Summary: When a murder reunites former detective Carrie Wells with her old colleague and flame, she must utilize her rare ability to revisit her every memory to catch the killer.

Carrie hangs around the nursing home where her mother doesn't remember her. Carrie goes to an underground casino in a hot black dress. They pull her into the back room and they say she is a famous card counter. The shot caller wants his money back. They say she stole their money in Atlantic City and they want the money back.

Carrie says she was there, but to ask the associate, for the one man to ask the other, since he was in the other casino and with a bald man with a missing pinkie. The shot caller recognizes a business rival and blows up at the associate. They were talking about container trucks and Bayonne. Some guy named Milos. The shot caller is incensed.

'What? You told them about Bayonne?'

He gets angry the associate spilled the beans on the deal and tells him to leave.

Then Carrie pulls a gun on the man. Next she leaves, shoving her gun in the trash. Carrie hears a killing in her apartment while she sleeps. She looks down the alley when she finds the body and the old Japanese man finds her. She says to call 911.

Katherine Grant, the victim, lived there for three months. It happened around 3:15. Carrie says she can't remember anything more. They case the place and see blood stains on the wall. No forced entry but no robbery her cash was still there. Her supermarket car says Katherine Isaacs. Expired driver's license says Gail Isaacs.

Al recognizes the name of the witness C. Wells the redhead who lives in 2C. Al says what hell are you doing here? Married? Children? Girlfriend, he says. He says she left her. She throws his breakup words in his face. She says he thought she was obsessed with the past.

Al gave up, Carrie says. Carrie says the 'us' did not turn out well so he didn't sacrifice the case for her. Carrie heard the fight but she just hears being knocked around. He leaves his card.

The woman worked as a temp but she has no past. Busted for prostitution 1985 as Jennifer. Carrie's prints date back to the Syracuse PD. They challenge Al to tell them about Carrie.

Hanging at the rest home, Carrie sees some young children laying and flashes back to when she was a child and her sister Rachel was taken. Al comes to see her he says for her help as a consultant. 'You know what I mean?'

At the crime scene, Carrie concentrates while the squad personnel mock her. Carrie finds the missing kitchen knife covered with blood.

Al details how Carrie was the youngest detective. he wants to hire her as a consultant. Carrie says her fingerprints were in the victim's' apartment because she carried in groceries once.

They chase down her last place of work. They say she borrowed a car and the woman said she was in a hurry to move to on the boyfriend and she seemed in a hurry. Carrie says the woman Catherine called twenty times is in the photo.

Carrie and Al have a night of sexual interlude.

They investigate her. Her fiancée says he doesn't know her. she calls to and from a disposable cellphone. She is in a photograph in a client with the deceased. Carrie asks the woman why she has no past previous to her high school equivalency test.

Carrie slams the door and leaves after an argument with Al. He says case handling was her weakness. Carrie washes her hands and has a flashback to her sister's abduction. Carrie gets the water glass of Wendy Wilson and runs the fingerprints.

Carrie comes to the shop where Wendy Wilson works. Malory Evans is who Carrie wants to talk about. She says she has nothing to say.

Carrie says that surprises her. Carrie says she is a very impressive woman. Born in Ohio, alcoholic mom, abused as a stepfather. Did some bad things, even got herself a police record in prostitution.

She pulled herself out of it and got an education and a career. And now she is about to marry a very successful lawyer. Wendy says Katharine Grant was another woman who turned herself around. Her boyfriend was going to marry her and go into business with her. But the brother got suspicious. Katharine wanted help getting out.

Carrie discovers that the boyfriend of Katharine had a brother. He knew his brother marrying the woman meant the business was half hers. He did a background check on her and then she started talking divorce. Her walking meant half his business was gone. Carrie goes to him at work packing boxes.

He gets worked up. She guesses he followed his brother to where he met Katharine to find out where she lived. He came from the pizzeria to kill her in the middle of the night, then hid the knife. The man assaults Carrie with a tire iron. He says it's too bad she came alone. He says he didn't. Al arrives, saying sorry he was late his phone was on vibrate.

At the rest home, her mother remembers Rachel as a sweet girl but has no idea who Carrie is.

Carrie finds that Al has left the entire homicide file on Rachel for her.

At the remembrance ceremony, Carrie has a flashback to the murder of her sister and the man standing over her at the time she found the body.

Summary:	Once Carrie is working as a cop again, she helps to solve when a young boy becomes the witness of a double murder. Thus, she has to put aside her memories about her past and her sister to help the boy remember who was the killer.

Det. Carrie Wells is playing bingo with her mother and friends. Wells is playfully accused of counting cards because she helps her mother win. During the game she's called to the scene of a double homicide. When preparing to leave the scene, she has a sort of flashback in which she sees herself and Det. Al Burns walking to the front door and she notices a tarp. Her new teammates aren't quite use to the flashbacks and Det. Roe Saunders, played by Kevin Rankin says, "Here we go again."

When the team, which also includes Det. Mike Costello and Det. Nina Inara, checks out the tarp they find the son of the murdered couple hiding underneath. Back at the station, Carrie talks to the little boy. Before she goes into the room, she has a flashback to her own childhood when she was in an interrogation room and the police are asking her about what happened to her sister. A psychologist from child protective services shows up and asks Carrie to speak to her outside. The doctor tells Carrie a mental health professional must be present when interviewing children. The doctor also lets her know that she is Al's girlfriend and the tension rises.

Carrie and Det. Costello visit the male victim's business. While interviewing a worker, she hears a mother telling her daughter to not play games on her phone. The kid says she just wants to get to the next level of an app that changes sounds to a chipmunk sound. This triggers one of Carrie's unforgettable memories. The murder victim's son said his mother let him play that same game on her phone when he is sick. She gets the phone from the evidence collected, starts the game, and hears gunshots. The team decides the boys came downstairs during the commotion, sees the murder, drops the phone, and takes off.

Wells goes to the home where the boy is staying with his aunt and uncle to talk to him. Just as he's about to talk, his uncle walks in, the boy freaks out, and goes into the fetal position. The uncle tells Carrie to leave and stay away from his nephew. The uncle has an alibi but it doesn't convince her.

The team finds out the male murder victim is a problem gambler and he called in his bets to an Indian restaurant every Friday. When Wells and Saunders visit the restaurant the bookie tells them the victim paid with things from his home except for the last time. He came in and placed a $100,000 bet in cash. The victim got money from a loan shark named Tom Kunis.

Carrie and Costello go to the home where the boy is staying to talk to the uncle about a gun he owns. He says he lent it to a friend and tells them to leave and talk to his lawyer. As they are leaving, Wells has another unforgettable flashback about a cable guy and his tool belt. She notices a cable guy across the street is not wearing the same thing. She walks over to the truck and asks to see what's in his bag. He pulls out a shotgun but Carrie hits him with the door. Costello comes around, the guy aims the shotgun at him, and Costello shoots him.

Detectives Saunders and Inara pay a visit to Tom Kunis the loan shark. He tells them he and the victim were good. His wife came in and paid off his debt. Later, Inara calls Carrie and tells her they found the uncle's friend and the gun; the gun does not match the murder victim. The guy Costello shot was supposedly hired to kill the little boy. The medical examiner says he has a scar from kidney surgery when he sold it. Carrie has a flashback and remembers a photo of a man with the same scar at the male victim's business. Inara tracks down the man in the photo and he received the dead man's kidney. He tells her where he had the surgery. NYPD raid the illegal clinic and find the names of doctor's from the hospital where the female victim worked. The team realizes the female victim, an anesthesiologist, worked in the illegal clinic on her own time. She was getting out and that's why she got killed.

Carrie and Det. Burns visit the hospital administrator and he says he will see if the names match doctors at his hospital. Carrie notices a photo of the hospital administrator standing in front of a plane. She has a flashback to when the uncle walked in and the boy freaked out. She realizes the boy was freaking out because of a plane similar to the one in the photo and not because of the uncle. She asks the administrator if he ever took the boy on flights and he said yes.

The son of the victims comes to the station and Carrie talks to him, with the psychologist present. She talks about how there are no superheroes for girls and how she and her sister made themselves superheroes and she always got the bad guy, except for the murderer of her sister. All of her super powers went away. The boy asks her if her powers ever came back and she said yes. He asked if she gets the bad guys and Carrie says most of the time and now she needs his help. He looks at a police lineup and the boy identifies the hospital administrator as the murderer.

Summary: A hotel maid is accused of murdering a guest who allegedly tried to rape her. Carrie holds the key to decide if the maid is the victim or the murderer.

Det. Carrie Wells uses her skills to catch the bad guys and play three games of chess simultaneously. During the game she sees a man drawing a picture and has a flash back but can only see a shadow because of the sun, possibly a flash back to her sister's death. She receives a call and heads to another crime scene: The Hotel Ely. Carrie joins the team in the room of the former living Brett Langley. The victim is lying on the bed with a gash on his head cause by someone hitting him with a statue.

The only other person to go into the victim's room is housekeeper Maria Ortiz and she didn't show up for work. As Det. Burns is telling Det. Inara to track down the missing maid, a television is showing breaking news with Maria Ortiz and her lawyer. When Ortiz was attacked, she fought back in self-defense. If this sounds familiar, it's because it is similar to the Dominique Strauss-Kahn incident in New York City.

Carrie and Det. Saunders meet with Maria Ortiz and her lawyer. Maria tells her story about how Langley attacked her and she hit him with the statue. Carrie asks if Ortiz ever met the victim before and the lawyer shuts the interview down. Carrie and Det. Costello get a search warrant to check out the maid's house but find nothing.

Back at the office, Saunders finds out the room next to Langley's was under the name of a man who works security for the victim's office. While checking out the surveillance video, he notices every time Langley leaves and returns to the hotel, the man follows. Costello tracks down the security guy and he has an alibi. He says he was after the victim because Langley was trying to track down a family he thought might have been affected by a drug his company produced.

A woman comes into the station looking for Burns. He called her because she is the woman Langley was looking for. She had a baby but gave it up for adoption because she was young.

When asked if the child had any birth defects or problems she says no. Carrie says maybe they can track down the father because Langley may have tried to find him. The woman says the father was not involved. Carrie figures out Langley was the father and he was looking for his son.

Langley tracked her down because he wanted to see his son. He was sterile from radiation treatment for cancer so she decided to help. Saunders tracks down the adoptive family and Carrie and Burns go meet them.

The family says they met with Langley because the adoption agency told them he had not been informed about the adoption and could cause trouble. They agreed on a visitation schedule but Langley never showed for their last meeting. The couple said they didn't know the maid.

The mother puts the boy down for a nap and Carrie joins her. When the mother goes to get a monitor, Carrie looks into the bathroom and sees a yellow foam duck and has an unforgettable flash back to the murder scene, which had the same duck.

Carrie confronts the mother about the duck. The mother breaks down and tells Carrie they've known the maid for a couple of months. Langley wanted joint custody of the boy. Langley told them if they didn't allow joint custody he would sue them. They met Langley in his hotel room a few times and that's how they met Maria Ortiz. They had her over for dinner and persuaded her to accuse Langley of rape for $30,000 but they couldn't go through with it.

Carrie goes to Maria's house to arrest her. While there, she gets a call from Burns. He says the DA wants proof of money exchanging hands to seal the case. Carrie remembers seeing a wire transfer slip in Maria's house, so Burns sends Inara to check on it. She discovers the place where Maria sends money to her son every month. The clerk says Maria only sent $500, her usual amount. Inara also discovers the timestamp on the receipt is for 7:36pm. Burns says the video shows the maid running from the room at the same time she's at the store wiring money.

Carrie looks at the video and remembers the table by the room had roses on it when she arrived at the hotel. The flower guy was trying to change the flowers at that time. The roses on the table would've been placed there the night before and should be in the video. Instead, the video shows sunflowers. Burns suspects the head of security for the hotel doctored the tape.

When Saunders calls the hotel, the head of security tells him the servers crashed and he lost two days of footage, including the night of the murder. Carrie and Burns meet with Maria and her lawyer. Maria says she told the head of security about her plan with the adopted family and he said they could get more money from Langley.

He made a video of her running from the room and they would use it if he didn't pay. Langley agreed to pay but he didn't show up. He later told Maria he got into a fight with Langley and killed him but she should still tell her story. When she refused, he reminded her of the tape. She agreed and let him hit her so she would bruise. He told her to call the lawyer and to keep saying she was raped.

The police set up a sting operation and Maria meets the head of security. He figures out the police know Maria wasn't at the hotel during the murder and starts to rough her up. The police move in and arrest him.

The adoptive father is charged with extortion because he was involved with the plan, without his wife. Maria is charged with conspiracy. The episode ends with Burns setting Carrie with a computer in the basement so she can continue to search for her sister's killer.

Summary: When a crime scene is destroyed in an explosion moments after Carrie catches a glimpse of the room, her memories become a crucial piece of the investigation.

Det. Carrie Wells is sitting in a restaurant timing herself while she completes the puzzle. A man comes over to hit on her and asks if they've met before. Carrie says no and he asks if she's sure because he is really good with faces. Little does he know, Carrie remembers everything. Just as the man is winning her over, Carrie gets called to a crime scene.

As the team arrives at the scene, people are frantically moving about because of a gas leak. When Carrie and Det. Al Burns try to enter the apartment, the fire chief stops them until the gas leak is off. While chaos ensues, Carrie sneaks into the apartment to look around. The body of a man is on the floor with a gunshot wound to the chest. Just as Carrie is taking in the scene the fire chief yells, "We can't shut off the gas!" Al gets Carrie and they run out of the building just as the apartment explodes.

Back at the office, Det. Nina Inara identifies the victim: Peter Forrest. The victim worked for Sims-Bennett and lived in a different apartment than the one his body was found. Carrie remembers seeing Sims-Bennett boxes in the apartment. On one of the boxes Carrie sees two of three letters for an account: H H. Det. Roe Saunders and Nina leave to track down the wife while Carrie, Al, and Mike head to the victim's office.

At Peter Forrest's office, Carrie, Al, and Mike meet with the victim's boss and the company's lawyer. The boss gives them the only account corresponding to H H. The account is for Harry Hinkle, one of the oldest but the boss can't think of a reason the account would get him killed. Mike asks if they know where they can find Harry Hinkle but he's dead. Al asks if there were any problems with clients but the lawyer says they need a court order to give out that information.

They all get up to leave, Carrie approaches the victim's boss. She tells him she knows the two were good friends and they will do their best to find the killer. The boss tells Carrie there was a problem with one client who lost a lot of money when the housing bubble burst. The client, named Isaac Bresner, threatened to kill Peter.

Roe and Nina meet Isaac Bresner at one of his photo shoots and he admits threatening to kill Peter but he has an alibi. Isaac was in the front row of a fashion show during the murder. He tells the detectives to look for a jealous boyfriend because he had lots of women.

Carrie, Nina, and Al finally track down the wife. She tells the detectives Peter was living at the other apartment because they separated but were planning to get back together. Nina asks why they split up and the wife says it was because of his job and freewheeling lifestyle but he changed. She says a woman called the house often but Peter would yell at her to leave them alone.

Nina confirms the wife's alibi and Roe tracks down the number calling the victim's house. It was coming from the phone extension of an assistant at Sims-Bennett but she got fired a few weeks ago. The team goes to the assistant's apartment and finds her dead. Nina finds a ring in the apartment, supposedly from Peter, with an apology note. Al tells her to check to make sure Peter bought the ring.

While in the apartment, Carrie notices a glass on the counter with the initials HyH. This takes her back to Peter's apartment and the Sims-Bennett box with the partial initials H H. In the office Carrie and Nina figure out HyH is an organization called 'Help your Homies'. Peter set up the organization and managed their money but he recently closed the account with no sign of the money.

The organization's president Pablo Hortua is serving 25 years to life in prison. Carrie and Al meet with Pablo Hortua and his associate at the prison. Hortua says he called Peter after seeing him in the news involved with a cancer charity. He helped them for a while but recommended someone else who could devote more time. He moved their money to a different bank. Mike checks out the bank and Peter did in fact move the money.

Nina finds out Peter did not buy the ring for the assistant, her ex-boyfriend did. The ex-boyfriend is a former marine who was discharged a few weeks ago for pulling his weapon on a superior officer. Nina and Mike interview the ex-boyfriend and he admits to buying the ring and proposing but the assistant said she needed more time. He says he didn't know about another guy and he was in New Jersey during the shooting and asks for a lawyer.

Roe finds out the gas leak started two floors above Peter's apartment. At first the idea doesn't make sense but Carrie figures the police response was so fast, the killer didn't have time to get out so he or she goes up two floors, starts the leak, and slips out with the crowd. Carrie goes back through her memory of the first crime scene and she remembers seeing a man come out of the building, the associate of Pablo Hortua, but he's in prison.

Carrie goes back to the prison to speak with a corrections officer as he's leaving. He is the officer in charge of the inmates and bed check. Carrie asks him if he's sure if the man was in his cell and he says yes. Carrie gets a look at the officer's license plate and remembers seeing the corrections officer in his car at the Peter Forrester's crime scene. The team thinks maybe Peter got killed because he knew about the HyH's finances, which were in good shape until Pablo Hortua took over the group.

Al and Mike bring the corrections officer in for interrogation but the officer refuses to talk. Carrie remembers the officer on the phone at the prison saying, "she is safe with me." Carrie goes into the interrogation room and asks why the officer hasn't asked for a lawyer. He says he doesn't need one. She asks him if his daughter is safe or in trouble. He says nothing. She says they will get him a lawyer and word will get out that he's talking to the cops. He finally breaks his silence and tells them he can't say anything because they have his daughter Anna and they will kill her.

The corrections officer says he was supposed to get his daughter back that day but the gang saw Carrie in the parking lot. The corrections officer says Pablo got a visit from a man after Carrie and Al left the prison. The police bust down the man's door and rescue the girl. Pablo and his associate get charged with both murders. At the end of the episode, Carrie gets together with the man she met in the restaurant at the beginning.

Summary: When Al's ex-partner is gunned down and the investigation reveals he may have been a dirty cop, Carrie must decide how to support him without getting too close.

This episode of Unforgettable starts with Det. Carrie Walsh and Det. Al Burns participating in a NYPD bowling league. It appears Carrie is a stand-in for someone else because she is not wearing the requisite bowling shirt. Jim Kelly, a member of the other team, was a partner for five years with Al after he moved to New York. Over the loudspeaker, the license plate number for Jim's truck is announced because his lights are on. Jim and another friend go outside, the friend needs a smoke. Suddenly shots are heard in the bowling alley. Carrie and Al run outside to see both cops down, bleeding.

Det. Mike Costello and Al's girlfriend Elaine, played by Annie Parisse, arrive at the hospital. Mike says the wives have been notified and are on the way. Al walks out of Jim Kelly's room and shakes his head; Jim didn't make it. Just then, Jim's wife arrives at the hospital and sees the look on Al's face and starts crying. Al gives her a hug and asks his girlfriend to take care of the wife while he gets to work. The other wounded officer, Moyer, is still in surgery.

Mike, Al, and Carrie get together to get the investigation started and Mike believes the shootings were a hit. Carrie has a flashback from the scene and notices the headlights on Jim's car were not on. Someone used it as a ruse to lure him outside. Al tells Mike to get Det. Roe Saunders to follow-up with the bowling alley to figure out who informed them about the headlights. Mike goes to check out Jim's case files to see if there's a connection.

At the crime scene, Roe finds out someone called the bowling alley to report the lights on. Det. Nina Inara is working on some paint and a broken tail light left when the getaway car hit the victim's car. Nina and another officer figure out the make and model of the car, a 2009 Escalade, right tail light. Nina tells Roe to get an APB on the car and get a record of incoming calls to the bowling alley.

Back at the office, Mike and Carrie walk in while Al is yelling at someone on the phone about jurisdiction on the case. Mike tells Carrie Al will never give up because Jim saved his life. A call comes in saying the Escalade was found. The car was reported stolen a couple of days ago and is wiped clean. Al thinks there was more than one person involved but Nina says the crime scene techs only found shell casings from one gun. Carrie has a flashback to the time of the fired shots and says the shots happened simultaneously with the screeching tires; meaning one person was driving while the other was shooting.

Nina and Carrie see a tech picking up a container of bleach wipes. Behind that is a box of old nachos with the receipt, order 197, which means one of the killers came inside the bowling alley. Carrie has a flashback to the bowling alley when the food counter is calling out order numbers and sees one the guy pick up order 197. At the station, Carrie identifies the man as Theo Walker, aka, Zippy. Nina finds an address for Theo and they bust down the door. Al grabs the guy and throws him to the floor but it's not Theo, it's his brother. Theo's mother tells the police he doesn't live there; he only uses the address for mail. She kicked him out because he was dealing drugs. The mother tells the police he works for a drug dealer named LaShon. Al receives a call from Elaine and they rush over to Jim's house. Internal Affairs showed up with a search warrant to take Jim's files and computer. Al asks why they are at Jim's home but the IA detective tells Al he can't tell him and walks away. Carrie says IA thinks Jim is dirty.

Mike and Nina get information on LaShon and find out Jim and Moyer were checking out LaShon for a double homicide but he was cleared. Al tells his team to look further into Jim's case files but IA, which also wired Jim's car for surveillance, restricts them. At the hospital Al shows Moyer a picture of LaShon but he says they cleared him in the double homicide because they found another guy with the gun. Al asks Moyer about IA and he tells him some officers allegedly took around $100,000 to $150,000 from a crime scene. But Moyer insists Jim is clean and had nothing to do with it.

When Al gets back to the station the IA detective is waiting for Al and asks if Jim gave him something to hold on to. Things get testy but Al says Jim never gave him anything. The IA detective tells Al it is alleged Jim was tipping LaShon to drug raids. He also tells Al that Jim was using a stolen access code to get the information. The IA detective also tells Al Jim was heavily in debt because of his wife's cancer but he recently paid a $27,000 hospital bill in full.

Al goes to Jim's home and asks his wife about the money he used to pay the medical bills. She says Jim handled the money so she doesn't know. She goes on to say she doesn't know where Jim got the money but he was on edge and he brought files home from work. She says IA didn't find them but tells Al where to look. Al goes into the basement and finds the files in a bag underneath a poker table. Al takes it back to the office and finds a case file for a raid on LaShon and crack. Carrie tells him it may not be what it seems but Al is convinced Jim is dirty.

Al gets a call from Roe and Theo is dead. At the scene, Nina interviews the cops that killed him and they say he resisted. Back at the station, Carrie is going over the information found in Jim's bag. Carrie asks Mike to take a look at the files and they discover LaShon was getting a pass while his rivals were getting arrested. When they look up the names of the cops on those cases, they are the same ones that killed Theo. Jim was looking into other cops.

Carrie says they should wait to tell Al before getting his hopes up. Mike finds LaShon and holds him while Carrie goes to the police bar to tell the dirty cops about the arrest for Jim's murder. When Carrie leaves, one of the cops makes a call and LaShon's phone is ringing off the hook.

At the station, Carrie and Mike explain the ruse to Al. Nina tells everyone another set of prints was on the gun and Theo's phone wasn't used to call the bowling alley. J Dog, the man whose prints are on the gun is in danger. The team brings in Theo's younger brother to see if he knows where J Dog hangs out. He tells the police where to find him. Al and Moyer, who is out of the hospital, head over to the site. Carrie says the younger brother confessed to hindering without asking for a lawyer. Nina says the boy's mother said Moyer promised he wouldn't face prosecution.

Al didn't say anything about a deal but the mother trusted Moyer because he used to coach her son in little league. Carrie has a flashback and remembers Moyer and the boy introducing themselves like they didn't know each other. Nina and Carrie look at Moyer's personnel file and realize he worked in narcotics with the suspected cops. Carrie has another flashback to the bowling alley and sees Moyer making a phone call. She realizes he called in the headlights.

