Summary: Special agent Scott Forrester and his Budapest-based FBI fly team head to Croatia to help capture an American fugitive who escaped to Zagreb with a 14-year-old girl.

The first two parts of the episode were aired as the FBI episode S04E01 titled All that Glitters, and FBI: Most Wanted episode S03E01 titled Exposed.

Special agent Scott Forrester along with his Budapest-based FBI fly team were heading to Croatia to stop a human trafficker. The trafficker's name was Colin Kent and he was wanted for several crimes. Which included murder. Kent was also guilty of extortion because he would blackmail men who he sometimes tricked and sometimes not into sleeping with underage girls and he used the extortion as means for his cover.

Kent claimed to be an investment banker. The only investments were into himself and he used that to buy drugs for runaway teenage girls and that convinced them to sleep with strangers. Kent killed most of the girls the moment it looked like authorities were getting too close to him. He only left one alive.

Kent was traveling with the one girl. She was fourteen and her real name is Madison. But everyone calls her "Sunny". Sunny was in danger. Kent left her alive because he planned on trading her for something down the line and so Forrester tried to grab Kent in the Croatian city of Zagreb only he was stopped. He was stopped because he hadn't cleared his actions past the local police force.

Something he needed to do if he expected any cooperation and so he got in trouble for that. The local police also stopped him from questioning the suspects. They found a rich man connected to Kent and they were forced to leave the man's home unmolested because the local police didn't like a Croatian being questioned by Americans without their say so.

Forrester and his team were forced to retreat. They also had to deal with a fellow American. Special Agent Omar Adom Zidan flew to Croatia when he heard Kent might be in the area because he has been following this case from the beginning and he wanted to rescue the girl. The girl had apparently called the tip line a month ago. She tried to tell them about the underage sex ring and she had been too scared to say anything important.

She hung up before she could reveal any details about the ring. It was OA working the tip line who spoke with her. He thinks if he pushed her harder then he could have avoided this whole thing and so that's why he was now in Croatia however there was a problem.

OA wanted to take down Kent. It was Forrester who reminded him to look at the bigger picture and the bigger picture was the blackmail material that Kent currently has in his possession. Kent took all the videos and photos he had of men with underage girls and this material could bring down leagues of pedophiles. It was important that the FBI get their hands on this.

They later and finally got the local police to work with them. They checked in with Kent's Croatian friend. He was sleeping with an underage girl and she gave him clues. The FBI also used their contacts in the area. They found out that Kent was looking to grab a burner that couldn't be traced and so they were tracking it when Kent ruined things by turning off the phone.

They couldn't trace it or Kent. But they did have a lead on where he was going and so they went there and they were able to arrest Kent. It was just unfortunate that he handed over the blackmail material before he was arrested. The team then had to track down who he transferred his briefcase to. They were later able to find him but that was pretty much dumb luck and it worked out for them.

They found out where Sunny was by watching one of the videos. Kent traded her for money and access to the elite circle in the Croatian government and so they went to the house where she was being held. They arrested the man raping her. They freed her and they used the fact that Kent had close friends in the government to get Croatia to expedite the extradition.

OA was the one to carry the extradition. He returned with Kent, Sunny, and the blackmail material. The FBI back in the States was later able to use the material to round up twenty-eight pedophiles. They arrested them all at once which left them the little opportunity of using their wealth to flee or destroying critical evidence at their homes. OA was also able to bring closure to one of the victim's mothers.

Julia was fifteen when she was killed. She began hooking as a way of paying her sick mother's medical bills and now she's dead and her mother would gladly take on the debt if she could get her daughter back. Julia's mother wanted to find out the men who hurt her daughter were captured. OA was able to give her that closure.

Forrester also managed to befriend some of the local police before he left Croatia. He returned to Budapest with his team and unbeknownst to pretty much everyone he's been sleeping with one of them.

Summary: The International Fly Team is called on when a young mother flees to Hungary with her son, after losing partial custody of her son in the U.S. However, after the boy is kidnapped from his mother in broad daylight in Budapest, the team questions which parent is the danger in the child's life.

Special Agent Scott Forrester was at the scene when a boy was abducted. He tried to stop the kidnapping which happened in broad daylight and was almost run over. Forrester had been with one of his subordinates. Special Agent Jamie Kellett worked under Forrester. She was also sleeping with Forrester and no one knew about it. But the agents stood together publicly to solve the abduction. The body that was taken was an American citizen. His name is David Milgrave and he was the son of Gary and Katya Milgrave. Mil-grave married an Eastern European woman. They had a child together and then they broke up. His ex-wife claimed he was abusive. She also said that he started to hit their son and so she ran off with the son when a judge awarded them joint custody. The mother freaked. She ran off with the son back to her home country and now the body was taken.

The natural suspect was his father. His father was a rich man after all and he could afford to have his son abducted in order to have him brought back home to the States. His ex-wife couldn't return to the country. There was an outstanding warrant against her and so she would be arrested if she ever tried to come back to get her son but there was another side of this situation. Forrester said that the mother couldn't be believed just on her word. She could be making up the allegations of abuse. She could have done in her divorce in order to get as much as she could and she could have taken her son out of vindictive spite. Forrester wasn't quick to just accept her word. His team on the other hand sympathized with the mother.

They didn't believe she would lie or that she would arrange to have her own son kidnapped. Which was another possibility. There was a good chance that she arranged the kidnapping to throw dirt on her husband or to get more money out of him. Forrester was open to all possibilities.

The only concerning thing was that the boy has epilepsy. He needs his medication every few hours and he had been kidnapped without it. Forrester wanted to find the boy. He also wanted to do things his way and that wasn't flying with the Hungarian police. The kidnapping happened on their turf in broad daylight. The mother was also one of them and so they wanted to get to the boy first. Forrester claimed jurisdiction because the boy was American.

Forrester also had his friend from Europol smooth things over. He wanted to find the boy and they came close to getting him back. They spotted a boy at the train station with his abductors. They tried to free him and the abductors proved they weren't afraid of shooting their way out of the situation. The boy was taken before he could be released. One of the abductors ran off with the boy and the other was captured. The man they arrested didn't want to talk. He was a part of a group called Dad's Pride and they were a Christian group that believes children deserve to be with their fathers because their mothers couldn't be trusted. It was a bunch of incels really. They kidnapped the boy because the father was rich and they hated the fact that the mother got away with him.

The group involved in this kidnapping proved that Katya wasn't involved. It just didn't verify her information about everything else and so the team spoke with Milgrave. He was in the country "unexpectedly". He claims not to know anything about the kidnapping. He also called Katya a liar. He claims not to have ever abused her or their son. He said that Katya was guilty of parental alienation. She was trying to turn their son against him. But the FBI didn't believe him. It turns out parental alienation has been largely questioned in certain courts and Forrester was against it. He has a complicated relationship with his parents. His father worked in the government and so did his mother until she turned judas.

His mother was Angela Cassidy. She sold information to the Russians in '04 and disappeared without a trace in '05. Forrester doesn't discuss his mother. The newest member of the team only found about it because Kellet let it slip. Kellet wanted Vindotto to understand why Forrester didn't believe the mother at first and it helped clear things up for her. The federal agents later questioned Milgrave again. They used the opportunity to plant a tracker in his phone and then used it to follow him to the exchange place where he got David. They tried to stop him from escaping when he made it off in his car with David. The agents followed him and they later found Milgrave's car on the cliff. He and his son were still inside. Milgrave was apparently considering suicide because he didn't want Katya to have David.

Milgrave would rather murder his son than let his mother have him. Thankfully, Kellet hit the car before it could go over the cliff and they got David's medication to him on time. David was saved. He was also asked about an incident with his father. David told Forrester that his father hurt him and he did so without the influence of his mother around. It turns out Katya was telling the truth. Her ex-husband is abusive. She got a restraining order against him and Kellet helped get the warrant against her dismissed.

Kellet also heard back about the job she applied for back in the States. She had gotten the job and now she has to think about whether or she's willing to give up that job for Forrester.

Summary: The team investigates when the hijacking of cryptocurrency en route to a safety vault in Switzerland leaves an American transporter dead and another on the run.

Special Agent Scott Forrester's team caught a case. The Swiss Federal Police were requesting their service in a robbery/homicide involving two Americans and one of the Americans was killed. Melissa Miller and her partner were former cops. They became private investigators and they were delivering some called "crypto wallets" to a person when they got forced off the road. Held up and robbed. Melissa's partner was killed. She managed to escape with some injuries and now the Swiss were investigating it. They asked Forrester's team to join them because of the victims' nationality. Forrester had an easier time questioning Melissa than the Swiss had and so she told him that she didn't know how much bitcoin was on each wallet. All she knows was that she was being paid for expenses as well as five hundred dollars a day to deliver the items.

Melissa and her partner were asked to pose as tourists. They were supposed to hide their true intent in the city and they thought they had done an admirable job until they got forced off the road. Neither Melissa nor her partner told anyone what they were doing. The only way the thieves could have known was if they had gotten the information from someone in the know. Melissa was delivering the crypto wallets to a man named Steve Webb. Webb said the crypto wallets were direct access to twenty million in bitcoin and that anyone could cash them in. Webb had no idea had information of the trade-off had gotten out. He uses a crypto bank in the area that was top-notch. Forrester and his team asked questions.

They were all answered. Nothing stood out and so Special Agent Jamie Kellett said she would reach out to one of her contacts in the area. She knew a low-level crook. She went to his apartment to question him about the heist and murder and he was doing his best to get rid of her when his friend revealed himself. Jamie's contact had one of the guys involved in the murder at his place. The friend pulled a gun on Jamie, but not before she made a call to Forrester and kept Forrester on the line as she tried to talk the guy down and it didn't work. Her contact was murdered. Jamie was shot and it was a miracle she wasn't outright killed. Forrester freaked out when he heard the gunshots over the phone. He had her phone tracked and they were able to reach Jamie in time to get her medical help.

Their friend in Interpol rode with Jamie to the hospital. The rest of the team however continued with their investigation and Forrester couldn't prevent making this personal. He managed to offend Webb. He kept pushing and pushing until Webb demanded to have nothing to do with him. The Swiss backed up Webb because they're the Swiss. They didn't like conflict. Forrester also heard from his bosses in Washington to back off Webb and there was nothing he could do about it. Forrester suspected that Webb had the wallets stolen to hide his assets from his ex-wife. He had nothing other than a gut feeling and his gut was off. Forrester was being irrational in the case because Jamie wasn't just a member of his team. The two were seeing each other.

It had gotten to the point where Forrester asked Jamie not to take a job in New York because he didn't want to lose her. Forrester's irrationality was therefore that of a boyfriend and not a boss. Jamie managed to write down some numbers on her hand before she lost consciousness. Forrester had his team run those numbers and they later had their numbers run against a rental car when they saw that their shooter had taken a car to leave the location after he shot Jamie. The team found the car. The car had been abandoned and set on fire. His GPS was still working. The team used that GPS to determine where the car had been and it showed that it had been near Mr. Schmid's address. He was someone who worked at the Vault.

The Vault was a crypto bank. It's where Webb planned on housing his wallets in cold storage and Schmid knew about it in advance. Forrester went for Schmid. He got physical with him and that got Schmid talking. He was apparently feeling raw after being passed over for a promotion when he met a man named Hoschi. Hoschi arranged everything. He brought in two other men and one of them was named Kristian. Schmid hadn't known that anyone was going to get hurt. He thought they were just going to rob the couriers and so Forrester had Schmid bombard Kristian with messages his cut. Kristian called Schmid. He told Schmid that the wallets were password protected. He also said he negotiated a ransom and that Schmid's cut is not getting shot. The Swiss were able to trace that call.

They found Kristian as he was handing over the crypto wallets. Forrester and his team went after the men and they were able to capture Kristian and the crypto wallets but not Hoschi. Hoschi escaped. It was him that Forrester wanted the most. He wanted revenge for Jamie and so he proved willing to negotiate with Kristian. Kristian wanted citizenship for his Turkish girlfriend and her son. He wanted them to be safe. He offered up information that led to the capture of one of the other guys and Forrester got to look Hoschi in the face when he was arrested. Jamie meanwhile made a full recovery. Her near-death experience made her realize that she didn't want to take the job in New York and so she later told Forrester that she was staying. She didn't want to leave after coming so close to losing what they have.

Production Code: INT104
Summary: The team investigates an American citizen who is proclaiming his innocence after seeking sanctuary at Madrid's U.S. embassy while still covered in the blood of his murdered Spanish boyfriend. Also, Vo and Raines continue to grow their friendship.

An American was hiding at the embassy in Madrid, Spain. He was suspected of murdering someone. Drew Edmonson was a student living in the city and with his boyfriend Rafael Delgado when he came home to find said boyfriend dead. Edmonson called the police. He then panicked and ran to the embassy six blocks away. Edmonson actually hadn't been a suspect until he ran.

The Spanish police were left angry with the fact they couldn't reach Edmonson and it created an international incident. FBI Special Agent Forrester and his team were called in to handle the situation that emerged from this incident. They were dealing with the second in command to Ambassador Berger. Her name is Emma Healey and not only did Forrester's team have to clear everything past her, but they also had to deal with a member of the Spanish police.

Spanish Inspector Matteo Diaz believed Edmonson was the killer. He asked if Edmonson wasn't guilty then why did he run? The Americans couldn't really answer that question because the truth would be offensive. Edmonson ran because his boyfriend came from a conservative and wealthy family.

He felt he had stuck around that he would have been treated unfairly by the local police. Which wasn't entirely wrong. The local police barely waited a day before they released the body and had the family come in to collect items from the victim's house. The local police never questioned anyone. They would have realized that Delgado was overheard arguing with someone about money. It couldn't have been Edmonson because he hadn't gotten home yet.

Also, if it had been him then the neighbors would have known. They wouldn't have said that Delgado was arguing with a stranger on the night he died. They would have said he was arguing with his boyfriend because they've heard Edmonson plenty of times before and they would have been able to identify his voice.

But to make matters worse was the fact the ambassador pressured Edmonson to turning himself over to the Spanish. Ambassador Berger was having a high profile party and he didn't want the international ruckus to disrupt the party. He pressured Edmonson. He convinced him to turn himself in and that's what Edmonson did. He was immediately arrested. Forrester couldn't get to him and the local police were trying to pressure Edmonson into confessing.

The local police was decided to stop helping the FBI. Forrester and his team weren't given any office space to operate inside of the precinct and the more they learned the more they saw how bare the case was. There was no autopsy done on the victim before his body was handed to his family.

They took perhaps two pictures of the body for their file. They didn't notate how he was killed or the angle of the stab wounds or even if the perpetrator was right or left-handed. The Spanish didn't investigate at all. The FBI continued their investigation. They learned that Delgado just came out two weeks ago and that he was embezzling money from his investment firm. He stole almost two hundred and fifty thousand euros. He hid in an offshore bank account that only Edmonson had access to.

This seemed like a motive. Edmonson killed his boyfriend for the money or at least that's how the Spanish would frame it and so Forrester asked to speak with Edmonson again. Forrester got fifteen minutes by being honest with the Diaz. Diaz allowed him fifteen minutes. Forrester questioned Edmonson about the bank account and he didn't know a thing. His boyfriend put some papers in front of him to sign.

It was in Spanish and so Edmonson signed it without reading it. He didn't think any of it. He didn't access the account. Forrester's team learned that Delgado could set it up without any interference from Edmonson and odds are Edmonson never knew. And right after they learned that, Delgado's family made a few calls.

They demanded that the local police stop helping the Americans. The family wishes to believe that Edmonson was a crazed homosexual stalker and that he murdered Delgado because Delgado wasn't gay. The family was also pressuring the local police to buy this story in spite of evidence. They removed photos of Delgado with Edmonson because they didn't want anyone to know Delgado was gay.

The family was wealthy after all and the local police were caving into pressure. They threw the FBI out of their station. They refused to work with them. They also refuse to give Edmonson protective detail in prison and so Forrester did what he did best. He became a pain in the backside until the Ambassador was forced to meet him. And once they did meet, Forrester pushed the Ambassador to making the necessary calls to get the police to work with his team again.

Forrester wanted back in because he found evidence proving there was someone else in the apartment that night. He found someone had access the bank account with the stolen money while Edmonson had been in prison and that the person matches the description of the man Edmonson saw leaving their building that night.

Forrester showed Diaz what he had. It forced Diaz into arresting the suspect and they later learned that the guy pressured Delgado into stealing from his employers by threatening he was gay to his family. But then Delgado came out. He came out on social media and he wasn't going to be threatened anymore. Its why he argued with his killer the night he died. And why he was ultimately killed.

Edmonson was released from his prison. He met up with Delgado's brother and together they grieved for Delgado. Delgado got to be an openly gay man for one week before his death but he at least died free.

And Forrester and his team didn't take credit for this case and so in the future they'll be welcomed back more freely.

Summary: The team investigates an American journalist's death by poison after his attempt to meet with an anonymous source in Poland. Also, Kellett takes Forrester to task for being overprotective with her during the mission.

An American journalist has been found poisoned in Krakow, Poland. The journalist has been working in Europe and he was allegedly working on a story involving Russians. Russians and poisonings tend to go together. It also creates an international incident. FBI Special Agent Forrester and his team have been called in to investigate Phillip Blake's murder.

Forrester was lucky with this case because Polish police were very forthcoming and helpful in assisting the Americans. They also allowed the FBI to conduct their own investigation. Forrester and his team spoke with Blake's contacts. Blake was apparently very secretive about what he's working on. He wouldn't even say who was involved and now his contacts were happy because they might have been killed as well if they had known.

But there is something strange about the case. Blake's killer managed to kill him with moments using a poison and then this killer went to his apartment to also douse it with poison. They killed the maid that way. Blake's killer or killers had gone back to his apartment and they had probably cleared any hints about the story he was writing. Another thing that was strange was the CIA's presence.

Blake's story was seemingly big enough to earn the CIA's notice and yet they didn't make any moves to protect him from the Russians. There were two Russians spotted following Blake in the lead up to his death. They could have been involved or like the CIA they could have simply been spying on him in the hopes of finding out more about his story.

Forrester spotted the CIA Officer following him. He confronted him and he had a member of his team verify him once he identified himself. The CIA had been following Blake. They also had a USB with his files on it. They handed it over to Forrester's team. Forrester's people looked into it and they found out that Blake was reporting on a new Russian missile. One so fast that it wouldn't be detected by any American missile system and so this new weapon could potentially be dangerous. It also would be worth killing for. The Russians wouldn't want a new weapon getting out because then that would force the Americans to finding something to counteract it and so Blake's research has been vital.

Forrester reported what he found back to Washington. He also spoke with his Europol friend to warn her that this case might take on a life of its own and she decided to stay on. She also contacted her spy friends. She wanted more information on Blake's work, but Forrester and his team found a lead. They found out that the woman Blake was working with had known more than she originally claimed.

She knew enough that she felt her life was in danger and the team was able to prevent the two Russians responsible for Blake's death from coming after Alina. They got her to safe house. They also got her to confirm certain things. Blake's article about the new missile was coming from a defector by the name of Dasha and Dasha was wanted by both the Americans as well as the Russians.

Dasha stole information about the new missile from his own government. He then went on the run when he got into contact with Blake and told his story. Blake was killed to keep that story from coming out. He was killed because the CIA wanted to use him to find Dasha and so they didn't care enough to prevent the Russians from murdering him. But Dasha was still out there. Dasha tried to reach out to Alina because she worked with Blake and so he wanted to meet up. The FBI wanted to use Alina to find Dasha. There just one tiny part with that plan and that was Alina. She hadn't slept in days. Her hands haven't stopped shaking since those two Russians almost killed her and so a member of Forrester's team offered to pose as Alina.

Special Agent Jamie Kellet said that Dasha has never met Alina. She could pose as Alina and she could meet with him. Forrester was opposed to the idea at first. He claimed that he didn't want a member of his team to be in danger and the truth is that he didn't want Jamie to go because they were in a relationship. They were dating. He was afraid of her getting hurt because he didn't want to lose her and so she had to threaten to end the relationship. It forced Forrester to let her do her job. Jamie pretended to be Alina and the plan almost worked. Then the Russians happened. The Russians interrupted the meet as they tried to kill Jamie thinking she was the journalist and she was able to kill the assassin.

Dasha was back in the wind. He wasn't responding anymore to texts from Alina's account and there is doubts he'll ever be found now. But Europol Agent Jaegar came up with a plan to safeguard Alina. She got the Russians to agree to stop targeting journalists in exchange Alina doesn't publish anything she got from Dasha nor does she insinuate that there was a rouge member of the Russian Ministry of Defense in her article. Blake's widow also had to stop accusing the Russians of her husband's murder. The two men who killed him had been found and were either apprehended or killed but that's as much justice as she'll ever get.

And Forrester also heard from his new CIA contact that his mother has been sighted in Russia. The same mother that spied on her country and was wanted by the United States for her crimes.

Summary:	After a U.S. intelligence negotiator goes missing and her ransacked Paris apartment is discovered to be covered in her blood, the team is on the clock to find her before the country's nuclear secrets fall into the wrong hands.

An American woman went missing abroad. The victim's name is Bridget Rapp and she's a US Intelligence negotiator. She has Q-clearance. It's the highest clearance there is and she knew all of America as well as the Middle East's nuclear secrets. But she's missing. Rapp's apartment was found in disarray with blood everywhere and so there's a chance she was either dead or needing help.

Her co-workers found her apartment in such a state. They notified US Intelligence and they in turn contacted FBI

Special Agent Forrester's team. Forrester's people quickly took action. They flew to Paris where Rapp lived. They checked the apartment. They checked security cameras right outside and they soon learned that Rapp had taken a stranger home with her.

Which was a big no no! Rapp's security clearance means she has to get every date checked out before she could be alone with them and so she wasn't supposed to be meeting strangers or taking them home. Rapp's apartment was also staged. The blood was collected over time with a special chemical to stop it from freezing up and that's why blood on the scene looked so fresh hours after the fact and so that meant one thing.

Rapp wasn't taken. She's gone rouge. Rapp purposely made her disappearance look like she was taken. She participated in abnormal behavior. She's out and about. She made everyone think she would go missing because then they would think she was bleeding out somewhere. They wouldn't catch on that she was simply walking around everywhere.

The team used facial recognition. They quickly found footage of Rapp exiting from a bank that morning and she hasn't been spotted since. Some agents went to the bank. They learned that Rapp withdrew a million euros in all cash and the bank wasn't even Rapp's bank. It was a secret account.

Many assumed that Rapp was betraying her country or about to for money and so a kill order was sent. The Americans wanted her captured but they'll settle for killing her if that wasn't possible because Rapp knew where their missiles were located in Europe and could sell the information. Forrester went digging through Rapp's life. They searched all her books when they found a cute letter and Forrester instantly realized that Rapp was in fact seeing someone.

It just wasn't the guy she brought home. That guy was a diversion. Rapp pretended to be drunk to interest him and then took him where she quickly "sobered" up. She had that guy leave through the garage so that he wouldn't be spotted on the cameras. But Rapp was dating someone.

She was dating the former Iranian Nuclear negotiator. He was replaced by a hardliner by the Iranians because Ali Majidi gave the Americans too much back in 2015 and so Ali was in town during the recent negotiations. Forrester questioned him with Jamie's help. They found out that Ali's people already knew about the relationship and that they tried to use that to pressure her into spying on Americans. When that didn't work, they tried to blackmail her.

Rapp inadvertently revealed two Iranians that were spying on Iran for the Americans. Those two people were captured and executed. Rapp was told by the Iranians that they would claim she happily gave over that information if she didn't spy for them. But she didn't want to do that. Ali claims he gave her money to go on the run and what he failed to mention is that he planned on running away with her. The team didn't find out that until much later on. They found out that Ali and Rapp planned on fleeing together and now she has to leave without him because the Iranians found out Ali was speaking to the Americans. He apparently told them too much because he was "reassigned".

In other words, they killed him. Rapp must have figured out that when Ali failed to make it to the extraction point and that created an issue. The team did a profile on Rapp. They found out she was buying illegal anti-psychotics and that she wasn't mentally well. They figured Rapp would try to kill herself once she realized Ali wasn't coming. They thought Rapp would try to jump from the bridge where all those lovers put a key lock, but she actually tried to kill herself from a bridge much further away that was far more intimate. Forrester and Jamie found her there. They tried to talk her down and, when that didn't work, they simply grabbed her. They physically stopped her from killing herself. They told her that the Americans wouldn't execute if she wasn't mentally well.

They failed to mention that she would most likely get locked up in an asylum where she'll never be allowed to leave. Not with all that she knew. Forrester called it in and she was secured by the Americans. Forrester had one final word with her, though. He wanted to know what made her turn against her country and Forrester was asking as a son and not as an FBI agent. Forrester's mother betrayed her country. Forrester was trying to understand his mother's mindset and so he asked about motives. And Rapp said she did it for love.

Forrester later put up a flier for mental health but no one decided to use it because Forrester wouldn't be the only boss they ever had and they didn't want to risk their careers by asking for help.

Forrester was later found looking into his mother's case and so they shut him out of the intelligence surrounding it and warned him that he's no longer allowed to carry out any private investigations into the matter. And so that made him curious.

Summary: When an American founder of an illegal adults-only site is killed in Prague, the team is tasked to locate his co-founder, who is still on the run in the Czech Republic.

Someone murdered an American porn king in Prague. Llyod Eckersley was overseas because he was wanted back in the United States for human trafficking and for extortion. He tricked young women that were usually from the age eighteen to nineteen into doing sexual acts they didn't agree on in exchange for selling them to private collectors overseas, but then he would threaten to send these videos to their families if they didn't cooperate and it went on like this until a woman died.

She killed herself. It led to an investigation and that's when everything came out. Eckersley and his partner Fred Dobbins were tried in absentia because they both went on the run. They came to Prague.

A beautiful city whose police department is woefully under budget. Eckersley tried to start up the porn business again while in the country and he was shot by someone twice in the groin. It killed him. The women he was working with had then taken the opportunity to escape while they could and so they were seen fleeing from the scene right after gunshots rang out. A delivery guy called it in.

The police came and they found Eckersley. It was too late to send him to prison, but his partner Dobbins was still out there and he was still a wanted man. Dobbins and Eckersley were close. If Eckersley was in the city that meant so was Dobbins. Special Agent Forester and his team were brought in to bring Dobbins to justice.

The first place they went looking was with Eckersley's newest associates. The guys were apparently aware of the two men being wanted by the Americans and they were resisting helping them because they thought the two guys had been screwed by the American justice system. They claimed that those women who were tricked were adults who knew what they were doing.

They weren't helpful and they weren't afraid of the same person who killed Eckersley. But Forrester and his team did find a suspect in Eckersley's murder. They found Jim Clancy. Clancy was the father of the young woman who killed herself and he was also a cop back in Oklahoma. He's had training. He knows how to use a gun and he bought a ticket five hours before he boarded a plane.

It was clear Clancy was the killer. They didn't have any way of proving so or arresting him because it was also clear he was still in the country looking for Dobbs, but the FBI later got a tip. They found the two women that Eckersley was working with right before death and one of the women knew where Dobbins was. But she refused to talk without being paid first.

The FBI eventually got what they needed anyways and they later found Dobbins. They arrested him. They asked him about Clancy and he admitted the father wasn't as bad as the sister. The late Kayla Clancy has a sister Ella and Ella was struggling with her sister's death just as much as her father. Ella was also backpacking through Europe and she has experience with a gun.

Ella posted a photo of herself at a gun range with the words "practice makes perfect". The FBI came to believe that Ella was the one who killed Eckersley and that she must have told her father. It's why he rushed to come to Prague. He's looking for a daughter and he's trying not to lose the only child he has left. But he can't protect her from the repercussions. Both Forrester and Jamie had heard his heartbreak and it affected Jamie. They got word from him where his daughter was hiding and Jamie made sure to reach Ella first. She told Ella to hide her bag behind trash cans. She wanted to hide the murder weapon. Jamie also spoke with Jim Clancy again and she managed to talk him into confessing to the crime.

Jamie knew what she was doing. She knowingly did so because she was trying to protect Ella and she managed to make Jim Clancy aware of that. Clancy is claiming that he and Eckersley fought over the gun. He's going to be charged with manslaughter. He will face two years in prison and the only thing he asked for was to see his daughter before he's taken away. Clancy assured his daughter that everything will be alright. Ella hugged him and then they were separated. But Forrester knew what Jamie did. He couldn't prove it, but he knew. He told Jamie to make sure that her priorities aligned with the job and so Jamie took him up on a suggestion from a few days ago. She told him she was going to take time off.

Jamie later met up with Ella. Ella was heading to Norway with the bag she recovered and she was going to spread her sister's ashes in Norway. It turns out that Kayla only did what she did to save up enough money to visit Norway and so her sister wants to honor that by bringing Kayla there for her final resting place.

Summary: When a group of Americans are among the victims of a bombing at a festival in Budapest, the team is brought in to find the perpetrators before they strike again. Also, when Vo's new beau is injured in the blast, she re-evaluates what dating truly means while in the bureau.

There were two explosions at a music festival. Special Agent Carmen Vo was there with her boyfriend and she couldn't stay because she had to work. Her partner Raines was picking her up from the site when they felt the first explosion. The first one was small. They didn't know what it was when they began running to the explosion site and that's when the second one went off. The second one was bigger. It knocked the agents off their feet. They came to later on and Vo's first concern was her boyfriend. Vo went looking for her boyfriend. He was studying to be a musician tech. He was excited about the event and so Vo knew he was near the explosion site. She later found him with shrapnel in his leg. And so she used a scarf to tie off the wound as she tried to get him an ambulance.

