Summary: After an emotional breakup, super FBI agent, Will Chase, is assigned to work with hard-hearted CIA agent, Frankie Trowbridge.

The episode begins with Will Chase listening to very depressing music as he constantly breaks down crying. He wipes his tears as he gets a call from Ray Prince who says he is busy out saving the day. Will "Whiskey" takes a moment to absorb a lost memory and then asks Prince to give him the play on Stephen Conrad who is their target. He has stolen ebola pathogen to sell.

Whiskey is set up for the takedown, but Prince tells him they need to abort as he is stuck in traffic thanks to a soccer match. He has no backup nor cash, but he doesn't want to stand down; grabbing some flowers to put on a grave. The exchange goes wrong as the man with Dr. Conrad shoots him and takes off with the vial. Whiskey gives chase, even following him onto a boat off the bridge. He takes a woman hostage, removing the pathogen from its vial. Whiskey runs after him, but as the man gets hit by a car, he is able to jump and save the vial from smashing on the ground. He turns to see a proposal happening, making him tear up mid-mission. The man pulls his gun and shoots Whiskey in the chest but he is wearing a bulletproof vest and kills the offender, complaining about how Paris is definitely not the city of love.

Ray tell Whiskey he should have listened to him as he confesses that he was leaving a girl's apartment and got completely turned around, but it wasn't worth Whiskey's life. Will goes to the bathroom, calling Susan Samson who asks him to move back there. They talk about his ex, Susan says there are a lot of feelings there but he needs to take it one day at a time; promising they will eat ice cream on the phone together later. Their call is cut short as Alex Ollerman interrupts them.

In Ollerman's office, he feels Will needs some time off and there are no private moments in the FBI. He knows it was a rough breakup as they all have the footage. Will chugs his drink as he is told he is a huge asset to the bureau but instead of benching him, he gives him the case of going after Edgar Standish who hacked the state department, stole classified information and was nabbed up by the Russians. His mission is to go to Moscow and retrieve him within 48 hours.

Russia — Ray and Whiskey arrive at a bar where Will orders a drink and meets Frankie Trowbridge who joins him for the same drink. She says her name is Valerie Time and is there on a medical conference. He bores her with his sales pitch about sprinkler systems as she says she shouldn't be out as she just broke up with her boyfriend. Will ignores Ray's words and empathizes with her, giving her courage and saying she has her feelings but they don't have her. The guys are walking Edgar out and she throws a bomb that blows out the windows. Whiskey attempts to leave but finds she handcuffed him to the bar, taking out her gun she takes off.

She shoots the men around Edgar as Whiskey says the target has been compromised. The sexy woman takes off with Edgar, but Will can't take his car as they are about to tow it, so he steals the police car and gives chase. He shouts for her to pull over, but she smiles and says no. Frankie calls him relentless as he exits his car in front of her, saying he is Will Chase an FBI agent. She drives forward and hits him with it, saying she will take his gun and whoever is in his car. She stomps out the bud before taking off with Will tied up in the front. He learns she is a CIA agent, as he scoffs at her and they both argue who has the rights to Edgar. As they banter, Edgar comments on the sexual tension in the car.

Frankie introduces them both to Dimitri, warning them not to do anything stupid as he is aching to shoot them. Edgar begs for Will to help him, but Frankie tells him if she lets Will go he is going to compromise her; everyone talks about how Will is sensitive over his heartbreak. Edgar refuses to give up his information because it is the only thing keeping him alive.

Will and Edgar are cut free as Dimitri takes Edgar away and tells Will to get dressed. A helicopter arrives as Frankie is sure it is over between the two of them, but Will breaks free from his restraints and grabs her while Dimitri bombs the chopper.

Will grabs the gun and shoots Dimitri repeatedly, he informs Frankie that this is an FBI operation now and takes her and Edgar to the car. Susan calls Ray wanting to know where Will is; she is an FBI profiler and knows he is a liar, saying if Will is in harm's way she will come after him as she doesn't really like him.

Frankie admits that Dimitri was a mercenary as Will is sorry about her boyfriend. She says you can't hate a wolf for being a wolf when she learns he betrayed her when Edgar gave him bitcoin to give him over to the FBI. He feels it is sad that she doesn't do emotional entrapments; she has studied his file and wouldn't get suckered into paying off someone's student loans. Will spots a wedding, coming up with the idea of them playing the newlywed game to get them through the checkpoint.

When she gains his trust, she slams on the brakes and smacks his head on the dashboard, placing him in the trunk with Edgar. Edgar managed to steal her handcuff keys but they are in his pocket, leaving Will to retrieve them. She cranks up the music and takes off to meet Jai Datta the bartender, who chastises her as he gave her the perfect set up. She admits she may have messed up but at least she hasn't lost the target.

Edgar complains that if he still does this, he ends up in supermax and Will ends up the hero but he always wanted to be the hero; Will wonders if that is why he stole the data. Jai tells Frankie he loves her but there are just some battles she cannot win alone. He encourages her to stop pushing everyone away. He hands her a bag of weapons and other gear, but when she opens the trunk to give Will food he jumps out and attacks her; after a physical fight, Will is able to put her in the trunk.

Will and Edgar travel on to Furth, Germany as Edgar reveals everything he was doing and how he saw patterns of corruption within the agency and someone among the good guys is working for the bad guys. On the train, he continues to explain that he was never going to sell the data, he was trying to protect it. They sit on the train when Will calls Susan saying he needs some information; who wants to know what has been going on; the call begins to break up as Susan says she wants the badass CIA agent as her new best friend and doesn't believe he shook her. The call ends as Frankie sits down in front of them, asking if they missed her?

