.

At the benefit, Ben is telling the story of his disease. His message is that he is not his disease. As he is speaking, his vision starts to fade and he has trouble standing. Hank has been reviewing his medical history during the speech and guess that Ben just went blind, and he thinks he knows why.

Inside Ben's house, Hank has Ben on an IV, and his vision is improving. Hank tells him he thinks he may have been misdiagnosed with MS, and he may have Lyme disease. The timing of when he was first diagnosed, his reaction to the treatments and other clues have led him to this conclusion. Ben thinks this idea is absurd and is angry with Hank for speculating and trying to give him false hope.

Eddie, Evan and Paige are playing miniature golf. Eddie notices a change in Evan's demeanor and guesses that he finally told Paige his true feelings. Eddie tells the couple how happy he is to spend time with them this way, knowing in his heart he is about to run and may never see them again.

At the hospital, Divya tells Niko he has pneumonia and he should be alright. He thanks her for helping him for a second time and she says she must have been fated to. That wording strikes a chord with Raj as he sees how competent and happy she is working in medicine.

At Ms. Newberg's house, Hank pulls up just as Eddie comes out with his suitcase. He notices Boris' car waiting and tells his dad that he and Evan are there for him, now it is his choice whether to run or not. Eddie decides not to run.

Hank returns to see Ben with the proof he has Lyme disease and that his prognosis is much improved. Ben is chagrined at how he has let his diagnosis of MS become his whole identity.

Evan is packing for London and they talk about their dad. Evan says their dad made the right choice because Hank was there, and Hank says Evan was right about needing to give Eddie a second chance. Both agree he is a better man now than he was when they were children.

Paige arrives to pick up Evan and calls him a diva based on how much luggage he has. She tells him maybe it wasn't overkill and maybe they can make a few stops on the way home from London, like Paris and Rome. Evan says that would be great but HankMed needs him since they are already short with Divya leaving. Hank says he will be fine and for Evan to go and be with Paige.

Hank says goodbye to Divya at the cafe where HankMed was born. He thanks her for her vision of what HankMed could be and wishes her well. She says to Listen To The Music, advice given to her by Niko, saying to tango properly you must listen to the music as it can change suddenly and you must be prepared to pivot in a new direction. The advice mirrors what they are all going through in real life.

Hank and Jill are picnicking on the beach talking about their future. They are both reticent to talk about tomorrow, and just want to enjoy being together one last day.

Hank arrives at the heliport to see Ben before he leaves. Ben tells him he feels much better, and doesn't have achy joints for the first time in a very long time. He also tells Hank his foundation is always looking for good doctors if Hank ever gets bored.

Hank gets a call from Hamptons Heritage hospital, and quickly calls Divya. It turns out Niko didn't have pneumonia, but has an infectious disease and she and Raj cannot get on the airplane. As she is speaking, police cars arrive to ensure a quarantine. Divya tells Raj that they have been exposed to the pneumonic plague, but it can be treated. He says they will have to postpone their wedding, but she tells him that this is one more sign that she cannot ignore, and that despite her obligation to her family, she cannot marry him.

Summary:	When the Hampton Jitney overturns, it's HankMed to the rescue. Now that Divya has called off the wedding, she must deal with the aftermath. Evan can't reach Paige. Jill is back but the question is for how long.

The episode begins with Hank recapping his previous year, bringing the viewer up to date to today, the start of his second summer in the Hamptons.

Hank and Evan both get haircuts from their respective hair specialists. They discuss Evan's plan to throw a welcome home party for Paige, which he does after every trip she takes to incentivize her to return to him. Evan retrieves HankMed's mail from their post office box, which effectively keeps their clients from knowing they are staying at Ms. Newberg's house. One of the letters they received is a postcard from Jill in Uruguay, indicating she has 'big news', but not revealing it.

As Evan sorts the mail, Hank notices tour buses arriving, officially indicating the start of summer in the Hamptons. Divya arrives in time to hear the sounds of crashing metal as one of the tour buses gets involved in an accident with a couple of cars. Hank and Divya spring into action, checking on those involved in the crash. While Evan and the bus driver help those who are unhurt evacuate the bus through a window, Hank helps a man with a broken leg. Suddenly Divya calls out when the bus driver collapses. Hank discovers a laceration that has opened up, and the driver's blood pressure starts falling. Unable to start a normal IV, Hank uses the jugular vein and the driver quickly recovers consciousness.

Ambulances arrive to take the injured away as onlookers clap and cheer the rescuers, including the Mayor of Southampton. Evan quickly shakes hands with the Mayor, taking advantage of the attention to plug HankMed while Hank and Divya quietly walk away from the crowd.

When Hank, Evan and Divya return to their current home (Ms. Newberg's), they find a huge party underway for Paige, much larger than what Evan intended. Ms. Newberg herself is there, back from her winter home. The boys ask about their father and she reiterates the fact that he does not want any visitors, not wanting his boys to see him in prison.

Another car arrives and Evan prepares the guests to shout hello to Paige, but instead Jill walks in. Jill asks if Hank received her postcard, indicating she would like to talk with him when the party is over. A disconsolate Evan receives a text from Paige indicating she will not make the party due to other family considerations.

At Boris' estate, Marisa arrives expecting to speak with Boris but arriving in the middle of a meeting with a dozen or so men. Boris dismisses them and shows Marisa paperwork indicating he will accept her unborn baby as his child, and provide financial and other protection for it. She is upset saying he needs to take personal responsibility for the baby, and not just setup a trust fund. She accuses him of pushing the people who care about him away, including her and Hank. Her agitation causes her to experience pain and she collapses into a chair.

Divya tells Jill she spent the winter in the Hamptons, helping Hank and getting over her non-marriage to Raj. Hank receives a call from Boris to attend to Marisa and leaves immediately. When he arrives Boris tells him he thinks she is in labor, but she refuses to go to the hospital. Hank leaves Boris outside the bedroom and speaks to Marisa about her condition. She theorizes she is experiencing Braxton Hicks, or false labor. He moves her onto the bed, and her contractions stop. Hank does an examination anyway to make sure she is okay. She tells him she is prepared to raise her baby alone if Boris wants no part of it.

Hank next sees one of the drivers of the cars involved in the accident with the bus, Judy Windland. She is experiencing problems with her eyes, and is sneezing and has a rash. Hank asks her about allergies, and she tells he and Divya that she timeshares her house with her ex-husband and his new wife, with her time being over the summer. The ex-husband's wife has made many changes and some of them she seems to be allergic to. While Divya answers her phone, Hank gives her a steroid injection to improve her symptoms in preparation for her annual kickoff party, and promises to followup later.

When Hank and Evan walk outside, Divya reveals that her call was from her parents. They are in the Hamptons for the summer, and she has not talked to them since she called off her wedding.

Hank and Evan are grocery shopping and talking about their respective girls. Evan has been ordered by Ms. Newberg to prepare a nice meal to welcome Paige home, and is helping him shop. Much to his dismay, she feels money is no object when it comes to setting the mood for love. Evan laments privately that they need to find a new place to live.

Divya arrives at her parents' summer home to a warm reception from her mother, and a chilly reception from her father. Divya gives a heartfelt apology which seems to warm her father who admits they need to move forward as a family, and that Raj is in the past. She agrees to join them for dinner.

Hank returns to see Judy and she reports she is feeling better. Hank examines her and finds most of her symptoms gone except from a rash and some swelling in her lower leg. This result concerns him and he promises to return the next day and wishes her well concerning her party. She thanks him and wonders if she will have a party after all since her friends keep calling and canceling.

As Hank leaves, he notices her car and has a thought. He goes back inside and asks her if her leg is painful and how long she sat in traffic on her way back to the Hamptons. She admits some pain and says she sat in traffic about five hours. Hank tests her leg and discovers a blood clot. He tells her he can treat her at home or she can go to the hospital, either way she must stay in bed. She reluctantly agrees to cancel the party and go to the hospital.

When Divya and her parents arrive at the restaurant for dinner, she is surprised to find her parents have invited the Uppals and their adult son to join them. Divya is offended that her father is once again trying to arrange a husband for her and quickly leaves the restaurant.

Back home, Jill arrives to find Hank and Evan eating Evan's romantic meal alone, with Paige having delayed her arrival once again. Evan is concerned about their relationship, and decides to send her an e-mail that she will never delete.

Finally alone, Jill reveals to Hank that she no longer wants to be in the Hamptons. She has thrived with the work she has been doing for the poor and unfortunate in the third world and wants to continue. Hank takes the news surprisingly well, happy that she has found a calling.

Hank gets a call later that night and proceeds to Judy's house. He finds her there, discovering she has checked herself out of the house against medical advice. She professes she is fine, but her emotional state is down because she cannot find a way to move forward from her divorce. While she confesses her pain to Hank, she collapses to the floor.

Hank quickly calls for an ambulance and treats her as best he can while he waits. She awakens and he tells her she must return to the hospital, but she should make a full recover.

The next day, Divya returns and apologizes to her parents. She tells them she will not accept an arranged marriage, and will only marry a man she loves. Her angry father promptly disowns her, and tells her she should not expect anything from them in the future.

At the hospital, Hank checks on Judy, whose room is filled with flowers. She tells him they are from her friends, who she underestimated. He consoles her about her relationship by revealing his own pain from when his fiancée left him, and promises her life will get better.

As he leaves Judy's room, he is approached by Dr. Redliner from the hospital, who congratulates him on his work at the accident scene, and makes sure he knows that if he wants to work in their E.R., there will always be a job waiting for him.

Hank and Evan are at home where Evan is moping about the loss of Paige. Hank assures him his fears are unfounded, and that he and Paige are fine. When the doorbell rings, Hank answers to find not Paige, but Boris. Boris confesses he made mistakes with he and Evan's father, evicting them without notice, and trying to violate Hank's confidentiality with Marisa. Boris wants Hank to return to his estate to take care of Marisa and offers Hank a lease on the guest house to seal the deal. Hank insists on paying rent, but tells Boris not to get carried away when he suggests market rates. Just then Ms. Newberg comes outside where they are talking and badgers Hank about putting on a sweater, like a protective mother. Boris looks at Hank and tells him maybe he underestimated his leverage.

Hank and Evan are moving back in with Divya's help when Paige arrives. She tells him she got his e-mail and needed to respond in person, which she does by kissing him passionately. When a relieved Evan turns away to continue moving boxes, Paige glances after him with a somewhat subdued look on her face.

Hank asks Divya about her meeting with her parents. She tells him the meeting went perfectly, then asks if she can crash with he and Evan for the night, and maybe the next night too.

But There's a Catch

Season 3

Recurring Role: Brooke D'Orsay (Paige Collins)
Guest Stars: Zach Poole (Cashier), Michael B. Silver (Ken Keller), Greg Jennings (Himself), Sab Shimono (Jono), Kenneth Franklin (Adrian Scott)
Production Code: RP302
Summary: Hank is invited by his old nemesis Ken Keller to participate in a charity football tournament. During the competition, Ken suffers an injury that Hank must treat despite his feelings toward Ken. Evan plots to keep Divya busy to keep her mind off her troubles.

Evan initiates the first HankMed staff meeting with Jill in attendance when Paige arrives bearing muffins. She starts talking about the notoriety HankMed gained from the bus crash in the previous episode when Evan suggests HankMed cash in by hiring a publicist. Paige volunteers herself, even though Hank desperately tries to signal Evan that this would be a bad idea. Evan of course, caves in to her suggestion. While Hank and Evan argue, Jill wants to talk about Divya who has been down in the dumps since her parents disowned her. Evan recommends keeping Divya busy to keep her mind off her troubles. When Hank leaves to visit a new client, Jill decides to accompany him rather than stay and plot with Evan. As they leave, Divya finally comes downstairs, then thinks better of it and heads up the steps in the face of Evan's cheerfulness.

Hank's new patient is an elderly man named Jono. Jono is a gardener whose boss called Hank with concerns about Jono's weight loss, and unusually quiet demeanor. Jono tries to beg off from talking with Hank by professing work but Hank is persistent. Hank tests Jono's blood pressure and finds nothing amiss so he leaves.

On the way back to the car, Ken Keller calls out to Hank and Jill from his bicycle. He is Jono's boss and has some concerns. He mentions that he is sponsoring an annual fund raising event where individuals can compete in a football game with the pros. He asks Hank to join in but Hank declares his schedule is too busy. Hank and Ken start arguing about their high school football exploits and Ken goads Hank until he consents to participate, schedule permitting of course.

Evan and Divya are shopping at a medical supply store, following Evan's plan to keep Divya busy. He only succeeds in annoying her, however.

At the Keller estate, Ken introduces Hank to Greg Jennings. Greg and the other pros start putting the participants through some grueling drills, and Hank and Ken work hard to top each other. Jill arrives and Ken introduces her to Greg. Greg thinks she is a typical fan until she starts grilling him about past performances that hurt her fantasy football team.

Evan and Divya next stop at a surgical supply store where Evan continues to annoy Divya. Divya tries to purchase some supplies but her credit card is rejected. Evan supplies his HankMed card and then tries consoling Divya. He suggests she get her own HankMed corporate card for purchasing supplies and she agrees, somewhat embarrassed by the whole event. They next arrive at the Keller estate and speak with Jono. Divya is concerned that the medication Jono is taking to control his blood pressure is somewhat dated. Jono confesses he has been taking the same prescription since the 80s, and worries that his boss wants to get rid of him. When he steps over a hedge, Divya spots a rash on his leg that she theorizes could be a fungus caused by the thorn from a rose plant. She recommends a treatment that Jono agrees to, if it will make her go away. All the while this was going on, Evan was hovering nearby, until Divya finally snaps at him.

Hank and Ken are among a group playing a scrimmage. Hank is on defense and trying to cover Ken but Ken catches a touchdown pass over him. When Ken tries to celebrate by dunking the football over the goal post, he manages to break his arm. Hank quickly checks him out and notices that he does not have any pulse in his arm, meaning the tissue can die quickly. He sends Divya to her truck for some morphine where she discovers her truck being impounded. Without painkillers, Hank decides he needs to un-kink his broken arm, resetting the bone and restoring the pulse. He rigs a traction device and has Evan pull a rope that he connects to Ken's hand. The contraption works, restoring Ken's pulse and Hank splints it and sends Ken to the hospital.

Evan and Divya return home where Evan tries to get Divya to talk. She is in no mood to open up, especially to him and storms out of the house promising to return tomorrow. A few seconds later, she returns, slightly chagrined as she realizes she has no home and is staying with Hank and Evan. She stomps upstairs leaving Evan alone.

Hank stops by the Keller estate where Ken has returned from the hospital. His arm is doing fine but he reiterates his concern about Jono. Hank tells him Divya prescribed new medication for him but Ken says he will never get it filled as he never leaves the estate. Hank advises him that Jono thinks Ken will soon fire him, much to Ken's surprise. Hank notices Ken is watching a recording of one of their high school games. Ken talks about his father and Hank realizes the kind of pressure Ken's dad exerted on him and suddenly understands more about Ken's behavior towards him in high school. The two men bond over their father issues.

Paige is assembling a care package to send to Hank and Evan's father when Hank arrives home. Evan pulls Hank aside and tells him that he thinks Divya's father was paying for everything, and that she only cashed a couple of her HankMed paychecks. She apparently now has only them for support and Hank agrees she is in trouble. Paige was apparently eavesdropping and decides to leave, first showing Hank a magazine with a front page story about the bus rescue on the front page that she is putting in the care package for their father. Hank is upset and argues with Evan about the unwanted publicity.

The football games continue, with Hank and Ken's teams at the top of the standings. Ken is there and has been cleared to play, but Hank asks him to be careful. Jill shows up with the results of Ken's blood work, and it appears he has either been blood doping or he's a freak of nature.

Divya checks in on Jono again, and brings him his new medication herself. He reiterates his fear of losing his job and she tells him his old medicine can have side effects like depression and paranoia, making him not want to take care of himself.

At the football game, Divya stops by and Evan jumps up to talk with her, telling her she doesn't have to go through this alone. Fed up with him, she throws his father's situation back in his face, a man who left for twenty years and now refuses to allow his sons to visit him in prison. Divya suggests he worry about his own family and leave her alone.

Hank makes a big catch in the game and Ken argues he trapped the ball, yelling and pointing with his broken arm. Hank notices a problem and insists the case be removed immediately, stating that Ken is in jeopardy of losing the arm if the problem is what he thinks it is. When the cast comes off, Ken's arm looks necrotic. Hank tells him he needs to go to Hamptons Heritage hospital, but Ken wants to take a chopper to a world class hospital. Hank tells him there is no time and rigs a pressure reading device out of some blood pressure equipment to convince him.

Jono gives Divya a flower and thanks her for the medication, indicating he will try it. Evan asks how she knew he was depressed. She explains the difference between depression and sadness.

Evan asks her what her condition is. She claims sadness over everything between her and her parents. Evan tells her that if her parents don't want her, she is free to stay with them as long as she wants. When she tells him she will start cashing her paychecks, he declares that he is now sad.

Hank runs into Paige outside the coffee shop where she is on the phone and clearly troubled. She asks if he can help and if the information would be covered by doctor-patient confidentiality. He says yes, if the problem is medical. She confirms that it is but before she can reveal what it is, he stops her and says he is reluctant to know something about her that he cannot tell Evan. She says she understands and asks him not to tell Evan, then leaves, clearly upset.

Hank checks in on Ken in the hospital, concerned about a possible blood disorder. Ken finally admits to blood doping, saying that as the years go by, he needs a competitive edge. He admits to being sore and inquires about Hank. Hank says he is fine, and never felt better. Hank says his goodbyes and leaves Ken's room, collapsing into a wheelchair that Jill has waiting for him, sore to the point of disability.

At home, Divya apologizes for letting her personal life interfere with her professional life. She also apologizes to Evan for the cheap shot about Eddie R. Even though he is in prison, he still takes their phone calls, unlike her father. Hank and Evan then declare they have a surprise for her, but before they can tell her, Greg Jennings stops by with an MVP of the tournament trophy for Hank. As he leaves, he asks about the sweet ride with the red bow on it in the driveway. Divya goes outside to see a gently used vintage Range Rover that Hank and Evan have bought for her to replace her Mercedes that was repossessed. Evan reminds Hank that if he was allowed to grow the business, they could have afforded a Mercedes instead.

Summary: A new housekeeping business owner is having problems with an unexplained rash, a manners author with a hurt shoulder has problems with a neighbor and his dog, and Hank and Evan are late to discover that their dad is up for parole.

Best friends Stella and Kate are celebrating the first step in starting their own business. Kate is wary, since Stella has been known to give up and quit other jobs, but Stella assures Kate that this will be different. They open some champagne to celebrate and Stella cuts herself on the wire wrapping.

At home, Evan is complaining to Hank about sleeping on the sofa to accommodate Divya, their guest. Hank tells him to stop whining, that they are each taking turns on the sofa, and that Divya is their friend, but Evan starts in about Divya's bathroom habits when she enters. She tells them the good news, she has found a place to live, and wants to cook them a thank you dinner. When she leaves, Evan starts complaining again, wondering if Divya will be cooking Indian food when Paige enters. She brings a box of mail that accumulated at Boris' residence while they were staying at Ms. Newberg's. Divya enters saying that Jill called and Hank and Divya leave. Paige volunteers to help Evan go through the mail.

Jill takes them to Stella and Kate's new business where Kate has injured herself putting up a shelf. Hank removes a drill bit that Kate had managed to drill into her foot. Out front, Divya tells Stella that Kate needs a tetanus shot but is otherwise fine. Stella starts coughing but says she is just overworked getting the store going. Divya leaves her business card and advises her to call if her symptoms get worse. As they all leave the store, Divya hands Hank his half of the day's workload and suggests they get some coffee while they have the time. Jill makes up a story about a new patient and she and Hank leave for a quick booty call.

Hank treats Evelyn, an author who has injured her arm. Her arm is not broken but Hank recommends an X-ray to make sure there are no hairline fractures. Evelyn's husband Charles wanders in, intent on confronting a neighbor, Jerry Douglass, who is allowing his dog to do its business in Charles' back yard. Charles shouts at his neighbor to no avail, then springs his trap, dumping compost on top of Jerry's head and shoulders. Hank helps Jerry clean up using the garden hose. He then examines his eyes and airway for any residual effects and finds nothing.

Evan returns home to find a trail of letters leading to his bedroom, where he finds Paige waiting for him with all of the mail sorted into piles. She bribes him that she will grant him a wish for every pile he goes through. Evan starts in at light speed when he find a a letter from the Department of Justice regarding his father, Eddie. The letter says Eddie will have a parole hearing on the next Monday. However, the letter states a deadline for providing any supporting information that might help Eddie, but the deadline is long past. Paige suggests they might bend the rules, but Evan is doubtful.

Stella and Kate are working at their other jobs as house maids when Stella notices something about her hands that alarms her.

That evening, Evan is telling Hank about the letter and Eddie's parole, reminding Hank that they speak to their father weekly by phone and he has never mentioned a parole hearing. Divya comes in with a dish she prepared for her thank you dinner. Evan is suspicious when he sees and smells the dish that it is indeed Indian food. Divya says it is a family recipe and the boys try it. Both tell her it is delicious and as she steps away for another dish, both men scramble for some water as their mouths are on fire.

Just then Stella arrives and shows Hank her hands which both have rashes on them. Hank applies a skin test patch on her back and tells her it will show if she is allergic to any component of the cleaning products she has been using. She is confused because she created the products herself out of all natural components, and has never had problems before. She confesses that she outsourced the manufacture of the products and is worried because she has been leaving samples in every home they have been cleaning. She is also concerned this will ruin her new business with Kate and also might lead to losing her friendship with Kate. Hank tells her it might be related to a virus if she has the flu, and Divya reminds her about her cough.

When Hank removes the patch, it does not indicate any allergies, which seems to clear the cleaning products. Hank advise her to let him no if the rash gets any larger and Stella leaves.

Hank stops by Evelyn's to reveal that her X-ray was negative, but she is still experiencing stiffness in her shoulder. Hank starts demonstrating some exercises to relieve her problem when he notices her jugular vein is enlarging every time she inhales. An examination suggests to Hank some involvement with her heart. Evan and Paige are relaxing in the hottub where Evan is leaving messages with the Department of Corrections about his father. After his seventh call, he sets his phone down next to Paige's when he hears a ring. He grabs her phone by mistake and answers it, but Paige quickly takes it away from him and asks the caller if she can call them back later. Evan asks if everything is okay, and is surprised when she is angry with him for answering her phone.

Hank arrives and tries to calm Evan down about their father, saying they will call him later in the day and find out what is going on. Evan leaves, still troubled. Hank asks Paige how she is doing, then offers her a list of alternate doctors for whatever problem she is having that she asked about in the last episode. She leaves quickly, telling Hank that he should never talk about that subject again.

Stella is cleaning another home, when she experiences some dizziness. Kate calls for her, then seeks her out to find her in the shower, fully clothed. Her entire exposed skin is red in color and she says it feels like it is on fire.

Hank examines Stella again and does a skin biopsy. The laboratory will test the samples for skin diseases, and Hank recommends an MRI and EEG. He also advises she go home and rest, and Kate assures him it will happen, and Hank walks them to their car.

Divya starts to call Jill to arrange the tests when she deduces that Jill is actually upstairs. She calls out and Jill comes downstairs, adjusting her clothing. Divya asks why the secrecy, and Jill explains that she and Hank feel better not having to explain to their friends, when they both have expressed uncertainty about their futures in the Hamptons.

Hank arrives home to find Evan in his van eating junk food, just so he doesn't have to eat any more of Divya's cooking. Hank apologizes and ask how the phone call went with their dad. Evan reports that Eddie said the hearing was a formality and that he has it covered, and they didn't need to attend. Evan reads between the lines and thinks that means their father wants them there. Hank asks why he doesn't take Eddie's word at face value, and Evan asks why Hank has been hooking up with Jill when he has been telling everyone they are broken up. Hank accepts the rebuke and quietly leaves.

Hank stops by once again to check on Jerry since Evelyn told him he refused to come to the door so Charles could apologize. Jerry finally opens the door and tells Hank that he is going to sue Charles for his injuries, including his bloodshot eyes and a skin rash. He expects to use Hank as an expert witness in his case. Hank thinks his eyes are the result of excessive washing, and Jerry reveals he tried some diluted bleach on his skin to remove the odor of the compost. Hank tells him the bleach actually burned his skin, but gives him some cream to treat it and tells him he will be fine. While treating Jerry, an idea occurs to him about Stella and he quickly leaves.

Hank and Divya arrive at Stella's house, but the door is locked and she is not answering. Hank theorizes she received some antibiotics from her visit to urgent care when she cut her thumb on the champagne bottle and she may be allergic to them. They worry that her skin might peel off and it would be very easy for an infection to take hold and shutdown her organs. Kate arrives but she has no key either. They go around back and find Stella on her deck having a seizure. Hank manages to stop the seizure but notices the rash on her hands is larger, and that she now has a rash on her stomach.

Stella arrives at the hospital by ambulance where Dr. Redliner is waiting. He confirms that Hank's theory on Stella's illness is correct, and sends Stella to the burn unit. Hank counsels Kate about Stella's condition and listens to her fears about losing Stella, so soon after losing her husband.

Hank checks on Evelyn who has seen a cardiologist. The specialist found fluid around her heart and was able to successfully treat her. Both she and her husband are grateful to Hank for seeing the early symptoms. Jerry arrives in their yard again, leading his dog to do it's business in their yard once again. Instead of blowing up, Charles is calm and polite, grateful for the series of events that led to Hank being able to save his wife. He then proposes investing in HankMed. Hank thanks him but declines, then has an idea. The next time he checks on Stella, who is rapidly on the way to recovery, and tells her and Kate that Charles is interested in investing in their small business.

At home, Divya tells Hank and Evan that her application for a lease was denied because she has no credit history, so she will be staying awhile. Evan tells her he can help her with that problem when Jill arrives. She notices the looks on everyone's face and realizes they all know about her and Hank.

Paige asks Evan to get her phone out of her purse. Suspecting a trap, based on the last time he touched her phone, he warily opens her purse to find some of the candy sticks he told her about from his childhood. She tells him she tracked down the few remaining candies from 1992 and he asks if that is what the call was about. She lies and tells him yes and he thinks it all makes sense now.

Evan decided to be honest with Divya about her cooking when Jill brings in some pizza boxes. She tells him Hank already talked with her about her cooking, and she was okay with it, since she hates to cook anyway.

Hank tells Evan that he has changed his mind about their dad, and thinks they should attend the parole hearing.

Summary: On a trip to Florida to attend Eddie's parole hearing, Hank and Evan find him in the company of an ex-con seeking spiritual salvation whose erratic behavior has Hank worried.

Florida penitentiary — 8 months ago.

Eddie R. Lawson is spending his first day in prison. He is extremely nervous, and jumps at every motion that he sees out of the corner of his eye. A man named Shaw introduces himself and professes his innocence. He gives Eddie advice on how to survive.

Fast forward to a few weeks ago, Shaw is being released. He speaks with Bill, a guard who he is friendly with. While they talk, Shaw sees a glowing light around Bill and asks where the nearest church is. He also mentions he needs to get to Austin to see a girl, then asks Bill to look after Eddie. He climbs in a waiting limousine and leaves.

Today — Hank and Evan arrive at the prison to see their Dad and attend his parole hearing. As they walk through the prison yard, they see inmates playing catch with a baseball, playing ping pong, playing cards, etc. Evan comments it is nothing like 'Oz'. A prison representative greets them and tells them that Eddie has been doing fine after opening jitters. He mentions that Eddie qualified for home detention and has been staying at a sponsor's house in Palm Beach for the last three weeks. The boys, taken by surprise, leave.

Hank and Evan are driving to Palm Beach to see their father. Evan is speaking on the phone with Eddie's lawyer, Nola, who tells them Eddie is busing tables at a restaurant. Hank teases Evan about how he was speaking to Nola, saying he was flirting. Evan denies the accusation, and then tells Hank he is going to propose to Paige and wants to give her their mother's ring. Hank hesitates, knowing that Paige is keeping something from Evan before he congratulates Evan, then cautions him that he should get to know more about Paige. Evan is hurt that Hank is not fully supporting him.

At home, Divya comes downstairs to see Marisa trying to use the ultrasound machine on herself to see her unborn baby. Divya gives her a hand and declares the baby looks fine and healthy. Marisa mentions she will give birth at the local hospital, much to Divya's surprise. Divya expected that Boris would want to use the most exclusive and renowned facilities in New York, but Marisa says it is her choice. Marisa mentions she is worried about Boris and is glad that Divya will be looking in on him, and requests Boris not be told the sex of the child.

Hank and Evan arrive in Palm Beach and meet Nola at the restaurant where Eddie works. When they ask for Eddie, a young black man shows up answering to their father's name. It turns out Eddie paid someone to do his busboy job and is now in danger of violating his home detention agreement and could be subject to longer jail time. Nola recommends they find him and make sure he appears at his parole hearing.

Divya examines Boris in his home, clearly nervous. He asks about Marisa's pregnancy but she cannot talk about it. Her examination reveals higher than normal blood pressure and she recommends a few invasive tests, but he demurs, wanting to speak with Hank.

The boys arrive at the home of Eddie's sponsor, an immense mansion where a party is in full swing. The home belongs to Shaw Morgan, Eddie's friend from prison, and an infamous Internet hacker. Shaw comes into the room and starts yelling for everyone to leave. Eddie follows him, trying to calm him down. Hank and Evan get their Dad's attention and he is surprised to see them there. When Shaw looks at the three men, he again sees the glowing halo like light surrounding them. Shaw then unplugs a turntable and takes it outside to throw it away and collapses in the yard. He is complaining of headaches and claims it is God trying to tell him something.

When asked, Shaw tells them he is not Eddie's sponsor, just his friend. Hank points out that Eddie is supposed to be at work, not hanging out with a convicted felon. Eddie claims he only missed one shift, but his friend Shaw needed him. Eddie claims Shaw saved his life and Shaw claims it was Eddie who saved him. Eddie then tells how Shaw took a beating intended for him from some other inmates, and when Eddie used CPR to revive him, Shaw saw the glowing halo for the first time. He said it reminded him of a girl named Jenny, who always wanted him to be a man of faith. He is preparing to fly to Austin to find her, but Hank cautions against that, indicating he might have a concussion. Eddie suggests Hank examine him and says he knows where there might be proper facilities they can use.

In the Hamptons, Divya and Jill are having dinner and Divya is confessing she is having confidence issues without Hank around. She mentions the episode with Boris, without mentioning his name, but Jill quickly guesses correctly who she is talking about.

Hank does a battery of tests on Shaw, but the results are inconclusive. Hank suggests a neurologist would be able to better interpret the tests and determine if Shaw has any permanent damage. Hank then asks Eddie about the clinic and retirement community that they utilized for Shaw's tests. Eddie reveals it was built by the man who sponsored him for home detention, Ted Roth. As Eddie leaves with Shaw, Hank and Evan agree something is fishy with their Dad's situation. Evan decides to check up on Ted Roth.

Marisa knocks on Divya's door stating that she is having contractions, but reluctant to go to the hospital just yet. Divya examines her and declares the baby is coming. Jill calls Boris who leaves a business meeting at a run to get to Marisa.

Boris finds Marisa yelling in pain as the contractions occur and as she pushes the baby out. Divya calls a halt as she sees the umbilical cord is looped around the baby's head. Boris panics and yells at Divya to cut it, but Marisa says no, she needs it intact. Divya calmly works the loop from around the baby, and delivers the child, a boy.

Evan meets Ted Roth on the golf course who mistakes him for a neighbor's attorney. He thinks one of his neighbors is worried he has an ex-con living with him and that will decrease their property value. He assures Evan that Eddie is just visiting and may or may not make parole, but will definitely be out of his house by Monday.

Marisa is holding her baby while Divya extracts blood and material from the umbilical cord. Suddenly, the baby appears to be in distress. Divya quickly ensures he gets some oxygen and is confident he is just experiencing 'wet lungs' a common condition for newborns and easily treated at the hospital. While she is working with the baby, Boris leans close and whispers encouragement to his son, an indication he has deeper feelings for him than he thought he would.

Shaw is getting baptized as part of his new found faith. Eddie is filming the procedure and tells Hank that he is helping Shaw because he was his only friend in prison, and that Shaw seems to need him, having lost his self-confidence and cocky attitude he had while inside. Eddie wants to help Shaw be reunited with his daughter Gina, who lives with her mother Jenny in Austin. When Shaw emerges from the water, he seems disoriented and removes his shirt, indicating he will just swim to Austin. Hank notices the tattoo on his back which appears to be infected. He tells Shaw he will put a rush on the blood tests he submitted. He tells Eddie that Shaw cannot be left alone, but Eddie tells him he can't stay because of his ankle tracking bracelet. Hank agrees to stay with him until he discovers what is wrong with him.

Hank and Evan are staying with Shaw at his mansion and using his hot tub, When Evan steps out of the tub naked, the scars on Evan's backside remind him of the shooting accident with Paige's father, and causes Hank to realize that the Shaw doesn't have a rash on his back from the tattoo's, but as a result of being shot as a kid. When x-rays are taken, they reveal dozens of lead pellets embedded in Shaw's back, causing lead poisoning. They had been dormant until the prison beating and are now leeching lead into his system, causing his disorientation and visions.

Marisa and her baby are loaded into an ambulance. Divya tries to apologize to Boris for her earlier overzealous diagnosis, but he refuses to hear it, complimenting her on her professionalism with the delivery. Boris makes his driver available to Jill to take the umbilical blood samples to storage should the baby need it someday.

Shaw is loaded into an ambulance while Hank assures Eddie he will be alright. Just then Ted Roth drives up in a golf cart and Eddie drops a bomb. He introduces Ted as his father, Hank and Evan's grandfather. Eddie and Ted have been fighting and holding a grudge against one another for 40 years, and Eddie told the boys his father was dead. Hank realizes what the 'R' in Eddie R. Lawson stands for, Roth.

Just then the ambulance driver comes running up. Shaw jumped from his truck when he stopped at the gate. They all head for the water assuming Shaw still wants to swim to Austin. When they get there, Eddie's ankle bracelet starts beeping, indicating he had missed curfew and is not where he should be, which is at the home of his sponsor. They search down the beach and find a pair of shoes and tracks that lead into the water, but no Shaw.

Jill is being driven to the blood bank by Boris' driver when suddenly there is a loud crash, the limousine has been t-boned by another vehicle.

Summary:	Evan spends the day with his grandfather to further Eddie's parole chances and learns some surprising things.

Jill has just been in an accident and is semiconscious. She hears voices, some speaking German. She sees people with flashlights and smells cigarette smoke, but the details are fuzzy. Then paramedics arrive and see the blood everywhere, blood from Boris and Marisa's baby that she was transporting to a medical facility for storage. They intubate both Jill and the driver Natan and transport them to Hamptons Heritage hospital.

In Florida, Hank is giving details about the missing Shaw Morgan to police. Afterward, Ted Roth reminds Eddie about his curfew and leaves. Hank insists Eddie return to his sponsor's home, promising to continue the search for Shaw.

At Hamptons Heritage, Boris and Divya are in the maternity ward watching the infants through the window when the paramedics and hospital staff burst through the door with Jill on a gurney. Divya wants to know what happened and the paramedic tells her about the accident.

Morning in Florida and Hank is still searching for Shaw when Evan catches up to him on the beach. They talk about their new grandfather and Evan reveals that Ted agreed to sponsor Eddie in order to meet his grandsons.

Suddenly, Hanks sees Shaw washed up on the beach next to a kayak. Hank rushes to his side while Evan calls 911. He is overheated so Hank uses some bottled water to cool him until paramedics arrive and take him away.

Jill wakes up in her hospital room with Divya by her side. She is still intubated and Dr. Redliner refuses to remove it, agreeing to slowly wean her off it according to hospital policy, policy she is fully aware of.

After seeing Shaw taken away, Hank and Evan discuss Hank's lukewarm response to Evan's news that he wants to propose to Paige. They agree to leave that touchy subject alone and focus on helping Eddie with his parole hearing. They are worried that Ted will not support Eddie, so Evan decides to spend some time with Ted and show him how much Eddie means to he and Hank.

Divya comes back to see Jill and notices the distressed look on her face due to the presence of her family visitors. Divya asks Dr. Redliner to rescue Jill, and he says he needs to go over her test results anyway. Divya asks if she can tell Jill the bad news.

Hank and Eddie are watching the surgeons remove the lead pellets from Shaw's back. They have a heart to heart talk where Eddie reveals he was trying his best to reunite their family, but the plan was too complex.

Evan and Ted have lunch at the racetrack where Evan tells his grandfather about HankMed, Paige and their relationship with Eddie. Ted asks Eddie to pick a horse in the next race and when he does, Ted gives him a wad of money to bet on him.

Divya calls Hank with the news about Jill. Hank is torn between coming home for Jill and Marisa's baby, but Divya assures him everything is under control, and he needs to make sure Eddie gets his parole. After hanging up, she reveals to Jill that the CT scan showed a 'blush', possibly a hemorrhage, but also possibly just an anomaly. Jill is still intubated and cannot speak and begs Divya to remove it. When Divya refuses, Jill pulls the tube out herself.

Shaw is back in his room and Hank is explaining that all the pellets were removed, but they still need to flush any lead still in the bloodstream out of his body.

At the track, the horse that Evan picked actually wins and Ted reveals he owns it. They decide to celebrate with a dinner with just the four of them at Ted's mansion. When Eddie is late for the dinner, Ted starts bad mouthing him. When Eddie arrives, he reveals that Shaw checked himself out of the hospital. Ted and Eddie start fighting and the basic difference they have that caused their rift is revealed. Ted believed Eddie's wife, Hank and Evan's mother, was a gold digger and was after his money. Eddie declares that his decision to choose his wife over his father was the best decision he ever made, and runs off to find Shaw. Hank chases after Eddie leaving Evan alone with Ted. Evan tells his grandfather that his mother never cared about money but only cared about family, and his attitude probably cost him not only a relationship with Eddie but with he and Hank too.

Hank catches up with Eddie and tells him that when they find Shaw, Hank will spend the night with him to make sure he is okay. Eddie must return to Ted's for one last night before the parole hearing.

Divya brings some flowers from Hank into Jill's room. They talk about the 'blush' and agree it is not serious enough to tell Hank just yet.

Hank and Eddie find Shaw at home and Hank starts the IV flush for removing the lead. Shaw reveals he has decided not to see his daughter, that he has not changed, that the lead poisoning was the cause of his visions. Eddie tries to change his mind but Shaw tells him to butt out, that Eddie is not his father. Eddie pours his heart out to Hank about running away when Hank's mother was sick and points out that Shaw should not make the same mistake he did.

Divya takes Jill by wheelchair to check on Marisa's baby. Jill tries to apologize about the core blood, but Marisa won't hear of it. When Jill is alone with Boris, they talk about the accident. She mentions the faint memories of flashlights and cigarette smoke, and this gets Boris' attention.

Shaw shows Hank a picture of his daughter and asks his advice. Shaw starts seizing due to an allergic reaction to his IV. Hank treats him and calls for an ambulance.

Jill gets another CT scan and the results show the 'blush' is gone. Jill begs to go home but Divya says she needs to stay with someone and offers to be that someone.

Evan arrives at Shaw's place on the day of the parole hearing to pick up Hank. They talk about Eddie and Ted's fight and lament there has been no reconciliation.

Shaw awakens in the hospital to find Eddie has brought his daughter and her mother to see him. Eddie agrees he is meddling, but he doesn't care. Shaw is ecstatic to see his daughter.

Jill continues to have nightmares about the accident and awakens with a start on Hank's couch. She assures Divya she is alright. Meanwhile Boris is inspecting the wrecked limousine and finds a cigarette stub that he recognizes on the floor. The next scene shows multiple black SUV's arriving at Boris estate, probably additional security.

Eddie, Hank and Evan are preparing for his hearing with his attorney. They reveal that Ted, his sponsor, is not coming. When they enter the building, they find Ted waiting for them. They shake hands.

Eddie, Hank and Evan are celebrating Eddie's parole when Ted shows up with the Roth family album. The album shows several ancestors that are doctors and businessmen. Eddie tells them he wants to stay in Florida for awhile and work on his relationship with his father.

Hank and Evan are on the road back home where Hank apologizes for his reaction to Evan's news about proposing to Paige. The sincere apology finally eases the tension between them and they relapse into their usual teasing banter as the episode ends.

An Apple a Day

Season 3

Production Code: RP306
Summary: One of Libby's moms seeks Hank's medical help. Evan has his proposal accepted but he needs the General's blessing.

Anna arrives home to find her partner Elyse unloading a farm truck with their Italian farmhand Marco. Anna is jealous and upset that Elyse did not wait for her. Elyse cuts herself on some wire and Anna freaks out, then calls for a doctor.

Hank and Evan are at the bank accessing their safety deposit box. Evan is complaining that Hank should not have to drive all the way out to the country to help Elyse, but Hank says she needs help and is the mother of their friend. They open the box and retrieve their mother's ring, which Evan will use when he proposes to Paige. Evan doesn't remember the ring being small, but Hank assures him it is beautiful.

Hank cosigns a lease for Divya so she can have her own place. Hank thanks her for helping while he and Evan were in Florida.

Hank arrives to treat Elyse and finds Anna cooking in the kitchen. Libby, Elyse's daughter, greets Hank and they talk about Tucker who is on safari in Africa. Elyse comes in and is surprised to see Hank, having asked Anna to cancel the appointment because she is so busy. Libby points out that Hank drove all the way out to see her and Hank assures her it will only take a few minutes.

Evan is telling Paige about the hot tub incident in Florida when he spots a photo booth across the street. It reminds Evan of their first date and kiss, although Paige claims it wasn't technically since she was paying him to portray her boyfriend at the time. They go inside where Evan proposes and Paige accepts.

Outside the booth, Paige asks how Evan managed to get her father's permission. Evan reveals that he never spoke with him and Paige is alarmed. She tells him that it is imperative that her father be asked for her hand before she formally accepts if they want their relationship with him to be as smooth as possible. She returns the ring to a disconsolate Evan.

Hank follows up with Elyse and discovers that the cut that he put stitches in is not healing. He removes the stitches and uses steri-strips instead, saying she should heal in three to five days. He inquires about other problems and Elyse reveals, after Anna's prompt, some bruises on her legs. Hank takes a blood sample to attempt to discover why she is taking so long to heal. Elyse walks Hank to his car and when they are alone, she reveals something about herself that she did not want Anna or Libby to know.

Evan arrives home to tell Hank that Paige said yes, but that he needs her father's blessing. Hank is surprised that he did not know that. Evan says he needs to come up with a momentous speech for her father, but Hank suggests he stick with talking about what Evan has in common with him, namely that they both love Paige.

That night, Jill awakens from a nightmare of the night of the accident. She is still remembering someone smoking and speaking German.

The next morning, Hank is speaking on the telephone with Divya, who has spent the first night in her new place. She begs off meeting with Hank because of an appointment with cable company installer. Hank says he needs to take another blood sample from Elyse because the laboratory miss-handled the first one. Hank hangs up and talks with Jill about her nightmares. He suggests she see a therapist, since she is now afraid to get into a car.

Hank returns to see Elyse and talks with Anna about their past. Elyse is in the field and Anna and Hank join her for Hank to take the sample. Hank's questions reveal the possibility of disease transmission from their farm animals, and he notices Elyse is now limping. When he examines her legs, the bruises are worse, and don't appear to be healing. He requests a meeting with their veterinarian about testing their animals for diseases.

Paige is working with Evan for his confrontation with her father. The last part includes a stare down which Evan finally wins. She gives him a draft copy of her father's autobiography to read as further preparation.

After Hank speaks with the veterinarian, he returns to Elyse to find she has a nose bleed that has been bleeding for 30 minutes. An exam reveals a ruptured blood vessel. Hank treats her and leaves her some nose drops as a preventive measure. Elyse reveals she has always been an overachiever, but that she has allowed her home life to slip in order to pursue her work. Hank tells her most people realize that too late, but she has time to rectify the situation.

Divya is on the phone arguing with the cable company's non-appearance with Raj shows up. Raj tells her his parents were humiliated and spent a considerable amount on the wedding. They want their money back and are prepared to sue. Divya tells him she was cutoff by her parents and have no money. Raj says that is not completely true, she owns 1/3 of HankMed and his parents know that.

Divya finds Hank running on the beach and tells him the laboratory found no problems with Elyse's blood and the veterinarian found nothing either with their animals. Hank thinks it is time for a specialist and knows he will need to convince her in person. Before they take off, Divya asks if he and Evan would consider buying her out of HankMed, without revealing why. He thinks she is just worried about her finances after signing her first lease and talks her out of it.

Jill is speaks with a therapist about the accident. The discussion leads to her possible abandonment issues, first with her husband and then Hank. The doctor then asks her how she feels when the person she went to for comfort, Hank, sent her away to a professional therapist. Jill has no answer.

Evan meets 'The General', Paige's father, in the steam room of his country club. His attempted ambush fails when The General insists on having his quiet time, the only chance he has each week to do so.

Hank and Divya arrive to see Elyse and speak with Anna first. She is concerned that Elyse is keeping something from her, the information that Elyse told Hank privately. She is specifically worried that it concerns Marco, their hired hand, but Hank tells her he cannot reveal anything. Just then Libby shows up saying Elyse has collapsed. Hank rushes to her side and she is bleeding profusely from her nose. Hank manages to stop the bleeding and transports her to the hospital.

Hank comes home and asks Evan how it went with Paige's father. He said it went well, but that he took Paige's advice over Hank's. Paige comes in and she and Hank treat each other coldly, and Hank leaves to visit Elyse in the hospital. Paige asks how it went with her dad and he said The General agreed, but asked they wait until after the election. Paige tells him that is just a tactic her father uses, delay then defeat.

Hank sees Elyse at the hospital and is joined by Anna and Libby. Anna confronts Elyse about keeping secrets and Elyse reveals she has been smoking for the last two years. She also relieves Anna's concern that she is tired of being with her and wants to move on. As the two embrace, Hank notices curling on her arm. This leads to the conclusion that she is suffering from a vitamin C deficiency, in other words, Scurvy.

Libby approaches Hank and tells him she is worried that if something ever happens to her mother or Tucker again and Hank is not around, she would be helpless. She then asks Hank if they need any summer help around the office. Hank says he will think about it.

Divya meets with Raj at a local cafe. She give him a payment for his parents and tells him she will pay off her debt in installments. When he asks about her interest in HankMed, she says she refuses to ask Hank and Evan for any more help. He takes the check and wishes her luck, implying his parents might not agree with her plan.

Jill recounts the night of the accident with her therapist and remembers a German sentence. When she looks up the phrase online, it turns out to be 'It's not her'.

Hank and Evan talk about HankMed. Evan insists they need to grow or suffer diminished quality of care. Hank wants to know if he wants to grow HankMed in order to better provide for Paige, Evan says yes.

Jill calls Hank and leaves a message that she finally figured something about the accident. Divya pokes her head into her office and thanks Jill for the job, she is now working for the hospital in addition to HankMed.

Summary: Hank treats a local magician who appears to be suffering from an anxiety disorder. Evan decides to stalk Matt Lauer in order to convince him to interview HankMed on the Today show, but is unaware of Hank's fear of public speaking. Divya's decision to not follow the hospital protocols get her into hot water with the on call doctor. Jill finally gets a chance to tell Boris what she remembers about the accident.

Hank and Evan are attending a party where a magician is performing. Evan is taking the opportunity to hand out HankMed promotional material. 'Magic Andy' performs a successful trick with Evan's watch and disappears in the fireplace. What the onlookers fail to see is his momentary panic and weakness, followed by his pants leg catching fire and burning him.

After the trick, Andy pulls Hank aside and asks for help. Hank treats the burns with honey and uses plastic wrap to hold it in place. Andy tells Hank about the weakness and panic attack and Hank recommends an EKG.

At home, Jill tells Hank she has been trying to see Boris with no luck. Hank offers to help her get into see Boris, who is busy being a new father and she agrees. At the staff meeting, Evan reveals that he managed to slip a HankMed DVD into Matt Lauer's pocket, and his Internet searches reveals Matt's regular haunts in the Hamptons. Hank accuses Evan of just trying to get onto television and Evan is hurt, saying he is just trying to grow the business. Evan poses the questions on whether Hank would agree to be on the Today show if asked, and Hank finally says yes to shut him up, but thinks Evan is living in a fantasy world.

The girls leave the brothers to their argument and Jill asks Divya why she has not told Hank about her second job at the hospital. Divya says she does not want to burden Hank and knows he will try to help her pay Raj's parents, but that is not his responsibility.

Evan goes to the local country club where he believes Matt Lauer swims and intentionally jumps into the pool, almost on top of the swimmer he believes is Matt. Unfortunately for Evan, he has the wrong man.

Hank follows up with Andy at his workshop where Andy is practicing an escape. Andy's routine goes wrong and Hank has to rescue him from a locked crate. The EKG does not reveal any problems with Andy's heart. Hank thinks he may be suffering from an anxiety disorder. Andy is surprised that it affects his magic since he practices his routines intensely and always seems at ease in front of a big audience. Hank suggests tests on Andy's blood and recommends he not perform any more escapes until they know what is going on. Andy is not happy since he has a commitment later that evening to do an escape for some rich clients, but Hank is adamant.

Evan tries once more to find Matt Lauer and tracks him down in a store when Hank calls asking for their account number for the laboratory. When Evan hangs up on him, Jill wanders by and gives him the number, Hank apparently being the only one who doesn't know it. They talk about Evan's obsession with the Today show and Jill suggests they use some of her friends at a local theater group to play a prank on Evan and Hank readily agrees. As they are talking, Divya approaches in her hospital scrubs and Jill distracts Hank until she can disappear before he sees her. Divya is stopped by a Dr. Van Dyke who wants her to discharge an alcoholic patient, and Divya seems unhappy with the Van Dyke's cavalier attitude.

At the store, Evan is about to approach Matt when he is cornered by a saleslady. In his attempt to get away, Evan knocks over a piece of merchandise and damages it, to the distress of the saleslady.

Divya does her own examination on the alcoholic patient and makes a diagnosis. She determines his drinking has created excess fluid in the abdominal cavity and his liver has been damaged. She proceeds to drain the fluid herself without consulting any doctor when the duty nurse catches her. When she discovers Divya did not inform Dr. Van Dyke, she thinks Divya will be fired.

Hank returns to see Andy and tells him the blood tests reveal he has a thyroid problem, which can be treated in the short term with medication, but long term a simple surgery is required.

Evan returns home with the merchandise he damaged and Hank tells him that the Today show called, initiating the prank and Evan is extremely excited. Andy calls and says he is feeling much better, but Hank gets an insight that more is happening to Andy than he thought. He has Evan drive him to the home of the rich client that Andy is supposed to perform for.

Andy climbs into the crate where he is supposed to escape before the client runs over him in his car. Hank tries to stop the stunt but arrives too late. The stunt appears to go off flawlessly, with Andy escaping certain death when Hank notices Andy off to the side where he has collapsed, paralyzed.

Hank discovers that the thyroid problems combined with the diuretic Andy was taking caused low potassium and temporary paralysis. Andy is upset that his stunt did not go as planned and Hank is incredulous, saying to was terrific considering his physical state. Betty, a catering assistant comes up and congratulates Andy too, clearly smitten with him as Hank looks on, amused.

At Hamptons Heritage hospital, Divya is called to a room where Dr. Van Dyke is stitching a boy's eyebrow. The doctor explains that she messed up by not consulting him and that he did not miss the condition that Divya diagnosed. He then says that the laboratory tested the fluid Divya drained and found a secondary condition that threatened his life if untreated, so he was admitted to the hospital. He then takes her by complete surprise by inviting her to dinner, and giving her no chance to refuse.

Evan is shopping at the grocery when he bumps into Matt Lauer. Evan tells him how excited he and Hank are to appear on his show Friday when Matt tells him that no such interview is scheduled. When Matt complains that his Friday show is about turtles, Evan makes his pitch about HankMed and Matt is intrigued.

Jill meets with Boris and tells him what she remembers about the accident, including the German phrase. The phrase makes her think the accident was not an accident, and that Marissa was the target. Boris asks her what her therapist thinks of her theory, and Jill is taken by surprise that Boris knows she is being treated. Jill also reveals she informed the local police and Boris is clearly unhappy. Jill realizes she has wandered into Boris' private life and apologizes, but he is very magnanimous and wishes her well, saying he will inform his private security chief of her information. When Jill leaves he asks Dieter to find Marissa and the baby and his security chief. He is visibly troubled and he cannot control the muscles of his right hand.

Hank stops by to see Andy and hears noises coming from the crate again. He rushes to free Andy but Andy is not trapped and pops out easily. Hank hears another voice coming from the crate and suddenly Betty's head pops out of the crate too. Andy tells Hank that Betty is his new assistant and Hank recommends one of them stay outside the crate if their intent is safety.

At Hank and Evan's house, a television crew is preparing the living room along with Evan and Hank to appear on the Today show. Hank is impressed with the detail of the prank when suddenly the monitor comes on and shows Matt Lauer preparing for the interview. Hank is dumbfounded and Evan tells him he knows about the prank, but this is for real. The interview starts and Hank is sweating profusely, and has no idea what to say. When the interview is over, Hank is furious that Evan surprised him with a live nationwide interview, but the local director tells them the interview was not live but being taped for later use. She also mentions it was so bad it would probably never air. Evan is distraught that the interview went so bad but Hank is grateful that it will not be aired.

Later Hank and Evan talk about the train wreck interview and Hank reveals his fear of public speaking. It comes out that Hank never believes any of Evan's schemes, but Evan keeps proving him wrong. Hank is clear that he is happy with HankMed as it currently stands, but Evan points out he was happy sitting around his apartment in New York drinking beer after being fired too. It was Evan that keeps pushing him and Evan insists that he only wants HankMed to grow by one doctor to increase their service range. Just then they are interrupted by the local theater group who have arrived to pretend to be from the Today show. Hank and Evan look at each other and smile as the episode ends.

Summary:	Hank helps a professional runner with anemia-like symptoms, tension rises in Evan and Paige's relationship after an art show, and Boris keeps getting sicker and suspects that his son is in danger.

Hank is running on the beach when a woman catches and passes him from behind. Hank speeds up to pull ahead again only to fall to the sand in pain as he suffers a leg cramp. The woman stops to help him and it turns out to be a world class marathon runner names Jane Cameron. When she learns Hank is a doctor, she asks if he can help her just as Riza, her nanny appears with her daughter. Hank says he can work her into his schedule.

Evan awakens in bed and finds Paige sitting in a chair sketching him. He asks to see her work but she refuses to show him. Evan asks what painting she entered in the local Hamptons art festival and she says she missed the entry deadline.

Marisa is posing with her new baby Carlos for a professional photographer with Jill and Divya watching. The girls start asking Divya about her date with the doctor from Hamptons Heritage and she tells them it is not a date, just a thank you. Hank arrives and asks what they are laughing about and they say Carlos, maintaining Divya's secret about her job at the hospital.

There is a knock at the door and Hank says it is Boris. The girls tell him not to let Boris know Marisa is there as she wants to surprise him with the photos. Boris has brought his security chief and is alarmed when Hank tells him Marisa and the baby are not there but Marisa comes forward when he starts barking orders for his security team. Marisa shows him some proofs and returns to her baby. Boris starts sweating and appears ill so Hank asks him to come inside out of the heat and gives him a glass of water. Boris cannot hold the glass and it falls to the floor, breaking. Hank asks to examine Boris but Boris tells him not now.

Hank calls on Jane to discuss her medical concerns. She tells him she has been having problems since coming to the Hamptons and training in the summertime heat, getting weak and feverish. She thinks it may be heatstroke, related to the recent birth of her child. Hank is doubtful as the time line does not fit. Hank thinks the heat may play some part in her problems, but his blood test shows she is anemic. She is puzzled by this since she eats a regular diet including meat, so Hank says he will do a full blood test workup.

Evan shows up at Paige's house and when he realizes she is absent, he starts collecting some of her artwork to take with him. Before he can leave undetected, Paige's mother walks in. When Evan praises her daughter's artistic talent, she comments that none of Paige's other boyfriends ever noticed.