Al and Moyer are looking for J Dog when a car pulls up and two of the dirty cops get out with shotguns. Al tells Moyer to call for backup while he gets J Dog. While Al is looking, J Dog takes a couple of shots at him. Al tells him Theo is dead and the cops that killed Theo are coming for him. J Dog thinks Al is there to kill him but Al says J Dog can't testify if he's dead and he needs him alive. J Dog slides his gun to Al and gives up. Al calls for Moyer and J Dog looks worried. Moyer and the other two cops come in while Al and J Dog hide. Moyer comes around the corner and sees Al, points his gun at him, but Al gets off the shot first. The other two cops come out with their guns just as Carrie and other police show up to arrest them. Moyer is also arrested.

Jim's memorial is held at the bowling alley. The IA detective apologizes to Al and says the $27,000 came from Jim selling his boat. The detective asks if there's anything he can do and Al tells him to give Jim's widow the same information. Carrie comes over to congratulate Al but he says he lost faith while she didn't. Carrie says she had faith in Al that he would find the answer. Al's girlfriend Elaine calls him over and stares at Carrie while she and Al hug.

Summary: Carrie and Al's investigation into the murder of a hard-partying heiress takes an unexpected turn when they discover that the woman apparently didn't exist until 18 months earlier.

This episode of Unforgettable starts with Al and Carrie visiting her mother in a nursing home. Before reaching her mother, Carrie is on the phone talking about something to do with her sister's murder. Al is holding a drawing of a man of the possible murderer. Carrie's mother was also in the first episode of the series playing blackjack.

Carrie tells Al the mother thought Carrie was Carol Burnett the last time she visited. This is the first time it's revealed the mother is suffering from Alzheimer Disease. When Carrie and Al walk in, the mother immediately recognizes both, which is a surprise. Then she tells them they need to go on vacation more often because the trip to Vermont they just took did them good. While Al gets a call, the mother tells Carrie if she keeps dragging her feet, she's going to lose Al.

Al and Carrie arrive at the crime scene but the body is missing. A security officer found a car idling with the door open but no driver. The car is registered to Harrison Publicity. Carrie and Roe check out the address the car is registered to. The manager says the lease is in the name of Harrison Publicity but Kelly pays the rent. The manager says he got a noise complaint about the apartment, Kelly was arguing with a man. After the manager knocked on the door everything calmed down.

As Carrie is looking around the apartment and looks at a picture, she has a flashback to a newsstand and recognizes the woman as Kelly Latimer. According to Carrie, gossip magazines say Kelly and another girl, Ashley Phillips, hate each other. Carrie looks up a blog with one post saying, "Ding dong, is the bitch dead?" Back at the office, the team is trying to figure out if the whole affair is a publicity stunt but Carrie isn't so sure. Why does a very wealthy woman live in a studio apartment in Queens?

Carrie and Al go to a bookstore to see Dean Clayman, an author and the missing woman's ex-boyfriend. He denies harming Kelly but says she has no real friends and her family cut her off financially until she turned 25. After the fight in Kelly's apartment where they broke up, Dean went to see Ashley Phillips, his other ex, just to talk. Dean says Kelly's only been missing 12 hours and she'll show up.

Al calls Mike as he and Roe are going to visit Harrison Publicity to tell him Kelly's last call was to the firm. Roe asks the firm's manager why Kelly called her at 2:15 am but it was the manager's assistant who took the call. The manager says the assistant told her about the call so she called Kelly later but it went to voicemail. The manager says Kelly took all the blog post and negativity personally.

Back at the office, Carrie suggests she and Al go undercover at some big party so they can get closer to Ashley Phillips. Al doesn't want to go so Carrie takes Nina instead. When they arrive at the club the bouncer won't let them in because they're not on the list. Carrie recognizes a guy and calls him over. She tells him a story about Kate Moss and leather pants. The guy remembers the story and they get in. Carrie doesn't know the guy; she remembers reading the story in a blog.

Inside the club, Carrie and Nina see Ashley Phillips arguing with her publicist. Carrie and Nina approach Ashley and tell her they are developing a reality show about celebrities but they know it's bad timing with Kelly being missing. Ashley thinks the whole thing is a joke. They confirm Dean's alibi that he was with Ashley after leaving Kelly's apartment. While in the club, Carrie gets a call from Al. Carrie and Nina arrive a dockside crime scene where Kelly's body has been found. Roe reveals that Kelly is a fake Latimer and in fact, the Latimer family doesn't exist.

At the office, the coroner's report reveals Kelly was tossed in the water while she was still alive. She also had drugs in her system. Roe thinks it is possibly a suicide. Nina agrees with Roe but Al and Carrie don't. Mike and Roe head back to the PR firm to speak with the manager. The manager says a guy was accosting Kelly at an event a while back and maybe the paparazzi got a picture of the guy.

Carrie and Nina go back to Kelly's apartment but the manager says the paparazzi broke in and took almost everything. While in the apartment, Carrie has a flashback to her first time there and remembers seeing a snow globe with the words "Mountain State" engraved on it. Back at the station, the team figure out Kelly Latimer is actually Leanne Farley. Her deadbeat husband, he beat her, filed a missing persons report. Al got a photo of the man who was stalking Kelly at the event, compares it to Leanne Farley's husband and it's the same guy.

Joe Farley is having a good time in a hotel with two prostitutes and drugs when the team busts the door down and arrests him. Joe tells Al and Carrie that Leanne took $15,000 and left but she gave him the money back when he found her. Joe says he was in the hotel bar every night and didn't know Leanne was dead until he was arrested. He reveals Leanne actually have him $150,000 plus $10,000 a month so he had no reason to kill her. Al wonders where she got so much money.

Carrie looks at a robbery report Kelly filed for a bunch of stolen jewelry and pays a visit to the man she told the Kate Moss story to at the party. The man says his club is in a tough neighborhood so crime happens all the time. She accuses the man of fencing the stolen property to get Kelly money. He admits it and he found out about Leanne and wanted to help her. He says Dean found out about the scam.

After the interview, Carrie has a flashback to the bookstore where Dean was reading his book. He got a date wrong. Carrie and Al get Dean in an interrogation room and Carrie tells him his book is crap and has about 12 inconsistencies in the first 60 pages. Al asks if Kelly figured out his book was fake but Dean insist Kelly was the only fake thing. Dean says he figured out Kelly was fake after the robbery. She didn't care when she found out his book was fake but he couldn't be there for her when she revealed herself to him. He then asks for a lawyer.

Carrie and Nina bring Ashley Phillips in for an interview with her lawyer. They ask her what she was arguing with her publicist about but Ashley doesn't remember. The detectives tell her they know she spent a lot of time with Kelly and asks why the fake hatred in the blogs. Carrie confronts her about the act at the club when she called Kelly being missing a joke. Ashley said her publicist made up the whole act, including the hatred.

Ashley says they were best friends but she couldn't go to Kelly because they were supposed to hate each other. Dean never dated Ashley. He went to her after the fight because the two girls were friends and he wanted Ashley to help Kelly. Ashley goes on to say that she called the PR firm's manager to help Kelly and the manager said she would check on Kelly. Carrie and Al bring the manager in for an interview. She says she got the call from Ashley but never called Kelly. Kelly called her but the assistant took it.

Carrie and Al interview the assistant and tell him they know it was his idea to fence the jewelry. The assistant says he was helping Kelly pay her husband. Carrie tells the assistant she knows that no one initially knew about Kelly's real identity except the PR manager and once Kelly started telling people who she really was, she had to go. The assistant admits he didn't take the call from Kelly, the manager did, but he recorded it. Carrie and Al tell the PR manager they've identified the killer and want to see if she can identify him and she agrees to go.

They take the manager to the crime scene and tell her they knew she was at the crime scene. Carrie plays the recorded message where Kelly says she tired of pretending. The manager says she will come to Kelly, at the crime scene. The manager admits meeting Kelly and putting her in the river.

At the end of the show, Carrie asks Al to not visit her mother with her anymore because they are no longer together and doesn't want to give her mother any ideas. Carrie visits her mother again. Her mother sees the drawing and asks why she has a drawing of Jonathan.

Summary: Carrie's investigation into the death of her sister moves forward, but her inability to let go may hinder the search for a missing infant whose father was murdered.

This episode of Unforgettable starts with a flashback to the end of last week's episode. Carrie pulls some papers out of her bag and her mother sees a drawing of a man, a sketch of the man who allegedly murdered Carrie's sister. The mother asks why she has a picture of Jonathan? When Carrie asks for more information, her mother struggles to remember anything. Carrie is telling the story to Al when they get called to a crime scene.

Marshall Smith is found dead in his apartment after a delivery driver saw blood seeping from under his door. The victim is in rough shape with stab wounds and burns. Both Carrie and Roe separately find out the victim has a child, 18-month-old Bianca, and she is missing. Carrie finds a list of phone numbers taped to the phone, one being for Children's Family Services. She visits the case manager who tells Carrie that Marshall was a model father and was not in trouble. Carrie continues questioning the case manager but she needs to leave for court. Carrie gets upset and starts yelling at the woman because she's trying to leave. The woman tells Carrie to call her supervisor and leaves. Carrie has a flashback to when she got angry on another case and roughed up a suspect. She's getting too involved emotionally.

Nina, Roe, and Al hit dead ends on their searches for missing Bianca so Al and Mike go to Marshall's workplace. The boss tells them Marshall was a good, hard worker with no problems until a couple of days ago. He got into a fight with another worker, Jose Alvarez, and punched him in the face. Al and Mike find Jose and bring him in for questioning. Jose says he did nothing wrong and Marshall hit him for no reason. Al thinks maybe Marshall wanted to get fired so he staged the fight for the manager to see.

Nina visits Bianca's daycare and the worker tells her Marshall pulled the child out a few days ago because an unknown man saying he was Bianca's uncle tried to pick her up before. She gives them a copy of the surveillance tapes but it doesn't show a face because the cameras are pointed at the floor to see the children. Al notices a tattoo on the man's arm in the video and it looks like the one on Marshall's arm. Was Marshall formerly in a gang?

Carrie has another flashback to the day she lost control with a suspect. Al tells her to get control because he can't keep covering for her. Al tells Carrie he's suspending the investigation into the death of her sister because she is losing it, it's for her own good, and for the good of their relationship. Carrie tells Al she knows what's good for her and storms off. Maybe this is the prelude to the end of their previous relationship.

Mike tracks down Bianca's mother and finds her in prison. Mike tells her Marshall is dead and Bianca is missing. At first, she doesn't believe him so Mike shows her Marshall's autopsy photo. He asks the mother about the tattoo and she tells him to find her child. Mike tells her he knows how she left Bianca outside while buying drugs and he thinks maybe Marshall is dead and Bianca is missing because of some drug debt she owes. If she doesn't cooperate, he will make sure her stint in prison is longer. She tells him Marshall worked for Logan Security and the workers had the same tattoo.

Carrie meets with the case manager again and apologizes for her earlier behavior. The manager gets Carrie a list of Marshall's known associates. She's about to tell Carrie something when she sees a man and suddenly changes her mind and quickly leaves. Back at the office, the team is looking into Logan Security. When they're looking through photos, Carrie has a flashback to earlier when speaking with the case manager as notices one of the men from the photos. Al and Carrie go to the case manager's home but she is gone. She left in a hurry, and while looking through the place; Carrie sees a sippy cup with Bianca's name on it in the sink.

Nina finds out the case manager has been holding Bianca for a couple of days. The neighbor says she identified the Bianca as her niece. Nina thinks the case manager is involved but Carrie thinks she's protecting the baby. She's getting emotionally involved again. Carrie flashes back to the past and Al tells her she needs to take a break. Carrie says she needs to get away from crime scenes and be normal. She turns in her badge and leaves the Syracuse police force, and Al.

Mike and Roe pay a visit to the head of Logan Security but he isn't much help. He tells the detectives the tattoos are a bonding experience and helps identifies his men if something happens. Back at the office, Roe finds out the security company is on police radar because they may be involved in smuggling small arms. The team believes the security firm tried to get Marshall to help move the weapons through the shipping company he worked for. So Marshall tried to get fired by starting the fight so he wouldn't be involved.

Nina gets information on the case manager's cell phone, she's heading north. Carrie flashes back to the manager's apartment and remembers a photo of a fishing camp in Rybeck, NY. Also, someone else ran a trace on her cell phone, maybe the security firm? When Al and Carrie reach the fishing camp, they hear a gun shot in the woods. As they move through the woods, a man with a gun is spotted. The man points his gun at Al but Carrie shoots him first. She continues through the woods and hears a baby crying. She comes to a shed and finds Bianca with the case manager.

The case manager confirms the team's theory about the weapons. Marshall asked her to take Bianca for a day while he sorts out a problem from the past. She forgot the diaper bag so she went back to Marshall's and a couple of men came over. She hid beside the bed. Carrie tries to get the case manager to flashback to when she was in the room and she remembers the men fighting with Marshall. She remembers seeing a man's reflections in a mirror, the head of Logan Security; he's quickly arrested. The case manager later files for custody of Bianca.

Al tells Carrie she's getting better with controlling herself and she did good work with the case manager. He tells her she'll get even better is she learns to not get so emotionally involved and learn to chill and relax. She props her feet on the desk and leans back to show Al how she relaxes. When she closes her eyes, she has a flashback to her sister's murder and remembers the jacket he was wearing, which tells her where he worked.

Summary: Carrie and Al investigate the murder of a public defender. They soon find out that the killer has bigger plans that may include a second death.

Carrie is patiently waiting to buy a bottle of water and a candy bar at a convenience store but is waiting for the woman in front of her. Apparently she was searching for something else in the store. When the clerk starts to ring her purchases, the woman starts a dispute about a price. While this is going on Carrie's phone rings and she's having trouble hearing. Finally frustrated, she tells the woman the price of all her items and her grand total so they can move on. When the clerk asks if she wants to pay with cash or credit, the woman says check. Carrie gives the clerk $20 and tells him to keep the change.

Carrie arrives at the crime scene where Al and Roe are waiting. A friend found Mary Hanson dead in her apartment. While Al and Roe are talking, Carrie takes a look around the apartment and notices a male uses the second bedroom but he is not in the apartment. Behind the building Mike and Nina are looking for clues and he finds a fabric sample on a banister. Talking to Mary's friend, Carrie and Al find out the male roommate is a court officer named Kevin McMillan.

Al gets more information on the man, including his car, a blue Blazer. Carrie has a flashback to when she drove into the neighborhood and remembers seeing the same vehicle with a man sleeping in the passenger seat. They wake him and ask if he killed Mary. He looks at his hands and they are bloodstained. He doesn't know if he killed her. Kevin says he went bar hopping with his friend Joe, blacked out in his car, and that's all he remembers.

Roe finds out a former client of Mary's, she worked as a legal aid, was attracted to her and he showed up at two in the morning to profess his love. Roe visits the man at his gym and he says Mary was giving mixed messages so he went to be sure. When Roe tells him Mary is dead the man says he didn't kill her and he has an alibi.

Mike brings Joe in to ask about Kevin's night. He confirms they were out drinking and Kevin was very drunk. Joe cut his hand because he broke a glass in the bar while watching a football game. Joe says Mary started using a dating service to find men. A blood test also confirms that Kevin was too drunk to even walk, let alone kill Mary. Nina thinks CSI made a mistake in calculating distance from the hole in the window to the latch. Carrie has a flashback and remembers dish soap on the floor in the kitchen, a wet sponge, and a wet towel. This leads her to believe the broken window was staged and Mary actually knew the killer and let him in.

Mike finds out Mary looked up the sociology department at Fordham University then sent Kevin an e-mail asking him to see her before he went to work, but Kevin never saw the e-mail. When Nina meets with Mary's friend she says Joe is a student of sociology at Fordham. At a party, another friend of Mary's who worked in criminal justice asked Joe about his research and he got defensive. Mike checks out Joe at Fordham and he does not exist at the university.

Mike, Al, and Carrie are wondering why Joe came in if leads are pointing to him. Carrie has a flashback to when Joe was talking with Mike and figures out he was making things up on the fly Keyser Soze-style. When Mike and Nina go to his apartment, Joe is gone. They find the jacket that matched the fabric found at the crime scene and a shooting target in the sink. Joe's been practicing.

Roe found Carrie's papers related to convenience stores and he has a family member high up in a convenience store chain, he offers to make a call. Roe and Carrie go to the courthouse to ask Kevin about Joe. He says there is no reason for Joe to kill Mary. Kevin says he met Joe in a coffee shop when he started asking about trials and the courthouse. Joe interviewed Kevin and other guards in the courthouse and he met Mary through Kevin.

Joe's father and brother were killed in an explosion at a factory. The man charged with creating the explosion got two years prison and a fine. Carrie has a flashback to the courthouse and the official sentencing is today. The team believes Joe got close to Kevin so he could have easy access to the courthouse. Mary found out who he really was so Joe killed her.

Carrie and Al get with the head of security at the courthouse but he's not buying their bill of goods. The courthouse has new metal detectors and the building is safe. There is no way to bring a gun in. But Joe doesn't need to bring a gun in because Kevin already has one inside. He made a copy of Kevin's gun safe key while he was passed out. Al finds clothes in a garbage can and a missing guard uniform.

The head of security evacuates the courthouse and the team goes looking for Joe. Carrie notices a guard going to opposite way of everyone else and follows him. Joe finds the man responsible for his family's death and pulls a gun on him. Carrie tracks down Joe and gets him to talk. He says Mary had a feeling about him, she knew about Fordham, and she was going to tell Kevin. He didn't mean to kill her, she fell and hit her head.

Carrie tells Joe that he's right; the man took something very special away from him, but not to let him take away anything else. She asks him when the trial started, when it ended, and the best vacation they ever had. Joe answers all of them and Carrie tells him shooting the man will be a bad memory that will be with him forever. Eventually the bad memories outweigh the good ones. Joe puts the gun down.

Throughout the episode, Carrie remembers things about her past, specifically how after her sister was murdered; her mother got rid of everything belonging to her sister. At the end, Carrie explains to Roe and Al about how she remembers everything. When her mother cleared out her sister's belonging, she vowed to always remember things exactly as they were. Roe says he'll ask his uncle to check out former employees at his chain of convenience stores.

Summary: Al and Carrie investigate the murder of a teen who seemed to have no enemies. Meanwhile, Carrie looks to her estranged aunt for help with the investigation into her sister's murder.

This episode of Unforgettable starts with a distracted driver talking to her mother on the phone. She bumps a couple of cars while parallel parking then gathers her belongings. As she turns to walk away the windows of the car explode out. When she turns back to check out the car, the body of a dead teenage girl has fallen from the roof and landed on top.

In a different part of town, Carrie is meeting her Aunt Edie, played by Marilu Henner, to show her the sketch of her sister's possible killer. Marilu Henner is a consultant for Unforgettable because she has the same condition, Highly Superior Autobiographical Memory (HSAM) as Poppy Montgomery's character Carrie Wells. Carrie desperately tries to get her aunt's attention but she is hell-bent on getting away from Carrie. When Carrie tries to make plans with Edie, she finds a bunch of excuses to get out of it. When Carrie gets to the crime scene, she tells Al the story and they're both confused.

Amy O'Malley is the victim on top of the car. Carrie and Al notice defensive wounds on the Amy's wrist. Up on the roof, Roe is checking the wall and notices scuff marks; maybe she was fighting to stay on the roof while someone tried to push her. Carrie and Al meet with Amy's parents to get an idea about her routine. While Al continues with the parents, Carrie checks out Amy's room to search for clues. The mother comes into the room and tells Carrie she's usually home when Amy arrives but roofers were working on the building next door and the fumes bothered her so she left. Carrie has a flashback to the roof and remembers seeing a bucket of hot tar on the roof next door. When she and Al check it out, the bucket is still there along with footprints of someone walking away.

Mike and Carrie visit Amy's school to ask a few questions. While waiting, Carrie calls Aunt Edie to try to set up a get-together and Edie agrees to meet but quickly gets off the phone before Carrie can confirm a time. Mike and Carrie speak with some of the students Carrie hung out with on her roof but none of them have any information. They do get a lead on initials carved on the roof. AO+KS; Kenny Smith is one of Amy's friends but find out he was at orchestra practice during the murder.

Mike is telling the team about a neighbor hearing the O'Malleys get into a heated argument about Amy when Nina comes in to say Amy's cell phone reveals she was making calls to Planned Parenthood. Maybe Amy was pregnant and her parents were fighting about it. A poem Amy wrote makes it seem like her father was inappropriately touching her. She makes a reference to an "irrepressible rhythm" and Carrie has a flashback to meeting the parents. Amy's father kept tapping a beat on the table while being interviewed. Al tells the team to check the father's alibi.

Carrie meets with Amy's mother again and asks if she thought her daughter was pregnant and she said no. Carrie asks about the fight and the mother says it was about money stolen from their shop. The father thought Amy took it because she took money from her mother's purse earlier, around the same time as the calls to Planned Parenthood. Al finds out the father didn't show up for work like he was supposed to.

Carrie goes to Aunt Edie's hotel because she waited at the restaurant for an hour and she didn't show up. Carrie asks why she didn't call her and Edie says she doesn't have her number but she really does. Carrie shows her the sketch and Edie thinks it looks like a guy named Jonathan her mother dated before getting married. But Jonathan died in a car accident before her sister's murder.

Back at the station, Nina comes into Al's office to tell him Amy's father may be going after a kid named Jared Raines from Amy's school. When his wife told him Amy could've been pregnant, he said it was Raines and went after him at soccer practice. When Nina and Al arrive, Amy's father is beating Raines but they pull him off. Mr. O'Malley accuses Jared of killing his daughter.

In the interview room, Mr. O'Malley tells Mike he read Amy's journal and saw she messed around with Jared during homecoming but he didn't think they took it that far. Mike asks him why he wasn't at work and O'Malley tells him he was out drinking and people could vouch for him being in the bar. Nina tells Al and Carrie that Amy was not pregnant and Jared did not know Amy. Carrie goes into the interview with Mike and O'Malley to tell him his daughter wasn't pregnant. She asks him if he remembers anything else from the journal. Mr. O'Malley says a poem was about a golden bird living in a golden world. The bird fell from the sky and couldn't fly anymore. Carrie has a flashback to their visit to the school and remembers one of Amy's friends, Katie Monahan, was a gymnast who broke her ankle.

Carrie gets a call from Aunt Edie and she wants to meet. She tells Carrie that her memory is going. Edie thinks she is developing Alzheimer's disease and is struggling. She doesn't want to see her sister because it is a reminder of what is coming. Interesting Marilu Henner is playing a person who is losing her memory while her life is the exact opposite.

Nina and Roe track down the roofer and he says Amy and Katie were arguing on the roof but Katie left. A little later a guy shows up and pushes Amy off the roof. The roofer left because he is an illegal immigrant and didn't want to get deported. Katie comes in with her dad and lawyer for an interview. Katie says she and Amy argued about Amy stealing money from her parents. Carrie tells Katie either she can tell her father about the pregnancy or she would. Katie tells her father about the pregnancy and said they argued because Amy wanted her to come clean about why she stole the money. Katie says she left Amy on the roof alive but refuses to tell who the father is.

Al tells the team to find out whom Katie was seeing two months ago and Carrie has a flashback. She remembers being in the school and seeing a Mr. Collier in a photo of a class trip with Amy and Katie; he was standing next to Katie. She remembers seeing Mr. Collier in a classroom rhythmically tapping a ruler on the desk. She also remembers how defensive he looked when Mike and Carrie spoke to Katie during their school visit. Somehow this reveals Mr. Collier is the father of the baby. The poem in Amy's journal is about Katie and Mr. Collier, not Amy and her father.

The team realizes Mr. Collier stashed the journal where he killed Amy, and they converge on the apartment building to find Collier retrieving the diary. When he sees them, he tries to run but he's surrounded and arrested. The case is solved and Carrie returns the diary to the O'Malleys. Carrie visits her mother to play cards and Aunt Edie shows up.

Summary: When investigating on a gang related crime scene suddenly gunfire goes off and a second murder occurs. Al and Carrie have to go through hundreds of bystanders to find out who is responsible for the killings.

At the start of this episode of Unforgettable, Carrie uses her ability to play in an illegal poker game. She's doing a lot of winning when she notices the game manager pick up the money bag and leave. She excuses herself just in time to avoid the police raid, and score some money from the bag.