She reveals she found him as she had a micro tracker on him. Frankie has a gun held to Will when she begins to talk to Susan, both sharing their admiration for each other until Frankie reveals they have been made and there is a $200,000 bounty on their heads. They immediately get off the train in Lyon, France where they spot several hitters. Will and Frankie work together to get out of the station alive, but Will and Edgar are stopped in a locker room, but together with Frankie, they are able to stop the three men.

Frankie calls for a taxi, but the driver shoots her. Will kills the driver as Frankie insists she is fine but he knows better. Will barges into Ray's place, telling him to tie up Edgar, but their sexy British friend has lost a lot of blood. The good news is it is a through and through but Will says they cannot wait for a medic and needs to get in there to stop the infection from killing her. He tells her to start trusting people, or for now, just him as he'd hate to lose her when things just start to get interesting. Edgar passes out as Frankie screams. He promises it will heal up nicely but she is passed out.

Will asks if he is interrupting something as he spots two glasses on the floor. Gigi walks in and Will slugs him in the face, realizing Ray is with his ex-fiance. They have been together for 7 months and Will aggressively attacks him when he figures out Ray was with her when he got shot. Gigi attempts to jump in but Edgar chastises her for the 7 months. Alex Ollerman walks in, saying a lot has transpired since he disappeared in Moscow, but he is only there to take Edgar into custody and he knows the drive is in his tooth. When Edgar refuses, he pulls out his gun, pressing it to Edgar's mouth he demands him to open it. Everyone squirms as he removes the tooth and Ollerman says he is feeling generous and will leave this out of the report. Will insists that since he is the agent he needs to bring in the suspect himself, which irks Ollerman as he wants to know why he always has to be a boy scout. He aims his gun at Will as Ray shields Gigi.

Will realizes it was Ollerman who has been selling the weapons overseas as it was Edgar who wanted Ray to go to the buy, not Will. He says he keeps Ray around because he never checks the seals on the evidence locker, and that is why he kept the idiot around. He shoots Ray and the blast wakes up Frankie, who sees the gun pointing at Will. Will sees what she is doing, when she opens a tampon that is a bomb, it knocks Alex to the ground as Will checks on Frankie. Alex goes for his gun and Edgar kicks a knife to Will who throws it into Alex's chest.

New York City — Back at the New York City field office of the FBI, the agents are welcomed home as officially none of this occurred. They are not sweeping it under the rug, and have a new assignment for them as Edgar is not in prison but hailed a hero. Susan welcomes Will home and thrilled to meet Frankie. They are getting on a plane with Jai and Edgar and are officially working as a team.

Show Stars: Scott Foley (FBI agent Will Chase), Lauren Cohan (CIA agent Francesca "Frankie" Trowbridge), Ana Ortiz (FBI profiler Susan Sampson), Tyler James Williams (NSA analyst Edgar Standish), Josh Hopkins (FBI agent Ray Prince), Vir Das (CIA agent Jai Datta)
Guest Stars: Bellamy Young (Karen Pappas), Matthew Marsh (Director Casey), Nansi Nsue (Hana), Andrej Polák (Anton), Eveline Hall (Mrs. Schubert), Ermin Sijamija (Stavros Pappas), Daniel Kamen (Morgue Employee #1), Lukás Bech (Morgue Employee #2), Alia Seror-O'Neill (Beer Delivery Woman)
Production Code: T13.21453
Summary: The team is sent to Prague for their first official mission where Will has to seduce the widow of a notorious shipping tycoon in order to gain access to a list of criminal clients, but Frankie doubts his ability to deceive a grieving woman.

Team Whiskey's first mission takes them to Prague, Czech Republic, recovering a ledger that could take down much of the world's criminal network. Team Whiskey launches an operation to obtain a ledger easily considered as the world's most wanted list. Agent Will Chase and Agent Frankie Trowbridge clash over Will's emotional methods. Meanwhile, FBI profiler Susan Samson keeps tabs on fellow team members Agent Jai Datta and Edgar Standish.

Jai prided himself in using his fancy spy gadgets. At the first part of the mission, Jai deployed a remote-controlled miniature vehicle that had both a GoPro attached to it and an add-on capability. As Susan points out that he is playing with a toy, he insists that the RC is not a toy. However, his enjoyment while driving past pedestrians made it evident that it is what Susan said it is. Regardless, the RC served its purpose as it gassed the occupants of the target's car.

Edgar was a different issue. While both he and Jai deny Susan's assessment at first, Edgar continually lies to everyone around him. Perhaps to him, it is a habit. Susan takes note of Edgar's lie as they set up their 'bar' hideout. Edgar lies to a delivery lady to get her number. During the second phase of their mission, Susan gives him her harsh assessment of Edgar, a rebuttal to Edgar's constant lying. Because of this, Edgar decides to change his ways, but he overdoes this, admitting more than what the lady needed to know about him. Edgar's sticking to the truth is good, but oversharing about his life ultimately scared the lady away.

Because of the nature of their missions, Team Whiskey needed someone in charge of service support. Unfortunately, it was difficult for the bureau to find anyone willing to take a demanding job. The best that they could come up with was to put Agent Ray Prince in this position, much to the team's dismay. Josh and Will's friendship went downhill after the cheating incident, and it perhaps is beyond repair.

