Season Episode: 1

Summary: In hopes of mastering her magic, Bloom begins her studies at Alfea — and crosses paths with her curious classmates. Meanwhile, a secret comes to light.

The episode begins with a farmer out counting sheep. After stepping through a magical portal, he's chased by a snarling, maniacal beast that grabs him and drags the man off-screen.

We then cut to a generic montage of our magical school as a pop song plays in the background. New girl Bloom is attending this school for fairies and eventually meets Stella, who gives us some exposition about what's going on.

There's 7 different Otherworld realms and Alfea is the one she's currently in.

Bloom currently has the skills of a fire fairy and is about to begin lessons in channeling and honing her magic. The curriculum there has been designed specifically to do just this and help shape the future of the Otherworld.

While Bloom gets acquainted with her roommates, including Aisha, Earth Fairy Terra and moody Musa. The set-up is undeniably similar to Harry Potter,. In fact, this is even outright referenced after a jag toward "mansplaining" when Sky shows up to lend Bloom a hand.

Anyway, we receive more exposition from Stella as she mentions that magic is directly tied to emotion; the stronger the emotion the stronger the magic.

Trouble brews outside in the woods as Terra's Father uncovers the dead body of the shepherd we saw killed at the start of the episode. It turns out he has char residue over him too, which Headmistress Farah Dowling worries could be a hint toward something ancient and evil lurking out there again.

As whispers become murmurs, the school is abuzz with theories over what happened to this dead man. Further teen angsts adds to the drama, as Stella tells Sky, in no uncertain terms, to stay away from Bloom. Looks like we've got the makings of a love triangle here guys!

Bloom heads out and beyond the magic barrier to see what lies outside. When she does, she looks over old pictures on her phone of the charred remains of her childhood home. It's now clear that she was directly responsible for this, given she was a fire fairy.

We then jump back in time and see what happened that evening. She struggled to control her fire and ended up covering her Mother in third degree burns after falling out with her parents. Thankfully, they didn't know she was responsible but it also begs the question — how did she conjure up that level of magic? Well, Aisha may have the answer.

Before we get there though, we return to the present as Bloom conjures up some flames but struggles to control it. Aisha shows and conjures forth some water powers of her own, extinguishing Bloom's hungry flames. If there's anyone who knows what it's like to lose control it's Aisha. When she was a kid, she flooded her secondary school after failing a math test.

Back at school, Aisha tells her she could be a Changeling; a fairy baby switched with a human one at birth. This means she could well be pure-blooded. As Bloom walks away, we cut across to Dowling who opens up her secret bookcase and heads inside. What could be inside? I'm sure we'll find out by season's end!

Meanwhile, Stella lends her ring to Bloom and encourages her to head out side the barrier, telling the girl to go back to the First World. She does just this, showing up outside her family home and watching her parents inside. They obviously think she's in Europe studying but she rings them all the same and says hello.

After an emotional chat, Bloom decides to head back but on the way, finds herself stalked by a menacing, snarling beast. Thankfully Dowling shows up and stops the creature, as we find out this beast is known as the "Burned One." Although Bloom is saved, Stella's ring is lost.

Farah speaks to Saul and tells him they've tied down the Burned One and that there's a Changeling operating in the First World. Well, the next scene shows that same Burned demon snarling and growling while chained to a chair. As Beatrix shows up, she conjures her lightning abilities and shocks it. "Good morning, sunshine."

Summary: A new day dawns as the students explore their powers — and feelings. Bloom and Stella team up for a mission. The Burned One's reign of terror evolves.

The episode begins with Farah and Saul discussing the Burned Ones. Specifically, Farah intends to use her powers to mind read the creature and find out what it's hiding. As flashes of the past bleed through when she does, Farah Dowling suddenly jumps back in shock.

Back at school, a new day dawns and all the characters prepare for their magical lessons. Aisha encourages Bloom to be excited while Terra finds herself struggling to show the others her body. Eventually they all get dressed as Stella arrives and tells them all to keep quiet about the missing ring and what happened with the Burned One.

The first year faeries gather at the stone circle as their first lesson begins. While everyone manages to control their magic, Bloom meanwhile cannot. In fact, she can't even conjure up flames. As the lesson comes to a close, Bloom gains confirmation from Dowling that she is, in fact, a Changeling. Unfortunately, Dowling doesn't know who Bloom's parents are either.

The boys meanwhile continue to practice their fighting moves outside. As they do, Stella and Sky get talking about the missing ring and try to concoct a plan to bring it back. Among the male faeries is Riven, who Beatrix recruits to help break into Dowling's office. He eventually agrees to do so.

At lunch, Sky arrives and sits with Bloom asking if she's okay. Stella watches them suspiciously as Bloom agrees to get Stella's ring back for her. Sky isn't so sure this is a good idea though and follows after Bloom, trying to dissuade her but to no avail.

Instead, Bloom heads down to the stone circle again where Stella shows up and begins antagonizing the trainee faerie. As she mentions her birth parents, Bloom finally manages to muster up some flames. It's not enough for Stella though, who pushes her to do more.

On the back of this lesson, Bloom begins to use anger as a way of channeling her magical use. Aisha spies Bloom's open journal and tries to dissuade Bloom from using anger as a method of using her powers. Anger of course leads to hate, which in turn leads to suffering and the dark side.

Musa winds up with a new love interest, an Earth fairy called Sam. Meanwhile, Terra grows closer to Dane. Only, Riven messages and antagonizes Dane, calling him a flower picker. On the back of this message, he hurries away.

Later that day, all of our fairies head off together to get Stella's ring back. Aisha warns that negative emotions are unpredictable and unreliable, but the others refuse to listen.

Anyway, they cross the barrier and head into the barn where the Burned One is tied up. Only, it's actually gone missing. Musa senses something outside and immediately doubles over in pain.

The others however find a whole trail of dead bodies lying on the floor like a bloodied carpet. Saul is still alive though, breathing heavily and sat against a tree. He's been infected too but thankfully Terra's quick thinking allows her to give him a potion to heal for the time being.

Bloom though wanders off on her own and finds herself face to face with the Burned One. Thankfully Aisha arrives at the last second and blasts it with water, impaling the creature against a log. Thankfully they manage to get Stella's ring back from it too, which happens to be inside the creature. Bloom recovers the ring and brings it back to Stella, as the trainee faeries can breathe a sigh of relief for now.