Back in her legal profession, Carrie gets called to a crime scene at a basketball court. A young woman, Marissa Perez, was shot right before the first game started. As the team is surveying the scene, shots rings out and everyone runs for cover. After the smoke clears, another person is dead on the court. The scene is chaotic, guns litter the ground, and a couple of people are wounded. Police managed to grab a couple of the shooters. Carrie flashes back and remembers a white man running towards Marissa's body but the police stop him. Roe says the man, Jim Clayburn, is one of the victims of the second shooting. Jim works with gangs to get them help. Al thinks maybe the shooting was gang-related and not accidental.

Carrie speaks with Marissa's mother and she tells her Marissa joined a gang when she was 13. She was trying to leave the gang and was going to college. A couple of weeks ago, she went back to the gang but her mother doesn't know why. The second victim is identified as Oscar Mendoza. Al brings in Detective Ben Cortez from the gangs unit to get them more information. There are two gangs in the area: Dominican Killer Kings (DKK) and Queens Bronx Six (QB6). Marissa was a part of the DKK. Mike and Carrie arrive at the meeting a few minutes later. When Al introduces Det. Cortez, Carrie has a flashback and sees him at the basketball court during the shooting.

Det. Cortez admits he was there when Marissa was killed. Carrie tells him that he knew Marissa, based on his expression at the court and he admits it. She was his confidential informant for the DKK. Carrie accuses Det. Cortez of getting Marissa killed. Carrie and Roe head back to the crime scene to try to piece everything together. Carrie has a flash back to the second shooting to see who's doing the shooting.

Jim Clyburn was the first to get shot during the second shooting, while going after Marissa's shooter. Five shots from a different area, one bullet hits a bystander. Four more shots ring out but Oscar Mendoza is still standing. A final shot is heard and Mendoza is down. The crime scene techs picked up ten shell casings but 11 shots rang out. The area of the lone shot is where a parks and rec officer was standing, ushering people out. He said in his statement that he didn't see any of the shooters.

Roe meets with the parks and rec guy and asks what he saw. He claims he only saw Jim Clyburn get shot but didn't see the shooter. Roe asks if he saw anyone pick up a shell casing and the guy gets nervous. Roe tells the man he needs him to tell what he knows. The man says it looked like Oscar Mendoza was reaching for a gun so he shot him.

Al calls Carrie into his office and asks why her fingerprints were found at an illegal poker game. She says it's to supplement her income and pay for her mother's care. Al tells her she could go to jail and then what would happen to her mother? Nina walks in on the argument and says the gun used to shoot Marissa is the same gun used to shoot Jim Clyburn, but they don't have the gun.

Back at the station, Det. Cortez tracks down Carrie and asks if he can sit in on an interview. She asks him about what he had on Marissa since she was getting out of the gang and going to school. Cortez says she was in a car with a kilo of cocaine in the truck. She wasn't driving so the charge wouldn't stick to her but she didn't know that. Cortez says he didn't force her; she came to him.

The bystander who was shot comes in for an interview and she does not like Carrie's attitude. At first she says she didn't see anything but Carrie and Roe tell her they'll arrest her for obstruction if they found out she's lying. She changes her story and says she saw Marissa arguing with a man. He was holding her arm and she was trying to get away. She identifies the man from a photo, Tito Alvarez.

Al gets a call from the hospital and Jim Clyburn is awake. Carrie and Al visit him to see if he can pick the shooter from a lineup. He picks Tito Alvarez as the shooter. Mike and Det. Cortez arrive at the front door of Alvarez's girlfriend but her mother denies knowing Tito and her daughter isn't home. Along the side of the house the daughter tosses some clothes out a window and Tito hops out into the waiting arms of Al and Nina.

Tito says he was at the park but he didn't shoot anyone. He says Marissa was mad at him because he didn't want her anymore. He didn't have any problem with Jim and he didn't run from the scene. He was frisked by a cop and gave a statement. Carrie has a flashback and sees the cop frisking Tito without his jacket on. That means he didn't have a gun so he couldn't be the shooter. Roe comes in and says another inmate heard Tito ordering a hit on the person who got him locked up.

Carrie and Al return to the hospital to confront Jim about his memory. Jim says Tito shot him and he's a killer. He then says he doesn't know who shot him. Al asks whom is he protecting but Carrie has a flashback to their previous visit and sees Jim's son tearing a sheet of paper from a notebook. Jim was writing instead of speaking because of the tube in his throat. When Carrie retrieves the paper from the trash it says, "I forgive you." Jim's son shot him.

Jim says it was an accident and his son just wanted him to feel the pain he feels when his father is gone helping the gang kids. He's not in the gang but they let him hang out. He says Tito passed the gun to Jim's son because they knew he wouldn't get searched. Marissa called Jim and told him the gang found out she was helping the police. The hit Tito ordered is on Jim's son. Jim sent him home to pack some things to leave town for a while.

Carrie and Al arrive and Jim's home in time to see two men pull a gun on the boy. Carrie rushes over and shoots one of the men and Al tackles the other. Jim's son, with his lawyer, give the police the gun Tito passed him.

The episode ends with Al telling Carrie he will fix the poker game problem with the other police but he thinks she does it, not for the money, but because she gets bored. She is a cop and needs to be more careful.

Summary: When a renowned ghost hunter is killed, Carrie and Al discover that his death is linked to a chilling discovery he made on a recent assignment.

he show starts with a couple of kids skateboarding through an abandoned mental hospital. One of the skaters trips and falls. When he get up blood was on his pants. That's when the boys noticed the dead body on the floor.

The team shows up to investigate the death of Peter Suderman, a partner at the ghost hunting firm Spirit Truckers, Inc. A homeless man name Gordon lives in the hospital and Carrie pretends she's a nurse and gets Gordon into another room. He talks about a nurse who sucks the soul out through the eyes. Nina and Roe find a thermal imaging camera, a tool of the ghost hunting trade that senses body heat. The camera picks up a large heat source then it falls to the ground with Peter. Whatever was in front of Peter attacked him.

An audio technician checks out an audio recorder the victim had and she was able to clear it up so Nina, Roe, and Mike hear "Denny, is that you?" Al and Nina check out Peter's place of employment and his boss tells them Peter was at the hospital because he thought ghost were there. The boss also identifies Denny as an assistant who was recently fired. They get a list of all of Peter's clients and check them out. Everyone checks out and they have one name on the list: Dr. Barlow.

The team gets together in the office to go over Peter's records. They find a record for Walker/Dunlap Forensics Lab. Carrie has a flashback and remembers Gordon had an envelope with the same name on it in his pile of stuff at the hospital. Al sends Roe to get the envelope; Mike and Nina go to see Denny, and Al and Carrie visit Dr. Barlow. When they arrive at the doctor's house, he says his wife is not feeling well but they just want to ask him a couple of questions so he lets them in. Peter Suderman checked on their home because of noises but he didn't find anything.

Carrie asks to see the basement and Dr. Barlow takes her down. Carrie sees broken glass on the floor and she asks if Peter might have sent something from his home to the forensics lab and the doctor says no. He seems in a hurry to get out of the basement and says he wants to check on his wife.

Nina and Mike arrive at Denny's apartment to find a girl dead on the floor with a knife in her chest. Mike pulls his gun out and yells freeze. A couple of people come from behind a wall and the dead girl sits up; they're shooting a movie. Denny says he was at the hospital but didn't kill Peter. He was fired because he borrowed some film equipment. For revenge, he set up some special effects to look like heat signatures to scare Peter. He says he filmed the whole thing.

Roe and Al get the envelope to the forensics technician, and after some theatre, a bone fragment from a pinkie finger is found inside. The technician determines the bone fragment is from a 15-year-old female. In the office Mike says he watched Denny video and he's in the clear. The bone had zinc oxide on it, consistent with rat poison. Carrie remembers Dr. Barlow's basement has rat traps all over the place. Carrie returns to the house to speak with the couple again. Carrie says evidence was found in their basement and she wants to talk to his wife. Obviously, she doesn't know if the bone fragment was found there. He refuses to let Carrie speak to his wife and tells her to leave his property.

Carrie calls Al and asks about a warrant to search the house and he says they're close. Carrie says she hears an argument going on inside the house and Al tells her she doesn't. She says it's getting heated and Al says don't even think about it. Now she hears glass breaking but Al assures her she doesn't. It is a ruse to get into the house without a warrant. Al tells her to back off but she pretends like she lost the signal and climbs into an open window. She goes downstairs into the basement and gets hit on the back of the head and falls downstairs, unconscious.

Dr. Barlow wakes Carrie up and she says her husband hit her. She unties Carrie and says he took her gun. Carrie tries to get the wife to go upstairs with her but she says she hears a voice and her husband is going to kill them. Back at the office, Al asks if anyone has heard from Carrie and Nina says she tried her cell phone but she didn't answer. The team heads to Dr. Barlow's house.

Carrie tries to find a way out but the basement is locked up tight. Dr. Barlow's wife says she knew what happened but didn't tell anyone. She met a girl at a park and decided to help her so she had the girl move in to help around the house. She found out about Dr. Barlow's involvement with the girl. A few days later, the girl was gone but the doctor told his wife he fired her. Since then, the wife has heard voices. Carrie finds a flashlight, shines it on the door, and sees smoke billowing. She finds an old coal chute to get out of the basement. When she opens it a body falls out.

They make it out of the house and Carrie sees Dr. Barlow's car in the driveway; he's still in the house. She breaks a window and goes in and finds him slumped in a chair and an empty liquor bottle on the floor. Roe shows up just in time to help her drag Dr. Barlow from the burning house. Mike finds a scalpel with Suderman's blood on it and the mud on his tires from the hospital. Nina is not convinced about the doctor's involvement. Why would he hire Peter to check for ghosts in his home when he knew a body was in the basement?

The forensic technician discovers a flashlight in the thermal-imaging camera video. Carrie remembers the doctor's wife giving her the same type of flashlight in the basement. She realizes the nurse Gordon saw was the doctor's wife. Carrie calls the hospital to check the doctor's blood alcohol level and it's zero. The wife set the fire, not the husband. Carrie and Al rush to the hospital because they believe the wife is going to finish the job.

When they arrive, they're told he was taken for inhalation therapy but the nurse who took him came back. He said another nurse said she would take him. Al and Carrie take separate elevators to cut her off. Carrie finds them as the doors are closing and she sticks her hand in to stop the door. The doctor's wife pulls out a scalpel and cuts Carrie, causing her to drop her gun. She said her husband was going to tell everything but Carrie says he was protecting her.

The wife tries to plunge the scalpel into the doctor's chest but Carrie stops her. They get into a fight; the woman is surprisingly strong. She finally subdues the woman as the elevator doors open and Al takes her away. Carrie is taken for stitches. Al later tells her the husband admits to the cover-up but denies killing the woman or Peter Suderman. He says the wife made up the idea about his affair with the girl.

The bone fragment is from the girl the wife invited into the home and Peter found it. After he found out she killed Peter he told her he was done covering for her and was going to tell the police. So the wife set it up to look like he did it and she tried to burn the house down with both inside.

Summary: When a construction worker with a promising future is murdered, Carrie and Al wonder if his ties to the mob were the cause of his death or an unrelated coincidence.

Carrie races up steps of a construction skyscraper and is knocked down by a man in night time. She hangs from the edge miles above 36 hours earlier, Al buys Carrie a coffee and says he found a kitten. He heard a meow and couldn't find the mother and took it home. Stanley, it has name. Carrie gets a bagel, Toasted plain no fat schmear an onion, The man says he has a mind like a steel trap. 'Have a great day carroll!' They smile. Carrie hates onions.

Ironworker Christopher Feeney is dead, Al meets them at the scene. Hey, says one worker, Carrie is a Charlie's Angel. 'Which one is she?' She says she is he one with a big gun. The men laugh. Carrie gets a good look at the construction premises.

The victim has a dent in his head like that it wasn't an accident. The M.E. puts the time of death at ten so what was he doing that time of night. Carrie asks by surveillance cameras, and Al says one was blocked by a shipment of lumber. Al will look for gambling debts, and problems in the victim's life.

They talk to the boss. Feeney was working posting tension he worked on everything, rigging, precast. They never had trouble had anyone on the site. Like all of the new guys had to keep on him about safety. The Boss had no idea what he was doing there so late. They have an occasion when employees are bringing a girl. Carrie harps on security problems with thefts.

Five theft reports of building materials in the last five months. The man says Chris was a third generation ironworker no way he did it. His father is in a wheelchair from a construction accident. Personal and financial trouble is a motive they say. The boss says they are going the wrong way, guys.

Carrie spots the wrench in one of the worker's belts as the dent material cause. Carrie matches the site and nods at Al, this is likely the murder weapon. A black trash bag gets thrown around.

Carrie pulls a bloody wrench from the black bag that was supposed to be hauled out of a dumpster

Later they visit the wake of the dead man. Carrie meets the father of Chris Feeney in a wheelchair. They begged their son to take the scholarship but he insisted on working and helping out.

The owner of the construction project, Barrett, arrives at the scene. He says that all access to records and files is now stopped and they have to go through a judge. Access to company records is limited. Al and the detective staff need to go to a judge.

The head of the detectives asks where Barrett himself was the night before, daringly. He was looking at a purchase, he doesn't remember stopping by to kill anybody.

Carrie goes to the victim's home again to talk to the parents. She says 'We think Chris was on the job site after ten' The father can't think what he was doing there.

The head of detectives investigates Barrett. He lives the high life with high profile divorces. The deal-maker Barrett is leveraged to the eyeballs, waiting for the turnaround.

Carrie remembers the card a woman left at the funeral wake. From the Jiaffee Family. This is a known organized crime family. Al asks where she is going. She says to get Jiaffee to tell her what happened to Chris. Al is not sure she will succeed but humors her.

Carrie goes to a Jiaffee owned restaurant. One of the managers (pit bosses) asks what she wants. She says she is detective Carrie Wells to see Mr. Jiaffee.

The man returns and says she can't see him. She says tell him it's about Chris Feeney. He then comes back and conducts her down a stairway and a lower tunnel and into wine cellar and locks her in the boss's office. The lock is turned behind her. She tries to get out.

A man comes in. Carrie attacks him. She flashes her handcuffs, He bows to her authority and apologizes. Marco makes a mistake. At least it's a wine cellar, he says, 20 years ago it would be a box.

Carrie isn't amused. She wants to know why he has an affinity with Chris and who murdered him. He wants to know why she thinks he'd know. He says he is a legit arm of the family and doesn't participate in the family business mores.

Jiaffee says they used to vacation at the same shore where Chris was a lifeguard in his teens. Chris saved his cousin from a riptide and the cousin was in the hospital for two weeks and Chris visited her every day, Jiaffee got him a job at Barrett. And they organized the scholarship. Carrie guesses and he confirms. He says he liked Chris and he'll help any way he can to find the killer.

'See you around': he says as she leaves. 'You should hope not.' She says.

The cops find out Chris had a fight with a truck driver named Manny about a girl. They caught him on camera putting a roach in his food, and he has a girlfriend named Torie in Uniondale. Carrie checks out the girlfriend.

Al Burns goes to Barrett. At the curb of their limousine they step onto the sidewalk. Al sees Barrett and his wife, and Al thanks his wife for her attempts to the PDA. Barrett gets the hint and sends his wife inside.

Al threatens to tie up his lawyer in court and halt construction again with his evidence. Barrett says he won't win but Al says the court hearing would age his $200 million loan another day, costing him tens of thousands of dollars.

The girlfriend says Chris screwed up at work or something. Carrie sees a hose behind her as they talk. She can't reach Manny on his cellphone. He is using his cousin's phone. Carrie memorizes the number. They go to the construction site and find Manny's body hidden in some concrete.

Steve Jiaffee runs a restaurant. He asks her out. She is surprised. He really wants to ask her out. he drops a hint for her. It might be helpful to watch the construction site. He isn't in the family business but he has friends who dabble.

They find a pattern in the construction financier's doings. Barrett creates a false identity to cover. The guard says Barrett did not have a good night. Chris Feeney and Manny were part of something. They think Chris' body was left as a warning and Many knew too much. The robbery material could repay the finance loans.

Carrie drops hint to Al something is going down at the construction site that night. he says he has to Cal organized crime about Jiaffee. She says there are thousands of dollars of copper pipe waiting to be lifted. Carrie says he needs

They gave him a key to the warehouse. Carrie asks him to sign a statement. Al says they could build a case he killed Chris Feeney. The matrimonial issue is another thing. Al says with the evidence he has he wants access to records, or in return he doesn't blow a big gaping hole in Barrett's marriage.

They find records of how the company does business. Carrie and Al stake out the construction site. Carrie sees the coffee cups on the dashboard and remembers another time when she and Al had sex during a stakeout with coffee cups on the dashboard. Al interrupts her reverie when a truck pulls up across the way. A man unlocks the gate.

They catch a man loading copper pipe but when they pull their guns he runs into the site and the chase him through the construction levels. He runs high up and kicks Carrie to where she dangles off the roof and then she crawls back to the ledge and up to safety. She runs around and tackles the thief when Al is there with the gun and then puts the cuffs on him.

In the interview room Al starts the interrogation but Carrie busts in and says she was on the edge she gets to ask the questions. Carrie says he doesn't want a lawyer. Because the people who killed Chris and Manny will just kill him too. He will sign a statement.

But Carrie listens to what the man says about being paid to farm out the delivered goods because Manny was late making the delivery. Carrie realizes that Manny delivered the cement wet. She goes into Al's office where the Barrett kingpin is being interviewed. She demands to know if he knows about real construction besides the business side. He says he does.

She says what would happen if Manny and Chris were delivering wet cement every day to the construction site, for use in the building. They both realize at once. It would weaken the building but only after the concrete had been poured and dried. The man realizes the building had been systematically weakening the building as payback for the man getting injured.

Carrie goes to the construction site and loads cement bags on the end of the top floor. She then dares the one worker to come and stand by her on the end. he does not because he knows he floor s to weak. She handcuffs him and then he freaks out, fearing he will fall.

Then Al comes and arrests him and say why wasn't she scared. She says that she filled the concrete bags full of popcorn from storage boxes 'repurposing'.

Carrie and Jiafee have a fun date and they talk and laugh at the restaurant. he tells a story about how his prom was ruined when the Feds were inside his limo because they thought his father was going to to leave the country. Carrie tells a story about pig's blood and he gym caching fire, a joke on her name.

Summary: A routine investigation into a college student's death takes a disturbing turn for Carrie when a suspect makes a dangerous move to outwit her memory.

This episode of Unforgettable finds the team investigating the death of Miles Novak, a 19-year-old sophomore in college. Miles' roommate brought a girl to their room for some private time. He pushes the bottom of the bed to wake Miles, but instead the body falls to the floor. The body has ligature marks around the wrist and burn marks on the neck. It looks like Miles was tortured.

Carrie and Mike go back to the campus to try to track down some of Miles' friends. They see a young man in the student lounge with Miles' laptop and similar marks on his wrist. The guy takes off running but Carrie chases him down. In the interrogation room, the guy tells Mike the marks are from zip ties and he and Miles were pledging to a fraternity, Omega Theta Rho. He had the laptop because he got an "assignment" from the fraternity. Miles was kicked out so he got a note under his door telling him to get Miles' laptop and wipe the hard drive.

At the office, Carrie receives a large bouquet of flowers from a man named Steve but she doesn't seem too inclined to take them. She instead gives them to the CSI tech and says they were left for her. She asks if there are any updates but the tech is still searching. Carrie has a flashback to Miles' dorm room and remembers he had a lot of Nikola Tesla items so she has the tech search that name.

Tesla works as a password for a video on Miles' laptop. The video depicts a hazing ritual where mud and water is thrown on pledges and they are sprayed with fire extinguishers while being told they are scum. Carrie and Al visit the fraternity and speak with the pledge master. He denies he or the fraternity had anything to do with Miles' murder. Miles was kicked out as a pledge because he couldn't keep up.

Later, the CSI tech finds an e-mail Miles sent to the local district attorney offering the name of a drug ring if he is immune from prosecution. Nina finds out Miles flew to Toronto a few times and the credit card used was addressed to the fraternity. Nina, Al, and Carrie think the drug ring might be in the fraternity so Carrie goes back during a party she was invited to so she can check it out. As she's walking through the house, Carrie notices a wall and has a flashback to Miles' room and pictures on the wall of different guys in Toronto.

She decides to find out about the guys going to Toronto and challenges them to a drinking game. She lays all 52 playing cards on a table face down. The guys call out one and she has to find it on the first try. If she does they have to take a shot. Obviously she is doing better than they are. A man comes up to her and asks if she wants a shot when all of a sudden, she is woozy. The next scene, a woman is asking her if she's all right and if she knows where she is. A police officer finds her in a car and thinks she's been drinking.

The next day the team goes back to the house to look around. Carrie has a flashback and remembers drinking from a bottle of water when she started feeling woozy. As she heads to the restroom upstairs, she can't remember everything but she remembers slumping to the floor and the pledge master asking, "Why couldn't you just leave it alone?" He seemed to be scared when he said it and then another man comes into the picture and helps take her outside. They try to put her in a van but she manages to get away to her car.

Four members of the fraternity admit to going to Toronto to import t-shirts for the pledge master, now the pledge master is missing. Carrie has another flashback and remembers the pledge master yelling at a recruit to take off a t-shirt with a maple leaf on it. Maybe, they figure, the guys are bringing liquid cocaine in from Toronto by soaking the t-shirts in it. Roe says they can get the cocaine out by soaking the shirts in water and industrial cleaner. When everyone looks at him he says, "What? I read."

Carrie remembers the van she was being taken to was a dry cleaner's on campus. The team, along with other NYPD officers, raids the dry cleaner and finds the pledge master beaten and tied to a chair. A man jumps out from the clothes, tackles Carrie, and starts choking her. Al comes along and hits the man on the head with his gun and the cops grab him. The entire drug ring gets busted.

Summary: A serial killer with knowledge of Carrie's memory abilities taunts the Queens PD as his list of victims grows.

Carrie speeds through the streets of New York, sirens blaring and dodging cars, to get to a crime scene. She skids to a stop at a park and gets out of the car to the hustle and bustle of nothing. She looks around but the park is quiet. Carrie walks over to a food vendor and asks about a shooting in the park. He asks if she's Detective Wells, and when she says yes he hands her a bag of food and a bill. Carrie has been sent for lunch.

As Carrie hands out the food order and warns her fellow detectives about their payday, her telephone rings. When she picks it up a voice says, "Good afternoon detective, I'm about to kill someone." She thinks Roe set up another prank but he's busy eating his food. The caller continues, "It's 1:38 now. At 1:56 someone else will die." He tells her about the other person whose already died and reminds her she only has 15 minutes.

Carrie quickly flashes back to the phone conversation and remembers hearing the sounds of a subway near Court Square so the team quickly race to the scene. As they search the area the team finds nothing and Al thinks maybe the caller is a kook. Just then, a man jogging through the square falls down.

As Carrie and Al are talking, she notices a woman kneeling down and examining the body. Carrie goes over and starts yelling at the woman about it being a crime scene when Al comes over and tells her the woman, Joanne Webster as played by Jane Curtin, is the medical examiner. Jane Curtin is probably best known for playing Dr. Mary Albright in '3rd Rock from the Sun'. She says it's her second day on the job and her badge is not ready. She goes on to tell them the guy was killed by a sniper.

Back at the office, the killer calls again. She asks him where he's going to strike next and he says not where he's going but where he's been. She thinks he wants her to go to Jersey where the first victim was killed. After searching around, she sees a wooden hand pointing to Lover's Loop. Al and Carrie discover where the sniper positioned for the first shot. They also find a photo of her from the second crime scene tacked to a tree.

The killer calls again and Carrie names him Fred. He asks if she got the picture, she says yes and tells him she doesn't have time for him, and hangs up. Carrie says she taking control and he'll call back. Sure enough he calls back and tells Carrie he's impressed with her and to enjoy the hunt. Al tells Carrie she's being reckless and tells her she's staying at the precinct to be safe.

Carrie gets a call in the middle of the night and when she answers it, it's not Fred. Instead, it's a nurse from a hospital calling about a woman whose been shot. The nurse says Fred told her to call Carrie because she was taking care of the victim.