Hank and Divya arrive at Boris' home to give him a physical. Boris is convinced it is the start of his inherited disease but Hank tells him to not jump to conclusions. When he shows no fever, Hank recommends including Marisa in the consultation due to her medical expertise in the field. Boris demurs, requesting they await the results of the blood tests.

Evan takes Paige's work to the art festival and begs the lady in charge to include her work, even though she missed the deadline. The lady is reluctant so Evan plays the name card revealing Paige's well respected family name. When the lady looks through the samples Evan brought, she finds one that intrigues her and decides to allow it to be entered. It is a nude portrait of Evan that she drew on the back of another painting. Evan does not see the nude, thinking the landscape on the other side is what will be displayed.

Hank discovers that Boris is sending Marisa and his son away with the security team. He confronts Boris, thinking he is sending Marisa away because of the possible beginnings of his fatal illness until Boris confesses to him that he believes someone is after his son. He tells Hank that some of his cousins reacted badly to news of his possible heir on a recent visit to Germany. He finally told Marisa about the issue, and that Jill's accident was no accident so Marisa agreed to leave.

Boris also reveals he is starting to experience pain in his feet and legs, deep pain in the bone. Hank cannot believe it could be spreading so rapidly and wants Boris to go to a hospital for an MRI. Boris refuses and tells Hank to let Dieter know whatever he needs to accomplish his tests.

Hank visits Jane and lets her know her anemia is not diet related. He has a theory that she is suffering from a condition that sometimes happens to long distance runners and infantry soldiers. It is due to the repetitive pounding of the feet. Hank wants to do a stress test on a treadmill, but Jane declines saying she prefers to run outside where she experiences the problem anyway, and Hank can run with her.

At the art show, Evan and Paige are browsing the exhibits. She tells him she is glad she did not enter because she is not ready to show the world her work, it is too personal. Suddenly Paige realizes by Evan's attitude that he entered her work without her consent. Suddenly she sees the drawing of Evan, and tells him to turn around, where he gets quite a shock. To his horror, he notices a man studying the drawing closely, then finally walking away. Evan apologizes but Paige is not upset but thankful that Evan believes in her. Suddenly the lady in charge arrives and reveals that the drawing sold, surprising both Evan and Paige.

The results of Boris' MRI show no problems with his bones, and the anti-inflammatories that Hank gave him are helping with the pain. The results of the blood tests are not complete so Hank recommends he take it easy.

Hank returns to Jane's house and has her swallow a pill that contains a tiny thermometer that will broadcast her core temperature wirelessly to a hand held meter while they run. After a long run her core temperature shows 102 degrees, which is normal for distance runners. She picks up her young daughter and suddenly starts feeling dizzy. Hank grabs her daughter just as she collapses.

Hank gets her inside where she starts feeling better. His meter shows her core temperature spiked so he decides to redo her blood tests himself since the laboratory seems to be slow in processing the results. Hank feels her daughter's forehead and thinks she is also too warm, so he suggests they both take a cool bath while he processes her bloodwork.

The tests reveal she suffers from an inherited condition that makes it difficult for her to process iron properly. She was born with it but something recent triggered it into activity. Her daughter might also have it so Hank recommends they both see a hematologist for extensive testing to identify the trigger so they can avoid it and lead normal lives.

Hank, Jill and Divya arrive at the art show to see Paige's work. Evan tries to steer them away but they see the nude sketch of him and are quite surprised. Evan proudly tell them that the sketch sold to a famous gallery owner, Eric Kassabian who arrives with Paige. Eric praises Paige's work and she is quite overwhelmed with the flattery and walks away with him to the dismay of Evan.

Divya runs into Dr. Paul Van Dyke at the hospital and he invites her to a restaurant for a date. She has no opportunity to say no and Jill witnesses the encounter, amused at Divya's reaction.

Hank speaks with Jane on the phone where she tells him his diagnosis is confirmed. After hanging up he gets a text message with the results of Boris' blood tests. Hank is confused by the results and rushes to see Boris over Dieter's objections. He finds Boris suffering from pain when touched and some numbness. Hank needs to take more blood but Boris reacts wildly when the needle is inserted and Hank is splattered with Boris' blood. Boris tells him he has a black dot in his vision and it hurts to move his eyes. Hank is extremely confused by all these symptoms as they do not line up with the hereditary disease Boris suffers with. Suddenly Hank notices that his hands are tingling where Boris' blood touched him. He realizes Boris has been poisoned.

Dieter has a dialysis machine brought into Boris' room that can cleanse blood using charcoal filters. Hank inserts a central line into Boris and starts the machine.

At the hospital Divya asks Jane questions to help figure out her trigger. When she learns that Jane cools down in a neighbor's garden that might have legumes growing there, Divya think they have found the trigger.

As Hank monitors Boris' symptoms, he thinks the poison substance is thallium which is a lethal toxicant not found naturally in the United States. Hank calls Jill to have her laboratory verify his theory and asks her to find Divya. He also asks if she knows where they can acquire a substance called Prussian Blue, which Boris needs to survive the thallium. She checks but the closest source might be hours away.

Jill and Divya arrive at Boris' mansion to assist Hank. After a while a federal agent with a HAZMAT team arrives with the Prussian Blue which Hank gives to Boris in pill form. The agent and his team start testing everything in Boris' mansion looking for the source of the poison. Hank recommends they speak with Dieter but he seems to be absent. They also insist on testing Hank since he was exposed to Boris' blood. Suddenly Hank has an insight and asks the agent to test Boris' swimming pool.

Boris starts improving rapidly and Hank assures him he will suffer no permanent damage from the poisoning. Jill tells him she spoke with Marisa and they are fine and she gives Boris a photograph from the earlier photo session. After Jill leaves, Hank theorizes that Boris may be suffering from a mutation and not a disease. Thallium poisoning has been used for centuries between feuding factions, and his condition may be a result of long term poisoning through the generations. Boris is thoughtful and wonders where Dieter has disappeared to, suggesting Dieter had something to do with the poisoning.

Hank speaks with Divya and tells her his patient Jane's trigger was discovered by a nurse at Hampton's Heritage. He wants to send the nurse flowers but Divya tells him she will take care of it, since the nurse was her. Divya realizes she cannot keep her secret much longer.

Hank arrives home in a good mood and finds Evan pensive, worried about losing Paige. He spoke with her by phone and she said she was with her parents, but he just got a call from her father looking for her. Evan realizes he may not know her as well as he thought.

Summary: Hank treats an asthmatic boy whose nanny begins to feel ill as well. Elsewhere, Paige calls Hank for a medical emergency and risks exposing her secret; and Divya goes on a date that yields unexpected results.

Paige is coordinating a fund raising party for her father's Senate campaign. She goes inside to talk with her mother Ellen who is sitting alone in her bedroom. Paige tries to engage her in conversation about the party but her mother is clearly depressed about something. When Paige turns her back, Ellen disappears from her room.

Evan is baking cookies and cream puffs for Paige's party when Hank joins him. Evan is in a much better mood than when the previous episode ended and Hank asks him about it. Evan tells him he misunderstood Paige's absence and that she was preparing for the party, not keeping company with the art dealer. He rationalizes her father's not knowing her whereabouts as being due to an overwhelming campaign schedule.

Paige goes looking for Ellen and sees her outside walking in a daze. Paige rushes after her and finds her where she has fallen off stairs onto the beach. She calls Hank and he answers, agreeing to come right away without giving away her identity to an eavesdropping Evan, instructing her to call 911.

Hank examines Ellen and stabilizes her neck with a brace. When he asks where the paramedics are, Paige tearfully admits she did not call them, not wanting them involved. Hank finds only cuts and possibly a broken bone in the foot but wants x-rays done just to make sure. Paige seems reluctant so Hank asks her to get a blanket so he can speak with Ellen alone. She admits not being happy for a long time and Hank suggests she talk with someone.

Hank nexts shows up for a consultation with a new patient and meets Divya. He tells her about his early morning patient and she asks if there is anything she can do to help. He asks to be filled in on the new patient, Simon Field, a six year old with asthma. Simon is being cared for by his nanny Toby Thompson while both parents are out of the country. Simon also seems to be afraid of most everything so Hank must listen to Toby's lungs before Simon lets himself be examined. Hank brought a different type of nebulizer for Simon, one with a mask instead of a mouthpiece and Toby at first balks, but then decides Simon needs to try new things.

At Hamptons Heritage Hospital, Paige is with her mother in her room where she was admitted. Hank stops by to check on her, having already learned that the x-rays revealed no internal injuries. When Hank asks about the Psych exam, Paige says they will come back after she awakens, but Paige is afraid she will check herself out of the hospital before they can speak with her.

Hank pushes for more information and Paige reveals Ellen has been depressed since before she was born. The last time she saw a doctor for treatment was over eight months ago, and she saw a military doctor friend of her husband's for his discretion, in order not to affect her husband's campaign. Paige admits this is what she started to ask Hank for help earlier in the summer, and why she couldn't tell anyone, because it was not her secret to reveal.

Toby shows Simon the new nebulizer and tries to convince him to put the mask on, but he turns the tables and insists she try it first.

Paige goes home to pack a bag for her mother when Evan arrives. He has brought the baked goods and is surprised to see her there, thinking she was away on a trip for the campaign. He asks her if she ever left town and when she says no, he accuses her of lying to him, and not for the first time. She tries to explain but he keeps interrupting, and asks if she is seeing Kassabian the art dealer. This really surprises Paige and she gets angry, telling him that they are through.

Hank follows up with Simon where he is speaking to his parents over a Skype connection to Beijing. While he walks off, Toby reveals she hurt her head when she fell over one of Simon's toys. His examination reveals she needs stitches and Hank quickly sews her wound while Simon is distracted.

At home, Evan busies himself destroying the cream puffs with a golf club when Paige's father, the General arrives. The General is furious with Hank and tells Evan when Hank returns to tell his brother to stay away from her and off his property. When Evan asks what is going on, he finds out that Paige called Hank the day before and Hank treated Ellen without telling Evan.

At the hospital, Jill stops by to speak with Divya about her upcoming date with Dr. Paul Van Dyke. Divya says she is going to cancel the date but Jill talks her out of it, saying she needs to jump into the dating pool.

Hank arrives home to an angry Evan who starts yelling at him. Evan accuses Hank of keeping secrets about Paige from him and when Hank claims doctor-patient confidentiality, Evan calls bull, saying family is more important. He even takes credit for Hank's current success, saying Hank would still be sitting in his darkened apartment without Evan pushing him. He then takes a golf club to Hank's car windshield and blames Hank for his breakup instead of his own insecurities and lack of trust.

Later, Hank tells Divya the story and she tries to console him, saying Evan will eventually forgive him. Hank says he knew better, that secrets always come back to bite you, which strikes home with Divya who is keeping her second job at Hamptons Heritage a secret from both Hank and Evan.

After Simon's asthma treatment, Toby tries to get him to get into the swimming pool. As he usually does, he insists she go first, taking her by surprise by pushing her into the pool. For some reason, she is unconscious, floating face down in the pool and Simon thinks she is playing. When he realizes something is really wrong, he gather his courage and jumps in and manages to awaken her and get her to the side of the pool and they call Hank.

Hank examines her and finds nothing obvious but wants to do more tests to rule out any neurological problems. He worries her earlier injury might have been caused by fainting, instead of tripping over a toy. Because of that he cannot leave her alone with Simon. She says the housekeeper is coming from the city later that evening and Hank agrees to stay until she arrives, and will even have a friend bring over some pizza.

Paul takes Divya on their date on the back of his motorcycle, and she is not happy he didn't warn her so she could dress properly. They walk toward the restaurant but he makes a side trip to a dance club to her disgust, saying he wants to work up an appetite.

Evan arrives at the Collins house where he and Paige make up immediately, promising to never keep secrets.

Hank and Jill are playing outside with Simon and Toby after the pizza party. Soon Toby takes Simon for his asthma treatment and bed and leaves Hank and Jill alone where Hank apologizes for changing their date night. When Hank and Jill try to enter the house to see if the housekeeper has arrived, they find the doors locked. Hank spies Toby through the window and gets her attention. As she walks toward the door she collapses on the floor and convulses.

Hank breaks the door glass to gain entry while Jill retrieves his medical bag and portable heart monitor. While Jill performs CPR, Hank connects the monitor to reveal Toby's heart is fibrillating. He uses the electric paddles to shock her heart to no avail. Hank realizes she is experiencing Torsades, which is why the defibrillator didn't work. Hank injects her with magnesium and she comes around quickly. Hank insists she needs to go to the hospital and Jill agrees to stay with Simon.

Despite her misgivings, Divya is having fun with Paul, even dancing with him. The dance club has a surf board ride, similar to a bull ride where you try to stay on board while it twists and turns. Paul slips the operator some cash and then pretends to be thrown from the board, and feigns unconsciousness. When Divya becomes alarmed and almost starts mouth to mouth resuscitation, she is furious when she discovers he is faking. He apologizes and asks for a second chance, saying it has been a long time since he dated and he is out of practice.

Hank checks in on Toby at the hospital and tells her it is confirmed she has a condition where her heart can jump into an arrhythmia when she is startled. Hank is not sure what started triggering her episodes until Simon stops by, and he finds out Toby tried the nebulizer first, as she usually does to calm his fears. Hank realizes the albuterol of the asthma medication is the cause of her recent episodes.

Divya and Paul are having dinner on the back of a yacht anchored in the marina, having missed their dinner reservations at the restaurant. Divya tells Paul the story of her failed wedding and disinheritance and he tells her the details of his normal boring life. He suggests they will have better luck on their next date and Divya says there won't be one. Paul then suggests they go out as just platonic friends getting to know one another, since they both need the dating practice.

Paige and Evan bring Ellen her dinner to her room where she is reluctant to join the fund raiser party. Ellen seems in better spirits and bids the couple go have fun, saying she will be fine. They arrive at the party where one of Ellen's friends asks how she is doing, the rumor mill having started quickly. Paige hesitates and Evan jumps in telling everyone Ellen just has the Summer flu and is resting per doctor's orders. Paige watches Evan with gratitude and affection for helping protect her mother.

Hank arrives at the Collins home to check on Ellen and Evan meets him at the door. Evan tells Hank he is not going to apologize and Hank says okay, then says he is sorry for his part in the complicated situation. He hands Evan two bottles of pills that Ellen left at the hospital and starts to tell Evan that the psychiatrist can see Ellen as an outpatient when the General arrives, telling Hank to leave. The General then asks Evan if he is staying or going, basically asking him to take sides. Evan closes the door on Hank, having made his choice.

Summary: Eric Kassabian, the major art gallery owner who bought Paige's drawing, seeks medical help from Hank. Divya's attempt to juggle her PA jobs at HankMed and Hamptons Heritage is proving difficult.

The Collins' campaign fund raiser is ramping down and Paige indicates her father The General is now within 5 points of the leader. The group discusses the campaign schedule and one of the stops is a book signing in the city. The General asks his wife Ellen if she wants to go but she declines. Paige steps forward and offers to accompany her father and he agrees and invites Evan to come too.

Eric Kassabian returns from London where his assistant Megan tells him his prize painting is ready for viewing. He pulls a cord to part curtains and reaches for his shoulder in pain. As he gazes upon the painting, he appears to become dizzy and collapses on the floor.

Divya arrives at HankMed and shows Hank a sign that Evan left on the door canceling the staff meeting. Evan is still mad at Hank for keeping secrets about his fiancée Paige's family. Divya tells Hank that sometimes secrets are necessary, thinking of her own situation. They discuss a new patient, Raina Saluja, who has recurring tonsillitis and who has been scheduled for surgery. Divya yawns while Hank is speaking, tired from the second job she is keeping secret, and Hank suggests she go home and get some rest after taking Raina to the hospital. Divya starts to tell Hank her secret when his phone rings.

Eric suffered a laceration to his arm when he fell and Hank stitches it up for him. Hank learns that Eric is a diabetic, which among other things means he heals slower than normal. Hank tests his glucose level and it turns out to be normal. Eric tells him about fainting when he saw his painting 'Isabella', and shows the painting to Hank. While the two men gaze at the painting in awe, Eric starts to suffer a delusion that the subjects in the painting are moving, then he starts to pass out again.

Hank uses a portable EEG machine to test Eric for an epilepsy related seizure. Eric asks if the seizure could be related to his diabetes and Hank tells him it is possible, it could be damage to his eyes from his disease. Eric laments he searched for his prize painting for 15 years and now may go blind. Hank tells him he is jumping to conclusions and wants him to see an ophthalmologist. He also wants him to get an MRI on his back to determine whether the pain he suffered from pulling on the cord is a simple pinched nerve or if it also might be related to his diabetes. Eric takes the news with grim humor.

Hank arrives to find Evan waiting for him. Hank asks what he did wrong this time and Evan says basically everything, except for his diagnosis of Ellen. Evan is concerned about her and The General seems oblivious to it. Hank asks about the medications and psychiatrist she was prescribed and Evan says she has tried everything, and will only consider new ideas at this point. Evan says she needs hope and that gives Hank an idea. He has a friend that can help and who practices at Brooklyn Heights Mercy Hospital, the hospital that fired Hank.

Divya is helping Raina with her luggage and questions why she needs so much for just one night in the hospital. Raina tells Divya how she came East to conquer Broadway after being in films and started suffering throat problems. Her general attitude is diva-ish and Divya is hard pressed to control her temper. Just before leaving, Divya receives a call from Jill who is in the city looking for her replacement at Hamptons Heritage Hospital. Jill asks Divya if she can work an extra shift and she agrees, desperate for the money.

Hank arrives at Brooklyn Heights Mercy Hospital to meet with his friend Abby, who is under the impression that Hank is her patient due to everything he went through when he was fired. Hank quickly relieves her of that notion and tells her about Ellen and asks if she would be a candidate for a treatment he has read about. Abby informs him that Ellen's history indicates she would not be a candidate. Hank is disappointed and asks if Abby has any ideas, indicating Ellen is desperate for help.

At Hamptons Heritage, Dr. Paul Van Dyke is treating Riley, a boy for lockjaw and asks Divya to prepare him for surgery. She has an idea she read about in a British medical journal and suggests it is worth a try, before resorting to surgery. Paul agrees and asks Divya to give it a try but she is interrupted by a call from Raina.

Hank returns to Eric's home to check on him and finds him sitting on the lawn alone while a party goes on around him. Hank tells him the EEG was normal and the ophthalmologist found no problems either. Hank has no idea what is causing the fainting but will not give up. The MRI indicated he has diabetes related back problems and will need steroids as treatment. Eric tells Hank his story about his passion for art, and how a broken relationship led to his lifelong love of art. The story suggests to Hank that Eric's problem might be psychosomatic, and his mind is playing tricks on his body. Eric is dubious but agrees to have Hank test him after the party.

Divya changes out of her scrubs before checking on Raina, who is very demanding. She shows Divya a contract she signed with Evan guaranteeing that HankMed would be by her side for her whole stay. She then gives Divya a list of things she wants done.

Evan is playing monopoly with Paige and Ellen while also grilling dinner when Hank arrives. Hank has news of a new treatment option and asks if The General is around to participate in the discussion. He is told he is absent and wouldn't listen anyway. Hank's friend recommends E.C.T., or Electroconvulsive Therapy commonly known as shock therapy. Paige and Ellen both state that E.C.T. was dismissed as an option years before. Hank tells them about changes to the therapy that now makes it painless for the patient.

Hank returns to see Eric who tells him about the special lighting he had installed to protect the painting from damage. As Eric walks toward the painting to pull the curtain cord, he once more starts to faint. Hank has an idea and quickly turns off the special lights, thinking that one of the bulbs is defective and causing a strobe effect that is affecting Eric.

Hank once more uses his EEG machine to test Eric and this time has a specialist online to interpret the results in real time. When he turns the light on again, Eric experiences pre-seizure effects that stop when Hank turns the light off. Hank gives him two options, medication or change the light bulb. He also reminds him he needs to get a spinal injection of steroids at the hospital for his pinched nerve.

Divya is becoming greatly annoyed by Raina and is wearing herself out going back and forth from Raina's room to her hospital duties and constantly changing clothes. Paul finally returns to check on her work with Riley and gets bitten while finishing the process to loosen his jaw. Divya's idea worked and Riley thanks her.

Evan arrives home and tells Hank that Ellen has agreed to see Abby, but they are keeping The General in the dark for now.

Hank speaks with Paul about the steroid treatment for Eric at Hamptons Heritage. Paul gets annoyed with Hank treating him like a med student and assures him he is experienced enough to take care of Paul. He almost runs into an exhausted Divya who stops by Raina's room once again. Divya assures her the surgery will go fine but Raina reveals her insecurity about after the surgery, about whether her voice is good enough for Broadway.

Evan arrives at The General's book signing alone, Paige having gone with her mother to meet Abby. The book signing is on board the USS Intrepid aircraft carrier museum which impresses Evan. Evan works hard at the role Paige usually does, glad-handing the public and whispering pertinent information about each to The General.

After the signing, The General thanks Evan for his work, surprised at his competence. Suddenly he notices Hank walking toward him with Paige. An angry General confronts Hank who tells him Ellen is at the Brooklyn hospital being prepped for E.C.T. The General argues she does not need treatment but a tearful Paige finally stands up to him and says they need to help her now.

Paul finds Diva between patients and recruits her to help with Eric, who she recognizes to her surprise. She tells him she will get him some steroids to take orally after his procedure. He asks her if they have met, but she denies it and quickly sets up the IV and leaves.

The General tells Hank he is trying to protect his wife from yet one more disappointment, because each one is worse than the one before. Hank softens and tells him there are no guarantees, but he thinks it is worth a shot, and he also thinks family support might be crucial for success. The General just wishes he would leave his family alone.

Divya sees Raina off to surgery and tells her she will do fine. She surprises Raina by telling her she downloaded all her music and really likes it and knows she has the chops to make it on Broadway.

Jill arrives at Hamptons Heritage and runs into Divya. She has found a perfect candidate to take over for her and Divya congratulates her, but Jill does not seem very happy.

Ellen is sedated for her E.C.T. treatment. Hank, Evan and Paige watch through an observation window as Abby uses electrodes to send an electrical current through Ellen's brain. As Hank explains, The General arrives quietly and watches the procedure without letting them know he is there. The treatment ends successfully and Paige notices her father, who she hugs.

Outside the hospital, Evan apologizes to Hank and says that he and Hank are all right. Hank returns to the Hamptons to see Eric and discovers him unconscious in his gallery. Hank sees the empty prescription bottle of oral steroids and angrily calls 911 for help, telling the operator he was mistakenly prescribed oral steroids. While this is going on, an exhausted Divya finally arrives home and falls into bed.

Summary:	The steroids that Eric Kassabian was prescribed has sent him into a coma that Hank blames on Van Dyke, but Jill opens an official investigation to ascertain all the facts. HankMed has a party planner for a new patient, and she invites Hank to attend the party just in case she needs him. Evan risks Paige's father's support when he stands up to the man and Divya struggles with guilt over her error.

Hank is working on an unconscious Eric Kassabian after he collapses in his art gallery in a continuation from the last episode. A blood test reveal his glucose level is critically high.

Jill meets Divya for lunch, where she complains about the conclusions her therapist reached. The therapist thinks Jill is letting her personal life affect her professional life. Divya tries to respond but does not succeed as Jill keeps answering her own questions. Jill finally concludes she needs to break up with Hank once and for all.

The paramedics arrive at Hamptons Heritage with Eric Kassabian along with a clearly upset Hank. Dr. Van Dyke arrives to take over the emergency patient and he almost comes to blows with an angry Hank until Jill steps in and separates them. She sends Van Dyke off to see other patients and tells Hank not to accuse one of her doctors without proof. He shows her the prescription bottle of pills he found on Kassabian.

At home, Evan walks into the dining room to see Hank restocking his medical bag. He inquires about Kassabian and Hank informs him he is in a coma. Evan tries to comfort Hank but Hank is frustrated because once his patient enters the hospital, he loses control over their care. Evan asks Hank where he is headed and Hank tells him he received a panicked call from a party planner. Evan is familiar with the party, it is for Greg and Audrey Barnes and it is a divorce party. Evan is anxious to attend and asks Hank if he can help with that, Hank tells him no.

Dr. Van Dyke stops Divya in the hall and tells her about Kassabian's status. He shows her his chart and Divya is shocked and puzzled that she missed the fact that Kassabian is diabetic and the steroids she gave him was what put him in a coma. Van Dyke says he lied to Jill and did not reveal Divya as the guilty party, but he is pretty sure Jill will figure it out eventually. He recommends Divya pretend to be ill and go home but Divya heads for Kassabian's room.

At the Barnes' party, Hank meets Lucy, the party planner. She is complaining of nausea and is sure the cause is one of the many food samples the caterer left for her to sample. There are quite a few and Lucy says she tried all of them, and when asked she said that some of the other staff have tried them too. Hank checks but only Lucy is queasy and he tells her he thinks it is simply overeating and stress with her job. He leaves and tells her to call him if she has more problems.

Evan meets Paige's father, the 'General' for a round of golf. The other two members of the foursome include the General's new campaign manager, and Jack O'Malley, the golf professional that Hank treated last year. The General tells the others that Evan is engaged to his daughter, but Evan reminds the General that the couple agreed to wait until after the election. The General tells him he has changed his mind and gives Evan his blessing to marry Paige whenever they decide.

Hank calls Lucy to follow up on her condition. She is carrying a cake and experiences problems with the feeling in her fingers and drops the cake. Hank goes to see her and cannot find any obvious cause for her symptoms. She asks if he would like to attend the party so he would be close in case she becomes ill during the party and he agrees, if he can invite some friends.

Jill passes by Kassabian's room and sees Divya attending to him. She wonders why Divya is there since she is assigned elsewhere in the hospital and then realizes by Divya's silence why. Divya apologizes and is frantic because she can't explain how she missed the information in his charts regarding diabetes when suddenly Kassabian awakens from his coma. Jill quickly calls in the emergency room staff to attend him and tells Divya she is on suspension until the investigation is complete.

On the golf course, the General receives a call requesting he attend an event as part of his election bid. Evan overhears and reminds him that the event conflicts with the promise he made to be in Brooklyn supporting his wife's treatment. The General tells him the campaign creates sacrifices and reminds Evan that he and Paige have a number of events to attend themselves. Evan criticizes his decision and tells him he needs to stop taking advantage of Paige. The General angrily rescinds his earlier blessing of their marriage.

Hank stops to see Kassabian who tells him everyone is walking on eggshells around him worried that he is going to sue. Kassabian says he is not the litigious type but someone screwed up and he would have died if not for Hank. Hank agrees and relates that he was once on the receiving side of taking the blame as an emergency room doctor and he feels any lawsuit should be about correcting the mistake and making sure it does not happen again and not about money.

Jill stops by Hank's and has a glass of wine where they talk about their day. She tries to tell him about Divya when they are interrupted by Jack. Jack wants Hank to give him a physical to reassure his new sponsors. He mentions meeting Evan on the course earlier. Jack notices Jill and they greet each other warmly when he notices the wine glasses, but he charms his way into staying.

Hank, Evan and Jill arrive at the Barnes' party. Jill says that Divya has begged off because of illness, and Evan says Paige is not coming due to the General's influence. The greeter however says Paige is already there and Evan rushes off to find her. Hank goes to check on Lucy who he notices has a raspy voice. Lucy has been working all night and her fingers are still numb. She asks Hank to finish decorating the cake since he has a surgeon's hands. After Hank finishes the cake and returns to the party, Lucy experiences a tightness in her throat and has difficulty breathing, but the spasm passes and she continues working.

The party is in full swing and everyone is having a good time. Evan tells Paige that her father is unhappy with him for speaking his mind. Paige says she does not care and gets down on her knee and proposes. Evan agrees and gives her the ring that he has been carrying.

Jill tells Hank that she wants to break up with him because of her career, even though she really cares for him. Hank agrees and says that he does not want to hold her back.

Lucy is putting the finishing touches on the divorce cake when she experiences another spasm. Hank happens to be near and rushes to her. She tells him she thinks she is having a heart attack. Hank tries to get her to relax, thinking she is just having an anxiety attack. Lucy settles into crying because she thinks her career is over. Hank notices she is not producing any tears and puts all the clues together and decides she is probably allergic to glutens, and the recent stress of the party triggered the onset of the problem that can be solved through diet.

At the hospital, Divya speaks with Kassabian and is apologizing for making a mistake. He tells her that he is not suing and that he forgives her for her mistake. She smiles wanly and says now she just needs to forgive herself.

Hank gives Jack his physical and everything indicates he is in perfect health. He asks Hank if he interrupted a romantic liaison with Jill the other night but Hank denies it.

Divya stops by Jill's office to resign. To Divya's surprise, Jill quickly agrees, saying that the whole situation of Divya working there was awkward. Jill asks if Hank requested she resign and Divya says Hank doesn't know she was working there. Jill tells her that Kassabian is a HankMed patient, which is why she thought Hank would ask her to resign.

Jack is on the driving range when Hank stops by to tell him that his white blood count was slightly abnormal and he wants to do another test, but not to be alarmed.

At home, Hank toasts Evan and Paige on their upcoming wedding. Paige tells Evan that the call he made to her father the previous night impressed him and made him happy. Hank goes to the kitchen for more champagne when Divya arrives. She finally tells him she was the one who gave Kassabian the steroids, not Van Dyke.

Summary: When a mysterious illness overcomes the members of an up and coming rock band, Hank and Divya have to work together to find the cause; but Hank struggles with trusting Divya after her near fatal prescription error.

Evan wakes up in bed with two large dogs crowding him. Paige comes in and tries to get him to arise and go to work. The couple are alone in the Collins estate while Paige's parents are away for a week and have been enjoying playing house. They talk about the dogs and the conversation shifts to having children and both seem excited about the prospect. Finally Paige promises to make Evan his favorite sandwich if he will get up, peanut butter and banana.

Evan arrives home and learns from Hank that Divya was responsible for Kassabian's medical problems when she gave him the wrong medication while working at Hamptons Heritage. Evan is surprised and wants to know why she was working there. Hank says they did not discuss it so Evan proposes talking it over at their staff meeting. Hank disagrees and does not want to discuss it when Jill arrives. She says Divya will be late as she is stopping to see a patient on her way in. Hank is alarmed and decides to join her.

Hank arrives at the address where the patient is supposed to be and finds an outdoor rock concert in progress. Divya is surprised to see him and says the patient is the lead singer of the band Some Pig, and he has been complaining of leg weakness, but seems fine on stage. Divya tries to talk about her mistake but Hank says it was not on HankMed time so it doesn't fall under his purview. At the end of the song, the lead singer tries an acrobatic slide across the stage and ends up falling off the stage in pain.

Hank questions the lead singer Jared about his leg weakness. He was fine until he tried his slide and he says he needs to be a showman to gain attention and become stars. His legs have been weak and painful lately and his band mates have been trying to get him to focus on his music and not the aerobatics. His only injury is a cut on his face where a ring piercing was torn loose so Hank proposes suturing the wound. Divya prepares to do that but Hank intervenes and asks her to take his medical history while he does the sutures. Hank's advice is to avoid the stage antics until he gets the blood samples analyzed. While they are leaving, Divya suggest she and Hank split their patient load but Hank prefers they work together, troubling Divya.

Hank was practicing golf with Jack O'Malley and the talk drifted to Jack's physical condition. Jack admitted he has had more soreness and stiffness and had lost some weight, but countered with the fact that he has been playing well, making more tournament cuts and been playing many more rounds of golf. When asked about skin rashes, he answered definitely no.

At the Collins' house, Evan comes out of the shower and notices a rash on his chest when he looks in the mirror. Paige enters and he hides it from her and leaves quickly. He catches up with Hank who is running on the beach and shows it to Hank. Hank is not concerned, saying he normally gets hives when he is under stress. Evan doesn't want to think that his engagement is causing him stress but Hank says not to worry.

Divya arrives at the Lawson home as Hank is hanging up the phone. She has the results of Jared's lab tests and concludes he has a specific disease that can lead to paralysis. Hank disagrees saying that disease is not contagious and he just learned a second band member is experiencing the same symptoms.

The second band member turns out to be Calliope, and it is revealed that she and Jared are sleeping together, a fact that upsets the other band members. Hank says they aren't sure the symptoms are sexually transmitted and proposes physical exams for both. The surface exam reveals nothing so Hank does a spinal tap to search for latent Sexually Transmitted Diseases (STDs). As they are leaving, Divya proposes having Jared and Calliope undergo MRIs to search for spinal tumors that may account for the leg weakness. Hank scoffs at the concept of matching tumors in two different patients and accuses Divya of over compensating by suggesting unnecessary tests.

Jill runs into Jack at a coffee shop. He asks if she would like to play a round of golf the following day on a very exclusive course. She refuses at first then give in, with the understanding that it is just golf and not a date. As Jack turns to leave, Jill notices a rash on his neck that he says is just sunburn.

Evan arrives back at the Collins home where Paige awaits like a subservient housewife from the 1950s, complete with martini ready for her man. She is uncertain at his reaction and says she went overboard about their future and potential family but he says it is fine. As she turns away he frantically scratches at the hives through his shirt. She proposes a massage but he doesn't want to remove his shirt and give away his condition and proposes he massage her instead.

Hank arrives home to see Divya using a sonogram on Jared's abdomen. Both he and Calliope are complaining of stomach pain and have urine retention requiring catheterization. She also reiterates they both need MRI's and Hank agrees. He gets a text message and says he will meet her at the hospital.

Hank stops by the country club to speak with Jack. Jack's lab tests indicate he has lupus, an incurable disease but one that can be managed.

Jared and Calliope's MRIs reveal inflammation across both their spines. Hank is unsure what is causing it but will start treating the inflammation with steroids.

Evan wakes in bed with the dogs again and calls for Paige. She is upset with a lesion on her face. They go see Hank and he suggests it might be from what are called kissing bugs. He then tells Evan they also might account for his outbreak of hives, which takes Paige by surprise as he has been keeping that information from her.

Jill finds a despondent Jack at the bar instead of waiting for her at the first tee. She wonders what is wrong and he talks about his lucky year that has come to an end, but can't quite tell her he has lupus. She tells him not everyone gets to have even one lucky year, and that there is always obstacles in life to fight and overcome. This cheers him and they head for the course.

The next day, Hank and Divya stop by Jared and Calliope's hospital room where they find band mate Todd asleep in the chair. He is concerned for them and Hank tells him they are still looking for the main cause. Todd tries to get up to leave but collapses to the floor with intense leg pain.

Hank and Divya head to the estate that the band has been staying at to speak with the fourth band member Home. They find him lying on the floor and think he too has the same problem until he jumps up, just fine. Hank asks if he knows of anything the others have done that he hasn't and he can only think of his being a vegan. He then shows Hank the video where one scene has the three sick band members playing in a pork processing plant where Hank refused to go. Divya immediately thinks of trichinosis and rushes out to initiate a test. Hank stops her and says she is jumping to conclusions to save the day. They argue and Homer intercedes, saying from their arguments that the two of them must be good friends.

Suddenly Hank notices on the video that there are workers in the plant behind the band, all wearing masks while the band pretends to play while not wearing masks. The workers are using compressed air to remove the pig's brains from the skulls and some of the brain particles are airborne and could be causing an auto immune response after ingestion.

Evan and Paige retrieve their dogs from the groomers. Evan is upbeat and says they have the kissing bugs taken care of but Paige is still a little morose. She finally confesses to being a little freaked out about their future together, saying she has never had to think in those terms before, with having to take care of her mother and be there for her father. Evan says it is okay, that she can tell him anything and he will help her overcome her fears.

Hank returns home where Divya has been working with Jack on a full medical history in preparation for their long term treatment of his lupus. Jack is upbeat and Divya said she took another urine sample to double check his results. Jack leaves and Divya reads a test result that indicates Jack's lupus is developing faster than they thought and is in the process of attacking his kidneys.

Evan and Divya arrive at a concert that the band is preparing for. Evan asks Divya if she and Hank have made up and she says yes. He then asks if she still has financial problems and before she can answer, the band spots her in the crowd and invite them backstage. All of the band members are responding well to the treatment and their band is going to be heading out on tour as a warmup act for a famous band.

Hank stops by the golf course where Jack is giving a lesson. He breaks the bad news to Jack as the episode ends.

Summary:	Hank is sidelined with a bad back and Evan takes the opportunity to hire a B.U.D., a backup doctor he has wanted for some time. Hank spends his time with his friend Jack O'Malley as he starts his treatment for lupus. Divya looks to sell a family heirloom to pay off her debts.

The episode opens at a funeral. Divya is singing while Hank, Evan, Jill and Jack O'Malley are seated in the front row. The coffin is lowered into the grave and the rabbi requests those closest to the deceased participate in the ceremony by placing a shovelful of dirt in the grave. Hank goes first...

One day earlier

Hank is heading to his car very slowly, suffering from his bad back. Evan tries to get him to let Divya cover his patients and then revisits his desire to hire a backup doctor. Hank stubbornly refuses. As he tries to enter his car, he stumbles, drops his briefcase and papers, and screams in pain. He tries in vain to pickup his files and finally gives in to Evan regarding the backup doctor.

At the Lawson home, Divya and Jill are talking about an auction house. Jill offers to accompany Divya and Divya agrees. Evan enters with Dr. Paul Van Dyke who he has hired as the backup for Hank. Jill and Divya are both suspicious that he took the job where Divya works, but he said he just worked with a head hunter. Evan closes his staff meeting and Divya leaves with Jill. Paul is confused, thinking he was working with Divya but Evan tells him she has her own patients and that he will accompany Paul and show him the ropes.

Jack is sitting in a waiting room in Hamptons Heritage hospital when Hank enters slowly in obvious pain. When asked, Hank blames his condition on the golf lessons Jack gave him. Hank is there to attend Jack's first meeting with the specialist that will treat his lupus. Jack suspects the specialist, Dr. Nina Green is actually the actress who played in a television show as a child. When she introduces herself, Hank seems smitten.

Evan and Paul arrive at the home of their first client and Paul takes the time to criticize Evan's ride, calling it a soccer mom vehicle. When Paul asks about their client, Evan sorta mumbles that they are there for a mole check. The client, Edie, turns out to be a beautiful young woman sunning herself in a bikini by the pool. Paul does his exam and notices several other young ladies in bikinis and manages to persuade Edie that he should check the others as well and pushes a HankMed business proposition, amazing Evan in the process. As they leave the first client's house, Evan is ecstatic. Paul seems unaffected, assuming that building HankMed's business is part of his job. He offers to drive his car instead of the van, saying they can see twice as many patients.

At the Sutton & Chesterfield auction house, the manager is reviewing photographs of a 12 piece china place setting that has been in Divya's family for many years. The set is very valuable but he needs to see it in person. Jill jumps in for Divya telling him they will bring it by the next day. Divya mentions she had forgotten that she had the china until recently and is sad because her family never used it. However, she is in good enough spirits to give Floyd, the valet a large tip.

Nina tells Jack that he is a candidate for a double blind trial as part of his lupus treatment. They have a new drug that is promising. Hank is doubtful, however, because some of the participants receive a placebo, which means Jack will go untreated for six months. Jack doesn't seem to take his condition seriously, and he suggests a flip of the coin decide.

The next day, Evan and Paul arrive at their client in his Cadillac. The client is Ms. Newberg and she is disappointed when she sees Hank is absent. Paul assures her he will take good care of her and asks her what is the emergency. She says she thinks she is dying.

After their meeting with Nina, Hank finds Jack signing multiple documents as part of the trial treatment. He says he is listing Hank as his 'in case of emergency' contact. He asks Hank if he is there to talk him out of the trial and Hank says he is there because he is Jack's friend. Jack tells him that is why he picked Hank as his contact. Besides, he only sees his family on holidays and has been on his own since he joined the pro tour.

Divya and Jill visit a client named Mackintosh that needs a polio vaccination for a trip to India. Divya notices a lesion on his arm and he says it is just a mosquito bite he probably got in Panama. Divya uses a piece of bacon and duct tape on his arm to enable her to remove a parasitic worm that was burrowed just underneath the skin.

Ms. Newberg has been experiencing pain in her back that comes and goes. When asked she admits she has been doing some lifting as she has had to renovate her home because of storm damage. Paul reassures her by recommending a full battery of tests, to Evan's delight.

While leaving the Mackintosh home, Jill reflects that the parasite reminded her of her time in South America and she is more convinced that is where she wants to be. Jill notices one of the doors open on Divya's car and sees Floyd from the auction house stealing some of the china, which Divya stored in the car. He runs to his car and Divya and Jill pursue him in their car. Floyd heads onto a dirt road and crashes, destroying the china he had stolen. When they arrive, they find he is impaled through the abdomen by a fence post that penetrated his windshield. Jill has no cell service to call 911 and Divya notices his blood pressure is dropping so she thinks they need to get him to the emergency room themselves.

Evan returns home to find Hank hanging upside in a contraption designed to stretch his back. Evan comments on how he will put himself in a torture device rather than just take some medication. Evan then drops the bomb shell that he hired Paul, whom Hank has little respect for. Hank is upset with Evan and said he was supposed to review candidates and approve the person they hired. Evan assures him everything is going well and Paul has acquired five new retainers for HankMed. He tells Hank to take his time recovering.

Divya starts to cut the pipe but stops when Jill notices the smell of gasoline. They then decide to pull the pipe out of Floyd as a last resort. They get him into Divya's car and take him to the ER.

Hank finally decides to treat himself and starts an IV. He then plans on injecting 2 milligrams of Valium but a pain spasm causes him to inject over 10 milligrams instead.

The funeral

Evan tosses his shovelful of dirt into the grave. He says that Hank is at fault. Hank is confused. Suddenly Hank hears knocking and looks into the grave as the coffin opens. Evan is lying inside the coffin and accuses Hank of killing HankMed, for not helping it grow. Evan turns into Divya who chastises Hank saying she needs the HankMed job because she is broke. Then Jill appears asking what will become of their free clinic patients. Finally Hank himself appears, and he tells the other Hank that he agrees with Evan, Divya and Jill. Hank awakens from his nightmare to find himself lying on the floor at home where he collapsed from the Valium overdose.

Evan and Paul followup with Ms. Newberg. Her tests did not find anything and Paul doesn't understand why they are there. Evan explains that HankMed is all about face to face, 24/7, and he starts to have his first doubts about Paul because of his attitude. When Ms. Newberg reports that she had the pain again that morning, but is currently gone, Paul leaves saying to call when she has another episode. Evan is distraught and tries to get Paul to return but he is adamant that he doesn't hold his patient's hands and heads off to the next client.

Divya and Jill visit Floyd in the hospital where he is recovering from having his spleen removed. He is handcuffed to the hospital bed and trying to reach the Jello on his table. Jill says he owes Divya an apology for destroying her china but he is not sorry. But he does eventually thank her for saving his life.

Evan drives Ms. Newberg to see Hank in her new car. She complains that she cannot figure out half the high tech gadgets it has. She starts crying and experiencing the pain in her back again and Evan figures out the seat and neck heaters have been on full blast.

Hank stops to see Jack who is jaundiced and running a fever. He also has a rash on his forearm and has not reported any of it to Nina. He confesses to Hank that his coin flip was meaningless, that he was always going to enter the trial with the hope that the new medication would cure his lupus forever, a hole-in-one as he puts it. Hank takes him to the ER where they treat him for a side effect from the medication, a side effect that was shutting down his liver. The reaction means he is out of the trial and can start traditional treatment.

Hank returns home where Evan awaits with crutches. Hank doesn't need them and Evan harangues him until he admits he took the drugs. Hank tells Evan he was right about HankMed needing a backup doctor. Evan is surprised then tells him that Paul is not the right man for the job, but he will keep looking.

Production Code: RP314
Summary: A Hollywood star doing a stage production in the Hamptons is besieged by one calamity after another, but Hank is there to help. Divya finds out that Raj is proceeding on with his life. Jack decides to delay treatment.

Hank is playing golf with Jack O'Malley, talking about Jack's lupus condition. Jack tells Hank he is fired as his doctor since his insurance can't cover two doctors and he is now seeing Dr. Nina Greene, a specialist. Hank says he wants to stay in the loop regarding Jack's health, but Jack just wants them to just be friends. Jack invites Hank fishing but Hank wants him to take his health more seriously.

Actor Gabriel Gleason arrives in the Hamptons to play in a local theater production of A Midsummer Night's Dream. The director Julie is thrilled to see him, even though he arrived apparently inebriated. Gabriel has trouble keeping pace with Julie's gait and gasps for breath at the first chance when he is left alone in his dressing room.

At the same outdoor theater where Gabriel is to perform, Paige is backstage painting sets. Evan is bored and wants to go get lunch but Paige is reluctant, hoping to impress Julie with her work. Evan inadvertently says some words that are considered bad luck in a theater and then scoffs at Paige's belief in the superstition when suddenly Julie calls out for a doctor.

Hank and Divya examine an actress that got light headed and passed out during rehearsals. She claims to be okay but starts having difficulty breathing and passes out again. Hank uses a scalpel to cut the bindings of the tight fitting costume and the woman's breathing eases and she wakes up. After the lady leaves, Evan tells them about how he may have cursed the production because of what he said when Paige pops in saying a man called Lysander suddenly lost his eyesight. Hank examines him and concludes he has glitter in his eyes that needs removal in a sterile environment. Divya drives the man to Hamptons Heritage.

Hank watches the rest of rehearsal and notices something may be amiss with Gabriel. At the conclusion of the scene, he introduces himself and Gabriel requests Hank meet him in his dressing room.

Dr. Paul Van Dyke removes the glitter from Lysander and recommends a followup with an ophthalmologist. He then asks Divya out on a date to the play but she refuses him, saying she is already going with Jill. She walks over to talk to Jill who tells her she would like to bail on their date as she has another offer that is more her speed. Divya says she will just go alone.

Hank examines Gabriel and finds no problem with his lungs. He does think Gabriel should cut back on the smoking and drinking though.

Nina arrives at the hospital and uses her car information center to check the score of her favorite baseball team. She pitches a small fit when she sees the result and Hank catches her in the act, totally embarrassing her. They talk about Jack and Nina reveals he was supposed to have a procedure done that day in preparation for dialysis. Hank is shocked when Nina tells him Jack's disease is advancing at a lightning rate.

Hank calls Jack and tries to get him to go to the hospital but Jack refuses. What he doesn't tell Hank is that he is heading out to do some fishing with Jill, which is why she bailed on Divya.

Hank checks in with Gabriel who is feeling bloated and has indigestion. Hank wants to take him to the hospital for a full cardiac checkup but Gabriel says he needs to learn his lines in preparation for the first performance later that day. Hank suggests a compromise, putting Gabriel on an exercise bike while he learns his lines. The heart monitoring equipment finds no problems with Gabriel and he then admits insomnia along with his other issues. Hank thinks he has acid reflux and prescribes a medication to help him and allow him to perform.

Divya is in line to return her ticket when she runs into her ex-fiance Raj. He tells her he is bringing a date and hopes it won't be awkward. Divya expresses happiness that he has moved on and after Raj leaves, changes her mind and invites Paul to the play.

Paige tells Evan that Julie is impressed with her work and thinks she might be invited to accompany Julie to Stratford-Upon-Avon, England for eight weeks to paint the scenery for a play. Evan is despondent and Paige catches his mood and tells him it probably won't happen anyway.

Hank gives Gabriel a final checkout and pronounces him good to go. When Hank leaves, Gabriel vomits in a trash can.

Hank speaks with Evan who tells him about Paige's potential trip to England. Hank assumes Evan was supportive but learns Evan left the decision up to Paige. Hank reminds Evan how Paige goes out of her way to please the people she loves, even to the detriment of her own desires and career. Evan quietly realizes Hank is right after Paige joins them and comments on how she hopes her work doesn't disappoint Julie.

The play begins with Evan participating with a small part. In the audience are Hank and Paige, Divya and Paul, and Raj with his date Karen. Gabriel seems on top of his game, but Julie, who is performing as well as directing, stumbles and seems to hurt her leg.

At intermission, Paul gets a glass of champagne, obviously bored. Raj and Karen join them and Divya learns that Karen is a theater critic. Raj tells Divya that he is in love and thanks Divya for ending their arranged marriage and letting him find love.

Backstage, Hank examines Julie who has torn her Achilles tendon and cannot continue. Paige recommends Evan play her role, Puck, since he played the same role in high school. Evan is reluctant but Julie has a plan. Evan uses an earpiece as Julie reads the lines to him via a radio signal.

As Gabriel continues his performance, he starts experiencing gastric pain, obvious to Hank in the audience. Hank and Divya run backstage where they do a quick x-ray. Hank deduces a possible hiatal hernia that only bothers Gabriel when he lies down.

As Gabriel finishes the play, Hank and Divya review the x-ray and see a life threatening condition that needs immediate surgery. They call for an ambulance and send Gabriel to the hospital.

Evan is giving his final speech as Puck when the radio signal fails. He panics when he does not know the next line until Paige calls it out to him. He then remembers the rest and finishes with a flourish.

Hank, Evan and Paige are having breakfast the next day when Paige receives a call from Julie. Before answering, Paige says she is going to turn down the Stratford offer when Evan tells her to take it, making Paige extremely happy.

Hank checks on Gabriel who is recovering in the hospital. He shows Gabriel a glowing review in the paper but says he will need several weeks to recover so he will not be able to finish the local production.

Hank learns from Nina that Jack never showed up for his medical procedure. Hank remembers the fishing offer and heads out to find him, promising Nina he will drag him in kicking and screaming if he has to.

On the boat, Jack and Jill are still fishing, yet to catch their first fish. Jack tells Jill that he came fishing because he is running from something and has decided he has to face the music. He asks Jill what she is running from, specifically why she is running to South America. She tells him she is not running away, she is running toward what she wants. She then goes below decks to get a jacket and Jack suddenly vomits over the side and pounds the railing in frustration.

Summary:	Hank continues to search for Jack so he can continue his medical treatments. Evan meddles in Divya's affairs and proposes a solution to her financial debt. HankMed gets a new client referred to them by Jill's nephew. Boris returns home for the christening of his son. A family envoy arrives to petition Boris for peace in the family.

Hank arrives back at the marina aboard Jim Harper's boat where Dr. Nina Greene awaits them. The two men have been searching for Jack O'Malley in some of his favorite fishing spots with no luck. Jim is having some pain above his eye and Hank diagnoses it immediately and uses some ice from the cooler to temporarily relieve the pain until he can prescribe some medication for the problem. Jim pays him in the usual fashion, fresh fish. Nina asks him if he knows any of Jack's other friends that might know where he is and Hank says he knows one.

At sea, Jill and Jack are still fishing when Jill hooks a fish. Jack tries to help but the fish gets away. Jack is experiencing side effects from the medication and Jill seems concerned, but Jack wants to keep fishing.

At home, Hank tells Evan that he cannot reach Jill, that she has gone fishing with Jack. Evan asks if he is alright with that and Hank says he is just happy Jack is not alone. Hank asks Evan if he got the christening present for Boris and Marisa's son Carlos and Evan shows it to him. The present has the baby's monogram on it and Hank tells Evan that it is wrong. Evan argues but Hank is adamant.

Hank performs a test on Boris to see if the thallium poisoning he has suffered has affected his muscles. The tests appear to show no problems but Hank wants a specialist to review the results to be sure. Boris says he has been investigating the possibility that he has been systematically poisoned for years in a case of family politics. He has yet to locate Dieter, the man who worked for him for twenty years. Hank reminds him that he still has a genetic mutation that could prove symptomatic. Boris then asks Hank if he would be his son's godfather. Hank accepts.

Divya meets Raj at a cafe with a check for his parents. She comments that the amount is less than usual but it is only temporary. Raj says his parents won't like it and he has tried to talk them out of making her pay for the aborted wedding to no avail. She tells him it is okay, it is not his problem. As she leaves, he stops her and says she has something in her hair. She is terrified it is a bee but he tells her it is not. He steps close and appears to caress her hair when Evan sees them together across the street. The moment looks tender to him but in reality, Raj did just remove a bee from her hair.

Hank follows Divya to visit a client. He tells her he just wants to hang out together since they rarely do that anymore and Paige is with her family at the moment. He then gently begins probing her about a possible reunion with Raj but she puts him off. Hank joins them and tells them about the offer to be godfather. Divya thinks it is great but Evan is not so pleased, telling Hank he just made himself a part of Boris' family and subsequently a target. Hank has a look on his face that says he never considered that.

Their client is Jill's nephew Luke, who called them about his boss, Quincy. Luke has an obvious crush on the pretty young woman. Quincy has a moderate sunburn and is experiencing nausea. She denies the possibility of being pregnant so they suggest she check the expiration on her sunscreen as it can deteriorate.

Jack continues to try to catch a fish but Jill insists it is time to return. Under protest Jack agrees, then lies down and lets Jill drive the boat home.

The christening ceremony begins with only Hank, Evan and Divya present. A French woman interrupts and Boris tells her she is not welcome and she leaves.

The woman turns out to be Claudette von Jurgens, a cousin and friend from Boris' childhood. She is there to extend an olive branch from the side of the family that Boris is now wary of. Boris is not receptive to her offer and dismisses her.

Evan meets with Raj to get his side of the suspected reunion. Raj's initial comments have Evan thinking that Divya is paying him for something other than her debt for the aborted wedding until Raj sets him straight.

Divya responds to a call from Quincy that she is feeling worse. She is now dizzy and tired and when she removes her sunglasses, her eyes are yellow. Divya comments that her yellow eyes are a possible indicator of a liver infection and asks if she has been vaccinated for hepatitis A. Quincy says no and worries that the beach might be closed if it was determined she caught the disease while surfing. She relies on her business of giving surf lessons to pay for her surfing competitions.

Jill finally comes close enough to shore to have cell phone service and calls Hank. She tells him she is worried that Jack's condition is more than just side effects from the medication. Hank agrees and Jill tells him they are about an hour away. Hank calls Nina who agrees to wait with him at the dock.

Claudette stops by to see Hank but he is waiting at the marina. Evan speaks with her and she asks if Hank will deliver a package to Boris after 5 PM that day. She says it will prove she can be trusted and that her intentions to bring peace in the family are legitimate. Evan is suspicious and after Claudette leaves, he immediately gives the package to one of Boris' security men.

Divya follows up with Quincy and tells her the blood tests ruled out hepatitis A but her liver is still malfunctioning. She notices Quincy has several mini-energy drinks that are the same as the ones Luke was drinking. When asked she says she drinks up to 10 of those per day and Divya suspects she might be ingesting too much niacin. Since Luke drinks them too, they decide to find him and see how he is feeling. Divya also insists that Quincy accompany her immediately to Hamptons Heritage to treat her liver problem. It turns out Luke doesn't really like the drinks and has just been sipping them. He begs Quincy to trust him to watch her business while she goes with Divya and she finally relents.

Jill brings the boat in and Jack gets off but collapses on the dock. Hank and Nina determine that he has fluid building up around his heart that needs to be drained immediately. Nina is surprised when Hank says they can't wait and uses a syringe to pull the fluid out right there on the dock. The ambulance arrives for Jack and Hank rides with him to Greenport, the nearest level one trauma center.

Evan and Divya are in the ocean on paddle boards as payment from Quincy for services rendered. Evan actually planned it so he could speak to Divya about her financial issues without her running away. He proposes buying her 1/3 share in HankMed and holding it in escrow until she can buy it back. He declares she is now family and family sticks together.

When Jack arrives at Greenport, the ER personnel take over and Hank must wait outside as he has no doctor privileges in that facility. Hank waves to Jack with a pained look on his face as he realizes he is helpless to assist further.

Boris calls Evan to his office where he has opened the package. The package contained a tablet computer that pointed to an online German newspaper website. Boris read through the entire site and found nothing relating to him or his family. Evan mentions the 5 PM time frame that Claudette told him about and Boris refreshes the website to see a picture of a handcuffed Dieter in police custody. Boris tells Evan that means that Claudette is now invited to dinner.

Hank visits Jack in his room where he tells him he responded well to the ER's treatment and should be released the next day. He also tells Jack he needs to get serious about getting the dialysis treatments from Nina. Jack agrees and seems to fall asleep. He awakens moments later and is surprised to see Hank is still there. Hank tells him he is staying because they are friends. Jack drifts off to sleep and Hank settles into a chair for the duration.

