Summary: When a residential apartment building is destroyed in a bomb explosion, New York FBI agents Maggie Bell and Omar Adon Zidan investigate a possible gang war — until their prime suspects are found dead.

A teen boy is watching his little brother when he sees a female classmate on the street outside his home. His little brother heads in while they talk. The building explodes. The FBI shows up. Agent Maggie Bell demands the fire department get everyone out. A mother looking for her sons comes running up hysterical. They try to comfort her and stop her from coming in when another explosion blows them back. The building crumbles from the top down.

Bell and OA update their boss. They speak with the residents and neighbors.

They catch a lead on a drug dealer that lived in the building. Bell and OA climb through the rubble. A worker has found a body and a cell phone melted into the vic's leg.

Back at headquarters, they have their eye on a Blood gang member by the name of Felton. Bell and OA bring the cell phone in. Bell excuses herself to go clean up. She pauses to look at a picture of a man in her desk. They get data back on the phone. They start to build their case.

Wayne Clinton is a new suspect. He might have bombed Felton's building to try and rise up the ranks of the gang.

Bell and OA get word on Wayne's whereabouts. They stake out the entrance of a club. Wayne comes out of the club and goes to get in his car. Bell and OA head his way. His car blows up.

Back at the office, Bell updates the team. This might be a war between two gangs. They head to a local recreational center where explosives have been discovered. They look to be something MS-13 would use. They pick up on a repairman named Wilmur that works there that is from El Salvador. They bring him in. While he waits in the interrogation room they receive footage of the repairman taking a duffle bag from someone suspicious. Bell threatens him and his family. He gives up a name. The SWAT team rushes a building for a man named Bernardo. He isn't there. They head to the local prison to meet an MS-13 member. When they arrive he is already dead. His heart was taken out of his body and he was left for dead.

Back at the office, the whole team watches the video footage and starts over. They cannot find Bernardo. Their next move is to tell the public so they can find this guy. Tips pour in. They hope he doesn't do anything crazy. Bell and OA go on the stakeout. Bell can't stop thinking about the young boy who died. They see a kid on the street that is dressed like Wilmur. The kid makes a run for it. Bell and OA break into a nearby building. Bernardo is in there. They take him in after seeing him and his bomb lab. He is working with someone. He won't give the person up.

After examining the bombs they catch a lead and head to meet a white nationalist politician named Lawrence. He is linked to several past bombings. They go to meet him but he manages to weasel his way around their questions.

Back at the office, Bell and OA start to think about Lawrence, check his bank statements and start to piece together that he is paying MS-13 and other gangs to carry out a war. They catch another lead, circling back to the director the recreational center. He used to be in the military and he is connected to Lawrence. He also has the skills to build bombs. They bring him in and he asks for immunity if he tells them everything. They get interrupted. Their boss has something solid on Lawrence and they need to move on it now.

Bell tells OA her husband was killed by a man who mowed down people on the sidewalk on Halloween. He offers her any help she might need. They head out to a local diner owned by the recreational center's mother. They have a search warrant. They find an empty grenade box in the cellar. Lawrence has one more bomb. They find out that the next bomb is scheduled to go off soon after interrogating the Rec. center director.

Bell thinks he is going to hit a local summit taking place. They evacuate the building. There is panic and chaos. One of the agents finds a bag of bombs while Lawrence speaks to OA and Bell. He asks for his lawyer. They let him make a call. Their agent picks up. He is disappointed. He was making the call to have the bombs set off. They take him in.

OA gives Bell a ride to the funeral of the young boy who died.

Summary: After eight people are poisoned at a New York deli, Bell and Zidan trace the crime to an unlikely culprit.

Momentum is not being lost for the team as they deal with a young girl poisoning a deli full of people. But it doesn't take Maggie and OA long to discover that the reason the girl, Caroline, did it was because she had gotten in with a terrorist group.

Caroline and her friend Tara believed that they could find a better life in the Middle East and as the wives of members of ISIS. High school is nothing but a place for Caroline and Tara to feel tortured and scared to be themselves so they see the way women live in the Middle East as an escape. So Maggie and OA have to show

Tara how wrong she is about not only herself but about the kind of life that would await her if she did take off with a man she met on a terrorist site.

But bigger problems come into play when the team not only realizes that Tara has given her picture to the terrorist, but that another attack is already in motion. Their time to stop it is running dangerously low and using Tara as bait seems to be the only way to stop it.

On top of that, OA and Maggie have to deal with expert profiler Dana Mosier as the new special agent in charge.

The police head out into the woods from where she came from. They discover several graves and one that is empty. The girl must have been buried alive.

Bell and Omar show up. Bell thinks the suspect knows the wooded out of the way area. He seems comfortable, especially since he buried a girl alive. They head to the coroner. All of the victims were sex workers who had been stabbed more than 2 dozen times. They all have been branded as well with a crown that the killer attempted to remove. Bell thinks they are looking for a trafficker.

Bell and Omar meet with the victim who got away. She tells them she saw an ad online for work. She and her sister both applied. They were picked up by three Ukrainian men and brought to a basement blindfolded. They threatened to kill their families. She has not seen her sister since. They were rotated between several basements. In one she could hear waves. She was desperate so she asked one her johns to call the police.

Back at the office, Kristen has figured out who all 9 of the pics are. They also receive the 911 call from the john. They visit him. He denies it but breaks and tells them about what he saw.

Bell and Omar along with SWAT enter a building in the night. It is empty. They enter the basement to find nothing but beds and a wall with pictures made from make-up. In a back room there is a gurney with OBGYN stirrups. They are all disgusted. They find a silicone substance in the trash, the same material found in the breast implant of one of the dead victims.

Bell and Omar meet with the real estate agent overseeing the property they discovered. The property belongs to a rich man who lives in London. They call into the office to get surveillance teams to the man's other properties.

They talk to their victim again who tells them an older Ukrainian doctor often came to visit and help the girls. They track him down and head to his office. Before they can get inside, someone falls on top of the car next to them from the floor above. It's the doc. They head in and separate. Bell is attacked by what appears to be the man they are looking for called Snake. He leaves a bloody handprint behind on the wall.

Bell gets care from the medics. Jube calls and tells them he has Snake's identity and it is his cousin who owns the employment agency. They head to Snake's property that looks out on the place where the victims were buried. They also find the skin of the victims that were branded and a photo of the real estate agent. She lied to them.

Back at the office, they try to get warrants for the rest of the properties but that will take more time. They decide to roll out the sting. Jubal will play their john. They head to a hotel and stakeout. A car pulls up with 3 ladies. They head inside. Jubal pays them and tells them to wait a moment. Snake is waiting in the car. Bell and Omar sneak up on him and grab him. Jubal comes out. They got the three girls but the raids on the other houses came up empty.

Bell goes in to talk to Snake. She plans to play off of his sick side and let him see her cut and bruises since he likes pain and suffering. She calls him on his perverted side. Details what he has been doing all this time with the girls. He gets angry when she gets a detail wrong. She gains leverage on him by telling him he isn't going to make it in prison unless he tells her where the girls are.

They stake out a house before going in. They see a man with a gun. The FBI heads in with Bell and Omar. They find dozens of girls in the cellar. Bell finds the victim's sister Brooke.

Production Code: FBI106
Summary: Special Agents Maggie Bell and OA Zidan investigate the death of a safety inspector and its possible connection to a leak at a nuclear power plant.

The victim was Cameron Porter. She was an investigator with the Inspector General and she wasn't even supposed to be at the plant because there were no open investigations into Arrowpoint however she was at the plant when she was murdered and whatever happened there it led to her body becoming radioactive. It wasn't the radioactive material that killed her because that had been a bullet and so that led to even more questions. Agents Bell and Zidan asked the plant's operator how the body could have become radioactive. They were told that it might have something to do with the field pool. The field pool was where the uranium is taken to be cooled and someone had tried to sabotage its system on the night Porter was murder.

The federal agents talked to security and there were some lacking protocols in place. There wasn't much the one guard could tell them but he had liked Porter. He respected the victim enough to tell the agents that he saw her fighting with the plumber Garrett Sebastian the other day and so they talked to the plumber. He said that Porter got in his face because she didn't think he was doing as much as he could and the fight wasn't something to kill over. Bell and Zidan just know that for some reason Porter was in the room when sabotaged the uranium room and so they question what she was really doing at the plant. She could either have been the saboteur or she could have walked in on the saboteur and that's why she was killed.

The FBI had checked out Porter's personal life. She mostly stayed home and order in through a few months ago she did travel to Cuba. Bell and Zidan also checked out her apartment and they found a photo in which she tried to hide her boyfriend. The boyfriend was Jake Fletcher. He worked at Arrowpoint until several complaints were made against him and that launched an investigation. It had been Porter that looked into him and she found enough evidence to warrant firing Fletcher. After he was fired, he claimed someone with an agenda had been out to get him and that he had been fired because he found a crucial water valve that was at risk of failing.

Fletcher even released pages and pages of classified information that as a nuclear engineer was too important to be posted online.

Once the feds moved to arrest Fletcher for what he did, he found a way out of the country and escaped to Cuba. His girlfriend had left the country for the first time in order to visit him and so neither Bell nor Zidan thought Fletcher could be their killer because as far as they knew he was still in Cuba. Only he left Cuba. Fletcher went to Canada where he crossed into the US at some point in Vermont. The agents had no idea how he could have left Cuba without CIA knowing and, so clearly, they made several mistakes. Another thing that stuck out was who had helped Fletcher cross into the country. The agents thought their best bet was Richard Cook. Cook was a friend of Fletcher's and there was evidence he stopped for gas on his way to Vermont.

Bell and Zidan later talked to Cook. He denied helping his friend and said Fletcher hadn't been a traitor because he was just trying to do the right thing. Cook believed his friend's story about being set up and the agents didn't have the evidence they needed to arrest him just then, but they soon found out that they had been too quick to write off Garrett Sebastian. He sent the text message to Porter on the night she died that lured her to the plant and so the agents went back there to talk to him. They said they knew he lured Porter to her death and they demanded to know why he really fought with the victim. It turns out Sebastian had been the one that made the allegations against Fletcher and so he was asked about Porter. And he said he wanted a deal first.

Sebastian let them know that he hadn't pulled the trigger though he did know had actually Porter and wanted a deal before he said anything else. The agents were marching him out of the building when he set off the alarms and they were all quarantined because they had signs of radioactive waste on them. Luckily, Bell and Zidan had been fine. The real problem was Sebastian because someone had poisoned with that waste and it only registered when he started to sweat. He later died from being poisoned and everyone thought it was Fletcher. Fletcher could have used Sebastian's past against him in order to manipulate him and then he was done with him he killed him.

The agents got lucky again when the FBI found Fletcher. He had still been in New York and so they asked him about Porter. They found out Porter and Fletcher got married, so they wanted to know how he conned her. He said he didn't. Fletcher told them Porter came to Cuba because she found evidence that he had been right all along and that someone set him up. The two got back together after that and they got married. They wanted to start a family right away and Porter learned from her doctor that she would need IVF. So that's why Fletcher came back. He needed to be in NYC when they began treatment and he was with his wife when she got that text. She wanted to respond to it because she thought that she would finally learn who set him up. And he hadn't wanted her to go the plant because he didn't think that would change much of anything for them.

Porter waited until he was asleep and she went to the plant anyways. She must have run into the person that wanted to hide the fact the plant needed to close and so agents asked who knew Fletcher was back. The only other person that knew was Porter's best friend Valeria Borgia. Borgia was also an investigator and she hid the fact she knew where a wanted criminal was yet they leaned her and they found out she revealed this secret to Inspector Miller. Miller worked at Arrowpoint and had been someone both women had looked up to. Only Miller seems like he was the only one that could frame Fletcher for murder and so they decided to use a ruse. They sent Fletcher back to Arrowpoint with a wire on and they got him to get a confession out of Miller.

Miller had used Sebastian to sabotage the plant while he murdered Porter and then he murders Sebastian because the guy knew too much. He did all of this because Fletcher had been right. There was a valve weakness at the plant that was slowly leaking radioactive waste over time and Miller wanted to cover it up because he wanted to lose his job or how important the job made him feel. That's why he got rid of Fletcher and began killing people whenever they questioned why Fletcher was let go.

The feds arrested Miller and now he'll pay for everything including the coverup.

Summary: Criminals masquerading as NYPD officers are robbing armored cars from the same armored car company.

A group of guys dressed up as NYPD hijacked an armored trunk: the group had been three guys. Two of them had been white and one of them had been black however they were all as violent as each other and they threatened to kill the guards if they didn't get what they wanted. They also had guns on them and so they forced the guards to comply before they made off with 2.6 million dollars in cash. It took hours for the crime to be reported to the real cops and because it was a bank job, the feds were brought in.

The FBI had made a name for themselves by hunting violent bank robbers and they wanted to continue in the tradition of apprehending them. They began their investigation into this case by checking the car that was used at the scene.

The fake cops had gotten the armored car to pull over by flashing their badges and pretending that they needed assistance. It worked just long enough for the robbers to get the job on the security guards and so the car used for the crime was key. It belonged to someone who didn't have a record and had no idea why the feds were asking him questions, but he does have a brother. The brother was Nick Salerno and he had a record. He was known for armed robbery and while he claimed to be keeping his nose clean that didn't stop federal agents from looking into him. Salerno had access to the car, was a convicted criminal, and didn't really have an alibi for the heist. And so everyone tried to find out who were his accomplices.

They hadn't really gotten anywhere when they finally got evidence putting Salerno as the driver of the car that night. They went to arrest him and unfortunately they had been too late. Salerno had been killed and everyone knew that one of his new friends did it. Yet, the only people they saw Salerno in contact with were those on the job. He went into construction after he got out of prison and so likely he was in business with some friends from work. Maggie and OA were confirming one of their suspects with the only eye-witnesses they had and they found their proof. They were going to make the arrest when another heist occurred. With this one being different because the bank robbers used explosives.

The robbers used explosives to stop the truck and then began shooting at the guards were in a hurry to abandoned their vehicle. That time they were no witnesses and the robbers still made off with millions of dollars. Everyone wanted to know what made the second one different and it seems their suspect Healy was the escalating things. He was an expert in explosives and he stole a large amount of C4 from his construction site. Healy being confirmed as a suspect also helped the FBI figure out who else had been involved. They found footage of Healy planning the first heist and the guys he met up matched the description of their robbers. They even saw Salerno in the footage and they also spotted a fourth man.

The fourth man hadn't been at the bank robbery because he was their inside man. He fed them information and his actions more or less contributed to Salerno's death in the aftermath. Maggie and OA used that information to get their guy to talk and he said that he only got involved because he thought no one was supposed to get hurt. It turns out Jason had been naive. He was a former Army Ranger who came back from deployment needing help and instead they left him hanging. Jason blames his country for abandoning him and that's why he didn't mind stealing from the banks. He even manipulated his girlfriend into revealing information because she knew all the routes the trucks took.

There wasn't a relationship that Jason hadn't spat on and so they told him he wasn't betraying anyone as it was his buddies that were escalating the violence. The other two were going to kill again and the feds needed Jason's help to stop them. So Jason explained a few things. Like how he got involved. He said Salerno was his drug dealer until one day Jason couldn't pay and Salerno said that there was another way to wipe out his debt. He said that's when Salerno introduced him to the others and that soon it was Healy that was giving the orders. Jason claimed to have believed them when they said no one was going hurt and the fact that went back on that had turned his stomach. He was the one that said he was now willing to help the FBI take down Healy and Jenkins.

Only Jason was still lying to everyone. The feds had a wire strapped to him and he was supposed to meet with the others, but Jason led Maggie and OA into a trap. They later went running into a building when they thought Jason's life was at stake and it turns out the whole building had been wired to blow. The FBI agents had to work with the others to get out of the building alive and by then Jason had run off with his friends. The group was trying to get away on foot and so the FBI carried out a massive manhunt to flush them out. They eventually caught Healy and Jenkins easily. And so the only one that was proving harder to get was Jason. And Jason had made things personal for OA.

OA thought he built up some rapport with Jason because they had both served overseas and had seen some things yet Jason betrayed him afterward because he hadn't wanted to go jail and he still didn't. By time OA found him, Jason was raising his gun and basically demanding to be shot. OA couldn't do it and so Maggie shot him. She didn't injure him too badly and Jason was going to make it.

Maggie also could have reported OA because OA was the one that trusted Jason to begin with and nearly killed the both of them, only she covered for her partner and she asked him to be honest with her.

If he ever needed to talk then her door was open.

Bell pretends to be a street buyer to see what he has. He shows her a truck full of rifles and more. OA comes from behind. They take him in. Jubal offers him a deal for a name of who he sold to. He quickly accepts the offer. He has video footage of the man's face but doesn't have a name.

OA makes his way into the house and sees Freddy, one of the brothers trying to make a run for it. They take the brother and sister to headquarters. The sister breaks down and tells Bell where to find her brothers. Meanwhile, Jubal goes to see the father in jail who won't talk.

OA apologizes to Bell about his irritation with the woman and his issues with this case. They head out to make their way through the woods and to a farm where the brothers are and could be holding the chemist. A van pulls up to the FBI tents. Somehow their cover has been blown. Jubal calls to execute the job but it is too late. The team is under fire. One agent is shot in the stomach. Bell tries to help him. They hide behind a tree as shots are fired. Bell hits one but they take off.

OA arrives to help Bell and the agent who was shot. They get out safely. Back at the tents, they discover there are more men in the house and chemical weapons. OA thinks Bell should negotiate. They all agree. They make their way closer to the house. Bell tries to speak with them through a megaphone. One of them is injured. Bell offers to leave as long as they hand over the chemist. Maggie sees kids come to the window. The man preaches his words. The kids scream. Maggie runs in. OA goes after her. Just as he comes to the house he sees Maggie carrying out the kids. The brothers are also being escorted out but one is missing. There is another building. OA heads there with backup.

OA finds the chemist but no-one else. They bring him back to the tent. He tells them the brother was testing cyanide on the farm animals and then left an hour ago. He was going to the city for he called Judgment Day.

After putting it all together, they realize the brother is going to the courthouse where his father will be. They head there. They walk the halls and hear screams coming from a door. They let themselves in slowly. The brother Bryan is in there. He has a chemical weapon in his hand and he is ready to release it. OA and Bell talk him down and take him out of the court.

OA and Bell watch the chemist and his daughter reunite. Later, as Dana heads home for the night the Russian official gets out of his car. He wants her to know he didn't appreciate the way she spoke to him before. He is watching her too.

They send OA and Maggie to East Harlem to check out the restaurant and see what they can find out about the delivery receipt. OA poses as a civilian and asks the restaurant to deliver the same order for his buddy. They follow the delivery man who leads them to their man, Ernesto. Maggie gets out of the vehicle. The man and his friends all flee the scene, running from her. Maggie chases the man on foot. Just as he turns to shoot at her, OA jumps on him. They bring him in and ask him who ordered the hit on Cruz. Ernesto finally talks after Maggie threatens him. He gives up a name, Vincent Marino.

OA and Maggie head to Marino's with a team. They find him dead. They check his phone records and see that he has been calling a woman named Amber. They head to see her at a restaurant where she works. She tells them she was his sponsor. They get a call to head to another crime. At the scene, another protected witness is dead. A female by the name of Maya. Maggie thinks the program has been compromised. It could be the marshal. They head to see him. He swears it wasn't him but maybe someone has been watching him. They find a GPS tracker on his car.

OA and Maggie visit with a man in prison connected to Maya. She sold him out and now he is in prison for life. He'll talk for a better cell. He gives them details about someone on the outside

Before they know it, Ackerman is on the run and Amber isn't talking. They ask Jubal to talk to her since she went through AA and he did too. He refuses and tells Maggie he won't use AA against her.

Maggie sits to talk to her. She tells them she was forced to testify against her own father. She liked Ackerman. He talked her into going to AA. She liked him. Even though he is married, they started dating. When Marino found out, Ackerman was forced to give up a name from the list. They tell her 7 people are dead. She is in shock. She had no idea. But she cannot betray him. He saved her life and she loved him.

They visit Ackerman's wife who says another female witness did the same thing. She knows her husband wouldn't cheat. And he wouldn't take off without her.

They get intel on the vehicle Ackerman was driving. He has been abandoned. Ackerman calls into headquarters. He wants Amber released or he will sell another name. They have 30 minutes. They go back to Amber and tell her all about his other relationship. They show her photos of the dead witnesses. He could do the same to her.

Amber gets off a bus. She heads into a store and comes out. She gets a text from Ackerman to head to a location down the road. She gets into the cab with her hoodie on and sunglasses. They meet in the woods and just as he goes to grab her hand, she cuffs him. It's Maggie. The team jumps out and take him down.

Maggie asks Jubal if they are good even though she wanted him to talk to Amber. He tells her they are fine — they put away the bad guy and that's what counts.

He has plenty of enemies because of his political point of views.

sister goes there. They run into her. OA doesn't approve of her protesting too. They head across campus to meet with a student at a club where a student works made hateful tweets about Bain. On their way out of the building, OA and Maggie duck to avoid a drive-by shooting. They chase after the vehicle and manage to stop it by shooting the driver. Maggie clocks the shooter inside who tries to make a run for it. They bring him in and get the location of his clubhouse.

At the clubhouse, they find glass and bring it in to compare it to the glass found in Bain's room. They are a match. Meanwhile, Kristen continues to track social media and the hashtag, New Dawn. They believe it is a campus-based political group.

OA and Maggie go to see a teacher who teaches politics on the campus. They question him about a student named Claire who is of interest and connected to the group. The teacher tells them she left school a while ago and has been in London. Kristen calls to let them know she works at a local coffeehouse. OA knows it, his sister Amira works there. They go to talk to her. She tells them what she knows and wants to help. OA tells her no but she doesn't care. She is a journalist. After some back and forth OA agrees Amira can track her connection to Claire down and make an introduction and that is it.

Maggie and Amira arrive at a club. Kristen and OA listen in outside. Amira brings Maggie to meet her connection. Amira pretends to need help after some of her friends were beat up by white nationalists. Maggie poses as someone looking to get in with New Dawn. OA checks in with his sister. She wants to continue to help. OA tells her no way. Later, after they cannot find Conner they go to see his dad who is in disbelief. He wants his lawyer. Meanwhile, they tap the phones and listen in to the father and son talk. Conner admits to being involved. He lets his dad go in a hurry. Maggie and OA track him down. He is in the middle of trying to kill himself by hanging. He passes out. Maggie resuscitates him.

At the hospital, Conner admits that it was the professor at the college who runs the political group. They rush to his house and find bombs. The professor isn't there. He is on the run. They start their work trying to track him down. They track his vehicle by GPS and canvas the area when they find his car empty. They find him walking and bring him in. During the questioning, the professor tells them he isn't responsible for his students who fulfill his visions. Kristen interrupts. Summary: After an investigative journalist is murdered, the team uncovers information linking the suspect to past cases. The victim's death also strikes a chord with Maggie, leaving her desperate for answers in regard to a traumatic event in her personal life.

A man is gunned down in the park by a male who chases after him in the dark. Maggie and OA are called in. The victim is a reporter named Rob McCann. Near the body, the words "vermin" are written on a park bench.

The next day, Maggie and OA meet with her friend Paul. He is an editor who knew McCann and Maggie's husband, Jason, who was also a journalist. Kristen and Jubal come across a person of interest who called out McCann as a vermin in a forum. Maggie and OA bring him in.

Maggie lets the situation get the best of her when she interrogates him. He tells her he went to the park but didn't get out of his car. He did see a jogger though in a hoodie who looked mysterious. Kristen tracks down video footage of the park from a restaurant nearby. Dana recalls a similar case from a year ago. After doing some digging and comparing the two shootings, they determine the jogger in the park who killed a state senator last year is the same man who killed McCann.

Maggie and OA visit McCann's wife who says he was working on a big story that he said was going to possibly win him an award. They track down a bar he was on the same day and talk to an employee there who talks about someone who left right after McCann. They figure out that man was an NYU teacher named Will Patterson. They need to talk to him but aren't able to when they arrive at the scene of a car crash. Their suspect is dead after hitting a tree. After some additional digging, Kristen realizes Patterson was a source, not a suspect. It looks like Patterson was killed on purpose. They head to his home. It looks like someone was there looking for something. They find the paperwork and locate emergency contact. They head to see the man. He is a former flame of Patterson's. He shares that the Will was very smart and sought after for his ability to analyze large sets of numbers.

Back at the office, Kristen has nailed down a new suspect who Maggie realizes is in an old video of her and her husband.

Maggie shares what she has found on the video. He gives her a speech that it is human nature to look for reasons after someone dies but it doesn't look like their suspect in her video.

Dana pulls Maggie aside to tell her how dangerous their suspect Frank Cutler is. She understands. Maggie and OA head to the bank to search a deposit box. They come up with three pills and cannot figure out why they are in there. Just then, a teller lets them know that Frank Cutler is there. They head out front and come face to face with him. They tell him to get on the ground but he doesn't listen. They both shoot him.

Kristen goes to a specialist with the pills who links them back to a drug company. The drug is new, called Lucasil. It is used for childhood leukemia. According to a notebook from Rob, a batch of the drug was tainted and distributed. He was going to expose the company. Their leads run them back to Will's former flame who was behind it all. They get him as he attempts to go on the run.

Back at the office, Dana gives Maggie a card. It is for a woman who helped her through some tough times. OA comes in and tells Maggie she was right all along. It was Cutler in her video. Maggie heads to the husband where Cutler is. She is upset. She yells at him but he is in critical condition and flat lines in front of her before she can get answers.

OA comes to the hospital to comfort Maggie who is mad at herself for missing all of the signs, that her husband was murdered and not in a car accident. The surgeon comes out hours later and tells Maggie that Cutler didn't make it.

A female CEO tells her firm she isn't happy they made #2 on the best list. Minutes later her secretary tells her a gift has arrived for her. She opens it. It blows up.

OA and Maggie arrive at the scene. Several are dead due to a pipe bomb. Meanwhile, Jubal tells the team about the CEO named Veronica. They need to start digging and learn all they can about her. OA and Maggie talk to Veronica's husband. He is very shaken and emotional. He mentions his wife fired a man named Nick Frost months back. He was aggressive and threatened to ruin her life.