After they complete the mission, Frankie decides to give Josh a warning. He may have been doing an okay job so far, but he should not be too comfortable with them. To drive home the point, Frankie cuts Josh's car's brakes, willing to risk his life. What Josh did to Will is unforgivable, and if he continues to attempt a fix to their lost friendship, it will distract Will from whatever mission they needed to do.

Team Whiskey's mission is to abduct Stavros Pappas, a smuggler who supplies major criminal elements with their needs. He keeps a ledger containing the names of his criminal customers in safe unlocked using his retinal scan. Taking him down meant the start of breaking down the world's largest criminal networks. However, an assassin named Hana Novak manages to kill Stavros first. Team Whiskey may have gotten away with Stavros' eye from the morgue, but they now needed his estranged wife, Karen Pappas' retinal scan, two, since the safe required both Stavros' and Karen's retinal scans.

Since Karen and Stavros do not have close relations anymore, Team Whiskey decides to have Will seduce her into giving them what they needed. Despite Will's considerably emotional methods, the mission went smoothly. Suddenly, Novak and her henchmen crash Will and Karen's date, but Will and Frankie held their ground and emerged victorious over their enemies. Thankful and amazed, Karen agrees to help them unlock Stavros' safe.

Before any of them realized, Karen and Hana revealed that they work together. As soon as Karen, Will, and Frankie reach and unlock the safe, Karen drops her deceptive act and burns the ledger as she held it. Team Whiskey manages to block Karen and Hana's van in time for Will and Frankie's escape from the vault. After a shootout and a chase in the metro station, Will captures Karen as Frankie eliminates Hana. Thanks to Karen's photographic memory, the bureau gained all the intel they needed from the ledger without having to obtain it physically. This mission is the first of many that Team Whiskey will launch and accomplish.

When in Rome

Guest Stars: Christos Vasilopoulos (Marco), Michael Yale (Prime Minister)
Production Code: T13.21452
Summary: Will and Frankie continue to clash, and their growing pains may jeopardize the team's next mission in Rome where they are sent to prevent a terrorist attack.

The team's mission is to stop Luca Crudele, Italian Neo-Fascist Group Fascia Rossa's Billionaire backer from bombarding the city with a biological weapon. Aimed at having immigrants move out of the town, Fascia Rossa wants to use the bomb and blame the carnage on the immigrants. The team's only way of stopping this is to get to Thomas Andrews, the designer of the bomb. Despite the team's leaders' clashes, they successfully abduct Andrews from a gala organized by Crudele. However, Frankie's former colleague, Marco encounters her and blows the whistle on them. Still, the team escapades, taking Andrews with them.

Regardless of Frankie's strong insistence against Will's plan, the team ultimately heads out to save Andrews' daughter, Isabella, from Fascia Rossa. Unfortunately, Crudele and his men reach Isabella first and abduct her. In the chaos, Marco manages to shoot Andrews, Jai takes friendly fire from Edgar, and both Frankie and Will lose Marco to the crowd. Luckily, Jai managed to place a tracker on Marco's bike, so they follow the signal.

The signal takes them to the town plaza, where large crowds gather to in celebration of a local festival. Since the bomb emits some strange signal, Jai and Edgar quickly find its location. However, when Frankie and Will look around them, they see nothing. The screens tell Jai and Edgar that the Agents stood within the signal's source. Luckily, Will's quick thinking helps them realize what is going on: the bomb is underground.

Will and Frankie easily found the bomb due to its massive size. Initially, Marco has the element of surprise as he ambushed both Agents. Still, the duo manages to take Marco down. Now they had a more immediate concern: bomb defusing. While Susan quickly disperses the crowd above, Will carefully guides Frankie through removing the bomb's intricate trigger. Thankfully, the Agents keep the weapon from exploding. Regardless of Marco's planted booby trap on the trigger, Will and Frankie leave the sewers alive, saving both the city and the team.

Whiskey and Fiery officially end the mission by rescuing Andrews' daughter, Isabelle. Just as Crudele thought that their tracks are clean, the Agents make the grandest of all entrances, picking off Crudele's goons one by one. The innocent looking child looked into Frankie's eyes, thankful for her rescue. Will smiled as he saw Frankie lift Isabelle and head out of the sketchy area.

More often than not, a team's tech guys usually get along. Team Whiskey seems to be an exception to this rule as Jai and Edgar get on each other's nerves. Since Edgar has no field experience nor weapons training, Jai refuses to issue him a gun. Edgar accepts this fact and wishes only to learn, but the members of the team seem reluctant to train him. Were it not for Susan's intervention, Jai and Edgar would probably end up jeopardizing the mission due to their differences. The heat of the action often make the Agents say questionable things, but Team Whiskey's tech guys know how to get past them.

Frankie saw Will's emotion as a significant problem to the team. To her, having attachments keeps an Agent from making the right decisions during desperate times. On the other hand, Will views attachments as a team's strength as it ensures that all team members have each others' backs. Throughout the mission, Will tries to pry into Frankie's soft spot, but to no avail. It did not take a genius to figure out Will's opening up strategy, so Frankie found herself constantly blocking his attempts. In multiple occasions, Will and Frankie clashed. Perhaps the only time they ever got along was during life-threatening situations.