Divya meets with Raj and gives him a check that pays her debt to his parents in full. Raj is surprised but she says she needed to clear the debt. They part but not before Divya gives him a hug in friendship.

The next morning, Jill and Nina arrive at Greenport to escort Jack back to Hamptons Heritage for his dialysis treatment. They see Hank sitting alone in the waiting area. When asked, a distraught Hank tells them that Jack took a turn for the worse overnight and could not be saved. Jack died.

Christopher Luttrell (Notjack), James Linkek (Friedrich)
Production Code: RP316
Summary: Hank tries to come to terms with Jack's illness. Hank must focus his attention and energy on three adolescents attempting to make audacious home videos. Boris' cousin is joined by Evan as they check out an experimental treatment.

Evan and Divya are working to rearrange their patient schedule in anticipation of Hank not being available due to a mourning period for Jack O'Malley. Paige is on the phone trying to change her flight so she can attend the funeral with Evan. Hank arrives and tells them that Jack did not want a funeral and he also would not want them to mope around. He receives a phone call and leaves immediately without a word to anyone.

Hank arrives at the Sesumi house, where Bobby has stuck his tongue into a bottle and the suction is preventing him from removing it. Mrs. Sesumi is panicking, wanting to call 911 but Hank manages to extract the boy's tongue. Hank then chastises Bobby's older brother Devon uncharacteristically, a symptom of the pain of Jack's loss.

Hank stops for coffee and runs into Dr. Nina Greene. She has been calling Hank but he has been ignoring her. She wants to talk about Jack but he is not interested in talking and leaves. He sees someone walking down the street that looks like Jack from a distance. Hank pursues the man and when he catches him, discovers it is someone else.

Boris and his cousin Claudette are walking in the garden talking about making peace in their family. Boris suspects she has other motives and is proved correct when she presents him a business plan and asks him to invest. He flips through the plan and is intrigued, then asks her to present it herself to a potential client.

Paige arrives to see Evan before leaving for England. He gives her a digital picture frame with pictures of him as well as them as a couple so she won't miss him too much. She goes upstairs to pack and Divya offers Evan some tea. Evan is surprised and a little freaked out about how nice she is being to him and asks her to stop. Boris calls and asks Evan to a meeting. Divya is surprised that Evan doesn't call Hank and he tells her that he is trying to take some of the load from Hank, because Hank doesn't do tragedy well. Hank always tries to be the responsible person and fix everyone's problems, even when he was just a kid. Hank arrives as he is leaving and insists on attending with Evan, even if it is just a financial meeting.

Divya follows up with a HankMed patient, Grace Adams. She was one of the patients that Dr. Van Dyke saw when he filled in temporarily for Hank. He had some tests done concerning her coronary heart disease but never called her back with the results. Divya wants to have her spend a night in a sleep center because of some symptoms she has every morning. However, Grace is busy day and night with her fashion consulting business, so Divya offers to bring the sleep center to her.

Hank and Evan are presented with Claudette's business plan for bringing new technology to the U.S. market, and specifically concierge medicine. Evan is enthusiastic but Hank is less so, and cuts the meeting short and departs, leaving a rather annoyed Evan behind.

Evan and Paige have a farewell picnic on the beach. Evan is enthusiastically telling her about the cool gadgets that Claudette showed them, much to Paige's amusement. Evan admits wanting to talk about anything but her leaving, but is happy for her opportunity. Paige is nervous, having never had the responsibilities she is taking on.

Hank returns to the Sesumi home to check on what Mrs. Sesumi thinks is poison oak on each of her grandsons. A quick examination by Hank determines that the boys have burns, not poison oak, obtained as a result of the movie they are making. Hank insists on seeing what they are up to and when shown, he once again lectures Devon and insists he shutdown their movie set.

Evan arrives home to find Claudette waiting for him. She wants to accompany HankMed on a client visit to better understand what new technology her proposed business could provide. She is very pushy and gets Evan to agree to let her tag along that afternoon.

As Hank is getting into his car, he receives an e-mail from Jack. The e-mail contains a video of Jack giving Hank a golf lesson and the video brings a smile to Hank, then sadness as the realization of Jack's death hits him.

Hank gives Jill's nephew Luke a physical for going to camp. She talks to Hank about her guilt, worrying that she should have forced him back to shore earlier from their fishing expedition. Hank tells her she did all she could and not to feel guilty. She then asks Hank how he is doing and he doesn't really say anything. She comments how Jack's death is not like losing a patient in the Emergency Room where he used to work and he agrees, saying he never got to know those patients.

Divya returns to see Grace, with Evan and Claudette tagging along. Evan tells Divya he thinks Claudette's plan will mean big things for HankMed and it is a shame she sold her shares in HankMed to him. Divya talks with Grace about her sleep monitoring results. Grace removed the machine because it was uncomfortable so Divya decides to try again and to personally stay with Grace to make sure the test is completed.

Back home Claudette shows Evan and Divya a product related to sleep monitoring. It is a shirt with wires built in that allows the patient to just wear it to bed and be monitored. Both Evan and Divya are impressed but Divya wants Hank's approval before using it. Evan says he will talk to Hank about it.

Dr. Paul Van Dyke comes by and tells Evan that Divya called and chastised him for not following up with Grace. Paul lets Evan know he did leave a message with Hank about Grace and thought that was sufficient. Evan looks at Paul with a new appreciation as Paul walks outside to see Divya.

Hank responds to another panicked call from Mrs. Sesumi. Her grandsons are back at the movie making, this time doing using an ATV and bungee cords for a stunt that causes Devon to fall from a considerable height with potential spinal damage. Hank is livid with Devon and starts yelling at him, telling him he will listen this time and take his advice, then calls him Jack by mistake.

Divya wakes up at Grace's house to find Grace no longer asleep in bed but busily preparing for a video chat with a client in Australia. Grace is wearing Claudette's high-tech shirt that has revealed she is suffering from sleep apnea.

Hank and Nina are reminiscing about Jack and the way he lived his life. Nina regrets not being able to tell Jack that she did appear in a television show when she was a child, just as he suspected. Hank has an idea on a way to celebrate Jack's life.

Hank, Evan, Divya and Jill go to the golf course to play a round in his memory. Hank continues to struggle as he did during Jack's lessons as Evan and Divya talk in the background about Claudette's technology. Divya is sold on it's use and Evan agrees, saying he has already acquired inventory. Hank finally follows the advice Jack gave him and hits a good golf shot, to everyone's surprise.

After the round, Hank discovers that Evan and Divya used the Claudette's smart shirts on a patient without his knowledge and approval. He is livid with Evan and insists that he is the final say on anything HankMed related since he is the actual doctor in the company. Evan realizes something and tells Hank that since he now owns Divya's shares, he is actually in charge. Hank is extremely angry now and tells Evan that he is quitting HankMed.

Hank and Evan both drive away upset. Hank ends up at Jill's house and asks her for a job. Evan drives to Paul's house to offer him a job with HankMed.

Production Code: RP401
Summary: Hank prepares to start his new practice with Jill's help. Evan is busy looking for a doctor to replace Hank. Divya tries her best to get the brothers to make peace. During Harborfest, they all must work together again during an emergency.

Divya runs into her parents at Harborfest. Divya is cordial but her father refuses to speak with her and her parents walk away.

At home, Evan is separating all of the HankMed files and supplies from what Hank actually owns personally, now that he has quit HankMed. Evan reminds him that HankMed has an obligation at Harborfest but Hank is not impressed, saying Evan made the obligation and never consulted him, in the same manner as the smart shirts. Divya arrives complaining about Harborfest and learns that the brothers have split up and no longer will be working together. Evan announces he has found a replacement doctor but has yet to sign him. Hank announces that he and Jill will start working together now that she is no longer working for Hampton's Heritage hospital. Hank agrees to help HankMed in the short term until the end of the weekend.

Jill is helping her brothers prepare oysters for Harborfest. Divya stops by and learns from Jill that Evan used the shares he bought from Divya to take control of HankMed. An angry Divya storms away to find Evan and have a talk with him. Jill's brother Ernie is complaining about corporations taking over everything, including Harborfest and is not paying attention while he is shucking an oyster and severely lacerates his hand. Hank arrives and treats Ernie's hand which is not a major injury because the knife missed the tendon.

Mr. Berman makes a surprise visit to HankMed to have his stitches removed and learns that Hank is no longer part of HankMed. Unfortunately Evan's replacement doctor is not yet available and no amount of discounts offered by Evan sways Mr. Berman and he decides to sever ties with HankMed.

Evan goes to Hamptons Heritage to speak with Dr. Paul Van Dyke about replacing Hank. Evan has a contract and Paul agrees to give HankMed 10 hours a week of his time. Evan was expecting Paul would be available 24/7 but Paul says the pay is not enough for that.

Divya stops to see Rosie Novak, an apparently European patient who is experiencing nausea and vomiting. She is practicing for the eating competition at Harborfest and says she usually does not get sick even with the massive amounts of food she consumes in a short time period. Divya does a quick examination that does not reveal any problems so she prescribes a full GI (gastro-intestinal) series of tests. The tests require fasting which upsets Rosie, but Divya convinces her of the risks and medical necessity of the tests.

Evan is busy passing out HankMed promotional items at Harborfest when Divya finally catches up to him. She confronts him about using her shares to take control of HankMed and he denies that was his plan. He just reacted during a fight with Hank and Divya believes him.

Jill calls Hank back to check on her brother Ernie who seems to be 'off'. Ernie is adamant he is fine, just experiencing a headache but Hank and Jill become concerned when Ernie forgets he just put his son Luke on a bus to chess camp less than one hour ago. Hank examines Ernie and discovers increased intra-cranial pressure. A Cat-scan reveals nothing so Hank suggests a spinal tap which Jill takes to the hospital for analysis.

Evan spends the rest of the day interviewing potential replacement doctors. The most promising is Dr. Sacani, but her turns out to have issues interacting socially, so Evan politely tells him he is not what HankMed is looking for.

Divya meets Hank for coffee and tells him about her patient Rosie. Hank seems interested but before they go further, Divya shows him paperwork that confirms that Evan bought her shares to help her out of a jam, not to take over HankMed. Hank says the problem between him and Evan goes deeper, it is a philosophical difference about what HankMed should be. Even so, Divya encourages him to mend fences with his brother.

Hank checks on Ernie again and finds out Ernie has been training for the Harborfest eat-off. He has been drinking massive quantities of water which are overwhelming his kidneys and is the source of his problems. By returning to normal water intake, his symptoms should disappear.

Divya returns to see Rosie and tells her the GI tests found nothing amiss. Rosie is working out on a treadmill and suddenly stumbles and nearly falls. Divya thinks her glucose levels might be affected and tests her blood. The blood test is fine however and Rosie plans to continue training.

Divya surprises Hank and Evan with a big meal and tries to get the two brothers to talk out their differences. The plan backfires however and the two shortly start yelling at each other and both storm out of the room.

The next morning, Hank asks Evan why Evan didn't inform him that Mr. Berman stopped by. Evan wants to know when he might have done that since they have not exactly been on speaking terms. Hank retrieves Mr. Berman's file and notices an unsent e-mail that Evan is preparing for Paige describing Hank as a quitter. Hank is upset with the term but Evan insists that is exactly what Hank did, something he must have learned from their father. This upsets Hank and he suggests maybe their rift is too deep for them to even live in the same house.

Evan is the master of ceremonies at the Harborfest eat-off. Hank notices that Ernie is still a contestant, despite Hank's advice. Hank does a quick exam and Ernie seems okay so Hank gives him his medical blessing.

The contest begins and when the time expires, there is a tie between Ernie the local and Rosie from Michigan. Evan tells the crowd there will be a sudden death eat-off between the two after a short break. Divya asks Evan why he said Rosie was from Michigan and he claims to have seen an interview on the web where she declared she grew up in Michigan and spoke with an American accent. Divya is confused why Rosie spoke with a European accent to her and Evan suggested she was just being theatrical. Divya has an epiphany that Rosie' problem is not gastric but neurological. She insists Evan help her find Hank immediately. Off to the side, Rosie starts experiencing problems.

Hank arrives and examines Rosie and determines she has a problem with her carotid artery which is throwing off little blood clots that are causing problems, including speech changes. Rosie is confused why everyone thinks she has an accent until Evan records something she says and plays it back for her. Hank and Divya insist she needs to go to the hospital immediately and cannot continue the contest. She reluctantly agrees and asks to personally give Ernie his trophy.

Evan and Hank speak afterward. Evan says how lucky it was he did his online research or they would never have diagnosed Rosie, plus he managed to sign up lots of new HankMed clients at the festival. Hank congratulates him on his salesmanship and wishes him well. Evan is thoughtful and makes a phone call.

Evan meets with Paul and Dr. Sacani to sign contracts. Both men are surprised but Evan explains Dr. Sacani will help fill in the gaps in Paul's time and Evan himself will fill in the gaps in Dr. Sacani's social limitations. Evan gives them each a HankMed travel kit complete with GPS device and purchasing card.

Divya runs into Raj at the hospital who is there with his fiancée Karen who reveals she is expecting a child. She wonders how his parents are taking it and are surprised to learn they are happy about becoming grandparents.

Hank sees Rosie in the hospital and confirms his diagnosis. She is on her way to recovery and with proper treatment, can continue to compete in eating competitions. Ernie stops by with his victory cup and a present for Rosie. He was unaware she quit for medical reasons and challenges her to a rematch. The two begin trash talking and Hank leaves them to their fun.

Hank stops by Jill's hospital office where she is finishing packing her things. They go up to the roof and are watching the Harborfest fireworks when an explosion happens in the park. Hank rushes to help, concerned Evan might be among the injured.

Guest Stars: Donal Logue (Ernie McGillicuddy), Alexa Vega (Hollister), Timothée Chalamet (Luke)
Production Code: RP402
Summary: When Luke is kicked out of chess camp for fighting, Hank thinks it may be more than just hormones. While Evan tries to sign a new client, Divya has a choice to make.

Hank and Jill rush to the park where the explosion occurred. They run into Jill's brother Ernie who says he and his family are fine but the last time he saw Evan was in Evan's booth. Jill leaves with Ernie to setup a triage station while Hank continues looking for Evan. A fireman stops Hank but Hank talks his way into the devastated area. He helps a disoriented woman who is looking for her missing shoe. He then finds a man called Tim who is trapped under debris. Hank administers an unusual IV before the rescue team manages to extract him.

Divya speaks with her mother. She misses her mother and wants to resume a relationship with her, even if it means hiding it from her father. Her mother refuses to go behind her father's back.

Hank is ecstatic to find Evan in the triage center where he is suffering a temporary loss of hearing from the explosion. Evan is being treated by Dr. Jeremiah Sacani, one of the new doctors Evan hired to replace Hank. Hank introduces himself awkwardly to Jeremiah.

The following day, Hank gives Jill a ride home where they find Jill's nephew Luke, skulking on her porch. Luke had just left for chess camp the day before and has been kicked out for fighting. Hank examines him and can find nothing wrong from the punch Luke received. However, Luke is coughing and exhibiting symptoms from the cold and sinus medication he has been taking. Hank gives him a urine specimen cup and asks Luke to fill it.

Evan meets with Paul and Jeremiah when Hank arrives. After the meeting the brothers have a heart to heart talk and agree to civilly divide HankMed. Hank will take the individual patients while Evan will take the business patients. Divya arrives and the brothers fight over who she will work for. Divya angrily tells them she won't work for either of them and leaves.

Hank gets a call from the disoriented woman he helped the day before. Her name is Hollister and she lives in a large house with lost of rescued dogs. She complains that she is not feeling well after the explosion the previous day but Hank finds nothing wrong with her. She wants to get a CT scan but Hank says it is not necessary. She wants to put Hank on retainer but Hank is unused to the business side and agrees to return later with the necessary paperwork.

Hank goes to see Divya to apologize and gives her flowers. He discovers Evan there already and a much larger flower bouquet from HankMed. Divya tells them she can't work with both of them because she tried having two jobs before and it almost cost a man his life. They tell her she needs to choose one of them but she says she needs more time.

Evan arrives at Hollister's home after she called the number she had for HankMed. Evan tells her that Hank works for a different concierge medical practice, then asks what the problem is. She tells him she thinks she needs the CT scan and he tells her she needs a second opinion. Paul arrives and tells her she is perfectly healthy. She convinces him however that she needs a CT scan so Evan arranges for a portable scanner to come to her house. The scan shows nothing but Hollister feels better immediately.

Hank and Jill meet with Ernie who tells them he discovered that Luke was not kicked out of camp, but he has not found out what happened. Hank volunteers to try to get Luke to talk after he goes over the results of the lab tests from the urine specimen Luke gave. Hank tells Ernie and Jill that the tests show that Luke is fine. Ernie leaves and Jill gives Hank the bad news that his medical practice is close to bankruptcy. Without Evan to bring in new patients, he has no capital to buy equipment, let alone hire anyone to help him. The news comes as a revelation to Hank.

Hank gets on the phone and tries making some calls to drum up business. He is not having much luck but fakes it when Evan comes down the stairs. Jeremiah arrives to return his copy of HankMed's patient files. He tells Evan he has memorized them but demonstrated his lack of social skills when he refers to the patients by their social security numbers rather than their names. Evan tells him that won't fly and Jeremiah leaves to resume his studies. Hank comments that he did some research on Jeremiah and his resume is impressive. Evan doesn't tell Hank but he knows Jeremiah's social limitations will be more important to the patients than his resume.

Hank talks with Luke and finds out he left camp because of a girl. Luke agreed to take an SAT test for the girl whose name is Alex, but his mind blanked during the test and the test scores were a disaster. The girl confronted him about it at camp which is why he left. While telling Hank this, Luke's blood pressure increases so Hank takes a blood sample for analysis, concerned about Luke's kidneys.

Evan and Divya go see Hollister who is complaining about being sick. Evan is worried that the CT scan made her sick but Divya is doubtful. Hollister is complaining of nausea and repeats her story about being near the explosion. She tells Evan and Divya she doesn't mind repeating herself because she has been lonely since her family never made to her house for the holidays. The young woman is alone with only her pack of rescued dogs for company.

Afterward, Evan apologizes for pulling Divya into the case when he agreed to leave her alone to make her decision. She tells him that she considers both he and Hank as her family, and she won't lose them like she has lost her parents.

Hank arrives at Jill's after an emergency call that Luke has broken into her home. Hank discovers Luke's temperature is 106, just before he collapses. They use ice to cool him down enough to talk with him. Luke confesses he took some anti-depressants before he took the SAT tests. Hank is worried that the cold medicine he takes is interacting with the anti-depressants, which hang around in the body for weeks. Hank improvises a way to immediately reduce the effects of the cold medication while they wait for the paramedics.

Divya goes to see Hollister who is now having physical problems. Her blood pressure is dropping and she is having abdominal pain. Divya calls Hank for help when she is out of her element. Hank discovers no sound from her bowels indicating an obstruction. He finds out the recent CT scan she had was clean but Hank says that now she actually needs one. The new CT scan at the hospital shows a problem that now requires surgery so Hollister is admitted.

Hank checks on Luke in the hospital and finds him better, playing two games simultaneously against Jill and Ernie. Jill leaves when she gets a call and discovers her job in Uruguay has been given to someone else. She is upset because she quit her job with Hampton's Heritage and has already sold her house.

Hank, Evan and Divya end up in Hollister's room after surgery. It turns out that the concussion from the explosion ruptured blood vessels in her small intestine, leading to her problems. Both brothers try to win her future business but Hollister tells them she will retain both, how can she possibly choose, which strikes a personal chord with Divya. Divya tells Hollister that she called Hollister's sister Julie and Julie is supposed to arrive shortly. Hollister is doubtful, then pleasantly surprised when Julie arrives.

Outside the hospital, Divya drops the bombshell that she has decided to work for both brothers equally, much to their surprise.

A Guesthouse Divided

Season 4

Episode Number: 49

Season Episode: 3

Originally aired: Wednesday June 20, 2012
Writer: Jack Bernstein, Constance M. Burge
Director: Jay Chandrasekhar
Show Stars: Mark Feuerstein (Hank Lawson), Paulo Costanzo (Evan Lawson), Jill Flint (Jill Casey), Reshma Shetty (Divya Katdare)
Recurring Role: Ben Shenkman (Dr. Jeremiah Sacani), Brooke D'Orsay (Paige Collins), Henry Winkler (Eddie R. Lawson)
Guest Stars: Dale Raoul (Francesca Bragalini), Julie Claire (Anika), Jay Chandrasekhar (Jake), Michael B. Silver (Ken Keller)
Production Code: RP403
Summary: Divya finds a new business opportunity for a concierge doctor and uses the situation to force a reconciliation between Hank and Evan. Paige returns from England just as Jill leaves on her new career.

Divya and Jill meet where Jill reveals she has a new job opportunity, traveling the world, developing outreach programs. She is extremely happy and tells Divya that she will be leaving tomorrow. Divya has news as well, telling Jill she will be working for both Hank and Evan because she cannot choose between them. She also plans to get the brothers back together by sabotaging them both.

Evan wakes up to find Paige in bed with him. She has come back early from England to find Evan has setup an office of sorts inside his bedroom. When asked why, Evan tells her that even though the split with Hank was amicable, Hank is still the competition and he needs to make sure he protects his ideas.

At the Lawson home, Divya is giving Hank advice on his new medical practice. She encourages him to hire Jill to run the business side because he (Hank) is hopeless at it. As they speak, Evan shows up to get some coffee. Hank and Divya stop talking and all three stare at each other uncomfortably. When Evan leaves, Hank calls Jill only to find out she is leaving for Africa immediately.

Hank is at the home of Ken Keller who is complaining of nausea, cramping and abdominal distress. Ken wants to know why Hank has a new phone number, concerned that Hank might have been sued for malpractice. Hank explains he and Evan have gone their separate ways and then starts his exam. Hank learns that Ken has been man-scaping for the ladies which caused a rash, leading to him now being treated with prednisone. Before Hank can go further, Ken gets up and runs to the bathroom, in distress.

HankMed 2.0 kicks off the first staff meeting with Evan, Divya, and Dr. Jeremiah Sacani present. Evan has prepared an easy day for Jeremiah on his first day with only three patients and includes special patient information cards for each patient. Evan knows Jeremiah lacks social skills so plans to accompany him. Divya however, starts her sabotage plan by telling Evan she texted him about a unique business opportunity at the Blackstone. Evan cannot pass this opportunity up so Divya agrees to accompany Jeremiah for him. After Evan leaves, Divya takes Jeremiah to see an emergency call, not one of the three patients Evan hand picked for him.

Hank stops to see Jill, who called about her delivery guy Jake, who she says looks terrible and aches all over. As Jill leaves, Hank examines Jake who is running a fever and discovers he has recently stopped smoking and is sleeping in his truck. He also has a stiff neck which prompts Hank to test him for meningitis.

At the Posh day spa, the director Annika greets Divya and Jeremiah and tells them she has a real life Diva, a singer who is having difficulty breathing and has an increased heart rate. Jeremiah examines Francesca and in his tactless way, is very direct about her being overweight. As Divya apologizes for Jeremiah, Francesca passes out and her heart stops. Jeremiah jumps into action and directs Annika to call for paramedics.

Jeremiah and Divya both notice a scar where an internal heart defibrillator was implanted. Jeremiah notices the therapy Francesca was receiving included magnets that were woven into a blanket. He theorizes they may have interfered with her defibrillator and takes a chance they might be able to restart it. When the blanket is placed back in Francesca, she suddenly wakes up.

Annika is very pleased with HankMed and Divya suggests her spa might have need of an in-house doctor. Annika agrees and Divya gives her two names.

Back home, Evan tells Divya there was no meeting for him at Blackstone. Divya avoids the question by telling him about the opportunity at Posh spa. She tells him he has an appointment with Annika the next morning. As Evan leaves, Hank arrives to ask Divya's opinion about a going away card for Jill. Divya uses the opportunity to coerce Hank into checking out the spa for his own business. Hank is reluctant, but she points out how badly he needs new clients.

Hank, Evan and Divya meet with Jill to give her presents before she leaves. Hank and Divya both give her sentimental presents while Evan gives her a practical present. Evan and Divya leave the two alone to say their goodbyes.

Paige prepares a midnight snack for Evan and Divya who are working late preparing for the spa interview. Evan is distracted so Paige leaves him alone but notices Divya make a call on her phone and leave it lying on a stool next to her. The call is to Hank who can hear what Evan is saying about him. Evan is confident he will win the spa job because Hank has no vision for business.

Hank comes downstairs where he tells Evan that he has decided to go after the spa business. Evan is surprised and packs up his stuff and leaves the room. Hank leaves as well and Paige takes the opportunity to ask Divya what she is up to. Paige initially thinks Divya is undermining Evan but Divya explains she is undermining both brothers in an attempt to reconcile them. Paige is ecstatic and urges Divya to hurry as she misses the old Evan.

Hank returns to see Ken and tells him he has a fever and elevated white count. Hank wants both blood and urine samples and a chest X-ray. Ken queries Hank about his new business and guesses correctly that Hank has no new office. Ken offers to invest in Hank's new business but Hank refuses his offer.

Evan finishes up preparing patient cards for Jeremiah shows up. Evan tells him he is Jeremiah has no commitments the rest of the day so he can relax. Jeremiah asks Evan to tell him why he split with Hank. Evan tells him and confesses he now has the HankMed he always wanted, it's just that he never thought it would be without Hank. Jeremiah confesses he left his last job because someone he thought hated him really loved him, but he found out too late.

Hank stops to see Jill to take her to the airport to discover her home is empty and she has already left, not wanting to prolong the goodbye.

As Hank waits to meet with Annika, Divya gives him advice, especially about what not to say. Annika arrives and tells Hank he can setup his presentation in the conference room. When Hank tells her he has no presentation, she offers to read his prospectus instead. Again, Hank demurs so she agrees they can just talk.

Divya waits outside for Hank and when he arrives, assures him he probably did just fine. Evan then arrives for his meeting, laden down with plenty of presentation material. When he gets inside he sees Jeremiah waiting for him. Evan confronts Divya about that saying he wanted Dr. Van Dyke there instead. Divya tells him Van Dyke was not available. Annika arrives and is not impressed when she sees the doctor who called one of her best clients morbidly obese.

Hank stops to see Jake who has collapsed in his delivery truck and is coughing uncontrollably. Jake insists he took the antibiotics but Hank says he may have an atypical pneumonia. Hank has Jake spit into a cup where he notice blood in the sputum. Hank tells Jake it is now time for the hospital.

Paige paces nervously, waiting for Divya to arrive. She tells Divya her plan is not working and that Posh spa is considering both of the brothers for the job. Hank and Evan both joust verbally, ending up in another argument when Hank gets a call from Ken and leaves. Paige pulls Divya aside and begs her not to give up. Divya assures her she is not giving up, just considering her next move.

Hank and Divya return to see Ken after receiving a call from him. Ken is not getting better and he has started coughing up blood. Hank sends Ken to the hospital with the theory that both he and Jake have Legionnaires' disease.

Hank and Divya manually try to find the source of the Legionnaires' disease by manually matching Ken and Jake's schedules for the last 10 days. They are having no luck when they see Dr. Sacani arrive with Francesca. She too, has all the symptoms of Legionnaires'. Divya puts the pieces together and learns all three patients have the spa in common. Hank tells Divya that Evan has won the spa contract, to her surprise.

Evan takes Paige to the spa as a surprise to tell her he won the account. He notices that the spa is being closed to test for Legionnaires'. When Evan learns that Hank made the diagnosis, Evan is furious. Evan also learns Hank pulled himself from the running for the spa job, which makes him suspicious.

Hank talks with Ken to tell him where he thinks everyone caught the disease. As Ken prepares to call his lawyer to sue, Hank tells him he has reconsidered Ken's offer to invest in his medical practice.

At home, Divya tells Hank that Legionnaires' was indeed found at the spa and is being eradicated as she speaks. The spa will reopen within the month. Hank expects Evan will be happy but when Evan arrives, they resume their argument, with Evan telling Hank he doesn't need Hank's charity.

Evan is at Paige's house while she prepares breakfast. He is ecstatic over the spa contract, and is making plans to acquire new retainer clients. Paige is unimpressed and finally reveals why she came home early, she was fired from her job. Evan is shocked and finally realizes he has been self-absorbed while Paige needed his support.

Hank stops to see Jake who is home recovering. Jake gives him a letter from Jill, which he forget to deliver due to his illness. Jill explains leaving abruptly and thanks Hank for everything, especially being part of the HankMed family.

Divya enters the Lawson home and calls out for Hank and Evan. When she gets no answer, she places a call to their father, Eddie. She tells him his sons need him, they all need him.

Guest Stars: Santino Fontana (Jason), Katie Lowes (Carrie), John Cullum (Andres Bochinski), Halley Feiffer (Nell Bochinski)
Production Code: RP404
Summary: Hank and Evan's father returns to the Hamptons to bring the family back together. Divya reconnects with her mother. Evan meets a brilliant scientist with a checkered past while Hank treats a pair of young fund-raisers.

Hank and Boris are skeet shooting on the grounds of Boris' estate while in the background, Boris mansion is being inspected for mold prior to his new son moving in. Boris wonders why Evan hasn't joined them and Hank explains Evan is busy these days.

Eddie meets with Divya where he shows her the self help guide he developed while in prison. He has decided that the way to mend his sons' relationship is via his new philosophy. Divya seems doubtful but Eddie is supportive and suggests she take the day off while he handles Hank and Evan. He spots a movie theater that is featuring a zombie spectacular and thinks it will work perfectly.

Hank and Evan are at home, both on the telephone dealing with medical issues when Eddie arrives. Eddie asks if anything new is going on and Hank tells him about their rift. Eddie tries to get them to go see the zombie movie with him but has no luck. Evan tells him that he finally signed the Blackstone to a HankMed 2.0 retainer.

Hank arrives in town to find a man dressed as a zombie choking on the street. The man, Jason, is choking on fake blood he is covered in. Hank tries the Heimlich maneuver with no luck. Suction is needed to extract the blood and Hank improvises with supplies he finds from bystanders. The device works well enough to allow Jason to spit out the blockage. Jason and his girlfriend Carrie tell him they are in the Hamptons for a charity zombie race. Hank leaves his card and departs.

Evan is driving to a meeting at the Blackstone and talking with Paige on the phone. He confesses he gets upset with Hank and his father treat him like a lost puppy, ironic since he is having navigation problems with his car and runs out of gas. He also manages to break down in a location without cell service.

Eddie and Hank have lunch where Eddie tries to talk Hank into attending the zombie movie double feature. When Hank declines, Eddie then tries to get Hank to participate in one of the zombie races. Again Hank says no. Eddie then gives him a copy of his self help guide and asks Hank to review it before Eddie meets with publishers.

Evan enters the grounds of an ancient, spooky estate searching for assistance. He finds an open door and enters the house, only to find a very fierce, angry dog. Behind the dog is a belligerent older man who spooks Evan into leaving, only to crash into the man's granddaughter Nell. Nell ends up with a cut which she dismisses, but when Evan mentions his concierge business, she asks for a doctor to check her grandfather who she thinks is acting strange.

Divya is out bicycling when her mother Rubina drives up. Rubina has been stopping by Divya's house each day but Divya has been busy and not at home. Rubina refuses to call to make sure her husband doesn't find out she is seeing Divya. They go to lunch since Divya has the day off.

Eddie flags down Boris as he is leaving his estate and tries to make amends by giving him a copy of his guide, but Boris has no interest. He tells Eddie to be discrete regarding Boris himself and there will be no problem. As Boris drives away, several trucks follow that have been working on his mansion. Suddenly multiple security personnel come running after the trucks and Eddie cringes as they pass.

Nell tells Evan about her grandfather, he has been stumbling, shaking and having mood swings. Her grandfather is a retired biochemist and has been railing lately about the Government. Evan finds out that Nell's grandfather ran the facility on Plum Island, supposedly a USDA animal research facility, but Evan suspects it is a top secret bio-terrorism laboratory.

Dr. Jeremiah Sacani arrives to see the grandfather, Andreas Bulczynski. Evan tries to prod Andreas about his research but Andreas is not having any of it. Nell convinces Andreas to let Dr. Sacani draw some blood for analysis.

Hank returns to see Jason who is still training for the race and having chest pains. Hank determines Jason's heart is okay, but draws blood for analysis. His diagnosis is heartburn but will test the blood for completeness.

Divya buys her mother a hot dog from a sidewalk vendor and tells her to be an adventuress. She asks her mother why she changed her mind about getting together and Rubina says she missed her daughter.

Eddie has dinner with Hank and Evan. Hank accuses him of stretching the truth regarding stories of Hank's childhood by Eddie defends his accounting. Evan brings up his client Andreas Bulczynski, whom Eddie and Hank are familiar with. Eddie presses Evan for an introduction to Bulczynski and maybe a possible endorsement for his book, but Evan declines, citing patient confidentiality.

Evan is working at home when Nell and Andreas show up. Nell tells Evan that her father was bitten by their dog and they arranged to meet with Dr. Sacani at Evan's house. Andreas seems confused, thinking he is being put into a nursing home when Hank enters. As he begins his exam, Dr. Sacani arrives and Hank defers to him. Andreas starts rambling and nearly collapses so Sacani decides to do a head CT.

Later Evan is driving when Hank calls him looking for Eddie. Hank suspects he went to see Bulczynski to get that endorsement and the brothers agree to both go there and see.

Divya is called by Rubina to a beauty salon. Rubina is taking advantage of her husband's absence to try out the salon that he thinks is overpriced. Divya is overjoyed by her mother's new adventurous spirit when suddenly they hear the voice of their father. He is there to get his hair dyed and Divya is amused. They hide from notice and Rubina decides her husband's appearance is a bad omen that she shouldn't be seeing Divya behind his back.

Hank and Evan arrive at the Bulczynski estate and start looking for Eddie. The place seems to be deserted and they end up being locked inside Bulczynski's laboratory. Evan starts freaking out and Hank tries to calm him. Evan mentions Bulczynski having been in New Guinea and Hank remembers an obscure disease from that area that he suspects Bulczynski might be suffering from. It is passed on by eating human brains, a custom of that region that Bulczynski might have participated in. Evan is really freaking now, thinking that Bulczynski is a real life zombie.

Hank takes advantage of Evan's fear and pretends to be a zombie himself until he starts laughing and Evan chases him around the lab. As they are wrestling, Bulczynski calls out wondering who is in his lab. After being released, Hank talks with Nell and Andreas while Evan calls

Dr. Sacani about Andreas' blood work. When Evan returns, he says Sacani has determined that Andreas is suffering from a vitamin B12 deficiency, the same diagnosis Hank just made.

Andreas agrees to go to the hospital and start his treatment there. As Hank and Evan talk, it occurs to Hank that his patient Jason's problem might be caused by a similar problem that Andreas had. He and Evan rush to the zombie race where they meet Divya. Jason is out on the course so the three split up to find him.

Evan ends up being chased by zombie participants, while Divya is chased by a man that turns out to be Eddie. Hank finds Jason just as Evan arrives. With Evan's help, Hank is able to remove an obstruction that was preventing Jason from breathing properly. There is bleeding in Jason's throat however, so Divya calls for paramedics to take him to the hospital.

As Hank and Evan arrive home, Hank pauses to apologize and acknowledge Evan's contribution and vision for HankMed.

Divya steps out of the bathtub and is surprised to see her mother standing silently in the doorway. Rubina then drops the bomb that she has left her husband.

Hank, Evan and Eddie are gathering for dinner with Eddie cooking on the grill when they hear a gunshot. Hank goes to investigate and finds Boris with his security team. Boris informs Hank that an intruder breached the perimeter and was shot, but it is too late for Hank's expertise. Hank insists and discovers the victim has a pulse.

Summary:	Hank and Divya treat a matchmaker who's intent on setting each of them up. Also, while Evan tries to rein in HankMed 3.0, Paige plans a small kick-off party that turns out to be anything but small.

Hank works feverishly on the man who was shot at the end of the previous episode while Boris and his guards watch impassively. Hank asks for help several times before Boris agrees and has two of his guards assist. Hank manages to extract the bullet that was in his heart but has to keep his finger plugging the hole in the heart to keep the man alive. The man is rushed to the hospital and into surgery with Hank still having his finger in the heart.

Hank is finally released and is leaving the hospital when police detectives question him about the shooting. Satisfied they leave and Dr. Paul Van Dyke appears and tells Hank that the victim's identity is unknown but apparently he was casing Boris' estate in preparation for a burglary.

Hank gets a ride home with his father Eddie and Evan. To their surprise, no police cars are left at Boris' estate. As Hank gets out of the car, he notices lights on in the topmost room of Boris' castle and the shadow of a man looking out the window. The lights are quickly turned out when Hanks stops to look more closely.

Evan is chairing the first staff meeting for HankMed 3.0. With Hank back, HankMed now has three doctors, a major investor in Ken Keller, and Divya and Paige. Evan struggles to keep order when Eddie walks in and immediately questions Hank about the previous night's burglary. Then Divya's mother Rubina shows us, further disrupting proceedings. In the confusion, Hank steps outside but Evan follows him, apologizing for the chaos. Evan gives Hank a new patient folder and he and Divya leave.

The new patient is Veronica Sullivan, and she is a professional matchmaker. As they talk she feels light headed with a flutter in her chest. When Hank listens he hears two hearts beating as Veronica has had a heterotopic heart transplant, a procedure where the the recipient's original heart is left in place. Hank decided to take Veronica to see a specialist and while he and Divya wait, Divya tells Hank she doesn't care for Veronica's profession, it hits too close to home with her and her experience with her parents matching her up with Raj. Divya then tells Hank about her parents recent split but does not elaborate when Veronica is finally ready.

When Hank returns home, he finds Boris waiting for him. Boris thanks him for saving the intruder's life. He tells Hank that the man was found under the window of his newborn son's room, so in his mind there was no doubt what the man's intentions were.

Evan comes down to breakfast to find that Paige has been busy. In addition to breakfast, she has prepared patient schedules for all the HankMed doctors and purchased everybody extra phone chargers. Evan feels she is going overboard when she suggests planning a mixer so everyone in HankMed can get to know each other but she is excited and tells him she has everything in her personal life in order too.

Divya visits Veronica when she calls to complain about nausea from the new medication she was prescribed. The heart specialist, Dr. London, found nothing amiss with her transplant. Veronica takes the opportunity to try her matchmaking skills on Divya who confesses she already tried that and she wants true love. Veronica says that is her specialty, getting to know enough about her clients to make sure they are perfect enough match to fall in love.

Hank and Evan have lunch with Eddie and Ms. Newberg who want Hank and Evan to leave Boris's estate and move in with them, declaring it is too dangerous at Boris' place. Hank and Evan defer whereupon Eddie starts acting like he needs his heart medication. After Ms. Newberg leaves to retrieve it from the car, Eddie tells them what he saw after trying to give Boris a copy of his book. He saw Boris' security team chase down a maintenance truck one day before the shooting. Eddie and Evan speculate that Boris' team caught the intruder a day before they shot him, and maybe shot him as he tried to escape. Hank adamantly insists they all stay out of Boris' business.

Hank gets a call from Veronica so he leaves lunch to meet with her. It turns out not to be a medical emergency but simply Veronica trying to matchmake Hank. She introduces him to Harper, and attractive young woman who wants Veronica's help, as opposed to Hank who was coerced. Suddenly someone calls for a doctor and Hank and Harper both respond. The victim turns out to be Veronica, who has collapsed and has no pulse.

Hank and Harper work together to revive Veronica and Harper turns out to be as calm and creative under pressure as Hank.

Hank finds out about the HankMed launch party when he comes home to see flowers everywhere. Evan panics and blurts out that Paige has invited 300 guests, give or take. Evan is worried that this party is Paige's way of covering something up that she won't tell him. Hank is surprising sympathetic and tells him to proceed with the party.

Hank stops by Hamptons Heritage hospital to discover that the gunshot victim he saved is being transported. The ambulance driver has no information other than the destination is Foxtrot Mike, so Hank goes to see Boris. Boris tells him that Foxtrot Mike stand for Fort Meade, an NSA facility. Boris confesses the intruder was not after his family directly, but was planting listening devices in advance of an important meeting Boris is holding at his estate. Hank is upset that he was lied to but Boris says he assumed Hank did not want to get involved.

Hank and Divya speak with Dr. London about Veronica. He tells them she needs a dual pacemaker for both her hearts or she faces another heart attack. Hank is concerned about the fever Veronica has but Dr. London thinks the pacemaker is more pressing. Hank starts to think something else is causing Veronica's problems when they reach her room to find her having a seizure. After she stops seizing, further examination leads Hank to suspect Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

The HankMed launch party is underway and seems to be a real hit. Evan talks with Paige who finally reveals what is bothering her. She lied to Evan when she said she was fired. In reality the woman who hired her tried to sleep with her and she quit. Paige feels she has no artistic talent but Evan disagrees, saying she will indeed go to art school and follow her dreams, not his or anyone else's.

Hank arrives at the party and to his surprise sees Harper with a drink. They make smalltalk and Hank is obviously attracted to her, but she reveals she doesn't date doctors and walks away.

Divya talks to her mother at the party who notices Divya seems less than happy with all her business success. When Rubina mentions having a man to love, Divya remarks it didn't help her. Rubina confesses she never loved Divya's father.

Hank, Evan and Divya have a staff meeting where Evan declares only senior staff members will attend from now on. He also declares he will return Divya's shares in HankMed to her when she has the wherewithal to repurchase them so no one will have a majority holding. Hank surprises everyone when he tells them he signed a client to a retainer, the client being Veronica Sullivan. The meeting is interrupted by the police detective who wants to know if Hank kept the bullet that he removed from the intruder. When Hank tells him no, the detective leaves and Evan wants to know if this is 'staying out of Boris' business'.

Divya stops by to see Veronica who is improving with Hank's diagnosis. Divya tells Veronica she wants to hire her to find true love.

Hank speaks with Boris about the missing bullet. Hank appreciates everything Boris has done for him but wants to make sure Boris is the kind of man he can believe in, and hiding evidence from a crime scene has him concerned. Boris offers Hank a chance to join him in a venture that will show Hank what Boris is really about.

Summary:	Evan, with Paige and Hank assisting, finally gets a shot at signing an elite country club to a HankMed retainer. First, Hank must discover what ails the club manager. Divya has angry words with her father that have unexpected results.

Hank is running on the beach when he notices Harper working out with an instructor and a group of students. Hank flirts with her until the instructor chases him away.

Divya's mother ends her stay with Divya and returns to London. She asks Divya to call her after her date.

Dr. Jeremiah Sacani is sitting in his car practicing his verbal skills. Jeremiah is keen to impress Hank now that Hank has returned to HankMed.

Evan is on the phone dealing with a supply problem when he wanders outside to see Paige. She has started painting again and is quite accomplished. Paige surprises Evan with the news that she has setup a meeting with Sidney Bartlett, who represents the Blackstone Country Club, an account Evan has been trying to win for years. She tells him Sidney is a fat jolly man who likes cigars, so Evan plans accordingly.

Hank stops by to speak with Boris about the venture that Boris offered him. Boris cannot tell Hank any details but Hank's inclusion in the venture requires him to wear a special pager watch, and to come to Boris' estate immediately upon being paged without notifying anyone, removing the SIM card from his cell phone. Hank agrees to the terms.

Divya and Jeremiah are called to the beach to treat Woody Keegan, a surfer who has dislocated his hip. The dislocation has caused the loss of blood flow to his lower leg, a very serious condition. Jeremiah tries unsuccessfully to return the hip to its proper location so Divya calls Hank. Jeremiah, eager to impress Hank via Divya, uses his cell phone surreptitiously to download a video on the proper technique to restore the hip. The procedure works and Divya is suitably impressed.

Hank returns home where Evan is preparing for his meeting. Hank tells Evan about the possibility of disappearing on a moment's notice for Boris and Evan assumes Boris is ill once more. Hank doesn't confirm or deny but allows Evan his speculation to avoid any further discussion. Divya and Jeremiah return and Hank congratulates Jeremiah on his work with the dislocated hip but Jeremiah doesn't reveal the source of his newfound knowledge. Hank asks Divya about her mother and when he learns her father is not taking the separation well, Hank suggests she visit him using a medical excuse.

Evan meets Sydney Bartlett at the Blackstone, who turns out to be a female, and the daughter of the late Sidney Bartlett. Evan's preparations are for naught and he leaves the room, returning to start over and trying to keep his foot out of his mouth.

After his meeting, Evan tells Paige he thinks it went well just as Sydney walks by them. Sydney takes no notice of either of them until Paige calls after her. The two women hug and exchange platitudes, then Sydney leaves having never said one word to Evan who stands nearby.

Sydney then encounters some angry country club members who have apparently been double and triple booked on the tennis courts. Sydney leaves in a panic, promising to look into the schedule.

Divya stops to see her father Devesh and verify he is continuing his medications since her mother left him. He is in perfect health but angry and vindictive concerning his wife. Divya loses her temper and shouts at him, telling him he will end up alone if he continues his behavior. He is fatalistic.

Hank goes to meet Sydney where he expresses condolences for her father and some concern about her state of mind. Their meeting is interrupted by a country club member and Sydney once again messes up by forgetting the wife's name and thinking she was the man's daughter. Hank leaves and meets Evan in the lobby who is upset that Hank didn't push HankMed's business agenda. Evan returns to see Sydney only to find that she has had an accident and is lying unconscious on the floor, bleeding from the impact with a glass coffee table she broke when she stumbled and fell.

Evan calls Hank and does what he can for Sydney until Hank arrives. Sydney apologizes and confuses Evan for Hank. Hank stops the bleeding and diagnoses a broken nose. The paramedics arrive just as Hank's pager watch goes off. Evan assures Hank he can leave and promises to accompany Sydney to the hospital.

Divya meets her blind date Jim at the restaurant. An innocent comment from Jim sends Divya into a diatribe about her parents' problems, causing Jim to be very uncomfortable. When she finally realizes what she has been doing, she asks Jim what he does for a living and he reveals he is a family therapist.

Hank arrives at Boris' estate to discover that the page was a false alarm. Boris takes the opportunity to have Hank sign a non-disclosure agreement and to chide Hank for his lax security precautions regarding his cell phone.

Divya returns to Devesh's house to apologize for yelling at him. He does not answer the door or phone and when she walks around to the back of the house, she sees him floating face down in the pool. She manages to get him out of the water and calls for help.

Hank heads for the hospital to check on Sydney and runs into Harper who is there to check on one of her pediatric patients. Hank flirts again and manages to finally convince her to have dinner with him. Suddenly the paramedics arrive with Devesh and Divya runs after them, completely ignoring Hank and Evan.

The next morning, Hank and Evan are eating breakfast with Jeremiah when Jeremiah confesses he cheated by looking up the procedure to fix the hip on his patient. He apologizes for letting Hank down and expects to be fired for not following the HankMed way. Hank congratulates him on using his extensive research skills to find a way to help his patient and tells him he will have to see his patients without Divya today, as she is still at the hospital with her father.

Paige comes home from doing yoga at the Blackstone and tells them she saw Sydney who failed to recognize her. They discuss the matter and Evan reveals that Sydney had an auto accident while driving to see her dying father at the hospital. Hank analyzes the clues and is concerned something concrete is wrong with Sydney.

Hank and Evan arrive at Sydney's office and she fails to recognize them. He leads her to the mirror and she cannot recognize herself, let alone Hank and Evan. Hank says she suffered head trauma in her auto accident that has caused her condition, known as face blindness. Hank arranges for her to see a neurologist.

Hank stops to see Devesh and finds Divya by his side. Devesh is in a coma and Divya blames herself. Devesh's injuries are not consistent with him accidentally falling into the pool and Divya thinks he tried to kill himself.

Hank sees Sydney after her MRI and reveals she did have a concussion, but that her condition should improve over time as the swelling in her brain subsides. Sydney is so impressed that she signs HankMed to a retainer.

Hank congratulates Evan on signing the Blackstone but Evan is not as excited as expected. Evan confesses he is worried about the 500 potential clients since he essentially runs the business side alone. Hank tells him to hire some help and when Evan mentions Paige wanting to help, Hank says to hire her. Evan is reluctant, afraid that working with Paige might cause them to fight and breakup but he decides to anyway.

Hank meets Harper at the restaurant. Harper is late and Hank gently chides her about not being socially responsible. Suddenly, Hank's watch pager goes off again and he apologizes and leaves. Harper says it is okay, it is her fault for breaking her own rule about dating doctors.

Hank arrives at Boris' estate to find a helicopter waiting with Boris inside. Hank climbs in and the helicopter takes off.

Summary: A secret meeting in Manhattan involves Hank. An Internet entrepreneur is treated by Evan and Dr. Sacani. Divya and her father, Devesh Katdare, resolve their differences.

Hank and Boris arrive in Manhattan where Hank is supposed to treat Dmitry Vasilyev. Boris has arranged for a translator to be present, Christina DuMond. However Dmitry is delayed so Hank must wait.

Evan is playing his video game while Paige is busy with HankMed paperwork. Paige learns that Evan has a meeting with Brady Wilkerson, a very rich and powerful businessman, and she wants to accompany him. He is initially reluctant until he finds out Paige and Brady were childhood friends.

Divya waits in the hospital for her father's condition to improve. She gets a text and rushes to his room to find that he has awakened from his coma. Her initial delight is crushed when his first words are to tell her to go away.

Eva, Paige and Dr. Sacani visit Brady at his estate to give him an examination as arranged by Brady's business manager. HankMed was told Brady was suffering migraines but Brady is unconcerned and thinks his business manager is just concerned with his newest business venture, arranging tourist trips into outer space. Evan and Brady instantly bond as Star Trek geeks and Brady offers Evan and Paige a trip into outer space for their wedding.

In Manhattan, Boris has Hank draw a blood sample for his quarterly medical testing when Dmitry arrives unannounced. Dmitry is reluctant to attend Boris' Shadow Pond summit meeting. As Boris tries to convince him, he feels light headed and Hank has him lie down. Boris confesses his genetic illness to Dmitry and uses it in an attempt to illicit Dmitry's attendance at his summit.

Divya tells her father Devesh that the doctors will allow him to leave the hospital if she attends him on a 24 hour basis because they are concerned about possible seizures. Devesh ignores her and buzzes for a nurse and declares he is leaving the hospital.

Boris and Hank walk in the park where Hank comments on Boris' remarkable recovery. Boris confesses to faking his recent sickness in order to showcase Hank's medical skills. Boris is concerned about Dmitry's medical condition and is relying on Dmitry to work out a business deal regarding crude oil, but only if Dmitry is his old healthy self. Dmitry is reluctant to seek medical help to avoid showing weakness to his political and business competition.

Jeremiah finishes his examination of Brady and finds nothing amiss. Brady is pleased and shows the group one of his toys, a multi-axis trainer. Evan is ecstatic and volunteers to try it and shouts with glee as Brady rotates him over and over in multiple directions. As Evan tries to get out, the trainer lurches and strikes Brady, knocking him to the ground, bleeding under his chin. Evan, Paige and Jeremiah look in wonder at Brady's blood, which is not red but green.

Christina and Hank talk outside where she confides her concern about Boris' condition. As Hank stalls, not being able to talk about his patient, Dmitry interrupts and asks to speak with Hank.

Brady confesses he has been taking medication to prevent his migraines from returning so he can go back into space. Jeremiah, in his socially inept way, tells him he can't go back into space. As they walk away, Evan tells Jeremiah he needs to find a way to soften the blow to his patients and not crush their hopes and dreams.

Hank examines Dmitry who wants Hank to prescribe stronger erectile dysfunction pills because he has a female friend coming to visit him and he does not want to disappoint her. Hank explains that for some men, the pills do not work the first time, especially men with diabetes, like Dmitry. Hank's exam also reveals an enlarged liver, but Dmitry refuses to allow any blood to be drawn and sent to a laboratory out of his control.

Devesh is back home and Divya is caring for him. She wanders out onto the balcony which overlooks the pool where she found him a few days earlier. She notices a chair lying askew against the railing.

Hank, Boris, Christina and Dmitry play poker that evening and everyone is in good spirits. Dmitry begs off early when he is notified his woman friend has arrived. Later that night, Hank and Boris are roused by a woman screaming and when they arrive at Dmitry's room, they find him unconscious in bed.

Hank quickly diagnoses hypoglycemic shock and administers the proper medications intravenously to arouse him, but his heart is racing abnormally and Hank uses an unconventional method to restore it. When Dmitry is stable, Hank tells him he needs to analyze his blood and offers to have a laboratory come to them instead.

Divya stays with her father and responds to a late night call from his room. Devesh is improving and his appetite is returning and Divya takes the opportunity to apologize to him for her outburst a few days earlier. She hints that she might have driven him to try to take his life and he seems confused by her statement initially, but then concedes his attempt failed.

Hank and Christina are relaxing with a drink after the drama with Dmitry. She comes on to Hank but he is reluctant due to his responsibility to Boris and Dmitry and declares he would like to get to know her better first.

The next day the portable laboratory arrives but Dmitry is leaving. Hank stops him and convinces him that he may have hemochromatosis, a blood disease that is causing his other problems. Dmitry agrees to the testing.

Evan is disconsolate when he gets an e-mail from Brady declining to renew his contract with HankMed. Evan blames Jeremiah's bluntness from earlier but Paige thinks Evan was the problem when he refused to negotiate cost with Brady. Evan is amazed since Brady is so rich but Paige insists that is his way and HankMed can still sign Brady if Evan negotiates in good faith.

Divya and Devesh are on better terms. He wants to go outside to see his roses and she opens the balcony doors and steps out. As she straightens the chair, she notices a can of bee spray and spies a bees' nest on the side of the house. She realizes Devesh didn't attempt suicide but merely fell while spraying the bees. He admits letting her believe he attempted suicide because he was afraid she wouldn't stay with him otherwise.

Hank draws a pint of blood from Dmitry to reduce the amount of iron in his hemoglobin. He advises Dmitry the process will need to be repeated weekly. Boris offers to setup a secure lab at his estate and Dmitry finds this very convenient to Boris' purposes.

Evan and Paige go to see Brady only to find Jeremiah already there. Jeremiah has suggested an alternative to Brady to control his migraines and Brady seems pleased with the suggestion.

Hank, Boris and Dmitry head for the helicopter and the return trip to Shadow Pond. Hank is surprised when Christina shows up, but Boris tells him there is more translating work for her to do. She comments privately to Hank that now he will get the chance to know her better.

Production Code: RP408
Summary: Evan and Paige comfort a close friend experiencing a painful loss. Hank and Divya treat an overweight veterinarian who is in the middle of a divorce, and a person attending a secret meeting at Boris' mansion falls ill.

HankMed is having their morning staff meeting without a few key members. Dr. Sacani is away at a conference and as Hank wonders where Dr. Paul Van Dyke is, he stumbles in, obviously drunk. Evan volunteers to sober him up while Paige starts rescheduling his patients with the exception of one patient that Divya will cover. Hank and Divya leave to see Divya's friend Tom Fancy, a veterinarian specializing in large animals. Tom insists his problems are just stress related, but Hank insists on running lab tests to make sure.

Later Hank stops by Boris' estate to check on Dmitry and to perform another phlebotomy, but Dmitry is in the middle of business with Boris and is in no mood to cooperate. Hank chides him about not taking his Insulin before his meal and checks Dmitry's blood sugar. After Dmitry takes his Insulin shot, they arrange to meet in an hour for the phlebotomy.

Hank returns in an hour and installs an Insulin pump to Dmitry's abdomen. The pump will automatically inject low doses of Insulin and can give a boost amount depending on the results of a blood sugar test.

Paul wakes up and wonders why he is at HankMed. He also has a contusion above his eye that he got from his buddy the previous night when they were out drinking. Evan calls Divya to come back and stitch the cut. Paige is upset that Paul refuses to apologize for his unprofessionalism.

Hank is called back to Boris' estate to check on Dmitry who has become ill. Dmitry has been eating pastries and not checking his blood sugar level like Hank instructed him and is close to a diabetic coma. Hank scolds him but Dmitry tells him he has been diabetic for years and knows how to handle it. Hank tells him unless he wants an implanted glucose monitor in addition to his Insulin pump, he better start taking this seriously and suggests he hire someone to stay with him 24/7 to make sure he keeps up with his diabetes. Dmitry says okay, and says Hank is hired for the job.