OA and Maggie bring him in. He could care less she is dead but he didn't do it. Maggie reads an email sent by him months ago where he threatens to blow her up. He tells them he lost $33 million to her. She took credit for an account he brought in. Meanwhile, Quantico has sent a profiler to help on the case. Dana isn't pleased, telling him they don't need the help.

Reports on the bomb come back. Some of the shrapnel has gold in it. They piece it together. They are gold cufflinks, a gift given by Veronica to her employees. Just when Nick is looking more and more the guilty party another bomb goes off.

OA and Maggie talk to the owner of the cafe where the bomb went off. His employee Maggie was killed. They head back to the office and try to piece together any patterns or connections between the two but cannot find one.

Kristen discovers another employee named Stuart who Veronica fired and Carly blogged about. They ask Nick who says he isn't a killer. There is no way Stuart would do it.

OA and Maggie head with SWAT to Stuart's. He isn't home, but the evidence inside the condo proves he is up to something bad.

OA and Maggie look around Stuart's home. He has plenty of equipment for the bombs and cuff links. In the bathroom they discover blood everywhere. After some research, OA and Maggie head to a local hospital. Stuart is there but they cannot see him the nurse tells them. He tried to kill himself 6 days ago and has been in a coma since. He cannot be their bomber.

They reach out to Stuart's ex, Martina. After ruling her out they focus in on Martina and Stuart's son. They realize it is him. Martina tries to cover for him but they catch her in several lies. Cameron tells them his family was sacrificed for nothing. After some talking, he angrily reveals someone is next. The team gets to work trying to stop another explosion and find his target.

Dana and the profiler argue about what Cameron is really thinking and who his next target is. Dana thinks it is Nick Frost while Spencer thinks it is another woman named Rose.

OA and Maggie head to a local restaurant where Nick is. They find the back pack. It has the bomb inside. OA clears out the room while Maggie brings the bomb to the commercial cooler. It goes off. OA screams for her. She is on the floor but okay.

Production Code: FBI116
Summary: When the daughter of a wealthy family is kidnapped in an attempt to gain notorious internet fame, Maggie and OA discover the kidnapper's plans go far beyond abduction in order to never be forgotten.

The FBI was alerted when a young woman was abducted. The girl's abduction was witnessed by an elderly woman that lives in the neighborhood, but because this woman likes to make frequent calls to dispatch it took the police almost an hour to show up and once they did they mishandled the case. The police waited four hours before calling the FBI and the special agents assigned to the case had lost credible time. Special Agents Maggie Bell and Omar Adom Zidan needed to trace Elizabeth Chase's movements and they had to consider why she was taken. She came from a technically working rich family and she could have been taken for the ransom alone or the whole thing wasn't about money. It could be about sexual sadism and the victim could be abducted by someone that had no reason to keep her alive.

Until the agents were either contacted or found the body, they had to work the case like any other. They went over the events of the night Elizabeth was taken. She had gone out to dinner with father Benjamin Chase who runs several online magazines and who was currently going through a nasty divorce with her mother Margaret Chase. Margaret was a socialite from old money and she had posted her daughter's abduction online. She thought that she was just getting the word out there and all she did was highlight a potentially sensitive case. Margaret, of course, blamed her daughter's abduction on her ex who she says has a lot of enemies and Benjamin did deny it when he spoke to the FBI.

Benjamin was in the business of sensationalizing people's lives and naturally, he's upset a lot of people. It was such a long list of enemies that he didn't think the FBI could get through them all and so they were figuring out what to do when the ransom call came in. It was actually a text and it demanded a million dollars in cash that was supposed to be left in a trash can down in the subway. It seemed odd that someone so calm who managed to abduct Elizabeth so easily would then make a mistake by asking for a public drop-off, but Maggie and OA followed the lead and dropped off the money. The money was left in a trash can and it was picked up a homeless guy. The guy then left the train station and after waiting around for a while he started to hand out the money to other homeless people in the area.

The FBI quickly moved in and arrested their suspect, but he had nothing to do with the kidnapping. He had gotten paid to pick up the bag and he was supposed to hand it off to someone who never showed. Only the FBI used surveillance to find out who was this mysterious person that never showed and it turned out to be Benjamin's assistant. The assistant said he hated Benjamin's guts and that he wanted to make the man pay. So that's when he piggy-backed off the abduction. The assistant didn't take Elizabeth though he thought to use the situation by making that ransom demand just because he wanted to squeeze a million dollars out of his boss. And while the ransom situation drained their resources and had everyone looking in the wrong direction, the real culprit did go on to make a mistake.

The analyst found someone stole an inhaler from a pharmacy. It would make sense if that person was connected to Elizabeth because she had asthma and she had been forced to leave her inhaler behind when she was abducted, but if her abductor wanted to keep her alive then he would have to get his hands on an inhaler without a prescription and so the robbery at the pharmacy was the best lead. The FBI checked surveillance cameras in the area and they spotted a teenager running from the scene. He was later identified as Charlie Jacobs. He was a high schooler who did show up for school that day and so the agent tracks him down. They went in just wanting to ask him a few questions and unfortunately, he made a run for it.

Charlie went to the roof and before he jumped he said he "just wanted to be famous". No one knew what he was talking about and so they dug into his personal life. They even traced the soil on his car and it came from an area upstate. The FBI patrolled the area and they found Elizabeth out in the woods. She had used a broken window to cut herself free from restraints and had tried to make a run for it. If the agents hadn't found her in time then she could have died from exposure, but thankfully the worst was averted and Elizabeth was alert enough to answer questions. She said that two guys kidnapped her and that she had overheard them talking about killing a bunch of kids. She didn't hear anything else because there had been a bag over her head and all she pick out was muffles. And so all the FBI knew was that another teenager was on the brink of committing a massacre.

They tried to track down this teenager by pretending to be Charlie, but soon his death was announced on the news and that meant this other guy turned off his cell phone before they could pinpoint his exact location. The closest they got was a three-block ratio. No one stood out to the FBI and so they asked Elizabeth if she knew anyone from that area. She said that the guy she tutors lives there. His name was Sam and he tried asking her out except she was already in a relationship. Elizabeth was dating a basketball player and so she tried to turn down Sam nicely but he told her that she would be sorry and he said that soon he was going to be famous. Again, that word. Sam and Charlie both believed that to be famous that meant someone would never forget their name and with such unstable children — they were alluding to an attack.

The FBI combed through their text messages to figure out what happened. Sam was the more dominant one and he ordered Charlie to kidnap Elizabeth because Sam wanted to impress her by killing everyone at her boyfriend's basketball game. The FBI later found Sam at the game and they tried to arrest him, but he didn't want to come without a fight and so OA ambushed him. He got for his troubles and so it was lucky that it didn't penetrate the bulletproof vest. OA still ended up bruise and it was worth it because they captured Sam alive. And Sam's father actually thanked OA for not harming his son.

But Kristen who was a great analyst thought maybe it was time for her to go out into the field and so she had her application approved by the big boss.

Summary: Maggie and Dana struggle to find justice for victims by a serial killer; the mayor limits the investigation to cut costs.

A detective from the Major Case Unit called in the FBI. Detective Tom Shay was growing concerned because the guy he was looking for has killed three women so far and he didn't believe it was at an end. He told Maggie and OA about the suspect. Like how the first victim was eight weeks ago and the second victim was killed three weeks ago. The killer's window was becoming smaller with each kill. He also pursued a certain type. He targeted women that were young, attractive, and a brunette. The killer would rape, murder, and pose his victims in a park. Her even smudged a smile onto their faces and so everyone wanted to catch him before he found his fourth victim. And Maggie had been a little too keen because she took on the case without checking in first.

Maggie didn't get into trouble, but she was warned about closing this case because she shouldn't ask for the ball if she wasn't going to make the shot and so she began this investigation by first coming through the latest victim's life. Chrissy Bugasi was twenty and she lived at home with her conservative parents. Her parents thought she was hanging out with friends and it turns out she lied to them. She was actually meeting with a guy she met through a dating app. The app was called "Apple Pie". It was for wholesome people who wanted to meet others that went to church and it also had odd questioning for a dating app. There was a question if the women would ever tell their families about using the app and they all said "no".

The FBI later ran their profile of the killer through their system. They checked on murdered women who have used Apple Pie in the past, but no one was expecting to find seven more victims. It turns out the killer used to dump the bodies miles away from the city and each time he was never found he stopped being just a little less vigilant. He was gaining confidence and that's why his victims were slowly cropping up closer to the city. It was where he met these women for dates and it was probably where he lived. Hence he was dropping bodies closer to home. The killer was making more mistakes now and so the feds tried to catch a mistake, but everywhere they turned they found their hands tied.

The Mayor of New York City held a lot of sway. He was friends with the Deputy Director of the FBI and he demanded that news of seven more victims shouldn't be published. The Mayor was concerned about tourist season, but it didn't matter in the end anyway because people started to cancel their hotel bookings when they heard there was a serial killer in the city killing young brunettes. Everyone was afraid to take a risk under those conditions and it eventually upset the Mayor because he said his city was losing money. He also became upset when the serial killer sent a manifesto to the New York Post. It was all about playing with his victims like they were dolls and putting a smile on their face. And so the Mayor didn't want the letter to get out.

Dana was told she couldn't use it, but she was smart and she realized that circulating it around all the precincts meant it was bound to get out and so she found ways around the Mayor. She also had the agents under her trace the paralytic that was used on the victims back to any doctors that live the city and so they found Dr. Praeger. Praeger was a surgeon and would know how to use a paralytic to subdue his victims. They even found a photo of one at the man's apartment. He quickly lawyered after that and he didn't talk until his attorney was present. That's when under advice he revealed that he had gotten the photo from a friend. This friend was someone he met at a sex club and luckily for him, his story was corroborated with DNA.

It was Praeger's DNA found on the victims, but the killer's DNA was found on the photo and so he was sharing photos of the murders with friends like Praeger. Praeger denying know those women were killed. He took photos of his conquests and shared it with this friend so he just thought his friend was doing the same. Praeger said the club where they meet up was called Hedon and that they never exchanged names there. It was sort of a rule at a sex club and so Praeger had to physically point out his friend. He took Maggie and OA to Hedon and he tried to point him only he got away. He left through an exit that wasn't on the blueprints and so the agents had to use surveillance cameras on that path.

They found a man matching their description and it led to identification. They identified Robert Burke IV as the Apex killer, but his family is one of the biggest real estate developers in Manhattan and so he was clearly a flight risk. A surveillance team was put on his house and Maggie and OA met with his ex-wife. She filed for divorce three months ago and that matched the escalation in the murders. It seems the ex-wife filed for divorce because her husband would drug and rape her. Except he tried to show her the photos of the rape because he wanted to show how "good" she looked in the light. Robert thought he was doing something sweet and all he did was prove how much of a monster he really was.

Its why the ex-wife didn't even question why the FBI wanted to talk to her. She knew from the moment she saw them that her ex was the Apex killer and she handed over a letter he sent which gave the feds a sample of Robert's DNA. It was a match to the murders and so they had definitive proof. Robert was their guy and he wasn't at any of the properties when they went to look for him, but his Apple Pie account was synced with all his computers and so they knew he had grabbed another girl. She didn't reveal her real name and they actually ended up calling her by her screen name. They referred to her shygirl1990 and they wanted to find her before she was killed while the Mayor's office cared about the optics.

The Mayor didn't want the FBI breaking down doors to a billionaire and so he has his people convince Dana to knock first. It wasn't something anyone on her team liked, but they followed through when they found Robert's art studio. Maggie knocked first and identified herself. She received no answer and so Dana gave the order to kick down the door. Maggie and OA got into the studio and they found Robert with his hands around his latest victim. He threatened to kill her if the feds took another step and so they had been forced to shoot him. It allowed them to get to the victim in time and she was going to pull through. They then called an ambulance for Robert and odds are he was going to face a life sentence for all ten murders.

But after everything, the Mayor wanted to do a press call with Dana and she turned him down because she had enough of him to last a lifetime.

Maggie and Perkins find Karim on a bus. Meanwhile, OA is asked by El-Masri where he is from. El-Masri asks him why he dislikes him. OA tells him he doesn't like what he has done with the secret police. Innocent people have been detained. El-Masri tells him it is not all black and white.

Maggie and Perkins question Karim. It leads them to a man named Zev who Jubal knows as a professional assassin. Jubal gets to update the team on Zev, who called Karim with the plate number. Zev is going to keep trying to kill El-Masri. Kristen tracks down someone who knows Zev, a Barry Foster.

Maggie and Perkins arrive to pick-up Barry. They find him dead. Meanwhile, Dana thinks Zev may have manipulated this situation with the hospitals to get to El-Masri.

OA speaks with El-Masri who admits he knows Zev. He once hired him to take out a known rapist. Maggie calls OA, Barry was a worker at the hospital where they are now.

Jubal calls OA to warn him that Zev is in the hospital. They catch a glimpse of him moments later. He takes off fast, dodging them all. Kristen finds a connection between Zev and a White Plains storefront being rented. Maggie and Perkins head there. They find plans for a bomb. He must have put one in the hospital.

OA gets Zev in the hospital who was hiding out after getting hurt. They learn the bomb is on a timer. Zev asks him where it is but Zev isn't talking. OA squeezes his wounds. Maggie walks in. She knows where it is according to the hospital engineer. They find it and call in a bomb tech. They watch terrified as she works on disconnecting the bomb. The timer is still going after she clips the yellow wire. They watch in anticipation.

OA tries to explain to Maggie about what she saw with Zen. She tells him not to worry. OA gets the news that El-Masri has died. His body rejected the heart.

Maggie meets with an attorney for a dinner date. They talk. He tells her how thankful he is to have her husband's heart. She talks about how happy she is now.

After some digging, they find a video of Angela's ex following her in the street. They also find a call between the hitman and the boyfriend.

Change of plans, it looks like she is headed to the marina. She is going to take a boat. OA and Maggie catch up with her on the street. They follow her. She gets out at the boatyard and runs. Maggie follows with a body cam. She finally gets her and confronts her. She admits to killing Jason. She urges Maggie to shoot her, but Maggie doesn't. She knocks her out and OA cuffs her.

Back at the office, Dana, Jubal, and the team applaud her and Jason for helping to take down the cartel leader. Dana gets emotional. Jubal notices. He asks her later about it. She tells her she put in her resignation. She let her feelings allow Maggie to make that arrest and so it is time for her to be done. Jubal is shocked but supportive.

Production Code: FBI202
Summary: After the son of a prominent blogger is kidnapped, the team must sweep through her two million followers to find the culprit; Kristen continues to adjust to life as a field agent with her new partner Stuart Scola.

Eli Harper was abducted from his home. He was six years old and he was a known face because his mother was some kind of blogger. Stacy Harper wrote lifestyle articles. She also did television appearances and she usually talked about her family. Like her young son. Eli would even receive gifts from people and one recent gift had crept out the Harpers. The gift was a dinosaur picture book. The book itself wasn't offensive, but it came with a message about how this stranger will always love Eli and his parents were concerned.

They thought it was from an overzealous fan. They ended up throwing away the book because it was so odd and they didn't think anything of it until Eli went missing. He was last seen when his mother put him to bed, but he was gone by morning and his favorite toy was also gone. His dinosaur Hector was all over Stacy's blog. She wrote about how her son loved to eat her food and that he would feed the food to his dinosaur. It was a part of their routine. Stacy thought it was cute and so did the audience.

Stacy made a lot of money from her blog. She was richer than the agents working the kidnapping and Bell was especially a fan. The FBI agent would watch Stacy's videos to help her feel better. Bell credits the videos in helping her adjust to her husband's death and so Bell stayed close to the family. She was their liaison while Zidan was following leads. They had gotten a fingerprint from a window in Eli's room, but it wasn't on file and it was hard to follow that as well as deal with the sex offender across the street.

Todd Crebins is a registered sex offender. He was supposed to disclose when he moved into the neighborhood and he never did. He kept the fact that he was found guilty of molesting a young boy to himself, but he hasn't changed his ways. Zidan searched the man's home and he found a telescope pointed at Eli's room. It turns out Todd likes to watch him. He also likes to collect things that Eli may have left behind and therefore he had Hector. He said he found the dinosaur lying in the street. He picked him up because he wanted a piece of Eli and so no matter what — Todd was going to remain a suspect.

Then there was that mystery call. Someone called the Harpers' home and he left a message about how Eli was fine. It wasn't a ransom call and it didn't seem like the person was gloating, but the FBI couldn't rule out that it wasn't a hoax. There were plenty of people that didn't like Stacy. They started flooding her website when they found out about Eli and they told her that they wished her son was dead. It was Stacy's fear that one of these trolls might have taken her son. She was worried that this kidnapper could have taken her son to get back at her so Bell had to be the one to calm her down.

Stacey's husband Drew, however, was in trouble. He lied to the FBI about his whereabouts. He said he got home late last night and that he grabbed the paper at five that morning. Only the FBI learned that he stayed all night in the city and that he didn't get home until five. He must have slipped in when Stacy was asleep and so the agents questioned why he would lie about that. Drew soon claimed that he accidentally fell asleep. He said that he was working all night and that he took a nap that turned into something longer.

Drew admitted he lied about his whereabouts because he didn't want to hurt his wife. He didn't want her to know that he was miles away when their son was being kidnapped and at first Zidan was willing to believe his story, but then they found evidence against him. The mystery call was traced back to a cell phone that Drew purchased three years ago. The FBI believed he must have handed that phone over to an accomplice and they questioned him about it. Drew, on the other hand, said he throws old phones into a junk drawer.

Drew said that the kidnapper could have grabbed his phone when he took Eli. Which pans out because there was plenty of footage on Stacy's blog and there were even videos of her showing off her husband's junk drawer online. Anyone of her viewers could have gotten everything they needed to pull off this kidnapping. They just had to watch her videos and so that's what the FBI targeted. They looked for men matching their profile that would visit the site every day and then they looked for the one guy that suddenly stopped.

The kidnapper wouldn't be interested in videos of Eli if he had the real thing. The FBI used the website traffic to narrow down their list of suspects and surprisingly they also received help from Todd. Todd believes he loves Eli. He doesn't want anyone to hurt him so he told the FBI how they could catch this kidnapper. And his tips helped. The FBI found Wayne Rydell and, unfortunately, they didn't find Eli. The boy was still missing, but Rydell was found with a go-bag and he did have a layout of Eli's house with him.

Rydell was practically the perfect suspect. The FBI just didn't have enough evidence to back it up and they couldn't talk to Rydell because he demanded his lawyer. But Bell and Zidan applied some pressure. They talked (in front of the suspect) about how pedophiles were usually killed behind bars and they broke through Rydell's resolve. They got him to talk to them without his lawyer. He claimed that he saw a black car on the night Eli went missing and that was the second time they heard about this mysterious black car.

Drew said he saw one and Todd might have seen one as well. The FBI didn't know what it meant, but they followed the lead and it leads to a black car listed under Lisa Defasio's name. No one knew who she was and yet they got the pretty idea when they found Stacy's hidden photos. Stacy had apparently faked her pregnancy with Eli. She was never pregnant and there were photos in bikinis when she was supposed to be nine months along. So, the FBI had to question Stacy again. They needed the truth about her son and the truth was Stacy needed a surrogate.

Stacy tried to get pregnant naturally. It just never worked out and to make things worse she also suffered several miscarriages. By then, Stacy was desperate for a baby. She turned to a surrogate for help and Lisa had seemed like a lovely girl. She said she was being surrogate to pay for college. Lisa hadn't contacted the Harpers since Eli was born and that's why they didn't think of her when he was kidnapped. They didn't know that Lisa was snap. She started a blog when her mom got sick and she wrote about dropping out of college when things got bad. And it seems she tried to become Stacy.

Lisa desperately wanted Stacy's life. She wanted the attention and the perfect family, but Lisa never got that. She was left alone when her mother died and she got to watch her biological child live this perfect. Lisa had kidnapped Eli because she thought he would make it better and he couldn't. Eli couldn't fill the hole she had left. And now he never will.

The FBI found Lisa and they rescued Eli.

Eli was returned to the family and the Harpers thanked Bell for all that she did for them.

They still remained the perfect family for Bell and it made her realize that she needed to put herself back out there.

And that Bell couldn't mourn her husband forever.

Production Code: FBI203
Summary: After a female presidential candidate, Valerie Caldwell, is targeted with a car bomb, OA and Maggie must find them before they strike again; the case leads them to wonder if she is being targeted for her political aspirations.

NY Congresswoman Valerie Caldwell was almost killed. The Presidential candidate was on her way home when she remembered she forgot her purse and turned back from her car. It was around this point that car bomb went off. It was an open secret that Caldwell drove herself around town and so the bomb was clearly meant for. She however was lucky. A member of her team was not. Alex Peters died instantly. Caldwell hadn't taken the news well when she was told about it and if anything its made her want to disregard hospital rules.

Caldwell wanted to leave the hospital. She said that she couldn't waste her campaign by sitting around and that if Peters had to die then it should be for something meaningful. Like her becoming the next President of the United States. Caldwell was only convinced to stay at the hospital by the FBI and that's because they said it wasn't the safest place for her. With her safety guaranteed, the FBI could do their job a little easier. They didn't have to worry about her and they focus on her numerous enemies.

One such character had posted a meme of Caldwell exploding. The FBI connected the meme to an anti-Caldwell account and they thought the account led back to a Ted Harris. It actually led back to Sasha Harris. Harris was an angry young woman and she considered Caldwell to be the devil. She said that Caldwell sent her brother to prison for a crime he didn't commit. She also claims that Caldwell created evidence to back up her story and that she gave her brother maximum sentence because he was a black man.

Sasha has means and opportunity. She took a catering job at the fundraiser that night and was seen fleeing the car park after the explosion, but Sasha claims that she was only there because she wanted to confront Caldwell. She said that she was going to record Caldwell admitting to how she puts innocent black men in prison. She thought if she confronted the other woman that Caldwell would reveal she was evil and that the whole world would find out this "truth". Sasha was clearly deluded. Maggie and OA checked her brother's case and it was pretty clear her brother did it. There were three witnesses and DNA. He wasn't someone innocent guy that Sasha believed he was.

The guy wasn't even upset about Caldwell. Wayne Simmons has said he's moved on and that he was just living his life. It was his sister that was obsessed. She couldn't stand that Caldwell might become President and so she's been waging a war over the internet. Only it wasn't enough to arrest her for murder or attempted murder. Harris didn't know anything about making bombs and the signature of the bomb that was used was traced back to a man in prison. It turns out the prisoner sells his skills to people in the prison and he would have said more, except his lawyer suddenly showed up out of nowhere.

The lawyer also refused to let Daniel Harley talk to the agents. Len Barker claimed his client had nothing else to say and so the FBI had to use other means. They tried tracking who had contact with Daniel. The list was just too long to go through and so they were really back at square one. They looked into possible enemies of Caldwell. They ended up finding footage of the street that night and it showed a mysterious car that had been stalking Caldwell. The driver just so happens to be Chinese Military and so the Chinese were spying on a Presidential candidate.

They were willing to admit as much. They also said they had nothing to do with the bomb and that they were following her because they were trying to find dirt on her. The only thing they could find was Wayne Simmons. Caldwell had been talking about him and she thought he could destroy her campaign. The agents didn't know why because they had talked to Simmons. Simmons seemed like he was adjusting to life on the outside and there was no evidence showing he threatened Caldwell in any way.

The one thing that stood out was the check. A shell company wrote a check for fifty thousand dollars and Simmons cashed it. Simmons was also seen talking to Len Barker. Maggie and OA had questioned Simmons about it and he said that Len was crazy. The guy approached him out nowhere because he said that he wanted to reveal to the world how evil Caldwell is. Simmons said he ignored Len when Len tried to bring him on some scheme. Simmons also wouldn't talk about the money and he quickly lawyered up when pushed.

So, that only left Len. Len used to work with Caldwell at the District Attorney's office and then she fired him. She hasn't seen in almost a decade since that happened. She said she had to let him go because he was acting erratic and wasn't reliable. Caldwell also suspected drugs at the time. She couldn't prove it and so that wasn't why he was fired. He was just fired on conduct unbecoming. Len seems to have hold a grudge since then and so the agents talked to his colleagues. They found out from Len's friends that Caldwell got rid of him because he found evidence she was corrupt.

Len said that there was proof Simmons was innocent. He came out after the trial and he brought it to Caldwell, but she destroyed it. She didn't care that she sent an innocent kid to prison. She just didn't want it to interfere with her own record. Caldwell was evil as it turns out. She sent innocent men to prison because she wanted to be known as being tough on crime and so Len tried to stop such a woman from becoming president.

Len was later arrested at another fundraiser where he again tried to stop Caldwell, but the FBI got to him in time and they stopped him from carrying out anything else.

Only Maggie did provide the evidence from the whole case, including Caldwell's misrepresentation of herself, to the District Attorney. So maybe there was a way to stop her after all.

Production Code: FBI204
Summary: After a shooting at a nightclub, it appears that the FBI may have ignored previous threats from a local white supremacist group; Kristen wrestles with her commitment to the bureau and her responsibility to her community.

A gunman opened fire at a nightclub. He killed one and injured three others. He also ran off after he was confronted by a bystander and so Caleb Jackson saved a lot of lives. It was just unfortunate that he had to die to do so. But the FBI was called in to investigate this tragedy. They thought it was a mass shooting that was stopped in its tracks and they were surprised when some of the witnesses began to point to something else. Something more sinister. The witnesses were remembering an incident a while ago in which a white supremacist group had threatened the largely black clubgoers and even Caleb's family now has questions about whether or not their tragedy could have been prevented.

Everyone wanted to know if the FBI missed something. Did they ignore the incident with the white supremacist group or worse did they dismiss the possible threat this group poses? The FBI Agents on the scene of this shooting had later checked their files on the earlier incident and it seems they were in fact negligent. None of the agents had followed up on the group or the car they used to threaten the clubgoers. The agents at the time had also stated that this incident was a nonissue. They all ignored the First Order. The First Order was what the white supremacist group called themselves and they seemingly left a calling card at Caleb's memorial in front of the club.