Back at school, Professor Harvey and Farah patch up Saul after his run-in with the Burned One. Apparently he saw someone in the road too. This someone let the Burned One loose and as we soon see, it happens to be Beatrix. She's currently in Dowling's office and desperate to uncover the secrets lurking in its depths.

Summary: Past meets present as Bloom explores a pivotal memory. Meanwhile, Aisha struggles with her studies. Silva shares a secret and a school party takes shape.

The episode begins with a flashback as Bloom inexplicably sees images of her birth, including a strange woman telling her to "come and find her."

Aisha suggests they speak to Terra and look through her Father's yearbooks for answers. Before that though, it's lesson time. Farah tells the different girls to channel their powers as we see everyone in action. Despite Bloom's problems in the past, she easily controls her fire while it's Aisha who ends up with problems controlling water.

Speaking of problems, Saul continues to suffer from his afflictions with horrible black tendrils pulsing through his back. For now, he manages to hide his pain.

The kids continue to exhibit problems, with Terra held back by her self-consciousness over her body and Musa distracted by Sam's presence.

Bloom however, is fixated on the vision she had at the start of the episode. On the back of this, she decides to go to the Stone Circle and conjure up as much magic as possible. Aisha however, is not sure this is a good idea. Instead, they head out to party where all our faeries happen to be — alongside the males — playing beer pong and drinking.

Bloom learns from Riven that Stella used her magic to blind her best friend so she quickly vacates the area. When she does, she sneaks into the abandoned east wing of the school and finds a portrait in the basement. She realizes that Dowling is lying and intends to confront her about this. Given Bloom is drunk, Aisha tells her this isn't a good idea but admits she's not going to hold Bloom back any more.

While Bloom gets closer to finding out the truth, Musa kisses Sam while Terra questions whether her and Dane could be a unit. While all this teen angst is going on, Beatrix seizes her opportunity and breaks into Dowling's hidden chamber, using Callum as a sacrificial lamb.

Farah and Saul talk to a team on the hunt for the Burned One. A different one of course, given Aisha and Bloom already killed one last episode. Well, this time the group are successful and manage to kill the Burned One but it's not the same one who attacked Saul.

Bloom makes her choice and confronts Dowling after all. There, she learns that Rosalind was headmistress before her and the pictures were stashed in the abandoned east wing. Bloom is understandably suspicious and demands to speak to Rosalind. Only, she's apparently been dead for years.

Bloom, now going from someone who couldn't control her powers to mastering it in a few short episodes, heads to the stone circle and blasts out flames in rage. She quickly extinguishes them though as Sky shows up and hears that she's a Changeling. However, she also hears whispers about a Burned One in the forest and they head off in search.

All our characters at the party receive a message and scramble for the forest where Bloom and Sky are. Eventually the Burned One shows up, just as our magical faeries team up with Sky to stop it. Dowling appears too and kills the creature. She decides to reprimand the faeries in the morning but for now, they're told to head up to their rooms.

Bloom talks to Aisha about her night and how she was able to control her magic. Given she's a natural with her abilities, Aisha tells her to be realistic and how her parents may not be part of some elaborate scheme.

Meanwhile, Farah tells the other teachers that Bloom has the potential to be the most powerful fairy they've encountered in some time. It's also clear that they've lied about Rosalind being dead. Dowling warns the others that Bloom can't meet her, as the camera pans inside the magical portal in Farah's basement to see Rosalind being held captive.

Summary: Bloom continues her search for answers with Sky. Beatrix works to conceal her crime. A special guest visits Alfea — and leaves Stella feeling conflicted.

The episode begins with Saul and Farah certain that someone has tried to break into their office. Using magic, they figure out that Callum was killed using biometrics. Beatrix meanwhile, finds herself obsessed with Bloom and checking out her Instagram feed.

Bloom recruits Aisha to her cause, tasking her with checking Callum's office and looking through his files for anything that may help. When Terra and Musa show up, and with news of Bloom being a Changeling breaking out around school, Bloom goes into hiding.

Well, Aisha has some sort of listening device planted in the office and replays it later on, understanding that the teachers are hiding something.

Meanwhile, Dane apologizes to Terra for what happened between them with the video. She's having none of it though and tells him he needs to be careful who to trust. While her Father leaves, Terra starts sniffing around his things and notices something involving Vessel Stones.

Stella's Mother, Queen Luna herself, rocks up at school ready for the assembly while Bloom takes advantage of this mandatory meeting to head off on her own and investigate the east wing. However, she runs into Sky who questions what she's doing.

Eventually she and Sky head down to the basement and find a picture showing Sky's Father with Rosalind. Well, the two bump into Riven and Beatrix on the way, leading to some ensuing tension between the group. While Riven and Sky talk outside, back inside Bloom and Beatrix discuss Rosalind and eventually break a lock into a war room. Inside, they find a map and lots of secret documents.

Back at the assembly, the Queen warns that there's at least five Burned Ones out and about and the threat they pose to the school and kingdom itself is very real. Afterwards, she takes Stella into Dowling's office and shows her exactly how powerful they can make their magic. She's not happy with Dowling's perceived lack of progress on this front, with the Queen conjuring up nightmarish visions to show exactly how far this magic can go.

In the War Room, Bloom finds clues in the form of a place called Aster Dell. After Beatrix short-circuits Bloom's phone without her realizing, she offers to take the girl there. Bloom has initial doubts but eventually heads off with Beatrix in a car they've stolen.

Well, apparently one of the queen's guards was knocked out as Farah and the other teachers set out to try and bring the two girls back. Well, Beatrix takes Bloom out to the outskirts of town and conjures forth Aster Dell from nothing, a ruinous place that was destroyed thanks to the Burned Ones arriving.

A military unit from Alfea torched the place to the ground thanks to Queen Luna's command. She's sure that she and Bloom are connected given she's seen visions of Dowling, Silva and Harvey together.

Her story, and memories of Rosalind, match that of Beatrix's and she's intending to free Rosalind to find out more. Only, on the way back to school the pair are stopped by Dowling and the others. When they head back, Stella is taken away from the school as the Queen decides to train her up at home instead.