As Hank and Boris leave, Hank tells him he doesn't want to work for Dmitry and can't think of anything else to do for him. Boris says he needs Dmitry ready for the summit the next day and Hank agrees to keep thinking of a solution.

Evan demands an explanation from Paul for his condition. When Paul refuses to explain, Evan fires him.

Hank and Divya return to see Tom and decide to do an x-ray of his intestines to find out what is causing his symptoms. The x-rays don't help and the next step is an endoscopy which Tom is reluctant to do since he is so busy with work. Divya tries to reason with him but Tom is working 24/7 doing his job and going through a bitter divorce.

Hank stops to Boris who seems curiously interested about his relationship with Christina, the translator working for him. He even goes so far as to offer his car and driver to take them to dinner after the summit. Hank tells him he has no further ideas to help Dmitry other than to check his blood sugar hourly during the conference, and no long term solutions. Hank is interrupted by a call from Divya who is concerned about Tom, who she cannot contact via phone.

Hank and Divya rush to the farm where Tom is treating several cows. Tom is apparently dizzy, and when he moves behind a cow gets kicked in the face, losing a tooth in the process. They treat him and try to get him to go to the hospital but he insists he has a patient that needs him and he won't leave the cow. Hank offers to treat the cow himself if it will get Tom to the hospital.

Evan and Paige go for lunch at the bar where Paul said he was drinking the night before. Paige figures out what Evan is trying to do and tells him he should not second guess his decisions, but Evan asks the bartender about Paul anyway. When the bartender relates the story, Paige is touched that Paul is a hopeless romantic mourning the loss of his girl and tells Evan he needs to rehire Paul.

Hank and Divya are driving Tom to the hospital but get stuck in traffic. A comment Tom makes about guide animals gives Hank an idea to help Dmitry. As he talks with Tom he notices Tom slurring his words and recognizes a stroke in progress. Hank improvises again and commandeers an ice cream truck to take Tom to the hospital, using ice cream bars to keep Tom's core temperature down during the trip.

Hank visits Dmitry and brings a dog with him that has been trained to detect the scent of low or high blood glucose levels. Dmitry is skeptical and demands proof. Hank has him overindulge in rich foods and the dog detects the change in his blood sugar. Dmitry is impressed and thank Hank for the dog but Hank says that the dog is just a loaner from his veterinarian friend, but Dmitry pays no attention. Boris and Dmitry enter the conference and before the doors close, Hank sees some of the attendees including Arab sheiks and men in military uniforms.

Evan and Paige go to see Paul where the truth comes out. He is not heartsick over a girl, but over his pet rabbit. Evan and Paige can't help but laugh at him which is why he never told them the truth in the first place. The trip to the bar was for liquid courage to enable him to put the rabbit down. When Paul takes them to meet his pet, Evan discovers that it has already died.

HankMed holds a memorial for the rabbit and begin to cast its ashes into the ocean when a lifeguard notices them and sends a police officer to investigate. HankMed scatters.

After the conference, Hank meets Christina for a private drink where they kiss.

Production Code: RP409
Summary: While HankMed treats an undercover DEA Agent, Divya and Jeremiah tend to a MMA fighter who may have gone a bit soft. Meanwhile, Hank becomes more involved with Boris' interpreter, much to Boris' chagrin.

Evan and Paige are at a charity raffle where a Ferrari is being given away and Evan is sure he will win because it is his destiny to own a Ferrari. As he looks closely at one of the cars, he spills his Gelato on the leather seat of a car belonging to Sam Chard. She is not upset and notices Evan's HankMed business card. She tells him she needs a doctor.

Divya and Jeremiah are heading out to see their patients. Jeremiah wants Divya to cover one of his female patients, Mrs. Small, because he has difficulty with highly emotional people. Divya tells him he must evolve and he reluctantly agrees if she will go with him.

Hank comes to see Sam and see what he can do for her. She reveals she is not a rich socialite but an undercover D.E.A. agent. Hank seems surprised because she really pulls off the socialite look well. She convinces him by rattling off detailed background information on Hank himself. She then tells him her symptoms, which collectively are called meth toxicity by D.E.A. agents. She relays her history which includes being inside a meth lab when it exploded and breathing the toxic fumes without protection.

Divya and Jeremiah arrive at the Small home to discover the patient that is suffering from postpartum depression is not Mrs. Small, but her husband, JJ. Their examination reveals no medical problems and he insists he is fine. Mrs. Small is tired of seeing him crying all the time but there is nothing HankMed can fix.

At the charity raffle, Evan asks Hank for information about Sam, who seems to be rich and a prime target to be a HankMed client. Hank puts him off when Christina arrives and surprises Evan with how intimate she and Hank seem to be. When asked how they met, Hank and Christina are evasive, owing to their ties to Boris and his secret business dealings. Hank gets a page from Boris and leaves.

Boris tells Hank that his friend and Hank's recent patient Dmitry is getting a liver transplant, which surprises Hank. Boris is not surprised as he knows Dmitry is a man who gets what he wants and doesn't want to wait for his liver to fail. Boris questions Hank and Christina and cautions Hank to be careful with his relationship, much to Hank's surprise.

Back at HankMed, Evan learns that the patient that Divya and Jeremiah attended is the Mixed Martial Artist (MMA) fighter that he is familiar with, JJ Small, who has an upcoming fight in New York. Divya and Jeremiah are concerned that JJ's recent depression might be caused by brain trauma. Evan tries to get Jeremiah to contribute toward the raffle ticket but he is not interested. To Jeremiah's surprise, Divya contributes for both herself and Jeremiah.

At Christina's hotel, Hank and Christina are sharing an intimate moment when Christina suddenly asks whether Hank will be accompanying Boris to Istanbul in the near future. Hank is suddenly wary, especially when she mentions Dmitry's upcoming liver transplant. Later Hank goes to see Boris and reveals Christina's interest in Dmitry and Boris' plans.

At the Small estate, JJ is sparring with a partner in preparation for his fight. He is reluctant to have the MRI that Divya suggests until she reminds him that he has a son to raise, and he needs to make sure he isn't risking permanent brain damage. JJ agrees to the MRI.

Evan returns to the charity raffle to drool over the Ferraris where he speaks with Sam again. He tries his sales pitch but she is not interested. Sam's hand suddenly starts trembling and she falls, managing to slam a car door on her hand as she tries to prevent herself from falling. Later, Hank sees her and reprots she is lucky and has only minor injuries. After getting Evan to leave he tells her the lab results are clean but he would like to do a full body CT scan to try to find what is wrong with her. She agrees, but only after she briefs her replacement agent.

Divya and Jeremiah review JJ's MRI and see no evidence of brain trauma. Divya notices something however, and they rush to the pre-fight weigh-in to prevent another of JJ's emotional outbursts. When they arrive, JJ is about to start crying and Heather, his wife is desperate to prevent it too keep him from being a laughing stock. Jeremiah casually sets off the fire alarm and calmly exits with the crowd, protecting his patient. Outside they give JJ an injection to temporarily relieve his problems and he returns to the weigh-in with no emotional symptoms. Divya congratulates Jeremiah on his improvisation.

At home, Evan badgers Hank about Christina after he sees Hank deliberately ignore a phone call from her. In order to get Evan off his back, Hank agrees to purchase a share of the Ferrari raffle ticket, even though he thinks owning a Ferrari is ridiculous.

At the raffle, the Ferrari is awarded to Evelyn Larson, and Evan mistakenly thinks he won. Paige tells him there is always next year but he is not mollified. Hank notices Sam removing the bandages from her injured hand. When she sees her suspect leaving in his car, she steals a security car and chases him with Hank an unwilling passenger. Hank manages to stop her before she injures someone and notices something about her eye that gives him a clue to her problem.

At HankMed, Evan, Paige, Divya and Jeremiah are watching JJ's fight. Evan is still bitter about losing the raffle and Divya quickly decides she has seen enough of the bloody fight. Divya retreats to work on her laptop and Jeremiah quietly watches her with a growing affection. He tries to ask her out to dinner but she doesn't recognize the effort as him asking her on a date and they are interrupted before he can do anything else.

At the hospital, Hank tells Sam that his suspicion was correct and she has a disease that causes an over accumulation of copper in the body, but is treatable and she can continue her work with the D.E.A.

Hank goes to see Christina, who tells him Boris fired her because of Hank's information. Christina defends herself, saying that Dmitry was impressed with her and hired her services as a translator on upcoming meetings, which is why she knew about his upcoming surgery. She is disappointed Hank didn't just talk to her and says goodbye.

Jeremiah texts Evan to come to his very large house where he reveals that he is independently wealthy resulting from the generosity of his late mentor who willed him the house and the residuals from his many patents. He also now owns a Ferrari, the use of which he offers to HankMed and specifically to a jubilant Evan.

Hank sees Boris and accuses him of a personal interest in Christina that caused him to sever his ties with her. Hank feels Boris set the two of them up to prove to himself that he was over his feelings for her, and that Hank's information was just an excuse to not see her again. Before too many angry words can erupt, Hank returns the pager watch and tells Boris he is returning to just being Boris' doctor.

Guest Stars: Gary Cole (Simon Braddock), Miriam Shor (Fannie Todd), Khotan (Rafa), Jed Orlemann (David), Jorge Esteban Scott (Polo Player)
Production Code: RP410
Summary: With a Polo tournament in full swing in the Hamptons, HankMed's on hand to treat a Polo Team Owner who won't quit playing despite his condition. Also, Divya deals with the realities of dating and Evan frets about an impending meeting of the in-laws.

HankMed is contracted to support a polo match where Evan is being sympathetic about Hank's recent dumping by Christina. Hank says he wasn't dumped but Evan begs to differ. Evan is lamenting that his fiancée Paige has decided it is time her parents meet Hank and Evan's father, Eddie. An offhand comment from Hank gives Evan the idea to delay the inevitable by putting off the meeting.

Hank and Evan join Paige, Divya and Eddie to watch the match where Eddie starts consoling Hank about his breakup. Suddenly, one of the polo players, Simon Braddock, takes a fall from his horse and cannot remount. Hank and Divya rush to help him but he seems to only have a bruised shoulder. Another player, Rafa, comes over to gently tease Simon about his playing ability, and also to flirt with Divya.

Back home, Evan is trying to prepare Eddie for the dinner with The General, giving him topics to avoid and possible topics to talk about. Eddie is somewhat insulted as Paige arrives and tells Evan he is trying too hard.

At the polo match, Divya formally meets Fannie Todd, a woman she met briefly earlier in the day and who Divya thought was a polo groupie chasing Rafa. It turns out Fannie runs a clothing business and she wants Rafa to model for her company.

Hank tracks down Simon in the stables and confirms a suspicion, that Simon did not fall by accident, but that his shoulder was already bothering him. Simon tells him he doesn't want his teammates to know, because he owns the team and they will think he only plays because of that, not for his skill. As Hank leaves to retrieve his medical kit, Simon experiences another shooting pain in his shoulder that drives him to the ground with it's intensity.

Divya walks through the crowd when she notices David, her blind date from the night before. She quickly spots Paige and joins her to avoid speaking with David. Divya laments that her three blind dates have not gone well and Paige offers the theory that maybe she doesn't know what she really wants in a man.

Hank returns to Simon who has dressed for a match and is preparing to play, even though he tells Hank the pain in his right shoulder has moved to his left shoulder. Hank convinces him to do a CT scan immediately, and give up on the match. They are interrupted by Divya who reports a spectator has been injured on the field.

The injured spectator turns out to be Fannie, who has broken her leg. Rafa shows up and Fannie is mesmerized by him. Hank wants to get a stretcher to move Fannie but Rafa picks her up and carries her off the field of play.

Evan is preparing for the dinner after a massage at the country club only to discover that his suit slacks were removed and sent to the dry cleaners. At the last minute, he pays the bartender at the restaurant to exchange his pants for Evan's shorts and arrives late to the dinner, only to discover Eddie has been speaking his mind and earning The General's admiration.

Divya finally runs into David at the polo match and learns to her dismay that he has no further interest in her. She later complains to Hank that she has lost her ability to read people and is frustrated with dating.

At the dinner, Evan is horrified to learn that The General is aware of Eddie's incarceration, but then pleased when The General praises Eddie for turning his life around and helping others. As The General gets a text on his phone, Eddie proposes accompanying him on his campaign as a warm up act. The General suddenly stands and excuses himself and his wife and they leave. Evan is furious at his father for putting The General on the spot and once again putting himself above everyone else.

The next morning, Evan is trying to write an apology letter to The General for his father. Paige arrives and assures him her dad didn't leave the restaurant because of Eddie. Paige checks her phone and sees multiple messages and texts from family members. Attached to one is a 30 year old picture of her father with his female assistant implying her father was inappropriate with her. A later newscast reveals that the assistant was killed a week after the photo was taken in a car registered to The General.

Fannie is back at the match watching Rafa play when she collapses from complications from her broken leg. Hank and Divya treat her as Rafa stops to wish her a speedy recovery. As the match continues, Simon once again experiences pain in his shoulder, this time it results in his arm being paralyzed. Hank gets him in an ambulance and sends him to the hospital for an MRI.

Before the MRI results are in, Hank notices Simon's movements and diagnoses him with a certain illness, fully treatable and curable. Rafa arrives with the trophy for first place and expresses his affection for Simon, telling him he considers Simon the father he never had. Hank leaves to visit Fannie who is recovering quickly. Hank takes Rafa with him and he agrees to model for Fannie's company.

Paige is obsessed with watching the news reports about her father and Evan tries to get her to stop with little success. Eddie arrives and gently lectures her to believe her parents, not some news reports that are probably looking for ratings. Eddie says all the right things about family sticking together and Evan is chagrined and ashamed at his accusations of the previous night.

At the polo grounds, Divya enters the stables to see Rafa caring for his horse personally. The two talk and bond over their love of horses when Rafa surprises and pleases her when he takes her into his arms for a passionate kiss.

Hank meets with Eddie and congratulates him on the meeting with The General and his fatherly concern for Paige. Eddie tells him he is so happy Evan is getting married but surprised that Hank wasn't first. Hank agrees and figures maybe he is not cut out for marriage.

Evan is doing some busy work at home when Paige comes in after speaking with her father. It turns out he did accompany his assistant to that motel, but not for an affair. The assistant was helping The General and his wife adopt a child, which turned out to be Paige, and Paige never knew she was adopted.

Summary:	When a famous pop star comes to the Hamptons to prepare for her new world tour, HankMed must stay on hand to treat her for more than just exhaustion. Meanwhile, Divya becomes distracted when she falls head over heels for a globe-trotting polo player.

Hank, Divya and Jeremiah are being briefed by Evan via video-conference about their new client, Ava, a pop singer with a diva personality. Jeremiah comments to Divya that she appears to be wearing the same clothes as the previous day, but she denies it. Hank notices a piece of straw stuck in her hair, just as he leaves to see about a page he received from Boris' estate.

Hank is surprised when he finds out the page came from Marisa, who is worried about her infant son. She trusts Hank but he has limited experience with infants and promises to find her the best pediatrician in the Hamptons.

Evan and Paige are in New York where she has enrolled in school and is anxious to learn whether she was accepted into the class she wants. When she learns she succeeded, she is overjoyed but somehow reluctant to join Evan and go visit her parents. Evan thinks it is because of the recent revelation that she was adopted, but she insists she is fine with that news.

Hank, Divya and Jeremiah arrive at the theater where Ava's upcoming show tour is being rehearsed. To Hank's surprise, Ava turns out to be a quiet unassuming woman dressed plainly and speaking with a southern accent, not the diva he expected. Ava starts to lead HankMed to a quieter place to talk when she collapses into Hank's arms.

Ava quickly recovers and says she was just dizzy. She is from a small town in Arkansas and for the last 8 weeks has been in the Hamptons rehearsing and working hard for her upcoming tour. Her blood pressure is higher than normal and Hank theorizes her workload, anxiety and lack of a proper diet may be the underlying cause of her problems, but proposes the inevitable lab tests for confirmation. During the exam, Divya is distracted by a text on her phone, unusual for her.

Paige takes Evan to see her parents' apartment. They are not there but Evan is overly impressed by the location and view of the city. He tells her he will come visit her every weekend while she is in school but she is not very enthusiastic about staying there. Her excuse is the distance from school but we learn different when we see her sadness when she enters her childhood room and she is reminded of the adoption.

Hank and Divya take Marisa and her baby to see Harper Kubelick, the pediatrician he had one date with that was interrupted by Boris. While Hank and Harper take the baby into another room for a test, Divya receives another page on her phone. When Marisa inquires, Divya all but bursts out with the news of her romantic evening with Rafa. Marisa is supportive and suggests she not waste any time and be with him as much as possible.

Hank apologizes to Harper about their aborted date and insists his referral was professional. When the baby only takes a small amount of formula, Hank can't help himself and suggests a diagnostic test. Harper reminds him who the pediatrician is and Hank apologizes, then asks for her recommendation. She reluctantly indicates the same test, to Hank's delight.

At the theater, Ava is rehearsing a song with complex acrobatics when she has problems gripping with her hand and falls to the stage. Hank, Divya and Jeremiah return to help and Hank examines Ava who was not seriously hurt. He scolds her about not following his advice about resting and eating properly. She tells him she is lonely being so far from home with no family with her and she is too busy preparing for her tour to eat well. Hank invites her to come to his place for dinner so he can make sure she eats a good meal.

As Jeremiah and Divya attend to one of the dancers, Divya receives another page and asks Jeremiah if he is busy that night. When he says he is free, his initial elation is thwarted when Divya asks him to cover her on call duty that evening.

Hank and Marisa take her baby to Harper for the test. Harper cannot find anything wrong and Marisa fears the worst. Harper requests she not panic and let her keep looking and recommends a visit to Marisa's home to see the baby's environment. Marisa agrees and leaves. Harper gets a phone call and Hank comments on the ring tone, which is one of Ava's songs. Hank gets an idea and invites Harper to dinner at his house to meet Ava.

At the Lawson home, the group sits down to eat the meal that Ava prepared for them. Everyone is impressed until she tells them the recipe is possum pie, a meal her grandmother made. Then she lets them off the hook when she reveals she used chicken instead. She comments on how she is proud of her heritage, and that her family is her identity, a statement that hits Paige especially hard.

During the meal, Hank gets a text with the results of Ava's blood test. It indicates some problems with her pituitary glands and Jeremiah suggest a test that requires sputum samples every four hours. He volunteers to visit her hotel that night to get the samples as he only sleeps 3 hours at a time and he also seems quite taken with Ava. Everyone agrees and as Ava leaves, she takes one last swig from a soda can and then Jeremiah notices and is puzzled as she puts the empty can into her purse.

Hank walks Harper to her car after the dinner and she explains her upbringing, which sheds light about why she is not interested in dating a doctor. She wants someone who will be available for social and family responsibilities, and she knows how crazy a doctor's life can be.

Divya arrives at Rafa's hotel room but he does not appear to be there. She walks out onto the balcony where he is waiting for her. He immediately starts pushing her romantic buttons and she seems surprised when she responds.

Jeremiah arrives at Ava's hotel room at 11 PM for her first sample and is surprised to find her getting dressed up for a night on the town. She says her publicist insists on her making public appearances at nightclubs twice a week to maintain her image. Jeremiah reminds her she needs to give another sample at 3 AM, but she is not sure where she will be at that time so she drags him along. The first stop is a nightclub, where he finds out she emptied his medical bag and stuffed it with her supplies. She tries to get him on the dance floor but he has a panic attack and calls Divya. Divya is not available to take Jeremiah's call, as she is in bed with Rafa, so Jeremiah calls Hank to relieve him.

Evan finds Paige on the patio, unable to sleep. She finally admits being angry with her parents for concealing her adoption, saying she has lost her sense of home. Evan consoles her by telling her he will give her that sense back, when they start their new family together.

At the nightclub, Ava finally gets Jeremiah on the dance floor where he starts to have a good time. Ava suddenly collapses while all the dancers start snapping pictures with their cell phones, Jeremiah starts resuscitation attempts. Hank soon arrives with his medical bag to assist. She is taken to the emergency room where she is found to have low potassium levels. While the hospital staff work on her, Hank and Jeremiah discuss her underlying issue and discover that she chews a licorice flavored tobacco, which explains the soda can she took with her and also explains her medical issue as she is suffering from licorice poisoning.

At Boris' estate, Hank and Harper try to change the baby's diaper while Marisa answers her phone. While playing with the baby, Harper realizes what the babies problem is, his tongue is being restricted so that he cannot provide strong suction on his baby bottle. This leads to not enough food and slower growth.

Hank and Jeremiah visit Ava and tell her the good news and that she will recover quickly once her potassium levels are restored. She thanks Jeremiah for saving her life and he recommends she stop chewing tobacco, giving her a gift bag with nicotine patches and bubble gum as incentive. Divya enters and apologizes for not answering her phone. Hank is suspicious and wonders why she is feeling guilty.

Evan and Paige check out the tiny dorm room Paige is assigned at the university. Evan is disappointed and surprised when Paige is jubilant. She is happy to have something of her own as she starts her new life.

Hank stops by Harper's office to give her a backstage pass to Ava's concert and tells her he thinks he can be the guy in her life that she can depend on.

Guest Stars: Rosanna Arquette (Louise "Lou" Hunter), Khotan (Rafa), Carrie Preston (Jackie Van Ark), Amelia Rose Blaire (Fiona Van Ark)
Production Code: RP412
Summary: A romance novelist and her high strung daughter become sick with what appears to be dissimilar ailments. Paige gets Evan's support as she deals with her family. Jeremiah's help is sought out by Divya's new boyfriend.

Hank and his new girlfriend Harper are headed for their morning exercise class and talking about getting together for dinner. Both have busy schedules but they arrange to meet at a diner close to a bookstore in case one or the other gets called for an emergency.

Evan finds Paige cleaning up around his home/office. She feels guilty for not only being hired by Evan, but for essentially moving in since she is reluctant to go home after learning about her adoption. Evan asks how he can help her and she tells him to just give her time. As they embrace, Fiona and her mother Jackie arrive to ask for medical help. Fiona is a student and having gastrointestinal problems and her mother brought her to HankMed because it was close, not realizing HankMed was not a traditional doctor's practice.

Divya and Rafa awake in bed together. Rafa tells her he will be leaving in five days to rejoin his polo team in Hawaii and he asks Divya to spend the day with him. Divya refuses, feeling guilty about not giving HankMed 100 percent of her time. As she slips into the bathroom, Rafa massages his right forearm, clearly in some discomfort that he has hidden from Divya.

Hank arrives and starts examining Fiona, ruling out gall bladder and appendix problems. He learns Fiona will be attending M.I.T. in the fall and is taking an A.P. course over the summer in preparation, over Jackie's objections. Hank gives Fiona something for her nausea and proposes the inevitable lab tests to look for the underlying problem. While Hank is working, Paige seems to make an instant connection with Fiona.

Divya arrives five minutes late and extremely apologetic. Hank dismisses her concerns and gently probes about how she seems distracted lately. She reveals she has been seeing Rafa and Hank is happy for her, but privately a little concerned she may get hurt. Hank asks her to bring Rafa over some time so they can get to know him better and she ends up deciding to throw a dinner party. Hank asks Divya if she can pickup Jeremiah as he needs a ride and she agrees.

Divya discovers that Jeremiah lives in an enormous house, perfect for hosting dinner parties. He offers her the use of his home and she agrees, settling on hosting a dinner party the following day. Jeremiah then learns to his dismay that the party is for everyone to meet her new boyfriend Rafa. Jeremiah has a crush on Divya that she is unaware of.

Hank is engrossed in the romance novel that Jackie sent him to read when Evan stops by to ask for advice on how to help Paige. Hank's advice is to do nothing, just be supportive when she needs him. Evan is unhappy with that answer as he wants to take some action. As Hank leaves, Paige's father General Collins arrives and tells Evan he needs to do something. The General regrets keeping Paige's adoption a secret for so long. Evan tells him Paige just needs time. An emotional General asks Evan to tell Paige that her parents' miss her terribly.

Hank is called to the Van Ark where Fiona accidentally caused a delicate piece of furniture to collapse on her leg. Hank finds no broken bones and inquires after her nausea. She is please to report his treatment worked. Hank cautions her that she has become dehydrated from the vomiting and needs to rehydrate and rest, immediately not after her class finals. Fiona is disappointed that Paige didn't come with Hank but he suggests she send Paige a text.

The next day, Hank, Harper, Evan and Paige arrive at Jeremiah's home for Divya's elaborate dinner party. Hank and Evan discuss how this display is extremely un-Divya-like. Evan pulls Paige aside and comments on how happy she seems. Paige reveals she spent some time with Fiona and was inspired to move forward and put the worries about her adoption behind her. Evan reveals that the General stopped to see him and that her parents miss her.

Rafa arrives with a romantic present for Divya. Jeremiah watches in silence, clearly distressed. Later as Jeremiah steps away, Rafa approaches him privately and reveals he is having numbness in his hand and wrist. Jeremiah promises to help, saying he took an oath. Paige receives a call from Fiona and she and Hank leave the party to find out what's wrong with Fiona. Fiona's nausea is back and Hank's exam reveals a racing heart and continued dehydration, even though she has been drinking plenty of fluids. Hank declares she needs hospitalization, but before he can walk her to his car she collapses.

At the hospital, Hank explains to Jackie that the surgeon wants to remove Fiona's appendix to make sure it isn't the cause of her problems, even though his ultrasound showed no problems with it. As he explains this, he notices a rash on Jackie's neck that she dismisses, saying she gets it occasionally and it goes away on its own. As they talk Paige visits with Fiona and listens as Fiona pours out her feelings about not fitting in with the rest of her family. Paige comforts her and tells her that doesn't matter, what matters is that they love her.

At HankMed, Jeremiah is staring at Rafa's X-ray, daydreaming about winning Divya away from Rafa when Evan interrupts him. When asked, Jeremiah scares Evan when he says Rafa may have a fatal disease, then admits he hasn't done any other tests and shouldn't speculate. Evan suddenly realizes what is happening and asks Jeremiah if he has feelings for Divya and Jeremiah denies it.

Paige goes with Jackie to retrieve some of Fiona's school books so she can study in the hospital. Jackie laments that she has never found a way to be close to Fiona. As she starts to cry, she has problems breathing and collapses. Paige texts Hank who is close and calls 911. Hank, with Paige's help, intubates Jackie as she is not breathing. As she regains consciousness, Hank has a moment of clarity and realizes what is wrong with both Jackie and Fiona.

Hank realizes both women have a hereditary condition that causes their symptoms and is triggered by stress. The realization brings mother and daughter closer together. As Paige watches them wistfully, she is obviously thinking about her own (adopted) mother.

Paige arrives home to a jubilant Evan who is proud of how she helped save Jackie's life. Paige confesses she is ready to go home and asks if he will go with her.

Jeremiah visits Rafa and Divya to reveal Rafa's arm is numb because of the way Divya has been sleeping on it. With rest and a little therapy, it will be fine. Rafa tells Divya he cannot wait until he returns and she is pleasantly surprised, having not been sure she wasn't just a brief fling. A clearly uncomfortable Jeremiah leaves the room quietly.

Hank meets Harper for their morning exercise class and tells her he thinks they have been too practical about their romance, and have missed the falling in love part. She agrees and notices the romance novel stashed in Hank's gym bag. Hank is embarrassed and tries to pass it off as just a gift from a patient when a playful Harper asks him if he has read chapter nine yet. The exercise class starts without Hank and Harper, as they are busy steaming the windows of Harper's car.

At HankMed, Evan is playing solitaire when a woman arrives at the door. The woman is looking for Paige and turns out to be her birth mother.

Something Fishy This Way Comes

Production Code: RP413
Summary: Hank must travel across the globe to help an injured Dmitry. Meanwhile, Evan and Paige meet a woman claiming to be Paige's biological mother.

Evan speaks with Lou (Louise) Hunter, who thinks she may be Paige's birth mother. She tells Evan she has been searching for her daughter for a long time, and recent events have led her to the Hamptons. Evan is skeptical, and thinks she may just be looking for money. When Lou tells Evan that she is an artist, Evan is thoughtful.

Hank and Harper are having coffee after their morning workout when Talia Clarke, a pharmaceutical representative stops to chat. She is acquainted with Harper and now tries to ingratiate herself with Hank. Hank deftly avoids the situation by sending her to HankMed's office, where Hank knows Evan will be conducting his morning staff meeting that Hank plans to ditch. As Talia leaves the coffee shop, she experiences dizziness and blurred vision and is almost struck by a car.

Evan tells Paige about meeting Lou. Paige is also skeptical since many other professed family members have contacted her or her parents since the news of her adoption became public knowledge. Evan has a feeling about Lou, however, and thinks she may be genuine, so Paige agrees to meet with her.

Divya arrives after saying goodbye to Rafa, who is leaving with the rest of the polo team for a match in Hawaii. Evan is pleased that Divya is so happy, and tries to talk with her but she gets a phone call from Rafa and walks away.

Hank and Harper finish making love and talk about how their relationship seems to be growing as their fondness for each other keeps increasing. Even fate seems to be on their side as neither doctor has been paged by a patient. Harper's dad calls and Hank learns that she has spoken to her parents about him, which makes him happy. After Harper hangs up, Hank receives a call from Christina, his former lover and Dmitry's assistant. Hank says goodbye to Harper and leaves quickly.

Talia is briefing the benefits of her company's new sleeping pill to Evan, Divya and Jeremiah. Her presentation is erratic and she seems to pause and forget what she was about to say. When asked for more details, she declares that she must have left most of her literature at her hotel and promises to return the next day. Evan and Divya assure her there is no need to come back, but Jeremiah is sure she will as she walked away without her laptop.

Hank goes to see Boris, telling him about Christina's phone call. Hank is concerned about Dmitry's health, and is not happy when Boris dismisses him, saying he (Boris) will look into it.

Paige meets with Lou and reveals that she has done a background check on Lou, whose real name was Patty Louise Stump, and who has had multiple drug arrests and bankruptcies. Paige also catches Lou in a lie when Lou says she never got to hold her baby. Paige turns and walks away.

Hank and Boris wade ashore on a beach where they were dropped off by a small boat. Boris tells Hank that someone named Amir would take them to Dmitry. Both men are surprised when Amir turns out to be a young boy. When they reach Dmitry, he is bad shape and somewhat delusional. Amir tells them Dmitry arrived three days earlier, and became ill almost immediately. Hank checks his glucose level which is fine, so the cause of his problems is not his diabetes. Amir confesses he has been administering Dmitry's Insulin for him.

Hank starts an IV to try and stabilize Dmitry with Amir's help. Amir seems knowledgeable and tells Hank he wants to be a doctor. Boris speaks with a woman and returns to tell Hank they need to leave when their boat arrives at high tide. None of them are safe and their presence endangers the woman and her family as well.

Divya and Jeremiah go to Talia's hotel to return her laptop and check on her. Divya is somewhat abashed when she realizes Jeremiah is worried about her health and has no personal feelings for her. Talia finally answers her door and does not recognize either of them.

Hank and Boris talk about Dmitry. Hank is concerned because he cannot seem to reduce Dmitry's fever, and then antibiotics he administered are not working. Hank then learns that Dmitry is in this country trying to help the natives who are fighting for democracy. Both Dmitry and Boris have using their family wealth to help, but neither have ever been able to be the foot soldier that they wanted to be. Hank also learns that Dmitry was the one that managed to get Marisa out of Cuba.

Dmitry worsens, and Hank queries Amir whether Dmitry has consumed any shellfish. When both Dmitry and Amir tell him no, Hank suspects Dmitry might have been infected when he waded ashore from the small boat the way he and Boris did.

Jeremiah examines Talia and finds no injury that may be causing her problems. She confesses to blurry vision a few days earlier and also to oversleeping on a previous sales junket. As Jeremiah starts dictating some diagnostic tests, Talia falls asleep in front of them.

Hank's suspicion about a marine bacteria entering Dmitry through where he gives himself Insulin shots proves to be true and Dmitry improves rapidly. Hank is concerned about Amir who went to the beach to await the boat when suddenly a little girl arrives shouting for them to come. They go to the beach and start climbing aboard the boat when Hank notices Amir seems injured. Hank wants to wait but Dmitry is afraid they may get caught and pulls a gun on Hank. Amir does not want to go with them so Hank picks him up and goes ashore as the boat leaves without him.

Hank examines Amir and finds he has been infected with flesh eating bacteria and is at risk to lose his leg. As he starts to cut away the infected flesh, Boris returns to help. As he works, Hank worries that he cannot get all of the infected tissue under the conditions he is working in, then has an idea. He retires maggots from the trash and places them on the wound to eat away the dead flesh. He leaves his medical bag with Amir and instructs him how to care for his wound.

Paige comes home to find Lou waiting for her. She tells Paige she wasn't consciously lying, she had just blocked out the bad memory of when she gave Paige up as an infant. Later, Paige tells Evan the story and now seems unsure about Lou. Evan suggests a DNA test to know for sure.

Divya and Jeremiah go over Talia's test results and can find no other cause except for a rare, incurable disorder called Klein-Levine. As they start to tell Talia the bad news, Jeremiah notices bruises on Talia's legs that lead him to the conclusion that her Klein-Levine syndrome has a cause that is treatable.

Boris sends Hank home on a plane while he stays with Dmitry. Hank has finally seen a softer side of Boris as he cares for his friend Dmitry. The two men make amends and agree to work together again.

Jeremiah receives confirmation of his diagnosis of Talia and says she can be treated with Prednisone. The bad news is that she wants to come back to finish her presentation. Divya laughs when she learns Jeremiah told Talia to come back when Hank returns, then complements Jeremiah on how well he fits in to HankMed, despite her misgivings. Jeremiah's pleasure is abated however, when Divya receives another call from Rafa and seems to immediately ignore him.

Divya takes DNA samples from both Paige and Lou, who has agreed to the testing. The results won't be available for 3 days, so Lou decides to stay in the Hamptons until the results come back. As she leaves, Paige gives her a reticent hug, much to Lou's surprise.

Hank is surprised to see Boris arrive home shortly after he himself returned. Boris says he was not happy with Dmitry's treatment and brought him home so Hank can look after him. He then asks Hank if he will be able to treat the man who pulled a gun on him and Hank says yes, but he won't trust Dmitry. Boris agrees and says neither can he.

Guest Stars:	Rosanna Arquette (Louise "Lou" Hunter), Khotan (Rafa), Mark Ivanir (Dmitry Vasilyev), Justine Lupe (Cameron Krissy), Jordan Gelber (Howard Katz), Tanya White (Aubrey Powers), Mark Boyett (Pace), Christal Marie (Jessica Slater), Dierdre Reimold (Georgette), Rachel Hilson (Niece 1), Cheyenne Carter (Niece 2), Zach Bandler (Personal Assistant), Max Von Essen (Photo Shoot Hairstylist), Meredith Zinner (Photo Shoot Make-up Artist), Stephen Owen (Referee), Roberto Lopez (Dmitry Driver)
Summary:	Hank cancels his weekend plans after treating an amateur beach volleyball player who he believes may be suffering from more than just a summer bug. Meanwhile, Divya confronts her new boyfriend after a startling discovery.

Hank and Evan as HankMed are supporting a local volleyball tournament. Harper is there too and the subject of her family reunion comes up. Evan jokingly suggest Harper take Hank along and all are surprised when Harper agrees. When Hank notices one of the volleyball players, Cameron Krissy, coughing rather severely, he offers his services but is refused. Cameron is trying to turn pro and can't be bothered with a simple cough.

Rafa is back in town and is preparing for a magazine photo-shoot. Divya is supportive until Rafa teases her about the supermodel he will be working with.

Hank and Harper watch a volleyball match when one of the players, Aubrey Powers, collapses in pain. When questioned, she claims her legs just buckled, and she has pain everywhere. Hank theorizes she may have sickle cell anemia and wants to start an IV, but she is dehydrated and he cannot find a good vein. Hank improvises and has Aubrey placed on a stand so her head is lower than her body so that her jugular vein is distended. Hank gets an IV going and they wait for the paramedics.

Paige comes out of a nail salon and notices a busy bar/restaurant across the street. She wanders over, looking for Lou, the woman who might be her birth mother and a confessed alcoholic. Lou walks up carrying a cup of tea and the women talk. Lou learns that Paige wants to be an artist and is going to Parsons college in the Fall. Her education is the reason she and Evan are putting off their wedding until the following Christmas, about a year and a half away.

At HankMed, Divya and Evan are checking out a web page featuring Georgette, the super-model Rafa will be working with. Both Evan and Jeremiah think she is gorgeous, which does nothing to relieve Divya's jealousy.

At the volleyball tournament, Hank runs into Cameron who asks after Aubrey. It turns out Aubrey will not be able to continue and her partner, Jessica Slater, has asked Cameron to be her new partner. Cameron is ecstatic, but has started experiencing nausea, which she attributes to nerves. She is still coughing, however, so Hank convinces her to let him check her health.

At the photo-shoot, Rafa and Georgette are being photographed together in their underwear, and the photographer wants them to act like they are in love. Divya is on set but is hiding so Rafa won't see her. When Georgette accidentally hurts herself, the photographer calls for the set medic who is absent, so Divya reluctantly steps in.

After treating Georgette, she apologizes to Rafa who is very understanding. Rafa returns to the shoot while Divya waits for his next break. Divya is shocked when she overhears some of the crew members talking about Rafa, and how he is spoken for, and devoted to his woman and his son.

Hank treats Howard Katz, an investment banker who was struck by a volleyball. When Howard tries to pay Hank and give him his business card, Hank deftly passed him off to Evan, who he thinks will be pleased. It turns out Evan knows Howard and claims he lost a lot of people's money and that HankMed shouldn't have anything to do with him.

Cameron comes up and thanks Hank for stopping her nausea. She heads out for a run on the beach while Hank leaves to meet Boris.

A jubilant Paige arrives and tells Evan she just spent some time with Lou. Evan is concerned with the supposed coincidence of Paige running into Lou in town and with Paige's sudden turnaround in her feelings for Lou, but he keeps his concerns to himself.

Hank follows up on Dmitry who is recovering rapidly. Dmitry and Boris want to toast their recent success with vodka and Hank asks them to wait until Saturday night so that Dmitry can fully recover. When Hank tells them he will be out of town (at Harper's family reunion), a look passes between Dmitry and Boris.

Hank returns to the volleyball tournament where Cameron is playing well. Evan and Jeremiah have volunteered to man the HankMed tent so that Hank can leave with Harper. Suddenly, Cameron suffers another coughing fit and asks for Hank's help.

Hank and Jeremiah take Cameron inside the tent and determine she has fluid in the lining of her lungs, restricting her breathing and causing her cough. Hank declares they must remove the fluid immediately and uses a large hypodermic needle to drain the fluid. He claims she has pneumonia and he gives her antibiotics to take while the fluid is analyzed to confirm his diagnosis.

Paige and Lou are at the beach, each with a sketchpad drawing the sunset. Their common interest in art is drawing them closer and when Paige learns that Lou is camping rather than staying in a hotel, she takes charge and decides to check Lou into her country club where rooms are made available to members.

Later, Cameron tells Hank that she has been officially chosen as Jessica's partner, but her self doubt returns. Hank checks her lungs and temperature and declares she is rapidly improving and just needs a good night's rest before her match the following day.

Evan and Paige go to the Blackstone to have lunch with Lou. Paige is devastated when Lou drops the bombshell that a private investigator she hired the previous summer has finally found a DNA match to a woman in Michigan. This means Lou is not Paige's mother.

Hank and Harper are headed for their getaway but Hank is still worried about Cameron. He talks her symptoms over with Harper and is reminded that Cameron told him she spent time in a Apache sweat lodge. He immediately worries he missed something and decides he needs to return to his patient, to Harper's dismay.

Divya confronts Rafa at his polo practice where he confesses he has a son with an ex-girlfriend. Divya is devastated and accuses him of lying to her. She leaves, breaking off their relationship.

When Hank gets back to the tournament, he finds Cameron is perfectly fine and playing well. Hank realizes he overreacted and has now jeopardized his relationship with Harper. After the tournament, he calls her and she is reserved and tells him she won't be back for a while.

Divya is on the phone with Jill, talking about her breakup with Rafa while Jeremiah overhears. When her call is cutoff she sobs quietly and Jeremiah comforts her as best he knows how.

Paige gets the DNA results back that officially verifies that Lou is not related to her. Evan is worried about her but she says his support has been enough to keep her grounded. He agrees they are both all each other needs for family and suggest they not wait a year and a half but they should get married this upcoming December. A jubilant Paige agrees.

Hank returns home and passes an SUV leaving with Dmitry inside. When he enters the courtyard, he sees smoke and what appears to be a fire. Boris' assistant Udo tells him there appears to be an electrical fire coming from an old meat locker. Hank realizes that is the vodka room Boris created especially for Dmitry. Hank asks about Boris and Udo tells him he is inside and the door is apparently locked from the inside. As Hank rushes towards the fire, an explosion occurs and the concussion flings him backward, landing on his back on the cobblestones of the courtyard.

Summary:	Evan and Paige's wedding is finally here but there are a few snags in the preparation. The bachelor and bachelorette parties both unexpectedly end up in Las Vegas. Cousin Owen arrives from Wisconsin for the celebration. And a figure from the past brings back memories for Hank and Evan.

Hank and Divya emerge from a dry cleaning store where Hank has picked up his tuxedo for Evan's wedding. Hank is going to be the best man and Divya has agreed to be his plus one for the event, since she broke up with Rafa.

Later, Hank makes a house call to check on Ken Keller's girlfriend, Barbie. Ken is directing a workman, Nick, who is on a ladder hanging Christmas decorations. Hank diagnoses Barbie with seasonal affective disorder based on the fact she is a native Floridian and not used to the short daylight hours in the Hamptons. Hank and Ken then discuss Evan's desire to not have a bachelor party and Ken thinks it is a ruse. As Ken is trying to talk Hank into a classic party, Nick falls from the ladder to the courtyard below.

Hank examines Nick and finds broken ribs and a collapsed lung. He needs a tube to insert into Nick to remove the trapped air and, as usual, improvises with material at hand while Ken calls for the paramedics.

Evan and Paige are going over the wedding plans that Evan made into a video. The plans were based on Paige's childhood dreams and she loves them. Hank arrives and welcomes Paige home from school when he is suddenly paged to Shadow Pond, Boris' home.

Hank meets with Florian Hostetler, Boris' lawyer who is working on settling Boris' estate after the explosion that took Boris' life. Hostetler informs Hank that Marisa wants Hank, Evan and HankMed to stay in the guest house until the probate is complete. Hank thanks the man and asks about the police investigation. When informed that the explosion has been ruled accidental, Hank is mystified.

At home, Evan greets a family friend and former girlfriend of Hank's, Winnie Gordon. Winnie is making the wedding cake and is surprised when she finds out Evan has not told Hank that she is involved with the wedding. Evan is saved from Winnie's wrath by the arrival of his distant cousin Owen, one of the few Lawson family members that will be attending the wedding.

Shortly afterward, Hank, Evan, Ken and Owen are aboard a private jet flying toward New York, or so Evan thinks. Hank reveals there is a change of plan and they are headed for Las Vegas. Evan is surprised, as this sounds like something the old Evan would have done. It triggers a memory of when Hank was about to be married and he was worried about Evan pushing one of his can't miss investment opportunities onto Hank's prospective in-laws.

Paige and Divya are in a limousine headed to the airport for a flight to Denver. Paige's friends are gathering in Aspen for a bachelorette party but a storm over the Rockies has closed the Denver airport. The two talk about Divya's recent failed romance with Rafa and Paige points out that the two never sat down and fully talked out their issues. Suddenly Paige has an idea, she is changing the location of her party to Las Vegas.

Hank and the boys check into their Vegas hotel and Owen disappears. They find him taking a bubble bath and eating a very large hamburger. He is content to stay there and thanks Evan for inviting him to his party. Owen then reminds Evan that Evan lost Owen's inheritance money in his investment opportunity, a fact Evan had forgotten.

Paige and Divya arrive in Vegas and see Rafa in the airport lobby, signing copies of his book for fans. Paige wants to play Cupid and tells Divya to be with Rafa, she will be at the spa. Rafa tells Divya he was afraid that if he revealed he had a son, it would scare her off. She tells him she is not upset about his son, but about the fact that he kept it from her.

The boys head out to a casino where Owen quickly loses all his chips. Evan gives him some more, feeling guilty about losing his money years before. Ken and Owen head to the craps table while Evan begs off, wanting to get some air. Hank is concerned but lets him go. Suddenly his vision blurs and he loses his balance, stumbling into a waitress then apologizing.

Outside the casino, Evan makes a wish and tosses a coin into the fountain, then looks up to see Paige standing nearby, watching him. The two start dancing and the scene switches to a wedding chapel where Divya and Rafa emerge, newly married. Rafa has to leave for a photo-shoot and wants Divya to come with him but she wants to stay for the wedding. He understands and insists he will come back for the wedding. She suggests they keep their marriage secret until after the wedding so as not to steal Evan and Paige's thunder.

Evan and Paige find the boys at the craps table where Owen is on a hot streak. Paige informs them the weather will soon be closing the airport and they need to leave. Evan is happy for Owen until he finds out Owen wasn't betting, just rolling the dice. Evan seems angry, a touch of the old Evan, until Paige intervenes to calm him down.

On the plane, Hank asks Owen about the hoarseness in his voice. He then takes a look down Owen's throat and declares that Owen has vocal chord paralysis, the cause of which can be determined with a CT scan.

Back home, Hank gives Owen the CT scan and finds an aneurysm of his aortic arch. Owen's blood pressure is also high and he starts to hyperventilate, then vomits and collapses. Divya calls the paramedics as Hank tries to intubate him. Hank has the blurry vision again and fails, passing the intubation to Divya.

Later at the hospital, Hank and Evan visit Owen who has recovered from surgery. The surgeons placed a stint into his artery and he should be discharged in time for the wedding. As they leave, Evan worries about the hospital costs Owen is facing. Hank tells him not to worry, Owen is family and they will take care of him.

Hank and Evan go to the hotel to see their father Eddie has arrived. He tells them their grandfather has an ear infection and couldn't make the flight. Paige pulls Eddie aside and he gives her a ring, a family heirloom to be used as a wedding ring. Hank takes Eddie's bags up to his room and runs into Winnie. They speak awkwardly and the meeting reminds Hank of when he tried to apologize to Winnie after his engagement party. Winnie wanted no part of an apology and punched Hank in the eye.

Hank returns home and finds out from Divya that she and Rafa are back together and she won't be Hank's plus one for the wedding. Divya then bullies Hank into a CT scan to check for an intra-cranial bleed that might be latent from the explosion.

Paige takes the ring to be inscribed and learns the ring is no heirloom. She leaves the jewelry shop and tries to calm down as the snow starts to fall. Evan joins her and they hug in happiness.

Summary: Evan and Paige's wedding is finally here but there are a few snags in the preparation. The bachelor and bachelorette parties both unexpectedly end up in Las Vegas. Cousin Owen arrives from Wisconsin for the celebration. And a figure from the past brings back memories for Hank and Evan.

Hank and Divya return to see Barbie, who is feeling worse. The light therapy box Hank gave her for her seasonal disorder has been ineffective. Her muscles and joints are now aching, symptoms that do not fit with Hank's earlier diagnosis. Hank suggests some blood work to investigate other possible causes. Divya gets a call from the radiologist who reviewed Hank's CT scan and the results are negative. Hank feels vindicated but Divya is still worried.

In Africa, Jill is driving to the airport when she is stopped by a man who tells her she is needed to help coordinate the rescue of victims of an accident.

Paige talks to Divya about the fake Lawson heirloom ring. She confesses she does not know how to proceed, whether she should ask someone about it or not. She finally decided not to worry about it because she knows who Evan is.

Owen returns to the Lawson home, having been discharged and not wanting to bother either Hank or Evan to come pick him up. Hank notices Owen limping and he complains of pain in his leg. As they go inside he falls and Hank's examination reveals Owen is having an adverse reaction to the blood thinner he was prescribed. Hank gives Owen a vitamin shot and tells him he must return to the hospital for at least 24 hours so he can have his medication adjusted.

Eddie is redecorating the Christmas tree when Evan talks to him about a loan. The amount seems to be out of Eddie's range when they are interrupted by Paige, who wants to celebrate the first night of Hanukkah. She is disappointed when she discovers the Lawsons observe few traditions, including Hanukkah. Hank gets an emergency call and leaves. Eddie confesses he bought the 'heirloom' ring on eBay because he wanted Paige to think the Lawsons have traditions of their own.

Hank arrives at Ken's house to find Barbie has collapsed while playing in the snow. The paramedics take her to the hospital where she is diagnosed with an autoimmune disease that affects the thyroid. The condition is treatable though and she will be fine on medication.

At home, Hank is practicing his best man speech while Evan eavesdrops. The situation reminds him of his best man speech at Hank's pre-wedding party. Evan felt Hank was leaving him behind like their father did and let everyone know in his alcohol fueled speech.

Hank waits for Divya who is shopping and when she comes out of the store, she tells him Jill missed her flight. Divya then tells Hank that she married Rafa and is shocked when Hank is not supportive. As they argue, Hank experiences another blurred vision and headache episode and Divya insists he go to the hospital.

At the hospital, a doctor injects some of Hank's own blood into the membrane surrounding his spinal chord that was torn when Hank was thrown to the ground by the explosion at Shadow Pond. The blood will clot and seal the tear and hopefully stop the headaches.

At the hotel, Paige is starting to freak out when she learns that most of her guests, the photographer, the flowers, and even some of the catering is unable to reach them because of the weather. Owen arrives and tells them he needs cash for the taxi. As Owen and Paige go outside to pay the cab, Evan remembers back when he learns his investment scheme has gone belly-up, and Hank arrives at his door blaming him for a rough night.

Winnie arrives from Passaic with the wedding cake and runs into Hank. Hank apologizes for the way he handled their breakup and Winnie forgives him, telling him things worked out and she is happy.

As Ellen helps Paige with her wedding gown, the General tells Eddie that both the priest and the rabbi are unable to make it. Eddie has an idea and asks the General to wait while he tries to fix it. Divya puts the finishing touches on the wedding cake as Rafa arrives, surprising her.

Evan is having cold feet and he finally tells Hank why. He admits to Hank about the investment fiasco that occurred at the time of Hank's aborted wedding. He confesses that the move to the Hamptons was a selfish one, and he used Hank to help him make the move without Hank's knowledge. He also tells Hank he lost Owen's inheritance and that he never told any of this to Paige. Evan goes to see Paige and tells her they need to talk.

The wedding commences with Eddie performing the ceremony after being ordained at a 10 minute website. Paige interrupts the procedure to give a speech about how the wedding is not what they planned, but she would not have it any other way, and that weddings are about the future, not the past.

At the reception, Evan and Paige give Owen a first check to make up for the $50,000 that Evan lost. Owen is surprised since he only invested $500. Evan suggests Owen use the check to help start up the small business Owen has always dreamed of.

Hank talks to Jill via Skype. She is sorry she missed the wedding and tells Hank how happy she is with her work.

Divya tells Rafa she feels she has rushed their relationship and that she really wants to take the time to get to know him, but first they need to have their wedding annulled.

Hank is talking with Eddie about wanting to find someone to love when he starts slurring his speech. Eddie is alarmed when Hank collapses to the floor.

At the hospital, everyone gather around Hank's bed to provide support as he prepares for surgery. As Hank is given anesthesia, the scene shifts to an office where Boris sips from a cup. His lawyer gives him the news about Hank and asks him if he will be returning to the Hamptons. Boris says no as it is still too risky.

Production Code:	RP501
Summary:	Hank's back at work after recovering from surgery and his new patient may be harming her health with her fund-raising. Jeremiah is back at HankMed to help with the patient load. Evan chases after a new client while Divya receives unexpected news.

The episode begins with Hank stopping by Hamptons Heritage Hospital to discover the emergency room has been closed. He continues on to his appointment with his neuro-surgeon who proclaims he is fully recovered, but cautions him not to drive until the anti-seizure medication he has been taken has been flushed from his body.

Flashback 6 months Evan and Divya are in Hank's hospital room where he is still unconscious 4 days after surgery. They are both worried but Divya stresses that they need to be patient. Hank has a large "C" shaped scar above his left eye that fascinates and scares Evan.

Present day Divya is conducting the HankMed staff meeting which includes six new doctors. With Hank limited and the local emergency room shutdown, business is booming. Evan and Paige arrive home where Paige announces they have been house hunting and should be moving out soon. Hank joins them and explains how the Hamptons ER is being purchased but the opening date is unknown due to red tape. Hank gets a call from a patient and heads out in his usual way, causing Evan to initiate HankWatch, sending Divya after him to remind him that he is not allowed to drive yet. As they get in her car, they notice Dmitry Vasilyev arrive in Boris' car. Divya wonders if Dmitry was culpable in Boris' death and Hank says he is going to find out.

Evan is driving to a meeting with a life insurance company while talking to Divya on the phone when he sees an older woman fall from a ladder while trimming her hedges. Hank and Divya arrive to evaluate her for any serious injuries. The woman turns out to be Blythe Ballard, a member of a very influential family in the Hamptons as well as the New York Stock Exchange. She thinks Evan was being overly concerned, but Hank tells her she has suffered an injury to her arm causing the loss of blood flow to her hand. Hank physically twists her arm to pop it back into alignment, then uses HankMed's own x-ray machine to look for further problems.

Hank and Divya's next stop is the estate of Tom Seelig, a long time friend of HankMed. Tom is putting on a charity fashion show with his new wife Erika, who is the reason for HankMed's presence. Erika is a former nurse and is now making a clothing line, but is experiencing dizziness and a cough. Hank takes some blood to analyze as a first step.

Evan and Paige arrive at a home that Evan has scoped out, but it appears someone is already moving in. After Paige inquires, Evan reveals it was the only place he checked into, and he forgot to call and make an appointment with the owners to let them know they were coming. Paige berates him, saying they need to find a place so they can truly begin their marriage.

Evan meets Hank for lunch, where Hank is suspicious that something is going on since they usually eat on the run when their business gets this busy. Evan is unfazed, however until a bearded man in a coat arrives and it takes a moment to realize the man is Jeremiah, just back from Iceland. Afterward, Hank questions Evan about the lunch and Evan confesses how worried he has been about his brother. Hank assures him he is fine. Evan remembers back six months ago when Hank would have seizures while lying in his hospital bed after surgery and has his doubts.

At home, Hank and Divya are chatting amiably when Hank notices Dmitry speaking to Evan. After they part, Hank asks Evan what is going on and Evan tells him Dmitry has been very generous to HankMed, allowing them to conduct an Urgent Care Center on the grounds, and treating Evan personally nicer than Boris did. Hank speaks with Dmitry and discovers Dmitry is the executor of Boris' estate, appointed by Boris' wife Marisa, taking Hank by surprise.

Hank, Evan and Divya undergo routine medical tests as prerequisites for life insurance policies, an idea triggered after Hank's recent medical crisis.

Divya encounters Jeremiah on the street and passes him by without recognizing him because of his beard. When he calls to her, she quickly recognizes him and gives him a warm hug, triggering his acute uncomfortable behavior when he is around her.

Hank and Evan return to see Erika. Her blood work revealed nothing but Hank suspects she may be coming down with pneumonia. Erika is in her workshop, where she has passed out while ironing some clothing and causing a small fire. Hank puts out the fire and they take Erika outside to treat a burn caused by the iron which fell on her leg. While Evan tries to get their portable x-ray machine to the pool area, Erika removes her copper necklace in preparation and asks Hank about his craniotomy. Hank is taken aback but she tells him she can still see his scar. Hank admits he had the surgery six months earlier but is back to work. Erika promises to take it easy after finishing a few more pieces and promises to call him by 4 PM.

Evan and Paige check out a new house that seems perfect but Evan is determined to find problems with it. When Paige pushes him, she learns he is afraid to leave Hank alone, fearing he may have another seizure and have no one around to help him.