It was this calling card that got the FBI to realize their mistake. They suspected someone from the First Order had hit that club and they checked to see if this was an organized situation. They talked to the leader of the First Order, but he denies all knowledge of what one of his members may or may not have done and so the agents checked their other sources. They reached out to their undercover agents who have insider knowledge. It was through them that they learn the name of the man that left behind the calling card. His name was Ivan Childress and of course, he came from a broken home.

Ivan's parents went through a very bitter divorce. It left him jaded and isolated. Thereby making him perfect for recruitment and so the agents went to pick him up. He initially gave them a run for it, but he soon turned himself over to them and he even confessed to the shooting. He said he did it. He also wasn't that believable. Ivan claimed he did it alone and that he had to because he was frustrated with his group. All the group ever did was talk about killing the blacks, the Jews, and the Hispanics. And Ivan said that he had to do more because it was the only way to take his country back.

Ivan so desperately wanted to be believed that it set off some alarms with Agent Bell. She found her interview with him to be odd and she told her superiors that he didn't sound like a killer. He sounded like someone that was just repeating a story. Ivan also made it clear that he wanted to impress his racist buddies and so Bell suspected that's why he was taking the rap for something he didn't do. She convinced her bosses that they still needed to investigate the case. She then went digging through dumpsters looking for evidence to prove he was innocent and that had upset some people.

Agent Chazal had talked to a friend about it. He wanted to make a complaint because he believed that if the shooter had been black and was suspected of shooting up an alt-right party that no one would have been dying to prove he was innocent. Which he was right about. The FBI wouldn't have been looking for answers long after a confession if the shooter had been black and Chazal was asked to go on the record about it. She said she didn't want to betray her team, but she was given the opportunity to change her mind at a later date and in the meantime, she tried talking to her team. She even tried to persuade Bell to just accept the confession. She said she found fake IDs and she believed it meant he was preparing to run if anything went wrong.

So, Chazal didn't get why Bell was being so stubborn about Ivan. Bell and Zidan tried to follow Ivan's last movements and instead they found the real killer. They found a guy matching the witnesses' description who also ran up a bar tab at Club Nero. The club was handing out pink wristbands and that's what the killer was wearing when he shot Caleb. Meaning Ivan wasn't their shooter. Bell was right when she said his confession sounded false because he didn't commit the crime and the most he did was just hear about it from the real killer. And it wasn't long before they got the real killer's name.

His name was Jim Housely Dietz. He was recently fired after making racist comments at work and he had claimed at the time that it was because he just broke up with his girlfriend. His ex-girlfriend Patrice was black and she ghosted him when they broke up. She told her friends that he was freakishly possessive. She couldn't take it anymore and she broke up with him by pretending he was dead. She erased him from her phone, ignored his text messages, and didn't try to reach out to him in any whatsoever. Patrice had wanted to move on. Her ex-boyfriend, however, had tried to get her back and when that didn't work he turned violent.

Jim went to the nightclub wanting to kill Patrice. She was a club promoter and he thought she would be at Club Nero first and that's why he went there. It was when she didn't show up that he realized she was at another club. He then went there and he tried to kill her, but Caleb got in the way and so the feds thought Jim would try again. They had to find Patrice and unfortunately, she left town. She went to her parents' place to getaway. Bell and Zidan followed there and they came across Jim who had also followed her.

Jim opened fire on the agents and they were forced to return it. Zidan killed Jim and that was the end to the case. Just not the end to the questions. There were still some within the organization that wanted to know why the First Order wasn't investigated after they made threats and so everyone was being questioned about their unconscious bias.

And Chazal agreed to not turn on her team after talking to Bell personally.

Production Code: FBI206
Summary: After a Wall Street investor is murdered, the team is led to an insider-trading ring that uses unconventional methods to gain information; OA struggles to maintain confidence in his budding relationship with Mona.

A jogger found a dead body on her usual run. She had called it in to the police and the police later alerted the FBI because of where the victim died. The victim died on federal land. Federal land means federal agents and so Maggie and OA when to go check it out. They arrived on the scene knowing they first had to check in with the detective working the case. The detective had been there first and so he knew more than the agents. He knew for example that the victim died from an odd wound. It was suspected that the victim was killed by a hammer.

The victim's name was Brad Hughes. His last call has been to his girlfriend and she was heartbroken to find out what happened to him, but she quickly threw the suspicion on the ex. Brad was technically still married. He and his ex-wife were going through a bitter divorce and it was getting uglier by the day. His ex-wife wanted a hundred thousand a month in child support. She was fighting for the money when Brad died and now she inherits everything. Maggie and OA later spoke with the wife.

Lydia had apparently cheated on her husband with a construction worker. The guys she cheated on him with were Cam Buckley and Cam had a record. He had a DUI as well as an aggravated assault on his record. The man was known for his short fuse and so he became the prime suspect. The agents had also found out Lydia had an alibi for the night in question and Lydia said that Cam stayed home by himself. Cam actually arrived at the house while they were questioning Lydia and he fled the scene when he saw the federal agents.

Luckily, they caught up with him in the end. Cam was arrested and he was questioned about the whole fleeing thing. He said that he knew he was suspect. He didn't want to be stitched up for what he didn't do and that's why he tried to run. Cam also said that he had an alibi. He was hooking up with his ex-girlfriend that night because he said he wanted to be around his own people for once and didn't want to put up with Lydia's pretentious lifestyle. And so Cam was soon ruled out as a suspect and the agents were back at square one.

They didn't know who killed Brad. They went through his personal files and saw that this Wall Street guy had reached out to federal investigators. It seems he suspected someone of insider trading. Brad had called the investigator and he said he had information. He had also wanted to set up an appointment with the guy, but he was killed before that could happen. Kristen and her partner followed this thread. They found out someone working with Brad had received a rare chance to make millions and so they grilled him until they got answers.

They found out he received a tip from a mysterious woman. She told the wall street guy how he could make money fast and he fell for it because his greed blinded him to common sense. He technically broke the law as he was getting money and so Brad could have been trying to take him down. Only there was another suspect in the picture. Brad had had a virus on his computer. It turns out the virus was monitoring him as well as his transaction. Brad eventually found out about it. He then worked on removing the virus. He seems to have removed it recently and so the agents investigated who planted the virus in the first place.

The agents were able to trace the origins of this virus. They found out when it was placed on the computer and worked from there. It seems to have happened when Brad went out to dinner. Maggie and OA checked out a restaurant. He had gone there with his laptop and when he stepped away to take a call — his girlfriend Elena had planted the virus. She had fooled the agents earlier with her grieving girlfriend act and now they know she had been up to something sinister. Elena Bondar arrived at the states a year ago on a visa and she quickly attached herself to Brad.

The agents now knew it wasn't because of his personality. They soon assigned Elena as their chief suspect and they did their best to track her down. Unfortunately, Elena pulled a disappearing act. They couldn't find her and so they went through her last movements before she disappeared. It was while they were doing this that they learned that she contacted an investment banker. The investment banker was actually another one of her boyfriends. The agents warned the guy to check his files and they scared him into thinking rationally,

The guy knew he couldn't protect Elena anymore. He told them that she went to the Hamptons and they later found Elena because of it and the first thing Elena told them was that she was innocent. She said that she had been threatened into sleeping with these investment bankers. She was beaten and raped into submission by the modeling agency that gave her a visa. Then when they had her under their control, they told her to start sleeping with men with money. It was her job to spy on them. She was supposed to pass on any tips she received to her handler. Her handler was someone known as Jane.

Elena didn't know Jane's last name. She was just as afraid of her as she was of the men and so she never questioned her handler or the part she was forced to play. It was fine at first. It didn't become a problem until Brad found out about that virus. Brad had confronted her when he found out what she did. Brad was even going to turn Elena over to the police. It hadn't mattered to him why she was spying on him. Brad was simply going to turn her over to the authorities no matter what she said or did and so Elena panicked. She called Jane because she thought Jane could fix it all.

The next thing Elena hears is that Brad is dead. She thinks Jane played a part in it and so she told Maggie and OA everything she knew about Jane. They used what she told them and were even able to track down Jane, but she had been murdered before they got there. It seems the human traffickers were cleaning the house. They didn't want Jane informing on them so they killed her. They would have probably killed Elena as well only they didn't know where she was. She was taken into federal custody and was safe from them.

The rest of the women weren't. Elena wasn't the only woman smuggled out of Albania for this investment scheme and so the agents tried to track down the criminals behind it. They used the description of tattoos to identify one man possibly involved in the scheme and they were also working off a tip OA received. So, they sent Elena in as bait. They had her approach this man and say that she couldn't get into contact with Jane. They then watched as the criminal panicked. He grabbed Elena and was going to drag her out of the bar when the FBI confronted him.

Maggie was forced to shoot the suspect, but they found things back at his apartment and it led them freeing the other women that were being held captive. And so everything should have been alright, except OA received some help on the Albanian criminal search.

He got some details from his girlfriend who happens to be a federal prosecutor and now he was going to get in trouble for sharing information.

Production Code: FBI207
Summary: When a board member of a soon-to-be-public medical tech company is murdered, the team tries to find out who had the most to gain from his death. Also, OA is conflicted when the pressure to help a family member is at odds with his commitment, to tell the truth.

The agents were dealing with a special. The victim was what made it special because he was Robert Cabot and he was an Ex-Surgeon General under Obama for six years. Since then, Cabot became the President of Armstrong University. He was in fact killed on campus and found by the campus police. Someone had even heard the gunshots. The woman was a server at a campus dinner and she called the police the moment she heard the gunshots. She just didn't see anything because she was too busy running away.

It was perfectly understandable. People do tend to run from gunfire and it was only people like FBI Special Agents Maggie and OA that do the opposite. They along with their fellow agents investigated who would want to hurt Cabot. Cabot was well-respected and he didn't seem like he had enemies though his wife did say that someone had been banging on their door recently. She also admitted that she caught this person on camera. She handed over the footage to the FBI and they used facial recognition to identify him as Luke Wagner.

He was a former freshman at Armstrong University. He was kicked out over an honor code violation and for some reason it had been Cabot that handled this one personally. No one in the FBI could figure that part out. They wanted to talk to Luke so they visited his former roommate and they learned that Luke really shouldn't be handling a gun. He has a personality disorder. He was mentally ill and he could even have been off his medication if he killed Cabot. And so OA and Maggie went to Luke's home.

They found Luke frantic as well as holding a gun. Luke was threatening to harm himself and his father was trying to talk him out of it. Only Luke kept talking about his expulsion. He refused to get over it and so his father decided to come clean. Luke was kicked out of college because his father had bribed the swim coach into enlisting Luke as a recruit. Luke freaked once he realized why he had been kicked out and he tried to kill himself. Luckily, the gun didn't go off. Luke was stopped by the agents and they later brought him in for questioning.

Luke was eventually asked about Cabot. OA asked Luke if he tried to contact Cabot and he told him that the evidence showing that Luke showed up at Cabot's home. Meaning Luke couldn't afford to lie. Luke had to tell him about the many times he stalked Cabot and he had to tell him about the night Cabot was killed. Luke later confessed that he was there. He said he wanted to talk to Cabot and that he didn't have his father's gun at the time. He had been harmless when he went to go see Cabot. And he heard gunshots when it happened.

Luke said he ran away. He did what everyone else did and so Luke was ruled out as a suspect. He couldn't have killed Cabot. It must have been one of Cabot's other enemies that did it. Cabot happened to be involved with illegal gambling. He was in debt to a man named Jack Shelby and Shelby threatened to harm him if he wasn't paid. Shelby was soon found at an illegal poker game. There was coke found on him and so he was willing to speak to the agents. He told them that Cabot had had a friend pay off the debt.

He released camera footage to the FBI. The FBI then turned to their great friend known as facial recognition and identified the bag man as Ravi Sharma. Sharma was a billionaire. He didn't have to lower himself to be anyone's bag man and so Sharma must have done it for Cabot because Cabot was important to him. The agents did some digging and they learned Cabot was in business with Sharma. They were working on an IPO when things went south between them. Cabot didn't think IPO was ready and he threatened to stall the project.

It would have cost Sharma more than a billion dollars. Therefore, he had plenty of motive to kill Cabot and the agents brought that up when they interviewed him. Sharma had dared to tell them that the money didn't matter. He said he could handle the loss just fine and so he wasn't worried about Cabot's actions. Sharma also added that he had an alibi. He was with his bodyguard who was former NYPD and so that should be enough for the FBI. Sharma may have left the fundraiser early that night only he wasn't alone in doing so.

There was another member of this IPO. The IPO was about a medical revolution and Cabot was an advisor on the project. It was Corinne however that ran the show. She invented the device and she thought Cabot was overly cautious. She later told the FBI that it made him a great Surgeon General and horrible in the private sector. Corinne didn't think Cabot had any business working on the project. She was also at the fundraiser the night Cabot was shot and she made sure to leave before the cops showed.

The FBI spoke to her once at her office. They also went to her apartment to talk to her again and that's when both Kristen and Stuart heard gunshots. They ran up to the apartment, secured the scene, and found a bleeding Corinne. Corinne was rushed to the hospital. Her wounds were superficial and if she hadn't passed out when she did — the killer wouldn't have thought she was dead. It was that thinking that saved her life. Corinne was recovering now and the agents on the case were trying to put the pieces together.

They learned from ballistics that the bullet found in Corinne was a match for the ones that killed Cabot. They also realized the only connection between Corinne and Cabot was this IPO business. The company that they wanted to release was called Cemera. It would redefine cancer screenings and so Corinne still wanted to go through with the IPO. She said she wanted to help save lives yet she was so scared to save her own. Corinne claimed not to have seen her shooter. She also didn't want to answer questions without her lawyer present and so there went her cooperation.

The agents figured out that Corinne was hiding something. They knew it must have involved her company and so they searched for someone who would have information. It was what led them to an assistant that was fired recently. The guy said he was fired because he pushed back on the lies Corinne was telling and didn't like what she was doing. The agents then learned that this cancer screening was false. It wasn't working properly and people were receiving a clean bill of health when they were still sick with cancer.

One guy even stood out. Tommy Ward could have treated his lung cancer in time if Cemera hadn't given him a false positive and so now his cancer was at Stage 4. He was going to die. He just didn't want to do it before he got revenge. He hated Cabot because Cabot promised to take care of him. Cabot was even the one that put him in the trial in the first place and Ward hated Corinne for the lies she told him. Ward also wanted revenge against Cembra. His wife said he had his gun with him and so he was going to shoot up the company.

OA and Maggie had thankfully found him first. They found him before he could enter the building and he took a hostage to derail the inevitable. The agents talked to Ward. They told him that they understood why he did what he did and that Cabot was trying to stop the company after he saw what they did to Ward. Now, Ward didn't know that when he went on his rampage. He felt genuinely sorry when the agents told him what happened and he released his hostage. Ward had the chance to give himself up and at the last moment, he couldn't take what the agents were offering.

Ward didn't want to die in prison. He said his peace and then he walked in front of an oncoming truck. Ward was killed instantly, but his death exposed the truth about Cembra and it gave the FBI the chance to arrest Corinne for fraud.

And meanwhile, OA dealt with a family issue.

Summary: A teacher goes missing and the team investigates everyone who might have had a grudge against him.

A teacher named Patrick gets into a fight with his student. He physically assaults him before telling him to get out of his classroom. On the teacher's way home he is attacked by a man in a hoodie with a bat. Before he is attacked, he calls his girlfriend and tells her to call the police.

The next day OA and Maggie visit the girlfriend who is hysterical. Back at headquarters, one of Jubal's analysts tracks Patrick's phone to Coney Island.

They head there and find his car with blood everywhere but nobody. The student who got into an altercation with Patrick the day before is brought into headquarters. OA and Maggie interview him. He tells them about his argument with Patrick but also references one the other day that Patrick was in with another gentleman. They find video footage of the incident. They discover the man in the video fighting with Patrick is also associated with Patrick's girlfriend. It is her soon to be ex-husband, Max.

Scola and Kristen had to meet Max who pulls a gun on them initially. They cuff him and question him. Max tells them that he began following Patrick. That is when he learned that Patrick was dating a student. He confronted Patrick, telling him to stay away from his soon to be ex. Patrick offered him money so that he would not tell anyone.

Back at headquarters, Jubal and the team find street footage of Patrick and the student. Now they need to ID the girl. OA and Maggie head to the school to talk to the principal. They figure out the girl's name and head to her house. She confesses that Patrick was helping her get out a gang life. She tells them that she knows where Patrick's body is. When they find his body with the FBI dogs, the girl begins to cry. If the gang knew that she wanted out she'd be dead on the ground next to him.

Back at headquarters, OA and Maggie talk to the young girl Jessica. She details how she has wanted out of the gang life forever but her entire family is part of the DT 15 gang. She confesses to several past crimes she was forced to commit, like slitting a man's throat. Outside of the meeting, OA and Maggie get into a bit of a debate. Maggie feels for her while OA doesn't exactly have a ton of sympathy.

They wire Jessica up and have her head in to meet members of the gang at an arcade. When she first sees the guy's things aren't going too well but after a few jokes, it appears that nothing is wrong and they are not suspicious. Gomez, one of the members, tells her to bring her best friend Kayla to a party tonight. She agrees and heads back to the FBI van parked down the road. Inside she begins to cry, bringing Kayla to party is code for killing. If she doesn't bring her friend they will kill her.

Back at the precinct, Maggie and OA tell the team about Jessica's predicament. Scola and Kristen go to Kayla's house. She isn't there and her mother doesn't know where she is but they manage to find a throwaway phone she bought that day. They send the IMEI number to Jubal to track her down.

Jessica arrives to meet the guys while the team hangs out nearby. They tell her that they want her to kill Kayla with a machete. They hand it to her. She asks where Kayla is. They bring her in, they've had her all along. The team rushes in. Before they break down the door and Jessica is about to swing the knife, the gang starts to laugh. They are just testing her loyalties. After they talk for a while and Gomez and the guys admit to killing Patrick the team officially rushes in and drags them all out in cuffs. Jessica is arrested two for show. Part of the FBI team brings her back to her house to get her things but by the time Maggie gets there another authority is there to pick up Jessica and take her away. Maggie can't stop them.

Hours later, Maggie and her superior meet with the man responsible for taking Jessica away. He is deporting her as a violent immigrant and he is not stepping down.

Maggie goes to court to speak on Jessica's behalf. She becomes very emotional and asks the judge to approach the bench. She begs for Jessica to stay in the US and to remain safe otherwise they will kill her in Mexico.

The judge still rules to have Jessica removed and sent back to Mexico. Jessica leaves in cuffs crying but still thanks, Maggie.

Summary: A former kidnapping victim is linked to a series of murders that includes the daughter of an NYPD detective. Also, Kristen begins to doubt her ability as an agent after a training exercise leaves her shaken, on FBI.

The victim's name is Hannah Bloom. She was twenty-five years old when she was strangled and dumped in the Hudson River. It doesn't appear that she was raped or tortured, but she was drugged with the date rape drug and so that's how her killer must have subdued her. Hannah was also a social worker. She didn't seem to have problems with anyone on the job and so the FBI believed she could have been targeted because of her father. Her father was Detective Harry Bloom in Sex Crimes. He's made plenty of enemies over the years and the team had to consider the possibility of being a vendetta against her father.

There was a man that loitered around her apartment building. He asked out Hannah several times and in truth, he creeped her out. Hannah had never identified this man, but there was security footage from her apartment building and the agents showed the image of this man to her father. Detective Bloom knew who he was right away. He said the man was Lyle Manning and that he had been investigating him for violent rapes some months ago. Lyle had skated charges back then only he doesn't seem like he ever forgot the detective's part. He found out the man had a daughter and then creepily stalked her for weeks.

Maggie and OA brought him for questioning. They grilled him on what he was really doing by hanging out around Hannah's apartment building and he said he was just being friendly. He was a creep alright, but there was no evidence he killed Hannah and what the FBI later found proved he was innocent. The team had run a search on the killer's M.O and it came back with four other hits. Their killer has been targeting women in their late twenties to early thirties for a while now. He drugs them, ties them up, and later kills them with those same ties. The team quickly realized they were on the hunt for a serial killer and so they changed tactics.

They brought in a profiler. Sloan Wallace was one of the best in the game and she told them that their killer has a fast turnover. He was probably stalking his next victim as they were looking for him. Their killer was also smart because he realized that dumping these women over various jurisdictions meant no one was connecting them before now and so the team had to find his pattern. They took a look at all the victims and they saw that he was working his way down the Hunsdon River. He was firmly in the city now and so they were going to catch him they had to study his mistakes.

The killer might have perfected things by the time he got to Hannah, but his first victim must have come with mistakes. Maggie and OA went up to Albany where they talked to people that knew Jenny Lewis and they found out she abruptly ended a relationship. She had met someone in rehab and they had to end it because the program demanded that they be single for a year. So Maggie and OA found out who this mystery man was. His name was Andrew Cameron and he was known to the FBI because he was a famous kidnap victim. He was kidnaped by a pedophile when he was a kid and was abused for years before he escaped. Type a message here

Since then, Andrew has spent several years in and out of rehab. He met Jenny and they got too close too fast. Andrew must have hated it when she ended things. He sent her letters begging for her to take him back and, when she didn't reply, he decided to kill her. Abused kids often turn into abusers as a way of getting back a sense of control. Adam was in the same city in each location a woman was murdered and so he was their best suspect. But Andrew's case was known everywhere. People are quite protective of him for all that he's been through and his mother for one was frantic. She was afraid of losing her son again and she didn't realize that all of Andrew's supposed victims had matched her description.

The victims were all gingers. They shared the same facial features and they all looked like his mother. Wallace probably had a field day with his profile. She gave her profile to Maggie and OA and the two agents interrogated Andrew. They asked him about the night Jenny died. He admitted to begging her to take him back and then said he didn't remember the rest. Andrew had been drinking. He's an alcoholic and so he doesn't exactly stop at one drink. He tends to drink until his blacks out. Andrew was also the nervous type and he had a panic attack while he was in custody. And so the agents got a doctor to check him out, then once he was he cleared, they later went back in and questioned why he was killing women that look like his mother.

They asked him if he was angry at his mother. They pretended to sympathize with him because his mother should have protected him and she failed at her job. She wasn't there to stop his abuser. Maggie and OA tried to get Andrew to confess to the murders, but he didn't, and he lawyered before they could get anything else out of him. The lawyer was making sure he was going to be talking anytime soon and that posed a problem for the agents. They later learned that another woman disappeared. This woman disappeared from a bar and he bartender remembers her. He said that she was dizzy and she only had one drink. He thought someone might have drugged her.

The bartender tried to help. Only she disappeared when he wasn't looking and so he had no idea where she went or if she's okay, but he did know her name. She had opened a tab she never closed and so the bartender knows her name is Grace Lennon. Grace Lennon has been missing for several hours. Her parents were out of town. They only lived in the city for six months out of the year and that meant their apartment was empty. The apartment was close to the bar so the agents checked it out and they found Grace. Grace had said she escaped the killer and she was hiding because she was scared.

Maggie and OA had shown Andrew's picture to Grace and she said he wasn't the guy. She had fought with the killer who tried to push her into a car and so she had seen his face. She also knew it wasn't Andrew. The agents went back to the drawing board and they found someone who matches Andrew's profile — his brother Jordan. Jordan was ignored when his mother focused all her energy on Andrew and so he hated his mother. He blames her for the lack of love he grew up with. He also must have blamed his brother as well because he snapped and killed a woman every time he checked up on his brother at a rehab.

If it hadn't been for Grace, Jordan would have gotten away with it. Jordan went on the run once he saw they had arrested his brother and so the agents just missed him by a few seconds. They didn't know where he ran off but they had Andrew and Andrew said his mom used to take them to the river to watch the boats when they were small. This was before he was kidnaped. It was one the few good memories they had of that time and Andrew was right that his brother would go back to the river. Local police spotted him and they chased him into a warehouse. The FBI was then called and they went in after Jordan.

They were doing their best to talk him down, but then Harry Bloom showed up. The detective was grieving his daughter and he wanted to know why his child. He created such a ruckus that Jordan snapped and the FBI was forced to kill him just to stop him.

But Kristen was caught in the crossfire and she was shot.

Summary: When a businessman with a history of harassment claims is killed, the team suspects that one of his accusers may be the killer.

FBI Special Agent Kristen Chazal took a bullet in the field. She was rushed to the hospital and she was still fighting for her life even as the rest of her team replaced her. They replaced with Special Agent Emily Ryder. Ryder didn't know she was stepping on anyone toes when she came in and naturally it led to her making some remarks she probably should have kept to herself. But the team still had to work with her. They needed her for this new case because it was handed to them by the NPD and the Police Commissioner didn't think his officers could handle someone so high profile.

The victim's name was Keith Gilroy. Gilroy was the CEO of Telsera which was a billionaire tech company and the real reason NYPD didn't want to handle his murder because there were just too many people that wanted him dead. Gilroy, as it happens, was a sexual predator. He pressured women into sexual relationships with him and then forced them to keep quiet about it by signing NDAs. The past year alone several women have spoken up against him. They kept talking and his face was everywhere around NYC.

Everyone knew who he was is. He was such a bad guy that it astonished new girl Ryder when she learned that he had gone out on a date with someone in the days before his death. He seems to have asked Ava Mercer several times before she said yes and afterward the two had such a great date he kept photos of her. Ava said the photos were from a photobooth. She took them as a joke and yet he was holding onto her photos when he died. Gilroy was killed in a drive-by. His killer came down the street on a stolen motorcycle and pumped him full of bullets.

The bike was stolen because they later ran into the real owner. He said he found his bike on an app and that he had just been left leaning against a tree. The agents then asked around to see if anyone saw someone leaving. They later found a witness that spotted the killer and the witness described the killer's attire. It was a woman. She was wearing red bottom boots. She was also still in the area because OA and Maggie ran into her. Their suspect tried to flee, but OA clipped her with a bullet and they eventually learned their killer goes wearing a bulletproof vest.

Their killer was identified as Sarah Baines. There was a record Baines leaving on the West Coast before she seemingly moved to the city and that was all. There was nothing else they could find about her in the system. Only they did check her belongings and they found several passports with her pictures and each had a different. Sarah wasn't her real name even if she did prefer to go by it with the FBI. She also refused to confirm or deny whether or not she was a hitwoman. She did say that hypothetically speaking she never would have met the killer if she was a contract killer and so she couldn't help them anyway.