As the episode closes out, Dowling begins to suspect Bloom knows more than she's letting on and rings her parents to keep her in the loop going forward.

Summary:	In order to reconnect with Beatrix, Bloom seeks the help of a fellow student. Sky opens up about his past. Ms. Dowling shares more of her story.

The episode begins with screaming as Beatrix is tortured by Dowling. Pushing through her mental defences, she wants to know exactly why she's at her school. Beatrix has the headmistress' number though and plays the victims, promising to turn Dowling into a monster.

Meanwhile, Bloom and Sky practice out in the yard as a projection of Burned Ones are thrown up. As Professor Harvey soon tells them, the way to defeat a burned one is to find its Inner Core and destroy it. Or, you know, impale it on a log seems to work too.

With Sky and Bloom teamed up together, it turns out Sky is actually working as a spy for Saul too, who feeds back what Bloom has been doing.

Well, the males have bigger problems to deal with when a soldier feeds back that two Burned Ones were operating together. With Bloom distant and determined to find out what Beatrix knows, the rest of the girls realize something is up.

Thankfully they don't have to wait too long as Stella happens to have learned some tricks and presents herself to Musa who senses her presence. As they sit and talk together, it turns out what happened to Ricki was a mistake. The Queen twisted it to be a purposeful action though; a ploy to make Stella more feared.

Bloom finally speaks to Beatrix and learns that she killed Callum. However, in order to learn more, Beatrix tells her she needs to free her from the prison she's in. This plan involves heading down to the Stone Circle with a magical book and a talisman of sorts. This is their only option to free Rosalind and learn the truth.

Anyway, once there Sky shows up and sees her messing around with the book. Bloom pretends like everything is okay and asks about Aster Dell, revealing the truth that she's seen. Bloom tells him that there's something being hidden but quite what, remains to be seen. Anyway, Sky and Bloom eventually hook up together but it turns out Bloom's tricked him with a sedative.

When Bloom heads back to the school she's blindsided by the other girls who stop her and try to convince Bloom that Dowling only has their best interests at heart. However, they also don't know about Rosalind and what happened at Aster Dell. Eventually she caves though and Bloom hands over the talisman and walks away.

Back at the dorm, it happens to be Stella who speaks up as the voice of reason, presenting herself to the group and telling them Bloom has a right to know where she's from.

Bloom heads to see Dowling and learns the truth about what happened in the past. Through a flashback we see that Dowling made a mistake. Rosalind was her mentor at the time and the day of Aster Dell's destruction saw all the teachers conjuring up magic together. Apparently when faeries are joined together they can conjure up a good amount of magic. Unfortunately when they burned the village to a cinder, Rosalind lied and told them it had been evacuated. But it wasn't, leaving them with a heavy heart and drowning in guilt.

Bloom eventually breaks Beatrix free from her cell, with the help of Stella and the others of course. While the students set out to find Rosalind, Stella pushes Beatrix into the magic barrier and leaves her as a vegetable on the ground. While the group descend deeper, Aisha heads back to see Farah, warning her what the students are up to.

Back at the school, Bloom uncovers Rosalind in her magical tomb. She telepathically says hello to Bloom and opens her eyes, as the episode comes to a close.

Summary: Bloom, Stella, Musa, and Terra free Beatrix who leads them to Rosalind and Bloom sets her free. Burned Ones enter the school and the Alfeans try to evacuate everyone. Can Bloom defeat the Burned Ones?

The episode begins with Bloom speaking to Rosalind from within her magic prison and asking the fairy to channel the flames within her. Using Rosalind's influence and tools, Bloom starts to channel her abilities.

As she does, Aisha rocks up with Dowling, who heads down to find Bloom before it's too late. Unfortunately, the fairy releases Rosalind from her prison who's on the hunt for more magic. That brings her down to the Stone Circle, where she begins using the stones as a conduit to charge up.

Once there, Rosalind admits that Aster Dell was not a mistake. It turns out there were Blood Witches operating there and she had the soldiers take them out with one quick hit. Bloom was kidnapped by those witches originally too, who wanted to use her magic. This also explains the Burned Ones, who have been after her all this time believing she has the power to stop them.

While the girls are confined to their rooms, Stella and Aisha come to blows over getting Dowling involved. Only, their argument is quickly broken up by word that the Burned Ones have broken into the school and have started attacking students. Sam is immediately injured.

As Rosalind guides Bloom into using her powers, she suddenly stops using her fire power to talk to Rosalind. She promises to help find Bloom's birth parents but for now, word of the school attack sees our student hurry back to help. On the way, she runs into Sky who follows her inside. He's obviously not happy with the way she drugged him and reminds her that just because something seems right, doesn't mean that it actually is.

As the students gather together in the assembly hall, Dowling informs them that Solarian troops are on the way but they may have to attack the Burned Ones before then. She tells them all to prepare as they may need to use their powers. Bloom catches up though and tells them what Rosalind is doing and how the Burned Ones are after her.

This Stone Circle, as we soon find out, actually works as a conduit for the school's barrier. If the magic is consumed completely then the barrier will fail. Well, it seems like that's happening as more Burned Ones start to arrive.

Elsewhere, Sky learns the truth about his Father, Andreas. It turns out he was killed in Aster Dell by Saul's blade. It's great timing too, as this bombshell reveal is suddenly interrupted by the Burned Ones attacking outside. While they do, Terra and her Father try their best to save Sam's life.

Only, Terra suddenly leaves to find Musa with her headphones on. It turns out her Mum died a year back and she could feel every part of it (oh man, what a great flashback that would have been to help her character development!) Terra hugs Musa and promises she won't let him die. In fact, Musa has a change of heart and arrives to hold his hand through the pain.

Bloom heads outside with Aisha and Stella, conjuring up her powers and bursting into flames like a phoenix. Finally understanding her true power, flamed wings protrude from her back and she effortlessly destroys the creatures. At the same time, Terra and Musa both manage to save Sam.

Meanwhile, Rosalind rocks up in the school, and specifically to greet Beatrix. She recruits Dane and Riven to her ranks while simultaneously revealing that she's also unlocked some ancient magic they all thought was laid dormant.

Bloom finally speaks to Dowling in her office, who forgives her for what happened in the past. Bloom even asks for a hug from the headmistress for her help and care in bringing her to safety. It's a pretty significant moment in their relationship, one that sees Dowling struggling to hold back tears.