Hank and Evan follow up with Ms. Ballard, who is busy with her power walk and refuses to be examined. She then starts haranguing them about whether HankMed is zoned properly for the business they are conducting, but is very polite about it. She also doesn't seem to live in the large estate where Evan found her, and is quite possibly not the rich influential woman Evan thinks she is.

When Hank and Evan return home, Hank discovers he is being watched over like a child, and insists he is fine and that Evan and Paige should continue with their plan to move into their own place, and that he can now take over a lot of the calls that the HankMed associates have been treating. He is also quite upset that Erika has not called him and is not answering her phone.

HankMed arrives at the Seelig home to find Erika collapsed in her workshop and barely breathing. After restoring her breathing, Hank notices her copper necklace is turning green in spots, an indication of potential poisoning from something in her environment. He treats her and Divya contacts health services to analyze her home. Hank informs her that her house must be evacuated. Erika is upset because that will mean they cannot finish the charity benefit, but Evan finds a suitable location (Shadow Pond) to hold the event, which is a big success. Tom tells Erika her work has impressed some designer, but she admits she wants to return to nursing. Tom reveals that the paperwork for Hamptons Heritage changing ownership was just approved and the ER will soon be reopened.

Evan tells Paige that after talking with Dmitry, he and Paige are approved to live in Boris' main building, which will be sitting empty. It is a perfect compromise to give them some privacy and yet be close to Hank. Paige takes a phone call and Evan notices Jeremiah, now in a suit but he still has the beard. Evan learns that Jeremiah's girlfriend is an online girl, whom he has never met in person.

Inside the guest house, Hank experiences some pain while simply trying to lift his jacket off the back of the couch. He decides to lie down and rest and remembers six months earlier on his first day home from the hospital. He had tried convincing Divya that he no longer needed his pain medication but she used medical logic to convince him otherwise.

Hank awakens and joins the charity fashion show party looking for Jeremiah. He talks Jeremiah into prescribing some pain medication for him to help him from the stress of resuming his daily work schedule. Meanwhile Divya receives a troubling call from the insurance company about the results of their medical testing.

Hank stops to congratulate Evan on pulling off the fashion show but Evan gives most of the credit to Dmitry, which causes Hank to stalk off. Meanwhile, Ms. Ballard stops by to deliver a cease and desist order, prohibiting HankMed from operating out of a residential home.

Hank tracks down Dmitry and accuses him of complicity in Boris's death. Dmitry does not take offense and calmly walks away.

Paige finds Divya and tells her she is furious with the insurance company for denying them coverage because of Hank's surgery. Divya tells her the truth, it was not because of Hank, it was because she is pregnant.

Summary: A local cop with a rebellious teenager is Hank's new patient. Evan and Paige settle into their new home while trying to settle their feud with Blythe Ballard. A patient makes an unforeseen offer to HankMed. Divya finds out that life will be more complicated with the new changes in her life.

Morning in the Hamptons. Evan is trying to resolve the cease and desist order over the phone. Divya sees an obstetrician to confirm her pregnancy and Hank tries to go for a run but cannot even make it off Boris' estate.

Hank returns to his house where Jeremiah is waiting to give him a complete physical in order to clear Hank for driving. Hank seems reluctant but Jeremiah is insistent and thorough.

When Divya stops by the main house to see Paige, she finds Paige preparing a formal dinner in the main hall. Paige is eager to learn what Divya's plans are but Divya is cold and tells Paige to butt out.

Hank having been cleared to drive is returning home when he is almost run into by a teenage driver. The girl swerves to miss Hank and rolls her car. Hank tries to check her for injuries but she is angry and wants to leave. Hank insists on calling her parents and is surprised when a police officer arrives and he turns out to be her father. Hank advises the father, Don, to have his daughter Molly checked out by a doctor and offers HankMed's services.

Evan is doing research on zoning ordinances in bed when he hears mysterious noises coming from other parts of the mansion. He wakes Paige who insists it is the house settling but Evan is not convinced.

The next morning Evan is searching for the original lease that Boris granted HankMed to see if it might help with the cease and desist order. Hank comes in from his morning run and Evan is concerned but Hank insists he is fine. Paige arrives and suggests HankMed host an Open House for the neighbors to acquire allies in any zoning fight.

Divya treats a woman who has dislocated her finger. During the exam, Divya sees other symptoms in the woman, Shelby, that concern her. When Divya pushes harder, she learns that Shelby has M.S.

Hank is called by Don to check on Molly who claims to have been throwing up the day following the accident. Don had Molly checked out by their family doctor but is scared so he called Hank. When Hank speaks to Molly, she reveals she lied about the vomiting to get out of summer school. Hank is angry and tells her she should be worried about the stress she is adding to her father's existing ulcers which Hank just learned about.

Hank stops by Hamptons Heritage Hospital to meet with the new lady in charge, who turns out to be Shelby, the woman Divya treated. After some pleasant chit chat, Shelby reveals that the new Hamptons wants to create a concierge department to treat patients in their homes and tells Hank that she wants to buy HankMed.

Hank meets with Evan, Divya and Paige to tell them of Shelby's offer. He and Evan are quite happy refusing the offer but Divya goes into a long speech on how they should take time to consider the offer because big surprises take time to be properly digested. Paige recognizes Divya's speech also refers to her pregnancy and offers her support and everyone agrees to find out more about the offer.

Hank examines Don's abdomen to try to discover the cause of his pain. He notices scarring from a bullet wound and after his exam, suggests there may be some residual internal scarring from the surgery.

Evan and Paige distribute flyers for the open house. When they reach Blythe Ballard's house, the source of the cease and desist order, Evan is wary, but Blythe is polite and graciously accepts their invitation.

Later that night, Evan is awakened by more noises in the mansion. He investigates but is quickly frightened by a sound and retreats from the mansion to find Hank, claiming he heard Boris' ghost. Hank of course, dismisses Evan's ramblings but then reveals his research leads him to believe that Boris and Dmitry are brothers.

The next day, Hank goes to see Dmitry and apologizes for his previous behavior, especially accusing Dmitry's complicity in Boris' death. He uses the visit as an excuse to also suggest that Dmitry should have some blood drawn to verify his medical status before his next foreign trip. Dmitry agrees, not knowing Hank's ulterior motive.

Hank and Evan meet with Shelby to hear more about her offer. They agree to be open minded and she offers to fly someone from HankMed to their flagship hospital in Georgia that is having a community health fair so they can see her company's business practices in action. While there, Hank takes Shelby up on her claim that laboratory processing speed is being increased dramatically to get Dmitry's sample processed.

The HankMed Open House is going well with Evan telling the guests that they don't have to worry about patients racing through their neighborhood, screaming for a doctor when Don arrives in terrific pain, begging for Hank's help. Hank attends to him and after an imaging scan, discovers he has a kidney stone.

Back at the Open House, Evan is distraught that the Open House was a disaster as all the guests quickly left after Don's arrival. He argues with Paige that he is going to get an attorney involved, despite her objections.

Divya apologizes to Paige for lashing out at her earlier. She explains that a childhood accident supposedly prevented her from getting pregnant, and the unexpected news sent her reeling. She is glad for the opportunity to travel to Georgia as Shelby's guest to see the Symphony hospital in action and to get a chance to catch her breath.

That night, Evan calls Hank to the mansion when he hears more noises and voices. Hank informs him the DNA tests reveal Boris and Dmitry are half-brothers. Suddenly Hank also hears the muffled voices, and an investigation finds the security chief Udo erasing security tapes under Dmitry's orders.

Hank contacts one of Boris' cousins in Budapest who is also suspicious of Boris' death, but the man Milos does not want to speak over the phone and both men are too busy to meet.

After Hank's morning run, accompanied by Evan this time, they discover that the Open House was an actual success like Paige suggested, and that everyone was impressed when Hank was immediately available to treat his patient.

Divya returns to her obstetrician to learn that her medical condition is such that her pregnancy may be short lived.

Hank briefs Jeremiah on the offer from Shelby and Symphony regarding HankMed. He also mentions the Georgia trip and talks Jeremiah into attending before Jeremiah learns that Divya will also be going.

Summary:	Hank continues his investigation into Boris' death. Divya and Jeremiah check out a new hospital's modern health care and treat a minor league baseball player. Evan's crusade takes a surprising turn.

Evan and Paige are headed towards Village Hall for the purposes of acquiring a zoning waiver to allow HankMed to continue operating as usual when they encounter Blythe Ballard, the lady who initiated the cease and desist order against HankMed. Blythe tells them she is having second thoughts about her actions to stop HankMed, but has recently discovered that HankMed was never properly documented as a valid business.

When Hank hears the news, he is angry, but Evan assures him he has fixed the problem but HankMed must stop doing business for 72 hours until the paperwork is processed. Hank and Evan return home to find Boris' Porsche sports car being loaded on a transport truck. Hank decides to spend his 72 hours of downtime in Budapest meeting with Milos, one of Boris' cousins who is also suspicious regarding the circumstances of Boris' death.

Divya and Jeremiah arrive in Savannah to attend the Symphony Corporation's health fair and review how they operate their hospital. Jeremiah is clearly nervous being around Divya and has decided to return home later that evening. They meet Mary Kay, who is their Symphony guide who takes them on a tour of Savannah, starting with the local minor league baseball team.

Divya quickly discovers Jeremiah's passion for baseball and his transformation into a more outgoing personality at the ballpark while Jeremiah quickly learns Divya's complete ignorance of the game. While watching the game, a player, Tripp Doby, collapses on the field and Divya and Jeremiah attend to him. During his examination of Tripp, Jeremiah is extremely distracted by Divya and asks her to stand across the room. Jeremiah recommends Tripp go immediately to the hospital for some testing but Tripp begs off and stands to leave and almost collapses again. Divya asks him to try to rise from a seated position with his arms crossed across his chest, but he cannot.

Hank arrives in Budapest and meets with Milos in his elegant villa. After exchanging pleasantries, Hank is surprised to learn Milos is confined to a wheelchair with the same genetic disease common to Boris' family. Milos shows Hank his recent medical tests and Hank recommends a medical device that can help with Milo' weak bones.

Divya and Jeremiah accompany Tripp to the local hospital that they were there to visit and discover a modern facility with no waiting room for patients, due to the claim by the admissions liaison that "no one waits here".

Back home, Paige treats Evan to a picnic on the beach in celebration of the two of them being alone with some privacy for 72 hours. Evan is doubly excited because he has learned about the village council's business practice and is confident he can solve HankMed's zoning problems for good.

In Savannah, Tripp's MRI reveals no problems, but his bloodwork and EMG results won't be finished until the following day. Jeremiah and Tripp talk about baseball with Jeremiah revealing it was one of the few ways he could bond with his father. Tripp notices Jeremiah's constant need to glance at Divya and comments about it, but Jeremiah insists they are only colleagues.

Hank calls Evan from Budapest and leaves a message that everything is well and he is happy he made the trip. As he walks down the street, a man bumps into him, intentionally scraping something across his neck which quickly makes Hank dizzy. Another man approached and forces Hank into the backseat of a car with Dmitry inside.

Hank awakens in a luxurious bedroom, still dizzy and somewhat groggy and he can hear voices coming through the open door. Hank leaves the bedroom where he finds Dmitry talking to a man, who turns out to be Boris!

Jeremiah and Divya attend the health and wellness fair where Jeremiah wanders off on his own. Divya takes the opportunity to speak with the doctor that runs the perinatal center about her risky pregnancy, using an imaginary patient instead of admitting that she is the patient. Divya is hopeful that her recent bouts of nausea are a sign that her HCG levels are rising but learns from the doctor that there is no correlation between the two events.

At the ballpark, Tripp is taking batting practice alone and is still experiencing issues with his balance and strength in his legs.

Boris and Dmitry brief Hank on their deception, explaining that they were trying to discover what family member was trying to kill Boris. Their suspicions have fallen upon Milos, but they have yet to discover what he is truly after, but they suspect it is somewhere on the estate at Shadow Pond.

Evan attends the Village Council meeting hoping to address the council after their regular business is complete, but he is beaten to the lectern by another citizen and thwarted when Blythe waives the five minute limit for public comments. Finally, Evan gets to speak but has only 30 seconds, but he gets his message across anyway. But Blythe throws another roadblock in his way, requesting an environmental impact study on the effects of medical waste in a residential neighborhood.

Divya and Jeremiah are shown their room at the bed and breakfast. Since Jeremiah changed his mind about leaving that evening, his reserved room was already taken which meant the two would have to share Divya's room. When they start to discuss it, Divya tears into Jeremiah, wondering why he is being so cold and distant and lamenting the loss of their friendship. Suddenly nauseas, she rushes into the bathroom and closes the door while Jeremiah whispers that he loves her, and leaves.

Hank and Boris speak while Dmitry leaves for his meeting with Milos. Hank reveals that he knows Boris and Dmitry are brothers, to Boris' surprise. Boris tells him Dmitry was illegitimate and Boris' mother forbid the family from revealing that secret. When Hank asks how he can help, Boris tells him to return home and keep quiet about Boris' deception.

Divya bites the bullet and goes to the local Savannah hospital to see the obstetrician she talked with before. Jeremiah is again at the ballpark where his knowledge leads another man to believe he is a scout. While the two watch, Tripp is hit by a pitch and falls to the ground.

In Budapest, Boris is worried when Dmitry is late returning from his meeting with Milos. Just then, a van carrying Milos arrives and drops Dmitry off at the villa where Boris is staying. Milos is suspicious but Dmitry calms his fears and Milos leaves. Suddenly Dmitry notices pain and blood on his chest and he collapses to the pavement. Hank and Boris rush outside to assist him. Hank tries everything he can, but the bleeding is too severe and Dmitry dies. Boris rushes off to exact revenge but Hank stops him, offering his help to discover what it is that Milos is after.

Divya finds Jeremiah and Tripp in the hospital where Tripp is being treated for a fractured rib from being hit by a pitch. Divya and Jeremiah brainstorm and come up with a possible cause for Tripp's problems.

Evan is moping about his failure with the Village Council to Paige, who convinces him to stop moping. Evan is inspired and decides to run for the vacant council seat, to Paige's dismay.

Jeremiah has lunch with Tripp where he tells him the news about his disease that is causing his problems. Tripp can be treated but will not regain full health. Tripp is okay with that as he is decided to become a coach. Tripp encourages Jeremiah to tell Divya how he feels about her.

Jeremiah decides to take Tripp's advice and goes to find Divya, only to find her alone and crying on a park bench. She reveals she is pregnant and the good news she just got about her HCG levels rising means that she should not lose the baby. The realization stuns her and makes her realize how much she wants to have a child.

Before Hank leaves Budapest he meets with Milos. He gives him some information about the medical device he recommended earlier and tells Milos about a clinical trial that he was going to suggest to Boris before Boris's death, but offers to help Milos apply for it. The two men shake hands.

Production Code: RP504
Summary: A doggy-daycare owner falls ill; Jeremiah works with a wild shock jock; Hank and Evan process Divya's news; Paige pursues a new career; and Shelby reaches out to other potential concierge partners.

Hank has returned home from Budapest when he runs into Shelby Shackelford, the new director of Hamptons Heritage Hospital. She wants to know if HankMed is ready to merge with her medical group and Hank says he needs more time. She tells him not to dally, as she will move forward with a concierge service of her own if HankMed decides to stay independent.

Hank gets a call from Marisa and meets her at a restaurant. They console each other on the loss of Dmitry and Marisa tells Hank he need not risk his life or career to help Boris. Apparently the medical trial that Hank told Milos about is a fake and part of a plan to get Milos arrested for murdering Dmitry. But Hank is adamant that he wants to help his friend Boris, no matter the risk.

At the morning staff meeting, Evan announces that HankMed can resume operations but cannot see patients in their home, Paige says has a chance at a prestigious internship and Hank tells everyone he may have landed Milos as a patient. Divya is content to remain silent until Jeremiah blurts out that she is pregnant. Later Evan complains to Hank that he should have been the one Divya confided in, not Jeremiah.

Hank and Divya visit a new patient, Maya, who was bitten by a dog. Her wound has worsened and when pressed, she reveals the dog was a stray and she is unaware of it's vaccination records. Hank and Divya feel her symptoms are just a bacterial infection, but they take blood and saliva samples and give her a rabies shot just in case. As they leave, Hank tries to be supportive but Divya assures him she has everything under control regarding her pregnancy.

Paige arrives for her internship interview with Russell Berger and manages to say the wrong thing every time she opens her mouth.

Jeremiah makes a house call to a radio disc jockey named Garrett who has discomfort in his throat, a major problem for someone who relies on his voice for a living. Jeremiah examines Garrett and finds nothing major wrong, but is unsettled when he finds himself on the radio. Garrett and his partner Kiki have an important interview with a famous disc jockey who Kiki wants to utilize to further their career.

Hank and Divya return to see Maya whose symptoms are worse. Divya suspects meningitis and Hank does a spinal tap. The procedure reveals an abnormal buildup of spinal fluid and Hank orders a CT scan. The CT is normal but before they can give Maya the news, Shelby stops by with Dr. Paul Van Dyke, giving him a tour of the facility as an enticement for employment.

At the internship interview, Paige is given a task to verify her capabilities and knowledge, and she clearly has trepidations. While in the middle of the task, she calls Evan to update him but is caught by Russell, who takes her phone away, acting the part of strict taskmaster.

Hank and Evan run into each other at a maternity store where they are both looking to buy her things she will need for her baby. Hank insists Evan is freaking out and that they really just need to make sure Divya and her baby are safe and loved.

While the two brothers shop, Divya runs into Paul after his hospital tour where he asks her out. He is relentless and she finally tells him she is pregnant, but he thinks she is just using a line to get rid of him. She later visits Maya, who is being kept at the hospital but who desperately wants to go home. She fears the worst, rabies, and Divya does her best to console her.

Hank, Eva, Divya and Jeremiah all arrive at the beach party being hosted by the radio station that Garrett and Kiki work for. Jeremiah is concerned that Garrett's behavior is a sign that he missed something, but Evan assures him it is just part of his act. Divya gets a call that Maya checked out of the hospital against medical advice before she even learned that she does not have rabies and decides to go find her, scolding Hank and Evan when they try to assist her.

Divya finds Maya at her home where she runs her dog business. Maya is lying on the grass, holding one of her dogs and complaining of blindness. Hank arrives to take her to the hospital while Divya waits at her home until an assistant can arrive. When the assistant arrives, Divya learns Maya took care of a cat and when questioned, admitted to being scratched. Hank does a quick examination and declares she probably has what is commonly known as "cat scratch fever".

At the beach party, Garrett collapses and stops breathing. While Evan calls for paramedics, Jeremiah jumps into action and revives Garrett, then learns that Kiki did something to the honey he puts in his tea as a practical joke.

Russell reviews Paige's work on her task and is impressed, then starts to give out another assignment. Paige objects, saying she came for an interview, not to work all day. She is surprised and delighted when he then reveals that she is hired and this is her first day of work.

Evan and Jeremiah visit Garrett in the hospital who is on his way to recovery. Later, Jeremiah admits he doesn't understand Garrett and Kiki's relationship, and then reveals that he was dishonest with Evan about his feelings for Divya, it was more than a crush, he is in love with her.

Hank and Divya bring some of Maya's dogs to visit her at the hospital where she is recovering. Hank runs into Shelby and asks if they can compromise and rent some space in the hospital for HankMed while he gets to know the new hospital administration better. Shelby agrees but keeps insisting she won't wait forever.

Production Code: RP505
Summary: While Divya treats a conductor whose music obsession may be harmful, Hank continues to treat Officer Don's health problems. Evan's run for Village Council continues to be stymied.

Evan, Divya and Paige are attending a youth orchestra performance where Evan is more interested in observing his nemesis Blythe Ballard than listening to the music. Hank is late and runs into Don O'Shea, the police officer who he treated for kidney stones and has failed to follow up with Hank. Don is keeping an eye on the crowd as well as his teenage daughter Molly who is picking up trash from the event as community service and attracting unwanted (by Don) teenage boy attention in the form of Slack, a neighbor kid.

Paige sees her boss Russell and stops to talk with him. He is enjoying the concert but is experiencing migraine headaches. He complains about an upcoming task he has overseeing the packing and shipment of an expensive painting and Paige volunteers to take on that task.

Evan speaks with Blythe who is aware of his plans to run for the recently vacated village council seat. Evan lets himself be manipulated once again by Blythe who convinces him he should try to get 300 signatures of support rather than simply paying a filing fee.

During a performance, the enthusiastic conductor, Santi, loses his balance and falls off the stage. Hank and Divya rush to help him but he insists he is okay and continues conducting. Meanwhile, Don observes his daughter's unwanted suitor stealing a bottle of wine but he is physically unable to catch him.

The next day at the staff meeting, Divya reveals Santi was diagnosed with a minor concussion. The conversation leads to Divya being accused of fawning over the man like a groupie but Divya is not embarrassed. Evan gets three of his signatures from his the HankMed staff and assumes the task will be easy.

Paige gets the address where the painting is being packed and it turns out to be Blythe Ballard's home. At first, Evan is adamant she not go there, then considers that she might be able to find dirt on his nemesis. Paige isn't playing that game, however.

Hank stops by to examine Don and hears he is having shortness of breath, is light headed and experiences blurry vision. Hank tells him to stop the diuretics he has been taking for the kidney stones and Don is pleased, tired of taking the pills. Hank commiserates, relating his desire to stop his medications after his recent surgery. When Don asked him if he is completely off meds, Hank pauses then lies, telling Don yes.

Evan quickly learns that getting his 300 signatures will not be as easy as he thought when he finds out that summertime residents are usually registered elsewhere and cannot sign his form.

Paige arrives to oversee the packing of the painting and Blythe quickly eases the tension with grace, telling Paige the painting was her grandmother's and revealing she is sad she has no choice but to sell it.

Divya follows up with Santi who appears to have suffered no permanent effects from his concussion. As Divya prepares to leave, Santi gets dizzy and nearly falls. Divya examines him and cannot find anything but suggests he see an audiologist.

Hank meets Don on his break and checks blood oxygen level which is poor. Don is also coughing now and Hank recommends a chest X-ray. Don relates how his relationship with Molly has been so good for so long until recently, where she is always angry.

Paige overhears Blythe on the phone and learns she is going through a bitter divorce with her husband of 36 years. Paige is sympathetic and Blythe is gracious with her as always. Paige realizes Blythe's recent enmity against Evan is coming from the pain and turmoil of her divorce and suggests she take one more day with her beloved painting.

Hank is driving Don to get his x-ray when Don receives a call from Molly at the marina where she is in trouble. When they arrive, Don learns that Slack's father is drunk and has taken his family hostage. Don takes charge of the situation and talks the father down, but not without experiencing blurred vision that made his job almost impossible to do. Hank's exam reveals swelling and red color in the eyes including the irises, but is not sure of the cause.

Divya stops to see Santi who missed his audiologist appointment. During their conversation, Divya learns that Santi is experiencing hearing loss, and the revelation devastates Santi who is concerned he may go deaf. Divya tells him not to leap to the worst conclusion, but insists he needs to get checked out before he leaves with the kids on their tour.

Hank meets Evan for lunch who is having second thoughts about running for office. The restaurant owner stops by and complains to Evan about the same restrictive zoning laws that HankMed is facing. Evan assures him he wants to make changes and earns a signature, and a confidence boost.

When Paige tells Russell that Blythe is taking one more day he is upset, telling her she was supposed to do her job, not get emotionally involved. Paige then realizes that Russell got her to work with Blythe because he also would have gotten emotional.

Santi is working in his studio when he gets dizzy again, this time more severe. Hank and Divya arrive and he reveals he was mixing tracks when the spell occurred. Divya suspects that certain sounds are inducing the vertigo he is experiencing. Some quick tests suggest Santi may have cracked a bone in his inner ear when he fell and sustained the concussion. Hank recommends a higher definition scan to confirm and tells Santi the condition is fixable.

Paige finishes up crating the painting and notices a delicate bowl that Blythe uses as a soap dish. Paige feels the bowl may be more valuable and suggests Blythe get it appraised as it is probably worth more than the painting.

The results of Don's x-ray leads Hank to believe he is suffering from sarcoidosis, a chronic inflammation usually in the lungs or lymph nodes. Hank takes the opportunity to come clean with Don, revealing that he too is still taking medicine for his symptoms.

Paige returns home to tell Evan that Blythe admitted to being overzealous in her actions against HankMed and was willing to help expedite their paperwork. Instead of being grateful, Evan sees this action as concern that Evan will take over the council. Paige tries to calm him down but Evan is more convinced than ever that he needs to win the election.

While jogging on the beach, Hank runs into Molly who demands to know what is wrong with her father. Hank cannot tell her of course, which makes her even angrier. Hank tries to give her a life lesson from his own experience but the lesson seems to be lost on her.

Production Code: RP506
Summary: Hank treats an diet drink magnate who he suspects is under a lot of pressure. Jeremiah's diagnosis of Divya's neighbor hits close to home for Divya. One of Evan's critics has an accident. Hank makes a business decision.

Hank meets with Boris in the city where they discuss the phony clinical trial that Hank and Boris' wife Marisa are setting up with the cooperation of the FDA to snare Milos. Boris is not fully satisfied, however, because even if Milos gets arrested, Boris will still not know what Milos was ultimately after.

Divya is leaving home for work when she encounters her neighbor Sandra, a single mother and her son Max. Max is experiencing nosebleeds and a quick examination reveals only a little inflammation.

Evan is holding a rally in the park to drum up support for his election campaign. Divya and Jeremiah are there where they meet informally with Shelby and Dr. Eugene Sims from Symphony corporation. Dr. Sims is Shelby's boss and he is pushing her to make a decision on the concierge department that Symphony wants to start at Hamptons Heritage hospital. Shelby really wants HankMed to fill that role and asks Divya to help her convince Hank, but Divya says she is on her own.

Evan starts his speech when Pat, a man in the crowd, starts heckling Evan about environmental issues. An umbrella awning comes loose and tumbles across the grass and Pat is impaled by the wooden pole. Pat screams for Evan to pull out the pole which he does, and Hank gives him a scolding for it. Hank, Jeremiah and Divya attend to the wound while Evan frets about the PR disaster. Evan asks Paige if she will ask her father to speak with Evan and give him some advice.

Hank and Divya meet with Minnie, a woman complaining about abdominal pain. She markets a brand of low calorie alcoholic beverages and recently returned from Mexico, where she became sick from drinking the water. Hank suspects she is suffering from an ordinary stomach virus and tries to give her some medical advice when her overbearing boyfriend Todd shows up. He is a personal trainer and nutritionist and insists on Minnie following his regimen of unprocessed foods and supplements and thinks doctors are quacks.

Paige meets with her father, a retired four star General and now a Senator. She asks him to speak to Evan and give him a pep talk. The General is reluctant but agrees, since Evan is family now.

Divya tries to sleep but she can hear Max coughing through the thin walls of her apartment.

Hank is on the phone with Marisa where he is complementing her on the details of the fake clinical trial. Evan overhears part of the conversation and demands to know what is going on. Hank relents and tells him the whole story. Evan is stunned but quickly offers to help. Hank insists there is nothing for him to do, that he is not part of the plan.

Hank returns to see Minnie who has a rash on her legs. He prescribes a treatment but wants to investigate the cause, not just treat the symptoms. As they speak, Todd interrupts again and it comes out that Minnie didn't get sick in Mexico because of drinking the water, she got sick from drinking too much local Mexican beer.

Evan returns to the main house where he starts looking around, trying to guess what Milos was looking for when the General finds him. The General's attempts to speak to Evan seem to no longer be required as Evan is very calm about the whole incident, claiming the event seems small with distance now that he has larger concerns to worry about. The General is impressed and pleased with Evan's apparent maturity.

Hank stops to check on Pat's progress and finds the stitches in his side are in good order. Pat is complaining of backaches, however, so Hank examines him and finds what he thinks is tear in the inner wall of the aorta. Hank convinces Pat to accompany him to the hospital.

Divya asks Jeremiah to examine Max. When Max coughs, he has blood in his sputum and Jeremiah is concerned enough to order a battery of tests. Max gets on the floor to play and Jeremiah joins him, then quickly smells something that leads him to discover black mold growing under the carpet. Sandra and Max will have to find someplace else to stay, as will Divya who lives next door.

Evan shows Hank an item he found in the mansion and claims it is probably what Milos was looking for. Hank is upset and tells him to stop screwing around and stick with the plan.

Paige and her father are playing golf where Paige reveals she really wanted the General to scare Evan out of running for office. He offers to try again but she tells him no, that is her job.

At the next morning's staff meeting, Divya relates how she is now homeless. All three men offer to put her up but she insists on staying at a cheap motel. The discussion then turns to Minnie's condition. Evan jokingly suggests she is on the Mexican tapeworm diet and after some discussion, the staff thinks her boyfriend Todd may have dosed her without her knowledge.

Hank and Jeremiah go to the party Minnie is hosting to promote her beverages. Jeremiah runs into Shelby and after a few drinks, starts spilling all the personal details about Hank that led him to the Hamptons. Hank asks Minnie if she intentionally ingested a tapeworm in Mexico and she denies it. He also asks Todd who also denies it. Hank gets a thought and asks Todd to show him the picture of Minnie in the Mexican bar and while they look at it, Minnie collapses on stage.

At the hospital, x-rays reveal parasitic worms in her intestines from the shellfish she ate in Mexico. Luckily the condition was caught in time and she can be completely cured.

Evan and Paige stop by the hospital to visit Pat, who is grateful for Hank's efforts and is willing to listen to Evan's platform. When Evan states he is just trying to ensure that the council has more that just Blythe Ballard's voice. Pat thoughtfully agrees, which pleases Evan, and distresses Paige.

Paige finally snaps and tells Evan she can no longer be the silent, smiling wife standing by her man's side anymore. Evan understands and tells her she doesn't have to constantly be by his side.

Hank speaks with Shelby in the hospital who relates to him her story about ending up with Symphony. Her story sounds suspiciously similar to Hank's story about how he ended up in the Hamptons but she doesn't reveal anything about Jeremiah's indiscretion. Hank is won over and tells her he will have his attorney look over the contract offer she made HankMed.

Evan gives another rally where Sandra and Max stop by to speak with Hank and Divya. He is much improved now and Sandra tells Divya that being a single parent is tough, but rewarding. A hungover Jeremiah stops by to give Divya a set of keys for his home, as she has decided to stay with him. Paige arrives and shows the catalog she prepared for an upcoming auction. The catalog is a detailed accounting of an estate and it gives Hank and Evan an idea. When Boris faked his death, a similar catalog was prepared for his estate and Hank suggests they use it with Milos in an attempt to find out what he is after.

Production Code: RP507
Summary: Hank treats a spin instructor while Divya helps a candy maker. Keller's negotiating techniques irritate Hank. Paige makes a major purchase that upsets Evan.

Divya is staying with Jeremiah while her apartment is being treated for mold and quickly learns he is a bit obsessive/compulsive. The flowers and cashmere blanket she left in the common living area were returned and left outside her bedroom door. She asks him to join her for some cocoa but he declines.

Hank receives a call from Milos about the clinical trial. Milos is upset that he must travel to the United States to participate but Hank is adamant. That is the whole reason for the phony trial, to get Milos on US soil.

Paige and her boss Russell, along with others of their team are busy cataloging every item in Boris' estate as bait for Milos. Boris knows Milos is after something at his mansion and has faked his death to lure him out. Paige worries they will never finish in time but Russell is an old pro and has no worries.

Hank, Evan and Divya are on a conference call with Ken Keller, who is representing them in their sale of HankMed to Symphony Health. Ken is talking business while riding a stationary bike along with a dozen other people in a health class. His constant talking annoys one of the other participants who sprays water in Ken's face. When Ken reaches for the man, he loses his balance and receives a serious gash in the back of one calf. Hank hears Ken scream in pain and jumps up to go attend him.

Hank arrives at the health club and stitches up the cut in Ken's leg. Hank also tells him he is meeting with Shelby from Symphony Health the next day and Ken insists he be there while negotiations are underway.

Divya stops by to see her friend Greer, who owns her own bakery shop. Greer called Divya when she thought she was having a panic attack. Divya checks her vital signs and concludes Greer is just stressed with the running of her burgeoning business.

Paige and Russell are talking by her car where she shows him a piece of art in her trunk that she is considering buying. The seller is marking down the price by 75% in appreciation for Paige's work but she wants to confer with Evan first. Russell convinces her to jump on the deal before the seller changes their mind.

At the health club, Hank is approached by the bicycling class leader Ben, who is having some pain in his jaw and thinks it might be TMJ. A quick examination rules that out and Hank suggests Ben is having a tooth problem.

Divya has brought her boxed belongings back to Hank's house because she doesn't want to try to store them at Jeremiah's place. Jeremiah's sense of order is too painstaking to deal with. She also informs Hank that the removal of the mold in her place is a blessing in disguise as it will allow the modification of a room into a nursery and she gets to pick out the color of the paint.

At home, Evan and Paige get into a big fight when Evan learns how much the piece of art costs that Paige bought using their emergency funds.

Hank and Ken meet with Shelby about the line items in the proposed contract. Ken is confrontational about every single paragraph and the meeting quickly dissolves.

The next day Paige takes the piece of art with her to work and tells Russell she needs to sell it. He reluctantly agrees to find a buyer for her.

Hank revisits Ben who tells him his dentist found no problem. Hank suggests early onset arthritis might be possible and suggests taking a blood sample. As Ben walks over to the table, Hank notices his pained gait and Ben admits having some tingling and numbness in his feet. Hank recommends a CT scan and Ben accepts.

Divya revisits Greer who is having a stressful day and is behind on her confectioneries commitments. She is coughing from a small oven fire but Divya is concerned and recommends a chest x-ray and pulmonary test. When Greer again expresses her concern over not having an oven to finish her baking, Divya calls Jeremiah and gets permission to use his kitchen.

Jeremiah hangs up his phone and wonders why he just agreed to Divya's request. Evan tells him it's obvious, because it was Divya who asked.

Divya and Greer work in Jeremiah's kitchen and are making good progress, working well together. Suddenly Greer starts choking on a sample piece of candy and Divya struggles with her to perform the Heimlich, finally succeeding not before knocking all of the finished product onto the floor. She takes Greer to the hospital and finds a problem with her esophagus and recommends a treatment.

When Divya returns to Jeremiah's place, she finds him there staring at the disaster she made of his kitchen. She promises to clean it and restore its pristine condition and Jeremiah turns and walks away without speaking a word.

Evan tries to make up with Paige but she gives him the cold shoulder. The next day, Paige decides she made a mistake asking Russell to sell the art and she really wants to keep it. Unfortunately, Russell has already sold the piece.

Hank finds Divya sleeping on his lounge chair and she tells him about the disaster she made in Jeremiah's kitchen. Hank offers to let her stay with him but she tells him she is better alone.

Hank participates in Ben's next cycling class and is joined by Ken and Shelby. The two start fighting again and Hank banishes them to a room to settle their differences. While exercising, Ben suddenly experiences a shooting pain in his neck and falls from the bike. Hank calls for paramedics. At the hospital, an MRI finds Ben's problem and Hank assures him he can return to teaching his exercise classes with the proper medication.

Divya checks on Greer who is back in business and feeling much better.

Paige returns home to discover Evan was the buyer of her art piece, and he has it proudly on display in their home.

Divya returns to Jeremiah's for the last of her things and he talks her into staying, saying she was only just nesting due to her pregnancy.

Hank visits Shelby at her hotel suite and delivers the signed contracts. He is surprised to see Ken is there, obviously having been intimate with Shelby. Shelby tells Hank that she got a call from a doctor in Hungary about a clinical trial and she told the doctor she had no knowledge about it.

Later, HankMed and Shelby celebrate the contract signing with champagne. Hank gets a call and excuses himself. Evan follows a few minutes later and Hank reveals that Boris' surveillance team has lost track of Milos and has no idea where he is, information that greatly concerns Hank regarding everyone's safety.

Summary:	An unforeseen visitor to Shadow Pond forces Hank, Evan and Paige to work together like never before. When Divya treats an elderly couple she realizes how her own life has changed in unexpected ways.

In the middle of the night, Evan stumbles upon a meeting between Hank and Boris. It is the first time Evan has seen Boris since he faked his death. They all talk about Milos and agree to stick to the plan of trying to lure him out with the fake clinical trial and auction.

The next morning, Hank and Evan bicker over the need for secrecy. Evan wants to tell Paige that her efforts for the auction are just for show but Hank is insistent. After Divya and Paige leave to treat one of Russell's assistants who cut himself, Evan answers a knock on the door and finds Milos has arrived.

Hank welcomes Milos and hustles Evan out of the house, telling him to inform Boris that Milos was at Shadow Pond.

Divya sees to the cut on Wade's finger, then is surprised when Paige tells her that Wade was flirting with her.

Hank does a preliminary examination of Milos while gently probing him about how long he has been in the country. Hank offers him the guest room to rest for a few hours.

Divya visits Bert and Bea Jones, new patients to HankMed. Bea is experiencing a fever and pain in her joints. She fears she may have rheumatoid arthritis, since her mother also suffered from the disease. Divya lays out a diagnostic plan and begins her examination.

Paige ushers all of Russell's assistants out of the mansion and thanks them for their hard work in preparing for the auction. A knock on the door reveals Milos, who has not gone to Hank's guest room to rest after all. When Paige learns he is Boris' cousin, she offers to give him a private tour.

Evan calls Paige and learns she is alone with Milos and panics. He is stuck in his car behind a broken down truck and calls Hank. Hank thinks he is being paranoid until he checks the guest room and finds it empty. Meanwhile Evan leaves his car and runs to the mansion, finally locating Paige and Milos and accidentally knocks both to the floor. As Hank arrives, Milos complains of pain in his knee.

Divya gets called back by Bea Jones who is having breathing problems. Divya tells Bea that the x-rays that were taken showed no signs of rheumatoid arthritis. Divya politely asks how the couple met and learns details that makes her a bit sad that she will be having a baby alone. Bea also has a rash that Divya discovers may have been caused by sexual activity with Bert, who is taking penicillin for his strep throat. Suddenly Bea's breathing problems increase and paramedics are called.

Milos' x-rays reveal no broken bones and he is very cordial with Evan and Paige. Paige invites him to dinner and to stay with them in the mansion. When Milos asks if he can buy something from the auction in advance, Paige reluctantly says no, it is against her company's policy.

Bea's condition is stabilized at the hospital, but she is kept overnight for observation, over her objections.

Evan, Paige and Milos have lunch in the garden. Paige and Milos are ebullient, while Evan is a nervous wreck. Inside the mansion's security room, Boris and Hank watch via security cameras where Hank tries to get Boris to have Milos arrested because he worries for Evan and Paige's safety. Boris demurs, wanting to discover what Milos is really after.

The day of the auction arrives and Russell is finalizing details with Paige when Milos arrives. Milos wants to bid anonymously on an item and Russell tells him how he can do so remotely, via the Internet. This pleases Milos as he doesn't want to stay longer than necessary, and he wants to conceal what item he is interested in.

Divya stops to see Bert and take him to the hospital to visit Bea when he complains of pain in his hands. Divya remembers Bert mentioning his shoes no longer fit and an examination suggests he is suffering from a post-strep infection that is affecting his kidneys.

Hank sees Milos leaving and tries to get him to stay but Milos is insistent, telling Hank that business calls and the clinical trial was a long shot anyway. Suddenly Paige arrives saying that her boss Russell has been hurt. Hank does a quick examination and thinks Russell has a concussion. Milos asks if the auction will be delayed and Russell tells him no, that Paige will take over.

The auction begins and Milos is in attendance with Paige explaining to the bidders that remote bidding is no longer an option. As Hank and Boris wait to see what Milos is interested in, they are surprised when he bids on multiple items.

During a break in the auction, Milos begins frantically searching several of the items he purchased. Paige brings him the last item and Milos accuses her of taking something from an item during her cataloging process. He is very upset and Paige backs away just as Evan enters the room and retrieves Paige to resume the auction. Left alone, Milos lets his frustration show as Hank and Boris watch via camera. Milos leaves the room and Boris and Hank enter, where Boris realizes all the items purchased by Milos are time related. Boris remembers an old Bavarian myth that Boris told Milos as children about a magic elixir that could produce immortality if stored within a clock. Hank realizes Milos is also suffering from dementia.

One last item is bid upon by Milos when Boris suddenly appears with a higher bid. Milos turns to see a strong, healthy Boris and he is furious, accusing Boris of having the cure for the family disease and keeping it to himself. Suddenly security people with guns are everywhere and they take Milos into custody.

Divya visits Bea and Bert at the hospital who are on their way to recovery. Bea gives Divya advice not to worry so much about being alone at the moment, but to live her life because you can never tell what is around the corner.

Evan thanks Boris for letting Paige know what was going on. A series of flashbacks reveals that the entire auction, the attendees, even Russell's accident were all staged as a sting to discover Milos' goal. Evan and Paige step aside where Paige expresses her disappointment that Evan was not the one to tell her what was happening.

Boris tries to reason with Milos before he is taken away but Milos does not believe there is no cure and accuses Boris of lying to him.

Summary:	A florist with colorful dreams is Hank's new patient. Evan preps for a debate with Divya's help. Jeremiah is concerned about Hank's dependence on drugs for his post-surgical pain.

The scene opens with Milos being chased through the woods by Boris. The pursuit leaves the woods onto the road leaving Shadow Pond. The gate closes and Boris catches Milos and begins strangling him. The car Boris is riding in jostles him awake and he realizes he has been day-dreaming.

At Hank's Evan and Paige are prepping for his upcoming debate with his principal opponent. Paige insists she hasn't time to help him since she needs to restore Boris' mansion to its pre-auction state. Evan gets a Tweet and leaves to post more of his campaign signs, skipping a meeting at Hamptons Heritage and sending Jeremiah in his stead.

Hank goes to Hamptons Heritage to relieve Jeremiah at the meeting and finds him walking in the hallway, the meeting already concluded. They encounter Shelby who chastises Hank for not being there as Hank is the head of the concierge department. A florist named Felix stops and delivers a flower to Shelby from Ken Keller, then continues down the hall. Suddenly Hank and Jeremiah hear Felix scream and rush to his aid where he is lying on the floor, impaled with cactus spines.

As they work on Felix, he tells them this is not his first run-in with a cactus plant and he worried about his eyesight which recently checked out fine. Daisy, a nurse stops to help and Felix takes immediate notice, amusing Hank. Hank leaves to meet with Boris but reminds Jeremiah that Hank has run out of pain medication that Jeremiah prescribed for him.

Evan hangs one of his signs at a public boardwalk where he spots the political blogger Ally, who he is following on Twitter. She complains of a headache and Evan tries to help her using one of Hank's tricks but he only makes things worse.

Hank and Boris visit Milos at the secure medical facility where he is being treated and evaluated. They expect Milos to apologize but he seems to think he and Boris are still children.

Divya arrives after Evan's call to check on Ally. She recommends Ibuprofen and tells her to call if the headaches get worse or more frequent. As they leave, Evan is mortified and feels Divya should have done more to impress Ally and help his political aspirations. Before Divya can escape, Evan talks her into helping him prepare for the debate.

Hank arrives home at the end of the day to find Jeremiah waiting for him. Jeremiah has been thorough and checked the calendar and claims Hank shouldn't need a refill for the pain medication yet. Hank tells him he has taken extra on "bad" days but Jeremiah is afraid Hank is becoming addicted. Hank becomes defensive and storms away, without his refill prescription.

Both Hank and Jeremiah arrive separately at Felix's flower business, each thinking he was supposed to do the follow-up. They learn that Felix hit puberty early and was socially awkward as a child, using his knowledge of flowers to try to socialize. Each doctor has a test they want to perform on Felix and he picks up on the tension between the two doctors.

Divya helps Evan with his debate on the lawn of the mansion and Evan quickly learns how he should emphasize positive points rather than focus on negative ones. He is amazed with Divya's skills. Inside, Paige is replacing items that were to be auctioned and sees the two working together, laughing and clowning around and she seems both guilty and worried.

Hank is drying some blood from Boris in his ongoing treatment of the potential genetic disease prevalent in his family. Boris is sad regarding Milos condition and it reminds him of his father just before he died. Hank tells him he is not sick yet, and he shouldn't let the potential disease affect how he lives his life.

Hank and Jeremiah visit Felix who has agreed to a sleep study. Daisy is there, attaching him to various leads and sensors and Felix is clearly smitten. Everyone leaves and Felix dreams of his flower store with magnificent, colorful flowers everywhere and Daisy standing there waiting for him. Suddenly some plants grab him and he screams, but only in his dream, causing the instruments to move erratically.

At home, Hank is unable to get to sleep, the pain he is experiencing too intense. He reaches for his pain medication and discovers he has one pill left. He bites it in half and swallows it, hoping it will be enough.

Evan attends a Red Hat Society event, a women's organization as Evan learns to his chagrine. He is upset to see Ally being friendly with his nemesis Blythe Ballard, as well as his election opponent. He calls Paige for support and tells her they can meet for lunch when he notices Ally collapse. He rushes to help her, telling Paige he needs Divya.

Hank apologizes to Jeremiah the next day about his little tantrum. Jeremiah tries to show him a biofeedback machine to help Hank when Felix's sleep study results arrive via e-mail. They reveal that Felix is suffering seizures and needs an MRI immediately.

Divya attends Ally and wraps her now sprained ankle while Evan tries to be charming to the other ladies. He fails miserably.

Hank and Jeremiah drive to pick up Felix and find him walking in the middle of the road, having a seizure. Hank pulls him out of traffic and they fall with Felix receiving a black eye. An examination reveals Felix has lost vision in one eye due to increased cranial pressure. They relieve the pressure in the field while waiting on the paramedics.

Divya gives Evan a much needed pep talk before the debate. As Ally initiates the proceedings, she unknowingly says the word purple instead of person and doesn't realize it.

Hank and Jeremiah visit Felix in his hospital room where they give him the news that he has a medical condition that has been causing all his problems since childhood, and which can be treated with medication. Daisy arrives with some flowers and with Hank's prompting, Felix uses his flower knowledge as an icebreaker.

Paige tells Boris she is sorry it is taking so long to replace all the items in their original location. He tells her not to worry, as he is leaving to spend time with his wife and son and won't be back until the Fall. He tells her that she and Evan are welcome to stay in his mansion for the rest of the Summer and gives her a present for all her hard work.

Evan is doing well in the debate with Hank and Divya in attendance. Divya shows Hank the tweets that Ally was sending and tells Hank about the headaches and her recent fall. Hank agrees she has a major problem and they pull her away from the debate to take her to the hospital, much to Evan's annoyance.

Blythe Ballard arrives to visit Ally and runs into Evan and Divya. She is sweet to Divya and condescending to Evan, clearly trying to get into his head but this time he doesn't fall for her manipulations.

Shelby visits Hank at home, bringing dinner so they can eat and talk about some policies she wants to implement since he is so hard to pin down. Shelby wants to expand the concierge department over the next five years, and Hank seems to be amenable.

Boris visits Milos again, this time taking pity on the sick man and telling him once again the same story he used to recite when they were children.

Jeremiah stops by to see Hank, bringing him 5 pain pills and asking Hank to let him really help solve his pain control issue, and not just prescribe narcotics for him. Hank seems really grateful and after Jeremiah leaves, Hank immediately rushes to his bathroom to take a pill where he sees himself in the mirror, an addict.

Summary: Evan tags along with Divya as she travels to Italy to tell her mother about her pregnancy. Molly disappears and Hank lends a hand in the search.

Hank enters a Pain Management Center without telling his family or friends. He starts filling out paperwork but another patient starts asking him questions and Hank loses his nerve and leaves, afraid of being labeled an addict.

Evan and Paige are having breakfast when Evan probes gently about Paige's weekend plans. Evan's birthday is coming up and he quickly discerns that Paige has a surprise for him. She admits to the surprise but refuses to tell him anything else, asking him to trust her.

At the HankMed staff meeting, Divya reveals that her mother now has a rich Italian boyfriend, and he has invited all of HankMed to Tuscany for the weekend using his private jet. Hank begs off, saying he has too much work, but insists Divya go so she can break the news of her pregnancy in person to her mother. Divya invites Evan who thinks this is part of his birthday surprise and he tries to be nonchalant while agreeing, secretly excited.

While driving, Hank sees Molly O'Shea waiting for a bus. He stops to offer her a ride but she demurs, instead confiding her concerns about her father's health. As Hank drives off, Molly resumes trying to hitch a ride.

Evan calls Paige who is working in Manhattan to "invite" her on the Italy trip, purely as a formality since he thinks she is behind it all. Paige is surprised and a bit confused but promises to try to get away and meet him at the airport. She is also a little jealous when she hears it is just Evan and Divya traveling together.

Hank visits Molly's father, Don O'Shea, who he has been treating for some time. A portable EKG machine reveals some concerns and Hank recommends an MRI for Don's heart.

At work, Paige learns her current job will entail much more time than expected, and her boss Russell insists that their company caters to wealthy clients, which means Paige will need to miss the Italy trip. She calls Evan to tell him and he thinks she is playing games and is hiding somewhere on the plane. When he doesn't find her, he still thinks this is part of her surprise.

Hank stops to see Don who has missed his MRI appointment. He learns that Molly is missing and Don thinks she has gone back to their old house that is being demolished. Hank volunteers to drive him there.

In Italy, Evan and Divya are lost and ask a young man for directions. The young man turns out to be the nephew of her mother's new boyfriend and promises to take them to the villa.

Hank and Don find Molly injured in the house where her leg has broken through the floor. The first attempts to free her fail and there is no cell service to call for help. Hank has only morphine to give her for pain, then remembers his personal medication and gives her one of his few hydrocodone pills.

Evan and Divya arrive at the villa where Evan is surprised to see Divya's mother Rubina, suddenly wondering if this trip is really about him.

After the pain medicine takes hold, the men free Molly who has a laceration on her leg. Hank wraps the wound and they head for a local hospital.

In Italy, Rubina breaks the news that she and Marcello want to get married if both of their divorces come through. Divya is surprised but happy for her mother but does not join in the toast. When asked she reveals she is pregnant. Everyone assumes Evan is the father since he is the one who accompanied her. Divya reveals she had a fling and that Evan is not the father. Evan pulls Divya aside and learns that his assumption about the weekend was totally wrong and runs off to try and call Paige and apologize.

On the way to the hospital, Molly who is loopy from the pain medication, grabs the steering wheel and causes Hank to lose control of the car and drive into deep sand. Hank and Don try to free the car but the effort causes Don to have a heart attack. Hank uses his portable defibrillator to restart Hank's heart while Molly calls 911.

In Italy, Evan is sick from the food and the copious amounts of wine he drank. He and Divya are headed for the airport but Evan needs to stop and vomit. He finally gets a call from Paige and the conversation leads Paige to believe that Evan's apology is not about the weekend, but for something else involving Divya and lots of wine. Before Evan can explain, he loses the connection.

Evan and Divya have a heartfelt talk when their car refuses to start. Evan wonders why he and Paige are having difficulties, while at the same time he tries to comfort Divya who is scared to death of motherhood.

In Manhattan, Paige confides to Russell about her and Evan's difficulties and tells him about the real birthday present. He is sympathetic and tries to lighten her mood.

Evan and Divya stop a farm truck and ask for a ride. The farmer agrees but says Evan must ride in back with his pigs.

Evan arrives home to find Paige in bed, apparently asleep. He finds a cupcake on the nightstand with a birthday candle in it. He lights the candle, intent on waking her up then changes his mind and blows out the candle. As the camera pans away, we see she is awake and ignoring him.

Divya and her mother speak quietly in Italy where Divya confesses the pregnancy has her off balance. Rubina assures her she will be a good mother and Divya tells she is happy about the child.

At Hamptons Heritage hospital, Hank speaks with the ER doctor about Don, who is stable and should recover quickly. Hank watches Molly through the window, who is speaking with Shelby Shackelford and two police officers. Shelby enters the room and tells Hank that Molly has told the police that Hank gave her some of his pain medication, and the police insist Hank submit to a toxicology screen.

Summary: Hanks favors aggressive treatment for Don's condition. Evan contacts Eddie in his endeavor to help Hank while Divya learns a long-kept secret.

Hank looks upon Don who is in the hospital on a ventilator when a nurse stops by with a letter from Shelby Shackelford. Hank opens and reads it with a stunned look on his face.

Paige finds Evan ironing some clothes and gives him a cup of tea. Both try to be supportive of each other but avoid talking about what is bothering them both.

Jeremiah finds Divya having breakfast outside, breaking their usual morning routine. He tells her he is waiting for a call from a surgeon he has been trying to speak with. He then mentions a pamphlet he noticed on the kitchen table regarding a Lamaze class. When Divya says she is going to sign up, he volunteers to be her partner. Jeremiah's phone rings and a look of concern passes over his face as he listens to the what the caller tells him.

Hank asks Evan to meet him at the hospital where he tells him the police tox screen came up positive. Jeremiah stops by and Hank comes clean with Evan and then Jeremiah. Evan learns Hank has been taking pain killers and Jeremiah learns Hank went to a pain clinic to get more when the five pills Jeremiah gave him ran out. Hank then quickly makes an excuse and leaves Evan and Jeremiah to stare after him.

Evan calls his father, Eddie, to get his help with Hank. Eddie recommends a sobriety guru, Lacy Sinclair, and her detox facility. As they speak, first Divya then Paige arrive and learn about Hank. Divya is in disbelief and refuses to participate in their intervention, preferring to speak directly with Hank. Paige is upset that Evan didn't call and tell her directly as soon as he found out.

Hank returns to see Don but pauses when he sees Don's daughter Molly sitting with him. Dr. Oren, the chief of ICU stops by the nurses desk and confirms Don has contracted pneumonia which has caused his fever. Hank and Dr. Oren then have a mild disagreement over Don's immediate care where Dr. Oren overrules Hank and decides to first solve the fever before deciding on the next course of treatment.

Evan, Eddie and Paige meet with Lacy and Evan is doubtful her facility is what Hank needs but she talks him into it.

Jeremiah finally tracks down Dr. Jory, the doctor who performed Hank's craniotomy, on the golf course. Jeremiah grills her about the procedure and she takes offense and denies that anything went wrong during the surgery that could be causing Hank to experience the pain he is suffering.

Dr. Oren and Hank enter Don's room and start reducing his sedation medication to see if he is ready to come off the ventilator. When Don reacts adversely, they put him back on sedatives and his condition stabilizes. Molly then asks Hank why he is still there and Hank leaves.

Hank catches up to Dr. Oren outside and tries to talk the man into giving Don steroids but Dr. Oren refuses. Hank goes back inside where Divya corrals him. Hank assures her he is fine but Divya sees through him and tells him he is in no shape to be seeing patients, but he refuses to listen.

Divya leaves the hospital where she runs into Jeremiah, who unknowingly has become part of Eddie's intervention and is there to ask Hank to accompany him to see a special patient, which is actually Lacy's clinic.

Lacy brings some drinks to the group and stumbles, leading them to think she might be slightly intoxicated but she blames her new shoes. Divya arrives and agrees Hank needs some help but is not sure about this intervention. Eddie starts talking and the subject turns to Evan's problems with women and he divulges that Evan used to have a crush on Divya. Paige becomes upset and Lacy gets up to leave and stumbles and falls into the swimming pool.

Jeremiah tries to talk Hank into seeing the patient Evan said was "complicated", but Hank insists he cannot leave. Suddenly Molly comes running out of Don's room, screaming for help. Hank quickly discovers it was a minor medical equipment issue and Don is fine. Molly suddenly starts crying, scared for her father. Hank looks on, not sure what to do for Molly.

Evan tries to tell Paige he is not attracted to Divya, but she is not convinced. Eddie speaks with Lacy and bluntly asks her if she is using drugs again. She denies it but says she is taking aspirin for pain in her side and she occasionally experiences dizziness. Divya recommends analyzing her blood and Lacy agrees.

Hank tries to help Molly by offering to sit with her dad while she takes a shower and changes clothes. She refuses and asks Hank why he isn't with his own family, or at least with other patients.