The music festival was big. There were Americans in attendance and about five of them died. The terrorist attack also happened in Budapest which was the home for the International unit of the FBI. The FBI was called in to help with the investigation. Forrester told his team that if they wanted to sit out that they could and they all wanted to work. Even Vo. She wanted to find out who did this. They began the investigation by looking into Bartalan Agostan. Agostan was the American dream. He was a child of Hungarian immigrants who moved to the United States for a better life and he became a successful millionaire. He also believed in helping Hungary. His company financed the festival and he was one of the victims.

Agostan was a successful man. He could have developed enemies. His company Trumantis recently pulled out of a contract with a woman who was supposed to attend the event and this woman also ordered a lot of ammonium nitrate. Forrester and Jamie questioned the suspect. She denied any part in the bombings. She also said she was there. She had to leave early because of a work commitment. They asked her about the ammonium nitrate and she said that her company grows produce. Which it does. She even added that the company she ordered the ammonium nitrate from has been short-changing her. There was enough missing chemicals to create two more bombs. And so someone from the ammonium nitrate company has been stealing the chemicals.

The team looked into Buda Petro Chemical. There was one employment in charge of the shipments and it was Elek Simko. He was the delivery man. The ammonium nitrate disappeared along his route and so Simko's home was later raided. They found it empty. There were drugs found. But enough evidence to indicate he was their terrorist. The only thing the apartment lacked was the man himself and he became wanted. Simko lost his job because of Trumantis. He looked for work and he couldn't find it. His wife left him. She took the kids and she got full custody. Simko lost everything because of Agostan and that's why he killed him but it didn't explain why he took enough chemicals to create more bombs and so the FBI had a word with his ex-wife.

She didn't want to say anything at first. She still thought he was a good man. She only left him because after he lost his job he lost his way and nothing she did helped. She wasn't worried about him working. She got a job herself and they were good when she noticed the changes in his character. He started to go to rallies. He began scaring his wife. She left with the kids because she didn't like where he was going and unfortunately her leaving had just meant he was both cut off and alone while being angry. Simko's rallies were for Hungarian patriotism. They wanted to destroy the imperialism that crept into the country after the Berlin Wall fell and communism went away. And so Simko's second bombing site was at the company endorsing automation at Buda Petro Chemical.

A few people died again. The supposedly patriotic group he was a part of was hyping this bombing as a sign against imperialism and so Forrester and his team spoke with the man leading the movement. They knew he was in contact with Simko. They just couldn't prove it but something he said about the Americans being the aggressors in the first place had rang a bell for Forrester. He realized where the next bombing would be. It would be at Buda Petro Chemical. If Simko blew up their ammonium nitrate supply then it would wipe out blocks for miles and so Forrester and his team jammed the cell tower in the area. This prevented Simko from setting off the next bomb. He then tried to run and they captured. And Simko wasn't apologetic in the slightest as he was being arrested.

Vo thought his message about getting the Americans out would spread on the news now, but Forrester said he knew a man who had been at the at the terrorist attack in Oklahoma and that this man said people never remembered the terrorist. Just the fallen.

Simko was in jail and the man who inspired him was also arrested for funding a terrorist attack.

Summary: The team jets to Bulgaria when terrorists hold hostage for millions in cryptocurrency a concert hall filled with multinational student performers and their families. Also, Raines is intent on proving his field skills, and Forrester receives news of their dog, Tank.

Special Agent Forrester's dog is sick. His dog isn't just some pet. He was also a cadaver dog and he works alongside Forrester's team. He's even helped with several cases. He was a useful dog. But he was sick and they only live for so long.

Forrester's dog had to stay overnight at the vets. The vet was going to run tests on him and Forrester originally wanted to wait on his dog, but then something came up and it unfortunately dragged his attention away. Forrester and the international arm of the FBI were alerted after several Americans were taking hostage during a philharmonic concert in Bulgaria. The hostage takers came in with guns. They took everyone playing and the audience hostage. And their demands were simple.

The bad guys wanted ten million dollars in cryptocurrency. They either get the money or they kill people. They even killed one member of the audience to prove that they were serious. The armed men were in complete control and the security cameras were only on because the men allowed them to be on. Forrester was chosen as the spokesperson. He talked with the guy in charge and he heard the demands. He also saw the footage of them killing that poor guy to prove his point. Forrester and his team were working with Bulgarian authorities and they were therefore warned that the local police had called in their boss.

Their boss was no nonsense. He wasn't going to give in to the demands. He was going to go in with his guns drawn and more people were going to die. So, one cop warned Forrester to do what he has to do now before it becomes too late. Forrester spoke with the man named Kostov. He demanded to know if there was anyone injured inside of the building and he was warned that two people needed help. One tried to fight back. The other was a pregnant woman. Forrester negotiated with Kostov. They were allowed to send in the paramedics and one of their own. Raines went in. He got to see the lay of the land and one of the bad guys sent him a message.

The message was "I want out". It seems one of the bad guys hadn't known people were going to die and he doesn't want to spend the rest of his life behind bars. Raines got the message. He was able to pass it on to Forrester once he returned and now they had a man on the inside. They especially needed him as Kostov called to threaten them. He said if he saw anyone entering the building without his say so that he would set off the bombs hidden inside and Raines believes that might be a bluff. He didn't see any rigging. He thinks either the bombs is made up or it was hidden inside of the walls.

The man on the inside also came out. His name is Petar. Petar said he and his cousin were brought in on a job to kidnap a wealthy businessman who was stopping the Albanian refugees from returning to their country and that the job was just supposed to be about the one guy. It wasn't until they showed up with guns that Kostov changed the plan. He changed the plan on his men. He forced them into going along with him and now there's no coming out of it. Petar gave Kostov full name. They looked into it and they found out he was an extremist. He was an Albanian extremist who believed in unification. He didn't care about the money or the businessman.

The guy he killed in the first fifteen minutes was in fact the businessman. Kostov also has a condition that could cause an aneurysm at any moment and so he has nothing to lose. He could die at any moment. He's not scared of death. He was fighting for a cause. Unfortunately, this was the moment that Bulgarian boss showed up. He armed his men and he planned on storming the building. Forrester had no other choice than to go along with it. He got the boss to agree to let his people enter the building first and they later did so. They took several men. Some that were true believers in the cause.

Forrester's team was doing well until Kostov noticed what was happening. He grabbed an American. An American known as Jason and who was only a teenager. Forrester made it out that they transferred and that Kostov long away just enough for Raines to take the shot. He killed Kostov. The hostages were freed and only the bad guys had to die. Forrester knew his team did the heavy lifting but he still gave it to the Bulgarian police so that they could count it as a win and Forrester and his team got to return home. Forrester learned that his dog had a couple of lumps. One was found during a surgery to remove the other and so his dog had to undergo an even more extensive surgery than was planned.

And Forrester rushed home to be there with his dog just in case the worst happened.

Summary:	Kellett and the Fly Team reluctantly join an investigation in Northern Ireland, when one of Kellett's shifty yet valuable informants who's arrested for his connection to a robbery and murder, calls her to help clear his name.

The episode begins with Special Agent Forrester's dog doing better. He's healing well. His cone is off. It was too early to tell about what they found when they performed surgery on him and so Forrester felt ready to return to work. However, his agent and girlfriend Kellett had a new problem. Someone from the bureau was sniffing around their case in Prague and it was considered highly suspicious that she shared a cab with a murder suspect. She later claimed that the suspect had been ruled out. Her father confessed to the crime and she didn't know why she was being asked. She was told by the investigator that her role in the case was being questioned. Someone with power. Someone with the authority over Kellett's life believes her actions in Prague were illegal. And it's being investigated.

Forrester knew nothing about it. He didn't even know an investigator had been sent until he showed up at the office and an agent from Europol informed about the internal investigation. Forrester would have asked Kellett about it, but they got a call from Ireland about an asset being under arrest and that person asked for Kellett. Kellett was the one who develops assets all over Europe. Liam Walsh was connected to a robbery and murder. He claims he's innocent. He wanted Kellett to help him get a lenient sentence in exchange for getting her information about a group smuggling firearms into Europe.

Walsh gave them an address. The FBI went to this location with the armed response unit of the Belfast police and unfortunately, they walked into a building that went up in a fire. The Belfast police assumed it was a trap. They weren't happy about the FBI's involvement or the American intervention because they believed they were going to get Walsh off on killing a cop. Kellett was one of the few people to speak up for Walsh. She said the information he has was too important to risk and so they got Walsh to reveal what he knows. He didn't say everything. He held certain parts back as he talked about his friend's stepdad who used to be IRA.

Just because the war is technically over doesn't mean the troubles haven't stopped in Northern Ireland. Walsh mentioned some diehards who are in charge of the gun smuggling and he tried to make it out like he hadn't been involved, but that was a lie. Walsh was in it up to his neck. Kellet supposed ex-wife and she realized that the divorce was just for a show. They got a divorce in case anything went south with the IRA. The divorce would mean the ex-wife wouldn't be targeted. Which the ex-wife realized because she planned on making a run with her daughter and Kellet and Forrester interrupted this when they went to question her.

Neither of the special agents decided to stop Walsh's family from fleeing. They knew the risks that Walsh was taking and it didn't matter to them as long as his family was safe. They still wanted to use Walsh to get information on the smuggling ring. As they were awaiting Walsh to make a move with his buddies, they got footage of the shooting and Walsh was right. He was innocent. His friend drew his weapon once the police drew theirs and the policewoman that died only did so because her partner had been a coward. The guy who was the loudest about throwing the book at Walsh was the same guy who jumped when he saw that Walsh and his friend were armed.

This in turn spooked his partner. She pulled her weapon. The friend pulled his. They took each other out and the partner meanwhile went to hide behind a car. This cleared up any charges that Walsh might face, but he still needed to help them with this gun-smuggling thing and so Liam asked for something else. He asked Kellet to safeguard his family. She convinced the Northern Irish police to take a step back while she went alone with Walsh and that was a ruse to make sure no one was following them when he collected his family. His daughter was scared but they reassured her. Kellet then drove around for a while before it was revealed his family was going to be fine.

They arrested everyone involved in the gun smuggling ring while she was driving around. She didn't tell him until after the arrests were made because she wanted to make sure he would still choose the right thing and he did. Walsh proved he wasn't truly tied to the cause. He was just doing so for money and so he was arrested for the part he played but he will most likely get out in a few years. Walsh's family was now safe. And Kellet returned home to be questioned.

They had a photo of her on the bridge where the gun used in a crime was later found dumped, but Forrester claimed to be her alibi and said that photo of Kellet wasn't in fact her. And she didn't like that he lied to her. She later told him that she needed a break from him while she deals with things.

Summary: When an NYPD officer is detained in Transnistria for aggravated assault, the Fly Team investigates his claims of infiltrating a sex trafficking ring being concealed by those in power. Also, Forrester receives an unusual message from an unknown sender.

NYPD Detective Mark Douglas was found beaten up in Transnistria. He got into a fight with some thugs that ended in him getting tied up in addition to beaten up and thrown into the trunk of a car. But again this happened in Transnistria. It was considered the Wild West out there. The FBI didn't have any contacts in the area. They didn't have friends and the local police could be bought and paid for. Douglas got in trouble in the wrong city. He couldn't have chosen a worse place and so Special Agent Forrester traveled there with his team to try get their fellow American out of the situation he was in. He warned his team to be cautious. They were to handle everything with care. And they flew to the country in the hopes of helping Douglas.

Douglas shot a man in Transnistria. The man he shot went on to die and so he was facing murder charges. Something that was going to cost him his job as well as possibly his life. Douglas originally flew to the country to be a part of the NYPD's International Liaison Program and he was supposed to be looking for terrorists. He instead came across a human trafficking ring. He found out about this by carrying out an off the books investigation that no one else knew about. Not even his bosses. His direct boss also happened to be Douglas's cousin. His cousin has been looking after him since Douglas fell apart after his wife died.

Douglas's late wife was pregnant when she died in 9/11. He was the never the same after that and so this job was arranged for him so that he could finally start over. But then he found trouble again. Douglas said he was at the bar and that his badge had been showing and so he was approached. He claims he was approached by people who were looking to traffic girls through JFK. Douglas also kept mentioning one girl that was about to be moved. Her name is Sabina. He claims he had information to back up the secret investigation and that it was on his laptop hidden at his apartment.

Forrester went to the apartment with his team. They didn't find the laptop. They instead came across a detective from the local police and he claims he didn't find anything while looking. Something the team knew was a lie. They carried an investigation into the bar that Douglas mentioned and they found out women were being trafficked. They also found out that the woman that Douglas seemed fixated on saving was a dead ringer for his late wife. Its why he got so caught up. He thinks this is his second chance to save his wife and nothing will stop him and so the dirty cops in on the thing had tried rushing through his sentencing.

Douglas also died in custody. He was rushed to a hospital where he was saved and so a dirty cop made him an offer. They offered to look the other way while Douglas gets transferred back to the United States. Douglas's cousin wanted them to take the offer. They instead told Douglas it was up to him and he wanted to stay. He didn't want to leave without making sure that Sabina was alright. Forrester asked Douglas to put on a show in front of the dirty cop. They pretended that he agreed to get sent back home and that all they needed to do was clear it through the Americans. Forrester's delaying tactic was enough to spook the dirty cop to directly contact the person controlling him.

The guy didn't know that the Americans were listening in with technology left by the Germans. Forrester and his team gathered enough evidence to take down the dirty cop and before they did so — they made a guy an offer. They told him in exchange for working with them that he and his whole family can be relocated somewhere safer. All he had to do was flip on bosses. He took the offer and he helped take down the human trafficking. They captured the man making the calls. They told him if he cooperates that it will end better for him and then asked where Sabina. Sabina wasn't with the girls they freed from the bar.

It turns out Sabina was never a victim. She was working with Florian to get information on Douglas and Douglas was so caught up in the fact that she looked like his ex-wife that he didn't see it. Sabina wasn't going to be arrested, but Forrester asked her to pretend that she had been freed so that Douglas would still have peace of mind. Sabina didn't do it for free. She was paid a thousand dollars in her own money and so she put on a convincing act. And poor Douglas still fell for it.

But Forrester and his team made friends in the small country. They know that if they ever return that there were people there they could talk to. And Forrester also learned that his mother was tracking his movements.

Summary: When a notorious American tech tycoon becomes involved in a murder in Frankfurt, the Fly Team must chase him down amid the local protesters he's incited with his conspiracy theories on social media. Also, Jaeger relishes working in her home country, and Forrester must make a decision involving his mother's past.

Special Agent Forrester hasn't always had it easy what with his traitor of a mother. His mother was literally a traitor. She sold information on the Americans to the Russians and then disappeared. It was assumed that she went to Russia to hide out.

Forrester was sixteen when everything went down and it did scar him. He was never the same again after his mother's actions were revealed. But he still met with her after she contacted him while he was overseas. Forrester led the international arm of the FBI unit. He was man with authority and power now. He thought he could handle the visit and it of course went south very quickly. His mother denied all wrongdoing. She claimed to be still working to the CIA.

Forrester didn't fall for it. He told her to get around to whatever she wants instead of wasting his time by saying she was proud of him and so that's when she revealed what she actually wants from him. She wants a file. The file was labelled "Hutchinson". It was located at the nearby American office and she couldn't get it because she's still a wanted woman. She wanted Forrester to get the file. But he shot that down. He wasn't going to help a known traitor. Forrester went back to his office where his team was waiting for him. They noticed quite early on that something was wrong. He was acting out. He was brusque with everyone.

Even the dog noticed it. The others asked Kellet about it and she confessed that they broke up. She claimed it was mutual when it wasn't. She also said they've both moved on when she knows darn well that Forrester would take her back in a heartbeat. Yet, the team didn't need to worry about Forrester because it wasn't long before they caught a case. They were brought in after a wanted American murdered a German in Frankfurt, Germany. The killer was identified by a surveillance camera that caught the murder and it was Michael Vestal. He was the founder as well as CEO of an anti-virus software.

Vestal was in charge right up until it was suspected he murdered his business partner. He fled before he could be charged and he was trialed in absentia. Since then, Vestal has maintained an online presence that he uses to target the American justice system. He claims he was framed. He even did so again after he killed his neighbor and it was caught on camera. He took to social media to claim that Americans were stalking him. He posted photos of both Forrester and Kellet. Which could ruin their undercover work in the future and so Forrester said they should just keep their head down and make the case.

Something they tried to do. It was just that it was harder what with their faces out there and a conspiracy theorist now has everyone believing they were out to kill him. Forrester and his team tried pursuing the guy. They were met with resistance every step of the way. Vestal had apparently handed out hundreds in euros to anyone who was willing to stop the guys "stalking" him. Vestal had also built up a presence in Germany. He had friends everywhere thanks to his money. Some of them had even fought Forrester. They grabbed him at a club. He was fighting them four on one when Kellet showed up with her gun and evened out the numbers.

There was also another guy that tried to hide Vestal. Vestal invested two million dollars in his startup, so the guy thought he owed Vestal favors like hiding him from the police. It didn't dawn on them that the German police also wanted to arrest him for murder. Vestal's conspiracy theorists fans were there and they even protested outside of the precinct after they learned one of Vestal's friends was arrested for helping him. They tried to set up a sting to capture Vestal using this supposed friend but it got ruined by his fans during one of their more violent protests. And so it was Kellet who realized how to capture Vestal.

Kellet remembered a book that Vestal was reading. It was Madame Bovary. It was about a neighbor who seduces the married woman next door and they later found a key hidden in Vestal's home that unlocks the door to the neighbor's home. The same guy that he killed. Everyone thought he killed his neighbor because the guy found out he was a wanted criminal. Instead it happened over a woman. The local police tracked down the wife as she was trying to cross the border and hidden inside of her trunk there was Vestal. He was arrested. His arrest was posted on social media by the local police who hadn't appreciated the protests his little stunt caused.

But Forrester decided to do something smart. He got the Hutchinson file or he made the motions as if he was going to get it and then he reported to the authorities that he was in contact with his mother. They set up a sting. They watched him as he was supposed to meet with his mother and that's where things ended tonight.

There's no telling if she showed or not.

Production Code: INT113
Summary: When a couple flees to Albania while awaiting sentencing for bilking millions in COVID relief funds from the U.S. government, the Fly Team and Jaeger must contend with the wife's menacing crime family as they try to track the duo down. Also, Kellett works the case from Budapest as she and Forrester try to regain their professional boundaries.

In California, a mother and father were forced to say their goodbyes to their teen children. They cut their GPS ankle monitors and fled. Soon after, authorities kicked in the door demanding to know where the teens' parents were!

Kellett confronted Forrester about calling counter-intelligence on his own mother. She was baffled why he didn't let her in on his decision. Since they were no longer together, he felt he would resume being her boss, which no longer affords her that intel. She rebutted that was he being vindictive and he spat bureaucracy at her.

Kellett decided to stay back in Budapest while the rest of the team flew out on the next case which was located in Albanian. A couple, James and Fiona Delvina, fled to the country while awaiting sentencing for swindling millions from Covid-19 relief funds from the U.S. government. Forrester updated the team about the fugitives and tracked them to Albanian, where Fiona was from.

Agent Forrester, Raines, and Vo were introduced to Lieutenant Agnes Nika who updated them on Fiona's background. Her family was a long-time crime syndicate family in Albania. Her father, Lorik, was at the helm. It seems Fiona married "down in class" by marrying James. The Fly Team needed to speak with Lorik. The authorities had him under surveillance and could set a watch on his schedule.

When they visited the man, he stonewalled them and Forrester felt he knew more. Upon exiting, the authorities received a rude awakening as they weren't safe in the country. The Albanians involve kept a strict code of "Besa," a code of honor meaning, "to keep the promise!"

Forrester formed a plan to use James and Fiona's children as bait to draw out the parents. He charged Raines and Vo with posing as counselors from the U.S. Embassy to the children and if their parents showed, intercept them. Raines felt it was risky and Forrester shut his opinion down, demanding they get the job done!

Raines and Vo picked up Gabriel and Amelia who were 12 and 16 years old, respectively. The agents felt guilty but had to follow orders. However, Lorik arrived to intercept his grandchildren from The Fly Team and confront them about their ploy.

The Feds offered $20K for information on James and Fiona's whereabouts. A woman, Lendina, who worked for Lorik contacted them about the reward. They planned to meet her later for an exact location on their fugitives.

When they met Lendina, they gave her half the money and she shared the couple's location. When they arrived, James and Fiona, weren't there. The woman dupped them but the money bag had a tracker and Europol Agent Katrin Jaeger tracked and confronted the woman. While she was asking for the fugitive's whereabouts, James appeared outside the house. Lendina attacked Jaeger but Jaeger defended herself and broke the woman down, then chased after James who fled in a car!

Jaeger chased James until he spun the car towards her and stopped. She apprehended him without incident. Forrester was closing on her location and spotted an SVU with the teens. The driver fled and Forrester intercepted the teens.

While Vo spoke with the teens, Amelia wanted the truth from the agent. Their father was in custody and they needed their mother to turn herself in. The parents would be extradited to the U.S. can the children would return with family in the States.

Forrester used James' children as leverage to give up his wife's location. Raines grew agitated at Forrester using the children as leverage and asked Jaeger if his recent anger was regarding his mother.

Forrester pressed on James once more and he agreed. He tried to convince the agents that their plan was to distribute the Covid funds in their community but Forrester didn't buy it because they were greedy. Fiona called back and James told her that their children would be split up if she didn't turn herself in. She agreed to come in, provided she had time with the children before being arrested.

Forrester warned James, if her mafia family was planning an ambush, "they will get smoked!"

Fiona didn't show up and messaged the Feds that she will reunite with her kids someday. Amelia heard the news and offered to give the Feds her possible location...

Kellett called Forrester about Amelia turning against her mother. The case was too close to home for Forrester and he couldn't go through with using the teens to rat out their mother. He couldn't split the teens and didn't want Amelia to live with the same guilt he's currently feeling.

Back in Budapest, Kellett pulled Forrester in the camera blind spot at the office and kissed him. They continued at his place.

Production Code: INT114
Summary: The Fly Team must figure out how to keep the U.S. attorney general safe amid a possible security breach while she's in Hungary for an important meeting. Also, Raines' sister is in Budapest.

An American was murdered in Budapest. The man was identified as Kenneth Gregory. Gregory was the senior aide to Attorney General of the United States and he was in Europe because he was following his boss. His boss Rebecca Blair was coming to town. Its why she sent her people ahead.

They were supposed to clear the way for her and instead someone killed Gregory. They pushed him off of a bridge. They also kept his cell phone. The same cell phone used to coordinate Blair's schedule and so right away the belief was that the Attorney General was in danger. Her security team had said that maybe Gregory committed suicide or he had too much to drink.

But Forrester and his team were able to prove that Gregory wasn't alone when he died. He went over the side of that bridge and the woman with him had never reported it. She just simply walked away. Forrester was in talks about the important matters of the case.

He had to stay back at the office and so it was Kellet who ran point. Kellet also had to deal with Blair. Blair was warned to cancel her trip to Hungary and she ignored it. She came anyways. She said her mission was too important to delay. It seems that this "mission" was even more than Blair's life. Kellet later asked Blair about it.

Blair said the last person in her job had ruined American goodwill abroad. She was therefore traveling to help repair the damage and to show their allies that America was still a player in the game. But Kellet didn't believe her.

He didn't think an American cabinet member's life should be put at risk for some good PR. She kept digging and she asked her Europol friend to do the same. Together they found out that the Americans were in town to negotiate a prisoner release. The Americans were looking for an American that was hiding out in a Hungarian prison. His name is John Mallory.

Mallory was a civil analysts for the Department of Defense. He helped compile a list of allies in Afghanistan that needed to be moved to safeguard from the Taliban and somehow that list got into the Taliban's hands. The Taliban went on to hunt those people down. Mallory took a classified report proving what happened. The Americans then put out a warrant for his arrest. So, Mallory ran off to Hungary to seek asylum. He was put in prison while the Hungarians and the Americans worked out a plan amongst themselves. Somehow the woman on the bridge must have learned about the incident and she wanted nothing more than to prove what happened.

Gregory wasn't just picked at random. He had to have been tracked from each city he was traveling in. Kellet and the team checked the hotel where Gregory was staying in. They showed around the picture of their suspect and the waiter recognized her. He said that she visited the hotel several times. He also remembers that she was staying at a nearby Airbnb. The team followed up this lead and they were able to identify their killer. Her name's Mia Sahar. Sahar was a former mercenary whose fiancé was murdered in Afghanistan after the Taliban learned he was helping the Americans. And so Sahar was out for revenge.

Sahar wanted to avenge her fiancé's death. If she couldn't save Mallory for being deported, the truth about what happen would never get out and so Sahar started plotting. She stalked Gregory. She waited until he was drinking alone to drug him. She then used the opportunity to get him on the bridge where she ultimately killed him. But here's the thing. Gregory had helped her. Sahar had written to the Americans after her fiancé was killed for help and Gregory read those letters. He felt so bad for her that he met up with her. He told her what really happened. He thought it would give her closure and it actually helped her formulate a plan.

Sahar then killed Gregory as a means of getting Blair's security information. She was going to use it to kill Blair and stop Mallory from being deported. But Kellet and the team later caught up to her as she tried to make a play on Blair's life. Kellet hadn't agreed with what Blair was doing to Mallory but Forrester had reminded her that it wasn't their job to judge Blair. It was their job to keep her safe. Kellet said as much when Blair asked her for her opinion on Mallory. Kellet didn't agree to what was happening and she thought whistleblowers deserve better only she did her job and she got Blair safely back on a plane to America.

As for what happened to Mallory, that wasn't the team's problem and so they didn't ask questions.

Summary: When Raines' sister goes missing in Kosovo, he goes rogue to find her, putting his job and his life on the line. Also, Kellett and Forrester face further scrutiny from inside the Bureau.

FBI Special Agent Andre Raines has a sister. Her name is Jordan. Jordan was actually in Europe. She was traveling around the continent with her boyfriend and a friend when they stopped over in Kosovo. They didn't go to the capital.

They instead stopped off in Pristina which was considered a hot spot because it was high in terrorism and organized crime. It, therefore, wasn't surprising that the trio was targeted the moment they came off the train. The person they were supposed to be meeting up with had never shown. They instead ran into kidnappers who grabbed the women and knocked out Ethan.

Raines later heard from Ethan. Ethan told him that some guys grabbed Jordan and their friend Grace. He also never heard from his connection in Pristina. It turns out the trio had only gone there because Ethan's roommate from college had promised to hook them up with drugs.

None of them had ever tried it before. They all wanted a new experience and why not in Europe? It didn't dawn on them that they were dangerous or that they shouldn't go into a no-fly zone like Kosovo. Ethan told Raines everything he knew and so Raines asked him to send a map pin. He was going to go to Kosovo to rescue his sister.

His team wanted to go with him. But they couldn't. Kosovo wasn't considered safe for them and the FBI had no presence in the country. Jaeger had offered to open up a channel there. She said it would take time and Raines didn't want to wait. He ran off to Kosovo the first chance he could.

His team wanted to follow him, but they were held up by Special Agent Porter. Porter was an officer from the Office of Professional Responsibility. He initially began investigating Kellett because her actions in an old case were suspect and now he was just antagonizing everyone. He kept showing up like a bad penny.

Porter also came with paperwork that states they couldn't postpone talking to him. Porter just wanted Kellet and Forrester. He asked them questions about the past couple of years. He wanted to know every detail. Forrester eventually had enough of him. He demanded the guy get to the point and so he did.

Porter came because of Forrester's mother. She is wanted by the United States. Porter wanted to use Forrester and Forrester's relationship with Kellet to get to his mother. They were working it out as Raines had to apologize to Kosovo for traveling to their country without the proper paperwork.

Raines had to explain himself to the local police because they arrested him. They threw him a cell and they were going to leave him there if he hadn't play nice. Which he did. Upon his release from the holding cell, Raines tracked down this friend his sister was meeting up with. Vo was helping him on her end. She gave him this Leon Grubic's address. He went there. He ran into Ethan. A high Ethan. Ethan said he did it to take the edge off and that his friend Ethan was helping him. Ethan apparently contacted a private investigator they used. He brought him back to his apartment to meet Ethan when Raines pulled a knife.

Raines doesn't believe Leon's story that the girls getting snatched was just a coincidence. Raines suspected that Leon played a part in the human trafficking and so he held Leon at knifepoint to find out what he knows. He even thought the private investigator was in on it. But before Raines could get answers, someone came at him. This third-person fought Raines. Raines got away thanks to a Kosovo detective. He started working with the guy. They found the supposed private detective was really a plant and that he was helping local thugs kidnap girls and bleed their parents of as much money as possible. Leon's cousin was one of them.

The private investigator was named Alcott. He was the one in charge of the ransom demand and Raines found out about it. Raines made the guy contact his friends. He told him to pass on a message that the women aren't to be harmed. It would lessen their value if they were. But Ethan was dead. He died because the fool failed to mention that one of the women had a brother in law enforcement or that he worked in Europe. Raines and his detective friend were able to trace the call that Alcott made. They then went after the women. they later found them being stashed at a warehouse and while the detective called in back up — they didn't wait.

Raines rescued his sister and her friend. But Detective Tolka died. Tolka's wife and children immigrated to the United States. He wanted to join them. His visa was being held up and he thought that if he helped Raines that Raines would help him. Something he would have done if Tolka had survived.

Raines and the women were detained for a short time by the Kosovo police, but they were released when Jaeger opened up a Europol office in Pristina and claimed Raines was working with her agency on this case.

Raines made sure Jordan and her friend got on a private plane back to the United States. He meanwhile returned to work and he found Porter gone. It turns out Porter was such a menace because he was seeing a prostitute in their city. And he wanted a reason to visit her without his wife finding out.