Al and Carrie speak to the victim at the hospital. She says she was kissing her husband as she dropped him off at the train station when she was shot in the arm. Carrie asks her how she was standing when she kissed her husband and realizes she was shot from behind. The woman wasn't the target, her husband was. They need to find the husband because he went home to get some things.

They find the husband at home alive. Al shows him pictures of the other two victims and asks if he knows them. He remembers them from a work camp. After he grew up he would go hiking in that area known as Crown Gorge. The man tells Al and Carrie him and the other guys played a game where they hunted a local kid they called Sparky at Crown Gorge. He tells Al to contact Dick Simmons for more information. Mike and Nina meet with Mr. Simmons and he tells them Sparky is Lester Collins. Lester wanted to fit in with the other kids but couldn't and that made him an outcast. He was later dishonorably discharged from the Army.

Back at the office, Tanya the CSI "borrowed" an FBI/NSA program to find the number of the phone the killer is using and came up with three possibilities. She got the idea from Joanne who shows up to find out if it worked. Al, along with the three women, calls the numbers and the third one works. They find his general location and he tells Carrie they've got one hour to save the last guy.

The team figures out the last guy to be killed is getting on a ferry to Jersey because the killer told Carrie the victim will be trapped with no way out. Carrie and Al get on the ferry and find the man and the shooter in time. She tells Lester to put his gun down but he fires and so does Carrie. Luckily for Carrie she's wearing a bulletproof vest. Not so lucky for Lester who was killed.

The team is in Al's office, along with Joanne, when Roe comes in and says they found Mr. Simmons body and he's been dead for three days. That's not possible because Mike and Nina spoke to Simmons the day before and the guy looked nothing like Lester. A phone number is carved into the dead Simmons' back. Carrie calls the number and the mysterious voice answers and congratulates them on finding Lester but he was just a pawn. He tells Carrie he'll see her later and hangs up. A woman walks into the man's office and calls him counselor; he is a lawyer but they don't show his face.

Summary: A key witness in Al's case suddenly disappears, now he must find her before he has to turn his suspect loose.

The scene opens with Nina inquiring about a woman, Kate Jordan, asking people to identify her photograph. Meanwhile, in a pub, we see people watching the news, where the murder of Nora Hagan is being reported. The accused being; her husband, Joe Hagan. Next we see Joe being all huffy at Burns, for falsely accusing him of his wife's murder. But Al realizes that Joe was nervous. Nina and Roe are still seen inquiring about Kate. Next we see Carrie informing Burns that he was all over the television and that she has come to help him. Burns tells Carrie that Joe was a powerful man and he would turn this murder into a suicide. He says that only Adam could buy them some time. Next, we are taken into the court room, where we see Adam informing the judge that Kate was to reach the court to testify, but now she is missing. He suspects that something is happened to her.

He asks the judge for some more time. But Joe's lawyer wants this case to be declared as a mistrial. On Burns assurance of finding Kate, the judge grants a two day recess. When Burns comes out of the court room, Carrie informs him that Nina had found out where Kate was residing. They reach the hotel room. But they don't find her; no wallet, no id. But they find traces of an expensive perfume. Nina comes in announcing that the manager told her about an emergency exit door being tripped the previous night. The trio concludes that Kate was kidnapped. Back at the office, the team is shown discussing the possibilities of how the murder would have taken place. Burns explains to Nina that Kate's testimony was very important, as she had seen Joe hit his wife and threatened to kill her. Roe presents a 3-D representation of what could have happened the day Nora was killed.

They explain the same to Nina. Burns tells Nina that the couple was on a romantic cruise. Nora had a little too much to drink and had gone to the deck to get some fresh air. Joe went to the deck to check on her every 15 minutes. Their friend Watts said that Nora went to the deck at 9.30pm. Watts is ready to testify that he could hear the couple talk until 10.15. Joe comes down and informs Watts that Nora was gone. But the team realizes that according to the current patterns and the manner in which Nora was washed onto the shore, did not match with the time Joe claims. They also conclude that a person of Nora's height could not accidentally fall off that railing as it was too high. She had to be thrown off. Carrie suggests that they re-examine the old forensics in the next 44 hours, as it could be difficult to find Kate. Burns finds it to be an inconceivable task; but the expert says it could be done faster. Just then Carrie sees a picture of Kate's roommate from Ohio, Gwen Turning.

Carrie, owing to her extraordinary ability, visualizes a scene, where she sees Gwen at the court talking to Clancy Watts, the same person on the boat; the night Nora died. Carrie has a hunch that she was asking Watts about Kate. Next, we see Burns asking Gwen about Kate. Gwen tells Burns that Kate had called her last week, informing her about her arrival in town and also that she would change her testimony. That astounds Burns. Next, we see Mike and Roe talking to Watts, enquiring about Kate. Watts tells them that he did not know Kate well. At this, the detectives tell Watts that Gwen has updated them about him being friends with Kate. Despite hearing that, Watts refuses to help and walks away. Back at the office, Burns reruns the tape of Kate's testimony and tells Carrie that she did not notify the D.A. about changing her testimony.

Just then Nina walks in announcing that, as per the phone records; Kate did call Watts last afternoon at 3 and more importantly, she got a call 7 minutes before the emergency door was tripped. Burns wants Watts in the box. But Carrie thinks that Watts will not talk and decides to talk to someone else. Next, we see Carrie meeting Watts with her name changed and befriends him. Carrie informs Burns that she suspects that Watts has something on his mind. Next we see Tanya updating Roe about Kate's movements before she disappeared. She tells him that after Kate reached the boat parkway, her mobile phone got lost. Tanya thinks that she either removed the battery or she never made it to the signal tower. Next we see that the forensic expert informs Nina that, Nora Hagan belonged to the fishing dynasty, which proves that she could swim and she was very fit.

Next the team is shown searching for clues on the dock. In the meanwhile, Carrie meets Watts at an eatery. Carrie sees that he is carrying the same jacket which was found in Kate's hotel room, with the expensive perfume on it. He tells her that it belonged to a friend of his and Carrie confirms that Kate and Watts were more than friends. Back at the docks, Burns and his team pull out a car from the river and horror meets him when he sees Kate's dead body in it. Burns calls Carrie. Back at the office, the entire team is discussing the case and they conclude that Watts' involvement in the case is more than what meets the eye. They decide to call in Watts. Next, we see Burns interrogating Watts, with his lawyer beside him. They ask Watts as to why didn't he inform them about his romantic involvement with Kate. He tells them that he had known Kate for a long time, but their affair had ended a year ago. The team informs Watts about Kate's murder. He is shocked and leaves the room with his lawyer.

Carrie feels that Watts is being duped by Hagan and she goes to get the proof. Carrie goes to Watts and tries talking to him about his girlfriend. Just then Hagan walks into the room. On asking about Carrie, Watts tells him that she is a customer and that he is helping her with her boat. After a brief talk, Carrie takes her leave. But she eavesdrops into their conversation. Next, we see Roe informing Burns about Kate's new testimony which could land her in jail; because Hagan asked her to falsify accounting documents and stealing people's money. Nora had not only threatened to leave him but also expose his deeds. Next, in the court room, David, Hagan's lawyer asks for the dismissal of this case, as Kate was not available to testify. Adams informs the judge about Kate's murder but there was no proof to accuse Hagan for it. The judge dismisses the case declares Hagan to be a free man.

Embittered by this, Burns leaves the court. Back at the office, the forensics expert informs Burns that there was a combination of drugs found in Nora's body, which was very lethal. And it was this that caused her to drown, despite her knowing how to swim; as this combination of drugs made her unable to move. But there was more. The expert informs Burns that the same combination and concentration of the drugs was also found in Kate's body. A worried Carrie calls Burns and tells him that Hagan could harm Watts, as Watts now knows that Hagan killed Kate. She tells him that she did not know where Watts was. But just then she recalls an incident at the eatery, where a man named Billy was talking about his boat; which was on Hagan's marina; Claire Anne. She figures out that Watts could have gone to help Billy. She rushes to the boat. She finds an unconscious Watts and calls for help. They are able to save Watts.

Burns suspects that they could find the same combination of drugs in Watts' blood, which would help them convict Hagan. Next, the team barges into a party to arrest Hagan. When the people protest, Burns tells them how Hagan stole his employees' money for gambling and how he murdered Nora and Kate and also that he attempted to kill Watts. The episode ends with Hagan's arrest.

Summary: Carrie and Al are confused when a murder victim suddenly appears in an empty ballpark, and determining cause of death.

The episode begins, and a groundskeeper who works at a baseball stadium brings his girlfriend to the field one late night to propose marriage; he has chalked out an elaborate plan for his proposal. He gets down on one knee, presents the ring, and in a romantic fashion asks her to marry him. She lets out a scream so he's not sure if her answer is a yes or a no, as the message she sent out seems mixed. She screams again; shock and horror clearly essayed on her face, all this while she is looking at something behind him, so he turns around and sees a dead body in center field; much to his shock and horror. Carrie gets called out of bed to work the case.

The medical examiner after an examination concludes that, the dead body has almost every bone in his body broken. His injuries are consistent with a fall from a significant height; which might the reason for his demise. Since he was found in the middle of a baseball field, it's possible he fell from an airplane, as there is hardly any other possibility that can be taken into consideration, given the circumstances. The ME also finds bruising at the base of the skull which means someone hit him before his fall; thus the victim was assaulted before his ultimate demise. Al gets called away so he tells Nina and Mike to find out the victim's name and if he was a stowaway. Later, Mike goes into Al's office to tell him the victim was not a stowaway. Al tells Mike he got a call from Spence because he's in a little trouble at another precinct.

Apparently Mike's son and some of his friends dined and ditched at a restaurant but the owner decided to not press charges. Mike says Spence is grounded for life, again, for this latest transgression of his. Roe comes in and identifies the victim as Jason Kubiak, a bank manager. Al and Carrie visit Jason's apartment and a woman is exiting as they get there. She is Sarah Green, Jason's girlfriend. She last saw him the day before and they were supposed to meet for dinner to celebrate their three-month anniversary. When he didn't contact her, she thought he got scared off because their relationship was moving so fast. Al and Carrie check out the restaurant and Jason never showed. As they're leaving, Carrie sees a florist and has a flashback to the crime scene. She sees pollen on Jason's shirt so they check the florist shop and it has surveillance from the previous night, which they monitor for relevant clues. They see Jason get into the back of a black van and it drives away.

The team thinks he was kidnapped because of his job position. The next morning the team goes to Jason's bank to make further inquiries and when the other bank manager opens the vault, the safe deposit boxes have been broken into and their contents stolen; much to their surprise. Back at the office, the CSI find a thermal imaging camera facing the stadium during the time of death. The video shows a body falling from the sky into the stadium; it obviously was the victim. She is able to find, through the FAA, an airplane in the area at the time of body falling; the victim might just have been pushed from this very airplane. Nina and Roe head to the airport to make further inquiries. There they find the plane and also find the can from the flower shop. The man washing the van says it belongs to a man who rents a space for his airplane. He took the plane out the previous night around 1:00 am with two other people but he didn't notice if Jason was among them.

Al finds out the van was reported stolen and the plane is registered to a fake company; thus it is difficult to lay their hands on any leads. The ME finds DNA under Jason's fingernails that traces back to a Mark Payne who is a mechanic at the airport Nina and Mike visited. Al and Carrie pay a visit to Mark Payne's house and he comes out shooting much to their surprise; Al returns fire and kills him, as an act of self defense. Carrie looks around and sees a can of tea on a table. She has a flashback and remembers the same tea sitting on Jason's table. His girlfriend Sarah likes to drink it and she's now a suspect; based on the present set of clues available at hand. Nina finds photos of Sarah tied up like a hostage. She thinks they showed the pictures to Jason and then had her tied up in the van, which is why he got into it in the first place and that too without any resistance.

Sarah's mother comes in and tells Carrie her daughter was always trouble; thus it might not be surprising for her to be involved with the whole thing. Carrie asks about the burn scar on Sarah's neck and her mother says it happened when Sarah was with her husband in a hotel fire. She tells Carrie her father was smoking in her room when she was a child. Sarah's mother says the marriage ended when he left Sarah in the hospital after the fire. She shows Carrie a photo of the two and she has a flashback. The man in the photo came in to discuss his safe deposit box from the bank Jason worked at; that is from where she remembers him. Carrie finds out his name is Adam and he is wanted in a string of international bank robberies. In one case, he crashed his plane and fled with the diamonds but Sarah didn't get away and was burned in the accident.

They didn't have enough to charge her so she was released; despite being with him at the time of the accident. Carrie has a flashback to when Adam came in to check his box; he was relieved to see a key was still inside, a fact that had caught her attention. The team believes Sarah wanted revenge so she broke into the bank and made a copy of the key to get inside a high-end storage facility where Adam kept his stolen jewels; just so she could get her hands on them and thus teach him a good lesson in the process. The team goes to the facility and sees Adam; who is immediately on the alert on seeing them.

He takes off but they catch him; he tells them they're too late, Sarah got into the box; and has managed to steal everything. Adam tells them Sarah will probably wait a couple of days and then fly away to somewhere safe. Al and Carrie catch her in the nick of time, just as she is trying to take off in an airplane. Carrie shoots a tire and Sarah stops the plane; as she knows her gig is up. She admits her partner pushed Jason out of the plane but she feels responsible for it. She really did love him; and had no intention of actually hurting him.

Summary:	Al and Carrie are forced to the sidelines by a negotiator when the father of a suspect that Roe shot takes members of the Queens PD, including Nina, hostage in a desperate quest for justice.

The team on Unforgettable is immediately thrown into the thick of things when Roe shoots and kills a suspect. Roe fired because he thought he saw a gun but unfortunately, the suspect wasn't armed. In the office, Mike tells Roe he needs to calm down because he made a good shot. The father of the suspect, Clay, shows up to the precinct to meet Roe. Al tells Clay he can't divulge information about the case but he's not hearing it. He wants to file charges against Roe for killing his son.

Nina takes him to the office to file a complaint but he wants a murder charge. A police officer comes over to calm him down but Clay grabs his gun and holds it to the officer's head. Nina pulls her gun but Clay says he'll shoot the cop unless she puts it down. Nina puts her gun down and he clears the room of civilians and now has police hostages.

The medical examiner tells Al the suspect didn't have any drugs in his system nor did he have any gun shot residue on his hands. This does not look good for Roe but the ME says she'll sit on the information for a while. Clay somehow gets a hold of the media and says the NYPD killed his son and won't let the coward who shot him come out. Roe is watching this and Al tells him to go home.

Mike tells Al and Carrie someone called to report a police shooting but Carrie says that's impossible because no one could see street level. She has a flash back and remembers seeing a shadow from above. Someone saw the shooting. The hostage taker is looking at the news and the reporter says his son didn't have a gun. While he's distracted, the police officer kicks him in the knee and lunges for the gun. Unfortunately, Clay has another gun and pulls it before the cop can get a handle on his gun. Nina begs him not to shoot the officer so Clay hits him in the head instead.

Clay's daughter shows up and the hostage negotiator wants her to say certain things to him but she's not hearing it. Carrie takes the girl to the side and talks to her. She tells Carrie her brother didn't have a gun. Al and Carrie decide the girl isn't going to help them because she thinks her brother is innocent. Al tells Carrie to get Mike and go look for the gun and the unknown caller.

Carrie and Mike return to the alley where the shooting happened. She climbs the fire escape and finds a man's ID. They track down the man and he says he saw what happened but it was too dark to see if the man had a gun.

Back at the precinct, Roe goes to the room with the hostages. Roe tells Clay the police thought his son shot a drug dealer but he doesn't believe it. Roe gives him the case file so he can read it for himself. The S.W.A.T. team is ready to bust the door down when it opens and Clay releases the hostages, except for Roe.

Roe tells Clay he chased his son down the alley and when he turned around, Roe thought he saw a gun so he shot him. He tells Clay he's sorry but he thought the man had a gun. Clay says his son couldn't shoot a gun because of an incident in the military.

Al calls the room and tells the man to look at the picture under the door. It is a photo of the gun his son had and used to kill the drug dealer. Clay says there was no gun and holds a gun to Roe's head. The hostage negotiator wants to take the room but Carrie says there are other options. She notices the negotiator scratching his head and has a flash back to him doing it earlier and the dead man saying something was personal. She asks Al to buy her ten minutes to check something out.

Carrie talks to Clay's daughter and she shows her the gun. She asks the girl why would the victim fight with a drug dealer when he didn't do drugs but she doesn't know. Carrie says the girl knew the drug dealer and she tells Carrie her brother found out she was running drugs. Her brother and the dealer get into a fight over this and the dealer says he's going to kill her brother.

Clay's daughter goes to talk to him about what happened. She tells Clay it's all her fault and she took the gun and shot the drug dealer. Her brother was just trying to protect her. Clay surrenders but asks to see his son first, and they oblige.

Summary:	Carrie's latest case is stalled the influence of a powerful family's, she then receives assistance from a lawyer who maybe behind a serious of sniper attacks.

In this episode of Unforgettable, Carrie's mysterious caller is back. In a previous episode, a man was killing people and it was up to the team to find them before the murder. They killed a guy who they thought was the killer but he is still at large. The episode centers on a murdered tennis pro. Kayla Yancy, the tennis player, walks out of the gym and the security guard hears a gun shot. He rushes outside to find Kayla dead in the street.

Al and Carrie were attending a law enforcement gala when they are called to the scene. Mike and Roe send them back to the party while they handle the murder. They meet up with Jo, the Medical Examiner, and she introduces her to a number of people. One of the men, a lawyer, she introduces Carrie to sounds eerily similar to the mysterious caller.

Back at the office, Carrie has a flash back to the security video. She remembers Kayla walking to her car when she slows her pace. Carrie thinks Kayla saw someone she knew. Carrie visits Jo and she tells her the kill shot was up close and personal. Jo tells her the man she introduced her to is Morgan and is a lawyer. Roe and Nina interview Kayla's coach and he tells them her boyfriend Troy was a drug peddler but she was too smart for that.

Carrie is still looking into Morgan. She calls his law firm to talk to him but he's not in; he's at the zoo. She heads over to the zoo to chat with him. They talk about various mundane things when she gets a call from Al to head over to Kayla's boyfriend's house. When she arrives at his house, he walks out and heads in the opposite direction. Carrie chases around the corner when she sees him on the ground; he's been shot.

Kayla and her friend were receiving money from an unknown source to help pay bills. Carrie and Roe visit the girl and she tells them they were at Troy's house when someone came over.

They both went out the window to the fire escape and Kayla hurt her ankle. A couple of days later, someone contacts them and has them sign a bunch of papers and gives them money. The man is Reid Benedict and he's running for Congress.

Nina finds out the trust that's been paying Kayla and her friend belongs to a law firm. When Carrie looks at the list of employees, she notices the name Hegstrom. She has a flash back to her zoo visit and notices the name on a park bench. She realizes Jonathan Hegstrom is the fixer for Reid Benedict. He fixes whatever trouble he gets into. That's why no one knew about the payouts.

Carrie calls Morgan again but he's not at his office. But he left a message: "you're welcome." He knows that she is on to him and he sat at that bench to give her some information. Carrie and Al meet with Reid Benedict about his involvement with Kayla. When Al tells him a car with a partial plate matched a car belonging to his family was seen at the scene, he looks genuinely surprised and says he didn't hurt Kayla, he had a doctor's appointment.

Al calls Carrie into his office and tells her the corruption commission about her. They're opening an investigation about her income and expenditures. She thinks Hegstrom is coming after her but Al wants to know if they'll find anything. Carrie says she'll be fine but Al is upset she's screwing up. She tells Al she'll handle it. Carrie bursts into Hegstrom's office and tells him she's on him until she brings him down. Benedict tells her she should take some time off and clear her head. He's not worried about her; he's had better adversaries before.

Back at the office, the team is trying to find out why Hegstrom is involved since Reid Benedict has an alibi. They believe he's protecting someone other than Reid. Carrie has a flash back to the interview with Reid and she remembers his wife had an abrasion on her wrist. They found a bracelet at the crime scene for Kayla and think she pulled it off of the wife during the shooting. Roe finds another video from the neighborhood and it shows Mrs. Benedict getting out of the car shown at the crime scene. She also registered a handgun recently. They go to the Benedicts house and Reid thinks he's there for him but they take his wife instead.

At the station, she confesses to killing Kayla. Carrie wants to get a search warrant for the house but Al doesn't think a judge will give them one just for the wife. She has a flash back to the gala when Morgan introduces her to a judge, Leo Silverman. Carrie has Roe search for records on the judge and Benedict and finds they ran against each other in politics. The race was ugly and the judge lost by 30 points. She's found her judge.

Carrie and Roe show up at Hegstrom's office. They tell him they found a parking receipt in his car putting him a block from where Troy was killed. They also found the gun and Benedict's bracelet in his safe deposit box, and now he's under arrest. Carrie tells Al about Morgan and his connection to the mysterious caller. She tells him he helped her with the case but Al tells her he's using her.

Carrie meets with Morgan and she tells him she knows who he is and how he played Mrs. Benedict, and she's coming after him. He tells her the penguin exhibit has been rebuilt. He says goodbye and walks away. She has a flash back to the zoo and sees a message saying he can help her find her sister's killer.

Summary:	Carrie's personal and professional lives collide when her boyfriend, the son of a mob boss, is revealed to have ties to suspects in a murder investigation.

The episode begins, with Carrie at Steve's party, where she meets his parents. The two of them later catch a moment alone, and get cozy. Later Steve's cousin, Tommy who is on the phone borrows his pen and writes a number down on the palm of his hand. Once he leaves the two again get cozy. Later Carrie is at a crime scene, there is a battered body of a young female, dead in a bath tub. There are no signs of forced entry, and the windows were locked. Whoever did this, didn't force his way in. They presume it could be a boyfriend. She then finds a photo of the victim with a man lying on a table. She is shocked to see the man, as it is a guy called Eddie who she was introduced to, at Steve's party.

She shares this with Al. She tells him, that Eddie works with Steve. Later Carrie is informed that Eddie is basically clean, and is married. Carrie presumes that, it could be his wife who is the murderer, as she might have found out about his affair. Al feels the killing is mob related Carrie takes offence at this. Al decides to talk to Steve about it, but Carrie is totally against this idea. In the end, she decides to talk to him. Later, a colleague of the victim is brought in for questioning, she is asked about the victim's boyfriend. It turns out she had met Eddie once. It also turns out that the victim was unaware of the fact that Eddie was married; they were as a matter of fact going to get engaged. She also tells the cops that a guy has come to meet the victim a few days ago, it wasn't Eddie, but a bald guy, and victim was visibly disturbed after meeting him.

Meanwhile, Carrie tells Steve the whole thing about Eddie and the murder. Steve is pissed about the fact that Carrie suspects that he knows something, about the whole issue. Later at the forensics, Carrie is informed that this might be a crime not of passion, but to make a point and to send out a message to someone. She is also told by the forensic that there was something in the bathtub water that is yet to be identified, and the results are being awaited. Later, Al is informed by an officer from OCID by the name Sharon, that Eddie is affiliated with one Ray Mazola, who the guys from organized crime have been tracking for years. He operates his business with restaurant supply companies as cover, for his organized crime. Carrie is informed of an address Eddie was frequenting, according to his car GPS records. Sharon, Carrie and Al go to check out the address. It's a big storage space of some sort, which they break into. All they find inside are lots of kitchenware.

It turns out all the stuff might be from the truck hijackings that Ray has been involved in. Inside, Carrie sees the same crate of wine, she had seen at Steve's party, gifted to him by Eddie. She tells Al about it. They also find the dead body of Eddie stuffed inside a crate. Later, Carrie and gang are informed by Al that OCID is taking over this investigation; much to everyone's displeasure. Al in his office shows photographic evidence to Carrie that she has been under surveillance by the OCID. Al questions Carrie about Steve, as he clearly suspects Steve of somehow being involved in all of this. She tires her best to defend Steve to Al. She urges Al to prove to her that Steve is a criminal. It is also discovered by the forensic, that Eddie was with the victim, but he didn't kill her, which can be ascertained from the evidence at hand. Later, Carrie tells Steve about them being under surveillance, but he doesn't think much of it.