No amount of arguments, friendly fire incidents, or seemingly impossible odds to beat kept Team Whiskey from completing a mission. The end of Fascia Rossa meant the team's continued operation. Yes, there are some things that they would have to work out, both individually and as a team. However, the pros of having them handle the world's toughest high profile cases outweighed the cons. Team Whiskey is sure to handle whatever the Bureau throws at them.

Mrs. & Mr. Trowbridge

Season 1
Episode Number: 4
Season Episode: 4

Originally aired: Wednesday March 20, 2019
Writer: Sheri Elwood
Director: Romeo Tirone
Show Stars: Scott Foley (FBI agent Will Chase), Lauren Cohan (CIA agent Francesca "Frankie" Trowbridge), Ana Ortiz (FBI profiler Susan Sampson), Tyler James Williams (NSA analyst Edgar Standish), Josh Hopkins (FBI agent Ray Prince), Vir Das (CIA agent Jai Datta)
Guest Stars: Erika Kaar (Iona), Razvan Vasilescu (General Andrei Zimborean), Costin Sforaru (Vasily Chebu), Lourdes Faberes (Michelle Ito), Dan Bradford (Consul General Miguel Costa), Alix Bénézech (Mistress), Ivo Novák (Guard)
Production Code: T13.21455
Summary: Will and Frankie head to Paris where they must grudgingly pose as a married couple to infiltrate a wedding and capture a genocidal Romanian general.

General Andrei Zimborean has a stash of a dangerous bioweapon. Right after his daughter, Iona's wedding, he plans to release it and kill his people. Iona's fiancé, Paul, is an undercover Interpol Agent and has been monitoring General Zimborean for over five years. Now, the Bureau assigns Team Whiskey to work with Paul to intercept the General and stop him from committing mass murder.

Edgar and Jai often clash ever since they started working together. Edgar prefers a messy workplace, and he has no system of organizing his articles. Jai, on the other hand, is a control freak. He is highly controlling and is very meticulous, and this has helped him in his work. However, his behavior makes it hard for people to deal with him, hence his clashes with Edgar. Still, Team Whiskey's Tech Guys eventually get along as Jai apologizes to Edgar in his own, adorable way.

Unfortunately, Susan's profiling skills are necessary for finding the General through waves of the wedding's guests, so she has to stay behind. On the field, Will and Frankie clash, making Will unintentionally lash out on Susan. Because of this, Susan let her bad feeling about being left behind take over. Luckily, Ray Prince comes over to Team Whiskey's headquarters. Susan was off comms, and the team needed her help. Ray reassures her that sitting the mission out does not necessarily mean that she is not required. On the contrary, her skills are an invaluable asset to the team. With that, Susan returns to the comms and leads the team to take the right course of action.

To infiltrate the wedding, Will and Frankie pose as Mr. & Mrs. Flemming. Will's disguise is Dan Flemming, Paul's old college buddy. Frankie, on the other hand, is Mary Flemming, Dan's loving wife. As usual, Will and Frankie fight over their differences. Frankie criticizes Will for mixing his emotions with the mission at hand. Will, on the other hand, points out Frankie's unconventional, emotionless approach when it comes to carrying out their objectives. Also, they almost lose their cover when assassin Michelle Ito recognizes Will.

Throughout the mission, Will and Frankie each get an instance to prove themselves to each other. Frankie attracts Vasily Chebu, a wedding guest, to gain intel on the General's whereabouts. On the other hand, Will joins Paul to strategize a new plan when the General does not show up as scheduled. Before the wedding day, Will and Frankie argue once more. When they join forces to drug and abduct the General fails since he used a body double, Will and Frankie finally decide to leave for Romania, thinking that the General is there.

Thanks to Susan's intervention, Will and Frankie get their heads straight and spot General there, wearing a disguise. In contrast to Will and Frankie, Paul has trouble with carrying out the mission. Paul fell in love with Iona, and this kept him from shooting General Zimbreaan and Iona's escape vehicle. Fortunately, Jai and Edgar track their location, sending the Agents to stop Zimbreaan's runaway plane. A dramatic series of events ensue when Iona and Andrei exit the aircraft while the Agents aim to arrest him. Iona turns on her father, giving Frankie the chance to shoot the General's leg. With the mission done, Paul and Iona enjoy their wedding. Sadly, Will and Frankie's potential to have a relationship bitterly ends as Will turns down Frankie's attempt to emotionally connect with him.

Five Spies and a Baby

Production Code: T13.21457
Summary: The team must return a kidnapped baby to its parents while also taking down the human trafficking network that led to his capture.

With the entire team out to find intel on their latest case, Ray stays at their hideout, monitoring their progress. To his surprise, Emma visits him there, eager to get to know about Will's former best friend. As they talked, Emma figures out Ray's personality considerably quickly. She saw her old self in him: wrecking friendships in exchange for the rush of hidden romantic ones. Because of this, Emma decides to help Ray work on his bad behavior by giving him a journal. In her case, writing things down became therapeutic, and it helped her change to who she is today. In return, Ray tells her everything he knows about Will, happily watching her give Will a gift upon their arrival.

Jai may have agreed to join the team in their off-the-books mission, but he avoided the baby as often as he could. To him, babies are unpredictable and uncontrollable, which is everything that goes against how he does things. Edgar Standish (Tyler James Williams), however, begs to differ. He encourages Jai never to limit his options. Also, he mentions how Jai changed from his self-reserved behavior to the more friendly personality he has now, specifically within the short period that they work together. Up until the baby's return to his mother, Jai held the baby, thinking that Edgar may be right.