Summary: The team lands in hot water with local authorities when Vo is found at the scene where a Hungarian gambling regulator was murdered.

FBI Special Agent Cameron Vo ran into an old friend in Budapest. It wasn't a coincidence. Her friend Nick Thorpe was someone she knew in childhood and they went to Quantico together. Thorpe always wanted to be an FBI Special Agent like his dad. Vo was there when he became one, but now she was hearing that he left his job there and that he was currently working in the private sector. Vo and Thorpe went to go have a drink. She noticed that someone was looking at him. Thorpe excused himself from the table. He went outside and the other guy went outside after him. The next thing Vo is hearing is a gunshot. She goes outside to see that the person who clearly knew Thorpe was now dead. And her friend was missing.

It doesn't matter if he was FBI or retired. He wasn't typically a guy to run from the scene and so Vo reported what happened to the police and the police came to believe that Thorpe was their shooter. They began looking for him. It was at risk of fraying American/Hungarian relations. The American ambassador in Hungary had sent someone to question Vo. They asked Vo about her relationship with Thorpe. She told them everything she knew. She even mentioned how he quit his job in the bureau and so that's when she was informed he hadn't quit. He was fired. He lied to the FBI. They fired him after that and the rest was a mystery.

The United States had no idea why he was in Hungary? Or why did he supposedly murder Roland Torok? Torok was the murdered victim they all assumed was Thorpe's job. Only Thorpe broke into Vo's apartment. He waited for her there. He told her that he didn't do this. He said that he works for a man who ordered Torok's death and that he hadn't pulled the trigger. Thorpe wants immunity and protection before he says more. Thorpe ran after Vo suggested bringing him in. She reported it to Kellett and Thorpe later called her. He offered to help them in exchange for immunity and protection.

Kellett brought the offer to Forrester. Forrester enlisted Jaeger. They got Thorpe a deal and he came in. He said he was a private contractor for a man named Paul Kovacs. Kovacs was a big casino guy in Hungary. He was also in bed with the Russians. He was using the casino to funnel money for them. He wanted to get into the American markets. He was hoping to use Las Vegas as a bigger money laundering place for the Russian mob. Vo was going to go undercover. She was going to pretend to be a buyer. She was going to get drugs in exchange for money. She pretended to be a big person in the States and Kovacs fell for it.

Kovacs was charmed by Vo. He flirted with her. He made a deal with her. the team meanwhile was checking into Kovacs's people. They learned that one of his henchmen had been in the area during Torok's murder. Thereby, proving that Thorpe was telling the truth. He hadn't killed the guy. It was his boss who carried out the job and Thorpe ran because he was scared. Vo felt vindicated that her friend wasn't a killer. She vouched for him. She was proven right and so all she had to do left was to finish the deal she made with Kovacs. She met later met up with Kovacs. She came carrying seven million and he tried to rob her.

It turns out the guy he killed had stolen money from him. Which didn't help because Kovacs was already embezzling from the Russians. Kovacs needed that money to keep the Russians happy and so he tried to rob Vo. Vo and Raines were able to turn the tables. They saved themselves and Europol moved in to arrest Kovacs. The team got Torok's killer as well. He died, but his gun was checked and it was the same bullet used to murder Torok. The team thanked Thorpe for his family. He had claimed not to know that Kovacs was going to rob them and so he got to walk away scott-free after assisting them in their arrests.

Vo followed him back to the casino where he was staying. She got a call from Forrester telling her to bring Thorpe in and she couldn't do so because he had disappeared. He was no longer staying at the casino. He checked out two days before the op. It turns out Thorpe was embezzling money. Not Torok. Torok tried to blackmail him over it and so he told Kovacs that Torok was responsible and that's what led to Torok being killed. Thorpe then blamed everything on Kovacs. He soon got rid of Kovacs by contacting Vo. Thorpe was playing everybody. He even played a friend. Vo got angry. She felt like a fool for falling for his lies and she had even believed his lie about why he got fired.

Thorpe wasn't trying to capture pedophiles by breaking some rules. He worked in white-collar. It's how he learned how to embezzle money. The team caught up to Thorpe as he was flying out and they arrested him for the conspiracy to commit murder and embezzling. And so Vo's job was safe, but she will never trust as easy as she had with Thorpe.

Summary: When an American vintner is shot and killed on his wine estate in France, the team must determine if the region's local protest group with a history of violence against foreigners is to blame.

Forrester was finally learning Hungarian. He even got a tutor. He figured he's been living in Budapest long enough to learn the language and that's what pushed him to hire Sara to teach him. Sara was young. She was beautiful.

She was also interested in him. Sara let it be known that she would much rather be tutoring Forster than out dancing and so that alone was very telling. But work eventually called. Forrester was asked to travel to France for a case and that put an end to his flirtation with Sara.

For now. Forrester and his team were asked by Europol to investigate a murder of an American.

The American was named Daniel Spencer. Spencer moved to a small French town to open up a winery with his wife and he also managed to convince his best friend Henry Martin to move to the area on his own as well. However, both men faced stiff opposition to their wineries.

The small town had turned against them. They hated Americans. They hated that Americans weren't suffering like they were. They hated that the French government was driving them into bankruptcy like they were the French. This small town was also known as the center of a French right-wing organization called "CRAV".

Europol was worried that a murder of an American was just the first step in a terror plan. They asked Forrester and his team to go there to investigate and what they found was a town that hated all outsiders. Especially Americans. Daniel and Henry came in with the idea of revolutionizing wine.

This ticked off the French wineries and they turned to CRAV. CRAV was a small group until this. They were known for intimidation tactics. They've even burned down French-raised wineries that tried to switch and grow olive trees. What they have never done is kill. Not until now. The community was looking to push out the Americans that were buying land and that's when CRAV came in.

Or to better put it that's when Guillaume Marais came in. Marais made himself out to be one of the people and he is French. He had military experience. He firmly believed in ousting all outsider influence. He even ran Henry's wine tanker off the road. It ruined the wine. He lost money from that. He tried to fight Marais and unfortunately Marais was more experienced.

He would have killed Henry if Forrester hadn't stepped in. Forrester and his team were just as hated as all outsiders. The local police hadn't even wanted to help them. They didn't give them office space. They put up in an old house that had been abandoned in town.

The only one the team thought was willing to talk was an American chef living in town. The chef has lived in France for most of his adult life. He did his best to learn the culture and to adapt their customs but often forgotten that he wasn't one of them.

The chef was willing to talk to Forrester. He told Forrester about how Daniel and Henry rubbed people the wrong way. He said he asked them to meet with Marais. To talk to Marais about settling in. Henry wasn't willing to do it and so Daniel did. Daniel's wife was pregnant. He had more of a vested interest in making his life in France work. The chef didn't hear how the meeting went. He just knew it happened weeks ago.

Forrester noticed that one of the sous chefs was recording them. He pursued the guy and the guy pulled a knife on him. They fought. Forrester was in fact losing when Vo stepped in to save him. They called in the local police to deal with the stabber and Forrester also told them that if they didn't help that he will personally make a call to Paris to get city cops out to the town. So, that's when the local police stopped ignoring evidence. They started assisting the investigation and they also gave Forrester an actual office to work out of. Forrester later met with Marais. Marais admitted to intimidation tactics. Nothing else.

He said neither he nor CRAV had anything to do with the murder. They would never lower themselves to it. Marais had full control over his people and this town. They had nothing to do with the murder. The FBI looked up Marais's phone records. He was clear. Henry's wasn't.

Henry was in talks with a radical that had been kicked out of CRAV and he was talking to the guy even on the day that his supposed best friend was murdered. It turns out that Henry had been behind the worst scare tactics. He ordered that Daniel's door being kicked in. He ordered that Daniel's vats are shot out and unfortunately the man he hired took things too far. And ended up shooting Daniel.

Henry was trying to get Daniel and his wife out of France because they made a partnership agreement that states if anyone abandons the winery that it had to be sold to the remaining partner. It had to be sold at the initial value. Not the value it was now. This meant Henry would have gotten millions for scaring away his best friend and he did so because he didn't come from family money. He didn't have it made like Daniel. It's why he never bothered to make nice with the locals. He was just out to make a quick buck. His wife knew about it too. And so they were both going to be charged with Daniel's murder.

But the team caught the shooter and so that guy was going away for life.

In the end, the Americans were responsible for another American dying. Daniel's widow Shannon had said she wishes her former friends will both go to hell.

And Forrester returned to Budapest where he had another tutoring session.

Summary: Following a frenzied attack by gunmen aboard an American-owned river cruise ship on the Danube, the Fly Team heads to Vienna to investigate why the boat was targeted. Also, Forrester realizes his feelings of mistrust caused by his past are affecting his personal relationships.

A river cruise was attacked. It happened as the ship was sailing into Vienna. The men with guns boarded the ship and took all that they could. They also shot several people. They even shot a child. Forrester and his team were called in because the cruise was technically an American ship and it also crossed country borders. Forrester had already skipped out on his museum plans with his tutor.

He was, therefore, free and this case came at the right time. Vo couldn't join them. She had to return to the States to testify in a trial that got pushed back and so it left just the three agents to travel to Vienna with Jaeger. And what soon learned early on is that the gunmen were looking for something on the ship.

The gunmen hadn't taken the guests' wallets or jewelry. They instead went to staff lockers and raided them. Whatever they might have found or might not be unknown. The gunmen had gotten spooked. They fired at someone who fought back and they sprayed the whole ship with the bullets.

It's how they ended up shooting the child. Poor baby girl. She was on the cruise because she wanted to see the castles on the river and she probably got that idea from Disney. The girl was in the hospital because the bullets perforated some of her organs. She was getting treatment as Kellet was interviewing her parents.

They repeated what everyone else said. The gunmen weren't interested in robbing them. The bullets also didn't fly until that one man tried to fight back and so odds are it was never in the gunmen's plans to shoot anyone. They just did so because they panicked. Also, their panicking shows they weren't pros.

Pros would have better kept it together. The team believes some dissatisfied staff might have been involved because the cruise belonged to a company whose CEO was cutting down salaries and firing people. The company suffered during the pandemic. It hasn't gotten back on its feet just yet and that could be why someone on staff has turned to drug dealing.

The ship was searched in the aftermath. The team later found twenty kilos of heroin onboard. Someone on staff must have smuggled it on to assist the Balkan cartel and somehow that information got out. It's why that guy fought back. He wasn't some innocent victim. He was a member of the Balkan cartel.

He was there to protect the shipment of drugs. To make sure it got to Vienna safely. The gunmen didn't find the drugs onboard like they thought they would and so that's when they panicked. But the question left was who would be dumb enough to steal from the Balkan cartel?

The team didn't know the answer to that question. They chose to look for who was helping the cartel on the ship because that person might have tipped off the gunmen and it turns out the ship's captain had a half-brother that should never have gotten a job on the ship. Sebastian Klein had a record. If the company hadn't short-changed on background checks, Sebastian would never have gotten hired. Sebastian also speaks German and the gunmen had been overheard speaking German to each other. The team looked into it. They went digging into Sebastian's life and it turns out Sebastian had incurred a debt with some Germans.

The Germans wanted their money back. They threatened to beat him up unless they got their money and so in a state of panic Sebastian told them he was carrying drugs for the cartel onboard the ship. He offered to do the same for them. But they still beat him up. They then tried to steal the shipment on board only they couldn't find it. Sebastian had told them it was hidden in the lockers. It was actually hidden in the kitchen. Sebastian had been smart enough to lie about that and he's been in hiding ever since. He was probably afraid of what the cartel would do to him once they found out he was the leak.

Sebastian later reached out to his brother. His brother was still in custody at the time and so they made Baur agree to meet up. They got him to agree to a place they wanted him to. They then followed him there, but something happened. Baur and Sebastian got into a fight. A gun became involved. Baur shot his brother. The FBI came in after they heard the shots and they found Baur with a gun in his hand. He claimed that Sebastian pulled a gun on him with no provocation. He was sticking to that story and still, no one believed him. It just didn't make sense to the FBI. They had audio of the apartment where the men met up. They played it and it revealed Sebastian's last words were "why".

Sebastian wouldn't have asked that if he just tried to kill Baur. Baur was clearly lying. He was lying about everything. He must have known about the drugs and he was worried his screw-up of a brother was going to reveal everything. So, he killed him. He turned on his family. Forrester got Baur to admit as much. Baur revealed to all the players what happened. The Austrians got to make their arrests and Forrester realized he made a mistake somewhere along the way. Forrester had found out his tutor Sara had been onboard the ship. He was worried she was a part of the smuggling ring and so he accused her without evidence, but she was clean. She had nothing to do with the smuggling ring. Forrester only got to that conclusion because everyone betrayed him at one point in time.

And after everything, Forrester went back to Sara's apartment. He apologized for what he said and she wasn't willing to take him back. She said she needed someone stable. And in his grief, he reached out to Kellet.

Summary: The Fly Team works to hunt down the sniper responsible for killing an American during an attack targeting a biomedical lab in Belgium. Also, Jaeger clashes with her boss at Europol over her allegiance to the Fly Team.

A sniper targeted a medical research lab. He or she managed to kill one as well as injure several. The doctors at the lab were able to save themselves by locking themselves in one of the refrigerator and they didn't come out until the shooting was done.

Now, this lab that was targeted was the same lab that was trying to get ahead of the pandemic. They were finding new cures and doing their best to anticipate the new variants that could come up. The doctor killed in this shooting had been an American. His death guaranteed Special Agent Forrester and his team's involvement. They were working with Europol and the Belgian police to solve this crime in Brussels.

But this lab was a hot topic. The man who led the lab was Luc Michaud. Michaud was Europe's Dr. Fauci. He was the man with the answers about the pandemic and he wasn't afraid to take politicians to task for politicizing the pandemic. Michaud has a lot of enemies only it was the team that determined this shooter was military. They found his sniper's perch. It was in a closed off area. To make shots from there, the killer had to have had military experience. They also found bullet shells. The shells came from a DSR-1 sniper rifle. It was military range. The team's next stop was at the local military base.

There, they found out that a sniper weapon was missing. There was a list of targets there. The list included Michaud and his family. There was also missing ammo. All this led back to Corporal Patrick Jans. Jans was recently demoted. He was demoted after he used racial slurs, committed to violence against other soldiers, and used pictures of liberal politicians for target practice. Forrester didn't understand why Jans hadn't been dismissed from the army. He was just demoted. Something that didn't seem like it was enough and they learned that Jans took a rocket launcher with him. And so finding Jans was imperative.

They needed to find him before he could use that RPG. The team talked to men who served alongside him. Those people all claimed that Jans would never do this and that he was just all talk. Talk that he got from his mother. The team spoke to the mother. They learned that she was just as crazy as her son and that she thought the shooting had actually been the government trying to hide what they were really doing at the lab. These people were so sure that the doctors advising caution were only trying to control people that Jans was like a hero to them. Especially to his mother. She went full racist on Special Agent Raines.

Raines is a black man. All he did was ask the woman where her son is and she went full white power on him. Then, to make matters worse, Jaeger heard from her boss. Willem Smit has been advising her to reel in the Americans (like she could) and he hated how she's been ignoring his advice. He told her that the moment the Americans stop delivering results — she will be fired. Jaeger heard the threat. She ignored it because she had other things to focus on. Like protecting Michaud and his family. Jaeger moved everyone on the hit list into protective custody. She released everyone who wasn't on the list and that proved to be a mistake.

It turns out that Jans hadn't written the hit list. It was Michaud's assistant who wrote the list. He was pulling the strings. He was taking out all of his rivals. He didn't even care about the same agenda that Jans did. Claes was simply using Jans to eliminate everyone in his way. He even messaged him on the location of Michaud and his family. Jans had been hiding in the national park. Forrester and Vo came across him when he took out their car with his RPG. But Jans escaped the park. Jaeger was also taken off the case. Smit thought she risked Michaud's security by letting Claes go.

Forrester thought taking Jaeger off an active case would prove disastrous. He also didn't agree with Smit on moving the family and so the only thing he asked for was to be able to provide security. Forrester was moving the family when Jans shot Michaud. Michaud was shot in his shoulder. Forrester was able to get him out of the line of fire. One of his agents went after Jans. Kellet pursued Jans and he managed to get the drop on her. He pulled a gun on her. Only, Kellet was able to talk herself out of a tight spot. She managed to convince Jans not to kill her. She just hadn't been able to convince him not to kill himself.

Jans killed himself. He stepped off a ledge of a tall building. But Michaud survived his injuries. His former assistant was also later arrested and that still didn't stop Jaeger from being fired. She got blamed for everything that happened.

And the team doesn't know where to go from here.

Summary:	The Fly Team and Jaeger head to Berlin when the 19-year-old son of an American billionaire is found unresponsive in his apartment. As the team works to determine if foul play was involved, they realize there's a shadowy group on the case as well.

Jaeger still has two weeks left on the job. She was fired and so she thought she would ride her last remaining weeks with her head down. But then something odd happened. The American Ambassadors to both Hungary and Germany reached out to Special Agent Forrester because they wanted him to take a case. They wanted him to find out what really happened to Thomas Watts. Thomas was found unresponsive in his apartment. He was an American student in Germany going to the university there. His was important because Thomas was the nineteen-year-old son of billionaire Gabriel Watts. And Watts was pulling strings to get answers.

Watts wanted to know what happened to his son. He and his wife flew into town to attend their son's graduation and their son never showed up. Hence they went looking for him. They found him at his apartment seizing on the floor. Thomas had been overdosing on fentanyl. Something the local German police were denying was a problem in Berlin. The lead detective had said that was an American problem. When Forrester and his team agreed to take the case, they spoke to that detective. They felt he was lying about fentanyl being a problem. They looked into that and they also talked to Watts.

They found out from Watts that his son was a rebel against money. Watts was worth over sixty billion dollars. Thomas hadn't wanted to touch any of it. He didn't want bodyguards. He didn't want a private car driving him where he wanted to go. He wanted to live a simple life as an artist. The only thing he agreed to take was an apartment and he didn't even live there. He just kept it for show. Thomas was actually slumming it in another posh apartment in a place his parents hadn't agreed to and so Forrester went there with Kellet. They found the place being ransacked by a private detective firm that Watts had hired.

Watts had called every politician he knew to get them to work his son's case, but he thought he could handle the overdose as does everything else and that meant throwing all his resources at it. Only he was contaminating the case. The FBI told him to back off. They said they would get answers and so Watts agreed to hand over Thomas's private laptop and cell phone. It wasn't long before Forrester found the girl that Thomas was last seen with. Thomas had drawn a picture of her. It was at his fake apartment. The one where he also threw a party on the night he took drugs. The girl said that Thomas had offered up the drugs. She only took one pill. He took several.

Thomas had apparently gone into a manic state. He allegedly took several pills all at once. The girl said the drugs had been his and that taking them had been his idea. He was still taking them long after she left. Or so she claims. There was no way to prove it because Thomas's cell phone hadn't been turned over to them and, when they went to go complaint about it to Watts, they ended up witnessing Thomas's last moments. He died of an overdose. The parents were so distraught that they demanded that their private firm handled everything from here on out. And that didn't sit well with Forrester.

Forrester didn't believe a private firm should control a joint task force. He said he and his people were going to continue to work the case. They found the drug provider. They got the deliveryman to come to meet them. Only, the German police had called in Watt's people. They detained the deliveryman and that left the team unable to follow the guy into learning who the source was. Watt's people as well as the German police blew the case. They ruined. They were ruined at several levels. Almost as if they wanted to destroy any chance of finding out who was calling all the shots in the Berlin drug trade.

Forrester finally snapped at the local German police. He blamed them for the incompetence of the case. Chief Detective Honsel knew darn well what he was doing when he informed Mark Levinson about an active case. Levinson has been working for the Watts family for the past fifteen years. He knew them better than anyone. This is why Forrester began to doubt him after Levinson's people ruined the case. They looked into it. It turns out Levinson was the one who bought the drugs for Thomas. Thomas had no idea where to get the drugs for himself. Levinson got it for him. And so his death was Levinson's fault.

The FBI arrested Levinson. He basically asked for a lawyer once he was confronted and so that confirmed things for Watts. He went running in there to get his hands on Levinson, but they pulled him off him. And the FBI later received an apology from the ambassador who wanted them to drop the case.

The team arranged a private viewing of all of Thomas's paintings as a way to comfort his family. They were doing that while Jaeger was using the new political capital she got from closing this case. She made sure that Smit was fired and that she was reinstated as the Europol liaison with the FBI.

Production Code: INT121
Summary: When a private jet carrying American citizens is shot down outside of a small town in Poland, the Fly Team looks into the man who missed the flight. Also, Forrester is conflicted when he receives information from his mother.

Jaeger was promoted after she took down Smit. She now gets an office job. She can also choose her replacement. Making the next case be her last case with Forrester's team. Someone used a rocket launcher to take down a private plane. Everyone on board was killed. There was another person scheduled to take that flight and the authorities were left with questions about why he missed that flight. But this case went to the FBI because of the victim involved. The person who owned the plane was Hutchinson as in the Hutchinson in Hutchinson file that Forrester was asked to steal for his mother. He never did so.

He didn't want to betray his country.

Forrester instead reported the interaction with his bosses. They created a sting operation to capture his mother. Forrester therefore never got close enough to the real file to see what it said about Hutchinson. He had no idea what Hutchinson did for the United States or why he was important. He was just told his plane was shot down. Forrester was going to investigate this as he did with anything else and instead he had both the United States and his mom wanting updates on the case. His mother reached out to him after months of no contact. The last time they saw each, Forrester had been warning her against showing herself because he had been followed.

But now Forrester has questions. He wanted to know why Hutchinson was so important. His side wouldn't give him the answer to that and neither would his mother. They were instead focusing on who else was supposed to take that flight. The man who got the lucky escape. Paul Novikoff. Novikoff was in charge of all spy operations in Russia. He was even the name who supposedly turned Forrester's mother and helped her to betray the Americans. Novikoff disappeared after he failed to make the flight. He went to the ground because there was a chance the assassins were after him and if they were after him it was because he was thinking of defecting from Russia.

Or that's what Forrester's mom was claiming. Angela claims she never became a traitor. She said she was still working for the Americans and that Novikoff was willing to join them. He just wanted the reassurance of safety first. Forrester chose to believe this story because it was his mom telling it and so Forrester went off the book. He left his team in Budapest. He didn't tell them where he was going. He simply told them that he was going after Novikoff and that he was chasing intel. His bosses hadn't liked hearing that because they thought Forrester was committing treason by talking to his mom. And so a friend from the CIA went after him.

They wanted to keep him safe. They allowed themselves to be seen in the hope that Forrester would confront them. He did. He told his friend that he had to do this and the friend was doing his best to dissuade him when he got shot. The assassins after Novikoff had shown up. They would have killed Forrester too if Jaeger's fellow Europol officer hadn't shown up. The officer gave Forrester a ride. He later met with Novikoff who revealed he wanted to abandon Russia. He began feeling that now was the time because he hated the war in Ukraine and he wanted no part in the atrocities happening.

Novikoff said he expressed his doubts to Angela. Angela then revealed she was under deep cover. How she still works for the United States and so Angela agreed to help Novikoff defect. She told him that her son could help him. Novikoff tried leaving on his own. He missed his doomed flight because he got a flat tire and he didn't want to take any more risks. But he chose to believe in Forrester. Forrester called in his team after he got Novikoff. He asked them to arrange an extract mission. They sent people to wait at a private airport. Forrester headed there with Novikoff. And they ran into some trouble on the way there.

They ran into the assassins. Forrester and Europol had to do their best to fight off the assassins and Novikoff was injured because he broke his arm in a car crash. So, Forrester had to do most of the fighting. He was almost close to the airport when Novikoff tells him that Angela has had a change of heart. She now wants to go with them. Forrester was tempted to turn back for his mom only the assassins kept coming and so he had to focus on Novikoff. He got him to the airport when Novikoff got another message from Forrester's mom. This time she claims she's been compromised and that she can't get in touch for a while. She has to go dark.

Forrester was angry he couldn't go back for his mom. They had just gotten into contact after years of no word and now he'll lose her again. Forrester later received one call from his mom in which she said this was goodbye and told him to give up on her, but it's his mom and he'll never fully give up on her. And he has so many questions after seeing men moving to detain her before she ended the call.

He doesn't know if she was safe and he wasn't safe either because the assassin was still following him.

Production Code: INT201
Summary: The Fly Team and Europol liaison Megan Garretson investigate when an American police detective on the Federal task force is murdered in Paris while looking into a U.S. firm suspected of selling illegal weapons in France and Middle East.

An American was brutally murdered in Paris. His death sparked an investigation. The investigation was led by Supervisory Special Agent Scott Forrester and his team. They've investigated American-involved crimes before. They usually get cooperation from the local police, but nothing is quite as valuable as their aid from Europol. Their last Europol liaison was promoted. She can no longer work cases with them and so they have a new person working with them. Well, not so new. Megan Garretson was an old friend of Scott's. It's one of the reasons she was recommended for the job. And she was needed on the new case.

The American that died was a detective. Detective Brandon Davis was murdered because he was in Paris on a joint federal task force. This task force was investigating an American weapons company that was operating from Delaware and had ties all across Europe. Everyone suspected this company of arms deals with nefarious people. They seem to be willing to sell anything for the right price. Davis as well as the rest of the task force were trying to find the dirt on them. Davis met with an informant on the day he died. Her name is Corine Desroches. Corine didn't seem to know that he was dead when Scott and one of his agents showed up.

But she seemed unnerved when she found out that Davis had been murdered. She also seemed jumpy as Scott was interrogating her and both he and his agent noticed that Corine had a few bags already packed. They had to inform her that she couldn't leave town until her possible involvement with Davis's murder was fully investigated. Scott's other agents also came across something. They went to one of the addresses in an investigation that Davis thought was important. They ran across someone who was looking for something there. They managed to run the guy off. Only he escaped in a vehicle with diplomatic plates.

Special Agents Vo and Raines reported what happened. They also continued to look into why that site was so important. They couldn't find anything there and they later returned to headquarters to go through what else Davis thought was important. Davis seemed set on a town called Fontainebleau. They didn't know why that town was so important until they found Davis's apartment. His apartment was full of notes. Most of it was about something called "Dechets". It turns out dechets were a nuclear power component that kept the lights on in Paris. And once the team figured out how dangerous it was, they moved on the town with full force.

Except they were too late. Someone had already stolen the material and could sell the dirty bomb anywhere in the world. The team wanted to take down the guy behind the company, but they found they couldn't do so because he has diplomatic immunity. Keith Panzarasa was an American. He was also white. Which makes his diplomatic status in a Western African country all the more puzzling. It turns out the Embassy of Dondi sells its immunity status to anyone with a big enough bank account. Meaning the team couldn't rely on their help in taking down Panzarasa. They instead had to use subterfuge.

The team hacked into the Dondi Embassy's computer servers. They planted an email that they sent to Panzarasa demanding money or they were going to take back his immunity. Panzarasa replied to the email. Just not before he collected the radioactive material from the guys he ordered to steal the thing. Those guys were later found dead of radiation poisoning. The guys hadn't handled the material properly. Their fate could be Panzarasa's. something they mentioned when Panzarasa and they were able to capture him alive after a brutal fight with Scott. Scott and Kellet showed the man pictures of what happened to his friends.

It did move Panzarasa. But he still was being selfish. He didn't want to talk until he had been given immunity and there was no way he was going to get that. Megan made him a deal. If he tells them who he sold the radioactive material to, he gets to stay in a French prison instead of an American one. Panzarasa caved. He said he gave the dirty bomb to Omar Fane. Fane was from Dondi. He was a henchman and his country was under the threat of a coup. Fane wanted to use the dirty bomb to frighten his own people into accepting the current regime.

The team later found Fane thanks to a young boy who said Fane buys candy from an outside vendor. They got their hands on the dirty bomb and they prevented it from exploding. They did so well that Scott took the time to discuss Raines's future with said man. Raines could move up the pecking order with a desk job back in the States. He turned it down because he likes working in the field. He likes saving the day. He told Scott as much and Scott was happy to keep him on the team.

Scott also heard back from his mother and he doesn't have to worry about that Russian that was following him. The Russian guy got sent back to Russia. His mother however reassured him that she was still alive. And that she's okay.

Summary: The Fly Team attempts to bring a local predator to justice with on-site help from one of the victims, Charlotte Weston.

An online pervert was harassing teenage girls. He would get photos of them. Of them without their clothes and he would threaten to send it to their whole school if they didn't want what he wanted. There was usually one girl who tried to fight back by saying she would go to the police. But he would tell them "good luck with that". He wasn't in the United States. He said the authorities couldn't touch him and so the authorities contacted Supervisory Special Agent Scott Forrester's team. They began looking into it. They realized the predator they were after had slipped up with one of his victims. He admitted his screen name was MenoKid.

MenoKid was based in Budapest. Meaning he was right in Forrester's backyard. Forrester and his team went digging into MenoKid and they found out that he was in communication with another predator. Someone who went by BlackPenj. BlackPenj was identified as Andar Molnar. He was Hungarian. He served six months on a child pornography charge. He was supposed to stay away from other predators as well as schools and he broke both of those rules. The FBI arrested him. They questioned him about his friend. He eventually told them that MenoKid was simply one of the man's screennames.

The guy happens to have ten to fifteen screen names. They were all used in the same con. The pervert would make a fake social media profile of a handsome young man going to Junior College and he would convince these girls to send him pictures. One of the girls was as young as twelve. He would get them in a compromising situation and then use that as leverage into forcing them to make actual child porn. It was working right up until he met Charlotte Weston online. She didn't react like his typical victims. She instead pretended to worship him. And he lowered his guard with her.