She also tells him, how the authorities feel about him. He tells her that, the money to open the restaurant came for a Cayman Island account of his, which is legitimate. She warns Steve that the OCID will come after him, as they think he is complicit. She then asks him about Mazola, and where he can be found. Later, based on Steve's tip off Carrie goes to a restaurant where she might find Mazola. Inside, the bartender says he has never heard of Mazola. Suddenly in front of her she sees a piece of paper with a number scribbled on it, pinned to a board, and recollects that it's the same number that Steve's cousin Tommy wrote on his palm in the party, when he borrowed Steve's pen. The bartender though is still as uncooperative as ever, so Carrie leaves, having acquired at least some bit of information. Turns out, it's the password to the security alarm, at the victim's house, as Carries suddenly seems to recollect. It turns out; Steve's cousin Tommy might have something to do with it, after all.

Later, at Steve's restaurant Carrie tells Steve about the number and it being the pass code, to the front door of the victim. Steve is incredulous, and doesn't believe that Tommy can do such a thing. She warns him not to tip Tommy off, as then she and Steve both would become accessories. Steve leaves saying 'guess you shouldn't have told me then'. Meanwhile, Al is trying his best to get through to Carrie, but she is constantly avoiding him. He then instructs that her cell phone location be found out, to find out where she is. Meanwhile, Carrie sees Steve go somewhere and follows him, suspecting that there might be something amiss. She sees Steve talking to Tommy at a distance. Meanwhile, Carrie's phone location has been established. Al heads for the location. Vega tells Al, about Steve secretly meeting Tommy; they all seem to be heading for that very location. Al warns Carrie, by messaging her about it. Not knowing what else to do Carrie reveals herself and urges Tommy to come to station with her and come clean. Steve agrees with Carrie and urges Tommy to do what Carries is saying. Just then the OCID arrive at the scene, and surround the area, seeing them Tommy panics and runs for it, he then takes out a gun, seeing this OCID take him down, barely missing Steve and Carrie in the process. Later Steve too is arrested, with Carrie standing by and looking on helplessly.

Later at the precinct, Carrie is absolutely distraught about how things turned out. Al reprimands her for not listening to him, and still involving herself in the case despite him telling her otherwise. She reasons that she wanted to warn Steve regarding Tommy. And also reason with Tommy to come in and talk to the cops. Al tells Carrie that he was trying to protect her from the OCID as they are convinced she is dirty. She tells Al that Tommy confessed to her that he didn't kill the victim. Al is incredulous, and completely dismisses Tommy's confession. Carrie still feels the real killer is out there, and it wasn't really Tommy. Al in the end relents, and gives her a chance to prove her theory. Later, Carrie goes to the forensic, and reviews the evidence.

She is informed that the stuff found in the bath water of the victims bath tub is a solvent that is used as a pesticide and adhesive. Suddenly Carrie is reminded of the uncooperative bartender from earlier, she remembers him building a model plane, and using a liquid adhesive to join the parts. Later, she pays the bar a visit, and finds the bartender there. The bartender pretends he knows nothing, when questioned by Carrie, but is alarmed when told about the bath tub water. He tires assaulting Carrie, but gets his ass kicked by her, with Al who is sitting nearby restraining him. Later, Carrie meets up with Steve. She tells him, Tommy was innocent. The episode ends, with Carrie bidding Steve a tearful goodbye.

Summary: Carrie and Al must understand the mind of a deranged conspiracy theorist before setting off bombs in New York.

Carrie and the crew play computer games while Krause obsesses to Al about his Facebook password being changed. He is worried the kid is in trouble again.

They are notified of a fire in a lab, which has been shown to be incendiary device. A young woman finds it and the lab explodes. A box of stuff arrives and Al says it is not his.

Al and Carrie are talking in his office when he admits he has been out of his relationship. The stuff in the box is from their past. His breakup was OK and Carrie says she is there if he needs to talk.

Sinclair Labs rents space to private clients and researchers. Audrey Cruise was the victim. Carrie uses her memory to get additional information from the cop at the scene. Carrie speaks to Audrey's family. The father is furious. She was very serious about her work. The father says she was working so much she had a hard time connecting. Carrie learns Audrey had a job. She said it was easy money a side project.

Carrie remembers the bomb device shared the same company logo insignia as the new company. The security cameras show Audrey got a note on her car before she went in and blew up the lab. SPI is a defense contractor. Their projects are classified.

The crew visit the SPI and the manager in charge. He says a number of activist groups were targeting Audrey's work, even though Al can't get the man to talk about what she was working on. They raid the activist group. Carrie says they are liable for murder and arson. Carrie works the activist computer network password to get access to the data about SBI attacks.

A map with targets was sent to the group. A man named Faraday sent the data There are four more targets. In red is written 'They All Must Burn'. They can't get prints and have a muddy picture for the Faraday profile.

The head of the activist group says the man is external to their group and crazy. Carrie investigates the Faraday targets. In the lab they giggle over the switched ground wire and the trigger wire. A shared hotspot is where the IP address originates.

The building manager, Max, lets them in when he sees the warrant. Before they can call Krause they find a huge setup of media clips and drawings on the wall detailing Faraday's thinking. They find a map to the logic of all Faraday's hits and bomb making materials. But Max flips a light and the spark blows up the wall and the room.

Carrie sees a blinking red light. Carrie Wells stares into the abyss of the killer. But the surveillance video shows Max leaving when Faraday should have been there. They are working together. Al thinks Max is the inside man. They research his work history. They go to Max's sister. She lets him live in the basement while she manages work and two kids.

They talk about Faraday. He is an older man who has partially brainwashed her brother. He was making files. The sister details how Max has wandered around and it is like he is still in high school. Carrie looks at dated pictures of Faraday and asks if he was ever psychiatrically diagnosed.

Carrie realizes Faraday has been dead for five years. Carrie realizes Max is Faraday, assuming his identity as a form of mental illness. Carrie hunts down Max at the next bomb spot. He has another bomb in the bag. Faraday appears as a delusion and tries to talk Max into bombing again. Carrie argues that Audrey was innocent and she can help him.

The Faraday delusion yells at Max for writing the warning Audrey and war her off. At the critical point they get the bomb but Tanya and he exchange the ground wire and the trigger wire.

Carrie screams for the bomb guy to stop and takes his hands away. She pulls the other wire at the pivotal second and the bomb does not go off. Carrie smirks at Al, who has Max in a vise. Al grimaces at Carrie's ways being right again. At the office, Tanya works on Facebook. They joke about Spence isn't building a bomb. Tanya finds hidden plans of anniversary surprise party for Krause.

Al takes Carrie into his office, admits he lied about his breakup. Al's feelings about Carrie were in particular the cause of it. His girlfriend packed up his stuff and left it in the station pointedly. He could not let go. He does not look happy telling Carrie about this. Carrie is not exactly displeased by these disclosures.

Summary: Walter Morgan unexpectedly turns up dead, Carrie must work hard to locate his killer while in order to clear her name as she's the prime suspect.

The episode begins with, Walter offering Carrie some wine at the dinner table. The two make small talk. Carrie asks Walter what he knows about her sister's murder. He in return tells her to be patient. Walter says he wants Carrie to need him, in return for him giving information. Later when at home, Carrie receives a call informing her that a body has been found at a particular address that she has heard before. The body is of a middle aged man with most of his head missing. Al too arrives at the scene. The ID of the person reads Walter Morgan. Al is shocked to see the ID. Meanwhile, Carrie arrives at the scene and is briefed by Al. The two speculate as to who his killer might be.

Once near the body Carrie is reminded of the interactions, she has had with Walter Morgan. Later, Joanne asks Carrie if she told Al about her personal interactions with Walter. Carrie it turns out couldn't because Al had told her to stop investigating Morgan. Carrie in the meanwhile isn't convinced the body is Walter's and checks the body once again. Just as she sees the body she is reminded of her meeting with Walter and the conversation they had. Carrie then confesses to Joanne that she was at the warehouse the previous night and had met Morgan. Joanne asks her if she has any idea who Jensen is. Carrie says she has a number and plans to do a reverse lookup. She then tells Carrie that there is some DNA under Stanley's fingernails, which just might be of the killers. Carrie remembers Walter grabbing her hand; hence she assumes that the DNA might be hers.

Meanwhile, Carrie is worried to hear that the video footage from the warehouse is coming in. The ballistic report for the shotgun shot is also coming in. Meanwhile, Carrie, Al and team reach Walter's home and see an elaborate table set for dinner. The table is not cleaned up, and his housekeeper comments that it's a bit odd for Walter not to clean up. Carrie is worried that her prints are on many of the items on the table. The housekeeper meanwhile tells Al that he was having problems with a woman, whose name she doesn't know. Carrie then pays Joanne a visit. Joanne tells Carrie that it's definitely Walter's body, as the fingerprints check out. Joanne asks Carrie about her DNA being found under Walter's nails. Carrie tells Joanne that Walter is framing her for his own murder. It also turns out that the shotgun which is the murder weapon is Carrie's very own shotgun.

She tells Joanne that she doesn't know how Walter got his hands on her department issue shotgun. Joanne tells Carrie to confess everything to Al. Carrie then says that she knows there was a third person in the warehouse that night, and she has to find that person, if she is to prove her innocence. Meanwhile, guys at the precinct are shocked to see Carrie in the video footage. Meanwhile, Carrie recollects her conversation with Jenson. Meanwhile, Joanna tells Al about Carrie thinking that Morgan is framing her for his own death. Joanne then tells Al about how Carrie was investigating Morgan aggressively behind his back. Al is also disappointed in Joanne for hiding all these things from him. Meanwhile, Carrie is making her investigations about Jenson based on the clues and leads she has. She comes to a Pizza place; it's from a payphone there that Jenson had given her a call.

At the joint she bribes a guy working there and is informed by him that two guys use the payphone. She then tells the guy to call her, the next time either of them uses it. Meanwhile, Al is informed that the fingerprints on the body come up as a match with a sexual assault convict in Utah, and Morgan at that time was trying a case in New York, hence at that time it was considered a glitch. Al wants this looked into in detail. Meanwhile, Carrie sees Mamaroneck mentioned on a van, and remembers Walter mentioning it during their dinner together. She checks out the van closely and sees blood dripping from behind the van. Just then Al reaches the spot; Carrie points their attention to the dripping blood. Inside the van they find Jenson's dead body. She then tells them that she didn't kill Walter Morgan and that Jenson was her best chance to prove that.

It is later found out that Jenson was killed with the same shotgun as the one that killed Morgan, their time of death was also around the same time. Al meanwhile doesn't know what to do, and tells Carrie that she should have come to him first. She is reminded of a poem by Robert Frost that Walter quoted at dinner called 'miles to go before I sleep'. Carrie feels Walter is not done and is surely still alive. Nina, Mike and Roe decide to help Carrie with the case as they believe that she is innocent. Meanwhile, Carrie looks at the photographs of Jenson's dead body and how his hand is placed and figures out something. Meanwhile, Roe is told that the time the cops had a confusion regarding Morgan's fingerprints, it was found out that it belonged to someone called John Fox, who was also Walter's last client 25 years ago, before he left Kansas and headed for NY.

But then Roe is shown on the computer that John Fox's DMV photo which was found on the system, when aged looks like Walter Morgan. Meanwhile, Carrie tells Al and Roe about the arms of both Walter and Jenson being placed at particular angles. When the angles are calculated, they reveal a phone number. Carrie's plan is then to convince Walter that he has succeeded and she has been abandoned by her own people. It also turns out, John Fox traded places with Walter Morgan 25 years ago. Meanwhile, the media is also informed that Carrie has been arrested; with TV news channels reporting the same. Meanwhile, Carrie calls up the number that has been found out, and Walter Morgan picks up the phone. Later Carrie proceeds to meet Morgan, the team covertly watches over her so that Walter doesn't suspect anything is amiss, or he will disappear.

Al moves in after he gets a signal from Carrie that she sees him. Carrie in the meanwhile comes face to face with Walter, who asks for her to surrender her weapon. She tells Morgan that she would go anywhere with him, as she has no one else left in the city. Suddenly Morgan figures out that he has been setup. He rushes Carrie out of there at a gunpoint. Al in the meanwhile, loses them. Later John Fox confesses to Carrie that it was the real Walter Morgan who got killed by him at the warehouse the other night. He had called him from Kansas City. Then, just as John is about to shoot Carrie Al comes and from behind, and after a scuffle, John hangs from the side of the bridge with Carrie holding on to him.

She then asks John about Rachel, but isn't able to hold on to him, with John falling into the river below. Later, Carrie is informed by Al that John's body hasn't been found yet. Carrie is also informed about John's and Walter's deal of switching identities and how John paid him a stipend for 25 years for the switch. Meanwhile, a phone is found on Jenson's body and it has one missed call. Carrie calls back the number and tells the person who picks up that the phone is evidence in the Walter Morgan case. The man on the other side says 'you mean detective Morgan, I have been trying to reach him all morning'; its detective Franks from Syracuse PD who is on the other side.

He tells Carrie that Morgan contacted them for a case, regarding the abduction and murder of a young girl. The body was found 2 days ago, and the murdered too has been found with the Syracuse PD talking to him. He then sends over the picture of the murderer. Carrie on seeing the picture recognizes the man as the murderer of his sister.

Summary: Carrie and Al travel to Syracuse to confront a suspect, when a murder takes place that resembles that other sister's.

The episode begins, with little girls cheer-leading for a team playing football. Then everything stop and they all stare at a young girl, Carrie then comes back to the present. Carrie tells Al that the first thing she remembers after her sister's murder is football. Carrie and Al then meet up with Dan an old acquaintance of Carrie and the cop handling the case; at the crime scene. A 14 years old girl has been murdered. The girl was hit on the back of her head and then drowned under water. The suspect Sam has been cooperative, and hasn't asked for any lawyer. Carrie wants to meet Sam. Carrie then comes to the station and sees Sam, and recognizes him as her sister's murderer.

Later, Sam is interrogated by Dan, and tells him that he doesn't know anything about the 14 year old girl Becky's death. He then tells Dan that he was at the crime scene because he got curious after hearing about the death on the radio. He also has an alibi. He was installing security systems all over Columbia. Al is in the meanwhile is informed that Sam has been spotted trespassing numerous crime scenes in the past few years. Meanwhile, Al tells Dan that he might be able to help get Dan a promotion. All he has to do is let Carrie meet Sam. Al then tells Carrie that she has 10 minutes to talk with Sam. Carrie enters and asks Sam if September 14th 1983 means anything to him. She then tells Sam how her sister Rachel was found dead on that day, and also the state she was found in. Carrie tells Sam that he murdered her sister, and she wants him to say it. Sam says 'no you didn't'. Later, Dan tells Carrie that they have to let Sam go as the trespassing charges against him have been dropped. Dan then tells Carrie to help him get Sam for the Becky case.

Carrie and Dan then pay a visit to Becky's parents to find out any details they can, which shall help the case. Becky's mother tells Carrie that there is one thing that is worth mentioning, which is that Becky and her best friend Katrina had a fight a few months before her death. Becky had come home crying. All Becky had told her mother was that Katrina had betrayed her. Carrie, Al and Dan then head for Sam's house. Inside Al finds a file with the newspaper cutouts of various cases of murder. There are numerous such files with the crime scene photographs of all the victims. Meanwhile, Dan comes in and informs Carrie and Al that Sam has disappeared. Meanwhile, Carrie and Al bring in Joanne to help them with the case. Al and Carrie then head to meet Katrina.

Carrie tells Al while waiting for Katrina in their vehicle that, new memories about the day Rachel died are coming back to her. Once Katrina and her family are back, they are shown Sam's photograph, and don't recognize him. Katrina then tells them that she had a fight with Becky because Becky spoiled her name by talking about sexual things with others about Katrina. Katrina claims none of them were true. She also tells them that Becky had an older guy who was her boyfriend. She unfortunately doesn't know how the guy looks like and has never met him, since the time he and Becky have been dating each other, which was but a few months ago. The aim now is also to find the guy Becky was seeing. Later, Al and Carrie sit and chat at a deli. Carrie goes to the loo, Sam creeps in behind her and sticks a gun to her back. Al after waiting for Carrie goes looking for her outside, after he realizes she isn't in the loo. He is then told by a guy standing outside that, she took off with some guy in his car.

Meanwhile, Sam is taking Carrie somewhere with her hands restrained. Meanwhile, Al is informed thanks to Carrie's GPS as to where Carrie exactly is. Al realizes that Sam is taking Carrie to the woods where Rachel was killed. Meanwhile, Sam takes Carrie to the spot where Rachel was murdered in the woods. Sam suddenly tells Carrie to kneel down. He then tells her that he was beginning to think he was safe. Sam tells her that he won't be safe from Carrie until she remembers everything. He then hands over his gun to her. Sam then tells Carrie that he didn't kill her sister; his only crime was being in the woods that day. He tells Carrie that he had heard her and her sister scream in the woods that day, and reached the scene to investigate it. Carrie then remembers what Sam is saying, to be true. With her memory revealing to her that Sam on that day had come to the scene and had asked her about where her parents are, and if she is alright.

She then remembers Sam picking her up in his lap and taking her out of there. Just then Al and team arrive at the scene and tell Sam to go down on the ground. Carrie stops them from harming Sam. He tells Carrie that he was a cop, and was going to take a bribe from a drug dealer in the woods, and hence couldn't approach the law about why he was there that day. He tells Carrie that, on that particular day something snapped inside of him. He then started drinking and in a year's time left the police force. Meanwhile, Al and Carrie check into a motel. Later in a room the two begin to make out. Later Joanne, Carrie and Al meet up with Sam in a diner, so he too can help with the case. Joanne tells the others that, on Becky's pants, was some sort of a dust which Sam recognizes as the dust of granite.

Sam takes a few possible names of construction companies. Carrie then remembers that she had seen the name of one of the companies on a construction sack at Katrina's house. Carrie feels that Becky was seeing Katrina's step father till he got married to Katrina's mother. Becky probably felt betrayed because of this. Al and team then get to finding something definitive against the step dad. They then find through cell phone records that he and Becky were in touch with each other till the night Becky got killed. Al feels that's evidence enough to at least pick him up. At Katrina's home they are informed by her mother that Katrina has just left with her step father. Turns out they have gone camping. Carrie then figures out that the mother is lying and the step father did not take Katrina for camping.

The mother then breaks down and admits that he has threatened to kill Katrina, if her mother says anything. She doesn't know where he has taken her. Al in the meanwhile calls for an amber alert. Carrie in the meanwhile figures out that Sadler the step father has a boat, which is confirmed by Mrs. Sadler. She is then told by Mrs. Sadler where he keeps it. Sadler might be trying to escape to Canada, by water. Meanwhile, Sadler is shown driving with the boat in tow to the river. Al catches up with him and is shot at by Sadler, from his car window. He manages to dodge the bullet, and a car chase ensues. Sadler manages to get away, but after sometime his overturned boat with his abandoned car is seen by Al, Sam and Carrie.

Sadler seems to have escaped into the nearby woods, and Carrie, Sam and Al enter the woods to pursue him. The three then spread out to search for him. Carrie then sees Katrina tied to a pole and goes to rescue her. She is then attacked by Sadler from behind. Sam comes in, but is shot by Sadler. Al comes in just then and wrestles Sadler to the ground, he somehow manages to recover, but just then Carrie shoots him. Sam meanwhile passes away from a bullet wound to his heart. Later, Al tells Carrie that Sadler couldn't have killed her sister, as he was in jail during the time of her murder. Later, Al and Carrie go to Sam's house to get the data he has collected over a period of 28 years about the killer. Sam it turns out had photographed the same RV, at number of crime scenes. She too remembers seeing it on the same day Rachel was murdered.

Perez (Faison)
Summary: Al and Carrie are asked by the NYPD's Major Crimes division to help solve the kidnapping of a young girl. The case has the same M.O. as two recent kidnappings, one of which resulted in the death of the child.

Carrie Wells and Al Burns are brought in to help with a Major Crimes kidnapping case by Eliot Delson, Special Deputy to the Mayor of New York City. Eliot briefs them on the case — a young girl named Lara Sonnenland was kidnapped by unknown assailants on her way to a local soccer game — and Carrie and Al get to work. They meet their new teammates, Jay, a detective and tech whiz, and Murray, a former FBI agent turned NYPD detective. Together, the team analyzes the evidence and discovers that the kidnapers M.O. fits two other kidnappings in the area that took place within the last three years. Jack Paulson, a hostage negotiator, was involved with one of the other cases and recognizes the kidnapper's voice from a recording, so Carrie and Al bring him on the case as well. They stage a sting in an attempt to nab the kidnapers and save Lara, but the kidnapers get a tip that the cops are involved and never show up. Carrie delves into her memory and pieces together clues that indicate Paulson was involved in the kidnapping plot. When they confront him, he admits to framing the kidnapers from the previous two cases and using a second group of hired thugs to kidnap Lara. Paulson wanted revenge after the kidnapers wrecked his career and killed a child. Carrie convinces him to right his wrong and help them get Lara back, but he's wounded in a shootout with the hired kidnapers and ultimately dies. Luckily, Carrie and Al arrive in time to save Lara and return her to her family.

Summary: Carrie goes undercover with a team of bank robbers when The Major Crimes Section gets a lead on the gang's leader, a notorious thief who doesn't show his face.

Three masked delivery men unload three boxes at the entrance of a bank. They pull guns out of these boxes and walk into the bank, then subdue the security guards and proceed to rob the bank. Three armed guards, protecting the vault, are gassed as the bank manager gives the robbers access to the vault. The robbers remove their masks and fill their duffel bags with money. One of the robbers is Carrie Wells. The leader of the group tells Carrie to kill a security guard because he has seen their faces. Carrie points her gun at the guard.

Two days earlier, at the NYPD Major Cases headquarters, Eliot Delson informs his team about Kilborn, the man responsible for the bank heists that have put him at the top of the FBI's most wanted list. Eliot announces that Kilborn's next target will be in New York. Eve, a woman who is a master of disguises, is set to arrive that day to help with the bank robbery.

Carrie and Al Burns arrest Eve at the bus station. Al tries to get Eve to open up about Kilborn in return for a more lenient sentence on her other bank robberies. He is unsuccessful until Carrie remembers seeing a note on a box Eve picked up at the bus station. Eve received instructions to meet the other bank robbers at a hotel room. Carrie decides to go, as Eve, undercover to the meeting. Kilborn doesn't show up until after the robberies so her identity is safe until then. Al warns her to be careful and gives her a barrette that acts as a microphone and GPS signal transmitter.

Carrie meets the other crew at the hotel room that Kilborn told Eve about. When the team of four is assembled, instructions are sent outlining their code names and boxes of supplies. Two of the men are hardened criminals and the third is on his first robbery. They will receive further information the next day.

At police headquarters, Jay Lee identifies the members of the burglar crew, each with a long list of committed crimes. After finding out which bank is the target, Al plans to have only undercover cops in the bank at the time of the robbery. Jay has a photo of Kilborn's thumb and he runs it through software in an attempt to discover Kilborn's identity.

Before the heist, Carrie meets with Al and Dr. Joanne Webster. Joanne replaced the poisonous gas with a less powerful gas that will simply knock out the guards. In a truck on the way to the bank, one of the other robbers says no personal items and throws her barrette out of the truck. Jay is able to track the burner cell phone that Carrie was given by Kilborn. The lead robber jams all cell phone signals within a 50 foot radius, and he tells the crew that the target has been switched. Jay is able to find the truck by tracking sudden cell phone loss in the city.

In the bank, Carrie triggers a carbon monoxide detector, knowing it will send a signal to police. She leaves the security guard, who wasn't quite knocked out, alive. The robbery team leaves the bank with the stolen money. The lead robber asks if Carrie killed the guard, covering for her, the inexperienced robber says that yes, Carrie blew his head off. Kilborn's orders are to leave everything but the money in the truck. Jay's computer software finds who Kilborn is from the thumb print. Kilborn is the inexperienced bank robber.