Sarah had no idea who hired her. The agents were also dealing with the same dilemma as before because they still didn't know who hired Sarah and Gilroy had far too many enemies. All they knew was that whoever hired Sarah didn't know that Gilroy was dying. He had cancer you see. He didn't have long to live and that's why he was trying to repent for his previous sins. He had never married or had children and so he was giving most of his money away towards charity. Gilroy clearly felt some remorse for what he did to his victims.

Not that this helped the agents. They were looking for someone with a grudge and frankly any woman that came into contact with Gilroy might have had a motive, but then the client contacted Sarah. They had Sarah's cell phone. They pretended to be her in order to collect the money she was owed and that way they could find the killer. Maggie volunteered to be Sarah. She knew Sarah best and she felt she had something to prove since OA keeps protecting her in the field. Maggie went to the meeting as planned and she didn't meet the client.

She ended up meeting a middleman by the name of Ray Shoals. Ray got a text while he was with Maggie and he suddenly tried to flee the scene. The FBI pursued him and in this case, they were forced to kill him, but they later checked his cell phone. Ray had texted someone a photo of Maggie and the person, on the other hand, had identified her as FBI. Meaning she must have met the real client. The agents didn't know who they were hunting for and so they searched the evidence they had. And they had Ray.

They investigated his life and learned that he had been secretly spying on Gilroy. The client must have hired him to do it. Ray also had Ava's contact information with him and so the agents did a deep dive on her as well. They eventually came to learn that Ava was Gilroy's daughter. She was born nine months after he raped a woman at his company. He soon paid the woman off and she gave away the baby. The baby was then adopted. Ava had no clue who her biological parents were nor did she realize the man asking her to lunch was secretly her father.

Gilroy wanted the chance to know her. Gilroy wanted to find out if she was a good person and the moment he did he then tried to change his will. He was killed before he could sign this new will. So the only people that benefitted were the foundation. The same foundation he set up to fix all the damage he did and the same one that was being run by a former victim. Lorna Robbins gave up her reputation to work for Gilroy. She thought it would all be worth it once he left his entire fortune to the foundation and she had killed him when she found out he was going to lessen the amount.

Lorna wasn't going to let some newfound child take the money that rightfully belonged to the foundation. She even admitted as much when the agents came to arrest her and so they found their client, but the foundation was still going to get the money and Ava was left with nothing.

Luckily, Kristen came out of surgery just fine. She was on the mend and her friends got to visit her at the hospital.

Production Code: FBI212
Summary: A bank holdup leads the team to a safe deposit box, the contents of which have the potential to destroy national security; Kirsten is eager to get back into field work while other team members still have their concerns.

The First National Trust Bank was invaded. It doesn't seem like the bank robbers stole anything and so all they did was invade the bank rather than rob it. They didn't even hurt anyone. The invaders moved like they were military trained and they used those weapons to frighten people, but there was one of them that seemed to be the leader. He was the only one speaking English while the rest were speaking Russian. This guy also went into the area for the deposit boxes and he wasn't in there long before

The invaders had blacked out the cameras in the room. There was no way to prove they opened a box or stole something and so the FBI traced what they could. They found around that had a fingerprint on it. They then traced it back to Paul Chambers and Chambers had sold plenty of ammo. He usually let them paid using their credit cards and so his cameras picked up on the one guy that paid in cash. The man was later identified as Frank Ryan. Ryan a career criminal with a violent streak.

The agents called in SWAT to act as backup. They then moved on Ryan's place and got into a gunfight with him and his buddies. The good guys prevailed. They managed to arrest Ryan and his friends. They later told Ryan that he was in real trouble now that he attempted to murder federal agents. They had him over a barrel and they threatened to throw him into a black hole if he didn't start talking. Ryan told them that it was his crew at the bank and that he removed something from the safety deposit box.

Ryan confessed to doing it because he said that he was hired by an old friend. He said this friend's name is Adam and that he also acted as a lookout as Adam broke into a condo. He gave them the address to this condo and the agents went there. They soon found the place ransacked. They didn't find the owner anywhere and so they looked into the man who owned the condo. The owner's name is Dave Johnson. Johnson actually banked with First National Trust and so they searched his deposit box now that they had a name.

They then got their hands on his deposit box. They found fake passports and detailed accounts in the Caymans and so this Johnson fellow looked he was into some money laundering. Also, whatever was taken from the safety deposit box must have been more important than what was found. The agents were only going to find out the answers to that by talking to this Adam and so Kristen tracked him down. She found out Adam's full name is Adam Mizrah. He was former Mossad and he booked a flight to Tel-Aviv.

Maggie and OA later arrested him at the airport. They brought in and it turns out NSA wanted to sit in on the investigation. NSA was interested in Adam because he sold confidential information that saw several assets of their cruelly murdered. The NSA took an indictment on him and so the agents used that to get him to talk. They told him if he confessed to a bank robbery that he would be in the clear on the other charges. So, Adam talked. He told them that he was working for a hacker named "Sentinel".

Adam steals things for Sentinel. Sentinel also hired him to collect a flash drive that he had at the bank and so that's why Adam did all of this. He even added how it was Sentinel that saw those people die overseas. Sentinel was a hacker who stole from government and governmental agency all so that he could blackmail them for money. He would sell the information back to them and if they couldn't pay then he was going to sell it to someone else. Sentinel only cared about money. He wasn't doing this because of some higher calling and he made enemies everywhere with what he did.

Sentinel stops his enemies from coming after him because he said he had a dead man's switch. If he was ever arrested or killed, all the information he stole would be released for the world to see. He said he left this switch with his friend and the friend seems to be Johnson. Sentinel had needed to get the switch for some reason and so it was imperative that they find him before he used it. It seems he had also stolen from the FBI and so the higher-ups were nervous. They wanted Sentinel found and at first, he leads down the wrong path. He made them go look for the wrong man and thankfully the false flag had an airtight alibi.

They went back to searching for him and they found help from a hot dog vendor who remembered Sentinel. He apparently eats the hot dog and throws away the bun. The vendor thought it was weird and so he remembered Sentinel from when Sentinel came to pick up the flash drive. So, the vendor told them that the guy lived nearby. Kristen then traced Johnson's movements to the area and she found Sentinel. His real name is Kenneth Bates. He was hiding at his townhouse and not long after they arrested him — he was making threats. He said he knows about a bomb at the NYC Stock Exchange.

He said it was a plot from the North Koreans. He also told them that he knew exactly where the bomb is and that he would tell them if they allowed him to go board his private plane. Sentinel needed to leave town now that everyone knows his real identity. But he was being a jerk with this bomb story and so Jubal decided to mess with him. He let Sentinel believe that the timing for the bomb came and went and so the man eventually admitted that there was a bomb. And all it took was tricking him.

The FBI saved the day and they arrested a notorious hacker, but Jubal realized how much they needed Kristen behind a computer and so he reassigned her to the JOC. Kristen wasn't ready to go back out into the field anyways and this reassignment helped her more than she knew.

Production Code: FBI213
Summary: The son of a retired FBI agent is kidnapped, and the team must investigate if it's an act of revenge; Isobel must make a hard call when information from the past comes to light.

A bloody path was all Former FBI Special Agent Dan Osborne had found of his son. His teenage son Jake was on his way to school when someone or possibly a group of someones had grabbed him and left behind all his objects. Osborne was a seasoned agent before he retired. He knew he needed to report his son's abduction right away and that's exactly what he did. He reported the abduction. He then tried to help as much as humanly possible because he thought his son's kidnapping had something to do with him and, as luck would have it, he might have been wrong. His son had five thousand dollars hidden in his room.

Jake couldn't have accumulated that much from his allowance. He has some kind of side-hustle going on and so the FBI questioned Jake's friends. They first questioned Beth because her fingerprints were found on the cash. She was a close friend of Jake's and she ended up revealing that she and Jake were selling study drugs to their friends at school. Jake had never told her who his supplier is. He's never mentioned any problems with their business and so Beth believes her boyfriend might have been the problem.

Beth recently informed her boyfriend of what she was doing with Jake. He didn't like it and she suspects he could have done something to Jake in retaliation. It also didn't help that her boyfriend Warren hadn't shown up at school. The FBI put out a BOLO for him and they later found him. The first thing Warren said when he was picked up was that he wanted a lawyer. Warren had had blood on his shirt and he was burning when he was found. So, it didn't look good for Warren. The agents questioned him and they threatened to throw him in jail for three straight days if he didn't talk.

Warren was so scared that he told them everything. He even got rid of the lawyer as he explained how he picked up Jake and beat him up to prove a point. It's how he got the blood all over his shirt. Warren also threw Jake out of his car once he was finished hurting him and there was security footage backing this up. Jake was alive when he was thrown from the car. He was bleeding and in pain and then security footage picked up a good Samaritan that helped back up on his feet. And then both seemingly disappeared.

This "good Samaritan" wasn't good enough to take Jake to the hospital. He just grabbed Jake and disappeared with him. This was frightening because that meant the Samaritan could have been a predator who saw a chance his chance and took it. The agents couldn't get an ID on the guy and so Kristen decided to try her luck. She checked security footage of Jake's neighborhood and she found the good Samaritan had been following Jake the whole time. She even identified the guy. The kidnapper's name is Sean Ellis.

Ellis just came out of prison after serving five years for drug possession. It had been Dan that arrested him and so this whole thing was about revenge. Ellis followed Jake because he wanted to use Jake against his father. The fact the boy practically landed in his lap had merely facilitated Ellis's plan. He got his hands on Jake and when Jake's parents later went home — they found a burner phone on their porch. Dan had shielded his wife from what it said and he alone read the text message. It had made him so angry that he grabbed his gun and left.

Dan had figured out who had kidnapped his son from that text message. He then went about pursuing the man. He found Ellis's best friend and he texted Ellis's friend's cell phone. Dan had lured Ellis into a trap. He then waited and eventually attacked Ellis when he saw him. He tried to beat the information out of Ellis and Ellis wouldn't tell him a thing. The FBI soon found Dan with Ellis and both men were injured. They were both shot and Ellis's condition was actually a lot worse than Dan's.

Both men were rushed to the hospital. But Maggie tried getting answers out of Ellis and all she got was that Jake was alive and "brick". Maggie has no idea what the last one means. She and her fellow agents were still trying to put everything together. They got that Ellis had kidnapped Jake and so what they didn't understand was why? Ellis should have been starting over after five years. There was no reason to go after Dan or his family and so the agents spoke to Ellis's girlfriend Gina. It was Gina that revealed that Ellis was in trouble.

Ellis was moving money and drugs for a gang. He had owed them a lot of money because he lost it when he was arrested and so Ellis kidnapped Dan's kid to get the money back. It seems Dan had stolen a million dollars from Ellis when Ellis was arrested. Ellis then thought Dan still had that money and that's why he took Jake, but there was nothing proving Dan took that money and Dan was very careful about hiding anything that might incriminate him. Dan had erased the text message on the burner phone and he had spent hours with Ellis before either of them was found.

The agents couldn't even ask Dan about the money because Dan was in surgery. He was in surgery while the agents were putting the pieces together and had found Brick. Brick was the street name of someone from the gang. And he owned several foreclosed properties.

The FBI found Jake hidden at one of those homes and they arrested everyone involved.

Afterward, though, Special Agent in Charge Isobel Castille confronted Dan about what he did and he confessed to her that he took that money.

So, she had him arrested.

A woman is seen choked and killed right next to a dead man's body who's been shot in the head. The team is called to the scene as it's discovered the man Scott Conway worked for the government as an attorney district prosecutor. The team goes out to question his wife and co-worker Mona to ask about the cases he's worked on and if there are any strange cases he's been working on Mona says no.

The deceased woman is identified as Maya and turns out she was an escort on a website, Agent Jubal takes it upon himself to go deliver the news to Maya's mother and she asks what he's doing there and he delivers the bad news she slams the door shut. The media gets a hold of Maya's profession and spins the headlines to make it seem as if the prosecutor Scott was having an affair with an escort.

Jubal asks the team to go question the host of the party that Maya was at that night which was hosted by an upcoming artist named Tracey. They pull video surveillance and see Maya leave Tracy's party in a rush and followed by a man Thumper who is a pimp and in a gang called 718 and they go question him he refuses to talk to Maggie and Omar as the tension is thick as they feel he's lying. The team continues to view video surveillance from surrounding blocks and sees that Scott

Mona calls the team and she tells them that they have been investigating Thumper and his crew for a while with wiretaps and due to the news of the deaths Thumper was fired by Tracey as his producer and this angers him putting out a hit on Tracey's life, Jubal sees this as leverage and decides to use it to their advantage to find out who killed Maya and Scott.

They bring Tracey in and ask him to cooperate but he refuses to snitch saying it'll ruin his image and reputation. Omar comes up with a plan to scare Tracey and have him followed and shot at with fake bullets. Soon after Tracey calls Omar and Bell to cooperate and come up with a plan to get Thumper on the wire about the murders. Tracey says he's not a thug it's all for image purpose and once he found out about the two deaths he cut ties with Thumper.

Tracey goes to meet with Thumper wearing a wire and tries to make it seem he wants to hire Thumper again but Thumper isn't buying his act. One of Thumper's associates come in with a post from Tracey's social media with him flashing another gang, Thumper feels as if Tracey disrespected him and they proceed to beat up Tracey with the team watching and listening, Maggie wants to go in and get Tracey out of there but Jubal tells her to stand down.

Jubal is questioned by Castille on if he knows Maya's mother since he jumped to tell her the news and he admits that he arrested Maya's mother back in 2014 and he starts to feel guilty saying that he knew she took the charge for her boyfriend back then and maybe if he didn't arrest her things would be different now, Castille assured him it's not his fault.

Tracey meets up with Bell and Omar and says he's out after them watching him get beat up and tells them Thumper trusts his girlfriend Davina, so they send him to her place to collect some evidence that may be in her house. He gets in the house while Thumper isn't there and asks to use the bathroom, Tracey begins to search the apt and finds drugs a half a Kiko of heroin in the dresser drawer which is enough to get a warrant to search the home and bring Davina in for questioning, Jubal goes into try to get Davina to snitch on Thumper and asks if she saw any blood on his clothes he even shows her the murder scene pictures of the bodies of Scott and Maya and she still refuses to talk he threatens to charge her with felony drug distribution even after telling her that her daughter Olivia will grow up without a mother of she takes the charge for Thumper, she still refuses to cooperate and asks for a lawyer.

Tracey tells Omar and Maggie that Thumper calls him and wants to meet up Tracey is nervous and feels Thumper may know he was in the apartment the night Davina got arrested and may feel Tracey set her up, Omar tells him to set up a meeting in a public place or else Tracey will go to jail. Thumper and Tracey meet up and while they are discussing get back into business Thumper admits to killing Maya because she didn't pay for her food and clothes and that he killed Scott because he got in the way trying to save Maya.

Jubal goes to tell Davina he's giving her a break and letting her go and to make the most of it, from his guilt of arresting and charging Maya's mother years prior, he then goes to tell Maya's mother they caught the killer and ask for her forgiveness for what he done and says he regrets charging and arresting her, but she refuses to accept and goes in the house.

Summary: After a truck filled with armor-piercing rifles is hijacked, the team works to discover who stole it, and what they have planned for the stolen weapons. Also, a friend from OA's past in the military intelligence unit returns to help with the case, but OA isn't sure he can trust his judgement.

Some long-haul truckers were found murdered with their truck missing. Their truck was carrying gun and ammo from a weapons manufacturer. Not the sort of thing that the FBI wanted flooding the streets and so the agents went to work in investigating what happened. The truckers had to pull over because there was something wrong with the truck. The trucks were usually handled by third-party. The FBI looked into this thirty-party and they found he had a record. Kevin McGuire went to prison for theft and he quickly joined an Aryan gang known as the Riker's Royals. He still runs with this gang as far anyone knew.

FBI Special Agents Maggie Bell and Omar Adom "OA" Zidan went to this bar. They questioned a woman that's been seen with McGuire and at first she tried to deny knowing the man. Maggie and OA pushed back with the evidence they had of her being in a relationship with McGuire. They also told her that lying to federal agents is a crime and so the woman broke down. Leah confessed to everything. She had been with McGuire when he killed those two truckers and he left her without a word. She said she's been trying to reach all day.

McGuire was seen using a burner. He wasn't responding to any calls and so the feds traced him by following the last place where his phone pinged. Maggie and OA later went to this location.

They found a very dead McGuire and all of the guns. The only thing that was missing was the ammo. The ammo was black tips and that meant they were armor piercing. They were some very heavy duty ammo. They would be dangerous in the wrong hands and so the FBI did their best to find it. They started by looking at security footage in the area.

They found a van that went to the area where the truck was found. This same van was seen leaving twenty minutes later and so the feds followed it back into the city. They later found it abandoned. It had some paint on it that could only be found in containers and so they found it a shipping container that recently came in the area. Maggie and OA searched this container, but they found evidence that someone had been living there and so they called in CSI to search the place for DNA. No one expected that the DNA that was found would lead back to Mansor.

Mansor was a terrorist in charge of an organization known as NIA. The FBI supposedly oversaw a mission that killed him months ago and, so to find out he was alive, had come as a shock. Mansor's death had been celebrated. There was even people that were awarded after he was dead and so news of Mansor being alive had to be kept under wraps. OA for one wanted answers. He had worked on the original case and he was there when they bombed the building. OA just didn't where it all went wrong.

He spoke to a buddy that had also been on the case. He asked about the intel that led to the bombing and his friend told him that he didn't actually confirm that Mansor was in that building. He said he knew Mansor never traveled without his wife or his brother. Both parties were in the building they bombed along with an unidentified third person. This third person was believed to be Mansor. They never actually confirmed that it was him and so that's how Mansor was able to survive the hit. And because everyone thought he was dead, Mansor was able to do whatever he wanted.

This included planning an attack on American soil. Mansor was in New York and he access to semi-automatic weapons as well as armor piercing bullets. Mansor used to freedom to come up with an elaborate plan and now it was up to the FBI to unravel it before it was too late. They decided to start with the shipping container. They looked for whoever paid for it and they found Daniel Khan. He was second generation Indonesian-American and he's always been in trouble. He was looking for his roots when he came across a NIA website and it's been a downhill battle from there.

Daniel Khan paid for everything. He paid for the shipping containers using his father's company as a front and that's how they found it right before they used him. They used the fact they could arrest his father against Daniel. Daniel didn't want to hurt his dad and so confessed. He said that he was helping the NIA. They were planning an attack and he was supposed to be involved in some way. He was going to receive instructions at a location the next day. The FBI used that and they got Daniel to make that meeting.

They had bugged Daniel. They listened in as he met a member of NIA and this other man confirmed that Mansor was still alive. He said that Mansor wanted vengeance for what happened to his family. Its why he was here in the states and this other man said that Daniel could be a part of it. Daniel tried to act enthusiastic. He played up wanting to impress Mansor and he must have pushed too hard because this other guy got spooked. He said Daniel wasn't ready to honor his homeland and then he disappeared before the FBI could catch him.

Again, this frustrated OA. OA built his career on the back of taking down Mansor and now that's its been revealed as a lie he doesn't know what to do with himself. He's questioning his every move. He even questioned his friendships from back then and so OA was on edge all the time. He kept going over what the terrorist said. The terrorist had said something about a ceremony and OA believes he could have been talking about the Ring Melt Ceremony. It was at a military college and it was when seniors handed their rings to incoming freshmen.

The man that ordered the hit on Mansor's family was also going to be a host at this ceremony. So, the FBI rushed to the college and they found several members of the NIA that were hiding as musicians. They couldn't find Mansor at first. They searched the auditorium and eventually someone spotted him. They spotted him but they couldn't take the shot from their vantage point and so they told OA to do it. OA had wanted to confirm it was Mansor before he took the shot. He kept hoping the guy would turn around and it all came down to trust. OA had to trust that this other person was right about it being Mansor. And so he took the shot.

And it turned out to be Mansor. OA killed him five years after the mission to kill Mansor failed and so he forgave his friend who also had to make a judgement call all those years ago.

Summary: After the police ignore a desperate father's plea for help, he abducts a billionaire's daughter and holds her hostage in a near-impenetrable safe room until his own missing child is returned to him. Also, Jubal puts his hostage negotiation skills to the test.

Someone witnessed a kidnapping. There were outside when they witnessed a man dragging a young woman into a car and unfortunately that young woman was sixteen years old Chloe Ford. She was the daughter of billionaire Nathaniel Ford. He has made plenty of enemies in the business world and he never thought one of them would come after him, but someone did grab his daughter outside their home and so he did everything possible to get her home. He contacted the Assistant Director of the FBI who was a friend.

He asked for the best agents to work the case and he received them. He also told the FBI everything he could.

Ford was close to his daughter. She would have told him if there was a problem at school and there wasn't one. Chloe didn't have enemies. She didn't see anyone following her and so there was no one that had a reason to kidnap her. It couldn't have been personal. It had to be about the money and Ford might have been the one to put a target on his daughter's back. He recently threw a two million dollar Sweet Sixteen for Chloe. The media covered it and all anyone could talk about was how much was spent on this teenager.

It didn't matter to them that Chloe hadn't liked it. She didn't want to be seen a spoiled brat and so again her kidnapper couldn't have known her. If he did, he never would have grabbed her.

The FBI used security footage to track the vehicle the teenager was thrown in and it led them back to carjacking. It turns out their kidnapper had stolen the car mere hours before he used it with Chloe. The kidnapper also told the woman he was stealing the car from that he was doing "this" for his daughter.

She didn't know what the "this" was. The FBI hadn't cared what it was because they were set on finding FBI and so they tracked the car back to good ole Mike. Mike took Chloe and he brought her to a deserted mansion. The FBI later raided the place. They didn't find either of them. They did, however, find a panic room and it couldn't be breached. Their best of getting in there is if Mike let them in. Something he wasn't going to do until he got what he wanted. Mike used a speaker from the panic room to make demands.

Mike wanted the FBI to find his daughter. He said that if they could find a rich kid that they could find his own kid and so he told them that he wasn't going to let Chloe go until he got his daughter back. His daughter's name is Stephanie. She lost her mom and she had been living with Mike for the past six months. She was also registered at school and hadn't been attending. Stephanie was a teenager and so no one took Mike seriously. The authorities thought Stephanie merely ran away because it's not like she grew up with Mike.

Mike wasn't on her birth certificate. He didn't play a role in her life until she was almost an adult and so the FBI did their due diligence. They investigated Stephanie's disappearance. Stephanie thought her father was some drug dealer and she only learned the truth when her mom was dying. The mom didn't want to leave Stephanie alone. She contacted Mike and she told him he was Stephanie's father. Mike then took responsibility and he had Stephanie move in with him after her mom died.

The two didn't always get along. Mike thought she was doing drugs and so he grounded Stephanie. Stephanie then turned towards the landlord for help. Stephanie asked for money to go see a cousin in Florida and this adult gave it to her. Stephanie then booked her ticket. She was all set to see her cousin and surprisingly she never made it. Her cousin received a text from Stephanie that said Stephanie had made up with her dad and so the cousin didn't think anything was wrong. And sadly there was an issue.

Stephanie was kidnapped. There was security footage from a bus that was passing nearby and it showed a mystery man grabbing Stephanie. She had been taken and so her father had been right. Mike had tried to tell the police. He even looked for Stephanie for himself and he got nowhere because he was the only one looking. No one cared if some poor teenager went missing. Mike had been right about that and he threatened to kill Chloe if his daughter wasn't found. The FBI was moving as fast as they could.

They were looking for Stephanie now. They were also monitoring the situation in the panic room and they watched as Chloe broke free of her restraints. Chloe tried to take on Mike herself and she failed. Mike almost killed her in retaliation. He didn't go through with it, though. Mike still wanted his daughter back and he had given the FBI a timeframe. They had to find his daughter within that timeframe or Chloe was going to die. And so the FBI ran through scenarios in which they forced their way into the panic room.

They ran several tests. They all showed that he would get some shots off and so no one wanted to risk Chloe. Their best bet was finding Stephanie. They traced the car that Stephanie was forced into and they found out it was used by some junkie known as Sergio. Maggie and OA waited for Sergio to show up at his usual spot to feed the pigeons and then they caught him. They tried asking him about Stephanie and he responded, "Which one is she?". Sergio, it seems had taken a bunch of girls from the bus stop.

He's taken so many that he couldn't remember a single one. Sergio says he kidnaps these girls and later hands them over to someone named Hugo. Hugo would get them hooked on drugs. He waited until they couldn't fend for themselves and then he pimped them out. Hugo can only be contacted by pigeons. The pigeons would fly to Hugo's place and they would carry a message from Sergio that says he got another girl for him. The FBI used the same pigeons to find Hugo's location and once they got there — they freed all the girls.

They also found Stephanie. Stephanie was in bad shape and so she needed to be rushed to the hospital. She was put into a coma once she got there and that meant there was no way she could talk to her father, but he's demanding to talk her or else he won't believe the feds found her and he was getting worked up over it. Mike said they had ten minutes or he was going to kill Chloe and so the FBI chose to breach the building.

They broke into the panic room and they shot Mike. Chloe was unharmed and later Stephanie came out of her coma, but Mike was in such bad shape that he coded on his way to the hospital and there's no telling if he survived long enough to talk to his daughter.

Production Code: FBI216
Summary: When the team is called to the scene of a murder, they quickly suspect political motivation, but when another murder occurs, they work to uncover a common thread before more bodies pile up. Also, Maggie contemplates a decision that could affect her entire career.

Someone opened fire on a group of protestors. The protestors weren't that large. There was probably a hundred of them and they were all shouting about the dangers of climate change. The protestors had been out there for a while without incident. It wasn't until they were leaving that someone opened fire on them from a car and so the FBI was brought in. They soon found out two people had been hurt. One was killed and another was injured. They also learned that the shooter also fired off three shots and so they quickly realized he or she wasn't in it for the notoriety. They came to target the protestors because they were looking for one person in particular.

Again, there were two victims. The guy that had been injured had organized the event and he seemed harmless. The other person, however, had been killed. Nicole Mitchell was shot twice out of three gunshots and so she was the real target. She was a trust fund kid. She recently graduated from Columbia Law and she was the daughter of a wall street guy who has his own list of enemies. The FBI chose to focus on Nicole. They investigated her life and they found out she had gotten up with a man named Conroy. Conroy used her to sell designer drugs to her rich friends. He even thought he could get away it and Nicole stopped him.