After everything that's happened, Bloom heads back home to her parents and greets them again. Only, she hasn't come alone as all our faeries rock up to crash for the night. While sat together, Bloom conjures her fire powers and shows her parents what she can do. They're shocked, of course, as we're left to wonder what's next for our teenage fairy.

Meanwhile, the Solarian troops arrive at school along with Queen Luna. They arrest Saul for the attempted murder of Andreas, who steps out the car and reveals that he's very much alive. He greets his son and leaves the door wide open for a second season.

Meanwhile, Dowling and Rosalind talk out in the graveyard. Rosalind admits that there's a 1000 year old legend about dragon flame which is directly linked to the origin of the Burned Ones. She also admits to being the one to let these cursed beings in.

She also planted Beatrix at the school, who was working with Andreas all this time. He was kept in hiding until this very opportune time where Queen Luna, with the help of the faculty members, are on the verge of usurping Dowling and installing Rosalind as the headmistress once more.

Dowling is obviously not happy and refuses to leave the school in her hands. Unfortunately, Rosalind snaps her neck and leaves the girl dead on the floor, buried under blossoming flowers.

Season 2

Guest Stars: Leah Minto (Kat), Sean Sagar (Marco), Jayden Revri (Devin), Dearbhaila McKinny (Ivy), Jj Battell (Luke), Ian O'Reilly (Nick), Daniel Betts (Professor Harvey), Paulina Chávez (Flora), Brandon Grace (Grey), Éanna Hardwicke (Sebastian), Miranda Richardson (Headmistress Rosalind), Karl Hogan (Student)
Summary: After shocking events, Bloom is shaken up by the secret she has discovered and a brand new face shows up at Alfea.

The episode starts with a big party out in the woods. Ivy and Devin head off away from the pack, kissing, but unfortunately something seems to control Ivy, grabbing two daggers and stabbing herself in the throat. Devin runs away in fear, but in doing so stumbles right into the path of a strange creature that attacks him.

Rosalind is in charge of the Academy now, and questions Bloom about what happened last season. She's not happy about how unprepared the kids are, reiterating that there are many horrors that lie out in the wild. Bloom is not giving her all and she's determined to find Dowling. Despite the whole Solarian Army out looking for her, Bloom is convinced that she can do a better job.

Bloom receives a message about Saul Silva — they're sending him to the Frozen North, up in Polaris. Bloom isn't happy and believes it's the wrong sentence. Andreas is leading the campaign but Bloom wants to do something about it.

Silva is their only link to Dowling and Bloom deduces the only solution here is to bust him out. The fairies are, surprisingly, all in agreement with this. The closest this caravan will come to the school is about 10km or so.

The route that Andreas has picked out sees them cross a river but word from Terra is that a drunken mishap with the fairies has caused that to burn down. As a result, the Specialists will have to divert to a side road, which actually has more cover. That's the perfect spot for an ambush and to hit the caravan.

In the midst of this, there's drama involving Aisha and Grey. The latter ends up teasing Aisha when he steps out from an early morning swim, believing her to be ogling over his ripped abs and body. In reality, she's not happy that he's dripping all over her bag.

Aisha doesn't like him (yeah right!), which means they're totally going to get together later this season. Anyway, Aisha ends up receiving a message from Grey just before they head out, and she's not happy that her friends have just passed on her number so nonchalantly.

The whole plan goes awry too when Stella is reprimanded by Rosalind. She points out that invisibility magic is forbidden. As a result, Rosalind takes charge. She grabs a strange gem-like contraption and latches it to Stella's back. This is designed to keep her in school-grounds, and prevents her from turning invisible too.

The other ladies show up at the busted bridge, with Bloom wandering off alone. She notices purple blood on a leaf, which she hands to Terra, before they improvise in busting Saul out.

Without Stella in the gang right now, Terra takes charge and uses her vines to grab the key, before passing it onto their prisoner. Silver manages to get free when the car stops thanks to another behind blowing up, courtesy of Bloom setting light to the gas. Saul scrambles through the woods, but he's stabbed several times with arrows. He dives into the river below a large chasm, he's freed from his captors.

Although Silva is free, he warns that things at the Academy are about to get a whole lot tougher. Rosalind has access to the Royal Archives. Within these halls are ancient texts and powerful relics. She's planning something big. One thing's for sure though, whatever she's planning it began 17 years ago with Bloom.

Bloom approaches Rosalind that night and points out she's been holding back on her magic. She doesn't want to hold back anymore, and uses this as a way of getting closer to Rosalind to learn what her plan actually is.

As the episode closes out, we get an answer to one of the big mysteries this year. Rosalind appears to be the one behind those strange creature attacks, as Devin stumbles up to the dorms, bloodied and breathing heavily. "Rosalind."

Guest Stars: Miranda Richardson (Headmistress Rosalind), Leah Minto (Kat), Daniel Betts (Professor Harvey), Jayden Revri (Devin), Paulina Chávez (Flora), Brandon Grace (Grey), Éanna Hardwicke (Sebastian), Lesley Sharp (Rosalind)
Summary: More new faces shows up in Alfea, meanwhile students deal with the emotional fall out of Farah and devilish Rosalind.

The episode starts with Terra out in the woods, picking mushrooms. She's alone, and as we discovered last episode, that's not necessarily a good thing. Terra senses there's something amiss and conjures forth her vines. However, those vines suddenly sprout flowers... and out steps Flora.

Flora heads back to the academy with her friend, where she learns that Rosalind is now in charge and there are big changes afoot. There's also that stranger with bite marks and cuts all over him too, leading the gang to wonder what this means — especially as the only word he's uttered is "Rosalind".

Flora's arrival is a bit of a double-edged sword, especially as it causes tension and friction with Terra. Flora acts bossy and in-the-know, partly exacerbated by the fact she had a tutor over the summer to help her get ahead.

Rosalind is obviously not happy that Silva has slipped through Andreas' grip. In fact, she chokes him out magically in her office to show her disdain. When Andreas returns outside, the duels continue as scheduled. There's no blade slashes this time but just some well choreographed punches and kicks.

Meanwhile, Bloom waits for Rosalind to leave her office before rooting around in her drawers. She finds an occult book full of spells — and the strange creature we've seen attack those students last episode in the center of a big picture. Bloom snaps a photo on her phone and manages to put the book back just before Rosalind returns.