Just before the bank robbers are to meet Kilborn, the inexperienced robber informs the team that they must give up their weapons first. Carrie pieces together that the inexperienced robber is Kilborn. She draws her gun and tells the team that the inexperienced robber is a cop. Kilborn says Carrie is a cop and shoots the other two robbers when they are distracted. Carrie shoots twice but she only fires blanks. Kilborn keeps Carrie as a hostage but promises to kill her. Al sneaks up on Kilborn and shoots him from a distance. Kilborn grabs Carrie to use as a human shield and they duck behind a van. Carrie retrieves a knife from one of the dead robber's boots and stabs Kilborn in the leg. She wrestles the gun from him and thanks Al for showing up. The police arrest a limping Kilborn. Al and Carrie walk away as they joke about dating.

Summary: Carrie and Al are unable to discern why a businessman was murdered in his hotel room until it's discovered that his death was collateral damage in a larger plot to assassinate a diplomat.

A businessman, Mr. Dirkson, checks into his hotel room. A woman walks into his hotel room and insists that she's in the right room. She invites Mr. Dirkson closer to help with her zipper.

Carrie buys her usual espresso from the coffee stand. The radio announces a trivia contest with skydiving tickets as the prize. Carrie calls in and answers correctly to win. Carrie tries to convince Al to join her skydiving and conquer his fear of heights.

Al and Carrie arrive up at the crime scene where Mr. Dirkson's body lies. Al believes the murder is a botched robbery. Al asks the hotel manager for surveillance of the area but there are no cameras in the upscale tower section of the hotel. The manager urges them to finish with the room so that he can rent it out again.

At the station, Jay Lee fills everyone in on the background checks he ran on the employees of the hotel. The concierge, known for tipping off paparazzi to the whereabouts of celebrities, has also let famous people in through a back door. A paparazzi was there for four and a half hours shooting, but Jay is having trouble getting the photos.

In her lab, Joanne Webster shows Carrie that Dirkson was poisoned. The killer added strangle wounds later to make it look like an act of passion. Carrie believes that it was a trained killer.

The woman who killed Dirkson checks into a cheap motel. The motel desk clerk has a former police dog who barks at her, and she admits she has a joint in her bag.

Carrie and Al return to the crime scene. They realize that the blood was added to make it look like a burglary so that the poison would not be noticed. Carrie wonders if there is something else she didn't spot, and notices something off with the amenities on the desk. Carrie pries open the vent above the desk. Something is wedged in the duct, so she reaches in and pulls out a mobile data extraction device, used to copy and send data. The device's antenna was pointed upwards to the room above Dirkson's. Dirkson came back to his room early and surprised the woman planting the device.

Cherie searches Interpol for groups using both the poison Dirkson was killed with and the data extraction device. She finds that the terrorist group Alpha Five have been known to use both. Cherie says Dirkson just got in the way and he wasn't the intended target.

Cherie and Al visit the woman, Mrs. Hall, who is staying in the room above where Mr. Dirkson was murdered. She is signed in as a single guest but her room service charges indicate two people have been staying there. Mrs. Hall admits that she is staying with Kevin Purcell, who works press for the United Nations. He is covering a political activist from West Africa, Dr. Okoro Dimka. Dimka is responsible for attempting to take down the diamond monopoly. This isn't the first time he has been targeted: last winter his house was bombed.

The motel desk clerk knocks on the murderer's room door. He volunteers to help her smoke a joint. He sees gun parts laid out on the bed and asks about them. The woman says it's a toy for her nephew and invites him in. On her computer screen is a website about Dr. Dimka.

Carrie, Al, and Eliot Delson inform Dimka that he is being tracked and his schedule is known to the killer. They want him to cancel his public speaking dates but he refuses to leave in fear. His speech at the university is to be viewed around the world. He won't cancel but agrees to change the location.

Jay Lee obtains all of the photos from those who entered the back door of the hotel. He compares all of the photos to the Interpol database, and the killer turns out to be a woman, Jackie M. She is very dangerous and Interpol considers her a person of interest in eight assassinations in the last two years. All of her kills have been at everyday locations. Carrie and Al convince Eliot to let them set up a sting at the restaurant that Dimka was supposed to be dining at.

The woman is preparing drugs and a wig in her hotel room. The desk clerk is dead with a bullet hole through his forehead.

At the restaurant, everything is ready for Jackie to make an appearance. An old lady enters who is suspicious of the wait staff. There are multiple complaints about the drinks and food. She notices a waiter wearing a device inside his sleeve. The old woman is Jackie in disguise and she makes a break for it. Carrie runs after her but the only entrance is blocked by an undercover agent who Jackie poisons. Carrie, unable to get out of the restaurant, holds eye contact with Jackie through a window.

Back at the station, Jay finds a wi-fi signal that leads to a cheap motel in Brooklyn. Carrie and Al wait outside the motel for backup. Al and Carrie sing a song together before the SWAT team gets there. The room is empty except for a note about an Internet cafe, but the room will be searched further for any more information.

Al and Carrie fill Eliot in on the missing Jackie. Jay calls Carrie and informs her that the desk clerk was found.

Jackie is on the roof of a building overlooking Central Park. She tests out her sniper rifle by shooting a football in mid-air.

At the morgue, Carrie asks Joanne about any mysterious deaths that have come in. Carrie hopes that she can find evidence of Jackie killing someone else. A man from an Internet cafe was shot in the head the same way as the desk clerk. Al and Carrie visit the Internet cafe to look for clues. They investigate the computer that Jackie used and find details about Dimka's dressing room. They think that Jackie is going to sneak in as a journalist.

Jay calls Carrie and says that the search of the motel room turned up nothing. It was so clean that Carrie thinks that Jackie must have planted the note. Jackie never planned to disguise herself as a journalist.

In the auditorium, Carrie believes that she has identified a potential spot for Jackie to place her sniper rifle. Carrie ventures up to where Jackie is on the catwalk, passing a dead guard and his K9 unit. Carrie tackles Jackie right before she pulls the trigger. Al rushes Dimka off the stage to safety. Carrie and Jackie fistfight on the catwalk before Carrie pulls her gun out. Jackie says it could all have been avoided if the undercover agents knew how to make a cappuccino. She says it's all about the preparation and sucks the poison out of her ring, dying instantly.

Outside of the building, Jackie's body is taken away. A dog runs out of the building and up to Al. Carrie recognizes it and says she saw it dead a half hour ago. Jackie gave the dog a small coma-inducing amount of poison. She thinks Jackie may have also given herself a small amount. Al radios this information in.

The ambulance is later found with two dead paramedics and Jackie is missing. She is spotted boarding a plane to Columbia. The plane has already landed though and Jackie is gone. Al comforts Carrie with the fact that they saved Dimka's life.

Summary: When the scientist who helped Carrie understand her memory abilities is murdered, she must track down other people with the same skill in the hopes that one of them holds the key to finding the killer.

Carrie arrives at the crime scene of a man who fell off of a building. It is unsure if he was pushed, fell or jumped. Carrie is surprised to find that she recognizes the man, Dr. Eugene Lustig. He is a neurologist who Carrie decided to help. She joined part of a research team that all had memory power similar to Carrie. Eugene is the reason that Carrie didn't crack up from thinking about all of her bad memories constantly.

Jay wonders if it could be a suicide but Carrie doesn't buy it since there is no suicide note. Carrie and Al investigate the area that Lustig fell from. Carrie finds clues that suggest the killer used a potted plant to knock Lustig out. Al thinks that maybe it is just a suicide but Carrie says he is the most positive person she knows. He was the one who gave her hope when she had none.

Back at the lab, Joanna tells Carrie about the top soil she found on his scalp and under his shirt. Joanne supports Carrie's thought that someone else forced Lustig over the balcony. Carrie has a flashback to when she first met Lustig.

Jay tells Al that the ex-wife is clean but after digging around the university he finds one professor with a grudge against Lustig. Alwyn Pierce, something of a protege to Lustig, was difficult to get along with and accused Lustig of rigging her tenure vote against her.

Al and Carrie visit the university to interview Alwyn. She gets aggressive when Carrie says that Lustig thought Alwyn had fraudulent research. When questioned about her whereabouts during the murder she says she was sleeping, and they can ask her cat for proof. She rushes away to teach a class.

Eliot Delson tells Al to ease up on Alwyn until they have some real proof. The university brings a lot of money to the city so they don't need the negative press. Jay reveals a security tape which shows Alwyn stealing a box from the neurology lab. Eliot tells Al to not worry about the search warrant and just go arrest Alwyn.

When Cherie and Al show up to Alwyn's apartment they find her dead body in a chair. There was no struggle and whoever was the murderer was let in by Alwyn. Carrie finds the box that Alwyn stole from Lustig's office. It's full of tapes from Lustig's study of Carrie. Carrie has a flashback of Lustig telling her how lucky she is to remember everything. She says that it is also a curse because she can't forget anything. He points out that the one thing she can't remember is the day her sister died. She is unable to remember because she had too much adrenaline in her.

Jay finds that in the days following Alwyn's burglary, she contacted three of the six memory study participants. The other three were unable to be reached. Carrie wants to know why she called. Al thinks if they can find what Alwyn was looking for on the tapes they can find the killer.

Al and Carrie meet up with one of the other study members, Dale. He was contacted by Alwyn about joining a follow up study, probably to make a name for herself. Dale wasn't interested though.

Cherie and Jay meet up with another study member Todd. He was in Norway at the time of the murder and had Alwyn's phone call the week before. He has no reason to hate Lustig or Alwyn, he's too busy making millions of dollars.

Carrie meets up with Ruth, another study participant. Ruth says that Alwyn asked her if Lustig ever asked her to lie. He of course didn't but she had to check because one of the group members told a huge lie. She points Carrie in the direction of their group session. Lustig wanted to see if they could influence each others recollections. Jay can't find a tape for that session. Carrie says whatever is on that tape is the reason Lustig and Alwyn were killed. She looks behind her and sees a car about to run her down and she jumps out of the way just in the nick of time.

While the police don't have the tape, they do have Carrie. She sits down with Al and a stenographer and recalls the meeting. The team has a long book of things to research to find the one lie. Carrie remembers a lot of art hanging in Alwyn's apartment. Dale was the one who talked about seeing a Vermeer painting. They find out that the painting was in Spain at the time so there is no way he would have seen it. Whatever he did that day he is willing to kill to keep it secret. Jay searches the database and finds that a university student was murdered that day and left in her car.

Carrie confronts Dale about the day that he said he went to an art gallery. He changes his story about what he said that day. He tells her to check the tape but it's gone. Carrie shows Dale the picture of the murdered girl but doesn't say much more than the fact that he audited them.

Jay has found that there are another 8 possible victims that were killed after being audited by Dale, therefore Dale may be the serial killer.

Carrie brings in Dale and questions him. She asks if he knows any of the murdered girls and he says he doesn't know them. Carrie remembers that Lustig said that sometimes an extreme amount of adrenaline can erase a memory, like what happened with her sister. Carrie believes that this is what happened to Dale's memories of murdering those girls. She tricks him into admitting that it was raining the day Lustig died but it was a sunny day. Carrie says she is the only one who understands him and asks how long he gets where he won't have memories. He says that sometimes he doesn't have memories for a few days. He explains how it started with him killing a cat. Killing people would give him brief periods of time from all of his memories.

After leaving the interrogation room Carrie has a flashback. She remembers Lustig saying that nothing brings you into the present like a task, and he suggests she get back into police work.

Tech), Bryan A. Miranda (Afghani Driver), Emily Shaffer (Andrea Weston), Michael Shulman (Marshall Lebowitz), Eyas Younis (Bashir Sajadi)
Summary: Carrie and Al's latest case, the murder of an Afghani cab driver, has the potential to turn into a matter of national security when it's discovered that the victim was a government informant.

A man hides his eyes as he walks down a street and enters a cab. The man and the cab driver, Bashir Sajadi, are both from Afghanistan. The man in the cab says many men would still welcome the chance to become a martyr and asks Sajadi if that is true. The cabbie stares uncomfortably and looks back to the road.

In a courtroom, Carrie uses her memory to prove to the jurors and the defendant that she really can remember everything. She is there to make sure the man who tried to sell her drugs is put behind bars.

Al greets Carrie at a crime scene, where the Afghani cab driver has been found dead. Eliot Delson says that Sajadi was an informant and this is why he was killed. Nothing was taken from the cab and there is no blood inside. The murder took place in a busy area and Carrie says that it must have been worth the risk to the killer.

Jay finds two suspected terrorists that were being investigated by the FBI. They both attend the same mosque. The cabbie was fast forwarded through his green card application because he agreed to infiltrate the mosque. Jay also finds that the cabbie received a phone call from a burner phone minutes before he died. Carrie suggests that it was his wife who called and she may know the killer.

Jay and Cherie meet with Sajadi's wife. They tell her that Sajadi did nothing wrong and was actually helping police. She doesn't recognize either of the two terrorists. The wife says that the number that called Sajadi before he died was his best friend Moe, a florist. Al asks why the records for his phone are hidden. The florist says he called Sajadi because he wanted to watch a football game with him. Moe says that during the phone call he heard the passenger speaking Pashto, which is spoken by both of the terrorists.

Al gets upset at Eliot who won't allow Al to arrest the two suspected terrorists even though there is so much evidence that they murdered Sajadi. Eliot changes his mind but the federal tactical team will make the arrests. The tactical team arrests the two terrorists while Carrie watches from a live feed.

Carrie visits Webster to see what she can learn from the autopsy. She asks about the injury on Sajadi's forehead. Carrie thinks that maybe Sajadi hit his head on the cab. She thinks that whoever killed him had military experience to detain him like a soldier and check under his shirt for explosives.

Jay tells Al that the bullet that killed Sajadi is from a gun that is standard issue for the US army. Carrie looks back in her memory and sees that there is a veteran's administration annex near the crime scene. Carrie visits the office to look for information on the soldier who committed the murder. Carrie gets information on a soldier, John, who fits the description and suffers from PTSD. During his last deployment, he lost his best friend to a suicide bomber. John forgets the event to survive but only by remembering can he heal.

Al and Carrie meet with John's mother, who says that he was never the same after he came back from the war. He was always on high alert and even pulled a gun on his mother. His girlfriend left him because she couldn't handle it. Al finds that John was heading downtown and he was probably going to meet his mentor, Stanley.

Al brings a tactical team to Stanley's apartment. Stanley says that John isn't there but they still enter his apartment. Al and Cherie tell Stanley that John is a murder suspect and they don't want anyone else to get hurt. Stanley shows the police where he keeps the weapons but John has already took them. John is loose in the city with an assault rifle and semi automatic pistol.

Carrie examines footage of the suicide bomb that killed John's friend in Afghanistan. She suspects that John is having a traumatic episode where he thinks he is hunting the people who murdered his friend. She thinks that John has been following Moe. Moe is delivering flowers to a wedding and Carrie suspects that is where John is.

At the wedding John points his gun at Moe and orders him to the ground. The NYPD surround the building as the wedding party runs out. They send a team with optics in to see what John is doing. John holds a phone that is the detonator to explosives that have been attached to Moe. John's doctor is on the way but they don't have time. John is trying to find answers but Moe can't help him.

Carrie goes into the building in the hopes that she can help John remember what happened in Afghanistan. Carrie tells him what he sees and remember isn't true but she can help him remember what really happened. She says that if he tries he can remember what really happened but he is afraid. She asks why his friend left cover before the suicide bomber killed him. The reason his friend left cover was to get one of the men out. He leaned into the car and looked back at John. The reason he left cover was to get John a bottle of water. He breaks down and surrenders to police.

Eliot tells Carrie that he is nominating her for a medal of valour. He could not be more proud of her. Cherie says that she sees now that Carrie works by her own rules. Cherie has her own rules too and pulls some strings to get green cards for Sajadi's family. Al says that sometimes our worst memories makes us forget our best ones.

Summary: Carrie and Al investigate when a young man is found dead in a luxury sports car he was delivering to a diplomat.

A man in a red Ferrari escapes from police in a high speed pursuit. The next day he is found in his car dead from a gunshot.

Carrie arrives at the crime scene and talks to Al about the details of the case. They don't know who the body belongs to but the car is registered to a Swiss diplomat, Lukas Emminger. Carrie suspects that the Swiss diplomat has some enemies.

Jay says the victim's fingerprints aren't in the system but it was involved in a police chase the night before. Al and Carrie leave to visit Lukas Emminger. He is moving back home soon but bought the car because it would make more sense financially to ship it there rather than buying it in Switzerland. The car has yet to be delivered to him though so he didn't know it was involved in a crime. Carrie thinks someone is targeting him and they ask for a list of his recent associates.

Al and Carrie visit the man who sold the car to Lukas. The owner, Castagan, says that the murdered man is Ezekiel Nadal, one of his best delivery boys. They visit Ezekiel's father and brother at their home. His father didn't even know he had another job. His brother Francisco shows Carrie Ezekiel's bedroom. She accidentally walks into Francisco's room at first. She asks how Francisco got the bruise on his face and he says he fell off his bike. Carrie asks some questions and Francisco said that maybe Ezekiel owed someone some money.

Dr. Webster examines the body with Carrie. Whoever killed Ezekiel did it from up close and knew it wasn't Emminger. There are some markings on the body that Carrie saw in Francisco's room and Dr. Webster attributes it to a gang.

Jay, with the help of Carrie, searches for how the markings could be related to a gang. They come across an illegal street racing club that the Nadal brothers must have been a part of. Carrie suspects that the leader of the club, Stevie McKinnon, may be the one who Ezekiel owed money to.

Carrie and Al visit Stevie's house to question him about the Nadals. They tell him they know he is the leader of the street racing club and he runs out of the house with his car keys. He gets into his car and drives away. After a high speed chase they manage to catch Stevie.

Back at the station, Al questions Stevie. He admits to beating up Francisco because he owed Stevie money. Ezekiel was supposed to pay for him but never showed up. Ezekiel was supposed to give Stevie $10,000. Stevie says that if he had to get money fast he would bring a car to a chop shop. Al researches local garages and finds Juno's garage may be the one he is looking for.

Al and Carrie go to the garage and question the owner. At first she denies ever seeing Ezekiel but when they threaten her with jail time she admits to seeing him. He tried to sell her the Ferrari but she wouldn't take it because it was fake.

Cherie goes with Al to the place that sold Emminger his car. When they get there it is closed and the inside is a mess. They find Castagan's body in the trunk of a car.

Back at the station, Jay finds evidence about texts that Ezekiel received and maps of the cars at Castagan's. The cars are switched around but it looks like they are never sold and it is a front for something else. Jay finds that Emminger has bought three cars from Castagan. Cherie suggests that Al talk to Eliot before questioning Emminger and other car buyers about the cars. Eliot wants them to approach certain members on the list with discretion.

Carrie and Al question Lukas about the other cars. Al tells Lukas that the people he gave the cars to may be angry after finding out the cars are fake. He says he didn't know they were fake and hasn't talked to Castagan lately. They head to Krinkowski Ltd. to see if they know anything about importing cars. While there, Carrie sees a man who was a delivery man for Castagan. They run after him and end up in a warehouse full of cars. The man they are chasing opens fire and Al keeps him busy while Carrie sneaks up on him.

They bring him into the station for questioning along with the importer. They both blame each other for the murder of Castagan. Carrie wants to find out who killed Ezekiel even though Eliot is worried about what they will do that may offend Lukas. The embassy has already requested a letter of apology from the NYPD.

Dr. Webster finds some vaccines in Ezekiel's blood that suggests he was going to visit a tropical country. Carrie remembers seeing Lukas' daughter had a bandage on her arm from what looks like a vaccine shot. She offers to bring the letter to Lukas herself.

After she hands the letter to Lukas, Carrie asks why he didn't mention that his oldest daughter was in love with Ezekiel. Lukas refuses to let them talk to his daughter Celine but she volunteers to talk. They were supposed to leave for India the night he was murdered. Lukas' wife says that Lukas was the one who sent the text. Celine accuses Lukas of murdering Ezekiel and leaves the room. Lukas was just trying to protect his family. Celine threatens to slash her wrists with a knife but Carrie talks her out of it. Al arrests Lukas but he isn't worried because he has diplomatic immunity.

At the station Eliot tells Carrie that while Lukas did have diplomatic immunity, the ambassador can waive that privilege at any time. So Lukas will stand trial for murder.

Carrie and Al reminisce about old memories together on the way to the subway.

Guest Stars: James Hiroyuki Liao (Jay Lee), Tawny Cypress (Cherie Rollins-Murray), Ito Aghayere (Reporter), Jeremy Beck (John Patton), Sean Cullen (Gordon Frost), Lou Martini Jr. (Building Manager), Kathleen Wise (Female Neighbor)
Summary: The murder of an urban explorer leads Carrie and Al to search for the killer, but discover clues the victim was following to locate a treasure hidden under the streets of New York.

In a library, a strangely dressed man coughs as he reads from his book. He looks to be sleeping when the librarian checks on him. The librarian finds that he is dead and has a strange rash on his face.

Carrie enters the crime scene with Joanne and Al, all of them wearing hazmat suits. They aren't sure what the man is infected with yet but it looks like he escaped from a hospital. Joanne finds that he isn't contagious and died from being in contact with material used for building a bomb. To die from this he must have been in contact with a large amount of C4 for an extended amount of time. Eliot doesn't want anyone to panic so tells them to keep the bomb part secret.

The police search his apartment with the help of the building manager but his room mate is missing. Some gas masks and climbing equipment are found in his closet but no trace of the hazardous material is found. Cherie finds tickets for trespassing.

Jay finds that the dead man and his room mate have many videos on Youtube of them urban exploring. He says it will take some time to track the guy who records and uploads the videos but Al says he knows a quicker way.

Jay and Al pay a visit to the man who issued the tickets. He gives them a name, Alex, and says he even gave one of them a citation yesterday. He gives them the location and Al and Carrie wait there for the man. They see a hole open in the ground and Alex climbs out of it. They bring him in for questioning. Alex didn't even know that John was dead and claims he doesn't know how he came into contact with C4. The room mate, Harold, was more into treasure hunting so he suggests they talk to him. Carrie takes a turn with questioning Alex. She asks if he wants to come on board as a special advisor.

Jay says that the dead man was reading books about Alfred Goodrose, a painter. He was reading the man's diary in the library. It claims he knows the location of a huge amount of gold that was supposedly cursed. There has been an explosion from C4 outside the city. It was just a small amount though so Jay thinks the missing room mate was there to test a small amount of his C4.

Eliot is sorry but Homeland Security is taking over their case. They believe they are part of a terrorist group that will bomb a gas and energy meeting that is happening in town. Eliot says they are no longer on the case but Carrie says they can still investigate the homicide portion of the case. Eliot allows them to continue on it. Jay is glad they are still on the case because he has some GPS information about an area they should check out.

Alex prepares them for the exploration. Jay tracks them by GPS from the station. Al is a little apprehensive but wants to prove he can keep up with them. As they go deeper Jay loses track of them. The three explorers reach a room and take their back packs off. Carrie points out a closed door that she remembers seeing open in a video. She goes in and it is there that they find the materials for making the bombs. The room is rigged to explode and they run out of it right before there is an explosion. Alex's leg is hurt and they need to get him out but he can't walk. Carrie says she knows the way out and leaves by herself.

The police know there was an explosion underground but they don't know where Carrie and Al are. While Carrie makes her way back the batteries in her flashlight die. Al makes a splint for Alex's leg when an alarm starts going off. Poisonous hydrogen sulfide is seeping in from somewhere so Al helps Alex to leave the area. Carrie uses her memory to guide her through the dark. Meanwhile Al and Alex struggle through the tunnels.

Carrie makes it out of the tunnel and sends the transit officer down after them. The officer finds Al and Alex soon after. Joanne calls Carrie and says the guy they are looking for died in the test blast a week ago. Carrie doesn't see how that's possible because the transit officer said he gave a ticket out to him yesterday. Carrie suspects that the transit officer is the one making the bombs and goes back into the tunnels. She can't get through because of the gas though and turns back. Cherie says they have discovered the transit officer was shipped ingredients for constructing bombs. The officer locks Al and Alex into a side tunnel with a train heading for them. They manage to make it out and meet Carrie at the nearest subway terminal.