It's how she found out one of his screen names was MenoKid. Charlotte was set on seeing this through to the end and she even traveled to Budapest to help with the case. She traveled without her mother's approval. She has nowhere to stay. But she still came all the way from the United States just so that she could stop this guy. Her mother in fact called the FBI because she found out about her daughter's trip and she thought they should be warned. The mother didn't think it was a con to trap MenoKid. She thought Charlotte really was in love with him. And that she was helping him evade capture.

Scott's team talked about it amongst themselves. Special Agent Kellet said that Charlotte reminded her of a younger her and that she believed the girl. Charlotte was only seventeen. She needed all the help she could get and so she convinced the team to take a chance on Charlotte. They did. They used Charlotte's cell phone to send MenoKid a message. They traced that message back to a bar and they didn't find MenoKid there. It turns out that MenoKid was rerouting his WiFi through a bar. He wasn't there. He was just nearby. He also hacked the security cameras to the bar so he knew that Charlotte was working with the police.

He pushed her on it. He demanded to know if she was working with the police. Kellet told her to deny it. She did and it wasn't enough for MenoKid. He demanded that she send him a full nude video of herself or he was going to send the rest of the information on her to publicly humiliate her. Charlotte pushed him back. She challenged him and he backed down. The team meanwhile followed the security cameras back to MenoKid's apartment. It turns out he lives with his mom. His real name is Deco Horvath. He looked nothing like his online persona. He was just some lonely young man who realized he could befriend his fellow perverts.

Horvath wasn't at his mom's place when they went looking. He went on the run. He even made them wipe his computers because they didn't realize they triggered his escape plan and so they wanted to use Charlotte again. There was just one problem with that. Her mother showed up. Her mother refused to believe Charlotte was helping. She tried to intimidate the FBI. She told them it was her daughter and none of their business. She completely ignored the fact that Charlotte is seventeen. They didn't need the mother's permission to talk to her. Especially when she's not a suspect.

Charlotte continued helping the FBI. She sent Horvath a video of herself saying she's in London. She admitted she snuck away from her mother and that they could finally meet in person. Horvath was so tempted that he opened the video. It helped pinged his location. He realized Charlotte was a liar. Just not before they found him at the airport. Deco had tried getting a ticket to London and he was arrested before he could reach his phone. He was later interrogated where he admitted he could name names of his pedophile friends. The decision was put to Charlotte. They could get her for the crimes against her or grant him a lesser sentence in Hungary.

Charlotte chose to take down the ring. All she wanted in exchange was to say her peace to Deco. The FBI granted her this favor and she got to tell her abuser off. He tried to tell her she was different, but the FBI shut him down before he could sprout more lies.

Charlotte was also offered a job in a Victim Advocacy Group and she said she couldn't wait to help other girls in the same situation.

And afterward, Scott's team went back to that bar and they brought them so much-needed business.

Summary: The Fly Team is off to Mallorca when an American is found brutally murdered.

Some anti-capitalist protesters went too far. The group broke into a mansion in Mallorca, Spain. They destroyed property. They wrecked the home. They hung a huge banner about "eat the rich" and they taunted the police when they showed up. But someone was dead. There was a body of a woman who lived there beaten to death. The protesters claimed they found her like that. The police weren't sure to believe them and the fly team became involved once the victim was identified as an American. Her name was Emelia Sofer. She was the daughter-in-law of Ronan Sofer. He was known for running a blood diamond trade and he was recently kicked out of Spain because of sanctions.

The family was ridiculously wealthy. They were billionaires. Or they were before the sanctions. They also brought a lot to the economy and so not everyone was happy when Ronan got kicked out. But Emelia was someone that was adored by the community. She was well-liked. Even the police were taking her death personally. They bit the head off of the Europol officer who dared to ask if Emelia had any enemies. Scott and his team realized early on that the police weren't going to be of much help. The police were focused on the protesters and Scott and his team were sure the protesters weren't involved. And they were sure because only three of the protesters were seen going upstairs.

Lizzie, Arturo, and the leader of the group were Quinns. Quinns was seen on the balcony by the police for most of the time they were upstairs. He was ruled out. Lizzie only joined the protest as a means of getting more likes on social media. She wanted to be an influencer and she was building her brand. She would never risk that by killing someone for the cause. Which leaves Arturo. Arturo was seen with a golf club smashing up items and the golf club was the only thing missing from the scene. It was suspected to be the murder weapon. But there was a problem because Arturo didn't have enough blood on him to be the killer.

The killer had to be covered in blood. There was blood sprayed everywhere in the room Emelia died and so her killer had to be covered in it as well. There was no blood on Arturo. There was a spot on his sleeve. That was it. He couldn't be the killer because forensics says he was innocent and so Scott's team was looking at Emelia's family. Her husband. Her husband claimed to be in meetings all day in Barcelona. He wouldn't admit who he was in a meeting with and the team couldn't verify who the meeting was with. But they had their suspicions. They believed that Levy was talking to his father. Ronan wasn't allowed back to Spain only it seems Emelia wanted out.

Emelia was a soft-hearted young woman. She did a lot for charity. When the story broke of her father-in-law's dealings with the blood diamond trade, Emelia approached an accountant. She told the accountant that she wanted to know how to walk away from the family and keep her assets safe. Emelia told this person that she wanted to return to Minneapolis. She made no mention of her husband joining her. Something the team brought up to Levy. Levy claimed he always planned on joining Emelia back in the states and that his wife didn't have to worry about his father. He also wouldn't go on record to confirm or deny if his father was back in Spain in spite of the sanctions.

The family lost a lot to the sanctions. Most of their assets were frozen. Their properties were seized and so the team wondered why Emelia was at that house that day. Her husband claimed not to know why she was at that house. The team looked into the house. They found out that Ronan had changed ownership. He placed it under contract by a shell company and the shell company was a front for Emelia. Emelia was American. She wasn't restricted by the sanctions. Having the property in her name kept the house safe. Emelia's accountant friend was asked about the house. He said Emelia only found out about it once Ronan sent her a bunch of paperwork and asked her to sign.

The paperwork was a ruse according to the accountant. It was actually a way of getting Emelia to sign off on selling the property so that Ronan would be able to claim the money and so the accountant told Emelia this once he saw the paperwork. He managed to convince her to sell the property first. He said that Emelia wanted to donate the millions to a charity. He also said he had paperwork proving this back at his apartment. Special Agent Kellet went with the accountant to go get the paperwork. Scott didn't go because he went after Levy. The police were trying to close the case and they were in a rush to blame the protestors.

Scott had thought it was Ronan who was pressuring the police to close the case. It wasn't until Scott followed Levy and ended up meeting Ronan himself that he was able to clear things up. Emelia wasn't killed for trying to take money away from her in-laws. She was killed by her accountant friend. It turns out her father-in-law had warned her she was being scammed by the accountant. The charity she was going to donate to — was fake! It was all the accountants. He wanted to scam her and her father-in-law warned her about it and so Emelia confronted Brian. And he murdered her.

He even attacked Kellet to try and cover up his crimes and she was forced to knock him out to arrest him. Now, that guy was facing life for murder.

The property reverted back to Levy upon his wife's death and he won't go against his father.

Summary: The team races against the clock to organize the release of a former U.S. Marine detained in Istanbul.

Supervisory Special Agent Forrester befriended a kid in his building. The kid had approached him one day and it seemed like he was going to ask for help, but his mother called him back into the apartment and Forrester was forced to drop it. Not that he actually did so. He instead worked on gaining the kid's trust. Zsolt admitted that his parents have been arguing a lot. His father was currently away on a work trip. Forrester also got the father's name. He was going to look into the guy. He also didn't want to spook the kid with too many questions. And he was going too deep so background info dumps when he also got called into work.

An American was detained in Istanbul. The American's name is Emily Reid. Reid was in the military. She was in turkey on a military trip that she turned into a family trip and so her partner and her daughter had been with her when she got detained. She got detained thanks to a scam. She packed her bags just fine and after being out of sight for a minute — somehow Turkish "antiques" was found in her bag. Emily got detained. Her partner, James, was asked to pay a detention fee. But he refused to do so. He instead called the American embassy because the military didn't want to be seen dealing with this problem. And the ambassador called Forrester.

Forrester went into the situation believing he was just dealing with dirty cops. Especially as the FBI didn't have a presence in Turkey. They weren't wanted there. Forrester had to rely on their Europol liaison to get an invite into Turkey and even that didn't guarantee them an office. Forrester's team normally works out of the local police station. But they couldn't do that this time because the guy in charge was a real pill. Dogan refused to believe his men were dirty. He wanted to hold onto Emily until he found evidence and he eventually did so. He found something buried in the wall of the apartment Emily was using while in Turkey.

Dogan realized Emily was a spy right around the same time that Forrester did. Forrester hadn't been warned that Emily's name was fake and that she had been in Turkey on a mission. Not even James or their daughter Zoey knew the truth. Emily's real name is Isabel Yilmaz. She was in Turkey getting someone with inside knowledge of the Turkish nuclear plans and Emily's people didn't know her asset's real name. Forrester had his people look into Emily's life. They soon found the most likely person to be the asset and they were going to collect him, but the guy got picked up by the Turkish authorities.

It was only a matter of time before the asset broker. The team needed to get Emily out of the Turkish detention and they needed to do it fast. So, they staged a prison break. Special Agent Vo visited the prison under the guise of getting Emily to talk and she instead was buying time until her partner Special Agent Raines hacked the prison. It was up to Vo to get Emily out of that prison. She struggled to do so and if it hadn't been for Raines then they would have gotten caught. They would have gotten caught several times. And even once they got her out, she didn't want to go with them because she wanted to save her asset's life.

Osman was more than just an asset. He was a friend. But he broke under custody. He confirmed that Emily was a spy and that Emily wasn't her real name and that was it. Osman was a Turkish citizen detained by Turkish authorities. There was nothing they could do to help him. Europol Agent Megan "Smitty" Garretson was supposed to transport Emily to the helicopter that would take her to a safer country. Only they got pulled over. Smitty ran a red light. The cop was going to arrest both her and Emily again and so Smitty assaulted the guy before pulling off. Meaning they had to race out of there before Emily got put back into prison.

What followed was a car chase as well as several maneuvers, but they got Emily out of Turkey and she was reunited with her family which was stressful alone because James had been debriefed. He now knows Emily isn't really Emily and that her whole backstory about her name was fake along with everything else she told him. And so it's up to him whether he wants to continue to be a part of her life.

Summary: The Fly Team searches Bucharest for a Romanian surrogate who goes missing shortly before carrying the biological child of an American couple to term. Also, Forrester's concern about the safety of his neighbors in Budapest intensifies.

Supervisory Special Agent Forrester didn't forget about Zsolt. He tried to approach Zsolt's father. He approached the man as someone that was just concerned about Zsolt's well-being and Peter fobbed him off. He said Zsolt was none of Forrester's business. But it was his business when a twelve old year old kid came to him for help. Zsolt's family was mixed up with the mob. His father got beaten up. Zsolt was covered in his father's blood when he talked to Forrester and there was nothing the FBI Agent could do about it because the family refuse to go to authorities for help. It didn't matter what Zsolt wanted. He was just a kid. It was his family that was the problem and Forrester's hands were tied until something changes.

Forrester tried talking to Kellet about other options when work called. Forrester and his team were contacted after an American couple lost contact with their surrogate. The Palmer couple didn't have much. They thought a surrogacy in Romania would be cheaper. It was at first, but then the costs started adding up and the couple were now two hundred grand in the hole. Only it didn't matter to them. They just wanted their baby. Their surrogate's name was Cosmina. They met her through a surrogacy clinic. They like her during her interview. They chose her to be their surrogate and it was a gestational surrogacy. The baby was biologically the Palmer's child.

Meaning the baby was American. An American child had been abducted and it was up to the team to locate the surrogate. They met with some resistance from Romanian cops. It turns out it doesn't matter if the baby isn't biologically the carrier's. The surrogate still has the legal right to keep the baby if she wants to. It was Romanian law. But the team had the Romanian government on their side. Everyone wanted to turn an American baby over to their actual parents and so the team went looking for Cosmina. They checked her apartment. The apartment looked far too swanky for a supposed country girl.

There were other things that didn't add up as well. Cosmina has asthma. Her pump at her apartment was empty and so they checked to see if she filled in prescription elsewhere. They found she was waiting on it at a pharmacy near the train station. The team went there. They eventually found Cosmina and she was no longer pregnant. She's claiming she miscarried. She said that she went into labor on her own and that the baby was born dead. She said she felt so ashamed that she dumped the baby in the river as part of a cleansing ritual. But Cosmina claimed she didn't tell anyone else because she was so ashamed of the miscarriage. And the team weren't buying that.

Nothing about Cosmina's story made sense. The team tried to fact-check it and it was impossible. They also couldn't find a body because the river could have swept any remains away. But what they did have was from Cosmina's surrogate friend. The friend has been down the surrogate route six times. She knows what expect. She didn't think Cosmina did. Cosmina also called her about what to use on a baby's flaky skin and so the baby survived. Or else there wouldn't be a reason to give the baby smooth skin. Then there was the fact that Cosmina was in contact with another couple. She was in contact with Howard Greyson and his wife.

The Greysons were wealthy. They've also been on the record about their fertility issues and so it seems they've turned to buying a baby. The team knew that the baby girl was born and that she didn't belong to the Greysons. If she did, they wouldn't have covered up their presence in Romania or have fled their hotel. The team went to the hotel and they found the baby cream. They didn't find the Greysons. They had to track down the Greysons using the GPS in their car. The team also learned that the woman who runs the surrogacy clinic was in on it. She was being given seven hundred thousand to make it all look legitimate.

Here's what happened: Cosmina had a healthy baby girl. She was fine with giving the baby away. She just wanted to be paid for it and she was so by the Greysons. The Greysons have no legal attachment to the baby. The woman who ran the clinic had some documents that Cosmina signed that handed over the custody of her baby to the Greysons. They were hoping to make their fraud/kidnapping look legal. But it wasn't. Forrester was able to convince the local Romanian police to finally get on board and they all together managed to find the Greysons before they could fly out of the country with the baby.

The Greysons couldn't legally adopt because Howard has a record. They then tried to steal a baby and were caught. The Greysons quickly lawyered up. Cosmina hadn't. The team was able to extract a confession from Cosmina and she confirmed that the baby was biologically the Palmers. Cosmina's situation was a trial run for the clinic. They were hoping to make double deals in the future and Cosmina's confession stopped that from happening.

The baby was later handed over to the Palmers and they were just so happy that they didn't care they were in debt. Afterwards, the team went out for drinks to celebrate. Forrester didn't join them. He continued trying to help Zsolt and so now he was spying on the mob that was controlling the family.

Summary: Vo's friend from the U.S. Navy calls in a favor to help find her missing nephew in Crete.

A friend of Special Agent Cameron Vo reached out to her tonight. This friend needed her help. The friend's name was Paige Taylor. Taylor had a nephew that was missing. They were both Americans. They were living in Crete because of Taylor's work on the American base there and Kody was only living with his aunt because his parents couldn't take care of him. His father was currently in rehab. The whole family has had problems with addiction. Taylor was the good one. She wanted to get Kody away from all of that and unfortunately, by bringing him to Greece she made it easier for him to jump from the frying pan directly into the fire.

Kody didn't really make friends in Greece. There was also the fact that homeschooling didn't work out. Taylor thought this archaeological program would help him fit in when he went to boarding school the next year. But the whole program was a hoax. It shut down three years ago. The web page that Kody showed her had actually been created four months ago and so it really was a hoax. The question is whether or not Kody knew about it. Kody was the one who brought up this program. He claimed he heard about it through social media. He also asked her to drop him off and that the program directors would come and get them later on.

Taylor never met anyone from this program. Or even the other kids that were allegedly attending. She simply saw the website and she chose to believe that Kody was finally making friends in Greece. She didn't realize anything was wrong until he failed to answer during two checkup calls. It wasn't until he missed the second one that Taylor went to the school, she saw it was closed and had been for years, and she realized her teenage nephew was missing in Greece. That is if he was still in Greece. She didn't know where he was and so she turned to the local police. They said they couldn't do anything because they ruled Kody as a runaway. She then turned to the American Embassy. And they told her about the local FBI unit.

Around then was when Taylor got in touch with Vo. She wanted her old friend's help in tracking down her nephew and they found out something unpleasant while doing so. They found out Kody was involved with the Typhon Faction. They were an extremist group. They've even been labeled a terrorist group. Kody has actually been using a computer at the local library to get in touch with these people and it started off small. They asked him to come to protests. He did. He even started throwing stuff at local police. It then got worse and worse from there. The TF took Kody to an abandoned farmhouse. They jumped him into their terrorist organization.

By that, they beat him until he felt like one of them. Kody managed to send a distress signal to his aunt from his phone not long after this beatdown. The FBI and local police used that to track down the phone and they found a bloody farmhouse. They also found car tracks leading to the local village. They went there and that's when they found Kody. Kody was beaten up. He was even branded. But he was alive. He also claimed that he ran away from the terrorists once he found out they were going to bomb a festival. He claims he jumped out of a moving vehicle and right away both Vo and Kellet knew he was lying.

They knew he was lying because there were no abrasions from the road on his arms or legs. He didn't jump from a single thing. He left his friends out of his own volition and if he was lying about an escape then he might as well be lying about everything else. The FBI looked into the festival. They knew there was no terroristic attack planned against it. Making it at least two lies Kody has told them. The FBI finally had enough and they detained Kody. They asked him what really happened. They wanted to know what his friends were planning. Kody refused to talk. Vo then strapped him to a polygraph machine and was going to question him again when Kody cracked.

Kody revealed what really happened. He said he was only beaten up because the terrorists wanted access to an American military base and he couldn't get in there unless he was injured. The terrorists hated that the Americans had made a deal with the government of Greece to enlarge their military presence there. The terrorists hated that. They thought Greece was selling out to the Americans and that's why they approached Kody. They got to a friendless boy. They told him that he would be fighting the fight of the righteous by helping them and so they beat him up. They let him go. He sent the distress signal. And he had his aunt take him to the base to be treated for his wounds.

Taylor didn't know that Kody carried a grenade onto the base. No one knew until Kody cracked and told them everything. The FBI alerted the base. Vo and Kellet even went there and they ran into gunfire from the TF. They couldn't stop the bomb from going off. But they were able to contain it before it took out the whole base. Taylor later tried to lessen the charges against Kody and she went to Vo for help with that. And Vo didn't help.

Kody was being deported back to the States where he'll serve time in a juvenile facility. He wasn't being tried as an adult and he was even being assigned someone to de-radicalize him. And still, Taylor ended her friendship with Vo because of it.

Special Agent Forrester hadn't been with his team on this case. He stayed behind in Hungary and helped his young friend Zsolt's father. He got the father free of the local mob and now Zsolt and his family can live freely. And so sometimes their job does come with perks.

Other times it ends long-standing friendships.

Summary: When an American businessman's bodyguard and girlfriend are kidnapped a few feet away from him in Barcelona, the Fly Team questions if the man is as innocent as he claims. Also, Raines grows closer to Maya, the owner of the team's favorite local bar.

Special Agent Andre Raines was in a new relationship. He was dating Maya. She's the woman that runs the bar that the team helped by giving her their business and it turns out Raines wanted to help her in another more special way. Raines was still smiling after a night with her when the call came in. The team was headed to Barcelona because of a double kidnapping. The girlfriend and the bodyguard of a wealthy American were abducted in plain view, but there was a moment of chaos and it seems the bodyguard wasn't the intended victim. Sean Doxon works for Brent Remis. Brent was proposing to his girlfriend Tiyana when a van pulled up beside them and tried to force them inside.

Naturally, the first question was why did Brent feel the need for a bodyguard? Brent owns an American construction company that's been operating in Europe. The first thing the team did was ask them if he was connected to the mob in any way and he said his company was clean. He also tried to claim that he got knocked out in the chaos of the abduction. But this happened right outside of a church during a wedding. There were cameras filming the incident and Brent injured himself as he was running away. He just let them take his girlfriend without a fight. The only one who truly fought back was Sean.

Sean worked his way up to a private bodyguard by first working as a bouncer. Brent met him outside of a club and the two hit it off right away. Brent hired him. They'd been together for years when this happened. The kidnapers came. Sean tried to save Brent and he ended up getting captured. Compared to Tiyana, Sean's situation was less sad. Tiyana and Brent have been in a relationship for four months and he was already going to propose when this happened and he showed his true colors. He was a coward. He ran off as his girlfriend and bodyguard were fighting for their lives and so that lowered everyone's opinion of him.

They didn't think it could get any lower. Then they found out Brent Remis wasn't his real name. His real name was Gerald Frederickson. He's been guilty of conning wealthy women out of small amounts. He was also on the run. He was awaiting trial in New York when he escaped after paying bail. He went to Europe. He began his crime spree again and now there's a website dedicated to him. His victims have all gone there to discuss the lothario con man. The feds look into Tiyana. They found out that she was making ok money at her consulting firm in Spain and that her parents were real millionaires.

The feds came to believe that Gerald decided to change his scheme after the website became public knowledge. Forrester wasn't with them because he was answering questions to the Hungarian legate. But the rest of them brought Gerald in. They questioned him. They demanded to know where Sean had Tiyana and Gerald told them that this wasn't him. He was a con man. He just wasn't that type of con man. Gerald also received a ransom demand. He gave it to the feds and they saw the video that the kidnappers sent Gerald. It was a video of Lydia demanding a hundred and seventy thousand euros. She kept repeating that number in later videos as well.

The amount was kind of odd. Usually, kidnappers demand simple numbers like a hundred thousand or a million dollars. They don't demand a number like a hundred and seventy thousand euros. Only the team looked into the website. They searched through Gerald's victims and they found out that one woman had lost that exact amount to him. Her name was Lydia Herrera. She was deeply troubled. She fell for Gerald's con. She thought he truly loved her and so she gave him money that funded his luxury lifestyle. And even after she found out it was all a con, she seemed more upset that he was no longer taking her calls.

Lydia also had wounds to her wrists indicating that she tried to commit suicide. She was so depressed about Gerald never loving her that she tried to end herself and so she was unstable. She also had family that was very angry with what Gerald did to her. Lydia stopped talking when they tried asking her about her father. So, they looked into him. His name was Robert De Garcia. He was a Spanish mob boss. He could never be caught by the authorities committing a crime and that meant they couldn't wait to arrest him for this one. They later found Sean's body. He was killed mere moments after the kidnappers grabbed him.

Sean's death proved how ruthless Robert could be. He was willing to kill anyone as long as he could get close enough to Gerald to kill him and so that was what the ransom was about. Gerald was asked to bring the money to a park out in the open. Robert wanted to lure Gerald there to kill him. The feds realized that right after they found Tiyana and rescued her. They noticed Robert wasn't with his men. That he went personally to meet with Gerald and so they tried to pull Gerald out of there in time, but he ended up getting shot. Not that anybody felt bad for him. Gerald wouldn't help with the ransom demand until all charges against him had been dropped.

Gerald may claim to love Tiyana, but he doesn't love anyone as much as he loves himself and he wasn't seriously hurt. He was wearing a bulletproof vest. The American federal charges were dismissed against him. Just not the state charges. Gerald was later extradited back to the states where he faces jail time. And his relationship with Tiyana was over the moment she was told the truth about him.

And so all in all a good way to end a case.

Summary: Vo goes undercover when the Fly Team investigates the mysterious death of an American model in Milan. Also, Kellett is caught off guard when Dandridge arrives looking for visibility on the case.

An American model was in Milan for an event when she witnessed something. She witnessed another model arguing with a man in Italian and not long afterward she witnessed the same model fall on top of a car after she either jumped or was pushed off a balcony. The local authorities had ruled Jocelyn Bell's death a suicide. They didn't even follow up on the lead that Emma Staley gave them about the fight. They instead wrote Emma off as unstable because it looked like she had been having drinks on the night in question. Which was true. She did have some drinks only she wasn't drunk. She was troubled that night because she witnessed someone die. And her reaction to that was actually quite reasonable.

The local cops didn't believe Emma's story about what she saw. But the FBI did. Forrester was once again being left behind because of a situation out of his control and so someone else asked to be roped in on any future investigations. Like this case with the models. Special Agent Kellett was running the lead on this one. She and the rest of the crew flew to Italy. They gave Emma protection. They also heard her out on what she saw. Emma saw Jocelyn arguing with an Italian man moments before the woman's death. Jocelyn didn't heartbroken or sad. She looked angry. She didn't look like she was going to commit suicide after a bad argument with her boyfriend.

Emma was also unclear on what the man looked like. She wasn't sure if he was wearing glasses or not. She seemed a little confused and so Kellett asked her if she had been drinking that night. Emma said she wasn't drunk. She was just shaken by what she saw. Kellett chose to believe her. She also warned Emma to stay inside. Kellett and the rest of the team then continued to investigate Jocelyn's death. Jocelyn had some unexplained bruises on her. She was attacked on that night or not long before it. She was bruised. She was mistreated and nothing about her death makes sense. She was in a building attending a crowded party.

When did she leave the party long enough to go into the owner's private suite? When did she get those bruises? What happened to the expensive necklace she was wearing? Jocelyn had a necklace that cost over eighty thousand euros right before she died. But it was missing from the evidence collected at the scene. Would someone suicidal take the time to take off her most recent gift right before she jumped from a balcony? There were so many questions and the Italian police were choosing to be incompetent. The guy guarding Emma had taken a lunch break. And while he was gone, two men in suits showed up and escorted Emma into a black car.

Emma was gone. The team assumed she had been taken. They thought they knew who did it. They believed that Jocelyn's Italian boyfriend was behind her death and Emma's disappearance. The boyfriend was identified as Walter Maldini. He was a known figure by Europol. Maldini manages over a billion dollars of the Vatican's assets. He was known as "the holy dealer". Maldini uses his connection with the Pope to hide the fact he's embezzling and might be beating on his girlfriends. But there was a problem with going after him. The Italian police refused to do it. The police were led by prosecutors doing all the investigating and Prosecutor Lineri refused to open an investigation into him.

Lineri also tried to shut down the FBI's investigation into him. But their short-term supervisor was able to buy them more time. He probably wanted something in exchange for it only Kellet knows how to fob him off. They kept up with the investigation as usual. They eventually found evidence of Maldini connected to the necklace. He bought it. They just needed to question him about it. Special Agent Vo pretended to be a model. She got invited to a major party where the models are supposed to cozy up to the VIPs. She made her way over to Maldini where she pretended she knew Jocelyn. Vo was doing really well at frightening him when his lawyer informed Maldini that Vo was actually an FBI Agent.

Maldini then said he couldn't kill Jocelyn because he didn't know her. He showed her Emma. Emma was alive and at the party. She was also claiming that she didn't see a fight. She said she had been wrong and that she never saw Maldini at the party. He apparently wasn't there. He was at home with his wife. She also said Maldini sent a car to pick her up from her apartment because he was interested in helping her with her career. But Maldini's lawyer also happened to be Emma's new lawyer. He came in with Emma after they wanted to ask her about the affidavit she signed. And her new lawyer now speaks for her.

Emma refused to say she saw the fight. She also said she wasn't on her medication that night. Emma is bipolar and now everything she said is tainted. But a hail Mary came through. The Europol Agent was able to find a witness. The witness said she had a security camera out on her balcony. It was saved to the cloud. The security camera had footage of Maldini pushing Jocelyn off of that balcony. And so Maldini was arrested for murder.

Emma was rescued from his people and she was returning to the U.S. She was going to give up modeling for a while. Especially as her own modeling agency was basically a pimp service. And it was being shut down for human trafficking.

Summary: The Fly Team races to halt a major art heist about to be perpetrated by an American.

Ken Dandrige was still hanging around. He was high up in the FBI. He was even higher authority than Supervisory Special Agent Forrester. But he was a nuisance. He demanded to be read in on every case and he kept Forrester from the field for one reason or another.

Something Forrester noticed. He first got tied up by the Hungarians. He was now stuck in Poland and he just knew Dandrige was behind it because he saw a file with Dandrige's name on it. He just didn't know why Dandrige had it out for him. Dandrige had Forrester doing analysts' work. He was filing papers and he wasn't with his team as they were getting fresh cases. And so Kellet finally confronted Dandrige.

Dandrige stopped by because he wanted information on their newest case. Kellet took that opportunity to ask why they didn't have their squad leader and Dandrige wouldn't say. He just told them to keep him updated in real-time. Which was a problem because the case was fast-moving.

It turns out that Europol recently took down art thief Daniel LaDee. LaDee was facing serious charges. He didn't want to do that time and so he made a deal. He told them about a bigger fish. He said there was going to be another theft. Only this one will be bigger. It will also involve Michael Semien.

Semien was wanted by the FBI for numerous heists around the world. He was about to pull off a big job and LaDee said Semien was looking for a driver and that's when Smitty remembered a little detail about Special Agent Raines. Raines scored the highest in driving at Quantico. His record hasn't been beaten in the years since he left.

He was the perfect guy to act as a getaway driver. They had LaDee introduce Raines under a special cover. Raines then went on to win the job itself by shooting a Hungarian cop right in front of Semien. It was all a ploy, but Semien bought it and he invited Raines to join the heist in Belgium.

Semien likes to hire international crews for his heists in Europe. The more he works with them, the more he trusts them. Semien got on a private flight out of Budapest with both LaDee and Raines in tow. They went with him as he later met up with the rest of his crew. Dandridge didn't want to allow Kellet and Vo to go at first.