Hank and Jeremiah arrive at Lacy's clinic where Evan and Divya have been trying to convince Paige that there was never anything between them. Hank recognizes an intervention when he sees one and starts to leave. Evan grabs his medical bag and they start a tug of war when Hank experiences tremendous pain radiating down his arm. A discussion occurs and the conclusion is Hank may have experienced an injury from a fall prior to his surgery and thought the pain was post-surgical when it wasn't. All agree and MRI is needed to find the source of his pain.

The MRI confirms damage to Hank's vertebrae and injury to nerves in the area. The hospital gives Hank an injection of steroids to reduce the inflammation, hoping that is all he will need.

Divya and Lacy arrive at the hospital where Lacy starts complaining of stomach pain. She vomits in the parking lot and Divya notices blood, which indicates a bleeding ulcer, probably caused by the aspirin she has been taking.

Outside after Hank's treatment, he apologizes to his friends and family for hiding his pain from them and trying to do everything on his own. He and Divya head back inside to check on Don while Eddie leaves with Jeremiah to allow Evan and Paige to be alone. Evan then tells Paige about Jeremiah's crush on Divya, unaware that Divya has returned and can hear him.

Hank returns to Don's room and prepares to give him the steroids he tried to talk Dr. Oren into administering. Molly recognizes Hank's concern for her dad and her demeanor toward Hank softens and she decides to take that shower Hank recommended.

Divya returns home to Jeremiah's place where he has prepared a candlelit dinner for her and she finally sees the crush he has on her. She gently informs him that her mother will be her Lamaze partner and that she will be able to return to her apartment soon. Jeremiah is crushed but does his best to hide his emotions.

Evan and Eddie talk at home where they both agree that Divya was not the problem between Evan and Paige. Eddie then asks the key question, what is the source of their recent difficulty?

Molly returns from her shower to find her father is in trouble and Hank along with multiple ER personnel are desperately trying to save his life. Molly screams at Hank, "What did you do to my dad?"

Summary: HankMeds treat a thrill-seeking journalist who refuses to let a health scare keep her from her job. Elsewhere, Evan and Paige's relationship is put under the microscope thanks to political mudslinging, and Hank worries that Molly's behavioral problems may amount to more than simple teenage angst. Finally, Jeremiah comes to a startling conclusion after Shelby questions him regarding Hank's use of painkillers.

They were able to stabilize Don so that makes Hank and his team happy but Divya still does not know what to do now that she's heard Jeremiah loves her. Gina Black from Channel 6 wants to interview Evan on election day; she is a super important reporter. During the interview, he finds out that he has a slight lead and is taken aback. He also finds out that Gina is having some jaw/mouth trouble so he gives her one of their business cards.

Hank goes to talk to Molly and tell her that they are still trying different ways to help Don heal. She gets so mad that she slashes Hank's face. I get that she is upset because her dad is all she has but she is getting on my last nerve. Hank has done all that he good, throughout an undiagnosed condition and all she does is blame him. She was the one who hitched, got her leg stuck and all that stuff.

Divya and Jeremiah are walking on the beach and she is telling him that she is so happy that they became best friends. They stop to treat their patient, driving a car through water, also known as Gina Black. She has lockjaw and Divya thinks that it could be a treatment from a story on fillers that she did. Jeremiah wants to take a dramatic route after what happened with Hank while Divya's approach is much more liberal.

Paige is driving Evan around in a convertible as he campaigns through the streets with pin-wheels and a microphone. His competition seems to be much more grandios than him. Hank is being checked out by Shelby and she is telling him how she thought he was too good to be true. After the whole tox screening issue, everyone has to be extra careful.

Evan now has to go up against Blythe during the whole city council issue and poor Gina is in the middle of all of it. He tells Blythe that she is much like Cruella de Ville while he actually cares about his town. Then he adds that he understands why her husband left her and she storms off. That was not something that Evan was supposed to know about so Paige slipped.

Hank is still being questioned by Shelby about whether or not he was impaired when he was treating patients. Then he gets paged and find Don in convulsions; he must explain to him what is going on and that he will be okay. Soon enough, he is breathing on his own while Paige must apologize to Blythe for telling Evan about her husband leaving her. It's okay though because it is all about politics.

Gina is being seen at a bowling alley by Divya because she seems to be having trouble breathing. On top of that, Shelby is questioning Jeremiah about the medication that he gave to Hank. It is very hard for everyone because they all like Hank; Shelby suggests that Hank chose to ask Jeremiah for the meds because he knew he wouldn't say no.

Molly goes to Hank's home in order to apologize for hitting him. She breaks down to Divya and admits that none of this would have happened if it hadn't been for her. Finally... she admits that she was the wrong one NOT Hank and realizes that he saved her and her father. It is time to vote and Gina is talking to some local choir people who reveal that even though Evan claims to be a family man, he is not legally married to Paige.

How is he not legally married? They wed through an online minister and that means that their marriage is null in void. At the same time, Gina's face is turning blue during an interview so Jeremiah tells her that they need to run some tests on her. Hank returns home and Divya tells him that Molly came by to apologize; he believes that she is having short-term memory loss.

They have to do a CT scan of Molly because what is going on may have been neurological, something that was there for a long time. It explains why she was such a brat, had mood swings and short term memory. While waiting for the ambulance, Hank and Divya get her stabilized and soon Divya heads down to the hospital.

Jeremiah comes out and talks to Divya and asks if she thinks that Hank used him for meds since he was new and all. Though she does not say much, it is clear that she knows that Hank probably did use him because he is so nice. Oh and Evan does not win the race, losing by twenty-seven votes. Paige is happy because now she has her husband back... once they get legally married.

Hank tells Don about Molly and how everything she has done has been triggered by a tumor they removed. That could have caused her car accident at the beginning of the season and Don realizes that had he not gotten sick and Hank not come along, she would have remained undiagnosed.

When they go to get legally married, Evan and Paige are surprised by Blythe who tells them that they overlooked the library computer pollings. This means that he is now the village councilman, something that he did not realize that he wanted until he thought he lost. He finds out that this is a full-time job and Blythe will be his mentor.

Evan and Paige cannot get married again yet because the lady they need to see is on maternity leave. Hank asks his brother if he will still help run HankMeds and it's a duh question. Suddenly, they see flowers on the table along with a note saying Jeremiah is resigning!

Summary:	Hank treats a paleontologist working on a fossilized dinosaur skeleton and preparing it for auction while Russel suffers an injury that appears to be impossible. Evan and Paige work on saving their marriage. There's a serious problem for Divya's pregnancy. Hank must make a decision when HankMed's future is threatened.

Evan tracks down Jeremiah to find out why he resigned, only to find out that it's not quite why he thought. Hank also tries to bring him back to HankMed, but Jeremiah is too angry with how Hank went behind his back to consider it.

Hank meets Monique, a paleontologist who is reconstructing a dinosaur skeleton for Paige & Russel's next big auction. Monique has a strange rash, and since she travels everywhere, it could be anything. Her exam gets cut short when the dinosaur takes a "bite" out of Russel.

Boris has been cleared for a new medical trial to treat his disease, and decides to travel the world with his family to begin divesting his global assets. He wants to focus on his family. And he wants Hank to come with him as his private physician, but Hank says he can't leave HankMed behind.

Divya is rushed to the hospital after experiencing severe stomach pain. Examination results could spell trouble for her pregnancy. And while in the hospital, Jeremiah visits and finally comes clean about his feelings.

Evan, consumed by his new job as councilman, has little time to devote to his marriage. Paige is stressed about still living in Shadow Pond, Russel's newly announced sabbatical, and her husband's focus on anything but their relationship. Tensions mount when Evan discovers that Russel has become Paige's confidant.

Shelby goes on the offensive as she tries to protect Symphony from the ramifications of Hank's tox screen results. Hank learns of her plans from Divya, and brings back Ken "Killer" Keller to aid in his defense. When talks turn sour, Hank's professional future is put into question. And Hank responds with a decision that will surprise everyone.

Summary:	Hank returns to the Hamptons; Evan hatches a plan to keep Hank in town; Divya experiences motherhood; a party guest has surprising news.

At a party, they are all looking for Divya. The location they booked was actually double booked and Evan says that he will find her. He also goes to Paige and they try to seduce one another but he tells her that they have to find Divya. Everyone is asking Jeremiah questions because they know that he had taken her in when she needed to be on bed rest. They find Divya with her baby upstairs and the big question is: where is Hank? He has done this before and that is how they found Jeremiah. While keeping up with all of the HankMeds information, Divya goes in to labor. She has had a daughter whom she has named after a grandma so she has kept the Indian tradition alive.

There is a stalker in the Hampton's and Jeremiah goes in to the presents room where he meets Emma. She is supposedly a friend of Divya's but I do not believe that at all. Emma arrives at the door of the party and her name is not there. She then claims that she is a friend of Jeremiah's, which Divya finds hard to believe but they let her in anyways. At the same time, Boris and Hank land back home. Hank shows up at the party and they notice that Boris has a cast on and is limping. He took a fall when they were on the travels. We flash back to the night that Divya thought she was in labor; it was actually Braxton Hicks.

That same night, they were prepping for a Valentine's Day party but one of the musicians, Lance hurt himself. Hank has arrived just in time to take over for Divya, who was going to look at the musician's arm. He had come back because he had heard that she was in labor. The musician fell and that was how he hurt his arm as he became very dizzy. Hank thinks that they should run a CT scan just in case but Evan really just wanted Hank to come home for a patient so he would stay in one place. Back at Divya's party, Evan runs in to mysterious Emma who is very inquisitive and of course, he says too much.

Lance reveals in the hospital that he was actually dropped by his father as a child. His dad had Huntington's Disease which could mean a life sentence for Lance and he does not want that to define him. Bethenny Frankel shows up at the Valentine party looking for a man. Fitting since she has just reached a divorce settlement. Hank goes to talk to Lance and tell him that he meant for so much more than local parties and then Divya approaches him; her water has broken. The hospital gave Divya an amazing room but all she wants is her soothing music from her iPod. She gets mad when the nurse reveals that she is only one centimeter dilated.

Lance's band ends up playing at Divya's party for her daughter. Hank goes to talk to him and it turns out that Lance started having symptoms right after Hank saw him at Valentine's Day. It has been three months and he has had nothing but a quick progression. Upstairs, Hank is checking on Boris and there is some secret that the two of them are hiding. We then go back to Divya's labor and how they want to give her pitocin to speed up everything. That was not part of her birth plan and then we are back at her party. Hank reveals to Divya that Boris does have symptoms but he will play like he doesn't so that no one knows.

While the band is playing, Lance falls over and Hank determines that he broke his pelvis. They have completely forgotten about the random Emma girl lingering at the party. Hank is able to help for the time being but lets him know that he does not think that he has Huntington's Disease. Divya finds Emma and she has been tapped down and is safe so they talk face to face. Emma was actually a stalker but Divya tells her that no one is there for her and if she bothers her family again, she won't be so nice. Evan tells Hank that he has no need to stay especially after they heal Lance and confirm he does not have Huntington's Disease.

Flashback to the hospital where Divya is trying to move her body so that she can maneuver the baby in to position. The blood pressure drops and Divya says that she wants a C-section. At the same time, Boris has called to tell Hank that he broke his leg and that he must rush to his side. Before he goes, Hank is able to see Divya hold her little girl for the first time. Now, Hank tells Boris that he does not want to go away with him again and be a helicopter doctor. He does tell him that he will fly wherever he has to as to administer the drugs that Boris needs; not good enough.

Divya gets a text from Rafa and meets up with Emma. She realizes that she is not a stalker but rather looking for her father. But who is it?

Summary: Hank worries over the health of a rising tennis star while a fellow professional also falls ill. Elsewhere, Hank and Evan struggle to come to terms with a revelation, and Evan and Paige turn a corner.

Paige and Evan are in couple's counseling and it is hilarious but they have to tell the doctor that they no longer need his help. This counselor-doctor is great as he must hug it out with his patients. Hank goes to talk to Evan who is on a counseling graduation high and tells him that Emma is actually their sister. She was looking for their father but he is not around at this moment. Evan wants to know why she has come out of nowhere but their father abandoned her and her mother. He does know about his daughter so she leaves them her contact information and leaves for Europe. Evan is upset because he feels like he lost the center that he gained in counseling.

Walking on the beach, Evan and Hank are talking about Emma and trying to reach their father. Evan is in such denial but Hank feels like this is real because he walked out on them when they were younger as well. Hank wants the facts before they lose control. Aaron is a head tennis pro whom Hank must go see and exam since he had some nausea. Ken, his boss has called Hank to come over but it was really their new tennis player, Tracy who needs help. She is off of her game from an injury she had gotten and he does not want her career to end. Aaron suggests that all the pros get physicals so that it does not look like they are singling out Tracy.

Divya comes downstairs with the baby and she sees Jeremiah and jokes how they will have to get the home baby proofed soon. That freaks him out but he has more to talk about as he wants to know what his position for HankMeds is now that Hank is back. Divya hands him the baby who proceeds to throw up on him; Jeremiah goes in to a secret closet where he has pillows and screams in to it. Hank talks to Tracy about getting a physical. She says that she has had some fatigue but does not need a physical. Emma meets up with Evan and Paige and they can see that she is not after Eddie's money since she seems to have her own.

Paige invites Emma to dinner but she says that she has so much to do before she leaves the country. Evan agrees because she does have DNA proof that they are all related. Emma agrees then rushes in to the local restaurant bathroom and washes her face off. All the tennis pros are getting their physicals but clearly, Hank is focused on one player. Divya's baby is with them as well and Hank is trying to entertain her but Divya tells him that he is hovering. He missed a lot in the first four months so he is trying to make up for it. Hank asks her about staying with Jeremiah and he lets her know that they can always stay with him if need be.

They want to send Tracy to get an MRI but she then tells Hank that she never had a torn hamstring but rather a broken heart. She took time to go to Costa Rica and get her life in order and wants to play better than ever. Jeremiah shows up at a bar where the bartender has a knife through his hand as he was practicing knife tricks. He is able to get the blood flow back again then Jeremiah pulls the knife out. He then learns that the bar is dead from 3-5p.m. and that makes him think. I think he needs some peace and quiet. Emma is at dinner with her new family and she says that she is taking a year off from school before going to college.

Hank asks Emma to stay a little longer as their father will be back in town in a few days. Out of the corner of Paige's eye, she notices that Emma's tag is still on her dress so what is this chicks deal. Hank is hanging out at the tennis court when Tamra from "The Real Housewives of Orange County" shows up. Random. Aaron asks about the physicals and Hank tells him that the only person who did not check out well was Aaron himself. As Tracy is being told that she will be traveling to play in a huge match, Aaron clutches his heart and falls to the ground. Aaron has been having headaches and thinks that it was because of the heat and then reveals that he was in Costa Rica.

Hank thinks that maybe they both have a parasite that they caught from their trip; they used to date but no longer. Ken stops Hank to see if he is okay and he talks about the new sister that has popped out of nowhere. Ken tells him that Emma is super lucky to have a family that involves Hank because everyone always seems to love him. Paige and Evan are running together but Paige slows down. She tells Evan that she has done some research and Emma is not staying at the alleged hotel she claimed. She might be lying about most things but they do not know what.

They go to a restaurant where they find Emma working as a busboy; I kind of figured that when she went to the restaurant earlier and just ended up in the bathroom. Jeremiah stops by Hank's to drop off something and says that he wants to go home because it is quiet at the moment. Hank thanks him for stepping up and being a part of HankMeds then Jeremiah asks him if he will take his job back as medical director. Hank says no because he is actually enjoying just being a doctor and asks Jeremiah to stay on as the head. While Hank is doing tests on Aaron, Tracy falls over and they discover that she has an illness that can be treated with medication and she can still play tennis.

Hank finds Aaron and Divya and tells them that Tracy is okay. He then tells Aaron that he thinks that Aaron's symptoms are Tracy-based as in they come on only when he is scared that he will lose her. He admits that he is in love with Tracy and Hank tells him that he believes that it is all anxiety based. Looks like they will have a happy ending. Jeremiah shows up at the bar so that he can get some peace and quiet and get work done as he knows that it is dead for two hours. Paige and Evan are back in counseling talking about what happened with Emma and how she took off after pretending to be rich.

Emma is trying to return the clothes she purchased but the owner won't let her until Evan and Paige intervene. Emma comes back with Evan and such and reveals that she wanted to prove to their father that she was fine without him. She actually works as a diner manager and took the job at the restaurant to get cash. They tell her that they are impressed by her real story and want her to stay then Eddie rushes in. He has no idea who Emma is so she has to introduce herself to her father but apparently, he does not believe her.

Summary: Hank, Evan and Paige try to help Eddie have a relationship with Emma; Hank treats a private investigator; Divya must find a nanny; Jeremiah makes a friend.

Eddie is in shock over the revelation that he has a daughter. Evan and Hank come to look for him and he decides to tell them what is going on. When he was on his book tour, Emma's mom Meredith sent him a text. Meredith was supposed to meet him but never did; it was Emma who sent the text and had him meet her at the restaurant that she worked at. She collected DNA from him and brought the results to the Hampton's to show him she was just fine without him. She called him a deadbeat dad but he claims that he never knew about her and tells Emma, Hank and Evan that. The boys believe him and he admits that he handled it horribly.

Eddie does not want to think that he screwed up with another child and now she never wants to see him again. He is beating himself up for something he never even had control over. Divya has hired a nanny and she is showing her around the house, reminding her where all the essentials are. This is Divya's first full day back at work so she is having a hard time leaving. The nanny, Matilda tells Divya that she can make sure the baby naps early so she will be ready to play when mommy gets home; Jeremiah has to spit his coffee out at that notion. Finally, she has to leave her baby behind and go off to work.

Evan is up baking muffins for Eddie for when he wakes up but he wants to make sure that he can build a bridge between father and daughter. Hank wants to ensure that Evan does not let Eddie go too far but gives his consent to help, sort of. Hank goes off to work and Eddie returns home with a giant pink teddy bear for Emma. Evan reminds him that she is an adult but he does not care and demands that he be taken to her hotel. It does not work as well as he had hoped and left abandoned outside with Evan to console him. That kind of sucks because it was an awesome teddy bear.

Hank and Divya are out working when Padma Lakshmi shows up and they like to joke about the fact that the reason they know each other is because they are both Indian. They go to help a patient who actually happens to be a PI so she rushes out of the office that they meet her in. She rushes off and then we see Paige role playing with Eddie but then she sees that he is jealous of Emma. He was used to being the baby and that will be no longer. Eddie decides that he will take his daughter on his book tour so that they can get to know each other and Paige loves that.

Divya is at a new Hampton's family home checking out some kids and she has to show the mother photos of her daughter. The kids do not want their camp physicals but they have to do it. The little girl likes to make science experiments and her brothers are throwing it around but when Divya learns what is in the bottle, she panics and tells them to stop. She cleans up all of the kids and then Matilda shows up with her baby. She needed to check on her because she thought that she had a rash on her face in a photo sent over. The patient's mom leaves Divya alone with her baby while she takes Matilda for tea.

Evan and Paige find Emma playing Texas Hold 'Em with some guys and he is not happy at all. He tries to explain to Emma that their dad is not so horrible and that Eddie wants to make it up to him. Paige reassures her that he really did not know about her and Emma's mom confirmed that. Hank meets up with his PI patient again and she is undercover once again. He brings up his sister who keeps changing her story over and over; she agrees to run a background check then he tells her the swab came back negative but she definitely has a fever. She ends up getting sick and leaving Hank to watch her client.

Jeremiah goes to the bar where it is quiet for two hours and there is a new bartender there, Vivian. All he wants is water and wi-fi so she thinks he is crazy. At the same time, Hank is watching over the man his patient is following and trying to give her all the details. Then one of the waiters has trouble breathing and the mystery client tries to perform CPR but breaks a rib instead. Hank has to fix the mess and get this man breathing again. It works but the PI is separated from the man she is supposed to be watching and that complicates everything further.

Paige, Evan and Eddie are all waiting for Emma to show up so that they can go for a bike ride. Eddie is eager to please her in any way possible but she does not know how to ride a bike so he says that he will teach her. Finally, a father/daughter moment that they both wanted... then she crashes but laughs it off because she rode a bike. He says he will fix her wounds because Hank is a doctor and wishes that he had done that a lot earlier with Emma. Over at the bar, the bartender starts asking Jeremiah questions and he ends up ordering food but it turns out to be for her because he wants her to be left alone. The PI is getting tested but her medical records have yet to arrive. She has to work but Hank won't let her.

Jeremiah shows up while Divya and Hank are working and he is surprised to see her there and not at home. She says that Matilda has been a wonder and that is all she cares about. Her medical records do show up and Hank suddenly realizes that the man the PI is following is actually her husband. Hank finds her and she is having a heart attack. He gives her medicine then they rush to the hospital while Paige is thrilled to share the news of Eddie and Emma. Evan helped them build a bridge and now they will be hanging out alone the following day. I think Evan still wants to be the baby. The PI had an angioplasty but will survive and she also has the file about Emma.

The PI's husband shows up at the hospital along with a girl and Hank is trying to tell them it is not the time. Turns out, he was not cheating on her but rather meeting with a car customizer whom his wife was a fan of. He realizes that he should have known she would suspect something. Divya's nanny quits and it turns out that she went to go work for the family that Divya was treating for camp. Great. Eddie comes back from his day with Emma but Hank and Evan look like they know something.

Divya is freaking out about not having a nanny and is venting to Jeremiah. He agrees to watch the baby while she is interviewing nannies the following day. He does still need to go to the bar between three and five because he has made friends with the bartender and gets her food every day. Now we learn the secret about Emma. She is actually seventeen and had run away from home. She had been used as a pawn in some gambling schemes growing up and was put in foster care. Emma and her mom said that they would never lie to each other and she felt betrayed when she found out Eddie was alive.

They have called her mother and there is a new plan. She will stay with Evan and Paige for the summer while Eddie goes on his book tour. But he will come back at every chance he can. Paige is so proud and excited and then it comes out that Evan bribed Emma to stay and to be with Eddie. He was trying to be a good father brother and hopefully, she will see that in the end.

Summary: Hank flies to Monte Carlo only to find himself in the middle of a plot involving Boris. Divya and Jeremiah tend to some firemen with a puzzling illness. Evan and Paige need a new place to live.

The family throws a Hunger Games-themed party to help Emma meet more people her own age. Persistent about the theatrics, Evan shoots a flaming arrow into the air which accidentally lands on his roof. The fire department shows up to clean up his mess. During the visit, Divya spots that the captain is ill and insists on doing a checkup. Meanwhile, things get worse for Evan and Paige as they find out about their eviction.

In Monte Carlo, Hank meets with Boris who asks for Hank's help to bait a shady depositor. Soon after, Hank meets with the depositor who asks him to help her remove funds from Boris' account. She mentions that she will pay him generously. Boris is well aware of the woman's motives; he continues prepping Hank for the next steps in his plan. Hank is to go to Boris' bank where he will help the woman transfer Boris' funds to her account. The woman refuses to accept the electronic transfer. She demands cash and also demands that Evan packs the cash himself and transports it overseas for her personally.

At the fire department, Jeremiah and Divya find that the entire department seems to be catching a bug. Jeremiah and Divya are called to treat the chief of the fire department who is suddenly short of breath. They determine that the entire department had been ingesting sodium nitrate as they were mistaking it for salt. The high level of sodium nitrate was causing all of them to become ill. Luckily, they will recover fully once they rid themselves of the harmful product.

Back home, Paige and Evan's therapist, Bob, comes to their rescue with a beautiful guest house for rent. After moving into the small guest house, the couple starts to argue about their tight living arrangements now that Emma will be moving in. Overhearing their yelling, Bob chimes in and leads them in a brief therapy session wherein the couple discuss their feelings about Emma. They realize that for the sake of their marriage, Emma is better off living with Hank. Emma seemed to have taken the news in a very mature and understanding manner.

Jeremiah and Divya discuss getting back out there and dating other people. They each encourage the other to take the leap back into the dating world but seem to both be in denial. By the end of the episode, Divya opens herself up to a date with one of the firefighters. Meanwhile, Jeremiah is still trying to overcome his nerves as he backs down from asking out the waiter from the bar that he has been frequenting.

After traveling overseas, Hank convinces the woman to let him treat her throbbing ankle. He explains her condition as potentially "life-threatening" to stall her from depositing the money. The woman allows Hank to treat her; however, she is suspicious the entire way through. Shortly thereafter, she becomes anxious and requests that the money be deposited immediately. Upon leaving the house with the cash, she is greeted and arrested by Boris and a team of policemen.

Summary: When Evan reads on-line about a woman with a mysterious illness, he reaches out to her hoping Hank can help. Paige and Russell come to a realization about their new client. If HankMed is to survive, Evan and Jeremiah understand that they will need to fight Symphony. Hank wins back a former patient.

Emma makes breakfast for Hank and he digs in despite being headed to a work-out. She says she learned to cook at the restaurant where she worked. She says they were her surrogate family. Hank says that he was the fill in for Eddie and his mom and that's why Evan became such a good cook. Emma says working at the diner was better than being alone. He says when Eddie left, he felt alone even though he had Evan.

Emma says Eddie was a con-man who ran out and her mom was a con-woman who stuck around but both left them feeling alone. She says she wanted to be a paramedic when she was little so she could have a siren and run red lights. He says he feels bad they weren't all in her life but is happy they're in her life now. He asks if she wants to go for a run with him and she's not sure but gives it a try. She's not loving it as much as he is once they go out.

Hank sees a surfer and runs up and calls out to Ricky. He's worried but Ricky promises he's taking his blood thinners. He tells her that he medaled in Sochi. He asks if he wants to schedule his annual physical but Ricky says he's signed with Symphony and said they made him an offer he can't refuse. Ricky invites them to a barbecue and Hank says he's busy but Emma agrees to go and he gives her the address. Hank isn't thrilled.

Paige looks at a property and the client, Ray, says he wants some pieces — he says he needs the works and wants the best. He says he wants it to feel genuinely Hamptons. He's itching and Paige says she knows a new doctor. Hank and Divya meet with Hank and they tell him Symphony has gone after a bunch of their patients. They say they can talk to Gladys, their head.

Emma gets ready to leave and she goes and Evan and Hank argue over why the other didn't find out what friends she's going to see then argue over who's the more fun brother. Evan admits he paid Emma and said he did it and then she saw dad. Hank asks if she agreed to stay because of the money. Evan says it's a win and Hank says this is an issue because she doesn't really know them. Divya calls them back to the meeting.

We see a video of Nancy Conrad — a dance instructor who has fallen sick. Evan shows them her blog and says she lives upstate and has a mystery disease that's paralyzing her. Every other doctor has given up on her. Hank says it sounds like a PR stunt and Evan says it is. He's also posting updates to the Facebook pages where the people are helping pay her medical costs.

Divya says she's going to see a new patient — Ray — that Paige recommended. Evan tells her the guy is dangerous, but she goes anyway. Jeremiah comes to see Gladys but she's not there. Bill Cartwright introduces himself and says Gladys has been transferred. He says he's glad Jeremiah is there and says it will save him a trip. He takes the coffee he brought for Gladys and he hands him a new pricing schedule that's four times as much as they've been paying.

Bill says HankMed is their competitor and has to pay accordingly. They are effectively cutting them off at the knees since they're no longer part of Symphony. Evan brings in Nancy who is in a wheelchair. He tells her that he's happy to meet her and she says Evan has given her new hope. Hank asks to hear her story and Evan starts filming. He checks her legs and she says it started three years ago before a kids class.

She says she got a pain in her lower back that was localized. He asks if anything unusual happened. She says she had a car accident about a year prior and was hospitalized. She says her legs felt heavier then started to tingle then her left leg stopped working at all. Hank checks her out while she talks. Evan says Hank can help if anyone can. He wants to start with another MRI.

Ray tells Divya he's itching like crazy. She asks about his gold necklace and wants to know if it's 18 carat. She does a scraping and says she thinks it's eczema but also needs to rule out scabies. She says they're small mites. She checks his skin under her microscope and says she sees nothing. She gives him a shot and writes a prescription for anti-itch cream and says to call if it's not better. She gives the shot and he screams in pain.

Paige is working when Russell shows up with a bottle of wine. She says she landed a gigantic client and says Ray loves what he did and hopes they can do something similar. He sits and says he was fired and that she's been fired too. Nancy gets her MRI while Hank watches and Evan films. Hank says her MRI is clean and Evan asks what's next. Hank says more tests and Evan says they're her last chance.

Paige says it makes no sense and says Russell practically built their Hamptons' office. She says they're jealous because he went off with Boris and she says he has to fight it and he says he knows things about the Chesterfields. He tells her to go over and say that she did the work and he took the credit and she might get her job back but she refuses. She says she took the job to work with and learn from him.

Hank meets Ray who tells him it's worse — he's tired, achy, has chills and a pain in his stomach. Hank checks him out. Divya asks if he's ever had liver problems. Hank says they need to do an ultrasound to check for gallstones. Ray says he needs a rush and he's miserable. He says he can eat free at his new restaurant for life if he just stops the itching. Hank says they'll rush it.

Jeremiah shows Evan the new cost schedules and he says they can't pay the rates. Jeremiah says he misses Gladys and he says if Hank was still medical director, it wouldn't have happened. Evan says it's business and that's his territory. Nancy is getting a spinal tap next as Evan films. Then a contrast x-ray is next. Hank says he thinks it's idiopathic transverse myelitis — inflammation of the spinal cord. He says it's a fancy term to mean we don't know why it's happening.

Hank says he's going to get her on steroids and pain medication that may reduce the inflammation. Hank says it may get better or could get worse. Nancy says that it's an answer but not the news she was hoping for. She thanks Evan as well.

Hank and Evan come home and they talk about how bad they feel for Nancy. They wonder why she doesn't feel worse about her condition. Hank reminds him that when he had the flu, he begged him to kill him. Evan asks how he doesn't get crushed when one of his patients has a setback but Hank says he does. He says the hardest thing he had to do was watch their mom suffer and not be able to help.

Hank says he hurts when his patients hurt. Evan says he couldn't do that and would be a basketcase. Evan says he wants to donate to her medical fund and Hank says he's proud of it. Hank says that Emma is going to Ricky's party and Evan freaks out. He says they promised their dad to watch out for her and she's still a kid. Evan reminds him of all the trouble he got into at 17 and now Hank is freaking too.

Hank heads over to Ricky's to check on his little sister. He peeks through the fence and looks for her. He sees her with a red Solo cup in hand flirting with a guy who touches her hip. She snaps a picture of Ricky and says she was putting it on Instagram. The guy says there's a Hamptons' site that pays well for photos of celebrities doing naughty things. Hank heads inside because he saw Ricky twist his ankle.

He tells Ricky he's serious and he sits down. He looks at the leg and it's all red and icky and he admits the pain is pretty bad. He says he thinks he tore his calf muscle and he's bleeding internally and could develop compartment syndrome and lose his leg. Emma shows up and Hank tells her to help. He puts a needle into his leg and she pulls out stuff to help. He draws a bunch of blood and the pain is relieved and he says they need to get to the hospital but then he says he saw his grab his leg and Emma busts him on not being there for the reason he claimed.

Hank greets a hung-over Paige nearly passed out at the breakfast bar. He tells her to have a banana and aspirin. Emma says Hank knows it all and saved her from a super-dangerous barbecue. She says she doesn't need them to check on her. She tells them they should be worried about Nancy because she's a liar. Hank admits she could be faking it.

Emma explains to them she's demonstrating all the classic tells of lying. Hank says there is a test that would prove it one way or the other. They bring Nancy over and she says the steroids seem expensive. Hank says he has one last test he'd like to try. He takes her blanket and then has her lift her right leg. She plays like she can't. Hank says her left leg is obviously not paralyzed.

Nancy says he's like the other doctors that is blaming her because they can't figure it out. Emma dumps ice water down her back and she jumps up out of her wheelchair. Hank asks why she's been faking. Nancy says she didn't start out to do it, but it just happened. She says she was in a car accident and then got an outpouring of affection from people online. She says she wanted more of it.

Hank says he wants her to see a psychologist to get the kind of help she needs and she tearfully agrees. Another great diagnosis on #RoyalPains. Divya and Hank shows up to Roy's but he doesn't answer the door. He heads around back and sees Hank lying on the floor having a seizure. He busts in and sets off the security alarm. He asks where the blood came from and he says he threw it up. Security comes in gun drawn and says to get away from his uncle.

Hank says he knows who he is and calls Marco by name but Ray's nephew won't lower the gun. Hank says to call 911 and turn off the alarm and let him save his uncle's life. Hank goes to work and the first thing doesn't work so he tries something different. He has him swallow a glove with a tube in it then blows up the glove once it's down. He has him swallow the second glove and blows it up as well and he stabilizes.

Jeremiah comes in and finds Evan and asks if he got his email but he says he hasn't been online. He's upset about the whole Nancy thing and says it won't be the game changer for HankMed that he thought it would be. Jeremiah says he may have a solution for their price increase problem and found a nearby lab that could work. Evan says that works for labs but not MRIs. Evan says their business model won't work with these price increases and this could be their last summer.

Hank talks to Ray and says he has liver issues but it's fixable. Ray says it sounds like he'll be a long term customer and has Marco hand him a thick envelope of cash. He asks if he takes cash and Hank says he does. Emma looks at the SnarkHampton site and a pic of Ricky at the party. Hank asks how they got it and she says someone must have sold it to them. He says people should respect privacy and she agrees.

Hank apologizes for following her and says he was proud of how she helped him out without getting squirrely at the sight of blood. Evan asks Hank if he's talked to her and then Hank says he can talk to her now. Evan says he may have given her the wrong impression when he gave her money. She's surprised and says she didn't stay for the money but to get to know Eddie. She says she really likes it here and they agree they're glad they cleared the air. She goes and Hank tells Evan he's not sure she meant it.

Paige and Russell come to see Ray who says that Hank and Divya saved his life. They tell him that they're not with Sutton and Chesterfield and Ray says he doesn't care about them. He says he'll take care of the contract and they will be his private consultants. He says they are now directly employed by him and they all shake on it.

Jeremiah introduces Bill to Evan and he congratulates them on getting Ricky back on board. Jeremiah says there are always alternatives and Bill asks if they're going to start their own hospital then walks off. Jeremiah says he wishes they could and Evan suddenly looks inspired.

Summary: Hank doesn't agree with Ray that his new chef is drinking on the job. Divya's new patient is a NASCAR crew member. Jeremiah is worried about the location of the prospective lab. Hank wants Emma to think about her future.

Ray is meeting with Evan and Paige to go over the contract for him to approve the interior design position. Hank then shows up and reveals that Evan is his brother and the CFO of HankMeds. Ray has called upon Hank to check out his chef who is acting aloof. At the same time, Paige is helping with the decorations for a big dinner to try to win Ray's wife back. Hank then goes to look at the chef's arm and sees that he has a huge bleeding mass on him. The question is: was the chef drunk when he obtained the injury yet I do not think that Ray believes the story. Nate is Divya's new nanny who is super overzealous and has gotten in to a child development class which she has to approve of.

Jeremiah and Evan are looking for a new location to open up their own hospital but everything is too small or too expensive. Ray overhears them talking and offers to help with them finding a location so that they can keep HankMeds. Emma is at home looking for super expensive stuff online and Hank questions how she can afford it; little does he know that she sells photos of his high class patients. Divya is getting along great with her baby daddy's mom, Lorena and that is making her feel so secure to keep tradition alive. It also inspires her as a mother and she says that she does not know what to do if Hank was not around. She tells Hank she needs another day off for a nanny search and he tells her to take all the time that she needs.

Ray takes Evan and Jeremiah to a huge building that he owns and they can see the growth for HankMeds all around. Ray says that he is curious about the whole medical industry so he has no problem giving them a break on rent. One problem: it is located next to a strip club. They cannot come to a conclusion as to what to do so they decide to let Hank be the tiebreaker. At Ray's restaurant, his chef is allegedly drunk so Ray has broken his nose. Hank tells him to leave and he is shocked that someone would tell him what to do but he has no choice. Hank lets the chef know that a neurological disorder could make him look drunk while Ray just wants him back in the kitchen.

Hank and Evan are dining out and says that he thinks Emma wants more from them. He does note that when she helped him with his emergency the week before, they felt connected. He has decided that he will try to help her with some community colleges as they are at the restaurant she works at. One of the customers gives her a phone and money, telling her that she is a valuable asset with the people that she knows and can get more worthy photos. Jeremiah is at the bar with the lady bartender that he has been bonding with and she asks him what is on his mind. He tells her that he is conflicted about HankMeds new location and she starts to quiz him on the nude bar.

She makes him go to the strip club to show him that it is actually not a bad place and these girls are just trying to get by. He talks about how he started as a doctor by transporting corneas while she says that she wants to be a physical therapist. I think she needs a green card and Jeremiah will marry her. Paige thinks that it is funny that suddenly Evan has taken a liking to Ray but then he brings up that Russell and Paige are doing all this work without a contract. Hank goes to see the chef and tells him that his blood/alcohol levels are off the charts yet he claims that he has barely had anything to drink. They now need to run more tests to confirm what is causing him to always be drunk.

So there is a female race car driver and her dad, Dave who is managing her is having a lot of problems. As he is guiding his daughter, he falls over and Divya realizes that his pacemaker needs a jolt. The pacemaker was loose when it is supposed to be in the heart which caused him difficulty breathing. His daughter Ashley may have lost the race trial with her time but she had no choice; she loves her dad and had to make sure he was okay. Everyone is at Ray's huge dinner; after all, he owns a prominent restaurant and is trying to get Olivia back. Emma is sitting next to Hank and shows him the college pamphlets and asks if he is going back to school, jokingly. She says that she can be his person that he calls upon and wants honesty.

Sadly, Emma won't tell him the truth about where she got the phone. The chef comes out and Ray compliments him on his fine cooking and then invites him to join them for dinner. At the same time, Cat Deeley shows up and asks Paige if she would mind helping redecorate for her. Evan tries to interfere and then Paige puts him in his place because she can handle things with Russell on their own. At home, Divya has decided to keep her nanny and let him take the class at night. She realized that she was just jealous of others being with her daughter more than her. So, she decides that she will only work part-time so she can be home more.

Ray and Paige are talking about how Olivia never showed up and he says that she resented him for paying more attention to his work. It finally clicks for Paige that Evan was just looking out for her. The chef comes out and is acting super drunk then he dances on a table and falls, fracturing his foot. Turns out that the chef was actually getting drunk on food as it was turning in to yeast in his stomach, mimicking alcohol. At the end of the night, Ray proposes to Evan that they go into the business as partners. It's Ray's way or no way apparently.

Summary: Hank and Divya treat a house sitter while Jeremiah's patient is a burlesque dancer. Paige makes an important find. Emma starts supplying info for a gossip site.

There is a huge house party going on and Emma is there, camera phone in hand. Evan startles himself when he dreams that he is in bed with Ray but he jumps up and sees that he is with Paige. She asks him what the dream was about but he claims that he does not remember. She tries to get intimate with him but he shuts her down so she gets upset but then he changes his mind. Divya gets out of the shower and finds Jeremiah holding Sashi (her baby) and feeding her. She gets upset because she discovers that Sashi is liking formula more than her breast milk and now she knows that she has to tell Hank and Evan she will only be working part-time.

Emma gets home and Hank is waiting up for and he wants to know why she has been coming home so late. She reminds him that it is summer in the Hampton's and that she is a teenager. Back at the party, the DJ is spinning when he electrocutes himself, falls and all the lights go out! Jeremiah has called Hank in advance to let him know that Divya will be working part-time. Then the two take off together to go meet Billy, the DJ who was electrocuted. He is staying at a big-time celeb's house for the summer and Hank believes that he needs to go to the hospital immediately.

Paige and Evan have morning breakfast and counseling and he talks about how conflicted he is about working with Ray but he does not want HankMeds to fail. Jeremiah and his bartender, Viviana are at the burlesque club as one of the dancers is suffering extreme pain. Jeremiah thinks that she has swallowed some feathers and he wants to clear her passages. At the same time, it is revealed that the bartender may fancy Jeremiah as much as he fancies her. At Hank's, Evan is trying to remind him about the fun that they had as kids so that he won't worry about Emma partying.

Hank and Divya are with Billy chatting about how he is and they learn that he has a salt problem so he needs to stop drinking. All he wants to do is be happy because he knows that life is too short. He needs to restore his sodium so he has to relax or he will become paralyzed. Russell and Paige go to a couple's home where they have just thrown a huge party and inherited a house and antique rug from a grandma. The problem is that this rug is priceless and takes lifetimes to weave so they destroyed something amazingly precious yet they don't care.

HankMeds new hospital has been pre-approved for use so they are sort of operating out of there. Jeremiah is working on Hope, the burlesque dancer when Divya walks in. When he finds that there are no obstructions in her throat, he sends her away for the time being. He then hands over binders about breast milk versus formula and the comparisons which makes Divya feel awkward. Hank goes to meet Evan when therapist Bob walks in as he is watering plants. Suddenly, Hank goes in to a full on therapy session. He talks about his lack of memory.

Hank also talks about how he had to take care of his mom when she was sick and dying after their father left. He spent so much time protecting Evan then kept moving on and is now protecting Emma when he should just let her be a teenager. Paige and Russell are talking about the rug, which is now beyond repair and he is mad so they decide to plot revenge. Bob shows up at Evan's because he feels like he is having a personal crisis. Wouldn't we all love to have an on-call therapist? Evan reveals that he heard Hank's conversation from the night before and cannot believe how much the brothers rely on one another or how much Hank missed.

Bob advises Evan that it is time for him to let Hank be the child while Evan is the adult. Jeremiah goes to the bar and overhears Viviana on the phone where he learns that she is having immigration issues. He offers to help then says that he is going to see Hope so she follows him. Divya and Hank show up at the place where Billy is staying and catch him having another party that he is DJ'ing. He claims that he was feeling better but it is clear that he is about to collapse. Hank tells everyone to leave as he and Divya try to keep Billy from becoming paralyzed.

Viviana and Jeremiah are sitting together while they watch Hope perform and he still won't talk about the test results. Hope yawns and then her neck starts to hurt again and she collapses on the stage. Jeremiah has to give her an injection in her neck to work with her heart rate. She is now going to be okay while Billy is at the hospital with Divya and Hank. They say that he will be fine in about six weeks then Hank sends Divya home. Billy will be in the hospital for three to four days but needs to stay away from electricity. Turns out, he is a professional house sitter and Hank tells him not to grow up too fast at all.

As Divya is leaving the hospital, she almost runs in to Jeremiah and tells him how conflicted she is. She wants to work part-time but she loves her job so much yet she wants to be an amazing mother as well. He tells her that she is a master of the impossible so she can do anything she sets her mind to. When Jeremiah is leaving the hospital, he runs into Viviana where he tells her that Hope will be fine over time. They awkwardly miss-kiss and she goes to walk away but he stops her for a real kiss. Hank and Evan go to return the house keys for Billy and then Evan gets the idea that they should go swimming in the pool.

Hank never got to have fun like a kid so skinny-dipping with his brother then getting caught by the homeowner was amazing. They run away so fast and giggle like little kids as Paige is at Russell's home. She goes upstairs to get her book but she walks in to the wrong room and sees that he has had the antique rug cleaned and kept it. Hmmmm... The brothers get back to Hank's and they tell Emma to have a great time. They still do not know she is working for someone and infiltrating the Hampton's finest.

Summary:	Divya works with a patient who is trying to get pregnant. Hank decides to renew a romance with a woman he met while in Europe. Emma gets an invitation to a high-profile party. Dviya is worried about Jeremiah's developing relationship with Viviana.

Hank has a new girlfriend! And her name is Charlotte. The mysterious Charlotte appeared out of nowhere one day and it's almost as if there's history between her and Hank even though Evan can't place her and Paige has never heard of her.

But it doesn't take long, after her arrival, for Charlotte to wrap Hank around her little finger. The two were together during Hank's year away with Boris and for some reason (not a good one) their relationship didn't work out the first time. So Hank wants to give them a second chance.

He had fun with her while they were traveling the world and he desperately wants to recapture that now that he's letting loose in his personal life. However Evan wants all the details. His brother doesn't just date anyone — Hank can be kind of picky. Plus he's curious about why Hank never mentioned her till now.

Not that they have time to sit around and gossip over espressos. The guys found out that their new sister has become something of a "rising star" in the Hamptons. Someone was bound to notice that she was showing up at all the hottest parties and the person that did also happens to pick what's hot and what's not for the young socialite set. So Emma, affectionately called Emma Who because no one knows where she came from, is the hottest thing and unfortunately for her brothers — rich guys are starting to take an interest. You know guys that can afford to cart Emma around in chauffeur driven cars and send over a whole arrange of expensive clothes!

A big brother's worst nightmare!

As for Charlotte, when Evan did get to meet her — he made a fool of himself. He was so hung up on her being blind that he mistakenly thought she was deaf as well. Which led to him constantly tripping over his words. Yet that's not even new either. Half of the reason he and Paige are still in therapy is Evan's mouth. Sometimes he simply doesn't think things through.

And when it's not that then it's when he often forgets that Paige might also have a point of view. She was so distraught over what her boss did (stealing his client's historic rug) that what she really wanted from her husband is for him to listen to her before siding with her. It's really not that hard!

Although the game Emma is playing is. The reason she became the IT girl is because her bosses at the gossip blog wanted her to be easily recognized and invited to all the good events, but they also want a returned bang for their buck. They want pictures of the elite behaving badly while all Emma wants to do is have some fun.

She got invited to a party hosted by this guy she's could be interested in so she tried putting away her camera phone for once in order to be in the moment. Yet that moment was ruined when a friend of his slipped him drugs into his drink.

Cinco, who Emma was hoping would turn out to be Prince Charming, freaked out on her and came a little too close to doing her serious harm. So that made Emma feel a lot less guilty about all the photos she took at his party and was ready to sell. Though she did pause when he sent her an apology in the form of expensive shoes. And it also made Hank miss a crucial dinner date with Charlotte. He was the one that came to both Emma and Cinco's rescue with medical bag when Cinco nearly killed someone.

They had broken up when he had stupidly asked if she would have surgery on her eyes. As a doctor — it was his curiosity that made him ask but it was her pride that made her break up with him. Then that all changed when she sought to get the surgery herself. She wasn't doing it for him though. Charlotte looked into procedure for herself. She used to be able to see before a freak accident blinded her and she wanted to see if she can get her old life back.

But Charlotte changed her mind several times before finally going through with the surgery. She was scared of the risks and Hank had to remind her that she's the biggest risk-taker he knows.

And speaking of risks, Jeremiah got to go on a date and, sadly, for him it might be their last date. The woman he likes is about to have her deportation hearing soon so unless he's willing to move to Mexico then this relationship isn't looking so good. Even outsiders think so. Divya wondered why Jeremiah was being so secretive and so spotting him with a pretty younger woman exchanging money spells out the wrong kind of story.

Summary:	As Hank heads to New York with Charlotte, Evan and Ray prepare for the grand opening of HankLab. A nail artist needs HankMed's medical expertise. Divya seeks to protect Jeremiah.

Since Divya unexpectedly caught Jeremiah on his date — she's been curious! this girl he's been seeing has come out of left field and naturally Divya wants to know more about this mystery woman. However this is Jeremiah we're talking about and getting beyond his tin man exterior isn't always easy. So on Divya's first attempt at being a snoop — she was shut down!

But chin up. Even if she is a failure as a friend (for not noticing anything outside of the baby universe she's been occupying since her own little one was born) then at least she can make up for it by being a good physician assistant. Hank Med has just branched out into Hank Labs and literally on their grand opening — a new client fell right into their lap.

A perfumist, man who concocts perfumes for a living, collapsed on their site. And he's going to need a few tests to be done before Hank can officially diagnose him with anything. Though his loss of spell is worrisome especially for someone in his profession.

Meanwhile Divya had to deal a sick manicurist. The woman developed a weird ongoing cough and so the two of them got to speaking during the check-up. And, well, one thing led to another and the manicurist admitted that sometimes she feels like a bartender as in people are willing to tell her their whole life stories. Nothing held back!

And the last part resonated with Divya because the few things she did manage to get out of Jeremiah was that this new woman he's been seeing happens to be a bartender. So Divya decided to stop dancing around the mystery and/or problem and meet this woman in person. But, due to some confusion when they first met, Viviana lost whatever chance Divya was ever going to give her on getting accepted into their off-beat family.

Divya introduced herself as Jeremiah's friend and that made Viviana assume she was the immigration lawyer that Jeremiah was promising to set her up with. Now remember, Divya hadn't like seeing the money exchange between Viviana and Jeremiah earlier so that plus her assumption Jeremiah is funding an immigration lawyer all concluded in her mind to Viviana being a gold-digger!

So Divya warned her away and poor Jeremiah — Viviana made sure to stay away!

He was still trying to call her after she ignored so many calls that it was pretty obvious she was doing it on purpose. And while Divya was breaking Jeremiah's heart — Emma learned the real price of fame by going through a heartbreak of her own. The Hamptons blog she's been getting exclusive pictures for turned on her when she forgot to clue them in on a single dinner she went to. But, in all fairness, it was a dinner with Cinco, Paige, and Evan so it was more like a family occasion than it was an A-list event.

Yet that doesn't seem to matter to people that refer to themselves as the "Snark". They published an article claiming Emma's five seconds of fame are up. And immediately after the article was published — Emma sought out validation from Cinco that she still mattered to him. She sent him text after text. All of which he ignored so she got payback.

Emma sent in a photo of Cinco being treated by Hank on his birthday after the young man started to freak out on bath salts. She did it when she was angry and then she conveniently forgot all about it when he resurfaced a few days later. He was on a boat and his phone died, but he got in touch with her the moment he could.

Neither of Hank Med's patients are doing so well. Hank's perfumist collapsed for a second time in how many days and Divya's manicurist also started having problems with one of her five senses — like sight. The poor woman started losing her vision when she was on her Vespa and nearly collided with several pedestrians before a floral stand took her down. Hank and Divya quickly rushed to her side and thanks to some quick thinking on their part they were able to treat the stroke she was clearly suffering from (half her face went slack).

Afterwards Divya was feeling so proud of herself and yet Jeremiah came to her in near tears about losing Viviana. He wanted to know what he did or how terrible he must have been that he pushed someone he cared about so far away from him and even though she still felt like she was in the right — she explained to him that she told Viviana to back off. Divya tried to say that she interfered as his friend and that Viviana must have been defensive with her for a reason, but Jeremiah walked away from Divya not really caring about anything else she had to say. He just wanted her gone — he asked Divya to move out!

Hank was in the city with Charlotte wanting to be there for her as she went through post-op when Emma's picture was published. Her boss was so vindictive about her being lackluster on her job that he used the photo to both smear Cinco's and Hank's reputation. He made it seem like Hank was the one administering the drugs instead of saving the trust fund kid's life.

Summary: A prospective patient for the clinical trial leads Hank and Boris down to Argentina. Jeremiah attempts to mend fences with Viviana. Evan solicits Ray's help. Divya and Sashi's grandmother meet.

Hank talks to Charlotte and tells her misses her and says he can't wait to see her. Evan sneaks up and interrupts his phone call and mocks him. He plops down and asks if Emma is home but Hank says she's at work then hanging with Cinco. Hank says Paige is working late at Ray's again. Evan takes a call and tells Paige he loves her and tells her to calm down and says they are on the way. They rush to Ray's and bring him to the hospital. He's got abdominal pains and Hank says he has to take it easy.

Hank says he has an infection that could harm his liver. He says it could kill him but he has to stay overnight. The ER is crazy because of a restaurant fire — where Emma works. Hank looks around the ER for her and then she comes in looking smoky but unharmed. Ray asks why she was there late and she says they were playing poker and the kitchen caught on fire. Paige hauls her off.

Ray tells them sometimes when a business burns it's not an accident. They look worried. Emma finds a man in the kitchen — it's Boris. She says he's not who she pictured — she thought he'd be scarier. Hank comes in and Emma takes off. Hank says it's his sister. He says he's there for a favor then Hank gets a text from Charlotte. Boris is surprised she's back in the picture.

Hank tells him the clinical trial is going well and is being expanded but is out of funds. He says he and Marisa are footing the bill and there's a new candidate in Argentina. He wants them to go together for a few days and Hank asks whose jet they should take. Paige tells Russell to say his goodbyes to the golden fancy egg. He says they disowned it when they learned it wasn't created for a czar.

They head up to the house to find a screaming Mrs Nguyen. They tell her that one of her items was lost during last summer's appraisal and he's come to return it. She says she scored big on the insurance claim. She says she fired the maid she thought stole it. She snatches it and walks off.

Evan reads an article Oz wrote talking about Hank being a drug doctor. Emma goes out to look for a new job. Hank tells them he's going to Argentina and thanks them for covering them. Evan thinks Snark Bite cost them but Jeremiah says it's always a slow week. Divya tells them she's living at her father's since she and Jeremiah are on the outs.

She says she was trying to look out for him. This is about Viviana — he says Divya is wrong and that now Vivian will be deported. Divya stomps out. Jeremiah says it won't affect Hank Med at all. Too late!

Russell and Paige go to see Wendy to apologize to her and give her a gift — a nice ruby. Wendy tells them she told the insurance company she didn't steal the egg. They tell her they just found it. Wendy thanks them and says Mrs. Nguyen won't admit she's wrong. Wendy says she's got a union job and is visiting with her sister on the island. She says her family is away so she's sick and alone.

Wendy is sneezing and coughing. She tells them she's been sick for over a week and doesn't know what she has. Russell wants to get her to a doctor. Paige agrees.

Evan finds Jeremiah and asks him about the thing with Divya. He says she seems upset. He tells Jeremiah that Divya adores him and considers him a close friend. He tells Evan he wants to talk about Viviana — he wants to know how to get her back. Evan tells him that's how he and Paige started out but he never gave up and advises him to help with her immigration issue without letting her know.

Evan says he'll look generous and selfless. Divya tells Hank she really thought Vivian was using Jeremiah and says he can be so vulnerable. Hank says he thinks her intentions were good but she feels awful. She says she has to fix things with him and apologize to her but Hank thinks she needs to take a step back. Ray is there and Hank tells him he needs to be resting.

Ray says Olivia may be coming out and he has to get things arranged. Hank tells him that's great. Divya says she's not good at minding her own business and already meddled again. He tells her to come along to Argentina so Sashi can visit her grandmother in Buenos Aires. He says there is plenty of room on the jet and it will be good for her to be great. Divya agrees.

Ray comes down and Hank tells him to lie down. He checks his abdomen for sensitivity. He says it's good news and tells him to finish up with his meds and he'll be fine. Hank has left a list of emergency numbers for Emma but tells her to call Paige and Evan first but not to tell him he saw that. Emma tells Hank she's sorry about the Snark Bites photo and he tells her it will blow over soon.

But then Evan comes in and says he made headlines again and there's a lawsuit. Evan tells him to go to Argentina and says he'll take care of the snarks. Emma looks worried. Jeremiah checks out Wendy. He asks if she's lost weight and she has. He asks if she's been to Vietnam recently but she hasn't. He draws blood to send for tests and tells her to take it easy.

Paige tells her Russell will take her home and stay with her until her sister gets back. Boris enjoys classical music on the flight down South. Hank has classic jazz rock playing. Divya has a crying baby she's singing to. Russell chats with Wendy who's still feeling awful. She tells him Paige seems nice. There's a knock at the door and he tells her he'll get it.

It's Jeremiah and Wendy says her nose is bleeding and won't stop. She says she thinks her gums are bleeding too. Jeremiah checks her out then sprays her nose to try and stop the bleeding. He gives her meds to constrict her blood vessels. Her fever is higher and he says she has a low platelet count and starts her on antibiotics. Russell agrees to continue watching her and tells Jeremiah to let Paige know he volunteered.

Ray is ranting on the phone while Evan sits there. He says he has to go to the restaurant because his will be busier because the other one burned. He tells him he needs to figure out the Snark Hampton thing and Evan says he needs to figure out who Oz is. He's looking for source code on the photo. Ray says he knows a guy that may help. He says he's like Eddie Snowden but without being in Russia.

Paige comes out and says she has a good place for the Amphoras — Ray thinks they're flowers but she says they're Greek jugs. He says he wants to literally sweep Olivia off her feet. Paige says she'll order the flowers for him.