Alex says that the last map he made was in the financial sector because that's where John thought the treasure was. Carrie remembers an entry in Goodrose's journal that points them to the mural on the library ceiling that was also painted by Goodrose. Jay finds the location where the painting was created. Al and Carrie explore the nearest station and Alex points them in the direction of the old station from the 20's. They hear drilling and head on. Al shoots one of the transit officers who has a gun. The lead man sets off the explosives and says they can either save the people or chase him, but not both. Al and Carrie manage to dismantle all of the bombs but lose the transit officer. When he turns up top side he is surrounded by police officers.

Al takes Carrie through a secret tunnel that leads to a beautiful view of the city. They reminisce about old days and enjoy the view.

Summary: Carrie and Al pose as a married couple to catch a killer who may be responsible for a series of unsolved homicides that Al investigated years earlier.

Several years ago, NYC was in an uproar because of a Central Park rape that became sensationalized in the media. There was a massive manhunt at the time and it eventually resulted in the arrest of Shawn Manning. He was an African-American kid from a poor neighborhood so his odds of beating the charges were low already. But he somehow got lucky with his lawyer. The lawyer, Christopher Jenkins, never doubted his innocence and even after Manning was convicted he still tried to pursue the case.

Now fast forwards 12 years and Jenkins is gunned down in a parking lot.

He was giving a speech at the Bar Association and was on his way to fetching his car so he could give a co-worker a ride home when someone murdered him and then made it appear like a robbery. Carrie however was lucky to see through the ploy.

She noticed that the car door was open and yet Jenkins was a few feet away. Almost as if he willingly turned his back on someone he trusted. So naturally Carrie and Al looked into Jenkins' acquaintances and although they were suspicious of one of clerks — they couldn't find any reason why someone would want to harm the lawyer.

He was a nice guy and though he once put Al through the ringer on the stand — neither of them held any harsh feelings. Al explained that Jenkins was just that type of man. As in no one could think of holding something against him.

But the Manning case popped up during their investigation. Apparently, Manning was quietly released after 12 years and he was seen in the exact same area that Jenkins was killed in.

They questioned Manning's Aunt Rhonda and she did her best to put Al and Carrie off. She told them that her nephew never did anything wrong to begin with and that out of everyone he would be the least likely person to kill Jenkins. No, she claimed Manning was trying to get his life back on track so he wouldn't do something stupid enough to jeopardize it.

And yet he ran.

Carrie and Al spotted him trying to hide from them and when they called out his name — he ran. He also escaped them by jumping onto a passing garbage truck for a free ride.

Running did not help his case and neither did the idiotic visit he paid to his rape victim. Manning went to see her in person and she freaked out and attempted to run away. Attempted because she ended up falling while running and she bruised her face when he planted it into the concrete.

The victim had blacked out her whole experience in the park and she was never able to identify Manning, but he had confessed and so she always assumed he was her attacker. Yet there's a small chance he wasn't.

Jay found evidence that Manning and Jenkins were still in contact and the team thinks it might be because Manning found the real culprit behind the rape.

Manning and Jenkins both went to a low down pizza joint named Gino's prior to Jenkins's death. And phone records do show that Manning kept calling the place. Now, at first the guys thought he was just trying to get a job, but no one pushes that hard to work as a busboy. So Jay dug deeper and he picked up on something odd — every time Manny called the restaurant, the restaurant would then call someone named Robert Cordero or Bobby as he likes to be called!

Bobby had a rap sheet with at least two rapes on it.

Once Carrie and Al found out about Bobby, they started to suspect he could have been the real guy in the Central Park case. His MO matches up and all they all have to do is place Bobby near the crime.

The victim couldn't help though she did remember the sound of cop on a horse afterwards. They followed this lead and caught up with the officer that was first to respond. And despite the years passing, the officer can clearly recall Bobby acting shifty around the park, but then why isn't that in her file?

The whole file she gave her superiors was whitewashed of any real evidence and the team lucked out on questioning Bobby about 12 years ago seeing as he was recently killed — by the same gun that killed Jenkins.

All these bodies piling up aren't looking good for the division. And Gordon Frost, the man primed to become the next Manhattan DA, is definitely adding on pressure. He's demanding Elliot find Manning and arrest already.

Nevertheless they couldn't do anything without any real evidence and when they did find some — it all pointed to Mr. Frost. He was in charge on Manning's case and he buried evidence in order to get a conviction. When Manning and Jenkins started digging again then it alerted Frost.

He has a bright future ahead of him and he didn't want to risk Manning's situation harming that. So after attaining things like DNA and the murder weapon — an arrest was made!

Frost will go to jail for the double homicide and as for Manning. His name will be cleared, but what does really mean after everything he's been through!

And as for Al and Carrie. They're fighting over location because Al wants to move to the city and Carrie was hoping he would stay in Brooklyn! Is just it because it's closer to her?

Summary: A blast from the past leads Carrie to investigate the seemingly ordinary death of a science teacher in a hospital. Soon, however, Carrie and Al are following a lead to a dangerous sleeper cell and a mysterious plot to uncover.

Jackie is back! She risked her cover in order to return and murder a man in his hospital bed. If she had left him alone then Ted Muscat could have died naturally from his illness, but she went through the trouble of tracking him so Ted must be more than he seems.

Ted was a high school science teacher. One that loved by both faculty and his student which is really rare. However Carrie had a hunch about him and she made Jay dig deeper into Ted's back ground.

Besides being a seemingly good teacher, Ted was also Alpha Five operative. At least he used to be before he was reported dead three years ago along with several of his compadres. And just when Carrie started to delve deeper into Jackie's motive — a second operative showed up dead.

So it looks like Jackie is working her way through all the Alpha Five operatives that allegedly died.

Yet the operatives weren't as retired as they had the world believing. Jay found highly detailed plans at one of the operatives' homes. As in they were building a nuclear bomb.

Later on at the office, ICA approached Carrie and Al. They've been on to the idea that the Alpha Fives were planning a terrorist attack and they've also figured out that Jackie must have been a part of their team. But that doesn't actually explain why Jackie would be killing off her partners and Carrie even says so.

The agents believe that Jackie is merely the cleaner. She's making sure they're plans don't leak to the outside world before the bomb is ready. And to do so she had to start killing off the underlings.

Carrie on the other hand doubts the agents' theories. She feels like they're too quick to underestimate Jackie and she was right. They baited Jackie with one of the Alpha Five members they had under surveillance and still she managed to get to the operative despite the fact he was heavily guarded.

Jackie would have gotten away if it wasn't for Carrie. Carrie broke protocol to go into the building and it was good thing too. Because she was the only one that could have and in fact did spot Jackie's trademark ring.

But just because Carrie was the one to bring in doesn't mean her team has first dibs. The ICA agents quickly and quite aggressively quarantined their terrorist. Jackie was there's and they weren't so big on sharing. However Carrie was able to convince them to give her a minute alone with Jackie seeing as they were old friends and all.

Jackie wanted to tell her something but she couldn't do it with the agents watching so she ended up lucky that she had taken precautions earlier. Without Carrie's knowledge, Jackie had hid things in her memory.

And Carrie did find out what Jackie wanted her to, but she also found out more than what the other woman was planning on. Jackie needs Carrie's help to get something to the elusive Viktor, a top Alpha Five operative, and in return Jackie will get her son back.

She had a little boy with Viktor and when she tried to leave Alpha Five he took her son. Jackie thought he had died with his father three years ago when the plane they were supposed to be on crashed, but once she learned the truth — she began hunting her old cronies. Though she denies killing at least one of them. What she did do was get the key the bomb needs.

Without it Viktor can't set off the bomb.

Jackie would have told this to the ICA agents, but she knows that Viktor has men inside of the organization. And Jay even found proof that the agents on her case weren't randomly picked — they specially volunteered for the job.

Jay also found out that the bomb and plan behind it were originally thought up by American forces working with Al Qaeda. They were hoping to set off a war in the Middle East and somehow Viktor got mixed up with that.

Carrie and Al attempted to get Jackie away from the ICA agents yet they were caught and Jackie was once again taken into custody. But the agents didn't take her to their official office. Unless Viktor's secret headquarters suddenly became the stopping point for ICA.

Jackie handed the USB with the key for the bomb and Viktor had gallantly given her a few seconds to see her son alive and healthy.

She saw her son before she handed over the USB and so when Viktor found out that he'd been set up — it was too late to hurt Jackie further. The task force came in one big sweep. They picked up the ICA agents along with Viktor. And though Jackie will most likely spend the rest of her life in prison — she now knows that her son is safe from his father.

Summary: The murder of a prominent lawyer leads Carrie and Al to reexamine a rape case that moved Manhattan thirteen years before. Soon, they realize that the case was not as clear cut as it was portrayed by the media, and an innocent man may have been wrongfully convicted.

Tonight's episode of "Unforgettable" begins with a flashback of a woman riding her bike through Central Park after dark. She sees something and screams out loud and then the screen goes black.

Present — A man finishes giving a speech at the bar association and heads to his car in the parking garage. He realizes he isn't alone and calls out "hello?"

Carrie and Al are with a real estate agent looking at a potential apartment for Al. He asked Carrie to come along with him because real estate brokers will take him more seriously if they think he is in a relationship.

Carrie and Al receive a phone call and head to the parking garage. Chris Jenkins, the lawyer that was giving a speech last night was shot to death. His watch and his wallet is missing, but they are certain that he wasn't mugged. He was shot in the back, which means he trusted the shooter, and most likely knew them.

They head to Jenkin's office and speak to his co-worker Lisa Martinez. She can't imagine one of his clients would want to harm him, because he "gave his all to them." Carrie thinks it is strange that Chris's glasses case were lying on his desk since he was wearing them when he was murdered. They trace the glasses they found at the scene of the crime and realize they belong to one of the law students at Chris's practice named Mark. Mark insists that he didn't kill Chris Jenkins, but he found him in the parking garage dead. He dropped his glasses when he was taking a file out of Jenkin's briefcase because he wanted to protect him. The file he took was a defamation lawsuit. A man named Simpkins was suing him because he got his daughter's murder case thrown out. Simpkins has an alibi though-he was at an AA meeting.

Chris Jenkins' received a phone call from a payphone the day of his death. They are able to get a photo from street cameras of the man on the payphone. They recognize him as Shawn Manning, the "Millenium Monster." Shawn was charged in 2000 for raping a woman in Central Park. Chris Jenkins represented Shawn, but they lost the case and he spent 12 years in prison. Al and Carrie pay Shawn's Aunt Rhonda a visit, and Rhonda says that Shawn was with her all night last night and he has no "ill will" against Chris.

As they are leaving Shawn's Aunt's house they find him hiding in the back yard. They chase him down an alley and out into the street. He jumps on the back of a garbage truck and rides away before they can catch him.

Carrie and Al head back to the office to regroup. They run Chris Jenkins' credit cards and realize he bought lunch at Gino's Pizzeria. And, they had seen a Gino's menu in Shawn's bedroom at Rhonda's house. They head to the pizzeria and question the owner. He says that Shawn Manning came in once to eat lunch with Chris Jenkins. They check out the pizzeria's phone records and realize that Shawn called the pizzeria six times from Rhonda's house. And every time he called the pizzeria, someone at the pizzeria turned around and called the cell phone of a man named Robert Cordero. They trace Cordero's name and find out that he is a convicted rapist.

Al questions Cordero and accuses him of raping the Doctor in 2000 in Central Park. He thinks that Shawn knows Cordero is the real rapist and is trying to clear his name. Cordero denies all allegations.

Shawn Manning pays the Doctor, Rupa that he is accused of raping in Central Park a visit. When she sees him waiting in her yard for him she turns around and runs and falls in the sidewalk. Shawn runs away and Carrie and the ambulance arrives at the scene. They don't think Shawn had any intention of hurting her, they think he visited her to see if she could help him clear his name.

District Attorney Frost pressures them to wrap the case up. He is concerned there is going to be pandemonium in NYC soon if they don't catch the rapist and the killer.

Carrie and Al put their heads together and try to figure out how they can clear Shawn's name and find Chris Jenkins' killer. Carrie heads to Rupa's office and tries to talk to her about the night that she was raped. He explains to Rupa that she thinks that Shawn is innocent. She shows her a picture of Cordero but Rupa says she doesn't remember anything from that night. As Carrie is leaving Rupa says that all she remembers from the raping was a "clicking metal sound." Carrie heads back to the station with pretty much nothing. Carrie is talking to Al about how she went jogging through the park at night before. She has an epiphany and remembers that when she went jogging at night she seen a cop on a horse policing the park and the horses hooves made a clicking sound.

Carrie and Al meet with the mounted officer that was first on the scene during the Central Park raping back in 2000. They show her a picture of Cordero and she claims that he was definitely in the park the night Rupa was murdered. They head to the restaurant to pick up Cordero but someone else got to him first, they find his body shot to death in the dumpster. Carrie recognizes valet ticket stubs right next to the dumpster, they are the same valet ticket stubs that Attorney Frost had on his car. She and Al put their head together with Elliot and realize that Gordon Frost closed the books on Manning's rape case years ago without substantial evidence. Now that Manning is free and trying to clear his name, it is going to be exposed he didn't follow due process on Rupa's rape. So, he killed Cordero and Jenkins to keep it under wraps that he sent an innocent man to jail for 12 years.

Elliot holds a press conference and arrest DA Gordon Frost on live television, and reveals that they found the murder weapon in his car. Shawn Manning's name is cleared and Rupa even offers him a job at her practice.

Summary: A murdered body washes ashore in the Hamptons, and Carrie and Al's boss offers them a "paid vacation" in his beautiful Southampton cottage, in order to help local law enforcement find the killer, who may or may not be related to a previous serial killer.

Al and Carrie weren't even afforded the right amount of time to get excited about a paid vacation before they realized Elliot was actually sending them to the Hamptons just so they can go hunt a serial killer.

The serial killer has been killing women in the area for the past decade and he usually leaves their body to wash up on shore (as part of the theatrics). So when a young woman by the name of Shelly Branigan washed on the private beach of a very wealthy and political influential man. Namely the Mayor — Elliot ended up getting called and he in turn put his best people on the case.

Although he happened to mention the case and where Carrie and Al were going in front of the whole squad room. A decision he's bound to regret seeing as his agents were soon joined by Jo, Jay, and Cherie.

They wanted to enjoy Elliot's "small" weekend cabin as well, but Al did at least make sure they worked for this vacation. Jo, herself, thought she'd be a huge asset to a small town coroner's office and surprisingly Dr. Bloom wasn't the country bumpkin she was presuming he would be.

He was more than capable of handling Shelly's autopsy on his own. After all he did perform autopsies for two of the serial killer's victims. And that's why he's knows for sure that Shelly wasn't killed by the residential serial killer — the MOs don't match!

Shelly was stabbed by a small knife while other victims were all strangled. But Shelly's killer wasn't trying pass her off as a victim of a serial killer. Dr. Bloom and Jo found evidence of someone trying to tie her to an anchor. If she had stayed tied then her body might have never been discovered.

She was though and now the mystery is who would killer a blue collar girl from Islip in the wealthier parts of the Hamptons?

The answer to the location is easy — Shelly had found work nearby. Her father was in an accident and her family was struggling financially. So she found a job as a waitress. Carrie and

Al had thought that maybe her possible second job was what put her in harm's way but they were wrong seeing as there isn't a job in the world that would have paid her a one shot of 10 grand.

So they then looked into Shelly's lifestyle — just to see if she was as squeaky clean as her parents thought she was. And apparently she wasn't. Because what was a townie doing at one of the premier social events of the year?

Shelly had attended the engagement party of Travis Harrington and Lizzy Mortimer. Lizzy was the pampered daughter of the George Mortimer. He was old money and his family was more connected than the Bushes.

The specially ordered food at the party was the last thing Shelly had eaten so Carrie and Al know she died sometime after leaving or worst — during the party. However when they questioned the Mortimers and the wait staff; everyone claims to have never have even seen Shelly.

The elite had closed ranks around the Mortimers and the only person that verified Shelly was at the party happened to be a small town kid that managed to befriend some of them. The kid knows what's it's like to be on the outside looking in and he felt he shared that with Shelly. She was out of place at the party. And the team soon guessed why.

They thought dear old George might have acted improperly towards her. He does have the reputation of mistreating the local girls. So they got a search warrant and the Luminol picked on a blood bath.

Mr. Mortimer lawyered up fast and that could have been the end to finding out what really happened to Shelly. Yet the Mortimers' maid had evidence that someone else could have wanted to kill Shelly. And this new suspect was also at the very same party.

Well, it's not like the impending groom was going to miss his own engagement party.

Travis was the poor kid that did good. He was going to be joining his future father-in-law's firm and he was marrying into money. But Shelly was from his past. The one he desperately tried to hide from his new family.

Travis and Shelly used to date back when they were teenagers. That relationship changed once they became pregnant. Shelly had the baby and her parents adopted him after Travis signed off on his parental rights.

So there was the big dirty little secret and the team thought that Travis tried to hide it by any means necessary. Though they stopped suspecting him when he quickly confessed to the crime. It sounds weird but it really wasn't.

Travis had all the reasons in the world to deny deny deny and yet he caved in — as if he was protecting someone. And if he was willing to go to jail for this person then the only way they could truly catch the killer was set to a trap using Travis.

They released him claiming they messed up the paperwork and he went straight to his brother. The brother was the one that killed Shelly. He didn't want that girl ruining his brother's chances of a better life. When the harsh truth is that was never a part of Shelly's plan — she just wanted closure and not the money.

The team busted both brothers. Although Travis wasn't the one wielding a clam knife as weapon; he still attempted to cover up a crime. So it was because of his brother, the one that worked to put him through a great school, that ended up costing Travis everything.

And as for the team — they enjoyed the rest of their impromptu vacation. Jo even started a summer flirtation with Dr. Bloom.

Summary: When Carrie and Elliott are attending a party sponsored by the mayor, a group of criminals seizes control of the building, and demand a hefty ransom. It is up to Carrie to thwart their plans by playing from the Die Hard book.

The Mayor went out of his way to invite Major Crimes to a grand opening and then when they arrived — he ignored them. Al who could have been counted on to come up with smart remarks had to miss out on the whole getting snubbed. He couldn't make it because he was in a wedding party and so it's just Carrie, Joanne and Eliot in attendance for the Mayor's showboating.

And that scenario left Carrie without any protection. Not that she's in any real danger per se, but she does have to deal with an aggressive flirter by the name of Ron Skinner. It's his party so it would have been rude for Carrie to dismiss him. He's opening up a suite of luxury apartments (unlike the city has ever seen before) and even wanted to show Carrie one of the suites... preferably alone. Though he quickly changed his mind on that front when he realized she was a joint package with Joanne.

As for Eliot, he was leaving with the Mayor when Skinner decided to join them. He had had enough of his own importance by then and wasn't in the mood to stick around.

All three men were in the elevator when it suddenly stopped. However it wasn't maintenance error like the Mayor and Eliot were hoping. Unbeknownst to them, they had been hijacked.

Their elevator dropped several feet and then abruptly stopped. Apparently, the masterminds behind the rigging didn't want to kill anyone unless they have to — they're end game is all about money. So holding both the Mayor and one of New York's wealthiest pedestrians came in handy for them and Eliot being there as well was just the topping.

Eliot was able to connect the criminals straight to the NYPD and Al was told about the ransom demand the same time as the captives.

The man in charge is calling himself Alpha Omega. He was also at the party although his latest tactics show that he wasn't looking to buy. It seems he was actually surveying the place for any weaknesses and guess what — he didn't find any!

Skinner built the most technological advanced apartment building in world, but he let his paranoia get away from him. He was a security nut and he was deadly serious about it. As in he turned his apartment building into a fortress. The police can't get in and the bad guys know that for a fact.

They had taken the last stranglers at the party as hostages thinking it would all be easy. They broke into the building's security system and can monitor everything that's going on outside. Yet they overlooked what could happen from the inside.

Joanne and Carrie were still at the party when the gunmen showed up. They were smart enough to take cover before getting noticed.

Carrie wants to help take down the gunmen, much to Al's dismay, and keep her boss safe during the process. But it's hard to do that while also protecting Joanne. Jo, for all her spunk, isn't cut out for field work and luckily she knows it. Joanne left Carrie by herself in order to take care of one of the injured hostages. She didn't want to drag the other woman down.

And Carrie used her newfound position to actively pursue the gunmen. She managed to take out several of them though her main concern was with what's going on in the elevator.

Skinner can't raise the money to ransom himself or his friends and the Mayor's office hasn't exactly been forthcoming. So this definitely doesn't look good for everyone trapped inside the building. Omega is threatening to begin killing people if they don't get their desired hundred million.

Jay thought that was rare for them. These people are known as cyber hackers. They would normally go for robbing a bank rather than use hostages.

Carrie was able to work through the men guarding the hostages. And with some assistance from Joanne, they were able to release the last partygoers. Joanne went with them to make sure they would be alright leaving the building, but sadly for Carrie; she couldn't finish off the rest of the criminals on her own.

The men that were left guarding the surveillance cameras are the most dangerous. They and their leader were in charge of that elevator and they have the power of killing 3 people with a mere press of a button. And when Carrie tried to take them; they ended up catching her instead.

Al has a plan to help the remaining the hostages though he wanted to hear from Carrie first. He needed to reassure himself that she was alright before he risked everything by turning off the power grind. In turning the power off — the backup breaks should kick in without interference.

But Al's plan still won't work in their favor. Carrie escaped her captors in time to give Al the go ahead and only then, when everything was said and done, did she realize that there was a bomb in the building.

Omega tied a bomb to the elevator wires and when the power shut down he then activated it.

Carrie quickly helped the men inside before the bomb could do away with all of them. Though, as it turns out, the bomb didn't do any damage. Why? Because it was never met to.

Omega didn't want the money. He did all of this to get the city to turn the power grind off like Jay had suspected earlier. Al had dismissed that theory, but Carrie convinced him Omega's plan was much larger than just robbing banks. Omega wanted to crash the market.

He was a cyber-terrorist and thought the he could start the world anew by removing the ugliness of greed. It was crazy scheme and he hadn't counted on either Al or Carrie.

They went back into the building and found Omega hiding in Skinner's panic room. And they managed to disable him before he could release his deadly computer virus onto the world.

What did they get in return for such acts of bravery — a speech! The Mayor gave them a thank you speech. When, really, whatever happened to a key to the city?

Townsend (Joey Falk), Amy Wilson (Bella Florence), Mick Angel (Jock)
Summary: Carrie's high school reunion is suddenly cut short when an alum shows up dead. Carrie has to remember back 22 years to understand the events that led to this crime.

Al and Carrie attend one of the most dreaded events known to man — her 20th anniversary high school reunion. Former classmates' attentions are swiftly taken off of "scary Carrie" when one of their own, Tommy, is found murdered on the bathroom floor. She was "scary Carrie" because her memory talents were not appreciated back then.

Pieces slowly come together thanks to Carrie's inner memory lane. Earlier in the evening, Tommy had been showing them pictures on his phone. However, after scrolling through his cell, Carrie notices one picture is missing. It's a photo of a denim jacket with a distinct pattern on the back. The jacket was worn by another classmate named Vickie the night she was killed in a hit and run when they were in the 10th grade, some 22 years ago.

A week ago, Tommy, who was having money troubles, had been babbling on and on about Vickie and something big happening on the night of their reunion to fellow classmate Hank. Carrie figures there must be a connection there. She questions a former high school teacher who had a thing for young girls especially Vickie. He mentions Vickie used to complain about a student who kept following her.

That trail leads them to yet another classmate named Greg who knows his way around a claw hammer, the same weapon used to bludgeon Tommy. Greg and Carrie were in algebra class together until he flunked out. Greg is innocent. He was just another outsider who genuinely cared about Vickie. For the record, the outsiders were students such as Carrie who did not fit in with the cool crowd.

It turns out that denim jacket is a very important piece to the puzzle. It had actually belonged to Hank who had two girls, Melanie and Bella, fighting over him and his jacket at the time. Carrie has a theory, a correct theory. Melanie, who is now a rich woman, killed Vickie in a fit of rage and a case of mistaken identity all those many years ago. She believed the girl walking along the road wearing said jacket was her rival Bella, but it was Vickie. If only Vickie hadn't taken the jacket. Tommy, who was a witness to the crime, was unfortunately a loose end that needed to be tied. He was right. Something major did happen the night of their class reunion.