Rosalind immediately susses out what she's doing, and calls out Bloom for burning bridges between them. "You wouldn't want that would you?" She challenges.

Andreas visits Sebastian, questioning him over Silva. Of course, Silva is being kept close, and it doesn't take long for Andreas to use force to try and get some answers. After knocking Sebastian head-first through a cabinet, Andreas checks the storage room (which has a magical spell on it, preventing him seeing the real room, which is actually a lot bigger) and eventually leaves.

After class, Bloom sends the picture of this creature to the others and tries to work out what the strange symbols and text mean. Bloom teams up with Sky to go and see Silva. On the way though, they come across a bunch of wild horses and go for a ride.

Stella continues to struggle, with that strange gem on her back preventing her from doing any magic. Beatrix continues to snoop about while all this is going on, and getting nowhere with Stella she turns her attention to Sky instead. Or, at least to Sky's stuff.

Riven catches her rooting through his gear and questions what she's doing. She points out about Silva leaving and wanting to know the truth.

Bloom shows up at Sky's old house, but the latter is not enthused about going inside. He does eventually join his girlfriend though, after Bloom picks up the book for translations. Andreas shows up in his car, prompting the pair to hide under the floorboards with the book to avoid detection.

Flora wakes up Devin while he's in bed, using Terra's adrenalin serum. He's shown a picture of the creature, confirming that this is what attacked him, but he becomes enraged and uncontrollable, knocking Musa down and freeing himself from Terra's vines. He wanders right into Stella's path.

Andreas also catches wind of Devin's escape too, receiving a call from the school and deciding to leave. Unfortunately, he notices the pictures up on the pin-up board are crooked and susses out that he's not alone.

To try and send a message, he decides to burn the whole house down. With petrol thrown on the house, Andreas has the place burnt while Bloom and Sky are still inside. Bloom holds Sky and encourages him not to move as she makes a makeshift forcefield around them.

Back in the academy, Rosalind shows up and tries to calm Devin down, who questions just what she's done to him, threatening her with a knife. Rosalind uses her magic to make him back up, but the boy soon collapses on the floor, dead on impact. Terra takes the blame for injecting him with the serum, covering for Flora. Rosalind clears everyone out the office.

All the group gather together and realize that the page from the spell book is actually referencing a summoning spell. It's an ancient bit of magic too, which isn't elemental by nature. At first glance, it would appear that Rosalind is using these to attack fairies.

Aisha recognizes one of the symbols, and as they all use their powers of deduction, they believe Rosalind is actually using these to steal magic from fairies to make herself stronger. Rosalind killed Devin to make sure this secret stayed buried, but there are bigger problems afoot.

Beatrix shows up next to Rosalind, watching as Andreas, Riven and Sky are choked for their insolence. However, Beatrix uses her powers and informs Rosalind that Riven is hiding something.

Summary: The school prepares for the alumni banquet, where Stella is determined to expose Rosalind's true nature. Sam struggles to cope, and Aisha takes a risk.

The episode starts with Sky noticing Silva in the school. He apologizes for what's happened between them and tries to mend the damage. It's no good, and eventually Sky tells him to leave and never come back.

Silva steps out and comes face to face with Andreas. "How did you find me?" He asks incredulously. Honestly, out of everywhere you could hide... you return to the academy full of these guys and wonder how they found you? Anyway, Rosalind appears too and has him taken to the East Wing. So much for the big escape plan!

The Academy itself is prepping for the upcoming Alumni Banquet. It's a big deal here, and every important Alfea grad from the past 50 years is going to be there. Bloom and Aisha are out together picking up shopping ready for the event, which happens to be part of Aisha's big 20 point plan to become headmistress of the school.

They're not just out to shop though. The pair appear before Sebastian, who suggests they break Saul Silva out of the East Wing during the Banquet. They deduce this is where the other Fairies are being kept too. Not only that, but this night could also work in Bloom and the other fairies' favour. Rosalind's position as headmistress is tentative at best and certainly not locked in stone. Orchestrating a bad night (ie. showing that she's deceptive and stealing fairies' magic) would be the perfect incentive to make sure their plan is a success — and Rosalind is knocked down from her position of power.

The night is split into two events, which we learn through some handy Stella exposition. There's a mixer, where the alums and students chat and then the banquet itself, which is just for the alums and VIPs. Stella is, naturally, a VIP even without her mum attending.

Everyone prepares for the big day, with numerous influential figures arriving at the gates. Back inside though, Bloom deduces that she should go into the East Wing herself so it doesn't arouse too many suspicions.

There's still angst between Grey and Aisha after the awkwardness last episode. However, Musa interjects and tells Grey in confidence that Aisha is totally into him.

When he leaves, Musa goes rooting through Sam's bag and finds a vial of Eldwyn Amalgam and a syringe. Sam notices her snooping, and points out that he's going to get revenge on Rosalind.

Sam looks set to leave but before he does, Musa admits she's been taking his anger away for weeks but didn't realize it was going to effect him so badly. When Sam finds out, he's unhappy and demands she stay away.

At the Banquet, Rosalind immediately takes Bloom and decides she should stay with her the entirety of the evening. She's of course being used here as a star pupil to make Rosalind look better. and Bloom is immediately thrown into the firing line by meeting big names in the magic world.

With Bloom unable to go into the East Wing, and Sam with his own plan to stab Rosalind, everything is hanging on a precarious knife edge. If that wasn't enough, Stella's father appears drunk and immediately berates several of her friends, including Sky and Bloom.

Away from the table, Rosalind gives Bloom a pep-talk, pointing out that she's a special fairy and that she's on her side, even though she knows Bloom was the one who bust Silva out originally. While this leaves Bloom conflicted, Flora and Aisha head off together, wandering through the abandoned East Wing.

Aisha admits she's worried about her feelings for Grey, especially as she's never been with a guy before. While they talk, they stumble into an abandoned lab but also, straight into the path of one of those horrible creatures too.

It pounces at Aisha but she tries to channel her magic and stops it. It doesn't work, given we know these things absorb magic. Unfortunately, it appears behind Aisha and tries to ambush her. This girl's reflexes are super impressive though, and Aisha manages to catch it in mid-air. Flora smashes it with a vial, burning the slug-like thing and snapping a picture as evidence.