Frankie Trowbridge (Lauren Cohan) decided to put their career first, choosing not to act to her and Will's emotional connection. Now that Will has a girlfriend, Frankie finds it hard not to express what she feels. Luckily, Susan Sampson (Ana Ortiz) is there for her, listening to what she has to say and generally being Frankie's sounding board. Also, Susan keeps Frankie from lashing out especially when Will snaps on her. However, Will apologizes later that day, thanking Frankie for not making a big deal out of his actions. It also happened to be Will's birthday that day, so Frankie has her revenge by starting the group's singing "Happy Birthday" to Will, who in turn covers his face with a blanket.

Will and Jai's mission sounded quite simple: steal the drug traffickers' supply of opioids from them without incident. However, as Will and Jai parked the truck in the garage, they hear a baby crying in one of its containers. Since the government had trouble taking down the people who run the black market, Team Whiskey decides to help them. Much to the team's surprise, the criminals Will and Jai encountered at the warehouse are no other than the Chief of Police, Vlad Kozlov (Goran Stjepanovic) and his right hand, Martyna Lazinsky (Marika Dominczyk), former Polish Special Ops. Fortunately, Will and Frankie make it out of the station before they got followed.

While Will and Frankie reach out to parents of missing children, Martyna catches Susan, Jai, and Edgar off guard. With the help of a tracker hidden in the baby's teddy bear, Martyna traces their location. Meanwhile, Vlad sends one of his men to Will and Frankie's position: the home of the baby's mother, Simona Borisov (Alena Doláková). By the time Will and Frankie got back to their hiding spot, Vlad and Martyna already left with the baby. Luckily, Edgar manages to reverse engineer the teddy bear's tracker signal.

Martyna Lazinsky turns out to be Martyna Marek, a deep undercover CIA Agent who monitored Vlad's cartel for years. Now that she has the chance to end Vlad's criminal career for good, she enlists Team Whiskey's help to take down his entire Criminal Network. Their operation's off-the-books status came in quite handy, giving them the freedom to move about their means.

With two CIA Agents and an FBI Agent in their fold, Vlad's goons stood no chance against Team Whiskey. After Martyna's signal, Will and Frankie took care of Vlad's goons while Jai, Edgar, and Susan acquired the truck full of people Vlad abducted. Just as Martyna gained the upper hand against Vlad, Will and Frankie reach them. Vlad's empire took less than ten minutes to eradicate thanks to their combined and well-coordinated strike. Back at the headquarters, Team Whiskey returns the baby, nicknamed 'Baby Will,' to Simona.

Summary: Will, Frankie and Susan are joined by Will's new girlfriend as they head to Spain on a mission to retrieve a case of plutonium from the wrong hands.

It is as if fate smiled on Edgar as he suddenly gets what he wants. After the briefing on their next mission, Edgar rambles about wanting a nemesis. When they reach the office, he receives just that: a British Operative named Todd. Todd mocks him and all Americans in general, mentioning how Edgar stole his desk since Todd left on a sabbatical. Also, while Edgar played coffee basketball in the canteen, he runs into Tina, who asks him out on a date. Edgar was having the time of his life.

Team Whiskey reunites behind one cause this time: setting up the perfect date between Edgar and Tina. While Edgar fidgeted and panicked over what he should do on the meetup, Team Whiskey gathered intel on Tina. In a war room like discussion, they compared Edgar and Tina's profile with one thing in mind: boosting Edgar's confidence. All seemed to go well in the planning until Ray messes up, telling Edgar that Tina is into Alpha types of guys. In what became (arguably) the most awkward scene of the season, Edgar blows their date as he pretended to be someone he is not.

Team Whiskey reunites behind one cause this time: setting up the perfect

Wishing that things would be better for Edgar, Ray and Susan plan a different date. This time, it did not involve any fancy bars or gold-stripped teeth. Instead, they had Edgar and Tina in a surveillance van, without their knowledge. Once both Edgar and Tina were there, he apologizes for their first meet up. Thankfully, Edgar shows Tina his true self, which Tina enjoys.

The new mission involves background on Will's personal life. A stolen case of plutonium was at risk of falling into the wrong hands. Their target, Jimmy Coleman, once worked with Will during his time as a Marine. Jimmy was a great guy, but since then, he took advantage of his service and made himself rich by dealing with arms. At some point of their tour, Will's humvee became under friendly fire from no other than Jimmy himself. Also, Ray made the mistake of pulling Emma out of her mission and into Will and Frankie's. Will is every bit as disappointed at Ray as Emma was disappointed with Will not asking Ray to change the situation.

Will and Frankie are the best at their job, and Jimmy was dumb enough to hire two goons that knew nothing about their situation. Taking the plutonium went smoothly, and they knew how Jimmy would work, so they plot a different escape route. Since they had time on their side, Will and Frankie made themselves comfortable in an unoccupied vacation house that Team Whiskey found. However, their Wine and Cheese before bedtime abruptly stops as Emma arrives.

Will, Frankie, and Emma could have left with the plutonium the next morning, but Frankie was not about letting Will's nemesis roam free. After all, Jimmy was the only person that Will ever hated. With that, Will, Frankie, and Emma set up a rendezvous meant to entrap Jimmy. After confusing Jimmy by exchanging three identical bags, Will finally leads Jimmy and his goons to a secluded area of their rendezvous point. Realizing that they fooled him, Jimmy pointed his gun at Will's head, but Frankie and the Police quickly surrounded them. Jimmy does not go free this time, and Will finally punches him in the face.