Divya pulls up to a large estate house and pulls out Sashi. Her abuela takes her in her arms and coos at the baby. She tells Divya to take a nap. Boris and Hank are in the country and he says he feels at home there. Tobias and his son Jakob ride up The boy says he wanted to go riding. Boris introduces Hank. Tobias walks with a cane and Hank says they can start the exam.

Paige tells Evan she's working late at Ray's then sets their breakfast on fire. He seems jumpy. He asks if Russell can do it and she says Russell is busy redeeming himself. She says they owe Ray and he says that's what scares him. Emma comes in with Cinco and Parker and the kids say they might be able to get their parents to drop the lawsuit. Cinco says Emma is sweet, not like other girls. Hmmm...

Hank checks Tobias over thoroughly while Boris plays with Jakob. He tells Tobias that there are good signs. He says he's going to send out a blood panel to check for the marker. Tobias says it's more than he dared hope for. Hank says it's still a trial and he'll be — Tobias says an Indian rabbit — then says guinea pig. He says they never knew what killed his father but it was terrible and he doesn't want his son to see it.

He says having a diagnosis will be a comfort. Boris says he and his wife are working hard to reverse their fates. Divya sleeps while Sashi and her grandma bond. She wakes and says it's the longest she's slept in five months. She asks if she's been fussy but she says no. She shows Divya they're little game. She sings to her granddaughter and bounces her. She says it was Rafa's favorite.

She tells Divya she lost Rafa's father early and says she knows how hard it is to raise a child alone. She tells her she is tired and emotiona and isn't always making the right decisions. She tells her that Sashi has relatives on four continents and wants her to understand the differences of all the cultures. Divya says she noticed her knees were hurting and they talk arthritis.

Jeremiah gets someone to help with Viviana's hearing. Paige comes in and says Wendy is getting worse and is saying she has to get back to Queens. Paige tells him she works in an airport — he was shocked — he didn't know she worked in the city. He thinks she has airport malaria — very rare. They get there to find Wendy having a seizure. Russell called 911 before they got there and Jeremiah starts an IV.

Russell is freaking out. Jeremiah gives her some medication and her body relaxes. He says he has to add anti-malarials because the disease is in her brain and it's not good. In Argentina, Boris and Hank check out people dancing in the square and talk about Charlotte. He says he misses her so much and can't stop thinking about her.

Boris says that's how it starts then you have a family. Boris says it's hard to see Tobias after losing his father that way and wants Carlos to enjoy life, not just endure it. Hank says he will always be there for him. Jeremiah explains the malaria to Wendy and Russell and Paige are there. He says it's likely that the culprit mosquito is long dead and she'll make a full recovery.

Russell offers to get Wendy her job back with Mona and she says no. She says if they hadn't lost the egg she would still be working for that horrible woman. Paige says not to mention it. Divya walks with Lorena who says she could help by taking care of Sashi. She says she could keep her there in Argentina and bring her to the Hamptons when the busy season is down. She says Rafe will come soon.

Divya thanks her but declines and says she promises she'll see Sashi again soon. Lorena backs down. Viviana is waiting for Jeremiah to thank him. She says the legal aid lawyer was terrible and the lawyer he sent says she thinks they can win. She tells him they need to talk. She tells him Divya thought he was taking advantage and admits she hasn't been completely honest.

She says she's been accepted at a school in Tulsa for physical therapy. Jeremiah is stunned. She says if she doesn't get deported, she'll be leaving for school. She says she should have told him sooner but says she likes him. He says he likes her too. Viviana says he's gone out of his way for her. He tells her he hopes she wins her case.

Boris says he'll miss Argentina. Jakob comes and tells them his dad can't get out of bed. They find him on the floor. Boris goes to call an ambulance while Hank tries to revive Tobias. He tries to shock him out of defib. He starts CPR. Paige tells Evan she's almost done and Ray asks to talk to him. He tells him he loves his wife and the house looks great.

Ray says his guy got the number of the phone that sent the photo. Paige rings off and Evan is frustrated. He gets the text and calls the number. He hears the phone ringing and then notices it's in the house. Emma comes in and asks why he's calling her. He says it was a mistake and she skips away. Evan is floored and dismayed.

MS Warren is on crutches and Jeremiah asks what happened. He tells her he appreciates her help with the case. She says she fell on the way in and never made it to court. He wonders who helped Viviana. Divya is on the phone with the lawyer she sent in. She thanks her and tells her to send her the bill. Lorena comes in and says she saw her bags. She hands Sashi to her abuela.

Lorena tells her she can't leave. She says she talked to Rafa who wants his daughter to stay. Lorena says a minor can't leave the country without both parents agreement. Divya says she has an American passport but Lorena says she registered her today for an Argentinian one. Divya asks if she's threatening her and Lorena says no, she just wants her son to see his daughter.

Paige helps Roy make up the bed for his wife. They strip the bed and then get in a pillow fight. There's someone outside with a gun and soots into the window. Ray thinks she was shot but she says it was him. We see he has a bullet wound in his shoulder.

Summary: Evans deals with distancing HankMed from Ray's past and with Emmy's role in the photos disparaging Hank. Divya must figure out a way home and work with Jeremiah to treat a model with a eating disorder. Hank and Boris are back from Argentina.

Ray realizes he's shot and scrambles out of the room. He sees a car peel out and curses. Paige tells him it's okay and says he needs help but he says it's a through and through. She says Hank is out of town and he tells her to call Jerry — aka Jeremiah. He treats him and says Ray will be okay with antibiotics. Jeremiah says he has to call the police but Ray says it's a misdemeanor like jaywalking. Ray says he has nothing to tell the cops since he didn't see who did it. He tells Jeremiah making the call will piss him off.

Evan rushes in and hugs Paige then also mentions the police. He says he already called them. Jeremiah stares at him and Evan asks what? At the house, Emma comes home and looks at medical stuff in the office. She picks the lock to a medicine cabinet and grabs out a prescription pad. She locks it back up and walks off pad in hand.

Paige tells Evan she can't believe how many questions the cops had. She tells him about how it happened and says being shot at is so not normal, unless you're Ray. Evan is in stunned silence. He says he's worried about what a close call she had and she reassures him. They kiss. She asks what she was thinking taking Ray on as a client and he says better than a partner. He says he has to get out of it but doesn't know how.

Boris and Hank are still in Argentina. They discuss Tobias and Hank says he's better. He asks if this will keep him out of the clinical trial and Hank says he's no longer eligible because of the cardiac issues. He says he thinks their diseases are too different for him to be in the study. Hank says he'll keep checking and will let him know.

Divya brings Sashi to see Lorena and says they can't stay. She asks how she would have felt if someone had tried to separate her from Rafa. Divya says she's holding them hostage and Lorena insists it's hospitality. Divya asks about a rash on her elbow and Lorena asks why she would help and she says she can tell she's in pain.

Boris reassures Tobias and Hank says he has to go to the hospital. Tobias says he doesn't want to worry Jakob. He stands up to hug his son and then collapses. He accidentally dislocated his son's finger when he grabbed onto him as he fell. Hank pops the finger back in joint and the boy cries out but then thanks him. He sends him inside with Boris to ice it before he splints it. Tobias says it was his pride trying to hide the truth that hurt his son. He agrees to go to the hospital and Hank is relieved.

On the beach, a model, Sloane, shoots a commercial eating a big burger and she coughs out the bite. Jeremiah shows up on set and the director, Nash Wexler, introduces himself. Nash tells him he needs to fix Sloane and Jeremiah says he doesn't understand anything. He says she always pulls diva stunts and plays sick. He tells Jeremiah to examine and treat her so they can finish their sexy clam sandwich commercial.

Jeremiah checks her out and asks questions. She says she's nauseous on and off. She admits it's happened before and says it has happened after every meal. She says it's kept her skinny but is making her miserable. Jeremiah agrees to give her an anti nausea and run some tests. She asks for water and then gets super demanding. She asks Jeremiah if he can help before she becomes a diva then tells him she's going.

Evan comes to see Ray and says they need to talk. Ray says they don't. He says he knows what he's going through — he says he thinks he's scared and angry and wants things back under control and calm. Ray asks him to sit and says he gets it and he's sorry. Ray says it will never happen again and Evan asks how he can guarantee that but Ray says it's under control.

Evan says he can't do it any more. He says things have to change. Ray says he understands and holds out for a shake. He says he will be just a silent partner and Evan says that's not what he had in mind but Ray is already hugging it out with him.

Lorena tells Divya what she takes for the pain and rash. Divya tells her that her doctors are treating her for the wrong type of arthritis. Lorena asks how she knows it's true and Divya says to check with her doctor. She tells her that when Rafa shows up they will not be one big happy family and says she and Rafa have an arrangement that's working.

Divya says if she takes the medication she'll be able to travel and visit her and Rafa. Divya says she's going whether she likes it or not and tells her to back down if she wants to be part of her granddaughter's life. Lorena looks like she's caved and tells Divya to give her the shot. She and her daughter are then on the plane with Hank and Boris heading home.

Hank says he just got all of Divya's texts about Lorena — he had no signal in Argentina. Boris says if he had known he could have helped. She says she's glad she handled it on her own. She gets a text and says it's all of Hank's texts on Tobias. They tell Boris that Tobias has an orphan disease — a disease that no one researches because it's so rare. Boris says maybe he should adopt some of these orphan diseases. Hank says it would be costly but Boris just smiles.

We see Sloane walking on the beach for the commercial shoot looking sexy. She goes to bite into the clam sandwich then leans to one side. The director yells at her to stop slouching and asks the people if the sandwich is too heavy and to find a lighter one. They start again. Sloane strides on the sand and then goes to bite the sandwich and then vomits.

Nash asks if she's really sick or just openly bulimic and Jeremiah says he doesn't know yet. He has a portable x-ray machine and gives her some solution to drink before the test. She says it's bad but no clam sandwich. Nash comes to check on her and she says she's so sorry. He says he just wants her better so they can get this in the can.

She vomits on him and apologizes repeatedly. Nash says it happens and that he wanted to go back to Italy and buy new pants anyway. Jeremiah says she needs a CT and is really sick. Paige and Evan hug Bob as part of therapy and it goes on uncomfortably long. Evan admits in therapy that he tried to break it off with Ray but it didn't work out.

Bob goes with Evan to see Ray and tells him it's okay to walk away. Ray answers the door and asks who he has with him. Evan introduces Bob as his therapist and Ray asks why he's there. Evan says they need to talk and Bob is a good facilitator. He asks to come in but Ray says it's a bad time. Evan says it's not all good. Ray glares and Bob says they can come back. He's nervous.

Ray steps outside and says he can use some fresh air and they can take a walk in the woods. Bob says he gets eaten alive by bugs — he's obviously afraid and Evan tells him it's okay to walk away, so he does. Ray and Evan head out for the walk alone.

Jeremiah tells Sloane he didn't find anything and says all her tests are clean. She asks why she keeps throwing up and he says he can't find anything physical. She asks if he thinks she's anorexic or bulimic and she tells him she wants to eat but just can't. He offers to order a colonoscopy. He says he understands but she explains all the pain and hunger she's dealing with. He apologizes and he tells her that she's not the first woman he's disappointed this week. She thanks him, fires him, then leaves.

Ray and Evan walk out into the woods and he sees Ray reach for his jacket and worries that he has a gun but then when he's just scratching, he works up his nerve and says he doesn't want to be his partner at all. Ray asks how that would work since he just invested in all the equipment and Evan can't afford to buy him out. Evan works up his courage and says he's done.

Ray tells him not to walk away from him — he says no one walks away from him. Evan pauses and then walks on. Hank greets Evan and Divya. Evan tells him they have to talk but Hank just wants coffee. Hank says something has to be done about Jeremiah and Divya but then Emma comes in and tells him she's glad he's back. She goes to hug Hank but Evan blocks her and sends her out.

Evan whispers to his brother that Emma took the photo of him and sent it to Snarkhamptoms. He tries to tell him about Ray but then Jeremiah interrupts to tell them about Sloane. Divya runs through a list of diagnoses and he says no to all. Hank tells Divya and Jeremiah to go see Sloane together. Jeremiah says he has to change Ray's bandages then fills him in on the shooting.

Paige is painting and Bob advises her on art therapy but she says there's something still missing. He offers her alternate strategies like alternate birthing. She wants to go talk to Ray and Bob tries to stop her. She's insistent and Bob says she's impressive.

Jeremiah and Divya head to the beach and Nash rushes up and says she's gotten worse. She's lying in a fetal position and says she can't straighten out. She's crying. Divya says she's got a fever and a weak, thready pulse. Her abdomen is hard and they tell them to call 911. He thinks it may be Wilkie Syndrome and he says they have to do the Hayes maneuver.

They roll her onto her back and Divya tells her it will help. He presses on her abdomen and the pain goes away. She tells him the pain is gone and thanks him. Jeremiah says they have to get her to the hospital.

Paige comes to Ray's to talk. She says there is a missing piece. Olivia, Ray's wife, walks in and says she has some nerve coming there. Paige tells her that she's so glad she's there and tells her that all of the things they put into the house was to reflect Ray's love for her. She keeps chattering and Olivia stops her and says he was telling the truth and that he's not having an affair with her.

Paige says of course not. Ray says he's changed and they kiss passionately. Olivia shakes her hand and then Paige says she was the one that shot Ray. She says the bruise was from firing a gun and the reason there was no car noise was because she's driving a Tesla. Olivia says it was just a little warning shot to send him a message.

Paige says lucky for her she's a good shot and Ray says she comes from a long line of cops and that's how they met. Olivia says he looks sexy in handcuffs. Paige tells Ray he looks sweaty and then he gets faint and slumps down into a chair and grabs his shoulder. Hank raises over to check on him. He tells Ray it smells sweet and he sees gas bubbles. He says it's gas gangrene.

Olivia says it was a minor injury but Hank tells Olivia that he has a chronic liver condition that impairs his ability to heal so this could be life threatening. Olivia sits in shock and Hank says they have to do aggressive surgery to save Ray's arm.

Divya explains to Sloane that she has Wilkie Syndrome, a rare gastrovascular disorder. Jeremiah says she'll live and Divya says her stomach was being squeezed. They tell her she has to have surgery in the morning to correct it and she'll be fine. Jeremiah apologizes for not diagnosing her sooner and she says sorry for firing him and thanks him for not giving up on her.

Ray tells Evan now he knows why he didn't want the cops involved. They were both trying to protect their wives. Ray says all Olivia really wants is to take care of him and says now she can. He invites Evan to join them but he says he's got to get busy and find a new lab space and new investor. Ray says he won't have any troubles.

Hank comes in and says he'll make a good recovery and Ray says Olivia will take good care of him. Hank says he'll fill his next doctor in and firmly tells him they're done. He and his brother walk out. Jeremiah tells Divya he knows she hired the lawyer to help Viviana because she doesn't give up on people even when they're mad and kick her out.

Divya says she had to do something and Jeremiah says he should have been honest about needing less noise and more sleep he couldn't get with a baby in the house. He says he was afraid to be embarrassed if things didn't work out with Viviana so he didn't tell her. Divya says sorries too and tells him that he's stronger than she gave him credit for. Divya asks if they're good and Jeremiah squeezes her hand. Hank and Evan see this and are pleased.

Summary:	Hank treats Cinco while Evan and Paige work with Emma to set a trap for Oz. Divya and Jeremiah have a bitter boat-builder as a patient. Hank assists Charlotte.

Hank and Evan are inventorying their pills. Evan tells Hank he should be with Charlotte in case she gets her vision back but Hank says they have to deal with the Emma issue. They both think she stole the prescription pad but wonder why she took it. They think it's from scamming with her mom. Evan says she has wealthy friends she may want money to keep up with. They plan to sit down with Emma in a family summit. Hank gets a call from Emma saying Cinco needs help. Evan says he can't see him since they're suing them.

Hank says he has to go see what he needs. He sees Emma playing with the dog at Cinco's and she thanks him for coming. He invites her to dinner for family night but she says she may have plans. Cinco says his wrist is killing him. Hank checks it out and Parker says his tennis wrist is boring. Hank checks the wrist and asks for some medication. Hank says he needs an x-ray.

Evan shows Jeremiah his business plan he's prepared for Boris but says they need to give him a little song and dance. He tells Jeremiah he's there for Q&A. He asks why not Hank and he says it's better it's just them. Boris shows up and says he's glad to meet Jeremiah in person. He says he could have just dropped the files off.

Hank does a portable x-ray of the wrist and Cinco is surprised by her concern. Hank says there's no break but it could be carpal tunnel. He says to take some ibuprofen. Emma gets a text from Oz. Cinco asks if it's about her new car and Hank asks how she can afford a new car. Cinco says she's worked really hard for it and tells Hank that Emma is amazing.

Dan is pulling the bandages off Charlotte's eyes. She blinks and sees Hank. She tells him it's nice to see him and he says it's nice to be seen. Divya and Jeremiah are at the marina. She tells him Rafa is asking for joint custody. She says he's being influenced by his mother. She says she wants Sachi to know her father but doesn't want her back in Argentina. He offers help but Divya declines politely.

They head over to Chase and she introduces Jeremiah. He says he likes the name of his shop — Charon. He says he's having joint pain, fatigue and headaches but thought it was from extra work. He says he gets texts from Ron's blog. He asks what they think and Jeremiah says he seems a little resentful. He says they'll run some tests and Divya gives him an air monitor to check for chemicals.

Paige tells Evan that Emma is good at avoiding the truth and doesn't think she'll come clean. Evan says they need to follow her and get some evidence. They agree it's the best thing for her. Hank lays out objects for Charlotte to consider. He asks her to see what's round and she's not sure. He reminds her she has a session for the occupational therapist.

He tells her he's excited about her progress but doesn't want her to overtax herself. He tells her to be realistic. She says she likes the way his face changes when he smiles. Evan and Paige lurk behind a newspaper when they see her near a pharmacy. They wonder if she's using Hank's prescription pad for drugs but then she bypasses it so they hide.

She sits down on a bench and pulls out something they can't see. They creep closer. She leaves something wrapped in a newspaper on the bench and leaves. Emma is there and they ask what she's doing. Paige asks what she left. She goes and picks it up and Emma says she can explain. She says to look closer. She says the first page is Hank's and the rest is just a notepad.

They ask why she took it and she says she's trying to out Oz. She says she sold the pictures to Snarkhampton and she said she sent the photo because she was mad at Cinco. She says Oz is interested because he thought the pad had copies of all the scrips he's written for famous people. She says with that she can out him and get a retraction. She gets a text from Oz saying he's out because she's having a family reunion.

Divya and Jeremiah come tell Chase his blood work is clean. He says it's great news. He says he finished his boat. He's kind of hyper and shows her a model boat he built. Jeremiah says there are no toxic readings. Chase is blabbering and Jeremiah says he seems to have neurological euphoria. He agrees to go to the hospital cheerfully and runs off saying he'll drive.

Charlotte and Hank walk by the water and talk about the different shades of blue in the sky and the water. He tells her that Emma and Cinco seem like good kids but there's evidence to the contrary. She tells him she likes Emma but remembers what she was like as a teen. She's startled by bikers riding by and he tells her they weren't going that fast. She says she'll never ride a bike again.

Emma walks through town and Paige and Evan watch her from a nearby balcony. She leaves the paper with the pad then walks away. Evan says Emma shouldn't approach him but she wants to tell him off. Emma says the money was good — enough to buy her first car. Evan says they could have helped her with it. She says Auto Trader made it easy and shows them the app (hello product placement).

She gets a text from Oz who says — not today. Emma is stressing out and says she wants to make this up to them, especially Hank. Jeremiah is at Boris' and he tells Divya on a call that he agrees that she was right to admit Chase to the hospital. Jeremiah offers Boris a drink and he asks for Ovaltine. Boris says he probably wants to know why he called him there and they go to sit.

Charlotte can't sleep and gets out of bed. She walks to the bathroom but then hears a chime from her phone with a message from Hank telling her he doesn't want her out alone yet and saying he'll be back soon. She tries to get to the bathtub and things are blurry and strange. She bumps the tub and then falls in and knocks herself out.

Parker rants about Cinco's arm and wants to know why his fingers are swellings. Hank says there's no nerve damage. He asks Parker to give them a minute and she asks if it's sexually transmitted then leaves. Hank tells him that drug use can cause numb extremities. He tells Cinco to tell him the truth about any drug use. Cinco says he doesn't and was dosed by someone else at the party.

Hank schedules an MRI then goes to Charlotte's hotel room to check on her. He sees blood on the edge of the bathtub then finds her unconscious crumpled in the bottom of the tub. He races into the ER with her and explains that she lost blood and just had surgery. He orders a bunch of tests and Charlotte says she can't have a blood transfusion. Hank says saving her life is more important than her transplant.

Charlotte agrees. They wheel her away while he stresses. At the house, he calls Evan and leaves a message telling him that Charlotte is stable and asks to reschedule the Emma summit. He sees Emma's purse and then a pill bottle in it. She says those were Labbie's heart worm pills. She tells him Cinco's arm is worse. He says those things are connected and they speed over.

Hank looks at his arm and says there is no pulse and his hand is cold. He tells him to calm down. He flips his arm over and says he has the same thing Labbie does. He has worms and Hank says he can take care of it right now. He swabs him with Betadine and then numbs his wrist with a shot of Lidocaine. He makes a cut and then extracts the worm.

He says that Labbie and Cinco got bitten by the same bugs. It causes heartworm in dogs and something else in humans. He pulls it out slowly. He says the worm grew large enough to press onto the nerve and then was pressing onto the artery. It was about a foot long. Emma says that's so cool. Cinco thanks Hank. Emma says it's a good thing he was snooping in her bag.

Cinco calls them the dynamic duo that came to his rescue. Divya and Jeremiah wonder why Chase checked himself out. He says he felt better but then he got there and felt heavy and tired. He says he got dizzy and decided to sit down. He thinks he's out on the open water. He goes into a seizure and Jeremiah says he's showing signs of poisoning.

Divya goes into his workshop and spots a small model. She runs back out and says he was poisoned by the model glue, not chemicals from his large boat work. Cinco is in the hospital doing well and Hank says they're going to make sure he doesn't get an infection and he'll be out pretty soon. Emma says she's never dated a guy who spawned worms and she teases him about Instagram.

He begs her not to tell Parker. She tells him she's keeping the worm as a pet and named him Cinco Jr. She says her new car is here and has to go but will be back before he's awake. She makes an excuse not to let Hank go along. She gets annoyed with him for pushing her and says she has to go. Divya and Jeremiah tell Chase that he poisoned himself with model glue.

Divya shows him a post from Ron's blog — it talks to Chase and says he wishes he was there with him. Chase says he just took off and left him there alone after they built the business together. Jeremiah says friendships can adapt and grow back stronger after it's broken. Divya smiles at him and Chase says that's really nice. Divya agrees. The EMTs wheel Chase away to the ambulance.

Divya tells Jeremiah she knows their relationship has changed and he says he won't get on a boat and sail away. He asks what she thinks of Boris and she asks why he wants to know. Paige and Evan monitor Emma who waits for Oz. He gets a text from Emma who tells her to look for Oz. It's a girl and Paige films. Emma goes to confront her. It's actually Parker.

Emma asks her why she would be Oz. Parker says she's been a sucker for gossip. She admits it to Emma and Cinco. She says she did it so their mom would read it and became a fan. Cinco is surprised that their mom calls her. She cries and says it's the first time mom has ever really talked to her. Cinco says she hurt a lot of people. She says she thought posting the photo would get mom to come home.

She begs Cinco not to hate her. He says he knew she was brilliant but not so sneaky. He tells her they have to find another way for her to channel her wicked brilliance. Charlotte wakes in the hospital to see Hank there. She asks how it went with Emma and he says it's tonight. She says she's tired of the hospital bed. He has a present for her. She opens it and finds a cane.

Charlotte says it's her own cane and he tells her at least the box is new. Hank tells her that her recovery will take patience and she needs to take herself slow. Hank tells her to stop and close her eyes. She does and he tells her to listen. He tells her she's a speed demon and it's one of the things he loves about her. He tells her to be patient and says he'll be with her every step of the way. She thanks him and kisses him.

Emma shows Parker the worm and she's disgusted. She tells her she's sorry that Hank got in trouble over the photo with Cinco. She says she's glad it's over. Parker tells Cinco that Emma was her biggest source. Cinco asks if that's why she came to his party. He says she's not that different from the girls around there after all. He looks totally hurt.

Hank, Evan and Divya are summoned to meet with Boris. Boris comes in with Jeremiah. They sit and Boris thanks them for coming. He says HankMed has been operating on his property for years and he's finally seeing what makes the company so special. He thanks Divya for introducing him to orphan diseases. He thanks Jeremiah for explaining research to him. He thanks Evan for bringing him the HankLab concept.

Boris tells them he's buying the whole hospital and says he wants all of them on the board of directors with a generous stipend. He says Jeremiah has already agreed. Divya accepts, then Evan says hell yes. Hank says it's quite an offer but says he can't. Boris says he's excused from the remainder of the meeting. He leaves. The others are surprised.

Emma is getting in her new car when Hank comes out and compliments her taste in her car. He tells her he wants to talk to her to clear some things up. She says that sounds great. He asks to have dinner later. She agrees and drives away. He reminds her to put her seatbelt on. Later he calls her and gets voice mail. Evan and Paige come in and are surprised that Emma isn't there.

Hank says she never came back from taking her new car for a spin. Hank says she packed her room. He says all her stuff is gone and so is she. The brothers are floored. And Evan wants to know why Hank turned down Boris' offer.

Production Code:	RP613
Summary:	Hank and Evan look for Emma while Divya is in a custody fight to keep Sashi. Paige and Evan learn some shocking news about Therapist Bob. Jeremiah does his best accept Viviana's changes. Evan can't fathom why Hank refuses to join Boris' new hospital board.

The gang is looking for Emma. They check social media, the hospital and hangouts. She's nowhere to be found. Charlotte tells him that Emma is tough and independent and will be fine until she wants to be found. Paige finds an envelope of money in Emma's room with a note to Evan — it's the money he offered when he wanted to bribe her to stay.

Divya asks if they should call Emma's mom. Hank gets a call from their dad and says Emma is with him but won't say where they are or let them talk to her. He says she's upset and embarrassed and wants to be left alone for now. Jeremiah and Divya head to check on Viviana's case and she tells them she won.

Jeremiah tells Divya she's moving to Tulsa for college.

Divya leaves to check on Sashi. Jeremiah congratulates Viviana and says he fell for her and she tells him it's sweet. She thanks him for everything. She asks if they can stay in touch. She cries and hugs him and then walks away. Divya gets off a video chat with her daughter when Jeremiah comes over. A guy walks up and serves her.

She opens it and says Rafa has filed a lawsuit for sole custody of their daughter. Boris meets with Hank and asks if he's changed his mind about being on the board. He says he hasn't. Boris says he's buying the hospital because he's settling in the Hamptons for good with his family. He says he can't wait until he's sick to move on with his life.

Hank says he'll still be his doctor then he gets a call and says he has to take it. It's Paul. Boris stands and then has double vision problems and staggers. He collapses in the yard then recovers and heads inside. No one else sees. Hank has Paul on a treadmill checking him out for a kidney donation to his brother. He says his brother is a hedge fund guy — and is his twin. Paul tells him his brother is refusing to admit he needs the transplant and wants Hank to convince him.

Evan tells Paige he's frustrated that Hank won't take the seat on the board since that means he can't do it. He says he's at peace with it but Paige says he seems angry. She asks if they need to talk to Bob but he says no. Evan asks if they can break up with Bob and she says they can but they have to do it gently since he's gotten attached. Bob comes in with fresh juice and compliments her muffins.

Bob says he wants to talk to them about something. He sits and says the sessions in their home have been so productive he'd like to join HankMed. Evan says he thinks it's intriguing but then they couldn't be in therapy with him since it would be a conflict.

Hank is brought to see Danny about the kidney. He doesn't seem interested in the kidney. He says he thinks the offer of a kidney will settle up what he loaned him for medical school. Hank thinks he's douchey but Danny says not to let Paul worry him. He groans and Hank says the back pain is a warning sign. Hank also notices his swollen feet and says he's in trouble.

Danny says he has no time and Hank says he probably doesn't have time for dialysis three times a week in his busy season either and that's where he's headed. Evan leaves another message with their dad about Emma when he and Hank are at breakfast. They want to know where their sister is. Evan asks Hank why he won't join the board.

Hank tells him that with Boris nothing is as simple as it seems — it's a rabbit hole. He says he can't be sucked into a hospital bureaucracy. He says it's between him and Boris and asks Evan to stay out of it. Evan tells him it's something he needs to do with or without him. Hank says he shouldn't pass it up but Evan says he's worried they'll go in two different directions.

Hank says he doesn't see how. Evan says they should just focus on Emma. He asks if they want to go to Arizona since that's where their dad is on his book tour and they can casually bump into her there. He doesn't want their disagreement to turn into a rift. Hank says their dad told him the book signing was today. Evan checks the internet and says he's in Manhattan today. They take off for the city.

At their dad's usual hotel and room, they knock. Evan says they need a plan B, but Emma answered the door. She's upset and says dad betrayed her but they tell her they figured it out and ask to come in. She lets them in and they tell her they stayed their with dad as kids. They order room service burgers but she says she's not hungry.

Evan says he knows why she ran away. He says nothing feels worse than disappointing family and says he's been disappointing Hank for years. She says her mom never expected much from her so she never let her down. She says she broke their trust again and says she did a lot of stupid stuff. She says she was so desperate to fit in. Evan says he totally gets that.

Evan tells her they made her proud more than they let her down. Evan reminds her she got an unglamorous job, helped with medical emergencies, bonded with their dad and got to know them as a family. Emma says they're unstoppable when they gang up.

Jeremiah eats a giant ice cream sundae — he's eating his feelings. Paige stops by and asks if he's met with Bob. He tells her that Bob has no license or credentials. She's shocked. She asks if he's just a random guy and says Evan found him online. He asks if Bb ever said he was a doctor and she says he just told them to call him Bob.

Jeremiah says the guy only has a theater degree. Paige says Bob helped them. She says he changed their lives and they'd go to him all over again. She finishes his sundae so his picture can go on the champion eaters wall.

The siblings head to their dad's book signing and they ask her to go back to the Hamptons with them. She says she might go with Eddie on his book tour. They tell her it's a good idea and the brothers say he'll love it. He shows up just then.

Hank asks Divya about her lawsuit and she says her lawyer is working on a US visitation plan. Paul shows up and asks where the baby came from and she tells him to ask the doctor about that. Paul says he's confident that he'll get him to take the transplant. Paul has a back ache also and says their dad passed away when they were in high school and used to have dizzy spells.

Then he says his dad got up to pee four times a night. Paul says he never thought about it before and says it can have a genetic component. Paul says if he's sick too then Danny can't use his kidney. Hank says let's do tests before we think like that.

Paige, Evan, Hank and Charlotte are at lunch. Hank says Evan did a great job talking to Emma and he says he's in touch with his inner teenage girl. They hear laughter and Charlotte says she hears the laughter of a Kardashians. She says it's Khloe and sure enough it's her and Scott Disick is with her. Evan asks if she'd like to meet them and she grabs him and says yes.

Paige asks Hank why Evan is so intent about the board thing. Hank starts to answer and then stops and asks her the same. She says he's feeling dismissed and excluded with him and Boris. She says he's shut out of that and just wants in. Hank says he never thought about it that way. She says she knows he'd be an asset with Boris and asks him to let him help.

Khloe tells Evan that Kourtney lost the paperwork and apologizes. He introduces Charlotte and says she used to be blind. She says she's a major fan of theirs and Khloe invites her to sit. She sits and starts giving them a Q&A and they all ignore Evan.

Jeremiah heads into Viviana's bar. He sits and pulls out his laptop. A waitress comes over and asks what he'd like and he says whatever she likes. She says it's all good and he says it's not the same. He tells her it's him and says sorry and goes.

Hank and Paul show up at Danny's and find him napping pool side with a head ache. They call an ambulance. He tells Hank there's something wrong with his eye and that he can't see. He looks and says he's got a hemorrhage in his eye. His blood pressure is up and Hank says he's going to be fine. He tells Danny that he's bleeding into his brain but that he'll be fine.

They prepare to intubate to help him breathe just as he stops breathing on his own. They bag him and run the tube then start breathing for him until the ambulance shows up. Danny wakes up in the hospital. He had to have surgery. Hank explained that Paul saved his life. He says he'll need a new kidney and Paul is a match but they have to make sure they both didn't inherit the disorder from their dad.

Hank says he didn't want Paul's kidney because he thought he did this to himself with drug use from years before. Paul says the lab work didn't show that he was human. Hank checks on Paul and says he's got a fever too. He says he has to admit him too.

Bob meets with Evan and Paige and says he knew he had a gift for working with people and read all the books but never got certified. They break the news that they can't use him for HankMed because he's unlicensed. Then they break the news that they don't need him for their therapy and he applauds and tells them that he's glad and was worried they were too attached to him. He says their work here is done and Evan asks for one last group hug.

Paul just had a prostate infection from his kidney testing in Miami so he can still donate. Evan shows up and he and Paul swap insults. Evan takes off and Hank tells them that he's a good little brother and says they can surprise you sometimes. Hank goes to catch up with Evan but he's already pulled away.

Paige and Evan sit at home. He tells her he thinks they should buy a house and she's thrilled. She says she thinks they should get remarried and take a ridiculous honeymoon. He says it's a better idea than his. He grabs her and carries her upstairs and misses a call from Hank. Bob closes his file on Paige and Evan as he has a knock at the door from Jeremiah.

He introduces himself and says he came highly recommended from Paige and Bob and asks if he's taking new clients. Bob invites him in. Divya leaves her lawyer and finds Raj waiting for her. They hug and he says it's been at least 16 months judging from the beautiful little girl with her. Sashi giggles at him. He asks if everything is okay.

Divya says she's dealing with a custody battle and he says he has a brilliant divorce attorney. She tells him she's sorry his marriage didn't work out and she says that's why their parents didn't want them to find their own mates. She asks him to tell her about his kids.

Hank tells Boris and Evan he decided to join the board if he's still welcome. Boris asks what made him change his mind and he says that's between him and his brother then asks to speak to Evan alone. Evan excuses himself and goes with his big brother. Hank tells him that it should be about the two of them and not about Boris.

Hank says when the two of them gang up there is no stopping them. Evan says he's with Boris now and they're really happy together. He says it happened fast but it feels right and Hank says he hopes they're happy together. Hank laughs and Evan asks if he thinks Boris is pissed that he just walked away from him. They laugh and say they'll figure it out together.

Summary:	Hank helps a TV host who is off her game and takes a big step in his personal life. When Evan and Paige buy a new home and get some unexpected news, they learn the next chapter in their lives will be filled with ups and downs. Divya gets more than she bargained for when she saves the life of a young skateboarder on the street, and Boris offers Evan an exciting career opportunity.

On tonight's episode we get to see an all new side to Hank Med. No longer are they the guys working out of their kitchen and vehicle. Now they're proper board members and of more than just their start up.

Hank, Evan, Divya, and Jeremiah were appointed by Boris to be on the board of Hamptons Heritage. The local hospital. And recently Boris has had to inform them that the hospital has lost its administrator. Though the reasoning behind it kind of comes across as shady.

The former administrator was great at the job. And according to Hank, appeared to love the area and even the task that came with the view. Yet, out of the blue, he's chosen to go back home because he supposedly missed it. And now Boris wants to appoint Evan as the new administrator.

So of course Evan is excited. And Hank is happy for him but it still feels suspicious. Though, really, the job couldn't have come at a better time.

Evan and his wife have just bought their first home together and so an extra income won't hurt. And if you want to get into particulars, they'll soon be dealing with more than just a mortgage. See once Paige informed her husband that she was late — they needed answers. Like right away because apparently that was something new for her.

Paige swears she's never been late in her life. So she and her husband immediately made a quick stop at the pharmacy and after three tests there was only one conclusion. They're pregnant.

Hence Evan is freaking out. And while he tries to figure out everything they're going to need for the future, it's Hank that's suddenly feeling like he's the one that's in a rut. Unfortunately for Hank, he proposed to Charlotte and she turned him down.

No explanation or if their relationship was still salvageable. She soon boarded a plane to continue on with her world adventure. And that left a heartbroken Hank unable to fix anything.

As for Divya, she once again has a secret. Though you would have never believed it in a million it seems she's now dating her ex-fiancée. Raj was a good guy but because she was arranged to marry him Divya simply never felt "that" way about him. Yet now that she's had a baby with someone else and he's divorced — they have chemistry.

And as it turns out, there was no baby. All three tests that came back were false positives and that sadly became even clearer when Paige later got her period on that very same day. So, with their actions from before in consideration, there should have been a "yeah we're not pregnant" moment between the couple. Though that never happened.

Earlier they were anxious and were each having a mini-crisis but it looks like they wanted to be parents. And they were actually settling in with the idea when the bubble burst.

So it's bad news all around when Hank then had to tell his latest patient that he believes she's suffering from Parkinson's disease. The woman was young and she was just starting out in a very lucrative career on TV. But with her condition, she doesn't think many people will tune in to watch her (in her own words) shake.

But Hank told her not to give up. And that's the same advice he's planning on using. Charlotte may not have been the one yet that doesn't mean Hank should give up on finding love.

He made a date for dinner and he's willing to see where it goes.

However Divya ended up in hot water on tonight's episodes when she chose to help a young man in distress and incidentally left her infant daughter in the car alone. The cops arrived and once he felt better that young man disappeared. So sadly for her, there was no one to corroborate her story and Divya got arrested for child endangerment.

False Start

Summary: Hank treats a rookie triathlete; Evan and Paige temporarily move in with Hank; and Jeremiah helps Divya maintain perspective when a sensationalized video of her goes viral.

Five minutes with Jeremiah and the police were more than willing to let Divya off but, unfortunately for Hank, nothing could save him from his date with Becki.

Becki was a woman Hank had met while he was with a patient. And at first she came across as carefree and fun. However there was nothing during the date that reminded Hank of the girl he had met earlier. It was like a whole other Becki.

Except the Becki that arrived for the date was a woman that ate off of Hank's plate and drank way too much. So by the end of the date from hell, Hank offered Becki his couch and she instead passed out on the chaise lounge outside. Which by the way was not a good look when Evan and Paige assumed Hank made her sleep outside.

So Becki ended up being a wrong fit for Hank and that point was driven home after he had to save her life from a food allergy and she followed that up by vomiting all over his front yard.

Thankfully, Hank is not going to let his one failed date with Becki deter him from finding the one. He's ready to settle down and his new patient had even helped him. His patient is gearing up for a marathon in which he was going to be competing against his girlfriend so he told Hank where everyone is meeting everyone nowadays — online.

And as for Paige and Evan, they found out their pest problem wasn't going to be fixed anytime soon. So that means they're baby making plans might have to be put a hold until they get their house back from snakes.

Evan and Paige had talked and it seems like they're really ready to be parents. However there's a chance that Evan might be a parent already. It seems that before, when he was down on his luck, he sold his sperm to get by. And now he doesn't know how many kids he may have fathered.

While Paige is worried about whether or not she can have a baby. Hank later gave her a check-up and it looks like the miscarriage she had (the tests weren't false positives) was random. So although Hank told her that everything was fine and that he didn't see any problem occurring with her trying to have a baby — there's still that fear.

And on top of that, Paige is also worried about what kind of mother she'll be. She never met her biological parents and she doesn't know what she's passing on genetically.

But Divya is doubting herself for a different reason because she knows what happened that day with the police and her daughter yet she's letting internet trolls convince her she isn't a fit mother.

The incident was filmed and posted online so now people are judging Divya by what little they saw. And just her luck, Divya didn't know how to turn away. She read the comments and eventually the label "Rich Bitch" got to her.

Divya knew she shouldn't have let these people mean anything in her life but she just couldn't help it. So, once again, Jeremiah had to come to her aid. He found her tearing up in front of her laptop and he assured her that these people leaving comments under the video were the ones in the wrong. They didn't know the full story and at they didn't matter.

Hence Divya finally realized she could away from the screen. And instead focus on continuing to be a good mother rather than listen to others' claims.

As for Josh, Hank's patient that's also teaching him about online dating, has been pushing himself for the upcoming marathon. And as it turns out there is a limit to what he can do. Though Josh chose to ignore the warning signs and nearly drowned for his mistake.

Josh, you see, spent most of his time behind a computer or coming up with gadgets so he wasn't the type to go exercising. But if he had then maybe he would have realized his condition early on. Apparently he has this issue with a very complicated names that means he has poor circulation. By working out so heavily, he was exacerbating that condition and that's what made him pass out while he was swimming.

He can work on handling his condition but he was going to be stuck in the hospital during the marathon. So he asked his online girlfriend to meet him at the hospital instead.

The marathon was supposed to be the first time they met in person so by changing up the location Josh was worried about how to introduce himself. But Hank told him to merely be himself. And that Jane would be the lucky one.

However internet dating turned out not to be for Hank. The first date he went on ended up being with Becki. Who it seems lied on her profile.

So the one good thing to happen on this episode was when Evan found out his "donation", the one he made in order to buy a sandwich, was never used. And though that was good news, he was little let down when heard why his sperm was never used. The clinic told him that he had slow mobility. Which means it's going to be difficult getting pregnant.

Though the fact he and Paige were able to get pregnant also means the family they want is still possible.

But Divya's ex found out about the video online and now he thinks he can take her daughter away.

Summary:	An actor wants to shadow Hank in order to prepare for a role; Divya performs a genetic test on a royal patient; Evan accidentally takes his new motto of transparency a step too far; and Paige embraces chaos during a home renovation project.

The episode kicks off with Hank Lawson recording a video for the hospital's administrator's blog — he wants all of the employees to know that he is "completely transparent" and they can talk to him about anything. Evan's girlfriend tells him that the video is great — and he should upload it. Afterwards, he receives an email from the lab, his sperm count is low and that is why they are having a tough time conceiving.

Divya is ranting to Hank while she rushes around the kitchen getting ready for work. She tells him that Raffa has filed a claim that she is an unfit mother, and her lawyer won't let her confront him about how absurd it is. She warns Hank that she might be a "bit bossier than usual."

Evan heads out of his office and one of the doctors stops him and compliments him on his video blog. There is a commotion, nurse Margaret is kicking a man out of the hospital that is shouting that his appendix is bursting. She explains to Evan that he is just a member of the paparazzi, and is trying to sneak in to see a celebrity. Evan kicks the paparazzi out, and then rushes to the emergency room to see the celebrity — it is one of his favorite actors, Cole Chapman Smith. Cole's arm is cut up, he reveals that Tim, the paparazzi guy hit him with his camera and now he needs stitches.

Cole tries to leave because Tim just tweeted his location, and he is going to get mobbed by fans. Evan has the perfect plan. He calls Hank to do a home visit and patch up Cole's arm. While Hank is stitching up Cole's arm he learns that his next role in a movie is as a doctor and he has been studying medicine. Cole is shocked when Hank reveals that you can use cattle guts to give someone stitches, if they don't have any floss or thread on hand. Cole begs Hank to let him shadow him and go on his house calls so that he can study his work.

Divya arrives at her patient's house. She needs to do a pre-marital genetic test on her patient. He explains that the disease has plagued his family for months — and his wife is a carrier. Divya offers to come inside and take a sample of his blood. The Prince refuses and tries to hand her a vial of blood. Divya explains that the disease is deadly and she needs to report the results to the health department — she needs to draw the blood herself from him.

At the hospital, Evan is getting a lot of positive feedback about his video blog. Margaret tells him that they are making a big deal out of nothing and there is no way he is going to be able to change the hospital. Hank arrives and tells Evan that Cole Chapman is going to be shadowing him on his house calls tomorrow. Evan can't believe that he agreed to let the actor follow him around.

The next morning, there is a knock at Hank's door — he doesn't even recognize Cole, he is dressed in a disguise and trying to pass as a doctor. He even has a bag full of props, Hank goes through his bag of supplies with him, and tells him he probably won't be needing the Rambo knife or bone amputation saw. Cole reveals that his role in the movie is as a doctor in a post-apocalyptic world, and he needs Hank to teach him how to make the patients trust him. He begins asking Hank a bunch of questions like why he decided to become a doctor. He vows to find out "what makes Hank tick." Hank and Cole head to their house calls and visit a slew of different patients with different cases, they even visit a boy who swallowed a battery.

Divya visits Evan's house, and his wife is waiting in lingerie to try and make a baby and is startled. Divya explains that she was just going to ask Evan for advice. She got the Prince's blood test results back and she has to break the news to him that because of a genetic anomaly he can't marry the woman that he loves. It's his responsibility as a Prince to have children and produce an heir, but he can't marry his fiancée because their child will be born with the disease. Divya leaves and Hank and his wife proceed to have sex in the living room, but Cole and Hank walk in. She and Evan hide in the living room behind the couch in their underwear.

Divya pays the Prince a visit and tells him that he and his wife both tested positive for Calaman's Disease. She thinks he is going to be devastated because he can't marry his fiancée, but the Prince is actually thrilled. He tells Divya that she has saved his life.

The next day at the hospital Hank pays Evan a visit, Evan is not happy because Hank still hasn't watched his video blog. Hank lies and says that he has watched it, and tells him that it was "really great work." But, it's obvious that Hank is lying because he can't even tell his brother what his favorite part is. Evan shouts that he just wants Hank to care! Evan guilts Hank in to sitting down and watching the video blog, he is shocked when he realizes that Evan accidentally posted his lab results with the video and now the whole hospital knows that he has low sperm count.

Divya sits down with the Prince, and he explains that he is happy because it was an arranged marriage — and he isn't in love with his fiancée. Divya can sympathize, she reveals that she was almost trapped in an arranged marriage herself. She tells the Prince that he is going to have to just stand up for himself, that's what she did was stand up to her father. Meanwhile, Paige returns home, the contractor is hard at work and their entire house has been gutted. He breaks the news to her that it could be weeks until they can move back in to the house.

Hank heads to his next patient call at the mayor's house, and he is not happy when he arrives and sees that Cole beat him there and he is dressed just like him. The mayor, Pam has gained weight and her blood pressure is too high. Cole gives her a moving speech about getting back on her diet and losing weight, Hank is obviously bothered by the fact that the mayor is buying Cole's act hook-line-and sinker.

After the patient call, Hank rides with Cole in his convertible — while they are driving down the road the paparazzi guy Tim that is stalking him shows up in his rear view mirror. Cole decides to outrun him and floors it down the highway, he and Cole pull over on a side road to hide from the paparazzi. Cole has a heart to heart with Hank while they are hiding out from Tim and reveals that he had a tough childhood. Cole mentions that he knows that Hank's mother died, and that is why he really became a doctor.

After their talk, Cole and Hank realize that Tim never passed them. They hop in their car and drive back down the road and realize that Tim wrecked his car when he was chasing them. Evan hops out and rushes to Tim's side to help him, his arm is pinned in the wrecked car. Cole and Hank get to work on Tim and manage to get his arm unpinned and save it from being amputated by releasing some of the blood flow.

Divya stops by the Prince's house, she received a gift from him and she wants to return it — she says that it was way too expensive and extravagant. The Prince wants her to keep the diamonds, they are a thank-you gift for the great advice she gave him, he finally stood up to his father.

Paige stops by Evan's office to comfort him, he is devastated about his video blog. She gives him a pep talk and convinces him to leave the blog up, because people are obviously responding well to how "transparent" he was by sharing his sperm count results with everyone at the hospital. Then Paige breaks the bad news to him — they are going to have to live in the guest house for a few more weeks.

Hank and Cole get Tim to the hospital and he is going to be just fine. Cole thanks him for giving him the opportunity to work with him, before he goes Cole tells Hank that he knows that his mother would be very proud of the man that he turned out to be.

Summary: Hank treats a transgender teenager. Evan and Jeremiah host a gala fundraiser for the Center for Rare & Orphan Diseases and Jeremiah makes a major purchase for the lab. Paige and Evan's journey to parenthood takes an unforeseen turn. Divya grows closer to Prince Quami.

The episode kicks off with Hank at a kid's summer camp. He is checking in on a girl who has shortness of breath. The teen girl thinks that he is overreacting, there is nothing wrong with her. Hank does a quick scan on her leg and confirms that she has a blood clot in her leg. He says it might be caused by estrogen in birth control. Anna ignores him and gets back on the stage to keep dancing, then she passes out. Hank runs over with his oxygen tank and checks her heart beat. He whispers to Anna, "How long have you been a girl?"

Anna is rushed to the hospital and they get her on blood thinners. Hank checks in with her and warns her that an ER doctor will come in and do a full exam. He is a little confused because her insurance paper says that her name is "Abe." Hank is concerned. He asks if her parents know if she is taking estrogen. She admits that her mom made her promise not to take the estrogen, but she has been self-administering it.

Divya is at home with her daughter and boyfriend. He is trying to put together a baby seat that he bought. Hank heads to the office to meet with Jeremiah and Evan — they brief him on their pharmaceuticals department. Evan wants Hank to go see Olympia Houston, their richest patient — they need her to donate more money. They explain that they are trying to raise money for their genetic research department — and they want to auction off Hank's services.

Evan heads home and Paige is a hot mess. She just left the genetic doctor — she insists that the doctor said everything is fine with her DNA, but she also found out that she is 10/14 Jewish. Evan is thrilled, but Paige has something else she wants to talk about. Apparently, the doctor that she met with thinks that they should consider adoption because she knows a teen girl that is 7 months pregnant that is looking for a family to adopt her baby. Paige was adopted herself, and she thinks that it is fate and they should adopt the teen girl's baby. Evan isn't exactly thrilled. He doesn't think Paige should get her heart set on the baby — but he agrees to meet with the girl.

Hank visits Olympia. She complains that she lost her sleeping pills and her primary doctor can't write her a prescription because he is out of the country. She desperately needs pills; she hasn't slept in days. Hank agrees to write her a prescription for two days until her doctor returns. Then he goes to the hospital to meet up with Anna and check in on her. He says that her parents are flying in to make sure that she is okay, and they have some concerns.

In the lab, Evan and Jeremiah are discussing the adoption. A salesman named Jim McGuire arrives to try and sell them equipment — it turns out he was Jeremiah's roommate in freshman college. He jokes about Jeremiah's nickname, "J-Sack," and teases him about an old girlfriend he had named Sandra.

Divya heads to the Prince's house because they have a meeting — she has to speak to his father, the King, on the phone and discuss the genetic test results. She brings along her daughter and is surprised to see that the Prince bought a playhouse for Divya's daughter, and hired a nanny to watch her while they are meeting. Afterwards, the Prince surprises Divya and asks her out on a date. She turns him down at first, but then he convinces her to attend the fundraiser with him tomorrow.

Evan and Paige head to the lawyer's office to meet the pregnant teen that is looking for adoptive parents — she is adamant that she is giving up the baby. She says that she is doing it whether it was them or someone else. Alanne feels uncomfortable because she didn't know that Evan and Paige were white — and she isn't sure that they will be a good fit for her baby.

Hank heads to the summer camp to check in on Anna. She says that she feels great and doesn't have any shortness of breath. Anna reveals that she talked to her bunk mate and even confessed that she was transgender and they are cool with it. Hank has bad news though. Anna has a blood-clotting condition and she can't keep taking estrogen. Anna is devastated because this means she can't start the hormone replacement therapy.

McGuire visits Jeremiah again in the lab. They reminisce about their college days and McGuire apologizes for being a jerk to him when they went to school together. McGuire reveals that he used to work at Criteria, the company where Jeremiah and Evan just bought new equipment. He tells Jeremiah that Criteria's new equipment is not up to par. McGuire convinces Jeremiah that he and Evan should put a bid in on the equipment that he is selling instead.

Hank receives a call from Anna's bunkmate in the middle of the night — it's an emergency. Apparently, someone jumped Anna in the middle of the night and beat her up because she is transgender. Hank rushes into examine Anna, she begs him to just leave her alone, and has bruises all over her face. Hank is concerned because Anna's blood pressure is so high, he thinks that she may have internal bleeding, and her adrenal gland is ruptured. Hank administers some beta blockers to bring down her adrenaline and heart beat. He promises to stay with her until she stabilizes.

Evan heads to the fundraiser and meets up with Paige. She is a little upset that the meeting with the teen mother did not go well. Evan reassures Paige that they can try again, and he thinks adoption is a great idea for them — they just need to find another birth mother. Meanwhile, Divya is sitting at the Prince's table with him. They discuss their mutual love for Europe. Divya wishes she could move out of the country but she has custody issues with her daughter's father.

Hank arrives and Evan begins auctioning him off. He's not happy when he realizes that he is being auctioned off as a bachelor and not his doctor services. His patient Olympia purchases him for $100,000. After the auction, Evan takes Jeremiah aside and tells him that McGuire played him. His old company actually fired him and it was just last month — not last year. After the fundraiser, Divya goes for a walk with the Prince and he surprises her with a kiss, she apologizes and admits that she is seeing someone but it is "complicated." The Prince seems unfazed, he says that he doesn't mind a little competition. Hank heads to the summer camp to watch Anna's big theater production that she has been working on and choreographing.

Production Code: RP705
Summary: Hank accompanies Olympia to Manhattan; Evan suspects that Boris is keeping a secret from him; Divya has a surprise visitor from her past; and Paige is shocked when she learns the reason for the delay in her home renovations.

The episode kicks off with Paige heading in to the house to check on the contractor Gus's progress — the house is still destroyed. She rants that they are adopting a baby and she will be there in 3 months, their home needs to be done by then. Paige shouts that she needs progress, Gus reassures her that he is "on it."

Evan is briefing Hank and Divya on work for the week, but they just want to talk about Evan and Paige's baby. Evan passes out baby registries to them. Hank reveals that he is going out of town with Olympia Houston. Evan is impressed, he says that Olympia is a "King Maker," and every man that she marries winds up building an empire. Hank and Evan head to work, and Raj shows up to pick up the baby from Divya. They think they are all alone and Raj leans in for a kiss — Paige walks in and catches them and is shocked. Raj runs off and Paige questions Divya, she thought she was dating the Prince that was at the auction with her. Paige reassures her that she won't tell anyone her secret.

Hank heads to his first appointment and checks in on Boris — Evan interrupts and says that he needs to speak to Boris in private. Evan can't believe that he sent Jeremiah on a business trip to the center of rare diseases without any warnings, Jeremiah is their employee and his abrupt absence is messing up their scheduling. Boris doesn't want to hear it though. Hank has another problem — the robotic arm they had on loan is missing. Boris tells him not to worry about it, it's not missing, it was recalled and sent back.

Hank heads to NY with Olympia, she has to stop by a United Nations summit first. Olympia spots Dr. Salba and rushes over to introduce him to Hank. It turns out Dr. Salba speaks little to no English, he goes to get his interpreter Nina and she is distracted and run down by her taxi. Salba and Hank rush to her side and work together to pop her dislocated shoulder back in to joint. Hank and Olympia get to know Nina after Hank gets her arm in a sling, she admits that she is a little overwhelmed by the summit and trying to interpret for Dr. Salba — apparently he is a bit demanding.

Evan has lunch with Paige and she briefs him on her meeting with their baby's birth mother — she is moving to the Hamptons for the last few months of the pregnancy. Evan rants to Paige about his meeting with Boris, he doesn't understand why he is sending Jeremiah to do his job. Paige tells Evan to "take Boris by the horns" and prove to him that he chose the right man to run the hospital. She suggests he starts by finishing the asset tracking he has been working on.

After fixing up Nina, Hank and Olympia head up on the roof of the hotel for drinks since they missed their dinner reservation. Olympia is impressed now that she got to see Hank at work. She thinks he should apply for the deputy director position at the World Nation, she offers to put in a good name for him. Hank jokes that maybe she really is a king maker, Olympia points out that she doesn't make men extraordinary, she just only dates extraordinary men. They head to the summit at the world nations, and Hank is shocked when Dr. Salba puts him on the spot and asks him for his opinions on the smoke inhalation problems in the Iraq. Hank thanks they should be ventilating the rooms more properly, Dr. Salba is impressed with Hank's input — but then his interpreter Nina starts staring up at the ceiling and stops translating for him. Hank rushes to her side, he can tell that she is having a seizure.