The duo scramble back to the main chambers, where Bloom has had a change of heart and doesn't think they should go through with this after all. She's decided to believe Rosalind but Stella rolls her eyes, pointing out that she's blinded by her 15 minutes of fame. So instead, Stella takes the initiative and decides to oust Rosalind in front of everyone.

As for Musa, she head off to talk to Ben about what's happened between them. He's not mad at her for taking away his anger, but admits he's not okay. He's leaving Alfea with his father, who can't teach there anymore after what's happened.

Back inside, Rosalind shows up with Devin, who's absolutely fine and debunks Stella's story. Rosalind reveals that she's actually been trying to help these students, not harm them.

Rosalind's research has helped her learn about ancient creatures called Scrapers, which are native to the Realm of Darkness. This is what's happened to those students and she's been trying to find out what these Scrapers are — and how to stop them.

It would appear that these scrapers are being called upon by a Blood Witch. Their old foes have figured out how to steal their magic and Rosalind warns that if they continue, fairy magic could well disappear completely.

Rosalind goes on to applaud Stella and the others for being vigilant and their part in this, but they're quickly ushered away. Except for Bloom, who sticks about. Bloom is presented as the fabled fairy who happens to be the key to saving their world, as she holds the Dragon Flame inside of her.

In confidence, Rosalind speaks to Bloom and admits she's pardoned Silva, deciding they should draw a line in the sand. They need to work together to stop the Blood Witches before it's too late.

As the episode closes out, Beatrix is attacked by a number of those scrapers while alone outside in the academy grounds.

Summary: A pub night in town is interrupted by alarming news about Beatrix, sending the students into a dangerous confrontation with a mysterious Blood Witch.

The episode starts with Andreas showing up in Rosalind's office. He's concerned about Beatrix's disappearance, as it turns out she's been gone for 3 days. He wants to do something about this, but Rosalind reminds him not to get emotional.

Meanwhile, everyone at the academy is abuzz with the new "chosen one" story with Bloom. Our protagonist shrugs it off though, with Aisha backing her up by claiming it's just this week's news and will die down soon.

Instead, the pair turn their attention to doing research on Blood Witches, and how that ties in with Bloom's Dragon Flame. Apparently this magic presents itself during times of conflict. If that's the case then one may presume there's going to be a war soon.

Bloom has basically become Rosalind's second-in-command now, and studying up on Blood Witches and their history. Rosalind is leaving for the capital, but encourages Bloom to keep vigilant and researching.

He's worried that the Witches could attack but Bloom is confident that she can ward them off, given she's the chosen one. Rosalind announces that Beatrix has been taken and reminds Bloom not to let her emotion blind her judgment in the wake of this news.

Saul Silva picks up where he left off, now in charge of Specialists outside and helping hone their archery skills. Some of the other fairies are there to lend their help, including Musa who's encouraged to use her Mind power to steady them in the wake of attacks. For now, it's a work in progress.

Flora helps out Terra in the greenhouse, until the former announces that she's meeting Riven. Terra's not exactly happy about it, although that's quickly squashed when the kids decide to hit the local pub for some drinks now that Rosalind is out of town.

Sky and Riven are both there too, although Riven and Flora's flirting makes Terra concerned. She eventually calls out Riven as a bad guy, but that, of course, presents issues for Flora who walks away from Terra in annoyance. Stella is absent through all of this, partly because she's forbidden from leaving the school grounds.

There's a good deal of drama and angst between the kids here, while Andreas meets with his contact, intending to strike a deal to find out where Beatrix is. Unfortunately, Andrea is fooled by the real Blood Witch, who happens to be watching from afar. Whoever this person is, they immediately start choking him out.

The academy kids receive a message from Beatrix, believing she's stuck at some old ruins outside of town. The kids gather and realize that this could be in reference to an old lodge. Bloom believes this is a trap and warns against them going. Stella ignores that though and believes they should do something and rush in head-first.

At that, Bloom is forced to tell the others about Beatrix's kidnapping. The others refuse to listen and decide to go. However, Aisha and Grey are both absent through all of this, off in the beautiful countryside discussing their hopes and dreams. And of course, the pair end up kissing too. As they do, tiny bugs rise up from the water, glowing beautifully in neon-light.

Musa joins Sky and Riven as they head to the old lodge that night. The rest of the fairies head home and twiddle their thumbs. While sitting together, Stella shows the others that magical gem attached to her back and why she hasn't been using magic. Ashamed, she walks away.

Meanwhile, Musa and the others find Beatrix but unfortunately, they also walk into a trap. Because of course they do. Andreas is there, under control from the Blood Witches.

Musa runs but she's attacked by the scrapers. She does manage to ring Bloom and the others with enough time to get Saul Silva involved, who suddenly appears in record time to stop a killer blow. Anyway, Musa is still inside while Sky and Riven take the chance to get Beatrix out.

While Silva and Andreas fight, Bloom heads over to see Sebastian and realizes that he's the Blood Witch! Bloom shows up alone, believing him to be powerless. However, Sebastian has a few tricks up his sleeve, including the fact he's been channeling fairy magic for his own devious devices.

Sebastian offers Bloom a chance to join him and learn more about her past, including who her birth parents are. It's tempting but thankfully Aisha shows up first and saves the day. This stand-off ends in a stalemate.

Back at the academy, Bloom feeds back to Rosalind that Sebastian is the Blood Witch. Given there's a portal in his shop, they deduce that he's left to head back to the First World.

Meanwhile, the drama between Flora and Terra is wrapped up, with Terra admitting that she's a bit jealous of her and Riven together but has swallowed her pride and decided to just support her friend whatever she decides to do. It also turns out that Terra is gay too, which she announces in a really touching chat.

As the episode closes out, Sky heads back to Bloom completely broken. It turns out Silva actually stabbed Andreas and killed him. Riven suddenly comes bursting into the main chamber, needing help, holding a bloodied Musa.

Summary: Terra shares an update with the group, while Musa keeps a secret. Bloom strikes a risky bargain with Sebastian in exchange for startling information.

The episode starts with Bloom out in the woods alone, phoning Sebastian. He doesn't fall for Bloom's coup though, where Rosalind and the others lying in wait for an ambush. Instead, this Blood Witch is far more interested in raising an army, recruiting others to his cause while using those scrapers to channel more magic into him.