Nicole texted everyone in her cell that he was a poser. She told them how he couldn't be trusted because he sold drugs and so he eventually realized she outed him. He tried sending her text messages. His last message to her was a threat to end her and so the FBI picked him up. They later found him with a gun. The gun wasn't a match for their crime scene and he also had an alibi. His doorman remembered him leaving his building a mere thirteen minutes before the shooting. Which would have made it impossible for him to get there in time to kill Nicole and so Conroy wasn't their guy.

The FBI also found something else. They found the bullets that killed Nicole were a match to a second shooting a mere day before. This other victim was a gang member and he had been killed in the Bronx. There was no connection between Ramirez and Nicole. She was once a Public Defender and still their paths never crossed. There was no reason why someone would kill these two people and so the FBI investigated Ramirez's death. They found a car fleeing the scene moments after he had been shot. The FBI traced this car and they later found it abandoned. There was no telling who once owned because it had on stolen plates and so the agents checked the car.

They checked to see if their killer could have left something. They got lucky when they did find a piece of paper that a docket number on it and it was at a nearby courthouse. Maggie and OA went to the courthouse. They found out the docket number was connected to OA's girlfriend Mona and so they got to her before the shooter did. The shooter had tried to take her on the steps of the courthouse. They missed because of OA and Maggie wasn't able to take the shot because there were too many civilians in the area. And so OA asked Maggie to stay with Mona while he went to pursue the shooter on foot.

Unfortunately, the shooter got away. The agents later spoke with Mona and they told her about both Nicole and Ramirez. They asked her if she ever worked with either of them. She couldn't recall Ramirez but she does remember Nicole. She once tried a case against a young man named Alex Bryant. He refused to give up a shooter and so Mona tried him for conspiracy as an adult. His lawyer was Nicole. Nicole convinced to take four years and he recently just got out. Alex was the perfect suspect. He could have been going after the people responsible for putting him in jail and so the agents went looking for him.

They tried his parents' place. The parents hadn't wanted to believe their Alex could be guilty of anything and they had blamed the system for him going to jail. Alex was never part of a gang. He was just in the car when his supposed friend decided to shoot at someone and he ended up getting the blame. Alex's life fell apart after that. He lost scholarships and he went to prison for four years. He's just gotten out. He wasn't the same and the agents later found him OD'ing. They got him to the hospital. They also waited until he was well enough to question him and Alex, of course, denied knowing what happened with these shootings.

The agents did find out he "borrowed" a gun from his friend who works in security. Alex later claimed the gun was stolen from him and they didn't really have evidence against him. All they had was a theory. The theory also only made sense if Alex was shafted all those years ago and so that made OA look at Mona in a new light. He questioned her for going after Alex. She told him she followed the law and that Alex should have given up the killer's name. They disagreed on whether or not Alex was a good kid and yet someone was out here killing people and it wasn't Alex. He had an alibi for Ramirez's murder.

Only Alex's father didn't have an alibi. Roman Bryant believed his son was wronged because his son was going to be somebody and now he's just an ex-con. Alex's father also could have taken the gun off of him. The agents went to the Bryant home and they found a note Roman left for his wife. It had read like a suicide note. Like Roman wasn't going to come home. He left behind an ammo box and so Roman was going to go out in a big way and the FBI needed Alex's help. They asked Alex about his father. His father hadn't understood him when he came out of prison and then they got into an argument several days ago.

Alex told his father he was raped in prison. His father snapped and he blamed everyone who failed his son. He killed Ramirez first because Ramirez had promised to protect Alex in prison and he failed him. He blamed the lawyer for letting Alex take four years he didn't deserve. He blamed Mona for her lack of compassion. Roman also blamed Alex's friends for not better protecting him and so the feds found Roman before he could kill again.

They stopped him and now he'll go to prison and his son would have lost his father after everything else.

Maggie received a job offer. She could take it. She would have to lose her team and her partner if she did. Or she could turn it down. Maggie would never be offered another chance like it and she would forever stay in her same old position. She later considered both sides. She wasn't given much time to do so because of the case she caught and so she made her decision on the fly. She chose to take the job. She'll be gone for several months and OA will be assigned a new partner.

Just starts to play shrink and it makes Jubal laugh a little but it looks like Jess is on the right track because there's a woman connected to Givens. Omar and Marla go to visit the woman. They pretend to have good news and inheritance. The woman looks thrilled. After they leave, the phones are tapped and the team watches that she calls somewhere in the Bronx.

The governor's office reaches out to the team. They received a ransom video. The gunman wants $1 million for the kids. Meanwhile, Omar and Marla see the man they're looking for dumping some trash. Omar yells for him not to move as he points his gun but the man takes off after firing at him. After heading back into the building they realize that Omar got a shot off and at the man is bleeding. Production Code: FBI301
Summary: The team welcomes a new member as they search for killers who orchestrated a mass shooting at a media company, and OA's personal connection with the case threatens to cloud his judgment.

There was a mass shooting in Greenpoint, NYC. Two men showed up out of nowhere and they opened fire on a group of people. Nothing seems to have sparked the incident. This group of people was not doing anything. They were having lunch and making dates for the future and so it seemed odd that they would be targeted. The FBI didn't find out until later that this group of people was standing right outside a liberal magazine. Some of them even worked there and they were having lunch on break. This liberal magazine was ultra-progressive. They allegedly printed something controversial with every issue because it was a motto of theirs and unfortunately there was nothing such as discourse anymore. The world no longer felt the conversation was enough.

It's now action. They were those who offend and those who became offended. This liberal magazine seems to have offended the conservatives and OA has a CI with some insight. He didn't reach out to this CI. It was the CI that contacted him. OA's guy called him to tell him that he was working in a bar when he heard some guys go off about making a statement and that he didn't think it was important until the driver came in just that morning to brag about being the driver to a couple of armed guys. The CI said the driver goes by the name Big Mike. He told OA this story about Big Mike and OA didn't believe him.

The story didn't make sense. Why would this Big Mike brag about being the driver if he hadn't known the other guys were going to start shooting? It also didn't make sense why he would tell the CI everything. The CI's real name is Zayne. Zayne worked at a bar which was true and OA thought that was the only true part of the story. OA suspected that more was behind what really happened. He stayed in the room when the tech guys got a photo of the driver from the scene of the crime and it wasn't this Big Mike character. It was Zayne. Zayne was the driver. He was involved in the shooting and OA hoped that Zayne just got mixed up in it by accident.

OA informed his bosses about Zayne. He also added that Zayne could have agreed to steal a car for this group in order to get an in with them and so he just thought Zayne was the driver. He and his partner Maggie went to Zayne's apartment. They couldn't get Zayne on the phone and so OA thought they would find him at home. Only Zayne wasn't there. The FBI Agents let themselves into the apartment and they found a shrine to the Freedom Fighters. The Freedom Fighters were a group of racists who believed they needed to "take the country back" from the gays and the blacks. They especially hated the liberal magazine because the magazine was calling itself all-inclusive.

OA wanted to find Zayne more than ever. He wanted to believe that Zayne had a plausible story for being involved in the shooting and having the shrine. He continues trying to contact Zayne however the FBI got word of where the Freedom Fighters were hiding out and they hit the building. Their fellow agent Stuart Scola hit the building with his new partner. FBI Special Agent Tiffany Wallace was replacing Kristen. She also didn't like to speak about herself and she sometimes spoke over her new partner. Stuart was learning to deal with it. He and Tiffany needed to find their own normal and maybe one day they'll be like Maggie and OA.

Maggie didn't believe like OA that Zayne was an innocent party. She suspected that Zayne was happily a member of the racist organization and that he was hiding now because he might be a part of the second attack. The FBI had heard chatter about a second attack. They wanted to prevent it and OA believed the best way was to get through to Zayne. He and Maggie went to Zayne's father's house. Zayne's dad said he was there less than an hour ago and he also claimed that Zayne seemed all over the place. The dad called Zayne's new number. He handed the phone to OA and OA asked Zayne what was going on.

Zayne said it was all an accident. He had to prove to the guys at the Freedom Fighters that he was down for anything and so he stole a car for them, but he swears he didn't know they were going to start shooting people and so OA tried to tell him it was okay. He told Zayne to wait there. He wanted to speak to him in person and unfortunately, Zayne was too frightened about being arrested to think straight. He took hostages. He held himself up in a storefront with his hostages and OA had to do everything possible to convince the FBI Agent in charge not to shoot Zayne dead. OA called Zayne. He tried to talk Zayne down and Zayne wouldn't back down.

Zayne wanted to leave the country. He wanted to go to someplace where he wouldn't be extradited and he didn't want to give up his hostages. He still thought there was a way out of this without consequences. OA tried to tell him that he had to assist an investigation if he wants to make out of the situation alive and Zayne didn't have much. He gave OA a name. The name helped the FBI because it led to them finding a site and they found out the second attack involves a bomb. William Ellis was apparently on his way to carry out the second attack. He was driving to it and they searched his search engine. The last thing he looked up was a nonprofit called Trans For Life.

Stuart and Tiffany went after their suspected terrorist. They split up to cover more ground and Stuart found Ellis's car. He used the bomb-sniffing dog to determine whether or not a bomb had been inside the car and the dog had indicated that yes there was a bomb transported in the car. Stuart told his new partner this. She came across Ellis and she tried to tell him to put his hands up. He refused to. He kept walking to the building so she was forced to shoot him. Tiffany shot and killed Ellis. Ellis did have a bomb on it and luckily it didn't go off. They called the bomb squad. They waited as the bomb was diffused and so that lowered Zayne's potential.

They had stopped the second attack. They didn't need Zayne anymore and so the agent in charge of the hostage negotiation thought they should take the shot to kill Zayne. Only OA didn't want Zayne to die. Zayne was an informant and a friend. OA wanted to keep him alive. OA went into the bakery and he tried to talk Zayne down again, but Zayne claimed that OA had been using him. He didn't think OA texted his friend as he claimed and he even threatened to kill a hostage if he didn't get to see OA's cell phone. So, OA handed Zayne his phone. Zayne looked up the text messages and he found out that OA was telling the truth.

Zayne's mind was all over the place because he was on something. He was a stupid kid and he gave up his gun the moment he realized he was wrong about OA. OA had taken a risk to save Zayne. The only one who stood by him was Maggie and so OA was there for her when she got a gold medal for some undercover work. Maggie hadn't talked about the work she did. It was sadly too difficult to talk about before now and so she did open up in the end. And she naturally turned to OA before her new potential boyfriend.

Summary: The team races to stop an active serial killer after three women are found weighted down at the bottom of a lake; Jubal looks into an old closed case after there are multiple similarities to the recent victims.

A couple of kids came across a dead body. They were messing around with small smoke bombs. They were throwing them in the water and one of the bombs must have been too close to the remains because it brought it up to the surface. The remains were that of Beatriz Santos. She was identified by the tattoo she had and what was clear about the body is that it had to be murder. She was bound with wire. Her body was weighted to stay underwater and if it hadn't been for those kids then who knows how long her body would stay hidden. The State Troopers were called. They alerted the FBI because they believe it might turn into something bigger and they had been right. More bodies were found underwater.

All the victims were women. They were also all married and their husband reported them as missing. The FBI believes that the women were kidnapped, raped, and murdered. Their wedding rings were also all stolen. The bodies weren't found with them and so the Unsub must have them. The Unsub was also sticking to one area in Westchester. He was hunting in that area and he was disposing of the bodies in that area. The Unsub in this case reminded Jubal of another case. Jubal arrested a man named Cory McMay for rape and murder. This was during the time when he had been drinking and his marriage had been collapsing. Jubal wasn't at all like his usual self with this case.

Jubal, therefore, believes he might have made a mistake. The McMay case had been in Westchester and the victim at the time had been found the same brand of barbed wire that the current victims were tied with. Jubal reached out to an old contact. He wanted to know if he did everything by the book and she assured him that he had. They never found evidence to back up McMay's alibi. They also other evidence to consider and so Jubal walked away from a visit from an old friend believing that his old case couldn't be connected to this new one. Jubal didn't tell anyone else about his fears. He kept to himself for a while because he wanted to let the investigation follows its natural steps. And those steps led to a parolee with a grudge against Beatriz.

The parolee called Beatriz a Stacy. "Stacy" was a term used by Incels who blamed women for the reason why they were celibate and they have message boards. Their guys were posting to message boards. He thought Beatriz was this horrible person because she didn't accept a drink from him. Nevermind that she was married. He thinks if he had been richer or handsome that she would have taken the drink and would also have been nicer to him. The parolee posted about Beatriz to the message boards. The other victims were also on the boards. There had been other men who each had their own ignorant opinion of why the women were horrible and so it's clear that someone, some incel, was following through on their threats.

The women had all been taken by night. They worked late and they disappeared with no witnesses. It was hearing this that forced Jubal to speak up. Jubal told Maggie and OA about McMay because McMay's victim had been kidnapped at night. This along with other smaller details made Jubal believe that his friend had been wrong and they might have arrested the wrong man. He needed to be sure. He asked Maggie and OA to look into it. They did. They checked McMay's alibi. His sister had claimed that he had been with her during the murder and she only revealed tonight that it had been a lie. She hadn't been with her brother. She had no idea where he was during the murder and she lied because she was trying to protect him. Only she didn't risk going to jail for him. Lying to the FBI was a federal offense and the sister wasn't going to risk prison by maintaining the lie.

The FBI was also alerted when a new body was dumped. The Unsub couldn't take his latest victim to the lake anymore and so he dumped her in a stream. He seems to be obsessed with water. He also was driving the bodies up to the dumpsite. The FBI found his car in surveillance videos. They couldn't read the license plate. The Unsub was taking steps to obscure it with mud whenever he went out and so the FBI could only read the first three numbers. They ran the make and model of the car with the partial license plate numbers and it led back to Peter DeLeon. DeLeon reported his car stolen four months ago. He works at the hospital in the same unit where he was once a patient and he couldn't be their Unsub because he injured his back in construction years ago. Maggie and OA still looked into him, but his neighbors think he's a great guy and DeLeon wasn't lying about his story.

The Unsub must have stolen the car as a countermeasure before this latest killing spree began. Jubal still had doubts about his past case and so he chose to visit McMay in prison. Jubal wanted a chance to question the other man again. He told McMay that he had doubts about his conviction and he told him that he could only help if McMay starts telling the truth. Jubal asked McMay how his DNA came to be on the victim. McMay still didn't have answers for that because he swears he had no sexual contact with the victim and he doesn't know how his DNA ended up on her. He thinks he was framed. He tried to convince Jubal he was feared and Jubal didn't believe him. He thinks McMay was in on it with their current killer.

Jubal didn't believe he was wrong until DNA on their latest victim came back as a match for McMay. McMay has been in prison for years and so it couldn't be him. The FBI also learned that their Unsub was using WiFi from a coffee café. There were no cameras at the café. Only there was a bank across the street and the cameras from that bank showed Peter DeLeon going into that café every time someone from there accessed the incel boards. It turns out their killer was DeLeon. DeLeon also has McMay's DNA because he received bone marrow from McMay when he was little and he had leukemia. DeLeon is literally the only other person who has McMay's DNA. He let McMay go to prison for his crime because he hadn't been done killing.

DeLeon grew up in an abusive household. His father hated him and his mother and he let him know it each and every day. DeLeon chose to blame his mother for not protecting him. He now hates all women and so the incel community was the perfect place for him. They gave him targets. He went after these women and he kept their wedding rings. It was the rings that proved to be his undoing. The FBI found them at DeLeon's home and there was even the ring of McMay's supposed victim. And so DeLeon came clean.

DeLeon confessed to his crimes and now McMay, who was wrongfully imprisoned, gets to walk.

Jubal broke the news to McMay. McMay was so grateful that he thanked the man that had wrongfully arrested him and so Jubal told the other man that he didn't deserve his thanks. Jubal did a lot of things when he was drunk. He cheated on his wife with his partner and he forced his partner to cover up his mistakes on the job. Jubal also blacked out one night. He came to the next morning in his driveway and there had been blood found on his car. There were not hit and run reports from that night. Jubal came to believe he hit an animal. He wanted to believe he hit an animal and that's what convinced him to get clean.

Summary: The FBI headquarters is facing a threat against the henchmen of the one of the world's most wanted, who are planning for his escape.

A NYPD police officer was murdered. He was shot and killed as he was making a routine traffic stop. Officer Sanchez didn't turn on his body cam until he got close to driver. However, it was clear he recognized the passenger and he tried to pull his gun. He was shot before he could get a bullet off. Officer Sanchez died because the car he pulled over was carrying Antonio Vargas. Vargas was head of the Durango Cartel and he was notorious. He was responsible for about a third of drugs coming out Mexico and he was wanted by everyone. The FBI wanted him because he was responsibly for the torture and murder of one of their own. They therefore were ecstatic when they saw him in the body cam footage.

There was also a witness. The witness called 911 after he heard the gunshots and, while it was too late to save Officer Sanchez, it was useful in other ways. The witness saw the car. It was a black sedan and the first three letters of the license plate read KFC just like the restaurant. The FBI was put on this case. They were able to track down the car with its unique license plate and it led to the warehouses. The FBI believes Vargas was in hiding. They went to the warehouses and they used cameras that read body heat to find the building where Vargas was hiding. The FBI and Jubal's team moved on this building, but there was a risk because it was boobytrapped and there was plenty of explosives around.

Only the team found Vargas. They found him and arrested him. They brought Vargas back to the FBI building where they thought it would be safe and it turns out Vargas has a backup plan. His own foot soldiers carried out this backup plan when they saw that Vargas was arrested. The foot soldiers kidnapped an FBI Special Agent and they fitted her with a collar bomb. Something they claimed that Vargas could detonate at any minute. The bomb was also on a timer and it would go off the second it hits zero. These people released the woman back into the FBI building. She was told to walk into the lobby or she would die. They released her like that because their message was clear. They were saying either Vargas was released or the building plus Elise would go up in smoke.

The building had needed to be evacuated. Stuart chose to stay behind because he knew Elise and he didn't want her to potentially die alone. He chose to stay with her. He kept her company as the team tried to find out how Vargas was doing all of this and also how to stop him. They needed to find his soldiers. Elise gave them details. She mentioned one of them held her hands and the other put the collar on. She also said she didn't notice anything until a gun was put in her back. So, the team tried to investigate it and it was hard. There were only two of the analysts working back at the office because the building had been cleared and so it was just a handful of people and Vargas that was still inside.

The Special Agent in Charge had also stayed behind. She continued to interrogate Vargas and he told her how she could solve things. He told her that she needed to free him. He said she had the power and she doesn't. She can't make a decision like that. Not when the rules say that they don't give in to terrorists and that's what Vargas is. He's a terrorist. He killed an FBI Agent once before. He was even willing to do it again today and so they had to stop him. They tried tracking down Vargas's men who had a detonator on them. They even tried appealing to Vargas's better nature and there is no better nature. The man even threw dirt on the agent he killed by claiming the man was dirty.

Castille didn't believe him. She knew the Agent he killed and she therefore knew he was a good man. Too good to ever take a bribe from someone like Vargas. Castille figured he was lying and she set about proving it. Castille asked Jubal to look into the late Miller for her. She thought that if he could lie about those things then he was never going to let Elise go and this was just to prove it. This would show that there's nothing she can do. Castille spoke with her bosses and they were unwilling to let go Vargas. If Vargas is released, he'll go on to kill thousands and the life of thousands vs the life of Elise was an easy choice for the FBI. They were prepared to let her die. The woman herself must have realized it as well because she called her daughter and she said goodbye without frightening the little girl.

The team however continued with their leads. They found the soldiers and they tried to convince to do the right thing, but neither will help nor could they. They said their families back home will be killed if Vargas wasn't released and anyways they only had a detonator. They didn't know how to stop the bomb. The only one who does know is Vargas. Vargas was also right about Miller and so Castille took a risk. She released Vargas. She asked that no one follow him and he lived up to his word. He sent the code to free Elise the moment he was safe. Castille put the code in herself and thankfully both she and Elise get to survive physically. And career wise, Castille knew she was going to be fired.

Her bosses even left it to her to face the questions on why Vargas was released. Everyone was wondering why he got to walk after taking part in Officer Sanchez's murder and all she could say is that Vargas will be apprehended one day soon.

Summary: A shooting at a quinceañera leaves two dead, but the team believes they may not have been the intended targets.

It was Elena's Quinceañera. She was supposed to be celebrating with her family on becoming a woman. However, a gunman decided to put an end to the festivities. The shooter shot off several rounds and he took out both Elena as well as her mother. He even got into a physical altercation with Elena's father who tried to stop him from fleeing the scene.

The shooter unfortunately got away just before he shouted obscenities and racial slurs. The shooter targeted this party because he was trying to kill Hispanics. This made it a hate crime and the mass shooting on top of it had made it the FBI's problem. Jubel later sent Maggie and OA to the scene where they questioned everyone. The two agents questioned the family on if they had any enemies and Elena's father reminded them how bad things have gotten lately.

The racists came out in full force whenever they see a Hispanic person because they like telling them to go back to their own country. To these people, it didn't matter that often the Hispanics they were yelling at were American. The racists didn't care and so the FBI checked out any hotheads in the area. They found Patrick Ryan because his cell phone pinged off the nearest tower.

Patrick was recently released from prison and he was a known white supremacist from Boston. The FBI figured he targeted the restaurant because it was Spanish. The team was sent to Patrick's home and they were shot at. The FBI were able to hold their own. They also searched the apartment once they were done and they found a picture of a waiter at the restaurant.

The waiter's name is Gabriel. Gabriel left work after the shooting and he hid at his aunt's home. Agents Tiffany and Scola found him there. Gabriel had tried to pull a gun on them because he thought they were pretending to be FBI Special Agents and so they had to fight him and arrest him.

It was after he was under arrest that Gabriel began talking. He thought the agents had been sent by Jose Martinez who was a big-time drug dealer and he thought Martinez because of Valentina. Valentina was Martinez's girlfriend. She's also been seeing Gabriel behind his back and the two planned on running away to Miami together only for Valentina to later change her mind. She told Gabriel that the relationship had to end because Martinez was getting suspicious.

This is why Gabriel believes Ryan was trying to kill him. He thinks Ryan was ordered to do it by Martinez and so the team checked out Martinez. There was a file on him from within the department. Another FBI team was investigating Martinez and looking to build a RICO case against him. This case was being run by Nestor. Nestor also happens to be dating Maggie and Maggie's FBI partner OA had a problem with that.

OA has been making snide comments. He often challenges Nestor in the field and so this time wasn't any different. OA demanded to speak to Nestor's CI within Martinez's organization. He and Maggie spoke with this Carlos and they wanted to use him to pin Elena and her mother's murders on Martinez. And Nestor stopped them.

Nestor wired Martinez's organization. Neither Martinez nor anyone in his crew has ever mentioned Gabriel or Patrick Ryan. There was a photo however of Ryan meeting with Valentina. Valentina also sent text messages asking Gabriel to meet and when the FBI allowed him to go there — Gabriel was shot down. He was murdered and the team had enough on Valentina to bring her in. They confronted her with Gabriel.

They believed she set him up to be killed and that wasn't the case. Valentina swore she had nothing to do with it. She said she met with Ryan because Martinez couldn't make a meeting with the man and he demanded that she go in person to tell Ryan why he wasn't there. And as for the text messages, Valentina said Martinez made her send them because he was going to threaten Gabriel into leaving her alone.

Valentina claims she didn't know her boyfriend was going to kill Gabriel. She was willing to give evidence against him and she told the team that the gun used on Gabriel matched the weapon his brother gifted him over Christmas. Only there was a problem with using Valentina. The team were told to hold off on their case as the other team made their case for RICO. OA got into Nestor's face about it and he told Nestor that he was just going to let the killers walk.

OA let his personal feelings for Nestor to cloud his judgment. He even accused Maggie of being on Nestor's side and she was the one who talked to Isobel. Maggie asked their boss if they could go ahead in spite of Nestor's case and she was told no. The RICO case takes precedence.

The most their team could do was collect evidence. They wired Valentina and she tried to get a confession out of Martinez, but he threatened to kill her if she pushed it and so the team used something else. The team went after the murder weapon.

Martinez held all his weapons in his basement safe and he was home all day. The team had to knock out the cable during a big game. Martinez would be so focused on the game that this would allow Valentina the chance to grab the gun and that's exactly what happened. She got the gun. She also later started panicking that Martinez would kill her so she called Maggie and Nestor gave them all clear to move ahead in spite of his case.

OA and Maggie were later able to arrest Martinez for murder thanks to Nestor. This also helped OA to change his mind about Nestor and he told Maggie he was so sorry about how he's been acting. He just wanted to keep Maggie safe, but he realized now he should have minded his own business.

Summary: As the team searches for a young girl who was kidnapped from a cabin during a family vacation, they discover that the abduction may be tied to a skeleton in her familys closet. Also, Maggie questions her relationship with Nestor when she learns he hasn't been completely honest with her.

The episode opens with Maggie's new boyfriend having a secret. FBI Special Agent Nestor Vertiz seemed like the perfect guy on paper and for a while Maggie thought she knew everything about him. However, that all changed when she saw a photo of two kids on his phone. Maggie asked him if they were his niece and nephew. He told her "no".

He explained they were his kids and they lived in Puerto Rico with their mom. Nestor doesn't get to see his kids as much as he would like. He also didn't bring them up before now because he wanted to make sure their relationship was further along before he mentioned them and so that upset Maggie because she felt she should have been told sooner. She and Nestor were about to get into a fight about it when work called.

Maggie was called into work. There was a kidnapping in Upstate New York and time was critical in these sorts of cases. She was needed in the search for Grace Harris. The little girl is five years old. She lives in the Upper West Side with her parents who were both well-off and the kidnapping didn't appear personal. The little girl was on vacation with her parents and aunt and uncle.

They were miles away from home and no one would follow them that far just to take their daughter. The FBI believed that it was someone in the area. They asked the family if they noticed anyone hanging around and the uncle remembered a white guy as he was getting wood for the fire. The team followed up on the uncle's claims.