As per tradition, Team Whiskey celebrates its successful mission. Also, Ray was not asked to leave this time, and Emma joins the Team during their toast. Will and Frankie happily reminisce their vacation-like moment before they went to the rest of the team.

Summary: The team heads to Europe to transport a dangerous prisoner for interrogation, and the prisoner is Will's former boss; Jai helps organize a Secret Santa gift exchange for an off-season Spy Christmas.

Will, Frankie, and Edgar stare in disbelief as the correctional officers unmask the prisoner. Ollerman has a smirk on his face as if he knew how exactly the events would occur. Suspiciously, Ollerman was right. An ambush on their convoy happens, eliminating all their escorts. Will, Frankie, and Edgar manage to retake the van and bring Ollerman with them. Now, the orders from above are to interrogate Ollerman in their headquarters.

Even as he sat in the heart of the enemy territory, Ollerman maintained his smug aura. He utilizes psychological warfare against the team, spilling secrets about their profiles as they listened. Ollerman's tactics almost work. Outside the interrogation room, Team Whiskey started arguing with each other. Since Susan Sampson profiled each of them, she wrote all the things that Ollerman blurts out.

Ollerman's endgame seems to be to have the team fall apart, just as he is the reason for the team's formation. With Susan abducted by Todd who works for Ollerman, Frankie decided that they should pretend to play along with Ollerman's game. As they fulfilled Ollerman's list of demands, Frankie defects to Ollerman. She goes as far to prove her loyalty by shooting Will twice.

Meanwhile, Ray and Jai handle Susan's rescue. This time, Will made it clear that he trusted Ray and his ability to improvise. Because of this, Ray barges into the room with seemingly no plan in mind, but whatever Ray did works. Ray tricks Todd and the goons into thinking that he works for Ollerman too before his incredible way of taking them all out. Todd stood there, pointing a gun at Susan's head. Once again, Ray fools Todd into looking at him, giving Jai a clean shot without endangering Susan.

Ollerman, on the other hand, thought that he could get away with trying to kill Frankie. Will reaches them in time to stop Ollerman from doing so. While Frankie did not agree with how Will is bartering her life for Ollerman's, she has little choice. Ollerman does escape but not with what he thinks he has. Instead of the data that contained his terrorist organization's funds, Will replaced the chip in Ollerman's ring with one that has photos of him on vacation.

Edgar could not get his mind off of Tina Marek's mission. They have started dating, and their setup is something new to Edgar. Because of this, his worries get the best of him as he sent an awkward voicemail to Tina, clearly uncomfortable with the idea of her seducing a different man for work purposes. When their missions are finally over, they have the chance to talk about what happened. Tina found Edgar's message sweet, and she even gave him a gift to try to make him feel better. In return, Edgar promises to adjust to the nature of their relationship.

Ray's outburst when he found out that Ollerman is in the building left him in a fit of rage. Team Whiskey then decides to have Jai handle calming him down. Not only would that help Jai improve his social skills, but it would also keep Ray from doing something dangerous. Their chance to get back at Ollerman and his goons come when Will puts Ray in charge of saving Susan. After what they did, they seem to make a good partnership. When the mission ends, Edgar approaches Jai with his gift for him while Will gives Ray a pat on his shoulder. A lot of things are improving for Team Whiskey's cunning men. Susan happily watched as the people she works with now change from her initial assessments.

Production Code: T13.21454
Summary: Frankie is forced to prove herself when Will is captured during a mission to take down an organ harvesting operation; Will spends his time in captivity trying to bond with Jai; Standish seeks Frankie's help to improve his combat skills.

Team Whiskey did not expect to be brought back to the field anytime soon. Their first target, Big time South East Asian Heroin Importer Ethan McElroy was reasonably easy to catch, given his health condition. What the team did not expect, however, is his link to an Internal Organ Harvesting Ring. McElroy badly needed a new heart and was in contact with them. Also, since McElroy preferred to keep a low profile, none of the criminals have seen personally. With that, the team decides to send Edgar out to disguise as McElroy when they meet the Harvesters.

Everything seemed to work in their favor; perhaps almost too good. Will found a spot to give the team cover in case the team blew their cover. Also, Jai waited outside with their getaway vehicle. Frankie, Edgar, and Susan Sampson disguised as McElroy and his bodyguards. They were making the exchange of money when a guard who used to work for the real McElroy almost revealed their disguises. Luckily, Will shot him before he could react. However, as Will helped Frankie, Edgar, and Susan escape, the Harvesters manage to capture him.

Will's sudden disappearance made Team Whiskey lose their minds. Frankie, in particular, became snappy and dismissive towards her peers, particularly to Edgar. Her combat training sessions with him mostly ended up with Edgar getting his ass handed to him. Now, Frankie felt even more pressured to deal with coordinating a group, and she neither liked or knew how to do it. Thankfully, Susan knew how to help Frankie deal with the pressure and channel her inner leader. Sure, both she and Will walked away from Edgar when he seized a grenade from the Harvesters' escaping leader, Michael Kenner, that threatened to erase them from existence, but she generally looked out for Edgar the entire time. They are continuing the combat training sessions, too.