He said that Belgium could handle it. But Kellet reminded him of the protocol. She said that undercover FBI Agents could determine who their handler was. Raines chose Kellet and they had the paperwork to prove it. Vo was going too because she was acting as Kellet's second.

Once faced with protocol, Dandridge backed off. He allowed them to go on the job. Except it was no longer safe for Raines because Semien had contact with the Belgium police. His contact informed him that he had a mole. The natural suspect was the new guy. Semien suspected Raines and LaDee had to remind him that Raines already killed a cop.

Semien checked Hungarian newspapers just in case. There was a news story about a dead cop with no suspects. Semien backed down from questioning Raines, but the news story did affect his team. His tech guy pulled out because he thought there was too much heat on them.

Semien was without a tech guy. So, Raines stepped up. He negotiated a better cut and his supposed cut would be bigger than everyone else's. It turns out Semien's big plan was to rob a bank holding onto two hundred million dollars worth of uncut diamonds. It was his biggest heist to date.

LaDee tried to get Semien to back out. He claimed it was too dangerous only Raines spoke up for the heist. Raines also later took LaDee to task for trying to back out. If Semien wasn't caught in the act, it was LaDee who would be going to prison. Not Semien. And so this heist had to go off one way or another and people were dying to make it happen.

The original tech guy that pulled out had gotten shot. Semien came to believe that guy was a mole and either way he wanted to be safe. But besides that guy, Dandridge has also been acting weird. He was calling the Belgium legate. He wouldn't talk to his people on the ground.

It seemed highly suspicious and everything was happening so fast. Raines didn't get a location before the heist. He was simply told that a car would be waiting for them. So, he went through with the heist. He got into the vault when one of the crew killed LaDee. They all knew LaDee was working with Europol because he was the one that brought in Raines.

It turns out Semien never lost his suspicions. He simply let Raines believe he was helping when in truth Raines got them in the vault and he was going to be killed afterward. But Raines fought off his attacker. He killed the guy and he and his team were able to arrest Semien and the one other crew member that survived. And they even determine who was Semien's contact. It was some low-level officer who later got arrested and will serve time.

And Forrester returned to Hungary. He got in Dandridge's face. Dandridge said he was observing the team because he found them sloppy. He thought Forrester wasn't doing a good job and that's why he was transferring Forrester to a desk job in Alabama.

Who knows what will happen to his team now?

Summary: When an American basketball player for a Lithuanian team goes into cardiac arrest, the Fly Team investigates along with Zoey McKenna, the new agent appointed by Dandrige.

Legat Dandrige wanted Forrester gone so much that he's already replaced him. Her name was Zoey McKenna. Dandrige added her to the team without Forrester's input or even a cordial word to him. Forrester just showed up one day and there she was.

It posed a problem for him because he hadn't told his team that he was being transferred just yet and so Dandrige told him to tell them before he did it for him. Forrester said he'd say something when the official paperwork came. He was also warned by Dandrige to focus on the case and that's what he did. The FBI flyteam were called in because an American mysteriously fell into a coma after a night out with his teammates. The victim's name was Derrin Vaughn.

Derrin was a basketball player. He played in Lithuania. He and his teammates went to Serbia for a bachelor party and they went to a strip club where Derrin lost consciousness. But there was an issue. Derrin fell into a coma after going in the backroom with one of the dancers.

The same stripper didn't even want to tell his friends what happened. They instead tried to cover it up by getting the security team keeping everyone out of the area and so Derrin's friend Bryan Moncrief pushed past the guard to find Derrin passed out on the floor. He went to go check on his friend. The security team at the strip club beat him up and they claimed he got rough with them.

There was a lot of corruption in Serbia. The officers there even put his hands on Bryan's neck because Bryan was denying using a knife to threaten anyone. Forrester landed in Serbia and one of the first things he did was talk to Bryan. The police there were trying to charge Bryan.

They wanted to put him prison for ten years just for trying to check on his friend and so Forrester was fighting against a lot when he started working this case. He also found out that the victim had gotten into a fight with his fiancé before he went to the strip club. Derrin it seems had called off the engagement because he was told Cici cheated on him.

Something that Cici denied. She was a social media influencer and she denies ever cheating on Derrin. She was one of the people at the hospital. She was there after Derrin died during surgery.

The Serbians were trying to claim he did drugs that night. They said he had a problem with his heart after going too hard and that's why he died, but Forrester and his people were butting heads with the local cops and Smitty felt compelled to report it to Eurpol. Eurpol found out what was happening. They came down on the Serbian government. And that forced the local police into finally cooperating.

Once the local authorities fell into line, the FBI were finally able to get somewhere. Derrin had used a party promoter to plan his bachelor party and even after he called off the wedding he still wanted to party. He turned to a man named Milos Zoran to help with that. Milos was known for setting up tourists to get drugged and robbed and so everyone figured that's what he did with Derrin's group. They later questioned Milos. He admitted the strip club was connected to the local mob. The team then went to the strip club with the local police and arrested everyone and it turns out they were claiming they had nothing to do with Derrin's death.

Derrin was considered too high profile for them. They wouldn't make a move on him if it could get out into the media and so they really did have too much to lose to risk drugging him. But then that pointed to someone else. Someone like his former fiancé. Cici inherits about fifty percent of Derrin's trust if he dies. They were going to get married. Derrin included her before the relationship fell apart. The FBI talked to Cici. She seemed pretty broken up that he died. Raines didn't think she would do this. Also, they found out that Derrin was drugged with a specific drug that could only be found in Switzerland.

The basketball team's trainer was Swiss. His name was Noah Muller. He claimed that he gave those drugs to Bryan and Bryan was denying it. But then the drugs were found in Bryan's bag. Which didn't make sense. Why would he hold onto the murder weapon if he killed his friend? The Serbs were okay with blaming a black man, but Forrester wasn't so quick to jump the gun. Forrester had his team to look into who else would benefit from Derrin's death and the answer was Bogdon Vidmar. He was the star of the basketball team until Derrin joined and took his spot. And Bogdon got stuck on the bench.

Bogdon and Noah were good friends. Noah even went to Bogdon's wedding and so the FBI realized they planned this together. They drugged him on the night out. They basically killed him together. But proving it was tough. They tried to trick them and that didn't work. The feds next tried wire tapping Noah's phone. And they got them talking about setting up Bryan.

Noah and Bogdon were arrested. Noah turned on his friend first. He confessed to everything. The plan wasn't to kill Derrin. It was just supposed to get him to test dirty on the drug test and get booted from the team. They hadn't known about Derrin's heart condition. Derrin hid it from his friends.

The only one who knew was Cici and she loved him too much to tell a soul.

And so Bryan was later released after he was told what happened, but he something he said convinced Forrester not to accept his own transfer. Forrester decided not to go without putting up a fight.

Summary: The Fly Team races to find a kidnapped American teen in Austria as the clock ticks on Forrester's reassignment.

Forrester decided he wasn't going without a fight. He wasn't going to just accept the transfer. He was going to try and fight it through several means and he has his whole team's support for it. Dandrige tried getting to the team. He told them that Forrester was going to be moved to Alabama whether he liked it or not. Dandrige seemed so sure of himself, but he forgot one thing.

Forrester is great at the job. He wouldn't have lasted so long if he wasn't. The only thing he was guilty of was that he was showing up his boss. He was too good at the job. And so Dandrige wanted to remove him so that he himself could take credit for "correcting" the team.

Dandrige was a clown. The team didn't take him seriously. They thought he made several calls that got in the way of the job and they all wanted Forrester to succeed at keeping his career. They even went straight to Forrester after they talked with Dandrige. They wanted to hear Forrester's game plan. He told them he was calling in favors everywhere he could. He said that he was doing his best and they wanted to advise him on how he could do it better when they got a call about a new case. There was a missing American girl that showed up in Austria.

The girl was named Katie Marsh. She went missing when she was a little girl back in the States. Its now been years since she was kidnapped and so it came as a surprise when a woman claims to have talked to her in Austria. Katie was a teenager now. She was unsteady on her feet because she had been drugged. She tried asking for help and she even left behind a ring proving who she was. Katie disappeared again after she tried asking for help. The woman she talked to hadn't known enough English to understand Katie was in danger.

But she got Katie's name. She also had surveillance footage of Katie herself. Katie matched the image of what an aged up Katie would look like and they tested the ring. The DNA from it proved that it really was Katie. It wasn't another Nicholas Barclay situation. There was this man who pretended to be a kidnapped victim to con a family and it took months of renewed hope as well as a DNA test for the truth to come out. Forrester and his team went into the situation hoping it wasn't another situation. And they instead confirmed that Katie was still alive.

The FBI flew to Austria. They met up with a cop that worked Katie's original case back in the states. Only the guy has since been fired from the police department. He also married Katie's mom. Katie's parents split up after she went missing because her dad wanted to move on and have another baby and her mom didn't think her child could be replaced. The mom remarried the only other person still looking for Katie. They flew to Austria the moment they heard Katie might have been found and they wanted to help in the investigation to find her.

Forrester was willing to accept their help. He just didn't want to accept McKenna's. McKenna was the new agent that Dandridge appointed to Forrester's team and Forrester didn't quite trust her. He still brought her along with the rest of the team to Austria. He chose to keep her out of the loop when they got more surveillance footage of the man who kidnapped Katie. The man was identified as Otto Lang. He was an American born in Austria. He has a dual citizenship. He also has a record. He was on file for picking up an underage prostitute.

Lang was in the area when Katie went missing. He made sure to grab Katie's favorite toys when he took her. He brought her to Austria where he's been keeping her hostage and she wasn't alone. The video that had Lang in it also had Lang with a second victim. The second victim was identified as Clara Brunner. She disappeared when she was five. Her mom was a single parent and overdosed not long after Clara was taken. And if Lang wasn't busy trying to control two victims at one — Katie would never have gotten away long enough to ask for help.

Forrester got a current address for Lang. He went there with his team and they were too late. Lang got away again with his victims. It seems Dandridge had gone on the news for a press conference to announce they found Katie alive. Dandridge was trying to take credit, but Katie was still out there and Dandridge ruined her rescue. Someone had told Dandridge about Lang. It couldn't have been McKenna because she didn't know about Lang. It couldn't be Detective Saunders because he left the police force to get away from the politics.

Someone else on Forrester's team had told Dandridge about Lang. Lang got warned in enough time that he enacted his place of escape. He traded his well-known car with someone else. He paid that person a thousand euros. He parked the car within a mile of a train track. Lang had everyone convinced that he was going to sneak on the train to Morocco. Dandridge ordered everyone to the train. The only person who didn't go was Forrester. Forrester didn't think Lang was going to leave Austria. He thought Lang was going to try to wait them out before he moved his two victims.

Forrester looked into Lang's aunt who raised him. He found out the aunt had a property that was pretty deserted. He went there and he found Lang and the girls. Forrester was able to subdue Lang. He arrested him and he rescued the girls. And so when they went in, it was Forrester that was praised for being the hero.

And the only thing Katie wanted was to stay in Clara's life. They grew close when they were kidnapped and so Katie's mom and stepdad didn't hesitate in putting up the paperwork to adopt Clara.

And McKenna came through for Forrester. She found out how Dandridge found out about Lang. Dandridge had hacked Forrester's phone. McKenna reported him to their bosses and Dandridge got sent back to Washington while Forrester gets to stay with his team. But McKenna was moving on to a desk job. She was climbing the corporate ladder and she had drinks with the rest of the team before she left.

Production Code: INT212
Summary: The team meet with Jaeger in Berlin. They delve into a case involving an unidentified American who killed an elderly German man.

Europol Agent Katrin Jaeger turned to Forrester for help with a case. There had been an American killer on the loose in Berlin. He was forcing men that had been a part of a program called "Indigo" to either kill themselves or risk being exposed as being part of that program.

This Indigo program was that bad. It was a Stasi program that ran in East Berlin during the Cold War. It was set up to kill any Westerner they considered a threat and it was rumored to be responsible for several atrocities back then.

Yet, this killer knew all about it. He went after Tobias Ganz who had been a part of the program only he didn't spot Ganz turning on a recording device. Ganz had been a spy. Ganz may have been forced to kill himself, but he knew he was going to die that night when he overheard someone breaking in and so he turned on the recorder that would later tell authorities what exactly happened there. He recorded the whole interaction with his killer. And so that's how they knew that an American was behind all of it.

The American's voice was recorded. Forrester and his team listened to it after they landed in Berlin. They were able to use the FBI's vast resources to later identify the Americans. His name was Paul Kennard. He was actually born in West Berlin. He lost his citizenship when he was adopted by an American.

Only he's in the process of getting it back. He put in the paperwork to reclaim his citizenship. He had to put down an apartment for his paperwork and so that's how they found out he was staying with a woman.

Her name is Anna Dahns. She was also German. The apartment that Paul used was in her name. She hasn't paid rent for the past three months, but she ran the moment Smitty identified herself as Europol. Smitty had to run after her and arrest her. It turns out Anna was Paul's sister.

They got orphaned as kids and there was only an uncle in America that was left. The uncle refused to accept both children. He took in Paul. He later died and so Paul went into the foster care system where he was abused and tossed around until he eventually aged out. And that's when he turned to drugs.

Anna was taken in by a local German couple. She's been in and out of trouble since she was fourteen. Anna was questioned about her brother. The authorities also had a photo of her being in the vicinity of Ganz's home after the murder. So, they used that to force Anna to talk. She revealed that she tried to stop her brother that night. She said he wanted revenge for what happened to their dad. The Indigo program was used to assassinate their mother. It broke their father and he would later hang himself in the family home.

It was Paul who found his father. He had been six. His sister Ana had been three. They got separated and Paul now wanted revenge. He was targeting everyone that had a hand in destroying his family. Paul next went after Michael Berkoff. Berkoff had been a part of the Indigo program. Only Paul didn't kill him. He killed Berkoff's wife. He killed an innocent woman because she had surprised him. Paul and Anna had only found out what happened after they found a safe deposit box that their father had left for them.

Ewald Havertz had revealed everything that happened. He put it in that box and his children found it years later. Paul wanted revenge. Anna thought their finding each other again was enough. She was ready to rebuild their family. It was just Paul who couldn't let the past go. Jaeger even understood him. She grew up in East Berlin. Her father escaped over the wall because he was afraid of getting arrested and unfortunately he left behind his family. Jaeger's mom was arrested for being an accomplice. Jaeger got taken in by a good person who raised her to be an incredible Europol Agent.

But this case brought back horrible memories. Jaeger was doing her best to push past it when they finally got Anna to reveal she was in contact with her brother. She later called him and sadly she warned him to escape Berlin. She just didn't warn him fast enough because they heard Paul admit he found the Director. The person responsible for their family falling apart. The FBI looked through the file that was handed over by Anna. They found out the Director was Simon Ballack. The former head of counterintelligence for West Berlin. It turns out he was a sleeper agent the whole time.

Ballack had been a friend of Paul's father. He was the one who knew how to break Ewald by killing his wife. He was responsible for so much death and Paul tried to stop him only Ballack was waiting for him. Ballack got the drop on Paul. He had a gun to Paul's head when the FBI came bursting in. They told Ballack they knew the truth. Ballack tried to turn the gun on himself and he lived because the gun wasn't loaded.

Paul took full ownership of what he did and he confessed his sister had no part in the murders.

Ballack was outed as a war criminal and the fondness that Jaeger had for the man who mentored her was now buried in the past.

Summary: The team investigates the death of an American lawyer working out of Budapest, Hungary, after he is killed by a car bomb.

Special Agent Jamie Kellett was helping the local Hungarian police when she injured one of them. She had been teaching them some self-defense maneuvers and she went a little hard with one of them. She injured his arm. But he wasn't upset by it. He even turned it into a joke with the others. He said this was the reason to always be on guard because you never know when surprises might come their way. Kellett later came across the guy during a case. The FBI were asked to investigate the assassination of an American in Budapest.

The American's name was Neil Cobb. He was a lawyer out of Houston. He was in the country representing an American company there in a lawsuit. The company was called Avercol and they were accused of poisoning people at their plant with underhanded tactics. The same tactics they wanted to maintain during the lawsuit. Avercol hired Neil with the express wish that he get the locals to agree to the lowest settlement possible. It didn't matter that people are dying or that the plant didn't care about the people that were getting sick. They wanted to escape culpability.

Which was why they moved. They started getting blame for people getting sick and so they moved their plant elsewhere instead of bringing the plant there up to code. Avercol managed to anger everyone from the plant. They were all part of a lawsuit. Neil was supposed to get in and out fast and yet he didn't do that. He stalled for some reason. No one could understand why he would do that even after the plaintiffs agreed to a low settlement and then he dies. He got blown up after someone arranged for a bomb to be planted under his car.

Everyone assumed that the bombing was because of the lawsuit. They figured it was because Neil was angering them by drawing out the settlement process and so Forrester and his team didn't suspect differently until they found the note. They found a note on their car telling them to find Neil's files. They thought that was a dead-end because Neil's files must have gone up in smoke like he did. They also couldn't understand why someone would mention Neil's files because its not like he had anything incriminating on him. Or did he?

Forrester and his team met Palma. Palma had left them that note. Palma was a part of the lawsuit against Avercol. She said that Neil had betrayed his client and he was working against them. Neil was allegedly gathering evidence against Avercol because he saw the damage they caused in Budapest. He seems to have gotten disgusted and wanted to work against them in order to stop anyone else from getting hurt. Palma left that note with the FBI because she suspected that Avercol was the one that had Neil killed.

This theory seemed plausible. At first! Neil was stalling on the settlement talks and so this theory could explain why that was possible. The FBI even looked into it. They found out that Neil had access Avercol's hidden files recently. Files that would have proved that Avercol knew they were poisoning their workers and they went through the plans anyways. There was also the fact that Neil turned against the CEO of Avercol after a certain point in time. That point being when he found out his best friend was sleeping with his wife.

Sam Gilroy and Neil's friendship went back years. They met in college and they were a part of the same fraternity. They've been friends for over twenty years. Thereby making Sam's betrayal a very painful one. It also didn't help that Neil could be very vindictive because he cheated on his wife all the time and it was only a problem when she returned the favor. Neil found out about the affair. He started looking for evidence to hurt Sam. And he was drawing out the lawsuit because he wanted to get as much money as he could from Sam.

Sam was brought in for questioning. He said, off the record, that it had been Neil's plan all along to doctor the files that said the workers must have gotten sick somewhere else and that it wasn't Avercol's fault. Neil knew where to look for those files because he had put those files there. Neil never cared about the workers. He wasn't looking to bring down Sam because he knew he himself would get in trouble if that were to happen. And so Neil was just throwing stuff into the fire to draw out the lawsuit.

Neil was the only one who got paid either way. But the lawyer for the workers must have realized his game when he continued to draw out the lawsuit. This lawyer hired a former Bulgarian military man to kill Neil and that way Avercol would send a new lawyer. Someone who would agree to a fast settlement. And that would have helped the lawyer to get out of debt.

The lawyer was arrested. The hitman was arrested. After everything was revealed, Avercol offered a lot of money to the workers in an effort to move past what happened. Money they accepted. But Sam implicated himself in the coverup and so the FBI were officially opening an investigation into him back in the states.

Avercol would never hurt another person ever again.

And that cop that Jamie injured was a cop working the case. His name was Ben. He was cute. He seemed like a nice guy with a great sense of humor and Jamie asked him out to drinks to make up for breaking his arm. Who knows. She might be ready to move on from Forrester.

Summary: The team investigates a bomb threat on a plane flying from New York to Athens that is forced to land in Morocco.

The episode begins with FBI Special Agent Kellett who continued to date her Hungarian policeman. He seemed like a genuinely nice guy. He was interested in her. She was interested in him. It wasn't really all that complicated. It wasn't like her past relationship with Forrester. This relationship might have a future and so Kellett was enjoying that when work called. She and the others got called in after a plane was diverted thanks to a bomb threat. Someone wrote the word "BOMB" on the mirror of the bathroom. The word quickly spread onboard about there being a bomb and soon everyone was freaking out.

The plane was forced to land in Morocco. Mike Kemp needed urgent medical attention because he left his seat during the commotion, and he suffered what appeared to be a cardiac event. The authorities didn't want to let Mike's son Tyler go with him because he still needed to talk to the cops, but Forrester stepped in. Forrester saw how worried Tyler was and he offered to send someone to personally escort Tyler to the hospital. He sent Special Agent Raines. Raines drove Tyler to the hospital and there they learned that Mike never got to the hospital.

Mike had been kidnapped. Mike was in fact a DEA Agent. He was on vacation with his son and they like everyone else were supposed to soak up sun in Greece. Only the bomb thing ruined their plans. The plane the diverted and everyone had to investigate whether or not there was a bomb on the plane. Then Mike was taken. He was taken in the confusion. The FBI came to believe Mike's abduction was the sole reason for the bomb threat. Mike wasn't just any DEA Agent. He was personally in charge at the DEA's office in the Netherlands.

It was up to Mike to assist Europol in locating drug dealers. Plus, there was a syringe they found onboard that had the remains of the date rape drug. Mike had been drugged onboard the plane. Its why everyone assumed he suffered a cardiac event. Its how the fake paramedics got close enough to Mike to grab him and the FBI did see them give Mike another injection as he was being driven away. They probably gave him more sedation to keep him under. And so everyone wanted to know who the fake paramedics were working for.

It was Smitty who first said out loud that Mike was taken by the Mocro Mafia. The Mocro Mafia seemed the obvious choice. Especially as they were particularly brazen. This sort of crime would have been right up their alley. They also operated within Morroco and so that's why they faked a bomb threat at that exact moment. They wanted to force Mike to come to them. They couldn't abduct him when he was in the Netherlands because that would have drawn too much attention, but grabbing him from the plane during a moment of chaos, no one would be able to prove it was them.

They also got a major asset in taking Mike. Mike knew about undercover DEA Agents. He even knew about criminal informants that were spying on the mob and so he could be tortured for information. Now, Mike's bosses weren't all that worried about that. They said they trained Mike to sustain torture. It was Forrester who said every man has a breaking point and he was worried that the mob would reach Mike's before they could rescue him or prevent his execution. It also didn't help that Forrester had to see Mike's son struggling with the disappearance of his father.

The feds were honest with the teenager. They told him that his dad had been taken and he realized the plane was diverted just for that reason. He gladly handed over his phone in case his dad's kidnappers called with a ransom. Tyler was still hopeful that maybe they could pay to get his dad back while the others didn't think that was the case. They found out who helped on the plane to drug Mike. It was a US Air Marshall who got the drug on the plane because he was being blackmailed. And he put the drug in the compartment over the seat of another man.

It was up to this other man to drug Mike. This man was found and arrested. He didn't want to cooperate and so the feds drove around Morco Mob's territory to make it look like their guy was working with the cops. Once he realized there was no hope for him or his family there, the guy began to cooperate. He told them where they could find Mike. They had to go in guns blazing and they saw Mike leaving in a truck that they had to run down. But ultimately they got back Mike. He was rescued. He was a little banged up from being tortured but he was glad to be with his son and they couldn't wait to leave Morocco.

Kellet was also happy to be leaving because she had made plans with her policeman that she knew would take her mind off of work.

Summary: The Fly Team lends a helping hand to the Hungarian National Police when one of their police officers is accused of murdering a couple in Budapest. Also, Kellett questions her relationship with Lieutenant Erdos.

Scott is away in Washington D.C., giving a presentation about the great accomplishments the international Fly Team has achieved. The team marvels at the fact that they are a tight-knit family.

Agent Kellett opens up about her new beau to Smitty. She's been dating Hungarian police Lt. Benedek "Ben" Erdős, and they couldn't be any happier. That is... until recent events make her question her new boyfriend...

When Kellett is called into the office on her day off, she learns that a rogue Hungarian officer killed several people the previous night. The Feds were called in to assist their host country because the local police department had been involved in bribery in the past. Agent Vo has a repour with an officer of interest and requests to run the lead on the investigation. Kellett, who is in charge in Forrester's absence, green-lights the operation.

Meanwhile, Kellett hasn't been able to reach Ben for some time, and he was oddly missing when all hands were summoned to the investigation. She spoke with his partner, and he shared that he has been acting weird lately.

However, when the surveillance footage is obtained, the shooter is Ben! But there's more than meets the eye in this case. Ben intercepts Kellett.

Summary: The team is joined by Jubal Valentine and Nina Chase when the abduction of a U.S. Architect appears to relate to a brewing terror threat in the US.

The episode begins with a wedding, the brides father is looking for his knife, he insists on getting so she can cut into her cake, he says it is very special to him and her mother. He goes back into the house and finds the knife, he pulls it out, then there is an explosion. The father is alive in the house, there are coughs and people crying for help. He goes outside and sees his daughter, her new husband and all the guests dead.

Three months later in Rome, two men are walking down a street when they are ambushed, they try to make a run for it but there are too many of them, once gets shot dead and the other gets tapered and taken in front of the colleseum. In the background, we see the brides' father.

The man who was taken is David LaPorta, CEO of a top industrial firm. They executed his partner Costa and took LaPorta. The FBI already ran a background check on LaPorta three days before he went missing, it was Jubal Valentine who did it.

The team heads to the colleseum to go to the crime scene. There are no witnesses and LaPorta's phone is turned off. No ransom demand, nothing. Forrester goes to speak to LaPorta's wife, she is upset, she can't think of anyone who could want to harm her husband. She says that he and Costa have been best friends forever. She tells them to speak to his assistant, she knows everything that goes on with him.

Kellett and Raines meet with Sabrina, LaPorta and Costa's assistant. She sent everyone home to be with their families, she is the only one in the office. She says the men were working in the office last night until around seven. She doesn't know who they were meeting, but that is not unusual. She gives information about their partnership, they always didn't see eye to eye.

About a year ago, she overheard a call, Italian officials contacted LaPorta, apparently the Taliban had discussed some plan to kidnap a structural engineer and use him to bring down buildings. LaPorta blamed Costa for getting him mixed up in it. It blew over and they joked about it afterwards.

The belief is that LaPorta was taken because he knows how to destroy the things he built.

They take a look at some surveillance video, three nights in a row the same men were staking the area. They also have Valentine and Chase who show up from New York to help with the case.

Valentine says in New York, they had an undercover, agent Scola, trying to pin down a foreigner buyer, he was looking to acquire industrial explosives, the name LaPorta came up, so they think it is connected. They think it is an imminent threat and someone wants to hit New York. They believe LaPorta is being used to plan the attack. The best lead they have is the man in the video.

Valentine is frustrated, they are waiting for data on LaPorta's phone, but Forrester tells him to chill, they work differently here.

Chase calls New York, Scola hasn't checked in, Castille tells her that she has to trust that he is ok.

Scola calls Chase, he's ok, she tells him she is in Rome for the case.

The phone records are going to take a few more hours.

Forrester tells Valentine to get his coat, they are going to figure this out themselves. They are going over ever business bill from the last three months to find a pattern, Sabrina helps them. They find a pattern, a man named Dmitry Dovhal who Costa was having drinks in, he flew into a Rome a few days ago. Valentine thinks it is there guy and he set up a fake meeting with Costa, Sabrina has his address in Rome. They head there and find a door unlocked, they go upstairs, guns raised and find a tea kettle going off on the stove. Outside on the veranda they find their man, he is dead, two to the chest, there goes their lead.

Valentine believes the man is dead because of the delay in getting the phone records. Forrester tells him to calm down, this is not going to help.

Valentine wants to know everything about Dovhal, it appears he may have been a spy. Valentine calls Castille and updates her, tells her the players in this thing are from Belarus.

Further digging and they find Stanislav Lenkov, the father of the bride in Rome, he is from Belarus.

They find out about the strike on Lenkov's family three months ago, over twenty dead. They believe it was Ukraine who strikes. Looks like Lenkov blames America, motive to strike back at America.

Forrester pushes back with local authorities and finally gets them on the same page, they give them unverified intel of where LaPorta could be, they all head there. Valentine, Forrester and the rest go inside, an call out, they find a woman and a child, a man. Valentine sees someone run and it is a boy and he has a rifle, he shoots it and but doesn't hit anyone. It is just a family home, this was not where they were holding LaPorta.

They found Dovhal's car nearby, but clearly it was just dumped there.

Valentine and Smitty have words about the raid, he says it was his call, it is the only lead they have. They get a cake then, another crime scene, this time at LaPorta's office.

Sabrina is alive, she hid so she wouldn't be killed. The men who went in there were sloppy on the computer, this works in the teams benefit, they are able to find a location where they believe LaPorta is being held but it is heavily secure.

Valentine and Smitty agree, they are going in. Valentine tells Chase she is not going in since she is pregnant, he goes, but she doesn't listen to him and humps in the car with Forrester.

They are on site and start taking the men out who are outside the house. Inside, one by one they start taking them down with the element of surprise. They find themselves in the basement, find LaPorta, but he is dead. There are two mercenaries unaccounted for. In the crossfire of trying to take out the missing mercenaries, Chase is shot. Valentine is upon her and shouts for them to get a car so they can get her to the hospital. In the car Chase asks Valentine to promise that she is going to be ok. She passes out before they get there, but they were fast, they have her on a stretcher and bring her in.

It turns out she lost a lot of blood, they have a heartbeat for the baby but there has been a lot of trauma. Valentine stays at the hospital, while Forrester and the team search the house, they find something, some numbers and some letters written on a piece of paper.

The prognosis is not clear with Chase but she is strong, Valentine wants to stay with her. Castille calls him and says no, she needs him in New York, Forrester found a note pad in the villa with a tail number on it, the terror event is imminent. Forrester will stay with Chase until she recovers. Castille doesn't think he should tell Scola, he is undercover and under a lot of pressure. He thinks it is wrong, she says she has no choice.

The episode will continue as FBI S05E17.