They found a white guy. His name was Don Kirkpatrick and he has a record. He was a drunk. He got so drunk recently that he broke into his ex-wife's home to see their kids and she's taken an order of protection against him. Kirkpatrick was sober when the FBI found him. They questioned him and he said he had nothing to do with the kidnapping, but he did see a man dragging a little girl and the little girl didn't want to go with him.

He did nothing about it and he told the team everything he knew. They followed Kirkpatrick's directions to where he last saw the little girl. They found her doll near the river and there was also a rock with blood on it. The team feared the worst when they saw that. They put an order for divers and the river was checked for Gracie's body.

They also tested the doll to see if they were fingerprints on it. The only fingerprints they found belonged to Grace and her father. Which was a problem. Her father's fingerprints showed that he legally changed his name twelve years ago and that he had a sealed juvenile record. Ben apparently murdered a ten year old girl when he was twelve. He murdered her in the woods.

They both went to a camp in the Catskills and he lured her to edge where he pushed her off. He served six years at a juvenile center in the Bronx for what he did. His record was sealed when he turned eighteen and was released. He seems to have started over completely. He changed his name, he went to college, and now he's a defense attorney.

But that record of his had the team worried. They believed he might have been triggered by this vacation because they were staying at a cabin in the woods and so he could have killed his daughter. He could have made it look like a kidnapper once he realized he was done. The team wanted to speak to Ben and he couldn't be found. He also tried to run from them when he saw them, but it wasn't for the reasons they thought.

He tried to run because he was given a ransom and he wanted to meet it. Ben was sent a photo of Grace with a demand of two hundred thousand dollars. He handed over the photo to the FBI Agents after they stopped him and that changed the nature of the case.

This was now a targeted kidnapping. Someone was targeting Ben by taking his daughter. The team also took it as a good sign that they were given proof of life because, as far as they could see, the child wasn't harmed. She seems to have cut on her leg and that's where the blood on the rock came from. Grace was otherwise fine. The kidnapper told Ben not to tell anyone and so that's why he didn't tell the FBI right away.

He also knew they suspected him. Ben said that what happened all those years ago wasn't like the prosecutor said. Ben went to that camp on scholarship and girls like Lucky Parkin reminded him everyday that he wasn't wanted there. He tried to go on walks to escape the taunting. Lucy followed him one day and all he did was shove her. He didn't mean to shove her off the edge of that cliff.

Ben never meant to kill anyone. He just wanted to start over and he did. He went to college where he met his wife Rhonda and they got married and they had Grace. They also started great careers. Ben was happy until this. He told his wife about the ransom demand and both of them were worried. They were told not to involve the police and so they told the FBI they didn't want their help.

Maggie still her number with them in case they changed their minds. She and her team didn't just drop the case because of what the parents demanded. They checked out Ben's life and they found a SNY electrical company van following him. They traced this van back to someone who works with the company and that person's name is Ray Parkin.

Ray was Lucy's brother. He kidnapped Grace because he blames Ben for ruining his life and he has a good reason to believe so. His family collapsed after his sister died. His mother committed suicide and Ray fell head first into drugs and alcohol. There was no telling what Ray would do to Grace in revenge for Lucy's death. The FBI went to his home and they found his junkie roommate.

The roommate told them everything. He said Ray talked about his sister's killer for years and that he saw him one day at court. He saw how Corbin Howard was now a hotshot attorney. He followed Ben and he began stalking him. There was a camera at the apartment full of photos of Ben's family. The team were genuinely worried Ray might try to kill Grace and so they forced Ben to tell his wife about his past.

Ben didn't want to do it. He only chose to do it because he knew the FBI would do it for him if he didn't and so he finally told Rhonda this dark secret. He told her how it had all been an accident. He never meant to kill Lucy. He hasn't seen her brother in over twenty years and still she blamed him. Rhonda was so upset that she snuck away and tried to meet the ransom demand on her own.

Maggie and OA heard her car as she was peeling away. They alerted the rest of their team and together they all tried to find Rhonda before she was killed. Rhonda didn't understand how unstable Ray was. She went to that meeting and Ray pulled a gun on her. He never planned on returning the little girl. He asked Ben to be at the meeting because he wanted to kill Ben and so luckily the FBI were there to stop him from killing Rhonda.

They killed Ray. They also used their Crimes Against Children database to track down the hotel room from the proof of life photo and they didn't find Grace at the hotel room. Ray had moved her. The team looked everywhere and they couldn't find her at any of the locations that Ray had been scouting, but they did find her in the trunk of Ray's roommate's car. Grace was fine. She was found alive and she was later returned to her parents. There were going to be issues between Ben and Rhonda only there was hope for them and their family now that they've been reunited with their daughter.

Maggie later went on another date with Nestor and things ended with Maggie going back to her place alone. She just couldn't understand why Nestor would hide such a big part of his life from her.

They head in and arrest him. Meanwhile, Maggie, OA, and Nestor raid the club from the night before. It appears the warehouse with the man and the liquid is a bomb-making operation.

They take in a gang member named Clint. He isn't willing to talk. After some digging, they realize he is aligned with an anti-government group. They also realize that he has been working with another man on blowing up part of the city with a bomb.

They head there. They get their man. OA runs to find the bomb. Maggie calls the mom squad and runs in after OA. They find the bomb and have 2 minutes. Nestor drags the suspect in to defuse it when they cannot. OA pleads for Maggie to leave but she won't. The suspect finally tells them how to shut it down with 3 seconds to go. They all breathe a sigh of relief.

That night Nestor tells Maggie they are headed to dinner but then brings her to the apartment they looked at. He signed the lease. She gets upset. He is rushing her. She breaks up with him. He is dumbfounded.

Tiffany and Scola are called to headquarters. Jubal updates the team about a congressman named Logan Reed who was shot in the head at his home. Scola, Tiffany, OA, and Maggie arrive at the scene. The gather came through the backyards of the neighborhood in a hoodie. Inside the home, OA and Maggie talk to Reed's wife. She tells them about a protest that broke out in front of their home last week. It was mainly African Americans which surprised her because he was a minority advocate.

Back at the office, Jubal and the others try to figure out why the protest took place and why the protesting group thought Reed was a hypocrite. They run recent street video footage of those who have been protesting and see someone who is suspect by the last name of Thomas. Tiffany is upset the suspect of color was put on a watch list for breaking curfew. She feels like he was targeted. She heads out to find the man with Scola.

At a rally, Thomas refuses to come into the station. They cuff him and bring him in for questioning. Thomas has an alibi. The team learns of another shooting with the same MO as the Reed case. They learn it is the same shooter. Scola and Tiffany head to talk to the second victim's mother. She tells them Marcus had no enemies but didn't like the local police and the way they treated the neighborhood.

She guesses a cop killed him. Just days ago Marcus was beaten up by an off-duty cop. They call into headquarters. The IT team finds street footage of the incident and some plates of a car at the scene. The plate belongs to a career criminal and white nationalist with the last name of McGowan. The team works to locate him. Meanwhile, Scola and another female from the team get into a dispute that McGowan didn't make the watch list but Thomas did. Jubal pulls Tiffany aside and tells her she was out of line.

OA and Maggie head to a local bar. They ask around for McGowan and find his mother before McGowan shows up. He sees them and runs. Back at headquarters, the team finally figures out the connection of the two victims to McGowan. Marcus testified against a fellow friend while Reed used some of the cases in his election videos.

Out looking for McGowan, OA and Maggie locate him. He runs again bringing them on a wild chase until Scola and Tiffany corner him. They take him in. While questioning him another murder occurs. Jubal comes to tell OA and Maggie. They realize the real murderer is still on the loose.

Scola and Tiffany head to the scene and ask witnesses about this latest murder. They ID McGowan's car parked at the crime scene. They go back to McGowan who says he can park his car anywhere. They ask him about his guns before heading to his home to see one is missing. Someone else is using his gun as he has been in custody. They realize it is his mother.

OA and Maggie head to locate McGowan's mom but she is already on the run and most likely not done killing yet. Back at headquarters, the team looks for possible places the mom might be headed when they really she is most likely headed to a vigil for Thomas.

Tiffany asks them to take off their FBI vests before entering the vigil. They do before heading in. Meanwhile, Jubile and the team get aerial video footage of the area to try and find the distraught mother. OA and Maggie move in on the ground when she is located. When they arrive she is gone. Scola and Tiffany locate her. Tiffany jumps on her before she can shoot Thomas' daughter. Tiffany saves her life.

Scola and Tiffany have a drink after the case. Tiffany talks about standing up for and doing what is right with integrity.

Summary:	After a bomb leaves three people dead, the team presses a reluctant informant to gather information from his close friends who are under suspicion.

Someone planted a car bomb. The car bomb was pinned to a car that was airing an anti-capitalistic message and the message played over and over again until the bomber detonated the bomb. Three people were killed and they could have been targets.

Mike Heller worked in Real Estate. Janet White was a Nurse. Benjamin Lopez was a law student. The three victims were all different races with different backgrounds and so they could have been targeted however odds are the three were in the wrong place at the wrong time. The FBI was called in for this case and they found a suspect fairly fast. They found a Nicholas Katz. Katz was loitering in the neighborhood and he sent a text moments before the bomb went off.

Katz was a political science professor at the New School. He was a radical liberal and so the team came to suspect he detonated the bomb to prove a message. They later hit his apartment. They found him listening to music and Katz had been scared to see them. Only that was typical fear.

Katz was scared the way anyone would be if someone came bursting through their door and he wasn't their terrorist. Katz had been waiting in the neighborhood for his ex-girlfriend. They were supposed to meet for dinner and she never showed. He sent her a text he was leaving. He then turned around when he saw a suspicious man in the neighborhood and that man went running once the bomb went off.

Katz hadn't said anything or reported it because the man that went running was Muslim. Katz said he hadn't wanted to contribute to Anti-Muslim hate and he was only mentioning it now to get himself out of trouble. The team went looking for this mystery man.

They thought they found him in security footage and instead they found Salem. Salem had boosted the car. He sold the car to a man he says looks like a Muslim only he couldn't tell for sure and so the team asked him where he delivered the car. He gave them an address. He also told them that he grabbed food from a nearby Muslim restaurant and this restaurant was on the watchlist. The owner of the restaurant was someone that the feds have been watching for a while now.

The feds even have an inside guy. Vega Assad lives in the neighborhood and he knows the owner of the restaurant. The feds have him because Vega is in the country illegally. He was originally from Syria and he hasn't delivered on his end. He hasn't given the feds any big tip. They were thinking of deporting him if he didn't help and so this case gave Vega an opportunity.

It was his last chance at staying in the country. They thought Vega would be pleased and he was anything but. Vega hates being an informant. He feels like a traitor to his own people and so he doesn't understand how OA could do this job. He called OA a traitor. OA was a Muslim man who worked with the feds to investigate other Muslims and so Vega doesn't see the good that OA does.

Vega doesn't see how the people in the neighborhood will be fine if they were innocent. All he sees is an "us" and a "them". Vega had to be convinced to help by his lawyer. His lawyer just happened to be dating OA. OA's girlfriend Mona Nazari left the District Attorney's Office to join a smaller firm and now she's representing people like Vega.

Vega had stolen items from a 7/Eleven and that's what got him into trouble. He's now on the hook for whatever the cops or the feds wanted. Vega has to do what they say or he gets deported. He hadn't liked that. He hadn't liked spying and, even after he had been convinced, he was still reluctant. Vega wore a wire. He went into the restaurant under suspicion and he met with the owner. He met with Hassan.

Hassan had liked Vega. The two men talked about their shared experience of being profiled and Hassan even admitted to Vega that he had wired his whole restaurant with advanced security. Hassan hadn't been able to finish his conversation with Vega because he had gotten called away. However, Vega used that chance to leave the restaurant and he told the feds that he wasn't going to help them anymore.

He said he considered suicide in order to get out of his deal with them. Vega also added how willing he was to be deported back to Syria and the civil war. He wasn't going to keep watch over Hassan. He told OA and Maggie that he was out and so OA chose to cover for him. He passed on the information that Hassan has an advanced security system and he made it look like a tip from Vega.

The only one who knew the truth was Maggie. Maggie chose to cover for her partner and so the team made sure to get their hands on those security feeds. It turns out the footage revealed the real bomber and he wasn't Muslim. He was a white dude. He lost his job, his marriage, and his kids because he had something of a breakdown during the lockdown. Phillip Stafford was his name.

He has curly dark hair and a beard and that's how people came to mistake him as being a Muslim man when he wasn't. He was just white. He blamed the whole world for his life imploding and so that's why he started planting the bomb. The feds tried to use his ex-wife into luring him into a trap, but Phillip saw through that and he gave a man his valuables to pass on a message to her.

The message blamed her for everything. It also talked about how rigged the system is and so the feds rushed to find him before he could snap. They found him outside of the place he was staying. He had a gun and he threatened to turn it on his nephews. So, Stuart was forced to shoot him. It brought the case to a quick close and things should have ended there except they didn't.

OA's bosses found out about Vega pulling out. Vega did this after they stopped him from being deported and they had even gotten him a job. If he wants to be ungrateful, he can be deported. OA and Maggie went sent to go arrest Vega and now he gets what he wanted. He gets to go home to Syria.

Summary: When a political reporter is kidnapped and held without a ransom demand, the team must dig into her past relationships in order to pin down her assailant's motive. Also, Isobel's relationship comes under fire when the case makes a connection to her boyfriend, Ethan.

A journalist was taken. She was kidnapped right off the street. She was out alone one night. She was walking down the street when a man in a mask came up behind her and he told her not to speak or he'd kill her. Addie Ricard didn't listen to him. She tried to tell him she had money in her purse. She even tried to beg for her life and, when she saw a pedestrian nearby, she shouted for help.

Her kidnapper shot at the witness. He also put Addie into the trunk of a car and he drove away before help could arrive or even be called. The kidnapper knew what he was doing. He had everything prepared for when he grabbed her and so this wasn't random. He knew he was kidnapping Addie. Addie was a political journalist at the New York Times and she might have won enemies for the articles she writes. She does after all work for a "liberal" paper.

The FBI was called at the moment the cops realized they were dealing with an organized kidnapping. Maggie and OA were first on the scene and they spoke to the witness. He saw that the trunk had been opened before the kidnapper got to it and so the kidnapper really did preplan this.

However, Addie hasn't received any new threats in the past few months. She was seeing someone and she hadn't felt comfortable with revealing this man's name to loved ones. She was keeping her boyfriend a secret for now. It could have been the boyfriend that had something to do with this though he wouldn't have needed a mask and he could have gotten Addie when she was alone and not outside where anyone could be watching.

The FBI didn't think the boyfriend was a big deal. They instead chose to focus on Addie's career as a journalist and what articles she might have been writing right before she was taken. They wanted to see if she had come across a scandal or a possible scoop. They went looking into her contacts and they noticed that she had been speaking to Ethan. Ethan happens to be dating Special Agent in Charge Isobel Castille.

He was with her when Addie was taken and so it couldn't have been him that grabbed her. Only a paparazzi had gotten photos of Ethan and Addie speaking. It was quite a heated conversation and it could have had something to do with Ethan's boss. Ethan was Chief of Staff to Senator Walter Hoffman.

Ethan was called down to the FBI building. They questioned him about his involvement with Addie and it said it was professional. It turns out Addie was dating his boss the senator. The senator was married but he has been separated for the last six months and so it wasn't as scandalous as it could be.

Addie and Ethan only got into an argument because he just found out about the affair. He asked her to be quiet while he arranges things and she didn't like that. She thought he was coming in between her and the senator. Addie saw the senator earlier that night and he had given her a birthday present. He gave her a smartwatch. The watch has a data plan and so the FBI was able to track it.

It led them to a homeless encampment. They found a homeless man with the watch and he claimed he found it. The feds asked him where. He gave them a location and went there. Only they didn't find Addie. They found a chair that had ropes nearby and there was fresh blood on the ground. They knew the blood was fresh because it hadn't started to dry yet. This means that Addie was either just killed there or she was injured.

Her kidnapper wasn't interested in a ransom. Addie's family and work were not contacted for a ransom and so this kidnapper had his own reasons for taking Addie. The feds questioned the homeless guy again. They asked him what else he saw the day he got the watch and he apparently saw a man in a mask carrying a woman over his shoulder.

The woman was bleeding out. The homeless guy didn't want any trouble and so he hid until the masked man left. He then went into the building where he found the watch. The guy didn't report it because he felt it wasn't his business and so the feds had him checked for DNA while they continued their search for Addie. They later traced the building as well as the kidnapper back to Viktor and Sergei Branislav. Sergei was in the real estate business and he had a connection to Senator Hoffman. Hoffman went directly from his interview at the FBI to meeting up with Sergei. He seems to have warned him and that's when Addie was moved from the warehouse. The FBI came to believe the senator arranged for his mistress to be murdered.

Only this created an issue. Isobel was seeing the senator's chief of staff and the risk she wouldn't be impartial. Isobel tried to arrange for a second interview with the senator, but he had lawyered up and Isobel wasn't sure if she could trust Ethan. Ethan is claiming he has no idea what's going on. He told Isobel he didn't know why his boss had called for a lawyer and he doesn't know what happened to Addie.

She was still missing. She was last seen bleeding out and so finding her was more important than ever. The feds couldn't use the senator, so they had to use Sergei. They cloned Sergei's phone. They pretended someone broke into his building and that they needed his cooperation to determine if anything was stolen. And that got them close enough to Sergei to clone his phone.

The feds searched Sergei's phone history. They found he had recently spoken to Ethan and so Ethan was asked to come back to the federal building. They wanted to question him again. Isobel was supposed to have sat this one out and she just couldn't. She went into the interview room.

She demanded the truth and that's when Ethan said that the senator had been contacted by the kidnapper. Or at least that's what he'd been told. Ethan said his boss told him that the kidnapper contacted him for a ransom and that this person was threatening to kill Addie if he went to the authorities. Ethan thought he was doing the right thing by not saying anything. He had nothing to do with either Sergei or his nephew.

Ethan gives his phone to the senator to sometimes use. Isobel spoke to Ethan and she told him her suspicions. She also asked him for help. She wanted him to wear a wire with the senator and at first, he said no. He didn't want to risk his career over this. But somehow Isobel convinced him to do the right thing. Ethan wore a wire when he confronted his boss. He demanded to know what was going on and the senator told him everything. T he senator had passed inside information to Sergei. It was an illegal real estate deal. It also went bust because the secret information had turned out to be false and so Sergei wanted revenge. He kidnapped Addie in retaliation. He wanted back the money he lent the senator on the basis of this deal going through and so the senator has to pay the ransom.

If he didn't, Addie would be killed. Ethan pretended he could get the FBI off the senator's back and all along the feds were following the senator during the ransom drop. They followed him to a park where he met with Sergei. Both men were arrested and Addie was found in a trunk nearby. She was saved. She was saved because Ethan turned on his boss but Ethan hadn't liked doing that and so he later moved out of the apartment he shared with Isobel.

Production Code: FBI310
Summary: Animal masks are worn by two robbers hitting cheque-cashing facilities, the FBI teams up (one very reluctantly) with NYPD to track down leads but the investigation goes in a shocking direction for some in both Agencies.

A group wearing animal masks committed armed robbery. They robbed a check-cashing store. They were in the middle of their latest robbery when the security guard came in to start his shift and he tried to fire at the robbers. One of them shot the security guard.

The victim was Howard Kirkland and the cashing store was his second job while his main job was as a security guard at the federal building. He was therefore a federal employee. His murder became a case for the FBI and the team was taking his death personally. They all knew Kirkland. They've spoken with him on many occasions and they knew Kirkland put off his retirement after his wife got sick because he needed the money. And so this to happen to his family couldn't have come at the worst time.

His wife Betsy had been outside when her husband was killed. She was dropping him off for work and so she was one of the first told about her husband. She had been a wreck when Stuart found her. Stuart was a friend of the family's and he comforted Betsy, but he also made enemies out of the cops at the scene.

NYPD Detectives Frank Dixon and Roger Palmer were assigned this case and at first, Tiffany was happy because Frank was her former TO. She, therefore, held a great amount of respect for him. Only she noticed Stuart didn't feel the same. Stuart was known to treat NYPD as less than. He often dismisses them and Tiffany called him out on it. She asked him why he didn't have respect for them.

Stuart didn't think he was being disrespectful. His encounter with her former training officer was not the first time Tiffany has to witness him being dismissive of NYPD and that's why she finally said something. She was a former NYPD. She still holds great respect for the many men and women that still work there and she kept the detectives apprised of all their movements with the case. She even notified them after they got ready for a takedown. She and the FBI had found the woman that went into the case the place and they followed the clues this woman later gave them. She was a stripper who had been hired to wear a special necklace that had cameras in it. She didn't know names or anything. All she could describe was the man she dealt with and the tattoo of a moon on his hand.

The FBI used this information to find the robbers, but there was an issue because their robbers weren't the ones who killed their friend. The group that did that were copycats. Someone had spotted the pattern that the real robbers were using and they tried to copy it when Kirkland was killed. The FBI also realized something else.

They rewatched security footage of their copycats and the copycats had been using earpieces tuned into the police scanner. It was an encrypted channel. Meaning that only cops knew the code to the scanner and so the greatest suspects for the copycat robbery were cops. Tiffany later told Stuart that he was probably going to use this to justify his hatred of cops. And he told her that he doesn't hate cops.

Stuart just wanted justice for Kirkland. He and Tiffany were told not to inform the NYPD about their newest angle they were working and so the two of them went checking out masks. They wanted to see who bought masks recently. They checked out several stores and they found the right one.

The woman that ran the place recognized Detective Roger Palmer. She said he came in to buy the same masks that were used in the robbery and it made sense. He was working the armed robbery case for weeks and it went nowhere. Neither Palmer nor his partner ever identified the robbers while the FBI found them in a day. Stuart believes that Dixon must be in on it as well and Tiffany shot that down. She said Dixon would never do something like this.

Tiffany felt vindicated when the techies confirmed Dixon was too tall for the other suspect in the video. Only Stuart still felt Dixon was covering for Palmer and so he later questioned him with Tiffany. The two of them asked about Palmer's alibi. He was supposed with his partner across town when the robbery went down and so they g ave Dixon the opportunity to walk back however it doubled down on the lie and he realized that they were interrogating him. Dixon demanded to know what was going on. Stuart said they couldn't say because of a pending matter. Tiffany felt they should have explained to Dixon what was going on and she also added that if they treated him as an equal that he would have been more cooperative.

Palmer had his phone off during the robbery. Why would he do that if he was supposedly working a case across town? The FBI used that same MO to find the other copycat. His name is Kyle Webb. He was a detective with the Bronx police department and he too had his phone off during what should have been a normal shift on duty.

Webb wasn't that bright. He didn't have a partner to vouch for him and so the FBI picked him as the weakest link. They leaned on him. They questioned him and he didn't break at first. He ended up running straight to Palmer afterward and the two were overheard (via a listening device) talking about how the guns were in "the Melt". The Melt was a nickname for the NYPD destruction of property after a certain number of years.

The FBI later found both guns used in the copycat robbery in the Melt. Both could be traced back to Webb and his fingerprints were the only ones found on it. The FBI moved in to arrest Webb for the part he played in the robbery, but they found him dead in his car, and there went their plans of using him to take down Palmer. There wasn't even any evidence connecting Palmer to the robbery or Webb's death. The only one that could talk now was Dixon.

Tiffany had Dixon brought in and she told him the truth. She told him his partner is wanted for robbery and murder. She also showed him a video of Palmer telling Webb not to talk. She knew this would affect Dixon and she was right. Dixon stopped covering for Palmer the moment he knew Palmer was dirty.

Dixon even told them that Palmer came in late on the morning Webb was killed. Stuart and Tiffany later arrested Palmer and they got justice for Kirkland, but there was a question regarding Dixon. Do they report him for originally falsifying records or do they drop it? Stuart chose to drop it because the case was closed and no one else deserved to get hurt.

Summary: After a man is killed by an explosive package shipped to his home, the team attempts to capture the sender and intercept his latest deadly parcel. Also, Maggie tries to trust her younger sister, Erin, is truly staying out of trouble as a new college student in NYC.

The episode begins with a package delivered to Harry Lasher's home and an explosive is inside that blows up when his husband, Russell Griffin is near it and is blown to bits. Harry is a cop, he runs the firearm task force. Harry got some cuts, but he is ok.

Maggie is with her sister when they bump into OA. Maggie tells her to call dad, and when she goes to hug her she smells smoke on her and asks if she is smoking. Her sister says she hangs out with people who smoke, Maggie says ok, then says goodbye.

Maggie goes to tell Harry that she is sorry for his loss. Then she asks him if he was getting any threats, ex-lovers. Harry says no but his unit has been pressing hard on some anti-government groups, domestic terror cells, and about six weeks ago that stirred up some house. The guys he arrested, are patriots that were traitors. He says you always know something can happen to you on the job but he never thought they would get Russell.

Jubal updates the team, he tells them that Henry was the target. He is one of them and it pisses him off. The explosive was a basic pipe bomb with perchloric. Jubal says they need to know where someone can get that. They have a video of the package when it was dropped off at the post office, but it is hard to get facial recognition.

Six weeks ago Lasher arrested eight guys who stole weapons from the national guard base. The leaders were two brothers named Hudson. The father, Daniel Hudson has been making noise, he posted a couple of videos where he asks people to donate to his cause, they watch it and he says his sons are in jail while the man who arrested them is in his nice suburban home. They are going to show Hudson's photo around to see if anyone recognizes him in the neighborhood.

Maggie and OA go see Hudson and ask him why he was in Lasher's neighborhood, to neighbors recognized him. He says he went there to confront him, but he was not there, so he never got out of his truck and never spoke to him. When the bomb went off, he was in the clinic getting chemo, he has kidney cancer. His alibi checks out and he gives them his donor list.

One donor a week ago mentioned Lasher specifically, it is singed FB33 — they are going to speak to the company who hosted the video.

There is another video of the guy who dropped off the package at the post office, he has dropped off another package. They get a shipping address for the second package, it was going to a guy named Adam Wessfall but he is out of town. They find a postal delivery man, he has the package in his truck. It looks like the battery inside is leaking, they move everyone away as far as they can. The bomb explodes and people get thrown around.