Being one of the team's tech guys, Jai has a habit of placing listening devices on his team members. At their base, he listened to Frankie kick the shit out of Edgar while he worked on his workbench. Will, however, discouraged him from doing such things but frankly, Jai does not care. Also, Will kept bugging Jai about telling him something from his personal life, but Jai does not budge. Soon, however, Will gets his chance.

A car chase ensued immediately after Team Whiskey's escape from the meeting place. Jai's impeccable driving skills almost work to their advantage, but unfortunately, a truck stood in their way. Before they knew it, the Harvesters switched cars, taking Will with them. Thankfully, Will's communicator was still on so while he stalled Kenner, Team Whiskey triangulates his location. Kenner eventually finds the communicator and taunts them before destroying it. This situation is where Jai's listening devices came in handy. Sure, it gave them a different lead to get to Will, but it also gave Jai a headache as Will kept blabbering about his personal life.

Edgar, Frankie, and Susan pose as McElroy and his bodyguards once more, granting them entrance to the facility. Their missions are now clear: after dealing with the henchmen, Susan frees the other captives inside the facility while Edgar and Frankie rescue Will. On the other hand, the paralysis-induced Will tries and successfully injects himself with adrenaline, making him escape in time for Edgar and Frankie to reach him. Like any other day, Team Whiskey accomplishes the mission.

During the team's after hours, Jai decides to have fun with Will. Because of making him endure the excruciating dramatic life stories, Jai makes Will listen to his story, too, at three in the morning. Complete with musical effects and Jai's dramatized narration, Will covered his ears as Jai spoke through speakers inside Will's apartment that Will could not turn off. It looks like Will got the bonding moment that he wanted.

Summary: When an unexpected murder shocks everyone, Will goes to a dark place as he and the rest of the team are tasked to hunt down the culprit behind this unsettling attack.

Being Team Whiskey's tech guys, Jai and Edgar could not help but feel invisible at times. Often, they stay behind the comfort of their screens, giving Will and Frankie technical support. The sudden loss of Emma made Jai wonder about what would happen if he died. At first, Edgar does not seem to notice Jai reaching out to him until Tina Marek (Marika Dominczyk) points it out to him. Despite this, Edgar manages to get Jai to open up to him about his worries. Upon learning about it, Edgar assures Jai that he and the team will be there, should the unfortunate event of his death happen. After all, they are a family, and they all love Jai.

Everyone has different ways of dealing with grief; Susan and Ray's approach happened to involve sex. Initially starting as a one-time thing, they found themselves sneaking off to do the deed, even when they were on the mission. While Susan did feel horrible for doing it, she did not have the guts to stop herself, either. Ray, on the other hand, was Ray, so he does not have much to lose. Frankie eventually finds out about what they have been doing, wholly disgusted and disappointed. Still, she agrees not to tell Will since it would both jeopardize their friendship as well as the team's dynamic. When the mission ends, Susan tries to break things off, but it was useless; Ray still waited for her in the car outside the base.

Will's idea of mourning involved finding and killing Emma's killer, and Frankie loved every bit of it. Will was cold-blooded and heartless, stopping at nothing to get closer to Emma's murderer. However, the team worried about what Will was doing since he could quickly go down a dark road and never come back. Because of this, Susan has Frankie try to reach out to him, but it fails.

After their encounter with a potential informant, Will decides to take matters into his hands. Emma's murderer, Henri Griffin (Jarreth J. Merz), has tons of different aliases, but the team found one that he used frequently and tracked him based on what they knew. The informant, a known associate of Griffin's, refused to talk, so Will resorted to torture, going as far as threatening to burn the man alive. Frankie stops him from doing so, but she does not stop him from leaving.

When Alex Ollerman (Dylan Walsh) calls Will to reveal Griffin's location, Will takes the risk and heads to the coordinates. Ollerman wanted either of them to die since they are both loose ends to him. Luckily, Team Whiskey manages to listen in on their conversation, so Frankie and Susan race to the place. They arrive just in time to stop Will from killing Griffin, who ends up dead anyway when Susan shoots him as he reached for a concealed pistol.

The mission was a success, but it did not feel that way to Will. Ollerman was still out there, and to Will, the only real way for him to avenge Emma was if he killed Ollerman. Regardless, he proposes a toast to the team's hard work, and Tina even hands him a marble slate with a star engraved on it in honor of Emma's sacrifice. As the episode ends, however, Emma's real killer is revealed to be no other than Tina, placing the same pistol that killed Emma on the table.

Summary: The team goes undercover at a college to take down their new target — an engineering prodigy suspected of building a super weapon.

To get out of babysitting his niece, Ray joined the team at Bucharest Technical Institute, undercover as a rugby coach. Jai was a science professor. Susan was a psychology professor. And Will and Frankie tag-teamed as dueling literature professors. While they kept surveillance on the situation, Standish posed as their mark's roommate.

Standish struggled to bond with his new roommate, scaring him off with his overbearing, forced one-way friendship. Plus, Standish's fellow tech enthusiast was super wary of Standish because everyone is after him for his genius, and he assumed Standish was no different. Things were far from simple for Standish here. However, he wanted field experience, and he got it.

Will kept reminding Standish how much he believed in him, but Standish didn't get any results as he struggled to bond with the "asset." Frankie stepped in and countered Will's "teddy bear" method with some tough love, not-so-gently reminding Standish that their asset's life depends on his work. Tough love didn't exactly work either, only serving to terrify Standish.

Will and Frankie eventually got together to force Standish and his "roommate" to bond by pretending to be assassins coming after them. It worked. The asset felt indebted to Standish when he "saved his life." One of the oldest tricks in the spy book.