Summary: The Fly Team heads to Vienna to find the culprit of an acid attack on a rising American prima ballerina. Also, Smitty receives some troubling intel from a familiar face.

The First Lady of the United States contacted Forrester for his team's help. She wanted to make sure that the American ballerina that was acid attacked in Vienna was getting the very best and so she asked Forrester to assist local Viennese police in bringing the attacker to justice.

Forrester of course agreed to take the case. He knew he couldn't exactly say no to FLOTUS. He was also concerned about what happened to Nicolette Clark. She was about to debut as a Prima donna when she was attacked. Someone wanted to stop her promising career.

Nicolette was walking to her car when she got assaulted. She was in a parking garage and she unfortunately didn't get a good look at her attacker before she got hit with the acid.

But she knew he was a guy. He ran off before Nicolette was found screaming. Nicolette also didn't seem to care about the attack because she was more concerned with her career. She firmly believes her career is over thanks to this. She doesn't even want to continue with her life. She refused to meet with any friends or her boyfriend.

Nicolette was dating Alva Boxler before this. He was on the Board of trustees for the theater company. Many felt that he helped her to gain status at the Kaiserliche Theater.

They thought she didn't deserve her place onstage and that went along with the normal jealousy. Nicolette was given burnt flowers with a card that called her "little fat girl". It was actually sent by her leading man onstage. He said he was keeping her on her toes. He also didn't want to lift a woman that had gained weight and so he was reminding her to maintain her figure.

The guy also alluded to his own position being very precarious right now. The other dancers had seen what happened to Nicolette and none of them wanted that to happen to them.

They all figured a jealous dancer must have done it. The FBI thought the same for a while. They learned that her understudy was the only one who never visited Nicolette in the hospital.

She was too busy gearing up to replace Nicolette. She also just didn't seem to care about the other woman. Kira Sokolov claimed she wasn't so emotional thanks to being a Russian.

Kira also claimed that she had several opportunities to become a Prima donna. She disregarded them because the directors always wanted something in return. She said she wasn't going to buy her way in and that she'll become a prima donna thanks to pure talent. Kira was touting her own horn, but these attacks were usually carried out by a domestic partner. The fly team did question Nicolette's boyfriend. They asked him if he knew anyone that would dislike Nicolette strong enough to assault her and he said no name came up because everyone likes Nicolette.

Alva very much overinflated that idea because the feds did talk to her theater company. They were more concerned in replacing her than caring about and even Alva was quick to replace her at the theater company. He pushed for the show to go on without Nicolette. He barely waited to see if she might recover. She was still refusing to see anyone but the FBI. Vo talked to Nicolette. She did help Nicolette to see that there was more than just being onstage. She got Nicolette to push for justice and then she asked her about her relationship with Alva.

Nicolette had broken up with Alva two weeks before the attack. She had felt he was keeping too many secrets and so she ended things. He hadn't liked that idea. He told her she'd be sorry if she doesn't come back to him. He also asked her to keep their breakup a secret from the rest of the theater company. She did and then this happened. Alva talked to the FBI several times without once ever mentioning they broke up. So, they went back to talk to him again. Alva admitted they did break up only he swears he still cares for her.

He also said he didn't mean to threaten her. He just wanted her to know that she would never meet someone like him. A truly good guy. Alva was only keeping secrets from her because he was working with the Austrian government to secretly take down several dirty individuals in Austria. He was truly being a good guy and he made enemies along the way. Some of these enemies might have found out about his relationship with Nicolette. The feds found one guy in question who went from threatening Alva to suddenly going dark right after Nicolette was assaulted.

The suspect was Leon Oliver. He was almost taken down by the authorities once before. The trial against him was mysteriously dropped and the Chancellor of Austria tried to clear out the bad rubbish. Alva came in. He didn't help Oliver. Oliver began making the threats. Then he just stops the day after Nicolette was assaulted. Forrester and his team went to Oliver's home where they just missed him. He went flying out of there in a hurry and so they searched his home. They found the chemicals used to assault Nicolette. And if he was willing to do that to hurt Alva, what does he have planned for Alva himself?

Oliver did have enough chemicals to hurt quite a few more people. Forrester and his people went looking for Oliver. They questioned his brother and his brother easily gave him up. He said Oliver was at a secret house. The FBI went there and once again Oliver saw them coming. He rushed to his car to race out of there, but the FBI followed him in their car and they had a car chase all throughout Vienna. Raines eventually forced him off the road. And he was arrested.

The case was solved and the show went on without Nicolette, but Kira wasn't named lead right away. Smitty pulled some favors there. She did so because she talked to a Russian diplomat in the country. He warned her that a man with a grudge against Forrester was being released and so she warned him that Kira will never be lead unless they keep this dangerous man in prison. And after she got what she wanted; she allowed Kira to be the prima donna.

And Nicolette was later named the new resident choreographer for the theater company.

Summary: The Fly Team jumps into action to protect Forrester when a Russian hitman seeks revenge on him. Also, Raines is sent into a tailspin when someone close to him is taken.

Supervisory Special Agent Scott Forrester was called to a special meeting. He was put in an unmarked car. He had to turn off his cell phone. He couldn't tell anyone where he was going because he was meeting with Pavel Novikoff. He was a Russian spy that Forrester helped defect to the United States.

Only he thought Pavel would stay in the United States. Pavel gets to travel because the CIA felt they had a use for him. It also didn't hurt that Pavel enjoyed Europe. He was a European after all. He gets to travel whenever he felt like now that he's working with the Americans. And he was traveling now because he had to warn Forrester.

Pavel still had his contacts in Russia. It's probably tied with what he's doing with the Americans and so he found out Vladislav Pavlovic broke out of his prison. The man was sentenced to a life sentence in Siberia, but he broke out because he still has some unfinished business. He still wants to kill Forrester. Forrester killed Vlad's brother.

He did it as he was helping Pavel defect and it wasn't anything personal to him only Vlad didn't see it that way. Vlad could have disappeared after he escaped prison. And instead he chose to come to Budapest because he wanted Forrester dead.

Forrester was given his warning. He would go on to inform his team about the threat. Kellett was the first that became suspicious about everything. She thought it odd that the CIA would use Pavel of all people to warn him. Especially as Pavel was once a spy. She didn't trust him. She said as much as to Forrester and he told her to focus on Vlad.

They had to stop Vlad. Forrester didn't want to go running from the guy or change anything about his life. He wanted to take the fight to Vlad and his people had to convince him to take a step back. They said they could look for their perp on their own.

Forrester agreed to go into hiding with Kellet. Only it wasn't long before they were experiencing a change of a heart and wanting him out of there. They had tracked down Vlad to a train station.

They found his hostage. They just didn't find Vlad. They missed him by a couple of minutes. Vlad took one of his prison guards hostage by threatening the man's two sons. He didn't kill Sergei once Sergei stopped becoming useful because Sergei ultimately didn't matter to him. The only person he cared about was Forrester. And they weren't the only ones looking for Vlad.

The Russians wanted him back as well. There were FSB Agents in the city looking for him. Forrester's team therefore asked him to come out of hiding because they needed him to get into contact with his Russian mob connection. The Bratva were the only people who would still help Vlad even after he got in trouble with the Russian government. Someone was providing him weapons and cash. Pavel theorized it was Bratva. Forrester contacted his old friend Gregor. Gregor had turned over a new leaf since they last spoke.

He was secretly living with his pregnant wife. He didn't want to get involved in this. Forrester pushed him into reaching out to the rest of the Russian mob because he wanted answers on Vlad. Gregor agreed to do it only he never got the chance to give Forrester the information. Forrester later found Gregor dead on a bench. He had a crucifix shoved in his mouth. Vlad had killed him and Forrester realized Vlad had killed him. And that's why he decided to stop ignoring the FSB Agents that were following him.

Forrester confronted them. They weren't talking, but Forrester had his team look into them and it was revealed they were hoping to capture Vlad alive. Vlad had killed several Russian operatives by that point. It made no sense that they wanted him alive in spite of that and so Forrester started believing that Kellet was right when she said something was off about this. Forrester later challenged Pavel. He demanded answers. He once saved Pavel's life and Pavel knew he owed him. Pavel admitted that the more information he gives to the Americans the less they saw him as a commodity.

The Americans and the Russians were in talks to trade Pavel for Vlad. The Russians wanted their traitor back. The Americans wanted a new source for information. Hence the trade. Pavel was only helping Forrester and his team because he knew he'd be killed if he goes back to Russia. After Pavel came clean, Forrester was trying to figure out what to do next when the alarm at Maya's bar went off. Her bar was his team's hangout in Budapest. Maya was also dating Raines. They were in love. He introduced her to his friends. He even set up the alarm at the bar himself. And so Vlad used that.

Vlad abducted Maya. He waited until he saw Forrester and his people at the bar to call the bar. He then asked Forrester to come alone in a tradeoff. Raines hadn't wanted that to happen. He wanted to see Maya for himself. He wanted to make sure she was okay and so his team worked around him. Forrester actually had to trick him in order to make that meeting. Forrester would later meet up with Vlad. He talked Vlad into trading fists over bullets. And then he cheated by using his own gun to kill Vlad.

Vlad was dead. Maya was rescued. Pavel's position was safe, but Raines wasn't talking to any of his team. His only concern was Maya. It was Vlad's plan to kill Maya the moment he saw Raines because he wanted Raines to watch his girlfriend be killed and so Raines not going was what saved Maya's life.

Summary: After a cybersecurity expert robs one of Switzerland's largest and most secretive banks, the Fly Team is called to track down the fugitive. Also, Smitty's loyalty is put to the test.

Smitty got a late night call from her brother. He desperately needed her help. He asked her to come to Switzerland because he was in some trouble and she did come, but not alone. Smitty brought with her the whole fly team. Her brother was in charge of security at Bank Geneva.

The largest Bank in Switzerland. Only someone stole something from the bank. They didn't steal money or assets. They just got a list detailing the clients names as well as what they had hidden in the bank. This list could potentially be the next Panama Papers. And the US Government was interested because normally Switzerland was so secretive that they would happily help American tax evaders hide their money there.

Forrester got permission from his government to assist Smitty. They wanted that list. They didn't actually want to help Smitty's brother, Christopher. Christopher wanted to recover the list. He wanted to keep the theft under wraps. He was part of the security detail that was supposed to ensure a situation like this never happened. The only reason this list now exists is because the cybersecurity specialist they hired. They hired Phillippe Morand six months ago. He was supposed to sure up the security. And instead he's the one that compiled the list.

Phillipe's security program was in fact stealing data every night for the full six months. The bank likes to hide any criminal activity by connecting accounts to numbers and keeping a nice distance between those numbers to names. But Phillippe's program accessed everything until he now has a fully readable list with both names and account numbers. He also wanted to use that information into blackmailing the Swiss government into arresting the bankers guilty of so many crimes. Phillippe left behind a video before he went on the run with his wife. The video listed his motives.

No one even knew he had a wife. He never mentioned Anne-Marie in the six months he worked at the bank. He befriended some of those people and they never suspected his other life. Phillippe's video asking the government to arrest the bankers also detailed that his wife knew nothing about his criminal activity. She was an American. She has dual citizenship. The Swiss government was worried that Phillippe would escape to the US with his list. They were lucky that Phillippe chose a different plan.

Phillippe chose to split up from his wife. He told her that they were looking for a couple. He claimed it would be easier for her to go to South Africa alone and that they would meet up at the airport. The Swiss government found Anne-Marie at the airport. She had a fake passport. She was arrested. She was questioned and she denied knowing about her husband's crime though she admitted he was justified if he did them. She said that Phillippe found out the bank was hiding criminal activity. He told her that he tried to report it to the bank's security and his life was threatened.

Anne-Marie even named the man that threatened to kill him. She said it was Smitty's brother, Christopher. Christopher hadn't been entirely honest with Smitty. He failed to mention that Phillippe did try to report criminal activity only he told Phillippe that the bank would figuratively kill him. He didn't mean it as an actual threat or so he claims. Christopher said that Phillippe wanted to be paid to kept quiet. He told his sister that it was a shakedown and that he didn't fall for it. And he hadn't told Smitty any of this until she confronted him.

Smitty's brother couldn't be trusted. She was the one person that couldn't see that. The FBI had to tell their Attorney General about what happened and the AG ordered that Smitty be sidelined. They said their American interests went against Europol's interest. Europol was interested in protecting the Swiss government. Smitty in particular was interested in protecting her brother. She knew that Christopher would do anything for profit. He was a sleaze. She knew that about him and still she tried to justify his actions.

When Smitty heard that the Americans wanted to bench her, she begged to be let in. They told her that they found Phillippe and she bought them time by lying to the Swiss government for them. Christopher had been there when she lied. He recognized that look on her face. He asked her about it and she told him that the Americans did find Phillippe. She just didn't say where. Christopher then told the Swiss government about it. He wanted Phillippe to be arrested and for that list to disappear and so he tried to force his sister's hand. And she refused to bend.

The FBI found Phillippe with his wife's help. Phillippe had given her a bad fake passport because he wanted her to get arrested. He's been cheating on her with a woman he met in South Africa and he wanted to start over with Lina. Phillippe didn't care about the greater good. He wanted to get rich from selling the list. After the FBI found him, Phillippe told them that he was willing to give the Americans the list in exchange for immunity as well as thirty million dollars. He wanted to get rich and this was the answer for him.

The new guy had figured out his real motives. Powell realized that Phillippe wasn't who he pretended to be in the video. He actually was just out for himself and thankfully Christopher was the one that turned out to be a hero. His bosses at the bank tried to use his life to get Smitty to tell them where Phillippe was, but she fought back and Forrester arrived in time to save both her and her brother. And Christopher told his sister that he was willing to testify against his former employers. He knew some of the names on the list and their account information. He was prepared to testify against them now that they tried to kill him.

His compliance meant they didn't need Phillippe anymore. He was handed over to Europol. They also rescued his wife from the Swiss prison and she was sent back to the United States. So, mostly everyone got what they wanted. Christopher gets to start over somewhere else. Anne-Marie got to escape prison. The Swiss government was forced to arrest the bankers. It was just Phillippe who lost out on the money, the immunity and the girl since his affair partner dumped him to protect herself.

And so Vo invited Powell to come stay with her while he was looking for a new place. It was her way of thanking for a job well-done and he had surprised her because she hadn't thought he'd last a week.

Summary: When a Russian missile is stolen and put on the black market in Budapest, the Fly Team must secure the weapon before a mysterious American arms broker delivers it into the wrong hands.

Special Agent Powell has a temperament problem. Kellett has noticed it. She thought it could be a problem for the team and she said as much to Forrester. She didn't think he was a good fit for them. She also noticed his relationship with Vo. Kellett was being a bit hypocritical by complaining about the last one.

She had no right to judge seeing as she once slept with her own boss. Only Kellett nominated herself to oversee Powell. She didn't entirely trust Forrester's judgement on Powell because he and Powell go a long way back. She thought that same friendship had created blindspots. And she wasn't entirely wrong.

Powell almost risked their latest case. The FBI were alerted after someone stole a nuclear warhead from the Russians. It was a new hypersonic weapon. The first of its kind. They hadn't even gotten the chance to test it out yet when someone paid for an armed group to steal it. The same person was also having a hard time in selling it. There weren't a lot of people willing to tick off the Russians to get the weapon. It was a short list and Kellett was assigned to go talk to her contacts in the city about it.

Budapest was the hub for all illegal arms. They all knew that the weapon would have to pass through the city before anyone potentially buys it. Kellett took Powell with her when she spoke to her contact. She was gently asking questions while he was threatening the man. He ticked off the man's bodyguard.

He almost got them thrown out. Kellett later had to explain to him that he was a hammer. He thought every problem could be demolished when sometimes it requires finesse. They still got their information. It just wasn't because of him.

They found out that the weapon was in the process of being sold. It was being sold to Yusuf Sydin. He was a terrorism financier. He loves helping terrorists pull off their biggest hits and he wanted that nuclear warhead. He usually sends someone to handle his situation. According to the black market, he was coming to Budapest himself.

The FBI were looking for him when they accidentally found his broker. Her name is Olivia Thornton. They thought she could be a witness and they brought her in for questioning when she accidentally lied to the FBI.

Lying to the FBI is a federal offence. They caught her in the lie and then they tested her for radioactivity. She was lighting up on their machine. She had been near the warhead and they later learned that she has been an illicit arms broker for the past twenty years. She hid her activities by pretending to be a travel blogger. She would visit countries right before attacks and no one noticed because she was a blond blue-eyed white woman. And people tend to be racists by thinking of their terrorists as only Middle Eastern.

This oversight allowed for Olivia to get very rich from selling weapons. She was the middle man between those selling the nuke and Yusuf. The FBI also found her weakness to force her into cooperation. They found out Olivia has a six year old son named David. David was growing up in Budapest with her dad. Most people didn't know that his mother was a crook. Olivia tried to get a deal for herself that would allow her to gain custody of her son and start over in Denmark only they don't give full immunity to terrorists.

They used that little boy to get her to tell them about this deal. She said the weapon was in transportation. It was being brought to Budapest. She also told them about the meeting with Yusuf. Olivia doesn't introduce both sides to each other until the money goes through. Olivia flipped on Yusuf which allowed them to catch Yusuf. They didn't get all of his people, but they did get him. Yusuf then made a deal for himself. He paid for the warhead to get the seller to let it go. The team later got the warhead and transferred it to an American army base.

It will not be returned to the Russians. It would instead be studied so that the Americans could replicate the weapon. Powell showed Kellet that he was great in the field thanks to him saving her life when they recovered the missile. He showed that he was more than a hammer. Only the Americans didn't think they could bring Yusuf to trial. He spoke to Olivia in code. She was the only witness they had against him and so safeguarding her had been important. They were moving her out of their offices when a bomb went off.

Raines was outside when it happened. He doesn't know if his team got out in time or if Olivia survived the bombing. He just knows that the case against Yusuf goes up in smoke if everyone was dead.

Summary: Joined by new intel analyst Amanda Tate, the Fly Team faces the aftermath of the bombing that devastated their headquarters.

A bomb went off at their headquarters. The international arm of the FBI had a high value informant. Her name is Olivia Thornton. They could use her to take down an infamous arms dealer named Yusuf Sydin and unfortunately that person realized that the feds had her.

They bombed FBI's headquarters in Hungary in order to kill their informant. Only it appeared that Special Agent Raines was able to warn his team in time. He got a bad feeling about the delivery driver that dropped off a package earlier.

He told his team about it. They were able to survive the bombing thanks to him.

They were still knocked off their feet. Which was better than dead. Raines was the first person to enter that building. He spotted Olivia running past him.

She claimed that the redhead released her from the handcuffs and that she was going to get help, but that was a lie. She stole the keys off of an unconscious Smitty. She also took Smitty's gun with her. She was on the run and Raines didn't stop her because he wanted to check on his team before anything else. He went into the building in spite of it being unsecure.

There was falling debris everywhere. He got to his team and then a ceiling fell on him. Raines was trapped under there until his team got him out. He could no longer feel his leg after he was freed. He was rushed to the hospital along with Smitty. Smitty took most of the brunt of the bomb.

Supervisory Special Agent Scott Forrester took charge of the scene in the meantime. He set up a new office at the American Embassy. He even brought in Analyst Amanda Tate to help them put their manhunt together to find Olivia.

Olivia was a crucial witness. She only agreed to testify if they could safeguard her family. After that bomb went off, Olivia must have realized the Americans weren't a safe bet. She was on the run.

She probably had several plans in place for such a situation. She couldn't go back to her old life. She couldn't live out in the open with Sydin wanting to kill her. Or with the FBI looking for her. She was going to the ground. Forrester's top priority was finding her. They searched nearby cameras. They tried to liaison with the Hungarian.

It just didn't look good for the team. They were left in trouble after what happened. They all wanted Olivia back to help them take down Sydin and Olivia must have realized that. She later called Forrester. She tried to negotiate a better deal for herself. The last one would have her in total lockdown until she testifies. She wanted to negotiate a deal that would allow her to keep all of her ill-gotten gains and give her access to her family. Olivia knew she could escape without the FBI finding her if they wouldn't negotiate.

Olivia was coming from a position of strength. The only thing that the feds had on her was her family. They had her boyfriend and son in custody. The long-term boyfriend was questioned. He claimed not to know anything about Olivia being involved in arms deals. He truly thought Olivia was a travel blogger. He said he would never have a child with someone as dangerous as Olivia if he knew what she really was. Forrester threatened to put their son in foster care and the man still said he didn't know anything about Olivia's real life. Or where she was hiding.

Forrester ultimately decided to let the man return home with his son. He was going to keep watch on them to see if Olivia would try to make contact, but he was dealing with a lot. The American government wasn't happy that he let Olivia escape. They really want to take down Sydin before Sydin inadvertently funds a terrorist attack. Also, things weren't looking good at the hospital. Raines couldn't feel his leg because the debris nicked his artery. The hospital wasn't prepared for such a serious case. They were talking about amputation when they took him into surgery.

Special Agent Kellet was keeping an eye on her fallen comrades. She contacted headquarters for help. They were sending an experienced combat surgeon to see if this person could save Raines's leg and she was just waiting around with Smitty while the rest of the team went back to looking for Olivia. Olivia has a tell. She starts talking fast with lots of detail when she's lying. Forrester realized she was lying about turning herself in. He also learned that her boyfriend refused police protection. Forrester put two and two together.

He knew that the boyfriend was planning on joining Olivia with their son. They were all going on the run together. Only Vo hid a tracker in a stuffed toy she gave Olivia's little boy. They tracked down Olivia to where she met up with her family. Forrester was going to arrest her when suddenly a drive by shooter sped by. They shot Olivia and killed Olivia before escaping. With Olivia gone, there goes their whole case against Sydin. The feds later caught up to the man that killed her and who also bombed them.

Special Agent Powell was able to take him down with one on one combat. Which sadly wasn't enough to flip him. The guy wasn't talking. He wasn't going to give up Sydin and so it looked like Sydin was going to get away, but Raines's surgery was a success. Kellet broke the good news to the team. She then decided to announce her retirement. Kellet was leaving the Fly Team so that she could go traveling. She had already made her decision before the bombing. The whole situation throughout the day merely confirmed that she should leave.

Kellet promised herself to live for both herself as well as her late sister. Her sister had committed suicide when she was young. She never got to live her life fully and so Kellet realized she has to do it for the both of them. It was promised she made to her sister. It was a promise she intends to keep. Meanwhile the case against Sydin took a turn. They found enough evidence against the hitman to put him away for life and so that got him talking. He gave them all they needed against Sydin. And Sydin was willing to take a plea agreement himself once he knew he was cooked.

Raines was going to be in rehab for a while. Kellet was leaving. Forrester needed to fill out his team and so he poached the analyst, Amanda Tate.

And the Hungarian police were later able to track down the mole that got Olivia killed.

Summary: Forrester and Powell risk it all when they go undercover as prisoners to break an ex-FBI agent out of a brutal Tripoli prison.

The recent case aims to liberate Americans falsely imprisoned nearly a decade ago. All were presumed dead until one man, Bill Cormack, a former FBI agent, escaped the prison but was picked up by Libyan authorities. The team was in fear that his true identity would be revealed and he would be used as a propaganda prop in a televised execution.

Agent Tim Connelly wanted to involve diplomatic strategies, but there was no time, so he agreed to help the Fly Team. The FBI had no choice but to stage a mission to infiltrate the foreign prison and rescue him!

They reactivated former criminal aliases Forrester and Powell and had to get them arrested at the same prison as Cormack. This prison is notorious for being one of the world's worst prisons.

The plan was to use Smitty as an interrogator, questioning the agents and then escorting them out of the prison. Their contact was a prison guard, who was paid for his part in the operation.

Of course, plans don't go as originally mapped out! The prison warden noticed too many American prisoners being too friendly with Cormack. The warden decided to join the conversation, forcing Smitty to smuggle a drop phone on Forrester.

Meanwhile, Raines was told he had a few months of recovery. Though, he was eager to get back into the field. He was permitted to the new headquarters with beefed-up security and hardware.

Vo was promoted in Forrester's absence. She was thrown into the dead end of the pool and forced to communicate with Cormack's daughter, Beatrice. Typically, the FBI doesn't give intel to family members so early in the investigation. Beatrice popped up in Budapest, offering to help with the investigation, even threatening to go to the press.

Cormack's mental state was bad. However, Forrester felt that his other captives were still alive. Things didn't look good for the agents, as they constantly defended themselves from other prisoners. Worse, they learned that the warden was transferring Cormack, thwarting their morning escape plans!

Forrester, convinced Cormack's team members were still alive, managed to get a drawing of mountains from him. It was where he was held captive. He got the drawing to his team, who worked to discover the location. It wasn't a location but a logo.

Meanwhile, Forrester raced against the clock and navigated Cormack's degraded mental state to get them out alive. Forrester concocted a wild plan to leverage one of the inmates, Hassan Abdallah, to help his team escape. Offering him U.S. asylum for his help. They were forced to trust each other...

Forrester used Abdallah to break Powell out of solitary confinement. Meanwhile, Smitty breached the prison, planting a bomb at the wall as a distraction. When it exploded, prisoners breached, and guards responded. In the chaos, the four men got free, but Smitty was grabbed by their inside-man prison guard, double-crossing them and forcing them back inside the prison!

Forrester decided to sharp-shoot the guard in his head, and they fled! To Forrester's surprise, two of Cormack's team members were alive. The drawing he supplied helped them follow a promising lead.

Cormack was saluted for his endeavors and was thankful the FBI rescued him!

Later, Cormack was reunited with his daughter.

Summary: The Fly Team heads to Monaco after an American woman is found dead at her European estate during her daughter's lavish sweet sixteen celebration.

The episode takes the Fly Team to the glamorous locale of Monaco, where a lavish celebration turns into a tragic hunt for a murderer. The episode opens with a sweet sixteen party at the Lambert Estate, meant to celebrate the coming-of-age of Emily, a wealthy American teenager. However, the revelry is cut short when Emily's mother, Diane, is found dead, setting off a race against time to find her killer.

The investigation leads the team to interview Diane's best friend, Melissa, and the videographers who captured the last moments of the party. A crucial piece of evidence comes to light when the videographers reveal they have audio footage of the murder. This clue propels the team into a deeper investigation, uncovering secrets and lies among the elite of Monaco.

Vo's interview with Emily, who is grappling with grief and guilt, adds a layer of complexity to the case. Emily's secret relationship with Theo, a boy from a poor background, is revealed, and it becomes clear that Diane was not aware of this relationship. This revelation leads the team to question whether Emily's boyfriend, Theo, could be involved in the murder.

As the team delves deeper, they discover that Armand Lambert, Diane's brother-in-law, had a motive for murder but was actually trying to hide his fraudulent activities. His desperation to cover up his crimes leads the team to the realization that the true killer is still at large.

The plot thickens when the team uncovers that Diane's ex-boyfriend, Connor, had been blackmailing her with compromising photos. With Diane's inheritance making the photos worthless, Connor's motive for murder becomes clear. The team races to find him before he can harm Emily, who is now his hostage.

The tense hostage situation plays out in a local store, with Vo taking the lead in negotiations. The team's quick thinking and strategic planning are on full display as they attempt to outsmart Connor. Vo's bravery and cunning are highlighted in her attempts to humanize Emily to Connor, using her own relationship with Theo as a point of connection.

The climax of the episode is a heart-stopping confrontation between Vo and Connor, with Raines arriving just in time to save Vo from Connor's deadly grasp. The episode ends with a bittersweet resolution, as Emily is promised protection by the Monaco police and Vo and Raines's relationship takes a new, more personal turn.

Summary:	The Fly Team heads to Bulgaria in search of a wanted criminal exploiting underage American girls.

The episode kicks off with a jarring scene in Bulgaria, where the Fly Team is dispatched to track down a criminal exploiting young American girls. The urgency of their mission is palpable, as the team, led by the ever-resilient Special Agent Scott Forrester, navigates the treacherous underworld of human trafficking. Their determination is only matched by the cunning of their prey, a criminal who seems always one step ahead.

Special Agent Amanda Tate emerges as a standout in this episode, her tenacity and intelligence instrumental in uncovering the criminal's identity. Her relentless pursuit of justice for the victims is both inspiring and a stark reminder of the real-world horrors that law enforcement officers confront daily. The show does a commendable job of humanizing its characters, and Tate's unwavering commitment to her mission is a testament to her strength and compassion.

The narrative takes a thrilling turn when the team realizes they have a mole within their ranks. This twist adds a layer of intrigue and tension, as the team must not only catch the criminal but also identify the traitor in their midst. The suspense is heightened by the team's growing frustration and the knowledge that every second counts in their race against time.

As the episode unfolds, the team's dynamics are put to the test. Raines is tasked with keeping an eye on Powell, a subplot that adds depth to their characters' relationships and contributes to the overall tension of the episode.

Summary: The Fly Team jets to Vienna to investigate a disgraced former U.S. cabinet member suspected of peddling classified government documents.

The episode opens with a bang, quite literally, as the team is tipped off about the former cabinet member's nefarious activities. The writing is taut, the dialogue sharp, and the characters are as compelling as ever. Scott Forrester (played by Luke Kleintank) is in his element, leading the team with a steely determination that's as impressive as it is expected. But it's the quieter moments, the ones that show his vulnerability, that truly humanize him.

Vo shines in this episode, stepping up to the plate in a way that we've only begun to see in the previous seasons. Her character development is not just about professional growth but also about personal evolution. She's becoming the agent she wants to be, and it's a journey that's as thrilling as it is satisfying to watch. The dynamic between Vo and Forrester is particularly noteworthy, their partnership a study in contrasts and mutual respect.