Aisha isn't happy that Bloom is being used as bait, but the latter wants to help Musa get her magic back, as she's been drained dry by the scrapers after the incident at the ruins. Between doing exercises with Rosalind, she's called out with the Specialists — and Riven in particular — to watch them spar.

Meanwhile, Sky suggests Bloom use the book as a bargaining chip to meet with Sebastian. Aisha doesn't think it's a good idea and has an alternate plan. She brings up how they need to "jump-start" Musa's fairy abilities using a strange crystal. Aisha believes this is a much better — and safer — option than trading a world-ending spell book with a Blood Witch. I mean, it's hard to argue with her reasoning.

With Andreas dead, Rosalind heads out to pay her respects at his gravestone. Bloom shows up and realizes she genuinely cared about Andreas, with Rosalind reinforcing this by pointing out that his death is "just shit."

When she heads back, Rosalind and Silva speak to Sky, aware that someone broke into the East Wing that night. He doesn't know who. As we find out later in the episode, it was actually Sky himself, who passed out drunk there. Silva tries to help him through this, as his grief is preventing him from training.

The fairies all conjure forth balls of energy before them, as they attempt to help Musa out — but they need more power. The only thing for it is for the chosen one to use the Dragon Flame. So Bloom uses a flame blast and channels it into the crystal. It seems to work but Musa gets cold feet and drops the rock, walking away before they complete the ritual.

With the plan a bust, Bloom decides to go ahead and meet Sebastian for the trade-off. Hey, remember last episode when Bloom was worried they were all walking into a trap? Well, she's about to walk into one herself. As Scar from Lion King would say: "I'm surrounded by idiots."

Bloom heads off with the book alone, saying goodbye to Sky while not telling Rosalind or anyone else where she's going. The other fairies have bigger problems to deal with in her absence though, as their magic begins working sporadically.

Aisha believes this is as a result of them meddling with the crystal, urging the others to finish the ceremony. Until they do, their powers could spark up randomly. So each of the group discharge their magic into the crystal, one at a time, which seems to do the trick.

Riven sits with Musa outside, where we learn that the latter actually willingly gave up her powers. After what happened to Sam, it seems she's made her choice not to use magic anymore.

Meanwhile, Bloom meets Sebastian at a diner. He immediately controls everyone in the room, giving Bloom a counteroffer — hand over the book and he'll tell her how to get Musa's magic back. Knowledge for knowledge.

It turns out the answers are actually inside that spell book... because of course they are. Sebastian can actually read the text too, a gift he learned from his father. His dad was obsessed with the Dragon Flame, teasing Bloom and trying to seduce her into changing her bargain into learning more about her own destiny.

Sebastian points out that there are two solutions here. One, they can reverse the process through using a scraper to take that magic from Sebastian and into Musa. He's not exactly going to do this willingly. So what of the other choice? Well, Bloom will need to kill him, then everyone gets their magic back.

After the meeting, Aisha rings and warns that Bloom needs to discharge her magic into the crystal as it could flare up in unpredictable ways. Bloom is confident she can control her magic without doing that though, and decides to take a walk with Sebastian. Will she kill him?

While we ponder this, the rest of the kids head off to see Rosalind and warn what could transpire. Rosalind is concerned that Bloom could kill Sebastian.

Meanwhile, Sebastian takes advantage of Bloom's confliction and suggests a new offer — give him the Dragon Flame to "right the wrongs of Aster Bell" in exchange for learning more about her birth mother. Bloom refuses but Sebastian does stir things up by pointing out that Rosalind killed Dowling. He eventually walks away, leaving Bloom with a big decision to make.

Bloom confronts Rosalind out in the graveyard and learns what she did kill Dowling. When Bloom charges at her, Rosalind stops her with her own magic, pointing out that they could have ruled together as powerful fairies; an example for the Otherworld.

Rosalind wants to use the Dragon Flame, so she puts Bloom in suspended animation. Or at least tries to anyway. She taunts Bloom a little too much and as a result, Bloom blasts through Rosalind's magic and sends a shockwave rippling through the forest. This also burns Rosalind to a crisp too, leaving the fate of the academy and the coming war in limbo.

Guest Stars: Eve Best (Farah Dowling), Leah Minto (Kat), Kate Fleetwood (Queen Luna), Shameem Ahmad (Bavani Selvarajah), Paulina Chávez (Flora), Brandon Grace (Grey), Éanna Hardwicke (Sebastian)
Summary: Bloom faces serious consequences after losing control. As conflict looms over all of Solaria, a familiar face returns to Alfea one last time.

The episode starts with Silva briefing the kids. Silva has made an agreement with Bavani to try and keep Bloom under control. With restraining bracelets on, Queen Luna suddenly briefs the realm via a projection, pointing out that Rosalind is dead... and Blood Witches are to blame. At least, that's the story to the masses anyway. In reality, she knows what's really happened.

Meanwhile, Terra and Flora head out for a walk but on the way to the graveyard, they run into a specialist called Kat.

Of course, there's light bits of flirting because it's been a hot minute since we got any romance or angst in this show! Terra gets her a gift but unfortunately, Kat is actually back with her girlfriend now.

Meanwhile, Grey is revealed to be with the Blood Witch and his ties with Aisha have all been a lie. He shows up to see Sebastian and the pair head inside together to discuss the plan to strike the fairies down.

As for Bloom, she has a big tribunal hearing come up. Instead of laying low, she heads out alone. Sky follows though, but Bloom tells him to keep his distance. She's scared of her own powers and worries that she could lose control again — and hurt him. So naturally, he's forced to leave.

In the morning, Bloom's future is hanging in the balance. Queen Luna shows up and begins questioning her, wanting to know what really happened. Stella serves as Bloom's advocate through all of this, pointing out about the suspicious nature of Dowling's death. Luna shrugs that off, claiming it to be hearsay unless they can find proof.

That proof stems from Terra and Flora, who wander through the graveyard trying to find evidence. Terra is desperate and decides to use her magic to bring whatever is hidden underground. She doesn't find a body but does find a strange magical item.