At the station, they look at video surveillance of where the second bomb goes off and it looks like the guy who mailed it at the postal office was there. Same height, same posture, and the distance between the eyes is the same and he has the same shoes. They see him drop a cigarette, they will be able to get a DNA sample.

Maggie is tracking her sister, OA tells her that is a little hardcore. Maggie says she is keeping an eye on her, she just wants to make sure she is ok and it is complicated.

When they run DNA on the cigarette, they get a partial match in the genealogy database. Not the bomber but someone who is related to him, Mark Fraser. They bring him in and he asked if he would know someone in his family could be related to the crime. He says he doesn't know what to tell them. He tells them that his older brother, Richard, was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenic years ago.

When he is stable, he is a brilliant mathematician. But the Covid lockdown has been hard, he has gotten worse. He has tried to speak to him, but he gets angry and won't talk to him now. He thinks FB stands for Frodo Baggins. His brother doesn't see reality as they do. He thinks robots are trying to control his mind and he needs medical care. He tells them that his family has a vacation home in Long Island, but nobody has been there in over a year.

OA and Maggie head to the vacation home to see if they can find Richard, he is not there, but someone has been there. Maggie gets a text from her sister Erin who is annoyed that she keeps texting her to check to see if she is ok. Maggie has picked up a box and is warned by OA that the place is booby-trapped, they need to get out of there and let the bomb squad check the place.

There were three booby traps, they decide to bring the brother back in and track his phone. Maggie thanks OA for catching that, she was distracted. She says she is worried about Erin, she can't stop thinking about it. He tells her she is young and just moved to NY, she has to leave her alone. Maggie says she is young and naïve, she is worried that she is going to do something stupid.

Jubal updates the team on Richard, he stopped going to therapy a month ago. Maggie tells OA that her sister is downstairs, she has to go. Erin tells her she is there in person because she sounded really worked up. Erin says she understands why she is worried, but she is fine. Maggie asks why she skipped her classes, Erin says to go to a new restaurant with friends. Maggie says her eyes look glassy to her.

Erin says she was up to four in the morning studying, she can't follow her around and track her, she can't live like that. Maggie says she is just trying to care for her. Erin knows that, but she is good and she wants Maggie to stop. Maggie says she is sorry, she probably overstepped. Maggie has to go, Erin leaves.

They can't get Mark Fraser, he left work and was going homesick, but he never went there. They track him, he is in Times Square and has been there for a while. The team heads there and sees Mark sitting on the stairs in the middle of Time Square, he has a bag in his hand. Mark notices the FBI and starts walking faster. They catch him, he drops the bag. He is handcuffed, the bag was filled with cigarettes and Maggie sees Richard nearby. Maggie and OA are running after Richard, he heads up 42nd street and they lose him.

Back at the station, Mark tells them that he was trying to help his brother because when law enforcement deals with the mentally ill they all know how it ends. His brother called him to tell him that he was dying today, and he wanted to say goodbye. He went to meet him to calm him down.

They found security footage of Richard heading downtown by subway, they need to find what else Mark knows before more people are killed. Maggie goes back into the room, she talks about her sister, how she went to rehab and is now clean and she is trying to get her life back and she is always worried and wants to know if she is ok.

She tries to connect with Mark, tells him that she would do anything for her sister and she knows deep down he would do anything for his brother Richard. The longer he is un-treated the worst his odds. Mark says he didn't make any sense, he said he had to kill Aurora. Trevor finds out that Lasher's team used a beta version of Aurora on the Hudson case. Adam Wessfall was part of the original design team. Richard is paranoid that computers are replacing humans. Aurora was developed in NYU and Richard got off the subway just near there, it must be the next target.

OA and Maggie are at NYU, Richard was there and wanted to get in, but his ID was expired and he was turned away. They start looking around and Maggie sees Richard near the fence. He starts walking, OA shouts out his name and runs after him. They get into a chase, Richard goes inside a restaurant. He has a bag in his hand and says everyone needs to stay back, he has a bomb. OA tells Richard to calm down and take a deep breath. People sneak out of the restaurant on the side, but one man is trapped near Richard and he tells the FBI if they come close, he will set it off.

Richard says that Aurora has a spirit and it is hostile, Maggie says ok she is getting it but it is a lot to take on, he must be tired, she would be. They have a clear shot, Maggie offers Richard a cigarette, she tells him that he is welcome to have them. She slides the cigarettes over, he puts down the bag and goes to reach for them, which gives OA enough time to jump him and they don't have to shoot him.

Mark drops by and thanks to Maggie for dealing with Richard the way she did today, it means a great deal to him. He says there were signs, he saw for years, before Richard was diagnosed. He ignored it because he didn't want to face the stress and emotion, he looked away. If he had done something, said something, he would have had medication sooner, got help, and maybe that man would still be alive, he is sorry. OA walks him out.

Maggie drops by to see her sister who tells her to ignore the mess. Maggie asks her where it is, whatever she is using. Maggie starts going through her things, Erin tells her she can't do that. Maggie starts going through her drawers. Maggie finds it, inside her sister's jean pocket. She tells Maggie it is aspirin, she had a headache. Erin then tells her she is messed up and she is sorry. Erin starts crying and says it is so much harder than she thought it was going to be and asks her not to tell mom and dad. Maggie says she loves her and she is there for all of it. She called the rehab center, there is space for her, and she will take her there tonight if she is ready. Erin says ok.

The episode begins with Dr. Adam Lee and Dr. Nicole Wright coming out of the hospital. Adam hails a cab when a car comes out of nowhere, a masked man comes out with a gun, hits Adam on the head and knocks him out, grabs Dr. Wright, and puts her in the trunk of the car.

Jubal is in a café with Samantha and finds out that Tyler has been sick the past few days. He has been vomiting and running a high fever, his eyes are really bloodshot. The pediatrician ran a blood test and said it looked concerning, Tyler should see a specialist, a gastroenterologist. The good news is, Allan knows a guy, the best in the city and they have an appointment later in the day. He gets a call, he has a case, Samantha tells him to go, it is probably nothing. The appointment is at 3 pm, Jubal says he is going with her.

Omar, Maggie, and Jubal are on the scene where Dr. Wright was abducted, her purse with her cell phone in it is on the ground. Nicole came from money, the FBI thinks there is going to be a ransom demand. On a traffic cam, they get a visual of the car taken off with Nicole in it, there is an EZ pass sticker, it is registered to Dr. Lucas Caldwell, who has a private practice in Manhattan. Isobel says he is a person of interest, bring him in. When the team arrives at Caldwell's residence, they find the door ajar. Inside, the house is clear. He left his phone and his wallet.

Isobel sees Jubal distracted, she asks him what is wrong, he says his son is sick, he is sure he is fine. He says she is good, she wants to show him a video they got from Caldwell's house.

It turns out, Dr. Caldwell was abducted as well, he isn't a suspect, he is a victim as well. The two doctors don't appear to know each other at all, one works in an operating room, the other doesn't, they don't live in the same area, they are not the same ages. Isobel says they could have been targeted, not for who they are, but for what they do.

Dr. Caldwell, an internist, has a partner, Dr. Nelson, an anesthesiologist, but he was in a car accident, he is in the hospital in an induced coma. They started the concierge practice together. The two have been getting a lot of calls in the past two weeks from Lorenzo Santos, he has been in and out of jail for the past few years and has a connection with a gang called Locos 25.

The team goes to look for Santos, he is in front of a laundromat with another man and it looks like a dope deal going down. The moment Santos sees the FBI he runs and isn't careful, he gets hit by a truck. Meanwhile, the team is still searching for the man that was with him, Stuart takes him down. The man has an injury to his side and a pile of cash on him. Tiffany asks where he got the money, he says he sold his kidney.

An ambulance arrives, the man, Pedro, says he sold his kidney to Santos, he needed the money. He says his friend sold Santos a kidney last month. They do the procedure at a private clinic. Tiffany shows him photos of Dr. Wright and Dr. Caldwell, he recognizes Caldwell as being the one who took his kidney. Caldwell and Nelson had a side hustle going, doing illegal organ transplants until Nelson gets into a serious accident, so this is why Dr. Wright was kidnapped, she is an anesthesiologist.

They've got something, looks like Pedro's labs were cross-matched with a patient named Tony Diaz, twelve years old lives in Queens. His father is Octavio Diaz, 43 years old, and they're on a temporary visa while he applies for asylum. He is a high-ranking officer, he will be killed if sent back. Stuart and Tiffany head over to Octavio's house, his wife is there, she says her son couldn't get on the recipient list because they have insurance, he is twelve years old and he is going to die. She won't tell them anything, Tiffany tells her she is under arrest. At the station, they do some more digging and find out that Dr. Caldwell owns another building, that could be where they are doing the illegal procedures.

The team heads to the building, they have found what they were looking for, there is an operation ongoing. Jubal is on the scene when he sees Samantha is calling. He goes outside and tells her he is sorry he couldn't make it. She looks pretty upset, she tells him that she will text him back when she gets the results.

Inside the building, Octavio is a desperate father, he has Dr. Wright and Dr. Caldwell at gunpoint performing the surgery on his son. Jubal is afraid to go in because he is armed and more people can get killed. All of a sudden, Octavio sees the FBI outside and starts shooting. A bullet from outside hits Dr. Caldwell and Dr. Wright can't perform the surgery alone. Jubal throws in a phone to speak to Octavio who tells him to get another doctor to replace Caldwell, or he will kill Dr. Wright.

The team brings in Octavio's wife to get her to talk reason to her husband. She tells him that their son needs to get to a hospital or he is going to die. Octavio says no, he doesn't care what happens to him, he wants his son to get his kidney. He tells her that their son is going to need her, he loves her more than she will ever know. She tells the team she tried. Jubal offers to trade himself for Dr. Caldwell, pretend he is a doctor, then talk down Octavio down.

They get Caldwell out on a stretcher, Jubal is going in. Octavio tells Jubal how he came up with the money, he says the day before his son's operation, Dr. Caldwell canceled, he didn't care about his son, only himself, so he did what he had to do. He never wanted to hurt anyone, Jubal says he gets that and he is going to do everything in his power to save his son, Tony. Octavio reaches out and shakes his hand.

Jubal tells him to let the FBI take his son to the hospital and do the procedure right. Jubal keeps getting in the line of fire so the FBI can't take a shot at Octavio. Jubal begs him to trust him, Octavio pulls out his gun and points it at Jubal, he says no and furthermore, if his son dies, he is killing him and Dr. Wright. Jubal gives the signal, Octavio is shot in the head. Tony is rushed to the hospital, Jubal gets the kidney and gives it to Dr. Wright, who tells her she is going to need it.

Jubal gets a call from Samantha, he is stricken with the news, his son has leukemia. The good news is, the doctor says they caught it early, the prognosis is excellent, Jubal leaves.

At home, Jubal sees his son sleeping, he goes in and tells him that he is going to be ok.

The FBI was alerted to a murder that was committed on federal property. Any murder that happens on federal property is considered a federal offense and so the murder of an unknown female was considered their case. Jubal's team got the murder. They quickly ruled out robbery because her purse and cash were found at the scene. But they later identified the body. The victim was identified as Nicole Wyatt and she was a twenty-eight-year-old white woman with no history of criminality. She also attended a breast cancer awareness party on the yacht. She was seen leaving the party early and she had been in the company of another woman and the woman was identified as Julia.

Julia was fifteen. She was still a student and she was also an underage prostitute. Nicole had been her pimp. Nicole arranged for Julia to sleep with men and she freaked after she found out Nicole had been murdered. She went into hiding because she was so scared. Her friend Sophie covered for her. It was Sophie who told the FBI that Julia was scared and that she was hiding. Julia apparently thought she would be murdered next. This case seemed to trouble OA because he remembered a phone call from several weeks ago when he was working the tip line and that call had been about a teenager being prostituted out to rich men. OA pushed the young girl to give up more information but she hung up before she could give anything credible.

OA was now haunted by that phone call. He tried to follow it up with an investigation and he got nowhere because he had gotten no details. Nothing solid, anyways. OA spoke about his situation with Maggie and she told him that he wasn't to blame. Every agent who does the tip line is warned that they could only do so much. OA tried to follow it up and that's more than many would do. OA got nowhere in his previous investigation. In this current investigation, they found out Nicole was being stalked. She was being stalked by a wealthy director who went home with someone else after the party. The guy also mentioned Nicole being followed by a guy dressed in all black and that proved to be useful.

The guy in all black had been following Nicole for a while. His name is Curtis Williams. He's former military and he claims to be a security specialist. What he turned out to be was a hitman. The agents brought in Special Agent Crosby for this case because he knew Williams from their army days and so they thought he could build a rapport with their suspect. Crosby did try to get Williams to give up his weapon but he ended up shooting Crosby and making a run for it. Maggie and OA brought Crosby to the hospital. They also butt heads with his boss who hadn't known Crosby was in the field. Crosby was recently involved in an off-duty shooting. His boss pulled him from the field because he hadn't thought Crosby was fit to return to active duty.

Now, Crosby is in the hospital. His boss used Crosby's situation to later blackmail his shooter and he even pretended that Crosby died. This forced Williams to spill the truth. He had been paid to kill Nicole. He was also paid to kill Julia and he hasn't found her yet. There was a third victim as well. Williams killed the third victim in Budapest. It happened in a foreign country and he was never caught before his flight back to the States. Williams doesn't have names. He never asked for one and he couldn't even describe the man who hired him. The man was wearing a mask for Covid protection during the transaction. Williams couldn't offer any information and so the team looked for a connection between the victims.

All Williams could say is where they met. The team then used security cameras and any possible connections to the victims to find Nathan Tate. He was one of the wealthiest men alive. He was also being blackmailed by Nicole. Nicole trafficked Julia to him and then used the fact he had sex with an underage victim to blackmail him out of a hundred million dollars. It would have been nothing to a man like Tate because he was worth fifty-five billion. He still reached out to the hitman and the hitman identified him by his watch. The watch wasn't enough to bring in Tate. The team went looking for other evidence and they received a call from Julia's mother. Her daughter contacted her.

Julia wanted to meet up with her mother. She only became a prostitute to help pay for her sick mother's treatments and so she naturally reached out to her mother before she left the country. Julia said she had a friend who would take her to an island. She asked her mother to meet her on a corner and her mother showed up with both Maggie and OA, but before they could reach Julia, someone grabbed her and threw her in the back of a car. They chased the car. They used security cameras and they later found Julia. She was shot twice in the chest and left to die. Julia told them about Tate before she died. She also asked OA to find her friend Sunny. Whoever killed her has Sunny.

The manhunt for the killer was given to Crosby's team. They were the best people to find the killer.

Summary: Maggie, OA and the team must stop a hacker who is disabling life-saving equipment in several New York City hospitals, while demanding a full investigation into the recently deceased patients of a local psychiatric facility. With Jubal's son waiting for important surgery at one of the impacted hospitals, Jubal's adamant about remaining involved in the case despite Isobel's reservations.

The episode begins with New York Children's Hospital being hit by a cyber-attack. Some hacker locked the doctors and nurses out of the system and was telling them to await further instructions. FBI Special Agent Jubal Valentine suspected that the hacker or hackers wanted money. However, he was willing to go against the federal policy of refusing to pay ransoms because his son was a patient at the hospital and his son was too sick to be moved. Jubal's son has cancer. Jubal has been doing his best to keep his son's spirits up when the cyber attack happened and the hospital was forced to use their reserve generators to keep the lights on. There were over five hundred children at the hospital. It would be impossible to transfer them all and so the only way forward was to either pay the ransom or find the hacker. And the FBI chose to find the hacker.

New York's Children's Hospital wasn't the only hospital that was hit. Five more hospitals were targeted by the same malware and the FBI soon found out who uploaded the viruses. The person who carried it out was Jason Cook. He was a technology salesman. He was also speaking in a chatroom with some guy when the guy offered twenty grand in bitcoin to follow his instructions and that's what he did. Cook didn't create the software. He merely uploaded it and took his money. He's now claiming he didn't know what the software was going to do. Cook put the software into the system with a USB drive that had been sent to him by his friend and he never saw the person. The person dropped it off at his door and Cook later retrieved it.

Cook was no help to the FBI. The FBI needed to find the person behind the hack and their first clue in doing so was the ransom demand. The hacker didn't demand money. He or she demanded that the FBI find a serial killer. This serial killer was targeting a newly released member of the Burwell Psychiatric Facility. Seven people that were released from the hospital had died and someone reported it to NYPD but they ignored the call because they thought it was from a conspiracy theorist. It wasn't until the FBI started looking into it that they found out there was something there. The seven people that died had no drugs in their system or mark on their bodies. They just died.

There was no investigation into their deaths. The facility they all left had also claimed that not every patient had been sane and so the director tried to claim that some could have committed suicide. Either way, the facility began receiving threatening notes and complaints after Anna Lewis died. Anna didn't have any family. All she had in this world was her best friend and roommate. Her former roommate is Lydia Ryan. Ryan was also a former patient of the facility for her bipolar disorder and she was also a software engineer. Once they knew who she was, they looked for security footage around Cook's house and they found an image of her in the area. The FBI later arrested Ryan.

They also confiscated her computers. Only Ryan told them there was no use because her computers had been wiped and she was the only one that knew how to remove the malware. Ryan also wasn't talking until the murder of her friends had been solved. Ryan had known all six of the deceased. They were friends and she wasn't going to stop her cyberattack until their deaths were solved. The FBI had thought she was paranoid. It was when another former patient of the facility died that they started to believe maybe Ryan could be right. The newest victim was James Oster. His death had looked like an overdose and still, the FBI investigated because of his connection to the facility. And it's a good thing, too.

Oster was murdered. He was injected with potassium chloride which mimics a heart attack and that leaves the system after a certain time. This is why no one found it without knowing what to look for. Special Agent in Charge Isobel Castille ordered that the bodies of the other victims be exhumed and so the feds were testing the remains for the drug but Jubal didn't have time for it. Jubal's son needed surgery. They couldn't do the surgery without getting access to their blood bank and they couldn't move Tyler because it might rupture his spleen. Jubal was told the news by the doctor. He began panicking and so Jubal returned to work. He tried to reason with Ryan. He tried to tell her his son was at risk and she replied that she's gone too far to turn back now.

Ryan wanted the murders solved first. She wasn't going to back down until the murders had been solved and so Jubal used his position to lean on the facility in order to get the patient records. It was illegal. He could get in trouble for it and he didn't care. He was solely focused on saving his son. Jubal's actions got the FBI the records they needed and they found their suspect. His name is John Maguire. It wasn't the only name he's known by. Maguire's late father has schizophrenia-like all the victims and he died of a suspected heart attack. Like all of the victims, John clearly murdered his father first and then he started killing people. He had worked at a hospital until he was reported because his patients kept dying with unusual frequency.

Then he started working at the psychiatric facility. People began dying two weeks after he started working there and he was only an administrative assistant at the facility. There was no reason for him to access the patient files weeks after their release. He also harassed them while at the facility. Several patients complained of someone telling them they weren't going to get better or undermining them. They also complained about Maguire. They said he was asking intrusive questions about them and the director of the facility knew this. He dismissed it as paranoia. Again, the victims all suffered from schizophrenia. They wouldn't be believed. Their allegations wouldn't hold wait against a seemingly rational person.

It's how Maguire was getting away with it all. They couldn't arrest him at his home because he wasn't home and he wasn't at work. He called out sick. He's been doing that each and every time he was going to murder someone. They tracked his phone. They found him outside of his latest victim's house and they were able to stop him before he was murdered again. They just weren't able to arrest him. He escaped. They were later found near the airport. Tiffany and Scola got cornered him and they were forced to kill him once he got a hold of Tiffany's gun.

Maguire was dead. He confessed before he died that he was "helping" his victims achieve peace and so they told Ryan what happened but she didn't believe them because she thought it was a trick and the only way to get through to her was for Maggie to reveal her own sister suffers from a mental illness. This got Ryan to trust her. Ryan freed the hospitals from the malware. But it was too late for one patient. An eleven-year-old girl died because her monitors were working and so Ryan was going to be charged with murder.

Production Code: FBI403
Summary: After the team finds a connection between bombings at government agencies and a private veterans' club in New York City, Isobel tells OA to recruit his former Army buddy, Chris, for intel since he spends time at the club. However, knowing the difficulty soldiers like Chris often face returning to civilian life, OA is reluctant to follow orders.

Someone set off an IED at the federal courthouse in NYC. The bomb was hidden inside of a childhood's backpack and neither the son nor his mother was suspects in the bombing. The boy was Evan Rose. He was just a kid. He was five years old and he couldn't be a terrorist. His mother Stacey Rose was in fact an AUSA. There was no way she would be involved. With both people having access to the backpack being ruled out, it begged the question of how the bomber got to the backpack. The mother and son had stopped on their way to the courthouse. They stopped at a vegan donut shop around the corner. The FBI secured surveillance footage of the two of them ordering their breakfast and they spotted the man who swapped his bomb with the real backpack.

The bomber must have known the mother and son's routine. He had a fake backpack of the same make and model and he carried a bomb. He then waited to switch it out. He also kept an eye on the situation close enough to detonate it with a remote. The bomber could possibly be connected to another bombing that happened in New Jersey. The other time had been an IRS building. The bomber at that time had been a suicide bomber and he died after setting it off. The bomber that time was Dawkins. He was a former military. The newest bomber turned out to be Ryan Davis and he was also a former military. The team was able to track don Davis thanks to the surveillance footage and they arrested him.

But they couldn't get him to talk. Davis was close-mouthed and he didn't want to even acknowledge he knew the other bomber and so the FBI looked for a connection between the two. One besides their military record. The two men were connected to a place called Garrison Lodge. It's a club for vets and it was so tight-knit that the ATF couldn't infiltrate it or prove that it was front for a gunrunner. All they had were suspicions. OA had a connection to the group. An old friend of his from the military was a member and this friend had needed a favor from him and so he reached out. He called up Chris Zapata. Zapata told him about the group. He also mentioned that Dawkins and Davis were on the fringes of the group.

The only ones those two hung out with were the owner. Nick Hawthorne was a vet and he owned the lodge and worked there. The FBI went to his house. They went through it and checked everything. There were no signs of a conspiracy or any bomb materials there. Hawthorne also denied any connections to the bombings although he did admit he understood where the bombers were coming from. Many vets struggle with coming back home. They face homelessness, addiction, and PTSD. There also wasn't a lot of support for vets on the homefront. The VA was a joke. The IRS came for Dawkins for being unable to pay his bills and Davis took issue when three of his friends were facing charges from the AUSA for holding up a doctor for prescription drugs.

The same drugs that the doctor gave to them like candy at first. Which created the addiction and the vets were unable to sustain it. The vets were angry. They were lashing out and Hawthorne was telling them what to do. He was a planner. Only he couldn't be the person making the bombs and so he had someone working for him. The team needed to plant a listening device at the Lodge. OA was asked to lean on his old friend Chris and, when he tried to protest, his boss gave him a direct order. Isobel was receiving a lot of pressure from DC. They wanted the conspiracy on federal buildings to come to an end and her bosses weren't going to take the answer that they had Chris and didn't use him.

OA turned to Chris. Chris didn't want to participate in the beginning and so OA showed him a photo of one of the victims. He showed him the picture of Evan Rose. The kid was on his way to daycare when someone put a bomb in his backpack and it nearly killed him. It did kill his mother. Chris has a rule about kids and it was that they weren't to be involved. He went rushing into a burning building to save children. He also hunted down the people who bombed it and one of the bombers mysteriously disappeared. OA used that. He used the fact that Chris would never harm a child no matter the reasons to get him to turn on Hawthorne and in return Chris planted a bug. He also did something he wasn't asked to do. He got into Hawthorne's face.

Chris was able to get footage of Hawthorne's inner circle. The FBI used facial recognition and they identified one of the men as a man he used to disarm bombs. He was a bomb expert. He now makes them for Hawthorne and they found where he was hiding. Victor Maxwell's walk on the edge of reason happened after his wife filed for divorce. He now thinks he has nothing to lose and so he made bombs. More than two. The FBI raided his motel room and they found evidence that a third bomb had been created. It wasn't at the motel and so Maxwell must have given it to someone. OA spoke with Maxwell. Maxwell said people needed to remember what it takes to sign up for the military and that later made sense when they found the third bomb. The third bomb was on its way to a recruitment center.

Tiffany and Stuart got to the bomber in time. They stopped the bomb from hurting anyone and they were able to arrest the guy who planed on planting it. The only thing they didn't have was Hawthorne. No one was speaking against him and so OA told his friend Chris that they didn't have enough evidence to arrest Hawthorne and that made Chris mad. Chris lost it. He took a gun to the Lodge. He took Hawthorne hostage and he tried to force him to confess and nothing worked. They got into a struggle over the gun. Hawthorne shot Chris and so Chris shot and killed Hawthorne. Chris is now facing a murder or manslaughter charge. He was admitted to a psychiatric facility. He was finally being treated for his condition. And meanwhile, OA could be in trouble.

OA's informant killed a suspect. He was going to be questioned about Chris's mentality and Isobel wanted him to lie. She wanted him to say he had no idea that Chris was struggling when he did. He actually tried to warn her and she ignored him. And so that's what OA is going to say.

Summary: The team hunts for a serial killer who is targeting young, homeless men. Also, Tiffany and Scola don't see eye to eye on how to handle the case or the difference between partners and co-workers.

A new serial killer emerged. He drove around in a dark blue van and his favorite victims were male prostitutes. He especially liked the ones living on the street. They were the sort that were desperate enough to get a black vehicle with no visible windows besides the two up-front. But he made his mistake with his latest victim because he didn't bury him deep enough.

Someone tripped on him as they were exploring the park and so the good Samaritan called it. The FBI were alerted because the burial site was federal land. They went out there with a dog and the dog sniffed out several other graves. There were at least five victims that the feds found. The victims were all male prostitutes and they were all black. The latest victim was known to operate inside of clubs in the West Village in the city and so that's where the FBI began their search for the serial killer.

They found out their victim was cruising a certain place the night he was last seen. Four agents went there and they found someone trying to hide. They uncovered this person. He ran and they later arrested him on the suspicion he had something to do with the deaths, but of course the case couldn't be that easy and nor was their guy the killer. The guy that ran was a homeless guy. He had been staying at the abandoned warehouse as a place to stay warm. He wasn't the killer and he didn't see the killer. The killer did leave behind a few things in the area. Like a shovel. There was security footage that showed the killer was driving around in the van and unfortunately for them the van was stolen. And therefore wasn't much use.