Turns out the asset just wanted to help people. All his research was dedicated to building a high-tech railroad for his home country. It was the corrupt government who wanted his research in order to create deadly weapons. After a talk with the team, he was entirely ready to give them his research before it ended up in the wrong hands, but when he went to retrieve it, the hard drive containing everything had been stolen.

Inevitably, the government did come for the research. As the asset let the government take him, Standish recruited Will and Frankie to go against authorization to save him. When things were at their most unstable, the asset pointing a gun at the team, Standish shot him. What Will and Frankie didn't know was that Standish set the whole thing up; his new friend was wearing a bulletproof vest. With the government believing he died, they left, allowing the team to take him in and protect him.

Summary: Frankie's commitment to cold-hearted professionalism is tested when the team's new mission to take down the head of a massive drug operation reunites her with a former guardian. Meanwhile, Jai and Standish discover that Susan has been writing psych evaluations on every member of the team, and their curiosity leads them to an unpleasant surprise.

In the episode's opening mission, Frankie and Will were engaged in an epic chase. After some gunshots, Frankie asked Will if he was okay since they lost each other visibly. He didn't answer, so she pulled a super cool skateboard trick and knocked her guy out so she could check on her partner. Fortunately, Will was just fine. Unfortunately, the guy Frankie was after escaped in her absence. This whole incident seemed to prove Frankie's point that feelings get in the way of the mission.

Frankie's guardian, who took her in after her parents died, married a man who got mixed up in the illegal drug market. Kelly, who taught Frankie everything she knows about how to handle her feelings (or not handle feelings), has changed completely. She went from intensely guarded and work-focused to open and caring. Let's just say Frankie was completely caught off guard by this transformation.

However, despite her claims, Frankie isn't totally uncaring. Presented with how happy her guardian is with a husband and kid, she was hesitant to catch Kelly's husband and ruin her joy.

Frankie went to Daniel when Kelly wasn't around to give him the benefit of the doubt. He put on a façade of innocence, and everyone fell for it, me included. We found out shortly after that he's the mastermind of the opiate ring and that he is not a nice dude. The guy the team thought was in charge of the cartel is a "nobody." Daniel is the cartel.

Naturally, Kelly didn't believe it when Frankie tried to warn her. Frankie figured out that Kelly was also putting on an act. She pretended to be the clueless wife when, in fact, she tipped Daniel off that Frankie and Will were onto him. To be fair to her, Kelly was not in on it the whole time, and she did end up helping Will and Frankie in the end.

Frankie had a rough time dealing with losing her mark in Los Angeles, so Will asked Ray to try to find him. Ray, desperate to help out to win Will's forgiveness for the Gigi situation, asked Standish to help when he hit a wall. Bribed with donuts, Standish agreed.

Standish accomplished the favor, then told Ray to cool it when it comes to Will, and Ray decided to consider that new method. And when put into action, playing it cool actually impressed Will.

Turns out Susan wrote psych profiles on every member of the team. Is it any surprise Jai and Standish had to know what was in them? Of course, they ignored Susan's warnings and read them anyway, making them hostile and uncooperative. They were in denial, not wanting to believe what they read even if they knew there was truth there. Jai even revealed his secret lair he built at headquarters as he and Standish avoided Susan.

Susan definitely proved that she knows exactly what she's doing. Jai and Standish stood in disbelief as they watched Susan trick a suspect with "truth serum." She also knew the about Jai's secret lair all along, even when no one else did. Even after proving herself, it took Ray, of all people, to convince Jai and Standish they were being childish.

Production Code: T13.21463
Summary: Ollerman attempts to force the team to commit a terrorist attack for The Trust using Ray's life as leverage; Jai helps Standish deal with a revelation about his girlfriend; Will and Frankie come to a realization about their relationship.

There's flirting right from the start! Will was a bit of a showoff in front of Frankie, who admitted it was sexy. Then, Will helped Frankie pack for their mission in the Alps, and she ended up wearing a pair of his long underwear. Next, a Chinese takeout date at Will's place.

The team was thwarted right off the bat as Tina tipped off Ollerman that the team was onto him. She then helped him hijack their safe house, threatening Ray's life as leverage.

Tina later admitted she used Standish for the reason we all figured: She considered him the easiest mark, severely underestimating him.

In other relationship news, Jai walked in on Susan and Ray kissing, which he actually came to terms with. He even admitted to rooting for them.

Meanwhile, Susan attempted to deal with accepting that she liked Ray. Also, she knew she had to tell Will eventually, though she tried to avoid thinking about that particular situation. Turns out Will knew all along, and he figured she'd tell him when she came to terms with her feelings for Ray. Will is a spy after all; of course he figured it out.

In return for Ray's life, Ollerman requested the team do a job for him: Stealing billions of dollars for The Trust. It's not an easy job. The laptop the team needed to steal was chained to the wrist of its owner. However, never count Team Whiskey out.

Except that wasn't the real mission! The true mission was the assassination of the Russian minister of finance. And Ollerman planned the whole thing to frame the team. Tina would pull the trigger, and her association with the team would implicate them.

Even with Ollerman almost killing Ray, Standish beat Tina to the minister of finance and killed her before she could accomplish her mission.

Also, Frankie and Will went to confront Ollerman after his plan failed, though they couldn't get through to him and he jumped out the window to end his story on his own terms.