Luna is not happy, but Stella stalls for time and brings Aisha in as a character witness. Luna bites back and points out that Grey's records have been forged and she knows that he's false and actually in collusion with Sebastian. Aisha is crushed at this news and leaves, with Bloom deciding to take responsibility for her actions, under the guise of self defence.

Queen Luna has other plans though. She decides to put Bloom in stasis for 20 years where she'll be re-evaluated in the future. She's taken to the sanctum, with Stella shocked and helpless. However, Luna does take off that magic gem on Stella's back and allows her daughter her powers back.

Speaking of back, Flora returns and figures out what this strange nest-like trinket found in the graveyard actually is. She heads down to the basement and frees Bloom from her stasis before revealing this.

Now, it turns out that this object is actually a resurrection plant. The fairies have fed it the last of the Dragon Flame from the Convergence Crystal and it opened up. And wouldn't you know it, Dowling's spirit happened to be inside!

It turns out Dowling was aware of what Rosalind intended to do and called on the natural world to preserve her essence, at least for a bit anyway. Dowling did so because she owes them all "one last goodbye." She's there to teach them one last lesson about transformation magic. I mean, she could go and tell Queen Luna or do some sort of address to point out Rosalind killed her couldn't she? No? Oh, okay then.

Bloom and Dowling decide to head out for a walk instead, which is problematic as Bavani has figured out Bloom is gone and begins looking through the hallways. They manage to walk all the way through the academy, where they sit on a bench on the outskirts together. After a pep talk, the other fairies show up and say goodbye before Dowling disappears again.

Meanwhile, the Specialists appear at Sebastian's compound and sneak in, prepared to stop the Blood Witches and get the upper-hand. Unfortunately, the place is completely empty. Silva realizes that Sebastian was well aware they were coming.

As we cut across the academy, it turns out Sebastian and the gang are actually inside. And guess who the mole is? Yep, it's Beatrix. She lets him in and cuts the lights, as scrapers all begin to swarm into the basement.

Summary: As the Blood Witches enact their plans, it's up to the students of Alfea to protect their school and their friends. Bloom must make a painful choice.

The episode starts with the scrapers launching an assault across the school. They ambush all the kids, with Flora eventually knocked down by Beatrix and Sebastian. Musa happens to be hiding round the corner, and Beatrix whispers for her to go — which she does. As for Flora, she's taken down to the basement with the other fairies and Specialists.

The attack has been orchestrated for a while and as a result, Sebastian now has control of some of the Specialists in Alfea.

The group converge on the outskirts of town and try to come up with a plan to fight back against Sebastian and stop the Blood Witches. As for Sky, he ended up in confinement but busts out when a guard show up.

He fights his way through the school and regroups with the other Specialists. With too many to fight, the gang are forced to retreat and weigh up their options. Silva takes Sky aside and tells him he needs to go back to the groundskeeper's cabin. Without LeRoy's antidote, he's a sitting duck. Given the school is crawling with Blood Witches, time is of the essence.

Meanwhile, Musa fights her way past several Specialists, succeeding where the others failed, and manages to break Flora free from her captors. As for Bloom, she's put in an unenviable position when Sebastian rings from Sky's phone. He's under his control and Sebastian demands she sneak out and meet him without telling anyone. With Grey and Sky's lives hanging in the balance, it seems she doesn't have much of a choice.

Outside, Beatrix meets with Stella in confidence. It turns out she's been working undercover to find out exactly what Sebastian has been planning. With that familiar magic book in hand, she points out what the Blood Witches intend to do.

Now, it turns out there's an entity in the Realm of Darkness that can raise the dead. He wants to use this to bring everyone from Aster Dell back to life. However, the last time this actually occurred, it nearly destroyed the Otherworld. Sebastian needs the Dragon Flame in order to open it, hence his fascination with Bloom.

Once the conduit is open, the only way to close it is from the other side. And now that Bloom is with Sebastian, and Sky being used as leverage, it looks set to cause serious problems.

Bloom reluctantly agrees to use her power to channel inside the crystal so Sebastian can take it in herself. While this is going on, the Specialists and Fairies regroup and prepare to strike. Thankfully, Flora has her own plan. She's distilling a pheromone of her magic to attract the scrapers to her. She's going to use Eldwynn to sacrifice herself and kill off all the scrapers at the same time. Terra is shocked when she finds out but it seems this is the only way.

Back inside, Sebastian decides to tell Bloom about her past, falling for the ol' "stalling for time monologue" shtick. Anyway, he reveals that Bloom's mum actually had this same Dragon Flame magic, because she was actually in stasis for 1000 years.

She was born in the middle of an ancient war but Bloom's mum lost control and killed thousands, destroying any good will she initially built for herself. Wracked with guilt and passing the burden onto Bloom, she put herself in the Realm of Darkness and, subsequently, allowed Bloom to be stuck in stasis.

While Bloom transfers her magic into the crystal, Beatrix shows up and frees Sky from his binds. She also destroys the crystal. Sebastian is livid and uses his own magic to fling her across the room. Beatrix slams her head hard against the floor and a puddle of blood oozes out. She's dead.

Bloom loses control and begins to conjure her Dragon Flame. Sky is still alive though and that's enough for Bloom to focus and ease up a bit on her anger. All the fairies use their magic together, sprouting magical wings, and killing Sebastian. I don't know about you guys but killing Sebastian 4 episodes ago at the diner could have solved a whole lot of problems!

With Sebastian dead, the gang return to the dorms where they all start eating and discussing what's happened. They've won! Hoorah!

The Blood Witches are all clearing out, while Grey has left Alfea and gone back to his parents. They also reflect on Beatrix's sacrifice and how she managed to redeem herself and help save the day.

That night, Bloom heads down to the basement where she notices a strange swirling mass of magic. It turns out this is actually a conduit to the Realm of Darkness. It would appear that Sebastian actually had enough magic to open it before he died.

The only way to close it, as we know, is to be on the other side. Sky shows up and tries to talk Bloom out of what she's about to do but it's no good. She's even written him a letter to confirm what she intends to do. The group say their goodbyes, and Bloom heads through alone.

In the morning, the other kids find all the letters Bloom has written for them and despair. As for Bloom, she wanders through the Realm and finds a strange castle on the horizon. And inside... is Bloom's mum. As she walks toward it, we cut to the graveyard where a strange shadowy presence appears and watches Stella from afar.