Summary: Carrie and Al work alongside the secret service as they investigate a murder. As the investigation continues it soon becomes apparent they have come across a counterfeiting ring run by an assassin.

We see Carrie working at a cash counterfeiting operation overseeing it and coaching them on how to make the bills seem more real. Two thugs come in and says they caught a guy trying to crash the party. They pull off his hood — it's Al. Later, Carrie sits in the diner watching two kids play concentration. The little girl is losing and her brother is hassling her. When he looks away, Carrie flips two cards over to help her.

She tells Joanne there's no harm in using her perfect memory to help people. Joanne rattles off of a list of tormented younger sisters that turned out fine. She asks Carrie if she's ovulating and that's why she's acting maternal. She says she bets Al wants kids and wants to know why they're not together. Joanne says the tension between them is hot.

Just then, Carrie gets a call from Al and says something is going on with Jay. She has to leave but first flips over some more cards for the girl and tells Joanne she's not ovulating. Jay thanks Al for helping and says his sister's ex hubby is missing. He missed his custody visitation with their dog. He says Natalie is freaked and she's normally level headed. Carrie is mad that Al brought her down to use her super powers on a dog.

Natalie shows them a pic of of Evan and says he's never late to see Derek Jeter — their Pomeranian. She says the divorce was rough on him and his personality has shifted and he's trying to win her back. He was a struggling musician who is trying to work real jobs. They come into his room and Al sees the guy is face down on the bed. He's dead. He calls in the gun shot crime to CSU while Natalie screams in anguish.

Jay comforts his sister. Al tells Carrie the body is still warm so the shooting was recent. She sniffs lingerie and says it hasn't been worn and thinks this was staged. Al says a guy checks into a hotel this time of day for just one reason. Al thinks it may have been a hooker that killed him. Natalie tells Al that Evan was free to do what he wanted since they were divorced but says this doesn't make sense.

She says he liked girls and they liked him back but he never needed to pay for it plus he was broke. Carrie asks her about the lanyard Evan wore. She says it was her lanyard that she gave him to keep his work ID in and he wore it to prove to her that he was responsible. Carrie comes to see Joanne and she says that her leg is hurting from yoga training she's been doing to help her bed skills. Carrie is icked out.

Joanne says the bullet is a unique caliber from an Indonesian assault pistol. Carrie thinks to the crime scene and says she saw a flag from Indonesia outside the hotel. Joanne is impressed, then annoyed with her recall. The round was armor piercing but it came from nowhere near them. They agree a prostitute wouldn't be carrying ammo like that.

Jay studies evidence on his ex brother-in-law. He says the hotel room shows no one else entered with a key card except Evan. There is one entrance with no security camera at the back. He mentions the Indonesian angle and Jay is working his credit card. Eliot tells Carrie and Al that he's giving the case away because of Jay's involvement. He says he'll make sure the 17th keeps it a priority and says it has to go to homicide.

Carrie says that Evan's truck might be missing and his ID and keys are gone. Francis comes in and says he has the truck. He introduces himself to Carrie — Special Agent Frank Simms — Secret Service. He says he's taking over the case. He says it's part of an ongoing counterfeiting investigation. Eliot says he's going to make a call but then caves in.

Frank says that it takes three holy grails of counterfeiting the new hundred dollar bills. Carrie rattles them all off and says she read his memo. He says it's nice that someone reads and remembers them but Al says not to be flattered since she's a freak of nature. Frank says no one has ever stolen one sheet of US currency paper until today.

He shows them some photos and Carrie says she thinks the magnetic ink is also missing. Frank won't tell them about the security numbers and he says he's done with inter-departmental cooperation until Carrie says she has an Indonesian link but won't tell him until he agrees to keep them involved. She walks out with his hundred and Al tells him he'll never see his money again. Frank nods in agreement.

Cherie tells Al that Jay found a credit card charge on Evan's record at the Indonesian place. She says she heard that Frank was the biggest player in DC since Clinton. Al thanks her and goes. Al finds Frank has plopped down at a desk. Jennie Shaw, a graphic designer, the paper maker. Kristin Green, engraver. Olivia Waring, electroplater. Sophie Dietrich, the printer. They're all art school grads and they all went off the grid four months ago.

Al says they seem too hot to be killers. Frank says Carrie looks too hot to be a cop and asks about her. Al tells him to focus. He asks why those four girls would do this and Frank says if they pull it off, it's worth $72 million. They think one of the girls was with Evan at the Indonesian restaurant. Frank meets her there and she points out the camera. She tells him to give up his evidence.

Frank says he thinks there's an Indonesian trader heading to the US to buy the money from the girls. She says that means they're on a ticking clock. Jay looks at security footage and Carrie tells Al that she brought him sesame balls. He says to give them to her new partner Frank. They can't see the girl's face and Carrie says she saw that tattoo in the hotel today.

Carrie says she didn't see her face. She thinks hard and says she did see it. She's with a group called Red Door that kills people and does bad things. Carrie picks her out from an Interpol file. Her name is Padma and she's an assassin. They wonder what she needs counterfeit money for. Jay says he has an idea. He works on it.

Frank is aggravated with their lack of progress. Jay says he made contact by posing as someone with serial numbers. Frank says even a blind pig finds a truffle and Al is pissed off. Frank says they give them a legit serial number to get the nibble. Carrie says she'll go undercover and both Al and Frank say no. She says they have only one shot.

Frank says she's brilliant but she doesn't have enough time to learn enough about counterfeiting to go undercover. She tells Frank to try her. He does and she's a super quick study. She catches all the fakes and then he gives her something harder to discern. She snags that one as a fake too. He asks if she took an online memory course and she says she's a walking online memory course.

She tells him she has HSAMS. He's heard of it. She tells him to give her a date and she rattles off facts. He tells her she has some mind on her and she says it can be a curse. She says she thinks she's ready and he agrees. She leaves and he realizes she again took his legit $100s. Al rants to Frank about putting Carrie in danger and he says they will need her alive to get the rest.

Frank wants to put a tracking device on her but Al says no way. He says the Mata Hari group and Indonesians will sniff it out. They argue over jurisdiction and who will handle what. Natalie talks to Jay and he says they will find out who did it. Natalie says she was going to tell him she wanted him back but then it's too late.

Jay tells her that Evan called him and told him that he was working hard to be the man she wanted him to be. He says that he was hopeful. Natalie tells him to promise to get the guy and he does. Frank, Al and Carrie go over the plans. She says she'll give one serial number and then arrange the payment and future meeting. The two guys argue over who she should call if she needs help.

She heads off to the meet. They watch her on security cams. Her tracker is offline and Al isn't surprised. Carrie gets on the elevator and recognizes a guy from the hotel. There are several of them and they throw a bag on her hand, break her cell phone and shove her into a van. Al, Frank and Jay go running in a panic. Jay says they have something. There was a van that left right after she was taken.

Al and Frank are angry and blaming each other. Carrie is driven away in the back of the van but can see some stuff through the window from where she worked her hood off. She notices the sound of planes, feel of a rough road, sounds of ships. Then she's at a warehouse and is pulled out. She's taken into the counterfeiting operation and Padma tanks her hood off.

She says this is not a nice way to start a relationship and says it may affect her Yelp review. They tell Padma she had no trackers on her, but a tail and Carrie says it's her associate. She says to untie her then she'll give the serial number. She asks for a pen and writes it on Padma's hand. She scrawls it there. They go to check it. It clears on the database.

Carrie says they should have more faith and Padma says to give her all the numbers now and live. Carrie says to wire the money and she'll get them because she knows they have to have the numbers to operate. Padma says if the serial numbers don't show up when they wire it, she'll kill her. She asks to use a phone to call her associate to transfer the numbers to the website they want.

She tells Carrie to hurry. She calls Al and they tell Jay to run a trace. She calls Roy and asks if Carl or Darcy are around or he can talk. She says he needs to send the items they talk about in an hour or else. She says then he'll be on a first class flight to Barbados. They hang up the phone on her and Padma crushes it. She gave some codes to help. Al says that Carl was his old partner and Darcy was his wife.

They live in a specific part of town and then they realize where she is in Bayonne. There are 28 minutes left and Padma says she hopes her associate comes through. Carrie says he always does. Padma checks the proofs and then puts a gun to one of her partners. She says she thought the Red Door helps oppressors instead of oppressing people. Carrie tells her that killing the woman won't help her cause.

They drive to figure out why he called her Roy. He says there was a fireman who lived near him that had a corrugated garage. He sends Jay to look for that. They roll up and he tells everyone to fan out and look for the garage. Padma tells them to get rid of the girls. Carrie says she wouldn't since she needs them to fix it. She says the bills need fixing so they don't get pinched. She asks where the dryer is.

Padma tells the girls to do what she says and Carrie says, let's get to work. Al spots an orange corrugated door. He walks towards it and says Roy was a Syracuse fan who painted his door orange. He says to track his phone and Jay says to wait for backup. He leaves his phone under a dumpster, throws away his gun and badge and pounds on the door.

Carrie gives directions on adding pumice to the dryer and says any Seven Eleven clerk could tell. They haul Al in and unbag him. Padma says to kill him but Carrie says it's her associate Roy. Padma slaps the guy who let him follow him. Carrie says she's not better than the people that murdered her parents. Carrie recalls some from the sheet that Frank has and rattles off 5,000 numbers.

She tells Padma to lower her weapons and she'll give her 3,000 more numbers. Frank and the backup are at the warehouse. She hands over thousands more when they hear that an alarm has been breached. They collect up Carrie and the others and she says there was a card on the board that's missing now. She rattles it off and says it's a tail number.

Sure enough, Padma pulls up on a motorcycle to a hangar. She's got cash and a cache of weapons. The Indonesian buyer is there and he trades her the weapons for the cash. She plans to use them against the US. The guy doesn't care about her cause so she shoots him too. The police are there then and a gun battle breaks out. Carrie shoots Padma in the shoulder and they have them all subdued.

Carrie tells Frank that New York gets her first and Frank says there are enough charges to go around. They tell Jay to have at her and he arrests her for Evan's murder. Carrie asks Frank what happens to all the money and he starts a money bonfire. He asks her to dinner and hands over his number. She says he's confident that he'll call and he says she owes him money.

She asks if he trusts her and he says not one bit. Al comes over and says he doesn't like Frank. Then he tells her that he's a player. Al tells Carrie to throw the stack she swiped from the hangar onto the bonfire or he'll arrest her. She asks if he wants to run off to Mexico but then tosses it into the blaze.

The Combination

Carter II (Mr. Parker), Michael Cullen (Casey), Taylor Gildersleeve (Anna)
Summary: Carrie and Al investigate when a championship boxer is beaten to death. The probe focuses on the victim's past and why he apparently didn't defend himself or fight his attacker.

There's a street parade going on to celebrate Italian culture. A guy staggers up, all bruised and battered and collapses in the street. He's recognized as a boxer — Johnny D'Amato and people shout for someone to call 911. Carrie is in a record shop looking at vinyl and some guy is talking about a Red Hot Chili Peppers album. She says the set list isn't what he says. She says the encore was a cover of Dr Funkenstein. She says he's selling a bona fide mix tape.

She gets a call from Al and heads to the crime scene. Johnny is dead. She says she was a fan and just sat near him at the Pacquiao. He's not happy to hear she went with Francis, the secret service guy. He says the guy sure is in New York a lot. Cherie is there and says that Johnny wasn't attacked there and CSU couldn't track the blood trail. Moses, his driver, says he picked up him up and dropped him at 1 pm on Broadway.

Carrie looks around and comes back to Al. She says word on the street is that he threw his last fight and Al says that would piss off a lot of people. Al tells Jay to put a list together of all the people that would have been hurt by him throwing the fight. Jay points out Audre Kade, a rapper, that manages Johnny. Eliot introduces Al to "AK" and says he's donated $100k to finding Johnny's killer. Ak had been managing Johnny for two years and had been a fan for even longer.

Before him, he just had his crusty trainer Casey. Eliot says AK doesn't know anything. Al asks if he threw a fight but AK says Johnny wouldn't have ever done that. He says he was in Vegas for business over the weekend and came to them as soon as he touched down. Al says Eliot is in some odd circles. Eliot tells him to go find out who killed Johnny because everyone is on his ass about it. Joanne tells Al she's a huge boxing fan and used to be the on call doc for boxing matches.

She says COD was asphyxiation from his own blood. She says he had too many breaks to figure anything out. She says he was hit with something but she's not sure what — she says maybe a metal pipe because the injuries are circular. She says she'll know more once she boils his head. Cherie tells AL she spoke to Johnny's mom and she had no clue about him throwing a fight because she didn't watch them. He has an older brother Bobby who hasn't turned up — he's a day laborer. His dad is in Hawaii and isn't in touch.

Jay says AK is in the minority and says social media all thinks Johnny took a dive. Jay shows him fight footage and tells him to look at round three. He just drops his gloves and Al says it doesn't look like the Johnny he knows. Jay and Al digress into a boxing debate and they wonder if he took a dive, who would have gotten him to do it. Al tells him to look at ties to organized crime.

Al says his trainer Casey McGraw would be really mad if he took a dive. Casey had a record for roughing up fighters that didn't win. Al and Carrie head to the gym to talk to Casey. He says everyone loved Johnny. Carrie wants to talk boxing with Casey and rattles off a bunch of stats and asks for just a minute of his time. He tells his boxers to take a break and then sits to talk with them. He's got a split knuckle and says he was at home with his cat when it happened.

Casey says whoever killed Johnny killed him because he was his best. He says there is no way Johnny threw the fight. Carrie says it didn't look good and Casey says he was distracted but he didn't know what was bothering him. He says he was a quiet guy who internalized but would have never taken a dive. He says he wouldn't have done that to him. Carrie asks if he was like a dad to him and he says he and Bobby both. He says he knew Johnny had that special sauce.

Casey says he was a star. He shows them some footage of Johnny sparring with him and says he was quick as a rabbit. Carrie emulates it and Casey tells her to pop her hips at the end. She does and Casey says she's got special sauce too. Al agrees that she's saucy. Jay pokes Al about Sugar Ray then tells him that Johnny had some unusual connection and shows him a woman named Dafina who has ties to the Albanian mob and he filed restraining orders against some of her family.

Agim, Edon, Megi and Dafina. He says they are all scary as hell. Al and Carrie show up to talk to the Albanians. Al hassles her about showing off her boxing skills for Casey. He reminds her she punched him and he says because he was hitting on someone. They show up and find a camera crew there. The guy is excited and runs the camera crew over.

Carrie says they're there about Johnny's murder. Dafina says she knew him from growing up and she says she's been helping him out since high school and says she and her girls all back him like a syndicate. She says they were proud of him. She says he was pissed off about being on their show — Staten Island Syndicate Wives — and took out the restraining orders so they couldn't tape him. She loved him but he was a jerk.

She says Johnny was a homewrecker and says he was banging Magi. She says Magi had the hots for her since high school and was sleeping with someone. He asks if she told Edon and she says she would not have set her brother-in-law up for murder and says that they've been on film all week. A guy shows up yelling that they'll pay for Johnny and Carrie recognizes him as Bobby and calls out to him. He has a baseball bat that he's swinging around and says Johnny is dead because of them.

He says they killed Johnny and Carrie tells him to out the bat down. She says his mother shouldn't have to bury two sons in one week and he puts the bat down then collapses in tears. Al puts his gun away. Carrie says they've been looking for him and he says he's been nowhere. He says he can't believe his brother is gone and says Johnny told him he was afraid of the Albanians. He says they knew Johnny was going to make it big so they took him under his wing.

Bobby says a couple of months ago they wanted him to do something he didn't want to do and wouldn't tell Bobby because he wanted to protect him. He says he shouldn't have gone to work but he needed the money. He says he swore to his mom that he would look out for Johnny and begs them to find who did it. Al says they need to get him home. A producer on the show runs over to talk to them and says he'll get them the footage they want.

He says the footage on them was amazing and says they should do a show — Major Crimes, NYC. He offers them a shot to be cable famous and Al says she's already famous in his eyes and she says it's a no. They head back to the office. Joanne says she thinks he was punched to death and there were no defensive wounds, no drugs and not much alcohol. She shows Carrie scratches and thinks the person was wearing a heavy ring. His lower teeth were knocked out. They look like boxing injuries.

Carrie thinks about the combination Johnny is known for. He was killed by his own combo.

Jay watch footage from the reality show and laughs at the insane drama and profanity. Al says they're bringing in Casey. Jay shows them some footage. Edon and Magi are arguing about him wearing a pink tie. Jay says the alibis are air tight and shows them cursing at the camera crews in their bedroom.

Jay says the show is addictive and shows Agim getting a pedicure. Carrie points out a girl in the footage and recognizes her — she was in a photo on Casey's desk — his granddaughter Anna. She's in the reality footage with Johnny and is seen in the background. Carrie says the two were clearly in a relationship and Carrie thinks she may be pregnant. Jay pulls up her address and they think that's where he was before he died and maybe Casey was there.

Carrie says she doesn't think it was him. He calls Cherie and she's at Casey's gym and tells them that he's dead — looks like a gunshot wound.

At the gym, Cherie says it doesn't look like a robbery and Al says it can't be a coincidence. Anna is there and she asks why everyone is dying. Al asks her about Johnny and is surprised he knows. He asks who would want to hurt Casey and she says everyone loved him and that he was like a father to half the kids in the neighborhood. She says other fighters might have had it in for Johnny but she never saw the side of him that was the killer in the ring. She says he was gentle.

Al asks her about the baby and she says she lost it six weeks ago on a Sunday. Al says he's sorry and she says Johnny was sweet when she told him the news. She says he told her that she had made him see what was important and he said he was going to retire and open a gym. She says they talked about it the morning he died and they were going to tell Casey, get married and try for another baby.

Anna is distraught. Al explains to Cheri that's why Johnny lost the fight — he had just found out about the miscarriage. Bobby has an alibi and the slug from Casey's is a 9 mm. Al recalls that AK's bodyguard packs that. Al asks AK about Johnny's retirement and his dislike for Casey. They break the news that Casey is dead and he says he didn't want that. Al says they think he had his bodyguard kill Johnny and Casey and says they know his bodyguard Parker wasn't on his private plane.

Carrie asks for Parker's gun and then she asks AK what it's like to kiss a girl with a lip ring. She says he's the one that Magi has been sleeping with. She says the Albanian mob won't like to hear that. Parker hands over the gun and AK says Eliot won't be happy about that. She takes his other piece as well. Cherie points out bloody pallets and a shirt a homeless guy found.

Carrie looks around and then says the pallets haven't moved since yesterday. She says they're set up like a hiding place. She crouches behind them and then looks over at the cop cars. She recalls the set up from the street fair and then thinks about the police line and says he could have walked right out. She thinks about what she saw and then recalls a guy with a Fire Department shirt on. She says Bobby was there and he lied about not being there. She says she saw him.

Al and Carrie head to the construction site where Bobby has been laboring. They tell him they need to talk and he takes off at a run. They give chase. Al calls in for back-up. Carrie is hot on his heels and he trips her and she loses her gun. He locks her outside of a floor and then when Al comes in, he whacks him and takes him down. Carrie runs down the scaffolding outside to try and intercept. She hops into a plastic garbage chute and then nails him with a one-two punch.

Al tells Bobby that it's going to hurt for a while and says she popped her hip. Carrie says they found his brother's blood on his toolbox and his brother's championship ring that he killed him with. Carrie says he impressed her by pulling the stunt at the reality shoot then having someone punch his time card to alibi him. She says she knows Johnny was supporting him but then cut him off about a month ago.

Bobby says he begged him to keep helping him but he said no. He says he went to the festival to talk to him but he wouldn't listen, so he hit him. Carrie says he wouldn't hit you back and he says his brother thought he was nothing and that's why he wouldn't hit back. He says he didn't mean to kill him. Al says the most he'll get is manslaughter for Johnny and they need more to get him on Casey.

Carrie says she met Casey and didn't like him. She asks what he thought of him. Bobby says he wanted to train and was there first — sweeping up when he was 10. He says once Casey saw Johnny, he was done with him and wouldn't even let him in to watch his brother box. He says he asked to work for them at the new gym he was starting with Casey but Casey said to cut him off and called him a parasite. Carrie says that Casey was the parasite and she says it's all Casey's fault.

Carrie says she would have shot him through the heart and Bobby says that's why he killed him — he took everything from him. Bobby says he never meant to hurt Johnny. Carrie says she believes him. Eliot and Al watch as she gets both confessions. Later, she smiles at Al and Eliot calls her the confession whisperer. He says he likes the empathy card she played and she says it's a rope a dope.

Eliot says AK doubled the reward money and donated it to the local Boys and Girls Club and a case of vodka to major crimes. Eliot says he couldn't accept it and Carrie asks if it's in his trunk and Al says it's in his Hamptons House and Eliot says it's a place they're never invited again. Al asks if she's dating Francis and he hassles him and he says next time, he's the one taking her to a fight. She says let's do it right here and now. She stands and squares off against him. They fake spar. She punches him right in the kisser.

Summary: Carrie and Al delve into the murky waters of office politics and government scandals when a reporter who broke a salacious story about the director of the NSA is found murdered. Meanwhile, Agent Simms returns to assist Carrie, and Al reconnects with an old girlfriend who may be able to help on the case.

Annabel, a reporter who exposed NSA official General Clearance's alleged involvement in a scandal, makes headline news again when her body is found inside a hotel room. Joanne cites accidental overdose as the cause of death. However, Carrie begs to differ. She recalls seeing a recent news broadcast where Annabel is seen writing with her left hand. People can't or normally don't use their less than dominant hand to shoot themselves up with. Since Annabel's needle mark is in her left arm, Carrie rules her death as homicide as they all stand back looking amazed. So who saw fit to give poor Annabel a hot shot and why?

Naturally, the almost-disgraced general is a prime suspect, but fresh flowers found in a vase at Annabel's apartment with note signed by the initials DG lead Carrie to suspect there might have been some hanky-panky going on between Annabel and her boss, Donovan Gates. He denies it of course.

Al tries to pump his former flame and contact, Lt. Colonel Emily Connors for information but she is a loyal General Clearance supporter and she warns Al to tread lightly on the matter. Meanwhile, Agent Sims is back in town to pretty much warn Carrie of the same thing. There is a whole lot of flirting going on amongst these four.

After noticing a mystery man on the elevator of the hotel, Al and Carrie track down a former cameraman of Annabel who was also smitten with the young reporter. According to him, the hotel has a secret stairwell for celebrities to use in order to escape those pesky paparazzi types. Annabel often used the hotel room to interview folk who valued discretion. The crime-fighting duo later find another cameraman who has in his possession photos of General Clearage leaving the hotel a half an hour from the time Annabel got off the elevator.

Annabel's assistant, Matt, suddenly quits right before it's discovered he is the one behind her missing emails. Matt is a super computer geek who is eventually found murdered also. The murderer took out Matt motherboard with a bullet to the head.

Al meets with Emily again. This time she gives him a hint: check out a certain book from the library. He does and after a few mumbo-jumbo code breaking moments, the NYPD's system is hacked and Carrie receives an invitation to meet with this mastermind.

Carrie enters a building that is so dark until all she can see is the silhouette of a woman and the infrared dots over her body as hidden sharp shooters keep their weapons trained on her. The lady, who apparently is part of some secret agency, promptly tells Carrie if she starts to feel nervous then Carrie is a goner. The mystery woman said "they" only wanted to block the general's appointment. Annabel was an asset. No government agency was behind the deaths of Annabel or Matt.

After Al finally gets his chance to chat with the general, we learn the whole scandal story was a fake. Annabel had a conscience and wanted to fix things. That was what their meeting at the hotel was about. So who didn't want her to set things right? Turns out it was the network's golden boy Pemberton Ward. He just couldn't fathom having a retracted story out there thus ruining the network's reputation. To Pemberton, it was more than a job. The boss and co-workers were family. Hmm, yet he thought it necessary to rub out two members of his "family."