Once Hank gets Nina's seizure under control he explains to her that her temporary lapses of awareness are actually seizures — he thinks that is how she got in to the run-in with the taxi the other day. Now, they just need to figure out what her trigger is. Hank wants to take Nina to the hospital, but she complains that she can't leave the conference because there aren't any more interpreters on standby and the meeting is resuming in a few hours. Hank decides to play the tape from the meeting back to see what is causing her seizures. He plays back the last sentence of what Dr. Salba was saying and once again Nina has another seizure. It is Salba's voice that is causing Nina's seizures. So, Hank has a plan — when the meeting adjourns, he has Dr. Salba's voice dubbed so that when Nina hears it she can translate it properly without having another seizure.

Evan heads back to work and is upset when he doesn't receive the asset tracking report. He heads to Boris's office and finds out that Boris has the asset report sent directly to him, he won't even let Evan see it. He tells Evan that his plate is already full, and his main priority needs to be the computer systems. Boris leaves for a meeting and Evan goes through his desk and looks at the assets report. He comes across a secret box in Boris's desk, he puts his finger in it and it turns on and pokes his finger. It takes a sample of Evan's blood and then says access denied and won't turn on.

Paige checks in on Gus's progress at the house and Dviya stops by. She thanks Paige for not telling anyone about Raj, or the Prince, and confesses that she is going to dinner later with Raja. While they are talking Gus tries to sneak upstairs — and falls through the horrible banister he put up. Dviya and Paige rush to his side and call 911. Dviya notices his bone has broken and is sticking out of his leg, Paige helps her break it back in to place and then rushes upstairs to search for a towel to soak up the blood. She is shocked when she heads in to the nursery and realizes that Gus has been living there, and he even has a microwave and a TV set up.

Hank and Evan head out to lunch, Evan tells him that Boris is up to something. He tells him about the box that poked his finger — he thinks that Boris is selling equipment and the robotic arm to the Chinese. Hank thinks that Evan has gone crazy, he tells him to just "let it go." Hank heads back to the hospital and he is not letting it go — he heads to the lab and looks for a sample of Boris's blood, he steals one of his test tubes out of the cooler.

Later that day, Boris corners Hank, he tells him that Jeremiah was acting strangely and he was stressed out over a mistake that he made in the accounting department. Boris rented him out one of his country homes to give him a chance to relax and get himself together — but now Boris is worried because Jeremiah is missing and he never showed up at the country house. Meanwhile at the office, Evan breaks in to Boris's office. He uses his blood to hack in to the little black box that requires a blood sample to turn on. It opens up a secret door in Boris's office that leads down a tunnel to a lab inside the hospital that Evan never knew existed, inside the lab Evan finds all of the equipment that seems to have been missing. While he is snooping around the lab, Boris walks in and catches him and he doesn't look happy.

Production Code: RP706
Summary: Keller asks Hank for help with an embarrassing medical problem; Divya treats a group of Civil War reenactors who are suffering from an age-old disease; and Evan fears he may be in over his head when he's roped into a secret project with Boris.

Boris found Evan in the secret OR and, though Evan didn't want to be let in on the secret, he had no other choice when it came to Boris on tonight's all new episode of "Royal Pains".

An alarm went off the second Evan found the room. So in order to calm his "friends" who were alerted to the danger, Boris had to come up with a story. He claimed Evan was his security expert pretending to be his hospital administrator and that Evan was going to be taking over for him in the Hamptons.

And, well, what happened next was mostly conducted in a foreign language so Evan didn't know what was going on until Boris told him he was going on a trip.

Evan was then advised to tell Paige he wouldn't be coming home. And luckily that didn't mean forever. Boris had to fill him in about the mystery OR and apparently that was going to take all night and go into the early morning.

See, there is a VIP patient that needs surgery. Only no one can find out that this person is having surgery. So everything has to be conducted in secrecy.

And that means Evan can't even tell Hank. Hank was naturally suspicious when he walked into Evan's office and spotted Boris leaving. But unless Evan tells him anything that he remains in the dark.

Not that Hank needed another problem anyways. Jeremiah had disappeared after making a mistake at the lab. And though they eventually found him, Jeremiah still wasn't in the right frame of mind. He wanted to be alone and he was willing to cut off Divya to do it.

Meanwhile, Divya was seeing an old patient of theirs. Jim is a fisherman but it looks like he has some lofty connections. As in his brother is rich.

Jim lost his share of the family money, yet his brother became even richer. So Jim was bought out of the family home and is only allowed to return there every year for three days. Where he then hosts a civil war reenactment based on actual victory conducted by an ancestor.

However, this year, Jim and another reenactor are experiencing an unusual rash. And after taking a look at it, Divya thinks it could be smallpox.

Smallpox was eradicated but it could still live on certain things like fabric. Or in this case the authenticated blankets and uniforms. So if it is smallpox then it would have been a rare case. Rare enough that Divya was going to use it to draw out Jeremiah.

Jeremiah didn't care about treating patients. He said he shouldn't be around other people anymore and that it was a mistake for HankMed to even think he should. So he ignored the case that Divya had so lovingly gift-wrapped and she was left on her own.

Hank was busy getting set up on a double date with his old nemesis Ben. Although it wasn't so bad. Ben's hippie girlfriend was funnily enough making Ben sick with all her incenses that actually had weed in them but her sister was all right. A little bit younger than Hank but is kind of put together for some her age.

By the end of the dinner, Ben realized he was having bad reaction to weed and that the flutters in his stomach wasn't because he was in love. So he knew he had to break up with Helen.

Hank on the other hand knew what he was looking for now. While Helen's sister is great, she's not for him and Hank realized he didn't just want to settle down. He wanted the house and kids with someone that was perfect for him.

And, as he was making peace with that, Boris enlisted his help with the upcoming surgery.

Evan found something off with one of the guys they were working with. So he quickly notified Boris and had him return from Brazil. And with everyone believing Boris to still be in Brazil, he told Hank to meet him at the hospital and prepare for surgery.

Evan proved to be right about the man that felt off and after he got rid of the State Department — Boris told him that he made himself valuable. Meaning he could now learn the identity of whose receiving the operation.

And managed his surprise when he found out Hank was working on a little boy.

As for Divya, her case turned out not to be smallpox. Yet still caused a rift between Jim and his brother. So Jim was wrapping up his reenactment when he began to suffer from an apparent heart attack. Thankfully, Divya was able to act fast but in doing so she forget to take precautionary methods and had later passed out into Jeremiah's arms after going to see him.

Jeremiah helped her of course though, regardless of what he did, afterwards he didn't really feel like he could return to medicine.

So Divya is going to keep working on and by helping her she's already half-convinced him that he's needed.

Production Code: RP707
Summary: Hank helps Boris prep a secret patient for surgery; Evan tries to chase a bad omen from the hospital; and an offer from Quami forces Divya to make a major decision about her personal life.

The episode kicks off with Evan arriving at the hospital with coffee and bagels — Margarite thinks that they are for the nurses but Evan blows her off. He heads down to the lab where Hank is working on their super secret Chinese patient, Rimpoché. His surgery is supposed to start soon but the cardiac team is delayed due to the weather. Rimpoché has a slight fever, and they are concerned about the future Timbetan leader — Hank is going to run a test on his saliva. Boris orders Evan to run the test on Rimpoché without a nurse's signature. Evan says that it will raise red flags, so Hank volunteers to become an "attending nurse" and sign the test himself.

Evan heads back to his office, and there is a pigeon on his window sill squawking. He opens the window to try and shoo the bird away, but it flies in to his office and out the door and in to the hospital. Evan chases after him.

Divya is at her house working on paperwork and the Prince Kwami surprises her with one of his servants, he announces that they have come to have tea with her. He tells her that next week he has to take a business trip to Paris, he wants her to come along with him. Divya tries to turn down his invitation but he won't take "no" for an answer. Divya finally admits to Kwami that there is "someone else." He can't believe that Divya is rejecting him.

Back in the hospital Evan is searching for the bird that he accidentally let in. One of the patients stops him in the hallway and rants that it is unsanitary to have birds flying around the hallway. Evan finds the pigeon on the drinking fountain and tries to trap it under a blanket, but the bird gets the best of him.

Down in the secret lab, Hank is examining Rimpoché. He confirms to Boris that the child definitely has a heart murmur and is going to need surgery to close up an open valve. He takes Rimpoché's temperature and he still has a fever. Boris thinks that it is just a summer cold. Hank reminds him that he was smuggled in from Tibet, he could have brought a virus to the United States with him. Rimpoché gives Hank his permission to administer antibiotics — as long as it doesn't interfere with his meditation.

Divya invites Raj to go away with her on a weekend getaway, he accepts the invite. She goes to the hospital to ask Evan for the weekend off from work. Divya arrives at the hospital and she finds Evan in the hallway acting strange, she realizes that he is trying to set a trap in the supply closet to catch the bird that she let it. Divya tells Evan about the old superstition, "a bird flies in the window and death knocks at the door." She says that some people believe that birds arrive to take souls away to heaven after they die.

Downstairs Rimpoché is playing on Hank's Ipad. He gets a bunch of messages from an online dating website. Boris thinks that Rimpoché's divine spirit is helping Hank land girls online. Hank realizes that Boris is Buddhist. Rimpoché announces that he has faith in Hank, even though he doesn't believe in Buddhism.

Evan's bird is still flying around the hospital, he finds him sitting on a patient's head while the patient is sleeping. He runs in to the room and shuts the door so that the bird can't escape and then prepares to capture it without waking up the man who's head he is sleeping on. Evan picks up a pillow to catch the bird, a nurse walks in and thinks that he is getting ready to suffocate the patient. Margarite is furious when she hears that there is a bird running around the hospital, and she starts listing all of the diseases that birds carry.

Divya's nanny Nate shows up to pick up her daughter, she reminds him that he is a week early. Nate must have mixed up the dates. He admits that he gets confused sometimes, and he has cold sweats. Divya decides to examine him and send away some blood samples just to make sure that he will be in tip-top shape to watch her daughter when she does go out of town with Raj.

Downstairs Rimpoché is not doing good, his fever has spiked. Hank says that he has an infection in his heart lining — he needs surgery ASAP. The surgical team is still half an hour out — Evan goes downstairs and Hank is working on Rimpoché, who is now unconscious. Hank tells Boris that Rimpoché needs a pacemaker, and he can't wait.

Nate shows up at Divya's and he isn't in good shape. He has a fever and he aches all over and says that it is hard for him to breathe. Divya is baffled because his cultures all came back negative, so he doesn't have an infection. Divya realizes that Nate is Greek, he thinks that he may have a Mediterranean fever which causes fluid to build up in their lungs. Divya rushes Nate to the hospital.

While Hank is administering a makeshift pace maker on Rimpoché, Evan is upstairs making one last-ditch attempt to find the bird that got in to the hospital. He is afraid that the bird has come to take Rimpoché's soul to heaven like the old superstition. Evan rushes down the hallway chasing the bird with a mop and a net attached to the end with a hanger. Downstairs Boris is helping Hank plug the wires in to the pacemaker. Discouraged, Hank heads back in to his office and finds the pigeon sitting on the window sill. He opens the window slowly and the bird flies out of the hospital. Hank and Boris are done with Rimpoché's pace maker, he opens his eyes and looks around — he is going to be okay.

The surgical team arrives just in time to start Rimpoché's surgery. Boris and Hank watch from behind a glass wall. Boris confesses to Hank that when he was 18 he jetted off to Tibet and found a monk monastery — he has always felt lie he owed a debt to the Tibet monastery and smuggling Rimpoché in and getting him the heart surgery was his way of repaying them.

Upstairs Evan is taking the nurses's coffee and donut orders. He tells Margarite that the "eagle has landed" and he got the bird out of the hospital. She apologizes for the way that she acted and admits that she passionately hates birds because she was nursing her husband back to health at their house and a bird flew in to the house. She spent an hour trying to chase the bird out of the house, and when she was done she realized that her husband passed away. Margarite knows that it is stupid, but birds remind her of her husband passing away. Evan understands, he feels the same way about his mother and tapioca pudding.

Raj meets up with Divya at the hospital, he gives her back her daughter and tell her that his ex Karen wants to get back together — and she wants them to go to couples therapy. He apologizes to Divya and tells her that they can't go away for the weekend because he is going to go to therapy with Karen. Divya tries to brush it off and tells Raj that it is no big deal.

Rimpoche wakes up from his surgery and everything went smoothly. He invites Boris to come back to Tibet with him to the monastery, and he blesses Hank for saving his life.

Summary: Hank has an epiphany after running into his former fiancé, Nikki; Evan and Paige help Elan through her labor; and after suffering a devastating loss, Divya envisions a new future for her career and family.

The episode kicks off with Paige and Evan at the doctor's office with the pregnant teen mother, they are adopting her baby in two months. Paige asks Alanna to go out to lunch with her afterwards so that they can discuss their plans for Elan to move to the Hamptons before the baby is born. Evan warns Paige that he doesn't think she should be going out to lunch with Elan, they shouldn't go so attached to the birth mother. Paige explains that she was adopted and she knows that one day their daughter will have questions about her birth mother and Paige wants to be able to tell her.

Hank is excited because he has a date with a woman named Gretta that he met online he brags about it to Divya. First he has some appointments to go to, he heads to a new client named Bruce Beeman's house. He is getting married tomorrow and he sprained his ankle. Hank is examining Bruce when his fiancé walks in — he is shocked when he realizes that Bruce is marrying his ex-fiancee Nikki.

Hank heads out to lunch with Evan and tells him about his awkward run-in with Nikki. Evan can't believe that Hank didn't curse Nikki out because she is a "demon seed" and "downright evil." Hank has a flashback of his last fight with Nikki, Evan obviously doesn't know the entire story — he tries to defend Nikki and says that she isn't all that bad. Evan is shocked, he realizes that Hank isn't over Nikki and that is why he still doesn't have a new girlfriend.

Hank meets up with Divya and she shows off her new car to him. Hank begs her to let him drive but she tells him there is not a chance. They hit the road and head to Divya's grandma's house. Her Grandma loves Hank and she is hoping that she will be a little friendlier if Hank is with her. On the way there Divya fills Hank in on her relationship problems and breaking up with Raj again for the second time.

Paige totally disregards Evan's advice, and she takes Elan to their house after lunch to show her the baby's room and all of the stuff they have gotten for her. Elan is obviously not comfortable with the situation and says she needs to get to the bus station and go home. While she is leaving the nursery, her water breaks — even though she isn't supposed to have the baby for two more months.

Divya and Hank arrive at her grandmother's house and her Aunt Kiri answers the door dressed in white. She tells Divya that she is too late. Divya puts on a white gown and heads in to her grandmother's bedroom where they are chanting and saying prayers and lying flowers on her body. Hank stands off to the side and watches the ceremony.

Meanwhile, Paige and Elan rush to the hospital and prepare for the arrival of the baby girl that Paige and Evan will be adopting. Paige and Evan are shocked when they learn that Elan won't be taking any drugs and plans to give birth to the baby naturally. They offer to call Elan's mother, Elan tells her she doesn't want her mom to come — her mom doesn't want anything to do with the baby or the adoption, she just wants it to all be over.

After the funeral, Hank heads to his patient Bruce's house. Bruce snarks that he knows Hank only came back to his house to see Nikki. Hank insists that he came to see Bruce and he thinks that he has a blocked artery. Bruce says he would rather see his own doctor, and doesn't want to see Hank again unless he is coming to apologize to Nikki for dumping her and breaking her heart.

Divya is driving down the road and traffic is backed up for miles. A man rushes through the traffic and is calling for a doctor — there was an accident, and some guy flew off from his motor cycle. Divya grabs her medical bag and rushes to the crash victim — his face is covered in blood and he is unconscious. She orders one of the witnesses to help her, she tells him to squeeze the oxygen bag while she puts a tube up the victim's nose to clear his airways. The ambulance arrives, and they successfully get a tube in his lung before he is rushed off to the hospital.

Nikki calls Hank and meets up with him, she is worried about her new fiancée Bruce because he seems to have memory loss. Hank tells her that he can't discuss Bruce's health with her. They begin arguing about their break-up and Hank reminds her that she is the one who broke up with him, and he has a date later with a marine biologist. Nikki snarks that she has bad choice in men and Hank storms out and knocks over a waiter.

The next morning Divya has breakfast with Hank, he says that his date Gretta cancelled on him last minute. Divya fills him in on the crash victim that she saved — Hank says that she is the talk of the hospital. Divya admits that yesterday she realized her true dream is to become a doctor and she is going to apply to medical school. Hank tells Divya that she is going to be a fantastic doctor.

Elan is still in labor the next morning, she refuses to let the doctor give her any drugs to induce her or speed up her labor. Elan tells Paige that she is going to be a great mom to her baby. She is feeling a little down because she called her mom and she still hasn't showed up at the hospital. Elan cries to Paige that she misses her mom and she needs her, and she doesn't want to disappoint her anymore. That is why she is giving up her baby, because she thinks that it will make her mom forgive her for getting pregnant when she was a teenager. Paige tries to give her advice and tells her that she shouldn't give up her baby just because her mom is mad at her — she needs to make the decision based on what she truly wants.

Hank receives a phone call from Nikki and rushes to her house, Bruce is in bad shape. He is slurring his speech and doesn't know what is going on — and it is his wedding day. Bruce is rushed to the hospital, he had a blood clot and there wasn't any blood flow to his brain. Hank explains to Nikki that Bruce is going to need 6-12 months of physical therapy, but no one knows how much mobility he will regain, he could be paralyzed forever. Hank is in shock when Nikki reveals that she doesn't care, she is still marrying Bruce — the minister is on the way to the hospital.

Down the hall Paige and Evan are with Elan in the delivery room, Evan holds her hand and coaches her through the birth — she has a healthy baby girl. The nurse wraps the baby up and hands her over to Paige and Evan. Elan watches uncomfortable as they coo over how cute the baby is.

Hank meets up with Divya and rants to her about Nikki marrying Bruce, on their way to her grandmother's funeral. When they arrive Divya runs in to Raj, he has his two kids with him and it is the first time they have seen each other since their break up. He explains to Divya that he just came to support her family, she thanks him for coming.

At the hospital, the baby is taken away to the nursery. Elan tells Paige that she changed her mind and she is going to keep the baby and name her Lenora. Paige tells Elan that she understands and promises that she will be a phone call away if she ever needs her. Elan's mom finally arrives at the hospital, Paige and Evan watch through the window as Elan introduces the baby to her mother. Paige breaks down and cries but Evan reassures her that Elan keeping the baby is the right thing to do.

Raj pays Divya a visit after the funeral, Divya admits that she misses her grandmother. Raj says that he and Karen agreed that their marriage is over after all — because he is in love with Divya. Divya announces that she is in love with Raj too. He gets down on one knee and asks Divya to marry him and she accepts his proposal.

Production Code: RP801
Summary: Hank treats a politician; Divya's future hits a roadblock; Jeremiah returns, but struggles with his first patient; and Eddie has a surprise that doesn't elicit the expected reactions from Hank and Evan.

Apparently Eddie had flown back to town at the first opportunity and in spite of a speaking engagement because he had wanted his sons to know that he was getting married to Ms. Newberg. And both Evan and Hank had been excited for him. The guys know and love their dad's fiancée so they had no problem with their dad's remarriage. Hank however did have a problem with Eddie suddenly wanting to marry his girlfriend two days after they got engaged. So he had tried to ask Eddie why the rush and he noticed that his father had tried to gloss over it as if it was just excitement.

So that had Hank left uncomfortable. He knew that there was more going on and he wanted to know what it was, but Evan hadn't felt the same way. Evan had completely bought his father's story of wanting to get married as soon as possible and he had thought Hank was simply raining on the parade. Which in turn made Hank think Evan was the wrong person to turn to. Evan after all had always believed in their dad and that goes especially for times when he shouldn't have so Hank had later talked to Divya about his concerns.

Hank had told Divya that the rushed marriage had made him question if his father had changed. So he might have mentioned that he never would have believed that Eddie could have gotten his life together and well that put Divya in the position of having to point a few things out. Divya asked Hank if he was upset because he thinks his father was up to something or was he upset that Eddie managed to get further along with his life than Hank could do with his own?

And Hank hadn't known the answer to that. He has had to sit by while Evan and Paige got married and while Divya started a family with Raj so he had to consider the idea of what if he was jealous of his dad. Though, just in case, Hank had later gone to a lunch that Evan and Paige had quickly put together for Eddie and Newberg and he had asked the happy couple how they came to decide that they were going to get married so soon. And the answer had been cryptic at best.

Newberg had gushed when she said that Eddie simply proposed to her out of the blue and that he said he had to marry her now yet that emphasis on "now" did leave room for questioning. So Hank began to feel like maybe he was onto something for second guessing Eddie. Although he pushed his suspicions to the side when he went to go visit his latest patient. Hank and HankMed were treating a new VIP by the name of Diana Underhill. And Diana wanted the fact that she's seeing a doctor to remain a secret.

Diana was running against Paige's father in the upcoming elections for Senate so Diana didn't want her future constituents to think she was sick. She said that it was bad enough running as a woman because not a lot of people wanted to take her seriously, but apparently being sick would have been certain death to her political aspirations. So, at first, Hank had tried to keep everything on the hush hush only that changed after Diana skipped out on her biopsy.

However, Hank had ordered that biopsy for a reason. He had noticed that something was off with Diana's condition and he wanted to get to the bottom of it before she tried to pretend nothing was wrong. And yet she skipped a step. So the next thing that Hank heard was that she was having trouble breathing and he ended up running late to his father's wedding because he had to put Diana in the back of an ambulance.

Only Hank eventually found out that it didn't even matter that he was late to the wedding because there wasn't going to be a wedding.

Hank and Eddie had talked things out so Hank was finally ready to trust his dad when he said that it was just his nerves about getting remarried that had made him feel off. But then Eddie had ruined that trust by ditching his bride at the altar. As in he hadn't showed up, he just sent a text to everyone concerned. So Eddie had left a devastated Newberg though fortunately Paige was able to convince Newberg that she should at least enjoy the reception.

It wasn't an amazing reception, but it was interesting. Divya and Jeremiah finally got a chance to talk about his "issues" and she had assured him that he was still a good doctor. Even if he had missed a patient's symptoms because he desperately wanted to get out of the house. So in reality Jeremiah was still finding his footing again. Although he was getting better.

And he should probably start by being able to pick himself up on his own. Divya is a good friend however she wanted to go to med school and she was having another baby. So Jeremiah really was going to have to find a new if not temporary shoulder.

But Hank had come to accept what his father so he thought it was time to ask Jen out and was actually getting excited about it once she said "yes". So naturally something just had to happen to ruin it all. And in this case, it was finding out that someone had hacked HankMed.

Summary: Evan deals with a cyber-attack on Hamptons Heritage when Diana's hacked records go viral; Divya helps Jeremiah and his parents with family issues; and Hank and Jen go on a date.

Boris was back in town though like usual he failed to notify anyone he was coming back and it turns out that he hadn't come by for a short visit.

Apparently the secret was out and Boris had heard that someone had hacked the hospital so the real reason Boris was in town was because he felt he had to clean up after Evan's oversight and make sure that Evan didn't commit even bigger by keeping the hack a secret. Evan it seems was originally going to cover up the hack so that neither the patients or the doctors were sent into a panic over nothing. And seeing as the IT department still had no idea who was behind the hack much less why they were hacked, telling people about what happened would have merely have made people lose trust in the hospital.

Yet, Boris was of a different opinion. Boris felt that the hospital staff as well as the patients needed to know that their information was at risk. So that way they could be proactive in protecting themselves and address whatever they have to head on rather than be caught off guard. And so everyone had been told about the hack, but all of the anger stemming from that somehow managed to land on Evan.

Evan had been the one in charge of the hospital. So Boris had actually told him that once he reviewed the situation, he was going to make a decision on whether or not to fire Evan. But Evan didn't want to lose his job so he tried to make amends with as many people as he could. Including Diana Underhill whose information was leaked to the press which was the one thing that both Hank and Evan had promised her wouldn't happen.

Only as Evan was being threatened by the woman running for Senate who swore that she would paint Evan as the villain in her story, Hank was off on a set. Hank had ended up catching a filming crew while they were shooting a horror movie although while he was there he noticed that they didn't have a doctor on set. So he volunteered his services once he saw for themselves all the dangerous they were taking with their stunts.

But leave it to Hank to join a movie crew that was working on a cursed movie. The person that was driving the movie was Rachel and she wanted to pick up from where he dad left off after he tried to make the movie years ago. Only people had said that the movie was cursed after her dad ran into several problems such as actors getting injured, things disappearing, and then running out of will to make the one film.

So with that as part of its history, it ended up being a good thing that Hank joined the crew. Hank was there when Rachel suffered a nasty fall during filming and he had wanted to run through all the necessary tests with her, but she had kind of shut him down. She said as long as there was nothing wrong with the preliminary test than she was fine to go back to work. And unfortunately, there was nothing that Hank could say to her that would make her want to run even more tests.

But Evan and Boris had later come to an understanding. Boris had realized that he had been overly harsh with Evan so he had apologized for it though Hank had asked him what had set him off and it turns out that Boris's son Carlos had inherited the family curse. Carlos was currently going through pediatric treatment for the disease so Boris wanted to remain hopeful yet it was making him testy because he wanted to be with his family during treatment rather than dealing with a hack.

Only Evan fixed the problem with the hack because his IT guy eventually traced it back to Diana Under, herself.

Diana must have realized that she couldn't keep her condition a secret forever so that's when she arranged things. She had her people deliberately release her files so that she could spin the story to her own advantage. So now Diana is on every new channel and she has the people's sympathy for not only her condition but also from the hack that had supposedly violated her right to privacy.

So Evan made a choice about Diana. He had the opportunity to expose what she did and paint her as the bad guy however he chose to tell Diana that he has something on her and then proceeded to make a deal with her. Diana could milk her situation, only she couldn't blame the hospital or Evan who she would now go on record to say had been there for her in her time of need. And so Evan had put an end to her threats without anyone losing face, but then he had to pass on the bad news to Boris.

Diana had merely taken advantage of the hospital being hacked yet she hadn't been behind it because only one person's file was hacked into and it wasn't her. It was actually Boris. Someone had hacked into the hospital because they were looking for Boris's medical records and nothing good could come from that. Especially as the last time someone had snooped into Boris's health, they had nearly killed him.

As for Hank, though, he finally diagnosed what was wrong with Rachel and it turns out she was going to need surgery for a trapped nerve. The nerve had been exacerbated by the special contact lenses she wore that would slow down her heartbeat. So Hank told her that the movie was going to have to be put on hold until her surgery and then he had been happily announced that now that they knew what was wrong that they could finally forget about the whole curse thing. But right after he said that the car they were using on set had rolled into the water while no one was looking.

And so Hank had blamed himself for the car wandering into the ocean, but he thought his luck was turning around when he went on his first date with Jen. Only the date was a disaster and it turns out they lack chemistry when they weren't talking about her son Sam or other safe topics. So getting to know each other definitely put an end to the fantasies.

So Hank found himself free when Boris had asked him to come with so that Hank could check out Carlos's condition himself.

However, Divya had later supported Jeremiah through his problems with his parents. Divya had apparently talked to the older couple who she found to be lovely and so she realized that they weren't the problem. Jeremiah's parents did care about him and they wanted to fix the estrangement. So it was only Jeremiah that doubted his parents loved him and oddly the reason he doubted them was all because of a dog.

Jeremiah had thought his parents had gotten a dog because they realized he wasn't going to be much of a companion for them. Yet, the real reason they had gotten Buddy (who had come before their latest dog Rosie) was because they wanted Jeremiah to have a friend instead of just them. So the truth ended up coming out after Jeremiah helped Buddy deliver her puppies and, now that he no longer hates dogs, as a rule, he decided to take one of the puppies home with him so that he could have that constant friend.

And you know Divya didn't judge him for all the misconception so she really is a good friend.

Summary: Hank finds romance while in Hong Kong trying to prevent the theft of Boris' medical records; Divya treats a repo man whose target is a airplane and a yacht; and Paige convinces Evan to rethink their parenting path.

Once Hank had heard that little Carlos had inherited Boris's family's disease, he knew that he had to become involved with Carlos's care.

Hank had gotten to know Boris's own as well as his family's history with the disease. So he also knew how debilitating it could be and that Carlos was going to have a fight ahead of him if his symptoms ever manifested. However, wanting to become involved and actual doing so were two very different things. Especially as it was revealed that Carlos wasn't exactly nearby seeing as he was in Hong Kong with his mother.

But Hank was willing to travel the distance to see the little boy. So it was something of a surprise to him when Boris's first stop hadn't been at the family home which was where Carlos was supposed to be, but it seems like Boris was back to his old tricks when he had instead taken Hank to a business meeting at the KJR Seminar. The seminar was where Boris wanted to announce the new drug that his company had finished testing and he had wanted Hank there as well so that Hank could testify to the drug's properties.

As Boris' own physician, Hank was in the best position to talk about the drug that had saved Boris's life and he could also answer any following questions. Such as whether or not Boris would ever experience a relapse. And if he's still capable of maintaining the same pace in the business world as he has before. So Hank, who had traveled thousands of miles just to see the little boy for what was essential a check-up, had been thrown into the deep end of the business world and there soon wasn't time to see Carlos right away.

Yet, oddly Hank managed to make time for romance. Hank had funnily enough run into one of Boris's main competitors in pharmaceuticals and he had ditched the rest of the conference and Boris too in order to spend time with the mystery woman he had met there. So the same Hank that rarely plays hooky had gone on to play hooky in Hong Kong. All the while HankMed were busy covering for his loss.

With Hank gone, everyone had to pitch in and Divya was clearly not resting her very pregnant feet as she had to treat the company's latest patient. A man by the name of Win had needed to be seen by someone with flexible hours yet Win wasn't the man that Divya thought he was. She had first met him as he was apparently stealing someone's plane and so she had pretty much written him as a thief that needed a quick checkup when he surprised her. Rather than running away like the thief she thought he was, Win later stopped by the house because he thought his summer flu was worse than he thought.

Win as it turns out was not a thief, he was a repo man. So earlier had been repossessing the plane and he needed Divya's help because he was about to catch the white whale of his career and couldn't afford to be sidelined at the last minute. There was this one woman that has always been one step ahead of him and her creditors so Win wanted to catch her while he could and he had hoped that Divya could give him a quick cure for a hundred-degree fever. However, there was no such thing.

Divya couldn't "cure" him for such a fever and she didn't want to give him something for a simple flu because she suspected that there was something else wrong with him. So she had gotten Win to agree to a full workup yet she couldn't get him to come back once the initial findings couldn't spot anything. But Evan had surprisingly helped her diagnose Win with what was really wrong.

Evan, it seems had been overseeing the latest construction at the hospital. So Divya had overheard complaining about all the dust and how he reminded the crew that they really should be wearing protective gear else they risk breathing that all in so that's when she made a connection between the crew and Win. Win often had to cut through chains in order to repossess whatever he had been ordered to and odds are that he hasn't been wearing protective gear while he did so. And therefore, Win was suffering from Metal fume fever.

Metal fume fever or MFF could build up fluid in the lungs and bring about fatal fever if not watched properly. So once Divya had diagnoses Win, she then had to hurry and try to save his life. But Win had been in dire condition when Divya later found him. He had apparently missed the white whale again because he had felt dizzy and his dizziness made him accidentally cut off his own finger.

Although, luckily for him, Divya found that finger floating in the ocean so she was able to rush both man and finger to the hospital. Where they were eventually reattached. So Divya had actually saved Win's life and she had done so with Evan's help. Only she couldn't really return the favor to Evan later at dinner. Evan and Divya had gone a double date with their spouses and at first it had been fine, but then Divya and Paige swayed Raj into talking about his IVF experience. And that conversation ruined dinner.

Divya and Paige had wanted Raj to talk about his experience with IVF as a way to convince Evan to try it though their plan failed when Raj became too honest about his experience. Raj had talked about how horrible it was to have a wife driven crazy on hormones and how demeaning it was to go into a depository room. So Paige and Divya had quickly gotten Raj out of there. Yet, they thought the damage had been done.

And it turns out Evan had no problem with IVF. Evan had apparently known that his odds in conceiving naturally with his wife weren't high so he has always been open to IVF. But he hadn't said anything to Paige because he had wanted that to be her call seeing as she was the one that would be taking all the drugs. So once he had told her that, Paige said she shouldn't underestimate him and agreed to trying out IVF.

However, over in Hong Kong, Hank was quickly pulled away from his dream woman and back into whatever game Boris was playing. Boris, it seems had wanted to draw out the interested party that had stolen his medical records. So he and Hank had used a trick to lure a third party who acted as an in-between. And they got him to deliver a fake blood sample to his boss in order to find out what this boss was willing to do to get information on Boris.

And while Hank had helped and had even gotten a chance to check up on Carlos, Boris had put him on a plane heading home without telling him the full story of who he suspected.

Summary: Hank works in the ER for the first time in years and has difficulty following Evan's orders during a quarantine situation that involves Jill. In other events, Jeremiah bonds with a patient; and Divya worries about Lena.

There was a summer cold going around the hospital and unfortunately the hospital was left incredibly short-staffed because of it. So Evan hadn't known what to do. He tried to calling in doctors that were on shift in, but they too were ill so he was kind of left in an uncomfortable position when his brother Hank finally decided to step up. Hank had offered up his own services as a doctor to help out the hospital and later Jeremiah had agreed to cover for him with his HankMed patients.

However, it wasn't easy for Hank to go back to working in a hospital. Hank had apparently gotten used to doing things his way and handling everything himself so he eventually found it hard to delegate. A patient came in with a nasty wound on their forehead because they had suffered a fall after feeling so Hank wanted to diagnose the patient and even do the patient's stitches. And he couldn't do that. So Hank had first been told by his ER Nurse and then by his own brother who both felt that he wasting valuable time in the Emergency Room.

Only Hank didn't care what either of them said. Hank knew that it was only right to spend a few additional minutes with each patient if it could save their life so that's what he tried to do with everyone even if it did slow him down. And more than once, as time went on, he figured out what was wrong with the patient without hurting them or letting them needless hours waiting for a specialist to see them. So while Evan may not have liked it, he did come to see that Hank's turnover didn't matter as much as patient treatment.

Hank's first patient who had passed out was later proven to be anemic and Hank had figured that out after a short conversation. So Evan later decided to ease up on his brother and that had allowed Hank to do what he does best. Yet, while Hank excels with patients, there was just one person that kept falling under his radar. A young woman by the name of Lena Crawford had seen several HankMed associates and no one thought it was weird that they had yet to meet her guardian or at best an adult that knew her. That is, until Jill.

Jill came back into town and she wasn't staying for long. So Jill had asked to see Divya and Hank for lunch and it was while they were all together that Divya saw Lena walking by. Divya it seems had recently treated Lena for pancreatitis, but Hank said that Lena hadn't mentioned that condition when he had seen her in the ER. And therefore the two worked together to get Lena to go back to ER in order for them to make sure that one of her conditions wasn't exacerbating the other. Although, the hospital turned out to be the worst place to take a patient when it suddenly went into quarantine.

Evan had ordered quarantine protocols to go up when he had talked to Jill's friend that appeared to be suffering from a fever and found out that the young man had recently visited Sierra Leone. Sierra Leone was still dealing with Ebola and it was considered policy to quarantine any patient that had a temperature and that had recently visited an infected area. So Evan was doing his job when he put Jill's hunky friend Hans in a cordoned off area however Hank thought Evan was overreacting. Hank had thought that Evan was blowing things out of proportion so he tried to get Evan to desist only nothing he said worked.

Hank had thought that if he told his brother that Hans wasn't systematic that Evan would relent with the protocols, but Evan ignored him and that just reminded Hank why he hated the bureaucracy of a hospital to begin with. However, Evan was later shown to have a point when he sectioned off Hans. Hans begin to show symptoms such like an enlarged eye that had redden and his temp went up to 102. So Hans was showing symptoms that commonly are associated with Ebola.

Yet, the symptoms weren't working in order. Hans for instance had gotten the eye condition before anything else and normally that's a condition one would get towards the end instead of the beginning. So Hank came to believe that Hans was suffering from something else and, once Evan told him he was free for the night because the regular ER doctor had come in, he decided to enter quarantine to check up on Hans. And he also ran several tests while he was at it. Hank thought that Hans was suffering from an infection so he ran the one test that could prove it and it turns out Hans never had Ebola.

His symptoms came about because of something else and having Hank around to prove that eventually saved the hospital thousands of dollars in having to move stuff around. So Hank had technically saved the day when he risked his own health to treat a patient though he still ended up in a fight with Evan. Evan had gotten angry that Hank had questioned orders in front of a nurse and Hank had gotten angry that Evan had called quarantine in the middle of his ER. But in a way both men were in the wrong because one of them failed to follow hospital rules and the other had almost called in the CDC before he could confirm that they were dealing with Ebola.

So the whole fight had mainly been a waste of time yet in spite of their differences Evan did handle the Lena problem. Evan had realized that Lena was lying to everyone about an aunt because she wanted to take care of her brothers by herself so he called social services which is what the others should have done when they noticed a problem. Though with everyone else at HankMed out for the day, Jeremiah got to enjoy the day with his favorite author.

Cindy wrote a bunch of fantasy novels and it seems that she had condition that was going to take time away from writing her next book in the series. So Jeremiah decided to cheer her up and he later took her to a small convention where they could blend into the crowd of her fans. And there they got to simply enjoy being nerds for a day.

And as for Hans, there was no need for Hank to feel jealous of the man because Hans was gay!

Show Stars: Mark Feuerstein (Dr. Hank Lawson), Paulo Costanzo (Evan Lawson), Reshma Shetty (Divya Katdare), Brooke D'Orsay (Paige Collins), Ben Shenkman (Dr. Jeremiah Scani)
Recurring Role: Michael B. Silver (Ken Keller), Stephen Spinella (Russell Berger), Rupal Ginn (Raj Bandyopadhyay)
Guest Stars: Hal Linden (Dr. Joseph Whitcomb)
Production Code: RP805
Summary: Hank treats an overworked Keller; Divya meets Hank's mentor, but he's changed due to a medical issue; Evan and Paige struggle with the demands of IVF; and Jeremiah makes a video for Divya's baby shower.

Dr. Joseph Whitcomb was Hank's mentor at med school and apparently the two remained on good terms because Hank felt it would only help Divya if she were introduced to Joseph on tonight's episode of "Royal Pains".

Divya had back from John Hopkins and unfortunately she had been wait-listed by them. However, Hank didn't want her to get that overly upset by it because he thought her second choice was just as good if not better. Divya had listed Stony Brook University as her second choice if John Hopkins didn't work out and as it happens Stony Brook was actually a lot closer to the Hamptons seeing as it was still in New York than John Hopkins which happened to be in Baltimore. So Hank was actually hoping that Divya would go to Stony Brook.

Only Divya saw Stony Brook as less than. The school was still a great school, but it wasn't where she wanted to go. So she was kinda of dumping on Stony Brook and the only way that Hank thought he could convince Divya that she was wrong was if she met his mentor. A man that Hank has always admired and who has done tremendous things in the medical field. And so Dr. Joseph Whitcomb who was a Stony Brook graduate was the best person that Hank could think of that would help Divya choose a school that wasn't so far away.

Yet, Hank wasn't the only one that didn't want to let Divya go. Jeremiah was also going to miss her and, rather than convince her to give up on John Hopkins, he chose to focus on Divya's upcoming baby shower. She was already heavily pregnant so he had wanted to do something nice for her before the baby came and that's why he came up with the idea to shoot a very special video. The video was to have messages from all of Divya's friends and in it they offer up the baby a special message.

So Jeremiah's idea was actually pretty sweet. Although, Hank's whole setup didn't work out as planned. Divya had gone to see Dr. Joseph and the man had barely given her the time of day. He seemed disapproving that a young woman would enter medical school five weeks after giving birth and Hank's recommendation didn't do her any favors. Dr. Joseph was probably more disapproving of Hank's newfound profession as a concierge doctor than he was of Divya's situation. In his mind, concierge doctors aren't real doctors.

Hank though had been surprised when Divya later told him that Dr. Joseph didn't like either of them. He thought his mentor had been upset because of he wasn't working in a hospital anymore so he had gone to pay his condolences over Dr. Joseph's recent loss and he had also wanted to talk of he where he was at this time in his life. However, everything Hank including his condolences over Dr. Joseph's wife had just upset the other man. He said that Hank had more promise than any other student he had ever taught and that he had welcomed Hank into his home because he thought Hank had been deserving of the effort.

And yet something strange happened while Hank was talking to Dr. Joseph. Hank noticed that his mentor was drinking a lot of water so he had tried to tell the other man that he thought was something was wrong however Dr. Joseph pretended like he was fine until he had passed out when he tried to walk away from Hank. So Hank then treated Dr. Joseph and got him the help he needed. His mentor had a condition that needed to be carefully monitored and he was also going to need continuous treatments before he could begin to feel better again. But by helping him, Hank was ultimately able to convince Dr. Joseph that he hadn't thrown his life away.

Dr. Joseph said that Hank hadn't lost his edge and he had even apologized for the way he had put Hank down as if he wasn't a real doctor anymore. So the two men managed to mend their differences and Hank had honestly felt better about going back to Hamptons. Yet, Hank had a different patient waiting for him there that he simply could not shake. Keller had stopped by the house because he had been feeling off at first though he sort of refused to leave after Hank told him that he had problems with his heart.

Hank had told him that he had problems and he had also recommended a cardiologist that he knew. Though Keller took the news that he had heart problems to mean that he was old. So he began to mourn his youth and refused to leave Hank's home until he too dropped right in front of Hank. Keller had gone into cardiac arrest and Hank had been left trying to reviving him when Divya came in for her surprise baby shower, but thankfully Divya was used to those situations so she offered her help at reviving Keller.

Keller though proved to be just fine in the end. He had been taking steroids so that exacerbate his heart condition. However, Keller later told Hank that he was going to turn his life around and by that he meant he was moving out to LA. He said no one gets old in LA so he thought that he could reclaim his "youth" if he went out there. Hank on the other hand knew better and merely chose not to say anything because he saw how happy Keller looked.

But after that fiasco with Keller, the gang did end up going back to Hank's place and finally have a baby shower for Divya. Who loved Jeremiah's video by the way and who had been all too happy to announce that she didn't want to settle for Stony Brook even if she was still wait-listed at John Hopkins. So Divya was going to be sticking around for a while and she wasn't leaving HankMed anytime soon.

Only Hank realized something about himself. He realized the reason he had gotten so upset by Dr. Joseph's disappointment was because he hadn't moved on with his life. He was still living in a guest house and he hadn't actually put down any roots in the Hamptons. So when Hank's car broke down in front of a house for sale, Hank couldn't resist. He called the realtor and asked if the house on Henry's Place was still free.

And as Hank is finally putting down roots so is Evan. Evan and Paige are going through IVF and Evan managed to brave his fear of needles in order to be there for his wife.

Summary: Hank meets a woman who worries that she has an inherited disease; Eddie makes a medical decision without consulting Hank; and Jeremiah learns that Boris went to clinical trials without his input.

Hank was thinking of buying a house and was preparing himself to finally put down some roots of his own on tonight's episode of "Royal Pains" however there was just one thing he had to do before he could he could feel comfortable enough about settling down. He knew that had to talk to his dad. Though no one had seen or heard from Eddie R. Lawson since he canceled his wedding at the last minute and left everyone in the lurch. So in order for Hank to figure why his father bailed the last time, he was going to have to go behind Evan's back.

Evan had probably been more upset than anyone that his father ran away from yet another situation. So this last time, Evan put his foot down and literally said he didn't care. He didn't care what Eddie's reasoning was or where he was now because he was tired of always trying to see the best in his dad only to have his father let him down again. But Hank surprised Evan when he didn't feel the same way and that he did want to know where their father was. He said Eddie usually runs away from the tough things so this last time hadn't made much sense to Hank.

It had been Eddie that proposed, Eddie that put a rush on the ceremony, and Eddie that said he couldn't wait to begin his new life as a husband and wife with Ms. Newberg. So for him to then runaway didn't make sense and therefore Hank needed to know why. Hank later hired a private investigator without telling anyone and he wasn't going to say anything to Evan if he hadn't found out that their dad had had recent surgery. Eddie it seems had a blocked valve so that had needed to be cleared up. However, Eddie made it through his surgery and Evan had been more upset with Hank for looking for their dad than he was about Eddie's surgery.

So Hank eventually went to see their dad by himself and it helped that he could track him down through hospital thanks to that surgery. A nurse on the floor had remembered his dad and she had been able to give Hank Eddie's current address because Hank had been his father's emergency contact. Yet, when Hank found his dad at the house he and Evan grew up in, Eddie had been in horrible shape. The older man hadn't used the bathroom in over a day and he was suffering from pains in his lower abdomen so really it had been good that Hank found him when he did. Otherwise who knows what would have happened to Eddie.

Eddie though was later given treatment for his condition and rapidly began to improve. So Hank had thought it was time for them to finally talk about that wedding that never was. But Eddie's answers surprised Hank. Eddie had called off his wedding because he knew that he had to have surgery and had honestly wanted to marry his girlfriend in order to escape having to die alone. And then when Eddie did realize that shouldn't be why he married someone, he had left said girlfriend at the altar.

And so Eddie didn't know what to do to fix everything, but he had merely mistakes as he was trying to correct another mistake.

But Eddie hadn't run off to Vegas or to Florida. He had gone back to the house in which he and his wife raised his two boys. So Hank had asked him about that and Eddie had admitted that he owned the home. He said he always owned it and that one day he had thought about giving it to either Hank or Evan. Only he later Evan said that he couldn't stand that house because it had so many bad memories seeing as that's where their mom was sick. And that had stopped Eddie from suggesting the house from the beginning yet Eddie was looking for other ways to make amends to Paige and Evan for what happened at the wedding.

Eddie had asked Hank for his advice and Hank had told him not to show up out of the blue one day because the couple had a lot going on. Though Hank didn't exactly explain what Evan and Paige were doing. Evan and Paige were going through their first round of IVF and they had recently gone through the embryo stage. So the next stage was implantation and Hank knew that was going to be stressful enough without Eddie thrown into the mix. Only Eddie simply could not lie low. He had returned to the Hamptons with Hank and it wasn't long before he and Newberg had made up.

So a text was quickly sent out to everyone that the wedding was back on and that had led to Evan rushing to Hank's house because he wanted to know if Eddie should be getting married so soon after surgery. Yet, when Evan saw his dad there, he forgot about everything else and just went in on Eddie. He told the other man that he didn't want him around and he refused to listen to Hank when Hank had tried to advise him to go easy on their dad. And so the Lawson men parted on some very ugly terms right when they needed each other the most.

Evan and his want did go ahead with implantation though only one out of seven embryos showed promise and it seems that they weren't the only ones that were making changes with their lives. Jeremiah was thinking of opening his own lab and it seems he had come to some sort of agreement with Boris about one of his projects. So there was a chance Jeremiah could become even richer. And surprisingly Divya decided to move to Baltimore even though she was still on the waiting list at John Hopkins because she wanted to be optimistic about one day getting in.

Yet, the house that Hank had fell so completely in love with might not be on the market anymore. The owner had wanted to sell the house because she thought she would be too sick to navigate it however Hank who was a doctor first had to do the right thing and tell the young woman that she didn't have Rheumatoid Arthritis, she had Syphilis. Which was easily treatable and wouldn't make her make climbing the many stairs on the property a problem. So that's how Hank might have cost himself his dream house.

Summary:	At Eddie's wedding, Hank helps a theater legend who's experiencing confusion and memory loss; and he reconciles Eddie and Evan before the ceremony. In other events, Paige and Evan await the results of a pregnancy test.

Eddie and Ms. Newberg's wedding was going ahead and to mark the special occasion everyone just simply had to break out into song. Though tonight's episode being a musical aside, the one thing that neither Divya nor Paige knew about Ms. Newberg was that she once had a bright future in the theatre. Ms. Newberg or Mrs. Lawson as she'll soon be called once had what it took to make it onstage and her friend Annette that better than anyone. Annette who was a theatre legend in her own right had told the girls at Newberg's dress appointment that there was nothing her friend couldn't do. She said that Newberg sing, act, and that most importantly she had the balls you would need to stay in the business. So really the only thing that kept Newberg from making her name was for herself were men.

It was no secret that Ms. Newberg had made something of a career out of getting married. However, she later told Annette that this marriage to Eddie was going to be her last one. She said that they had been in a committed relationship for a while and implied that she had loves him longer than ever has with any of the others. So Ms. Newberg who always had Annette at her wedding had assured Annette that this was the one and then she was going to be done. And while Annette wanted to support her friend, she kind of had an issue of her own that cast a shadow on the whole event.

Annette had been forgetting things and having moments where she was simply stump. So eventually the others and most especially Eddie began to notice how much she was zoning out.

Eddie though was the one that had dragged his son along for an impromptu check-up. Eddie had wanted Hank to look at Annette in case anything was seriously wrong so both Hank and Annette had tried to do their best to alleviate his fears. Annette agreed to a test and Hank asked her all the necessary information. Yet, everything had seemed normal and Hank said that her memory issue might be because of her age seeing as she was alluding to the fact she may be older than the mere seventy she claimed to be.

But as the day went on, Annette sort of broke into Hank's place to tell him that she had lied with some of her other answers. She said that her memory problem wasn't anything new and that she had been experiencing it for quite some time. Even on the job. So Annette had asked for Hank's help and Hank had agreed to see what could be really wrong rather than just placating his father. His father on the other hand soon found something else to worry. Eddie had seen how Paige had been acting off lately so he felt like she needed to talk to someone to get whatever it was off her chest and had offered up his services.

And the thing that had been bothering her had been the implantation. Paige and Evan had gone through with it and they were supposed to take a pregnancy test together however Paige simply couldn't wait and therefore she took the test without Evan knowing. Though the result wasn't good. Paige wasn't pregnant and so she had wanted to fall apart because of the news as well as give up on IVF altogether. Only Eddie convinced her that she shouldn't give up hope after one try. He hadn't wanted her to completely write off IVF if the first time didn't result in what she wanted so he talked her into thinking ahead.

Which she was. Paige had later told her husband about the pregnancy test and he in turn had been surprised that she wasn't in a puddle of tears. Yet, Paige had told him that his dad had helped her and that Eddie talked her out of giving up IVF because he believed that she was going to have a baby one day. So that shouldn't have pleased Evan, but he had gotten up caught on his dad and somehow accused Eddie of telling Paige lies because he was a con man and that's what he was good at. Only Paige didn't feel that way so she stood up for Eddie and said that Evan's anger shouldn't let him distort the man that Eddie really was.

However, she could have said her breath because Hank had been trying to do the same thing to no avail. Hank had tried to tell Evan that Eddie was a new man than the one that had ditched both them and Ms. Newberg and that his recent history with weddings shouldn't be held against him. So Hank who rarely defends his dad had actually wanted help Evan as well. He hadn't wanted Evan to give up on people. And yet after Hank had had to take Annette to the hospital, Evan and his dad finally got a chance to talk.

Evan spoke to his dad about what it was like growing up and how he had been the one that taught him to always take shortcuts rather than work at things the hard way. So Evan had ended up getting a lot of pent-up aggression of his chest and in a way that allowed him to accept his dad as he was now instead of how he used to be. So Evan and Eddie had reached a new understanding with each other and Evan went on to forgive his dad for some of things he hadn't even known that he was holding onto. But Hank almost delayed the wedding with that patient of his.

Annette had apparently still been holding onto a few things so after she was honest about the hallucinations that she sometimes has — Hank was able to piece together what was wrong with her. He said that he suspected that she had epilepsy which could be the hallucinations, memory loss, and the seizure that had caused her to pass out in the lead up to the wedding. So he put her on some medication that he knew would tide her over for the wedding itself (which she really wanted to go to) and send everything he had on her to a specialist in London. Where she would be heading off to once the wedding was over.

But the wedding itself was beautiful. This time there weren't any unexplained delays that led to tragedy so Eddie and Ms. Newberg now Lawson were happily married in front of friends and family although not everyone could enjoy it for long. Annette had another episode there and Hank who had been feeling as if was the last single one had rushed her to the hospital. So Hank's first concern was dealing with Annette's immediate care.

Hank however didn't need to worry so much because he had finally figured out what was wrong with Annette. Annette had a malformation on the brain so that's what was causing the epilepsy and all the symptoms though thankfully all she needed was surgery and then she would return to normal. Though before she went into surgery, Annette talked Hank into going back to the wedding. She said that he should still enjoy himself so he went back and there he heard the best news. He heard that Paige and Evan were in fact pregnant.

The little stick had been wrong, but a blood test which was a lot more accurate proved that Paige and Evan were going to have a baby.

Summary: Boris, who is planning to leave the Hamptons, asks Hank to join him; Hank contemplates life changes; Evan and Paige consider a life-altering decision; and Divya receives long-awaited news.

Boris was back in town although allegedly not for long this time. Apparently, Boris and his family were going to go into hiding for a while because his many enemies were seeking ways to undermine him by any means necessary and surprisingly it seems that Boris didn't want it to be just him and the family on tonight's episode of "Royal Pains". He also wanted his almost good friend Hank to join them. And for some reason, Hank was seriously considering it.

Hank had come across Boris sneaking around his own mansion one day. So the two of them had it because Hank (who has always been curious) had wanted to know what was going on however Hank later proved to be more than willing to help Boris and that's he assisted with destroy Boris's medical records. The same medical records that Boris's enemies have tried to use against him before. Yet, Boris had shocked Hank when he suddenly made that particular offer. Hank and Boris have been on plenty adventures before, but he hadn't thought that Boris would want him to join him hiding or for that matter that it would sound so appealing.

But it was and Hank couldn't help thinking about it. Hank had recently realized that not much hasn't changed for him since coming to the Hamptons so he was already looking for a change when Boris made that offer. And to be frank it was a tempting offer. Travel the world with a mysterious billionaire that would fit the bill for everything was a unique opportunity. So Hank had to think about and for a while he almost said yes. For there had been that moment when he did decide to pack before he quickly changed his mind and realized that he would be missing too much if he left for the unforeseeable amount of time.

Divya it seems had finally gotten into John Hopkins. So his friend was going to become a doctor and his brother Evan was about to start a family with Paige. However, what no one knew at that time, was that Evan and Paige had been discussing more than their pregnancy. They had apparently kept in close contact with a young girl that was secretly trying to raise her brothers on her own without Social Services finding out. And it appears that the kids' aunt has continuously refused to attend a temporary custody hearing so there were still three kids that needed a home though Paige and Evan have been wondering if maybe they could take in kids.

Paige herself is adopted so she knew how much having her parents in her life helped and that made the idea of taking the kids not too far-stretched. Though, before she agreed to anything, Paige wanted to meet the kids and fortunately for her Evan had already agreed to a meeting. He had sort of set it all up so that they could meet the kids in safe and easygoing environment for them. And that had taken the pressure off. So the rest had been smooth sailing although nothing would have mattered for them after Paige meet the kids.

She met them and just knew that she had to help so both she and Evan offered Lena a way for them to stay all together. Paige and Evan told Lena that they could foster them at first and that would keep them from staying in the system. But who knows what would happen afterwards because both Evan and Paige were set on making their new family work out. And it was for that reason that Evan thought he should start freeing himself up at the hospital.

Evan later told Hank that he had to concentrate on his family and so he had asked Hank if he would come back to the hospital. He admitted that working together hadn't been that great some weeks ago, but he thought that would be different if Hank gave him a second chance. Although before Hank made any decision about that, he told Evan that Boris was gone. Boris had left town because the people that were trying to find him were not enemies. They were actually loyalist that wanted Boris to take over in Russia which is something that Boris didn't want to do.

Though before Boris skipped town for what claimed was the final time, he had apparently left his house in the Hamptons to Evan. So that gigantic house called Shadow Pond was now Evan and his family's. And Hank also didn't have to feel bad about turning down that job at hospital because he knew Evan was in a great place.

And what with Divya leaving and Jeremiah there to oversee their many patients, Hank decided to go to Africa and win back Jill. Jill however, didn't need that much convincing because three years later and she was in the Hamptons with Hank, Evan's full house, and HankMed was still up and running. But now with three doctors because Divya did come back after Med school.