The episode also explores the character of Powell, who's been left behind in Budapest. His exclusion from the fieldwork is a form of punishment, but it's also a test of his mettle. The decision to leave him behind is a bold narrative choice, one that adds depth to his character and sets the stage for future development.

The action in Vienna is where the episode truly comes alive. The stakes are raised as the team confronts the former cabinet member and his assistant. The tension is palpable, and the writing is tight, keeping viewers on the edge of their seats. The confrontation is a testament to the show's ability to deliver high-stakes drama without sacrificing character development.

The episode's climax is a thrilling blend of action and emotion. Forrester goes undercover in a high-stakes operation that doesn't go as planned, leading to a chaotic and intense sequence of events. The team's camaraderie is on full display as they work together to save Forrester and prevent a disaster.

The character moments in "Death by Inches" are just as impactful as the action. Smitty's (Eva-Jane Willis) interaction with a former spy is a poignant reminder of the personal costs of loyalty and duty. Her decision to let him go, despite the risks, is a testament to her character's complexity and compassion.

Forrester's decision to transfer Powell and give him a chance to shine is a masterstroke. It's a move that shows his leadership skills and his understanding of his team's needs. It's a moment that adds depth to his character and sets the stage for future storylines.

Summary: The Fly Team is called on to investigate the arrest of an American college student in Prague after local police dismissed her sexual abuse claims.

The episode begins with a distress call from Ali Baker, an American college student in Prague, who claims she was raped. Instead of receiving support, she's met with skepticism and arrested, a stark reflection of the all-too-real challenges faced by survivors of sexual assault. The case's complexities and the Czech Republic's outdated rape laws prompt the involvement of the International Fly Team, led by the ever-resolute Scott Forrester.

From the outset, the episode is a stark reminder of the systemic issues that survivors face when reporting sexual assault. The local police's dismissive attitude towards Ali's allegations is gut-wrenching, evoking a sense of injustice that lingers throughout the episode. It's a testament to the show's writing that it doesn't shy away from depicting the harsh realities that many survivors encounter when seeking help.

Special Agent Cameron Vo takes the lead in this investigation, drawing upon her own experiences and advocacy work in sexual assault cases. Vo's portrayal is both heartening and inspiring. She is the calm in the storm, the unwavering advocate that every survivor deserves. Her interactions with Ali are handled with the utmost care and sensitivity, a stark contrast to the callous treatment Ali receives from the local authorities.

As the team delves deeper into the case, they uncover a pattern of assaults across Europe, pointing to a serial predator. The revelation is chilling, underscoring the gravity of the situation and the urgency of their mission. The team's pursuit of justice is relentless, a testament to their commitment to protecting those who cannot protect themselves.

The episode also explores the impact of social media on legal processes, as Ali's online post about her treatment by the police leads to her being charged with assault. The agents must navigate this new challenge, highlighting the complexities of modern law enforcement in the digital age.

The climax of the episode is a tense sting operation, where Vo goes undercover to draw out the suspect. The scene is edge-of-your-seat drama at its finest, with the team racing against time to prevent another assault and apprehend the predator. The success of the operation is a hard-won victory, a moment of triumph in an otherwise heavy episode.

The final moments of "Fire Starter" are a poignant reminder of the episode's themes. Vo takes Ali to the one place she had come to Prague for, a simple act that carries profound significance. It's a quiet yet powerful scene that speaks volumes about resilience and the importance of advocacy.

Summary: The Fly Team heads to Tuscany to help locate an American boy abducted outside his family's new home.

The episode takes us to the serene yet treacherous Tuscan countryside, where an American family's dream turns into a nightmare. Their son is kidnapped, and the finger of suspicion points towards the mafia. The premise is compelling, hinting at the cultural clash and the perils of navigating foreign legal systems. It's a story that could have easily been a stand-out, yet it plays out with a certain predictability that leaves the viewer feeling somewhat unsatisfied.

The narrative unfolds as the Fly Team, with their signature determination, delves into the case. The initial excitement of the new environment quickly gives way to the harsh reality of the situation. The family, who had moved to Tuscany as part of a revitalization project, finds themselves entangled with the mafia over a hidden bunker on their property. The plot thickens as the team uncovers a web of deceit that implicates everyone from the neighbors to the real estate agent.

Scott Forrester, played by the ever-sharp Luke Kleintank, is at the helm of the investigation. His character's intuition and relentless pursuit of the truth are on full display as he navigates the murky waters of the case. The episode does a commendable job of highlighting the leadership qualities of Forrester, even if the storyline itself feels somewhat muted.

The real estate agent's betrayal is a plot twist that adds a layer of complexity to the case. Her decision to steal from the mafia and allow an innocent child to be used as leverage is despicable. The episode effectively taps into the viewer's emotions, eliciting a sense of outrage towards her actions. Yet, the resolution of her storyline feels abrupt, leaving the viewer with more questions than answers.

The episode also explores the personal impact of the case on the team, particularly on Special Agent Amanda Tate. The usually stoic and tech-savvy Tate, played by Christina Wolfe, is deeply affected by the case, reminding the audience of her own parental instincts. The vulnerability she displays is a stark contrast to her usual demeanor, adding depth to her character.

The climax of the episode, where the team uses a deepfake profile to trick the mafia into releasing the child, is a testament to their ingenuity and resourcefulness. It's a thrilling sequence that showcases the team's ability to think on their feet and use technology to their advantage. However, the aftermath of the operation, where the mafia's retaliation is hinted at, leaves the story open-ended.

Summary: Jubal Valentine join the Fly Team in Budapest to help them take down a cartel he has a personal connection to.

The episode opens with a personal vendetta for Jubal Valentine, whose girlfriend was previously murdered by the Vargas cartel. The Fly Team's mission in Budapest is not just professional—it's personal. The tension is palpable as the team navigates the murky waters of international crime, where the lines between right and wrong are often blurred.

The arrival of a ruthless CIA agent, who we'll call "Dr. Evil" for her cold-blooded approach, adds a new layer of complexity to the case. Her willingness to use a missile strike to take out the cartel, regardless of civilian casualties, is a chilling reminder of the real-world implications of such operations. The team's moral compass is tested as they grapple with the CIA's heavy-handed tactics.

Forrester's decision to go undercover as an arms expert is a bold move that puts him directly in the line of fire. His commitment to the mission and his team is unwavering, even as the operation spirals into a high-stakes game of cat and mouse.

Vo is a standout in this episode, her protective instincts for her team on full display. Her confrontation with the CIA agent is a powerful moment that showcases her strength and determination. Vo's struggle to balance the need for safety with the drive for justice is a microcosm of the team's overall dilemma.

The episode's climax is a tense standoff, with the team caught between the CIA's lethal strategy and the cartel's deadly response. The shootout that ensues is a gripping sequence that keeps viewers on the edge of their seats. The team's unity in the face of adversity is a testament to their bond and their shared commitment to protecting the innocent.

The episode concludes with a poignant moment for Jubal, who admits that his quest for closure may never be fulfilled. His journey from seeking revenge to questioning the true meaning of justice is a powerful character arc that adds depth to his story.

Production Code: INT309
Summary: Tate and Raines head to Romania to interrogate a corrupt U.S. mercenary claiming to fight child trafficking.

The Department of Justice was making a case against the Chain Cutters. The Chain Cutters are a group of mercenaries led by Sam Keaton that were supposedly stopping child trafficking. They started out as that and they've since done a one-eighty.

They still take in donations from around the world, but now they use that money to fund lavish lifestyles. Not the rescue of abducted children. They were also hindering real actions used to combat child trafficking. The FBI were making a case against them for fraud when they got someone from within the organization to turn. They got Tyler Selvidge.

Ty has been with the group since day one. He was willing to turn against them because they crossed a line. They started kidnapping children from villages only to return them later on.

It was a ploy to make them appear as if they were really rescuing children. It also helps them with donations if they have successful missions to talk about. Ty couldn't live with himself after they started doing that. He agreed to testify against Keaton. He also collected evidence against him. The evidence proved he started kidnapping children for false flag operations.

Ty even got a record of some money laundering as well. He was talking with the Romanian police. Supervisory Special Agent Scott Forrester sent in Raines and Tate. Tate has been riding a desk for a while. She wasn't really a field agent. Forrester sent her because she could understand Ty's files.

It was their job to collect Ty and bring him back to Budapest. They unfortunately got ambushed before that could happen. Someone blocked their cell phones. They followed the agents to the off the grid safehouse where Ty was being held and Ty was killed along with several border police.

Raines tried to fight back. The shooter took off into the woods. Raines and Tate pursued him. He managed to evade them and he got away with a second person.

This second person was a child. They could tell by their footprints. They lost them in the woods. Only they did find Keaton. Keaton was too big to be the guy that shot at them. His footprints didn't match. They still detained him. They questioned him. He said that they were looking for Ty. He claimed to be worried. He wasn't after they told him Ty was killing trying to turn against him.

They also asked Keaton about their shooter. Keaton identified him right away. He said it was Xavier Lee. Lee talked a big game about being former special ops.

He was a poser and they let him join the Chain Cutters because they needed losers like him. People to help sell the con. According to Keaton, Lee was looking for a cause. They gave him the Chain Cutters. He took things too far by believing their myth of helping people and the child he's been keeping in a cage could be an orphan he thinks he's saving.

Tate and Raines walked with a handcuffed Keaton to a nearby lumbar yard. They used the data service there to get in touch with their team. They also started sending Ty's files to them. It turns out Keaton lied about a lot of things. Little Dora Bogden wasn't an orphan. Her parents are desperately looking for her.

Keaton also led them back to that lumbar yard because he owns it. His people showed up. Raines thought they were innocent. He tried to bribe them to take them into town and Tate warned him in time that he didn't get shot.

Their Budapest friends connected Keaton to that lumber yard. They were being paid by the same shell company operating from Delaware. They warned Tate.

Tate warned Raines. They took down three men. They also stopped Keaton from escaping. It was taking forever to load the files because Lee put a bug on Keaton's laptop. He thought it would lead him to Keaton. He doesn't care about killing Ty. He wanted to kill Keaton. He thought Keaton was the bringer of evil. Forrester found out that Lee was severely mentally ill.

He was schizophrenic as well as bipolar. He's been committed to several mental hospitals. He grew up in foster care. He failed a psych evaluation and that's why he was never allowed into the military or the police department. He plans on killing Keaton for betraying the mission.

If he doesn't get Keaton, he plans on killing an innocent child to redeem her soul. He was sick. He was also following the agents. Tate took a gunshot wound to the arm during the shootout at the lumbar yard. They took the car. They got back to the town with Keaton as their prisoner.

Raines made sure that Tate got treated for her wound. He also told her she won't be involved in what comes next. He doesn't want to risk her life. She still has a child to go home to.

Keaton chose to set up his place in a great area for crime. It was like the wild wild west. There wasn't a cop outpost for fifty miles. The people in the nearby villages also didn't talk. Lee followed them there. He tried shooting them because they refused to hand over Keaton. Lee was stationed at the church. He strapped a bomb to Dora as a backup.

Raines tried to stop him only Lee got the better of him. He would have killed that little girl if it wasn't for Tate. She came to the rescue and she killed Lee. They rescued the little girl. Their people sent the cavalry to come for them. Keaton was arrested. And Tate returned Dora to her parents.

Tate and Raines stayed long enough in the city to attend mass because they needed it after the day they had.

Summary: The Fly Team heads to Amsterdam's red-light district after an ex-Navy man is found dead following a wild night out.

An American was killed in Amsterdam. The victim was Ryan Karloski. He arrived in the city with a couple of buddies. They all worked in maritime private security and Ryan's friends used their time in the city to behave badly. They were real jerks. Ryan was the nicest out of all of them.

Which was why his friends knew something was up when he failed to meet them the next morning after a night out. Ryan was former military. He retired young. He left the military for financial reasons and his buddies were worried they might be the reason he was killed. And that's why they called the FBI.

The buddies broke a cardinal rule. They tried to take photos of the prostitutes in the red light district. The pimp told them that this wasn't a sex museum and they had to pay the girls.

Ryan agreed to go with one of the prostitutes. He paid her for sex. After the encounter, someone tried blackmailing him. Ryan went back to the district and he confronted the prostitute he slept with. She denied any connection to the blackmailing. Ryan left alive. He was shortly killed afterwards in his hotel room. Ryan's buddies think the pimp was involved.

They didn't like how the pimp called them out for being annoying Americans. One of the guys took it a step further. Shane Sutton told the FBI about the pimp and, when he didn't see the man get arrested, he then tried to beat answers out of the pimp. It was all a waste of time. The pimp wasn't involved in what happened to Ryan.

Nor the prostitute. They checked Famke Hensen's phone. She didn't send the text threatening to blackmail Ryan. She was spoofed. There was a person who used a spoofing app to send messages to Ryan and have it look like it came from Famke's phone.

Also, the way Ryan died indicated he was killed by someone he trusts. Ryan was suffocated. He was just blackmailed and he didn't go for his gun when strangers were knocking on the door?

It doesn't make sense. Not unless his killer wasn't a stranger. The FBI looked into Shane. Shane was kicked out of the military for bad conduct. He was charged in a domestic dispute. He was also charged for setting off his gun during a bar brawl. He was bad news. He was questioned and he swears he didn't kill Ryan. He loved Ryan like a brother he said.

Shane also said he'd get justice for Ryan if no one else will. He's the one that hooked Ryan up with a job at Devos Maritime. Only Devos Maritime was shipping something else other than goods.

Ryan contacted his uncle who was also a lawyer back in the States. Ryan asked him for advice because he found out that they were shipping human beings. They were human traffickers. Ryan wanted to report it and he asked his uncle for advice on how. The uncle told the feds all about it when they skyped him from Amsterdam.

Neither of Shane's friends can return to the ship or they risk escaping to other countries. Other non-extraditable countries. The FBI knew that Ryan was killed by someone he knows and there were only two people that knew where he was that night. They were all staying in rooms next to each other.

They weren't adjoining. He was either killed by Shane or by the third member, Bernard Almaz. The last one quickly shifted the blame to Shane. He told the feds during questioning that he overheard Shane and Ryan arguing at two in the morning.

Shane denied any such conversation took place. He also asked for a lawyer. He demanded a lawyer from the United States because he claimed he didn't want to get a crappy Dutch lawyer. The FBI searched the ship they came on. They found where the trafficked people were held. They also found a survivor.

His name was Moussa Camara. He traveled with his brother from Mali and his brother died in that unventilated hot box where they were kept. They paid the captain good money to bring them to Europe. Four out of the twenty in that room died. And there was no refund.

Moussa also identified the man that interacted with them. It wasn't Shane. It was Bernard. Bernard was the one that killed Ryan and he did that by secretly getting Ryan to be interested in Famke. The ship's captain was a known client of hers. He had her number. Bernard then kicks things off with the pimp to force Ryan to sleep with Famke.

They planned to blame the whole thing on Famke and her pimp until Shane couldn't leave things alone. He wasn't involved in the human trafficking. He just wanted justice for Ryan.

That's when they came up with a new plan to frame Shane. The FBI unraveled everything. They arrested Bernard. They just had to arrest Captain Veerman and he didn't go down easy.

There was a shootout. The captain tried to take his own life when he was cornered, but Vo got the gun out of his hand. He along with Bernard will face a lifetime in prison. And Moussa was given a legal visa to stay in Amsterdam.

He doesn't have to work under the table while he sends money back home to his family. Sadly, Amanda Tate couldn't be there for this mission. She was fighting a custody battle with her ex-fiancé. He was even willing to stop sponsoring her knowing she could be deported without their daughter.

The only choice that Amanda had left to stay with her daughter was to resign. It's what her ex wanted. Raines put a stop to that by getting Amanda legal standing in the EU. All FBI get EU status while working overseas and now her ex couldn't use her non-citizenship against her. And so he agreed to officially do 50/50 custody.

Production Code: INT312
Summary: The Fly Team gets an assist from the NSA after the owner of a prominent cyber security company is murdered in Copenhagen and mass amounts of data are leaked.

The episode opens with the Fly Team responding to a critical situation involving the murder of a prominent cybersecurity company owner in Copenhagen. This incident triggers a massive investigation into the biggest data breach the NSA has ever experienced. The urgency of the case is heightened by the fact that the team must work alongside a frantic NSA agent, Brian Lange. Lange's character is introduced as someone haunted by past assignments, adding a layer of complexity to his role within the team.

Despite Forrester's absence, his character casts a long shadow over the proceedings. The ongoing storyline regarding Forrester's mother, Angela Cassidy, is central to the plot, as a leaked file reveals her imprisonment in a foreign facility. The constant references to Forrester's whereabouts and the implications of his absence create a palpable tension throughout the episode. Viewers are left wondering how the team will cope without their leader, and the emotional weight of his character's legacy is felt in every scene.

Brian Lange's character is depicted as dedicated and somewhat rigid, contrasting sharply with Forrester's more personable approach. Lange's commitment to the job is evident, but his lack of personal connections raises questions about his ability to integrate into the Fly Team. As the episode unfolds, Lange's character begins to show depth, particularly as he navigates the complexities of the case and the team's dynamics.

As the Fly Team delves deeper into the investigation, they uncover connections to the Army of Shadows, a hacker group that poses a significant threat. The tension escalates when they learn that the hacker has information regarding both Angela and Scott. This revelation not only propels the narrative forward but also emphasizes the stakes involved for the Fly Team. The episode effectively balances the case of the week with the overarching storyline, keeping viewers engaged and invested.

The emotional stakes are heightened as the team grapples with the implications of Forrester's absence. Cameron Vo's leadership is put to the test as she navigates the challenges of the investigation while constantly referencing Forrester's commitment to the team. The dialogue serves as a reminder of what the team has lost, and the absence of closure regarding Forrester's fate looms large.

The episode concludes with the Fly Team receiving a crucial clue about Angela's location, setting the stage for the season finale.

Production Code: INT313
Summary: The Fly Team heads to Oslo when they are tipped off that two Norwegian prisoners are being held in Russia.

The stakes are higher than ever, with the team's leader, Scott Forrester, missing in action. The revelation that his mother, Angela Cassidy, might be imprisoned in Russia propels the team into uncharted territory. In a bold move, they defy the Norwegian government's orders and decide to become ghosts, operating without the official backing of the FBI. This high-wire act adds a layer of tension to the episode, as the team must navigate a foreign land with limited resources and the ever-present threat of being exposed.

The plot thickens when the team discovers that the woman they believed to be Angela Cassidy is, in fact, an imposter. Played by Teri Polo, this twist adds a new dimension to the season's arc, leaving viewers to ponder the true whereabouts of the real Angela Cassidy. The revelation that she had been working on a dossier with potentially damaging information about Putin's regime adds a geopolitical element to the storyline, raising the stakes even higher.

As the team grapples with the moral and professional implications of their mission, they must also contend with a local smuggler, Nikolai, who has his own agenda. The team's refusal to hand over a woman and her child, despite the potential consequences, speaks volumes about their commitment to justice and their humanity. This moment of moral clarity is a testament to the character development that the series has cultivated over the course of the season.

The episode culminates in a thrilling showdown at the Holmenkollen ski jump, where the team faces off against Nikolai's men in a series of intense gunfights and hand-to-hand combat.

The action sequences are expertly choreographed, keeping viewers on the edge of their seats. The team's resourcefulness and camaraderie are on full display, as they work together to overcome the odds.

In the aftermath of the battle, the team secures the decryption key for the dossier, but at the cost of their freedom, as they are arrested by Norwegian authorities. The episode concludes with a tense negotiation, where the team is offered a deal in exchange for the intelligence they have uncovered. The decision to erase the evidence and allow Scott and Angela to disappear is a poignant moment, highlighting the team's loyalty and their willingness to defy the rules for the sake of their leader.

Summary: The Fly Team meets Supervisory Special Agent Wesley "Wes" Mitchell after he chases suspects from Los Angeles to Budapest.

The episode begins in Los Angeles with Wes Mitchell in the midst of a high-stakes car chase with his partner. The intensity is palpable as they pursue suspects who eventually lead them to Budapest. Tragedy strikes when Wes's partner is shot, setting the stage for a personal vendetta that drives Wes throughout the episode. This event also serves as the catalyst for Wes to join the Fly Team in their international operations.

As the team in Budapest welcomes Wes, there's an undeniable air of skepticism and uncertainty. The absence of Scott Forrester, a beloved character from previous seasons, is deeply felt, and the team is still adjusting to the change. Wes's unapologetic and abrasive approach to his work is a stark contrast to Forrester's style, making it clear that he is his own man. His no-nonsense attitude and willingness to go to any length to achieve justice are both refreshing and concerning to the team.

The case of the week involves the pursuit of armed suspects who are involved in a police shooting. Wes's determination to bring them to justice leads him to confront a hostile visa processor and a suspicious character running a youth center. His confrontational approach and unwillingness to play by the rules create tension within the team, but also yield results.

One of the highlights of the episode is the developing relationship between Wes and Special Agent Cameron Vo. Their shared history adds depth to their interactions, and Vo's intuition about Wes's capabilities is a testament to her character's insight. As the team navigates the complexities of the case, Wes's unorthodox methods are put to the test, and his ability to adapt to the team's dynamics is questioned.

The episode takes a dramatic turn when Wes learns that his partner in Los Angeles did not survive the shooting. This personal loss adds a layer of vulnerability to Wes's character, humanizing him and allowing the audience to empathize with his drive for justice. His emotional turmoil is palpable, and it's clear that this event will have a lasting impact on his character arc.

As the case unfolds, Wes and the team discover a larger conspiracy involving human trafficking and corruption. Their pursuit of the truth leads them to a climactic confrontation with the mastermind, Csonka, at his club. Wes's fearlessness in the face of danger and his determination to bring Csonka to justice are on full display, and his actions solidify his place as a formidable leader.

The episode concludes with Vo extending an offer for Wes to stay and lead the Fly Team permanently. The team's willingness to embrace Wes as their new leader is a testament to his impact on their operations and his ability to command respect.

Summary:	When a U.S. ambassador is taken hostage at a TV station in the Netherlands alongside 70 civilians, the Fly Team is forced to work quickly to find out who they're up against. Meanwhile, Wes works to earn the respect of his new team.

Supervisory Special Agent Wesley "Wes" Mitchell was new to the fly team. His transfer just came through. He was Forrester's replacement. Although, he wanted to be a little more permanent than the other guy that tried to fill Forrester's shoes.

He at least wanted to get to know everyone. He also allowed the dog back into the office again. Wes loves animals and the dog was a member of the team. Wes was getting to know everyone when the first case of his new career popped up.

The FBI fly team were called in when an American ambassador was taken hostage.

Ambassador Coates was doing an interview in the Netherlands when gunmen barged in. This group of armed men took everyone hostage and they were threatening to kill people if their demands weren't met. Their demands were far-fetched. They wanted forty million euros.

They even demanded a helicopter to transport them away from the studio. It was ridiculous. They were never going to get those things. It also didn't help that everyone was fighting about jurisdiction. Wes was fighting with the Diplomatic Protection Service on who should run point.

The local police also wanted a part of this. Wes had to pull rank with everyone. He was willing to work with them only they had to secure the safety of the hostages. The hostages were the priority.

The gunmen had their faces covered and they wore all black. One of them messed up. He didn't remove the serial number on his boots. The FBI were able to identify him because of it.

His name was Frank Bergkamp. He was the number two to a Dutch crime boss. His boss was Clemens Anholts. Anholts was in prison.

The man killed his American girlfriend. He was about to be extradited to the United States to face murder charges. Ambassador Coates was actually in charge of that extradition and so him becoming hostage was the real plan.

Bergkamp as well as his boss wanted to stop the extradition. The fly team couldn't see how they were going to stop the extradition by taking people hostage. It's not like they asked for Anholts to be released. They were asking for money. They were asking for a helicopter. No one saw what Anholts was planning.

Only they couldn't wait for Anholts or Bergkamp to slip up. The hostages were freaking out. The armed men started shooting to assert dominance and one woman almost got away from them.

The whole situation was getting out of hand. Wes authorized an extraction team to go in. The other government officials allowed it because Wes was willing to take full accountability for whatever happened next. They used thermal imaging cameras to help Smitty, Raines, and Vo free the hostages. And the armed men were arrested.

There was just one problem. The armed men gave up without a fight. They were on the computer when the Americans arrived and so the ambassador revealed what happened.

He said he gave them access to his phone. There was a witness against Anholts. The witness was being hidden at a secret location in the Netherlands. Anholts's people grabbed the ambassador so that they could get to the witness. It was never about the money. That was merely a red herring. They wanted the witness because she's the whole case against Anholts.

The witness was Mila Meyer. She was fourteen. Her dad OD. Her mother was in prison. She's been in and out of group homes until she ran away one day.

She was in the alleyway behind a nightclub when she witnessed Anholts beat his girlfriend to death. Since then, she's been a key witness in the case against him. Wes got her location from the Dutch. He arrived just in time to save her from being assassinated. Her protection detail were all killed. Wes got her out of the building and they were on the train when the second assassin showed up.

Wes gave Mila his phone. He told her to run away. She refused to leave him. Wes managed to fight off the assassin and he went on the run with Mila. Wes suspected that Anholts had men within the Dutch police department.

He wasn't going to bring Mila to them. He was hiding out with her and his team were doing their best to buy him time. The Dutch were breathing down their necks. They got the American Department of Defense involved. Wes's plan to deal with them was to get a confession from Anholts.

They thought they could play him. He proved to be too smart for that. Anholts refused to confess. He still thinks his people will kill Mila for him and so the only way forward was to get Wes and Mila out of the country.

Wes was using a burner phone to stay in contact with the fly team. He also broke into a house so that he could treat his injuries he got from the train fight. The homeowner was there. She called the cops. The address went over the scanner and so the assassin found them. And he tried to kill Mila again.

Wes tried to fight the guy himself. He just wasn't in any kind of condition to do it alone. Mila helped. Her distracting the assassin gave Wes time to kill the guy. Then the fly team showed up.

They got Wes and Mila out of there. Wes finally got treated for his injuries. Mila was going to enter Witness Protection in the United States during the duration of the trial. Once she was done testifying, she was going to go live with her cousins in Minnesota. She can start over there.

And naturally Anholts got extradited kicking and screaming.

Summary: When an American teenager disappears from a beach party during her senior trip, the Fly Team heads to Portugal to find her.

There was a birthday trip to Lisbon, Portugal. Leah Cardwell was about to turn eighteen. She turned her birthday into a girls trip and things were fine at first.

The girls loved being at the pool. They loved sightseeing. They were a little too gun-ho about the lower drinking age. They tried ordering drinks at the pool when they were stopped. Leah's mother put a stop to it. She was supposed to be their guardian on the trip. Only she had been drinking herself. The girls later used that to their advantage.

They said they were just going shopping. The mom agreed to let them go by themselves. The girls actually went out partying and it would've been fine if a drunk Leah hadn't gone off with a complete stranger. The stranger claimed his name was Nico. He convinced Leah to go for a swim.

He got her away from the group. He ditched her bag on the beach. The two disappeared and Leah never returned. Leah's friend Olivia reported what happened. There was a third friend named Zoe. Zoe was too busy making out with another drunk at the party to care about Leah.

Zoe saw Leah leave with Nico. Leah told her what she was about to do. Her friend didn't stop her. Olivia and Leah's mother both blame Zoe for not protecting Leah.

Things also didn't look great for the seventeen year old. Olivia noticed that this Nico was feeding Leah drinks. He wasn't drinking himself. He was also constantly on his phone and he wasn't using it to take pictures. It seemed odd to Olivia. If it had been Olivia that Leah told about her midnight swim, she would have stopped her friend.

The fly team was brought in to track down the teenager. Leah's parents were at each other's throats. They were divorced and they needed someone to blame for their missing child.

Leah's mother Mindy even alerted the media. The local cops told her it was too soon for that. She ignored them because she wanted to get ahead of the bad press. She was feeding them her sob story about how she'll do anything to find her missing daughter. Something about the whole case seemed off to the feds.

They tracked down Nico. Nico wasn't his real name. It was Duarte de Sousa. He claimed that he found out Leah was underage and that he ditched her. He was seen on security footage getting pizza then going to a club. The pizzeria just had the one security camera. Duarte made sure to stay in frame the whole time he was there.

Like he was creating an alibi for himself. There was a seven minute window from when he left with Leah to when he showed up at the pizzeria. It seemed like a tight window, but not if he had a partner.

Then the oddest thing happened. Leah suddenly shows up. She had restraint marks on her wrists and ankles and she had the strangest story. Leah said she was abducted from the beach.

She said Nico ditched her. There was a man with a gun that showed up a minute later after Nico left. The guy with the gun wore a ski mask. He took Leah away on the water. Then they went to a building where he handcuffed her to the toilet. Leah left her wristband in the toilet tank to prove she was there. She also heard her mom on the news.

Leah said the guy let her go after he saw the news. She was walking by the side of the road when a good Samaritan picked her up and called the police. Leah claimed she wasn't abused in any way.

She didn't even suspect Nico of being involved in the kidnapping. Leah's story was so strange that some questioned if it was real. The feds as well as the local cops thought this was a hoax. There's no way a man grabs a teenage girl and does nothing. He didn't ask for a ransom. He didn't assault Leah. It was just odd.

The fly team still investigated the case. They tracked down the motel she was taken to. They found her wristband in the toilet like she said. They also found out who rented that room.

It was Luis Alves. He was seen drinking with Mindy earlier at the pool. He saw the moment the girls went off on their own and he didn't leave right away. He stayed drinking with Mindy. Which made everyone want to question Mindy. Mindy was claiming she didn't remember Luis all that much. Mindy's ex-husband however suspected his wife of staging the kidnapping.

Craig claimed Mindy has a fixation with their children. She doesn't want to take her eyes off them. She tries to keep them as close as possible and it was one of the reasons they got divorced.

There was a chance that Mindy staged this kidnapping to force her daughter into going to school near her. Leah was headed for college. She wanted to be her own person. Mindy might have resented that. Only Craig's story was also strange. Craig was pursuing full custody of the younger children. He filed for it the day after his daughter was rescued.

He also was claiming that Mindy was guilty of parental negligence. He was using the situation with their daughter to make Mindy look like an unfit parent and the truth was something else. Leah was about to drop her father's last name. She filed paperwork to change it. She wanted to cut ties with her father.

It might have something to do with him assaulting Mindy and that being the real reason they got divorced. There were an investigation into domestic violence. Mindy didn't pursue it. The three kids lived with her and that was that.

Things were different now that Craig wanted full custody of the younger children. Craig has a connection to Luis. They both work in the same field and have met before.

Luis refused to flip on Craig. Craig couldn't wait to flip on Luis. He talked in exchange for serving time in the States rather than Portugal. That way his kids could still come to visit him. If they want to visit him, that is. Leah was going ahead with the name change. Mindy kept custody of the younger boys and there's no telling their reaction when they heard what their father did.

Smitty got asked out by the Portugal detective, but she turned her down because she gave up on dating. And she's completely devoted to work.

Wes meanwhile added to his remembrance tattoo for his friend that died recently.

Summary: The deputy inspector general calls on Tate, who is fluent in Spanish, to take on her first undercover field mission, joining Wes and the team in Spain.

Special Agent Amanda Tate was often juggling work with raising her daughter. She shares custody with her ex.

He was a kind of a jerk and he likes using her career against her. He tried getting full custody once. He did it as a means of controlling Tate.

Only she fought him in court. They were back to sharing custody. Tate no longer wants her ex to know when she has to drop off their daughter with her friend.

She didn't want that to be used against her as well and so she quietly offloaded Lilli on Vo so that she could accept a new assignment. The flyteam had to travel with Madrid, Spain. They were brought in because the American government believes DEA Agent Daniel Lopez was dirty.

There's always been rumors of course. Missing drugs. Missing cartel money. There was no credible evidence until another DEA Agent brought the case to their boss's attention.

Christina Bryant was about to file an official report and she gets murdered the day she was supposed to come in.

It was too much of a coincidence to be ignored. Hence they brought in the flyteam. Wes was informed of the suspicions. He also came up with a plan to get close to Lopez. He was going to use Tate as a honeytrap.

Tate traveled with her team. They quickly met Lopez and his partner. Officially, the FBI flyteam was there to help question a big-time drug dealer that Lopez arrested.

The whole team also made it appear as if Tate was at the bottom of the food chain. She's the one that grabbed tea. She helped them log into their computers.

They made it seem like Tate was keeping the lines on and with little too no reward for doing her job. This came in handy when they failed to plant listening devices in the DEA office.

Lopez apparently had a wifi detector that would have told him if there were bugs in the room. The flyteam had to remove everything.

They did it in a short amount of time and Tate was still cleaning up when Lopez came back. He saw Tate. She claimed that she was doing extra work to get notice. He felt for her.

He invited her out for drinks and she made sure she was wearing a wire before they met up. They met at a bar. He pretended to introduce her to his CI.

Only the guy was saying everything Lopez wanted him to say. He wasn't a real criminal informant. Lopez was also being very flirty with Tate.

There were rules in place about what's allowable for a honeytrap. She couldn't kiss much less hug her suspect. Or else he could use it court and get the whole case file thrown out. Tate had to walk a fine line between flirty and just friends. She was doing well with Lopez when

Wes pulled her out. He didn't think she was going anywhere with Lopez. He also found Lopez's real CI. The CI's name is Jose "Conejos" Ramos. He helped Lopez make his latest arrest. He arrested Alvaro Serrano. He was a son of the Serrano cartel.

His arrest was a big deal. It could make Lopez's career. Yet, Lopez didn't seem interested in spinning into a bigger arrest. He has Alvaro. He has a real CI. He was dragging his feet and one of the reasons he invited Tate out for drinks was because he suspected the FBI were looking into him.

She managed to pretend she didn't know what Wes was up to. She did admit that Wes was being secretive. She said something about this case in Madrid felt different and then she got pulled out by Wes.

They made it seem like she got jealous when another woman paid Lopez attention. Then the feds went on to find Ramos. They brought him for questioning. They got Ramos to admit he wasn't really informing on his friends. The cartel was working hand in hand with Lopez.

Lopez was spooked after he heard Ramos was brought in. He left the office. He contacted a lawyer friend who worked for the cartel. Tate was sent to his apartment to plant a listening device. It was a better device than their previous one. And it wouldn't be detected by Lopez's scanner.

Tate flirted with Lopez. She told him that he was under investigation. She said Wes had found Christina Bryant's files and he was moving in on a cartel stash house. It was a fake stash house. Which Lopez realized when he spoke to his cartel buddies.

Tate was still in his apartment at the time. Lopez knew she betrayed him and he was going to kill her when the FBI raided his home. They arrested him. They caught his entire conversation with the cartel. They heard him put a hit on Wes's head. They had enough to send him to prison for life.

They also weren't going to let him murder one of their own. Tate was safe, but she broke one of the rules. She kissed Lopez on the cheek. It was still a kiss and it might get used against her. The conversation they caught on tape wouldn't be enough. And so they turned Lopez's partner against him.

They got credible evidence that Lopez put out a hit on Bryant and Tate had to rub salt in the wounds. She later visited Lopez while he was locked up. She goaded him. She made him see that he wasn't getting out of jail and so he agreed to take a plea deal back in the states.

Production Code: INT405
Summary: The Fly Team springs into action in Warsaw to track down an abducted American man and the Ukrainian woman he met on a dating site.

The world was in agreement about Passport Bros. Everyone thought they were pathetic. They were men that traveled around the world to find/date foreign women.

They did this because they figured they could hold coming to the United States over these women's heads, but most women aren't desperate enough to overlook problematic behavior.

There were also women that just love to con these men. They get the guys to pay their bills. They pay for apartments.

The men usually fund an entire lifestyle for these beautiful women they know aren't interested in them. And so these "relationships" are transactional.

The men were paying for sugar babies. The latest man to mistakenly believe it was love was Gilbert Shrader. He was an older man. He has an adult daughter. His wife passed away a few years ago.

He retired from his company and he was feeling lonely with all this extra time. He joined a dating website. He met the beautiful Natalya. The dating website was originally based in the Ukraine until the war. It now operates out of Poland. Gilbert thought everything was fine and he traveled to Poland to meet this beautiful young woman.

He was barely there for an hour when both of them got abducted in plain sight. They were thrown in the back of a van. Gilbert was drugged and now his daughter was in Poland looking for her father.

He never even checked into the hotel. He disappeared and his daughter was freaking out. She blamed herself for not doing something early on. She knew Natalya was a scammer. She just hoped it would stay an online relationship and she didn't know her dad traveled to meet this woman. Gilbert hadn't told her in advance.

The dating website that Gilbert used was a fake. It was stationed in a parking lot. It took the FBI flyteam a day before they tracked down a man that works for the company and who could give them information.

The dating website was a few women putting up pictures while their handlers that were mostly men did all the messaging. The American men weren't even speaking to the women. They've earned thirty million dollars with the scam and there was a list on the cloud about all of their customers.

Gilbert was surprisingly not on the list. He hadn't been conned. He was a millionaire and so the feds suspected he was going to be ransomed back to his family for a hefty price. The man they arrested didn't have an official name for the man that controls everything. He goes by the nickname "Bartek". Only the feds did find one of their American victims. His name is Larry Holbrook. He came to Poland to meet this beautiful Ukrainian girl named Katya. He was there for less than a day when Katya's cousin told him that Katya was in prison. And that he needed six grand to get her a lawyer.

Larry got the money. He was robbed right outside of the bank. He never saw Katya. He never heard from her cousin again. Larry's ID was stolen. He's been waiting at the embassy until he could get a new one and fly back to the States.

Larry didn't tell anyone back home what happened to him. He has adult kids back home. The feds figured he stayed silent because of the shame. Larry also didn't know who Bartek was, but he did tell them about the mixers in Poland with the Ukrainian girls at a special bar.

Wes posed as a single American guy. He met Natalya. The feds arrested her. They threatened her refugee status in Poland and so she talked. Natalya said the original plan was for her to get abducted. Gilbert was only supposed to witness the event so that it would make him desperate to pay a ransom. Something changed with the plan. Natalya still hasn't been paid and Bartek personally grabbed Gilbert. Natayla found out that the new plan was to ransom Gilbert back. And so the feds had another conversation with the daughter, Melissa.

Melissa did receive a ransom call. She was told not to tell anyone or her dad dies. Bartek wants ten million dollars. Melissa needed time before she could come up with that amount.

Now that the feds know, they had Melissa contact the kidnappers with an offer of five million in exchange for her talking to her dad. It was a ruse to track Gilbert's location. The flyteam got a location. They went there with local Polish police. They found one of the men. They also found Gilbert. There was just one problem. Gilbert has all of his fingers and the flyteam knew the scammers cut a finger. It was at their hideout.

Whose finger was it? It wasn't Gilbert's. There had to be another hostage out there. They eventually got DNA from the finger. It belonged to Keith Edmonds. He was British. He doesn't have immediate family. He was also retired. He came to Poland months ago and has since disappeared. Bartek had gained access to Keith's bank account.

Keith got payments every month thanks to his pension. Bartek empties the account every time the money comes in. It was never flagged down because no one cared. There was no one looking for Keith and so Smitty made it her personal mission to find him.

Smitty leaned on the man they arrested. She threatened to send him back to the Ukraine. She threatened to deport his family as well. That's when the guy cracked. He talked so that his kids got to stay in Poland where it was safe.

He also wanted to do his time in Poland so that his family can visit him. He gave them Bartek's location. Bartek was later arrested without anyone being harmed.. They even found Keith alive. Both Keith and Gilbert were now free to go home. And they'll probably stay off the dating websites from now on.

Wes also met a young officer with the Polish Police. He gave him some great advice about doing things the right way and he left an impression before he went back to Budapest. He left rather quickly. He apparently couldn't wait to go golfing with Vo. They used a golfing simulator they got from a bad guy.

Production Code: INT406
Summary: When a bus full of American volunteers is hijacked in a dangerous section of Morocco, the team works to locate the missing aid workers and the people who kidnapped them.

The episode kicks off with a sense of foreboding as Emmy and Mark, two characters central to the plot, pack up their belongings amidst dwindling daylight. Their discussion about a checkpoint and the looming darkness sets the stage for the tension that is to follow. Emmy's gratitude towards her brother Peter and the mention of an IRS issue hint at underlying personal dramas that add depth to the narrative.

The tranquility is shattered when their vehicle is pulled over by Officer Benali, whose intentions are far from noble. The situation escalates dramatically as armed men hijack the bus, revealing a larger plot involving the kidnapping of 12 Americans working for Guiding Hand, an organization led by Emmy Devlin. The region's history of violence and the implications of foreign nonprofits operating there are brought to the forefront, adding a layer of geopolitical intrigue to the story.

As the investigation commences, Agent Mitchell and his team are thrust into the thick of things. The discovery that Emmy and Mark are among the captured, along with a local driver, raises the stakes. Camille, a volunteer who managed to escape, provides crucial insights into Emmy's reckless decisions and the financial strain that has been weighing on the organization.

The kidnappers' demands for a $20 million ransom in cryptocurrency and a proof-of-life video featuring Mark, who is visibly injured, heighten the urgency of the situation. Emmy's appearance at a police station, where she explains her escape and the events leading to the kidnapping, adds another layer of complexity to the case.

The FBI's investigation uncovers connections to Russian militia using the kidnapping for ransom, linking the crime to a former member of the Wagner Group, Colonel Arkady Federov. This revelation leads the team to a potential hideout for the hostages, setting the stage for a daring rescue operation.

The tactical operation is fraught with challenges, as a drone locates the hostages within a compound, leading to intense discussions about strategy and risks. The team's breach of the compound is met with armed resistance, and Emmy's desperation is palpable as Mark refuses to leave until all civilians are safe.

The operation's success is marred by Mark's injury and the rising tensions between him and Agent Mitchell. The extraction of the hostages is a chaotic affair, showcasing the team's bravery and the sacrifices they are willing to make.

In the aftermath, Emmy's character is scrutinized due to past IRS issues, and she faces potential legal consequences. The episode concludes with a poignant reflection on team camaraderie and the sacrifices made during the operation, culminating in a toast to fallen agents.

Summary: The Fly Team attempts to salvage the case against the man responsible for the death of Wes' former partner.

A protected witness was killed in prison. His name was Vilmos Barany. He didn't know it but there was a dirty guard there. The guard took Vilmos out of his cell. He claimed that feds wanted to talk to him. He instead brought Vilmos to a nearly empty room and then locked the door behind him.

There was just one other person in that room. It was the same person that Vilmos was set to testify against. Vilmos was beaten to death by Greg Csonka. The criminal then bribed three Romanians to take the fall for the murder and he was all set to be released now that the prosecution lost their chief witness. And Wes couldn't allow that.

Csonka was responsible for the death of Wes's partner. He killed Mike Brooks. The federal agent was married and he had two daughters. They were still young. They weren't even old enough to drive.

They were going to need their father and they don't have him because of Csonka. Wes wanted justice for his friend. He agreed to testify against Csonka in trial. Only Csonka got himself some hotshot attorney. The guy was an American in an international firm. He thought he could get his client out of jail by questioning Wes's credibility.

Wes has history with Csonka. They were both at the same juvenile facility for young offenders. Their paths never crossed. Wes was released and not long after he was released he learned someone had beaten up his best friend.

It turns out it was Csonka that put Trevor Ochoa in the hospital. Csonka's lawyer was now trying to say that Wes has been holding a grudge against his client since the incident. He thought Wes created evidence to sink Csonka. He kept coming at Wes later when Wes was on the stand and Wes lost his cool.

Hungarian trials were a lot different to their American counterparts. The prosecutor was a woman and the judge kept siding with Csonka's attorney because he was a man. There was no way that Wes's past should have been put on trial. Or that his mother died from an overdose. Or have the televised trial carried out purely in English.

Wes freaking out in the trial didn't work well with the judge or the prosecution. The Hungarians were willing to drop the case against Csonka. They weren't going to try for a second shot. The only thing they had on him was the fake visa thing and he could get out fast with time served.

The only thing that would work now was to get Csonka for Vilmos's murder. They followed the money. They saw that a prison guard had been paid off and the man crumbled under pressure.

He claims he didn't know Csonka was going to kill the guy. He thought that Csonka would be fine with just beating him up. It wasn't until Vilmos was dead that the guard supposedly realized how much trouble he was in and he did his best to cover for Csonka. The prison refused to let cops investigate Vilmos's death. They instead claimed it was an internal matter.

Anyways, the fly team got the guard. They then followed the money. They found Csonka's money man in Hungary and they planned on arresting him when he suddenly killed himself. The money man was now dead, but he kept great records. He kept track of all of Csonka's money. The records were in code and no one had time to decrypt it.

They needed to take down Csonka while they still have him. They chose to pretend the money man was still alive. They used his records to force Csonka into accepting a plea deal of thirty years. Csonka took it and he was being transferred to a less cushy prison when the transport motorcade was hit by a truck.

Csonka was not the roll over type. He had people ready to break him out of police custody. The truck that hit the motorcade was followed by several cars and all full of gunmen.

The feds killed most of them only they couldn't stop Csonka from driving off in one of the cars. Wes caught up to him in one of the police cars. Vo was with him. They were about to arrest Csonka again when a sniper appeared. The sniper shot Vo. She became Wes's chief concern and Csonka was allowed to escape while Vo was transported to a hospital.

Vo was rushed into surgery. While her life was hanging in the balance, Wes remembered who put her there. He rounded up the local cops and they went hunting for Csonka.

Csonka had a thirty minute lead on them. Wes also wasn't in the correct mindset to go looking for him. The incident with Vo reminded him what happened with Mike. Wes was taking the manhunt personally. He tracked down Csonka's final movements to an empty airfield. They put out an alert for him with Europol and for now the man was roaming free.

And Vo's condition had taken a turn for the worst in the meantime. She could die at any moment and so now Wes wants revenge. He was done trying to get justice. He just wants to take off his badge and deliver payback to Csonka.

Production Code: INT409
Summary: A member of the Fly Team goes missing in Paris as the hunt for Greg Csonka continues.

Greg Csonka was found guilty of multiple crimes. He even confessed to the murder of FBI Special Agent Mike Brooks. Brooks was Wes's partner and he partly joined the FBI flyteam in the hope of getting justice for his friend. It was a therefore a relief when Csonka confessed.

Everyone thought that would be the end. They unfortunately underestimated Csonka. He had an escape plan lined up. It went into effect when the police were transporting him and he was able to flee to parts unknown with no one to stop him.

Before he left, he shot another federal agent. Her name is Cameron Vo. She was rushed into surgery. They saved her life only she was still at risk of infection. There's no telling if she'll wake up.

She was still asleep when the flyteam heard about Csonka's latest move. He went to Paris. He has a system whenever he gets in trouble with the law.

He was once found guilty in a Los Angeles court and he covertly snuck off to Las Vegas. He grabbed some money. He grabbed a fake passport. He essentially laid low while the heat died down.

He then went to Mexico when he left Las Vegas. Csonka's plan was very clear. He will eventually go to a nonextradition country when the heat dies down in Europe. Until then, he was hanging out in Paris. He has friends there. Or at least he did until they refused to hide someone too toxic to touch.

Csonka had to kill this friend and he threatened to kill more if he wasn't hidden. He also tried to confuse the Americans looking for him. He gave money to Valerie Marez. The feds thought it was for stolen artwork. They didn't care about that. They just wanted Csonka's location.

Valerie pretended like she wanted to save her own skin. She gave the feds an address. They went there. They interrupted a family having dinner and Valerie's real plan went into effect.

She lured the feds into a trap. Special Agent Raines was taken hostage. Csonka was holding onto him for collateral. He wanted a chance to escape and he promised not to kill Raines if the flyteam would give him five hours. They couldn't give him that. They also couldn't let him realize they couldn't give him that. And so they went back to Valerie.

Valerie wasn't some mere acquaintance. She was Csonka's girlfriend. She's in love with him. She was willing to do his bidding and the only time she agreed to betray him was because of her visa. She was French-Algerian. She doesn't have full citizenship in France.

She was there on a visa. This visa could get turned down for a whole slew of reasons. One of them being aiding and abetting a known criminal. The flyteam threatened her visa and so she helped them. She called Csonka. She kept him on the phone long enough for them to pin his location.

By time they got there, he had already left with Raines. The feds missed their chance on finding him, but they still got lucky. They found one member of the Belmondo Crime Family lurking around outside.

The head of the family was killed Csonka. The others agreed to work with him so they didn't get killed and that led to them they having no loyalty to Csonka. The FBI quickly arrested this underling. They reminded him what was on stake. That along with the fact he'd could get put into a prison not in Paris made him talk.

He told them that Csonka was heading to the airport. He also mentioned that Csonka took Raines to help sell his cover. He was going to pretend to be a federal agent to escape detection and having another federal agent there would make him look less suspicious.

Once the feds found out he was heading to the airport, they worked with local cops to shut down the airport. Someone must have talked because Csonka received a phone call. He was warned about going to the airport and he was going to go with Plan Be when Raines escaped.

Raines stabbed Csonka. They fought over the gun. They accidentally killed Csonka's man who was driving the car and Csonka ran off into the crowd when he couldn't overpower Raines.

Raines got him in the leg. Raines then calls his people. He tells them he's fine only he was worried about Vo. He believes Csonka will target Vo at the hospital. He also said that Csonka was limping away. Wes went looking for Csonka. He found him on the bridge. He tried to arrest the man and Csonka went for his gun.

Wes was forced to kill him. Which he didn't regret. Vo was going to recover. Raines was now safe. It was considered a good end to the case. The flyteam even enjoyed a quick drink in Paris before they went back to Budapest.

Although, it wasn't clear who warned Csonka about the airport.

Production Code: INT410
Summary: After Russian biochemist's murder during defection attempt, agents protect his daughter who must deliver sensitive biotoxin research to trusted colleague.

The Russians were proving to be a problem tonight. They executed a man seeking to defect. They killed Dr. Vasily Sviridov at his home. He was a biochemist and he had been working for the Russian government. Or at least he was until he started working with the Americans on the sly.

He was sharing information with them and the wider scientific community. The Russians didn't like that, but they also found out he was leaving and that was a final straw. They set out to murder him. They wanted to steal his research into a new bioweapon. They didn't want the Americans to get their hands on that. And it's a good thing they didn't count on Yulia.

Yulia was the doctor's daughter. She lived with him. She was there when the Russians came in and murdered her father. Her father gave her the suitcase carrying the new bioweapon right before his murder.

He knew what was about to happen. He gave his only child his hard work because he knew it would grant her a chance at life in America. What he didn't count was her zealotry. He told her to give the suitcase to Dr. Alexander Chung in Boston. He didn't count on Yulia being so scared that she handcuffed herself to the suitcase.

Yulia sent the keys to the handcuffs to Chung. Chung didn't mention that when he involved the FBI. He called the flyteam for help in extracting Yulia from the Ukraine.

She was hiding there from the Russian government and the whole thing made extra paranoid. She didn't even trust the FBI when they showed. They had to reassure her that Chung sent them. They promised to help her defect. They swore they'd get her out of the country and that promise was hard to keep with the Russians breathing down their neck.

They brought Yulia onto a train out of the country. It was three of them guarding her. The Russians sent a diversion that took Smitty and Raines out of the area. It left Tyler alone.

Tyler came across a Russian. They fought it out until Tyler won. He then checks on Yulia to find she left. She tried to move on the train by herself. She almost got killed for not following directions.

There were other Russians on the train and no one knew how many of them there was. The flyteam caught up to Yulia. They saved her life again and then they all got off in Poland.

The train was no longer safe. They didn't want to run the risk of an ambush. They found an American warehouse in Poland and they brought Yulia there. It still wasn't safe. Yulia's wrist was also starting to bleed. She's been handcuffed to it the suitcase for days at that point.

She hadn't exactly thought everything through, but the feds needed access to the suitcase. Vo came back to work. She had sources that told her that Vasily worked at a lab in Russia and that him disappearing with the weapon had left everyone scared. They even cleared a two block radius around that lab.

Vo suspected that whatever was in the suitcase was far too dangerous to transport. They needed to know what was inside. Yulia agreed with them and she opened the suitcase. Inside of it, there was a dangerous virus.

It could cause another pandemic. Her father once promised her that he'd never make a bioweapon. He went back on that promise and Yulia didn't realize it. She didn't know why the Russians wanted that suitcase so bad. The Russians caught up to the warehouse and Tyler got them away.

The plan was to head to a nearby US Army base in Poland. Chung however asked to use a civilian lab. He said the bioweapon was too dangerous for any one government to have. He included the American government in that.

He knew that they'd create antitoxin and possibly sit on the discovery all in the name of National Security. Only Chung wasn't in charge of what happens now. The flyteam reported what they found. Their government asked for the bioweapon to be brought to the base. They cut Yulia's handcuffs off to finally free the young woman.

Yulia thought she'd be left to fend for herself after that. She was scared of what happened next and so Raines repeated that he wasn't going to let anyone hurt her. It was the two of them driving to the base.

The Russians did their best to stop them. They sent out a fake BOLO for both Raines and Yulia. The local Polish police pulled them over. They were detaining them until the Russians heard their radio their location. The Russians then killed the Polish officers guarding the duo. They wanted the suitcase and were willing to kill Yulia if Raines didn't hand it over.

Which he did.

Smitty and Tyler were nowhere near. The two of them argued over petty stuff. Tyler was up for a promotion. They just needed to speak to his supervisor before they could give him the dream job. Well, one of his supervisors was Smitty. She was asked about what happened in Paris. She didn't want to lie for Tyler. She also knew

Wes would back Tyler and his side of the story and so she agreed to leave the team. She didn't want to cause issues. She also carried the bioweapon on her. She dropped off at the civilian lab with Chung. And that's why Raines didn't fight when he handed over the suitcase.

The Russians didn't even check the suitcase before they cleared off. Now both them and the Americans were denied the weapon. Tyler also decided not to take the promotion. He was heading back home to the States. He left because he knew Smitty was better for the flyteam than he was. She then returned the favor. She flew in his daughter to be there when he arrived home. And she made her dad all of his favorites.

Production Code: INT411
Summary: When an American student is found dead at a prestigious U.K. university, the Fly Team investigates an infamous secret society. Smitty's personal history with the school comes to a head when she's confronted with the same old-world elitism.

The FBI flyteam headed to the United Kingdom tonight. They were brought in to investigate a death. The body of Emma Byers was found in the pond at university and Smitty suspected it was murder.

The victim was American. She was attending Blackmore University. It was a very prestigious college. It was actually Smitty's old school.

She went there for a few semesters when she got caught with alcohol. She was of age, but the school has a strict policy about these things and Smitty was expelled. She went on to attend school in Manchester. She fell in love with criminology. And she never looked back.

Smitty getting expelled was a lot tougher on her mom. Her mom had expectations. Which was why Smitty couldn't wait to leave the UK and she's returning only now because of the public pressure.

The university received a lot of American money. Those same Americans were now contacting the FBI in droves hoping to learn that the school was still safe for their children. The flyteam unfortunately couldn't reassure them. They were the ones that pushed for Emma to have an autopsy.

The sergeant with the local police hadn't wanted to touch the case. He wanted to rule Emma's death as accidental. It was Smitty that pushed for the autopsy and she's glad she did because Emma's death was ruled a homicide. She was bashed over the head. She was thrown into the lake to drown. Emma also fought her attacker.

She has his blood under her fingernails. She has some scratches on her neck. She fought back and the last time she was seen was at the Covington Club. The Covington Club was this prestigious club on campus.

It used to be an all male club until 2013. The female body kept suing until finally they were allowed into the club. Emma was the only woman with the club when she died. Her mother flew to the UK after she was found.

She couldn't understand why her daughter was with the club. She said her daughter hated that club and its members. It was just the two of them. They talked about everything or so the mother thought. Only Emma didn't mention joining the club or the assault she suffered in the previous spring.

Emma went to the police to report a sexual assault in the Spring. Somehow that case didn't go anywhere. Emma didn't follow through with the complaint and the local sergeant was happy to drop the case. There didn't seem to be anyone willing to stand up to the Covington Club.

It was the home for several prime ministers, MPs, and even royalty. Smitty went to the club to ask some of the men there about Emma and suddenly a lawyer appeared. The lawyer's name is Mark Sterling. He was a former member of the Covington Club. He was now representing every young man tied to the club.

Smitty tried to convince the lawyer to let the young men give their DNA. If they're not guilty, they wouldn't mind giving up the DNA. The lawyer saw right through her stance.

He told them she has to get a warrant first and he stuck to that stance even as the bodies kept dropping. There was another student that died. His name is Harry. He was also with the Covington Club. He just wasn't murdered. He committed suicide. Harry was sent a compromising video of himself and he killed himself to keep that video from getting out.

The Covington Club apparently keeps dossier on its members. They collect blackmailing material in case one of them becomes prime minister and they need to call in a favor. The club has information on everyone there. Emma it seems was trying to get that information.

She didn't join the club for the connections or the internships. She joined because she was looking for her rapist. She must have found him that night because he killed her to cover up what he did. And the local cops never bothered with a rape kit that might have matched the blood under Emma's fingernails.

Wes later confronted the sergeant. He told him to stop being lazy. The guy must have heard him because he had patrol officers canvass the area.

They found the burner phone that was used to send the compromising video to Harry. It was sent by another member of the club. Wes and Smitty talked to the idiot that bought a burner phone on his credit cards. He sent that video to Harry to keep quiet. They both overheard James Haylett make a pass at Emma. She turned him down. He then said that's fine because he already had a piece.

James raped Emma. It came out that night. Emma called him a rapist. They were arguing and the next thing they know was that Emma is dead. With the witness's testimony, the flyteam got several warrants for everything at the Covington club. They also got a warrant to take James's blood sample.

They were sadly too late to capture James. He left on his father's private plane and was last seen heading to Russia, but this was going to be the end of the Covington Club. Smitty learned that she didn't get expelled for the alcohol. She got expelled for reporting another girl.

The other girl stole diamond earrings. She tried to blame it on the housekeeper only Smitty came forward. She reported this girl. The girl's father sat on the Board of Governors. He had Smitty's friend deliberately leave the alcohol in Smitty's room. She got expelled because some posh nuisance didn't want to be branded a thief.

It was a twenty year old wound for Smitty. She couldn't help blaming herself back then and so learning the truth freed her. It also made her want to get justice for Emma.

James couldn't be touched once he landed in Russia. Wes came up with an idea to make sure he never reached Russia. He forced that plane to land.

They made them land in Germany and that's when James claimed German citizenship. Anyone can buy citizenship if they bought property in Germany. James's father pulled some strings. He got his son a German passport. He now couldn't be questioned or extradited from Germany. James looked like he was going to get away again when Raines came up with an idea.

If they could prove that James's father was in cahoots with the Russians, they could issue sanctions. The team worked together. They managed to freeze his father's bank accounts.

James's father could no longer afford James's German citizenship and so it was nullified. James was arrested. He was extradited back to the UK. He will face charges for Emma's murder.

The school also wasn't going to get off. The chancellor was fired. The club was permanently shut down. James's father vowed revenge but who will believe him now that he couldn't call in a favor.