The FBI did find more security footage. They found out which club their last victim attended and they went there asking people who worked there if they remembered him, but no one did.

Not really. They remember the victim was speaking to several guys in the hopes of scoring a free drink.

He was a party boy and so everyone pretty much dismissed him. The only ones who would pay attention to a guy like that was someone up for the party or someone hoping to harm him. FBI Special Agent Tiffany Wallace had a cousin who was a pastor in the area. They went to him to find out if anyone has been complaining about someone getting rough and he said he hadn't heard anything. He also gave the name of someone who might help.

This person naturally tried to run from the feds when he saw them. But they got him. They questioned him and he wasn't their guy either. Only he heard something on the street. He heard that a guy who turns johns had almost gotten grabbed and thrown into the back of a van. The feds followed up on that lead. They called upon Tiffany's cousin again to find out if he knew this Crabtree and he did. He admitted he tried counsel him.

The preacher gave them the location where they could find Crabtree and they found him and talked to him. Crabtree confirmed that someone did try to throw him into the back of a van. He didn't see the guy's face because he was wearing a hoodie pulled down. He also parked in a dark area on the street. Crabtree admitted he would have ignored him if he hadn't thought the van belonged to the preacher.

The preacher drives the same blue van as the killer. What little Crabtree was able to see, the killer was also black and that coupled with what the feds worked out for their profile had Special Agent Stuart Scola looking at Tiffany's cousin sideways. Scola met Preacher Terrance. He saw his files. He saw that Terrance has been taking long lens pictures of young men on the street as if he was stalking them and that Terrance gets pretty personal with the people he's supposedly trying to help.

Him being the killer makes sense. The victims would get into a van if they knew it was him. They would trust him and leave themselves open to exposure. There was also one other clue. Terrance was seen on security footage outside of the gay club where one of the victims partied and if that wasn't bad enough there was the fact that Terrance turns off his phone every night.

Terrance couldn't be tracked during the nights when the victims were killed. Scola brought what he found to his fellow agents behind his partner's back and they agreed with him that it was suspicious. Terrance was brought in for questioning. He lied to the feds about being at the club. He tried to deny it was him in the footage and so Tiffany spoke to him one on one with the cameras turned off.

She confirmed with her cousin that he was in fact gay. He couldn't be open about it because he didn't want the church to find out or to fire him and he's fears weren't unfounded. Tiffany spoke to a family. They got angry at Tiffany was bringing the spotlight on her cousin and they said Terrance wasn't a "freak". This is how Tiffany's relative referred to gay people and so it wasn't just the church that Terrance was afraid of.

But there was another suspect. One of the men they spoke with and had dismissed was seen around the park area near the time of deaths. They spotted him near the alleys again. He had just killed someone else and he was about to kill Scola when Tiffany shot and killed their serial. She thought that would be the end of it but her cousin is still facing charges for lying to the FBI. He hindered the prosecution by covering up his secret and if he had been honest from the start then maybe they could have found the latest victim before he died.

Production Code: FBI406
Summary: After a suburban woman is kidnapped from her home, the team looks into trysts on both sides of a seemingly perfect marriage; OA feels pressure from Mona to make changes in his career path.

The victim's name is Charlotte Kincade. She's missing and it suspected she was abducted. Her husband Alex came home from a business trip to find the house in disarray with no signs of Charlotte. There was also blood found at the scene. But there's another, more important, reason why the FBI believes she might have been taken. She was rich. She is a mining heiress.

Her parents died when she was young leaving her their full fortune and she has never had to work a day in her life. Her husband also comes from wealth. He doesn't have a record and there's no reason to suspect he could be involved with this kidnapping. Alex also wanted to pay the ransom. Everyone believed Charlotte was taken in the hopes of a ransom and so Alex wanted pay it. He didn't want to play games with the man holding his wife's life in his hands.

Or so he claimed. Alex's alibi on further inspection was shaky. He was gambling and that seemed to be a theme for him. Alex has been running up hundreds of thousands in debt. He was also losing money at his job as a stockbroker. The FBI found out that Alex stopped gambling by a certain point and that meant they couldn't track his movements from then to when he returned to the house.

The casino was three hours from his home. He could easily have driven back and either arrange or perhaps take part in his wife's kidnapping. She was the wealthier of the two. It was also highly suspicious when Alex turned down the FBI's help. He wanted to make the ransom drop on his own and he didn't want the FBI involved in any way.

The FBI couldn't just sit it out. They had to be involved since becoming aware that Charlotte was missing and so they followed Alex when he left his house. They followed him when he met up with Jamie Barker. Both were arrested and brought in for questioning.

It turns out that Alex has been having an affair. He's been sleeping with Jamie and he was with her the whole night his wife disappeared. Its why his alibi was shaky. He was lying. He was sleeping with another woman and he didn't realize how important his wife was to him until she disappeared. Alex has since broken things off with his mistress. Its why he was meeting up with her and she doesn't care. Jamie is married.

Jamie is in an open marriage. She doesn't care that Alex doesn't love her because she has a husband who does his own cheating and so her husband doesn't even care what she does. The husband is offshore on a fishing trip with friends. He wasn't a suspect in the kidnapping and so once again the FBI took a look at Charlotte. Charlotte had been shown on ATM camera hiding from a guy.

The guy was identified as Grant King and he was shown at the same coffee house that Charlotte used to hide from him. But the coffee house isn't a coffee house. It's a secret sex club. Maggie and OA went there looking for Grant and they were later able to arrest him. Grant knew Charlotte. Just not by that name. He said she goes by the name "Astrid" and that she has a hunter fantasy.

Charlotte apparently likes to pretend that she's been stalked by someone because it turns her on. She then takes the guy back to her secret apartment in the city and she sleeps with him. Grant pointed the FBI to the secret apartment. The secret apartment has recently been ransacked and thankfully there were cameras. The camera picked up a white male breaking into the apartment, but he made sure to hide his face from the cameras and no outside cameras were able to catch him. this break-in happened a mere few hours before Charlotte was kidnapped. Charlotte's husband was asked about her secret life and he had no idea. He never knew his wife was cheating too. He also didn't recognize the man's build from the security cameras.

They asked the husband if there was anyone in Charlotte's life that might have stood out. The only person who did had been a stranger. Alex mentioned that he and Charlotte had their anniversary dinner at the restaurant they always used and that a guy at a next table had scared Charlotte. The FBI went to the restaurant. They found out the person who booked the table used the name Wallingford.

Charlotte is originally from a town called Wallingford. It seems she has a real life stalker and that the stalker knows her. Not just her persona. The FBI couldn't get the guy's real name. They did on the other hand trace him back to an apartment he used and unfortunately he had already cleared out. And so it's a good thing he left things behind, like a body for instance.

The body wasn't Charlotte. It belonged to Brenda Mason. She was reported missing a while back and no one had ever found her until now. Brenda was killed a month ago. She was a member of the sex club and so her killer was using the club as a hunting ground. He finds attractive women. He kidnaps them. he holds them in a room he goes out of his way to decorate. The room was decorated with items that Charlotte's secret apartment had been missing and there was a notebook left behind. The notebook asked Charlotte about her favorite things. It even asked her to describe her perfect day. Her stalker was holding onto her under the wrong impression that he could woo her if he gets to know her better and the moment he realizes that she doesn't love him — he'll kill her.

Like he did Brenda. The killer becomes obsessed with these women and he was able to hide what he did to Brenda by posting a false social media post claiming she was visiting Vietnam. It bought him time. But he didn't have that with Charlotte. Charlotte wasn't a single woman living alone. She had a husband and the husband noticed that she was missing much too soon for her stalker. The stalker was identified as Andrew Fraiser. Frasier is going to keep hurting women if the FBI didn't stop him and so they tried to find him. They got close when suddenly he took a hostage and was able to use that long enough to escape. And so the FBI just knew he was in the Catskills area, they just didn't know where.

The FBI went back to Alex. They asked him if there was any place special in the area for Charlotte because her stalker would want to take her to a place where she felt comfortable and so Alex mentioned an inn in the area that he visited with Charlotte. Its where he proposed to her. The FBI later found Fraiser holding Charlotte at that inn and OA was able to talk him down before anyone got hurt. Fraiser gave up Charlotte. He then tried to take his own life and OA stopped him. Fraiser was arrested. Charlotte was later reunited with her husband and maybe now they'll start being honest with each other.

OA also realized that he loves his job. He told his girlfriend Mona that he wasn't going to quit or go into private security because he loves his job and he doesn't want to leave it. Not even for her.

Summary: The team must track down a shooter targeting detectives from the same precinct and unit, while facing mounting tension from the NYPD. Also, Tiffany finds that her NYPD roots may be influencing her view of the situation.

Someone carried out a hit on an NYPD detective. Detective James Gerrard was killed on his way home from a known cop bar and his killer shot him twice in the back. It wasn't a robbery. His belongings were found on him and the shooter was seen leaving on a bicycle.

He therefore arranged an exit route prior to the murder. The killer and this would normally be handled by the NYPD, but someone got spooked and they called in the FBI. The FBI running point on the case upset a few. The NYPD didn't like that they had to "share" this case because they figured they should investigate what happened to one of their own and so some were upset with FBI involvement. FBI involvement tends to mean they take the lead. And they asked questions that the police wouldn't ask.

They asked Gerrard's widow if there were problems at work. They also asked if he had any financial problems or any debt and she said no. She also didn't seem offended. But it got back to the NYPD. They heard that widow was asked if her husband was dirty and so that made them extremely hostile towards the FBI Special Agents. Scola & Tiffany were speaking with Gerrard's boss when the rumor first got out. They were actually confronted and had to push their way towards an exit because the cops wanted to intimidate them. Tiffany sorta understands. She was a cop before she was FBI. Scola on the other hand went from Wall Street to Quantico. He was never police. He also tends to be a rather distant to people he does like and so he couldn't connect with the officers.

Not even if he tried. Scola and Tiffany got out of there and they returned to headquarters just long enough to hear about the second shooting. Another detective from the same precinct as well as squad was shot. This officer managed to survive his injuries and so he was asked if he recognized the killer. He didn't. He said the only thing the killer told him before he was shot was "die you, bastard".

The officer claims there was nothing he did or Gerard did that would warrant someone trying to kill them other than doing their jobs and putting bad guys away. But that was a lie. The two men were involved in a takedown of a drug kingpin and two hundred thousand dollars went missing during the arrest.

One of the detectives working the scene was found guilty of stealing that money. He went to prison and he was killed three weeks ago there. The FBI suspected that the other detectives might have taken a cut as well. They went after the kingpin and they later found him. Rafael Alvarez claims he had nothing to do with the shootings but he knows who does. He said the money the cops stole didn't belong to him. It actually belonged to the DeMarco brothers and they wanted their money back. They bragged about killing the cop in prison. They now wanted to kill Alvarez and so he needed protection. But funnily enough it was the DeMarco brothers trying to kill cops. It was in fact someone named Ray Rudinsky.

Ray was the son of Patrick Rudinsky. Otherwise known as the dirty cop who went to prison for stealing Alvarez money and so Ray was getting revenge for his father. His father went to prison because he believed in the blue wall. He took ten thousand dollars of Alvarez after being pressured by the other cops and then he got caught out. He went to prison. He didn't tell anyone about the other dirty cops because they made sure to take care of his wife. She was getting money every week in return for his silence. But then Pat started having problems in prison. He confessed to his son that it hadn't been his idea to steal the money and that he was only paying for it because of his loyalty to the others.

Then Pat died. His son Ray blamed the other cops who took the money and so he wanted revenge. He already shot two detectives and he was going after the third person. The beat cop. The FBI tried to warn Officer Ruiz. Tiffany and Scola went to the officer's home to warn her and Tiffany found Ruiz bleeding out. She was calling it in when Ray surprised her. Ray was still in the house and he had taken both Tiffany and Ruiz hostage. Scola was forced to retreat. He called it in and they had someone try to talk the kid down. But he refused. He demanded Detective Dane. He wanted another chance at killing him and it didn't help that Ruiz had gotten talkative. She confessed that she testified against his dad because the other detectives convinced her that his dad was dirty.

Ruiz lied on the stand. She said that his dad was the first to arrive to the scene and not the last. She regrets what she did now because she began suspecting the other detectives lied and she herself admits to herself now that she truly lied because she didn't want this hurting her promotion to detective. Ray got so angry at her confession that he tried to kill her but Tiffany stopped him. Tiffany and Ray fought over the gun. She killed him and the cops wanted that to be the end of the story. Tiffany tried to convince Ruiz to come forward about Dane and she refused. She wasn't going to risk her career over people that were dead.

Tiffany did her own research. She found out that Dane and Gerrard both opened up accounts under an assumed name after the drug bust and they bled those accounts dry paying off Pat's widow. Tiffany now has the means to go after Dane and she wasn't sure if she wanted to do it. She would be going against the Blue Wall known as the NYPD if she did.

Summary:	After a young girl is kidnapped from her daycare, the team must help her parents navigate a debt owed to the deadly gang in their neighborhood. Also, Maggie struggles to focus on the case when her sister, Erin, returns from rehab.

A man broke into a daycare to kidnap a child. The child he grabbed was a little girl and there's no telling why he took or what he would do to her. He just told the daycare owner not to call the cops. He said that if he heard any movement in the next thirty minutes that she would regret it. The woman was so scared that she didn't move until a second daycare worker came in and said it was all clear.

But the kidnapper had gotten away with the child. He kidnapped Lucia Diaz. She was five years old. Her mother was a nanny and her father worked in construction. They weren't wealthy. They couldn't a ransom or so either kidnapper took the child for another reason or he was obsessed with the little girl. The FBI was brought in to investigate because it was kidnapping. They traced any known felons in the area. They found Tito.

Tito tried to run when the feds went knocking on his door. But they eventually caught him and they questioned both him and his girlfriend. They didn't say anything at first, but a little pressure, and Tito admitted he has an alibi. He was having breakfast at a diner nearby. The FBI looked into this alibi and they were able to verify it. He didn't kidnap Lucia. Lucia's parents on the other hand have been suspicious. Lucia's mother Jenny said she couldn't get into contact with her husband because he was working and his bosses make him lock up his cell phone during the job. She also said some other misleading things. The FBI went back to her to ask more questions and they found out she did a runner.

Jenny escaped through a window. They checked out her apartment and there was no sign of a struggle. She left willing. She also texted a former employer and so they went to this woman's house, but they found out her tied up and it seems Jenny contacted her former employer in order to steal from her and she emptied out the woman's safe. The FBI came to believe that Jenny stole the money to pay the ransom. They just didn't know how she was contacted or where she or her husband were. He wasn't at the construction site. The FBI went looking for the couple and they later found Jenny. She didn't have the hundred grand she stole. She also refused to talk until the FBI promised they wouldn't throw her or her husband in jail for past crimes.

Only then did Jenny talk. Jenny admitted that her husband was a drug dealer on the side. She told him to stop all of that when she got pregnant and she believed he did stop. But he started up again without her knowing. She found drugs hidden in the apartment and she got so upset by this that she flushed down the toilet. Hugo later told her that the drugs weren't fully his. He hadn't paid for it.

She also flushed down eighty grand worth of drugs and so the drug dealer kidnapped Lucia just to get his money back. Hugo was supposed to make the drop. The FBI found Hugo strung out on drugs. He said he was so nervous that he had to take something to take the edge off and unfortunately he took too much. And he would have overdosed if it hadn't been for Tiffany and Scola.

They had to give him some Narcan. They also called for an ambulance and soon he was back on his feet. Hugo still had to make the drop, though. Hugo said Moreno would kill his daughter if he saw anyone else show up and so he does have to make the drop. Hugo tried to score more drugs. The FBI wouldn't let him and his wife was more concerned about their daughter.

Jenny said Hugo has a problem. He's a drug addict and that's why he couldn't walk away from the life. Jenny excuses his addiction by saying her husband is wired differently. This got to Maggie because her sister is an addict and recently her sister was kicked out of rehab for sneaking out to drink. Her sister was barely back when she was bringing men over with her sister at work.

Maggie had actually gotten a phone call from her doorman saying her sister overdosed. This happened during the drop and so Maggie dropped the ball. She failed to notice that Hugo was picking a fight with Moreno. He got so upset that he didn't see his daughter that he got into a fight with the man and forced Moreno into shooting him. Moreno then ran off with whatever he could get from the bag and he ran right past Maggie. She didn't notice until it was too late. Moreno got away. He shot a cop while he was getting away and he dropped his cell phone in the chaos. It turns out the phone was connected to Tito. Tito wasn't just in the neighborhood like he said. He was the lookout. He said that when a guy likes Moreno asks — there's no getting out of it.

Tito gave up Moreno's stash house to protect himself. The FBI raided the place and they arrested Moreno as well as rescued Lucia. But Maggie wasn't there for it. Maggie went to the hospital to be with her sister and she learned that her sister overdosed on fentanyl. Maggie would have been fired if the cop had died on her watch. The only person to die was Hugo. He died and Jenny was going to prison for kidnapping a woman and stealing over a hundred grand in jewels. And so Maggie told her sister that she wants out.

Maggie doesn't want to be Erin's life as long as she's using and so she was no longer going to be her sister's fallback.

Summary:	A widow is shocked that her new "boyfriend" is the manipulative leader of a terrorist group planning an attack; Scola is reminded of his brother's death on 9/11; Tiffany worries about his emotional choices during the investigation.

FBI Special Agent Scola once had a brother. His brother Douglas had died on 9/11. It was his birthday that day and so Scola was fresh off visiting his grave when he found out another terrorist attack could be happening in the city. The FBI was notified after local police found the body of Elliott Young. Young was an auto-mechanic who had been murdered in his home and a searched of his house showed to be filled with bags of ammonium nitrate. Young studied engineering. He knew how to make a bomb and he might have made one for someone. But the FBI doesn't know who killed him or where this bomb was? They followed the only lead they had. They investigated Young's murder and they found a car fleeing the scene of the murder around the time of death. The car belonged to Hannah Thompson.

Hannah was a widow. She was white and blonde. Her husband had also died on 9/11. She had no clue how her car was at the scene and so the FBI answered that for her. they found out her boyfriend had taken the car. The boyfriend was Venezuelan. Felix Ramos was a member of the Marxist Revolution Party and it was a known terrorist organization, but Hannah didn't know this. She thought his name was Alberto. She thought he was a filmmaker who makes documentaries and that he was considering moving to NYC for his "work". She was even going to invest in his company. Hannah was supposed to give Ramos's friend Ernesto thirty thousand dollars and she had needed an extra day because she had a hard time taking the money out of her 401k.

Hannah said that her boyfriend had been angry about the delay. He needed that money and so whatever he's planning had to happen that day. The FBI looked into it. They found out that out another and more famous dead Venezuelan terrorist had a birthday that day. Ramos wanted to celebrate the birthday in a big way. He was planning a terrorist attack on something that stood as a sign of American capitalism. Only the FBI didn't know what that sign was. They also just had Hannah. Hannah was it for them and so they agreed to use her. They sent Hannah to the meeting with Ernesto. They had had hand over the money and they were going to arrest Ernesto when he grabbed a hostage. And they were forced to kill him.

Ramos tried contacting Ernesto. They pretended to be him and that they were still alive. Ramos expressed frustration with the b*tch that was Hannah. He then texted her and told her that he needed the money. She told him to meet with her. He agreed and then he sent someone else. This other person tried to take the money and Hannah gave it up and then they arrested the unknown man. The man was identified as Velez. Velez went on and on about American capitalism. How it was the end of the world. Then he asks for a lawyer. Velez was smart. He didn't want them to stop the bombing and so he asked for a lawyer because he knew that would end their conversation. And that frustrated Scola who wanted to hand over Velez to the Intelligence community.

Scola wanted the terrorist to be tortured till he revealed where the bomb was. His bosses shot down the idea and they told Scola that they had to respect Velez's rights. They also told him that they knew why this case would be personal for him. They asked him if he was good and he said he was when it wasn't. The FBI used the items found on Velez to track down the stash house. They hit it. They found an empty apartment and they searched it. They found blueprints. The blueprints seemed to be for Hannah's office which was located on Wall Street. Scola went back to Hannah. He mentioned to her that he had a brother who died on 9/11 and how he wants to think the best of her but isn't sure she could be trusted because she seemed to be closely tied to the terrorist attack.

Hannah had no idea what he was talking about. She said she would never help a terrorist and if Ramos had used her office key card that he did so without her permission. The FBI searched Hannah's office building. They found the bomb. The bomb could only be deactivated with a code. It was going down and so they combed through Hannah's messages from Ramos. They found a photo he sent her from a different apartment. The FBI went to the apartment and they arrested Ramos. Ramos refused to give up the code willingly. Scola had no other choice than to risk someone Ramos does care about and so Scola arrested Felix's brother. His younger brother. He brought the brother to the bomb site and he told Ramos that his brother would die along with everyone else if the bomb went off.

Ramos caved. He gave the code and Scola deactivated it. He even let the brother go. The teenager was just a kid and he didn't have any dealings with the terrorist attack. And later Scola got in trouble with his bosses.

The only reason he wasn't fired is because it worked. Otherwise, he'd be out of a job! Scola later opened up to his partner and he told Tiffany that he hasn't spoken to his brother's widow or kids in five years. He distanced himself because he blamed himself for his brother's death. He was supposed to have played tennis with him that morning and he was too hung over from the night before and he cancelled the game. And his brother went to work where he later died.

Scola uses his brother's death to distance himself from people and so after he spoke with Tiffany he went to see his brother's widow to visit the kids.

Summary: After Rina is critically wounded while heading to work with Jubal, the team makes the chilling discovery that a vengeful Vargas orchestrated the shooting from behind bars and continues to target the rest of their team and their loved ones.

Someone took a shot at Special Agent in Charge Trenholm. Her name is Rina. She was dating Jubal. She was actually with Jubal and they were heading to work together when someone shot her. Jubal immediately called for help. He didn't notice anyone running away because his sole focus was on providing first aid to his girlfriend and so this shooting was one for the FBI.

The FBI wanted to know who shot one of their own. Jubal was told to sit this case out and he ignored the order. He wanted justice for his girlfriend. He also wanted to feel busy. He helped work the case and he was there when they found a suspect. They found out someone was following Rina in the lead up to the shooting. The person following her was identified as Frank Castlewood and he was an ex-con.

The FBI tracked down Castlewood. He tried to take a shot at them for it and he was arrested. They brought him to their interrogation room, but then Jubal forced his way in through to his rank and he began questioning Castlewood. He even promised the man not to pursue attempted murder charges for firing at the FBI as they tried to arrest him in return for answers. Castlewood wasn't the shooter.

He was just a hired hand. Someone paid him to follow Rina and he wouldn't say who that someone was. Castlewood seemed afraid of whoever the person. Jubal couldn't get anything else and so he left the room. He also apologized to Isobel who knew about his relationship with Rina. And she again asked him to walk away from the case.

Jubal again refused her offer to bow out. He wanted to stay on the case until he found out who pulled the trigger and who ordered it. The FBI continued their investigation. They noticed that Castlewood met up with another ex-con by the name of Logan Winters. Winters is a former Marine.

He was accused of illegal gun smuggling and he's out now because he won an appeal. Winters served time at the same prison during Castlewood's incarceration. It's probably where they met. Winters's case was sealed and so they asked the agent who worked the case. There was no obvious connection to Rina. Winters was also hanging out with pretty shady guys and one of them was known for flooding the country with ghost guns.

The ghost gun is an untraceable gun. The FBI had a task force already on it and so the agent in charge asked Jubal's team not to touch this case as they pursued Winters. They agreed to this, but Winters was a slippery adversary and it was hard to get him. Winters managed to escape them during a car chase by driving in front of a speeding train and somehow surviving.

He escaped the agents a second time when he had a hidden device began shooting at them and it almost got Maggie. She suffered broken ribs as well as a concussion. She still wanted to work the case and OA was supporting her decision. Only Jubal was off of it. Jubal wanted to know who was pulling the strings and so he was tempted to talk to Castlewood again. And Isobel put a stop to it.

Isobel ordered Jubal to walk away. He did. At first. He went to the hospital where he ran into Rina's ex-husband and he was there when he began hearing what happened back out in the field. It seems Castlewood wasn't just taking photos of Rina. He was taking photos of several agents and their families.

Castlewood refused to anything more without full immunity. He said he couldn't go to jail because one way or another he would be found out as a rat and killed. Castlewood wasn't talking. Winters wasn't around to be asked. They asked Winters's closest associate and they found out his friend built the shooting weapon that almost took out Maggie. McCain said whoever hired Winters was someone scary. Someone who threatened to kill Winters's children if he didn't do the job.

This was where Jubal came back. He just couldn't help himself. The FBI looked into Winters. They found out who else was at the prison who might want a bunch of FBI Agents dead and that's when they realized that it was Vargas. Vargas once operated a notorious cartel. He was only in prison because the FBI used extraordinary methods to get him.

They found out where his wife and son were being hidden and threatened to reveal the information if he allowed himself to be arrested without a fight. But a lot has happened since then. It turns out that his rivals had been following the FBI and his family was murdered not long after he was sent to prison. Vargas now wants revenge. He was going after everyone responsible for his arrest and he also wanted to harm their families. He wanted them to feel the same pain as he did.

Vargas hired Winters. Winters then turned to his friend to create the perfect assassination machines and those machines are still out there. Vargas wasn't talking. They managed to get to Winters and unfortunately they had to shoot him after he tried to take a hostage, but they later found the devices and no one else was harmed. Rina is still in the hospital. She's in a coma and there's no telling when she'll wake up.

Jubal found out one of those devices was outside his children's school and so he tried to talk Isobel into arranging for Vargas to be killed in prison, but she wasn't having it and she tried to excuse his thinking as being skewed right now.

Summary: As the team investigates a string of jewelry store robberies that culminate in a double murder, they uncover a connection to a 16-year-old boy trying to survive the foster care system.

A group of armed men went to rob a jewelry store when a simple smash and grab ended up going south. The store owner was also armed. He went for his gun and he tried to frighten the guys off and so the armed men responded. The store owner was shot. A client was also killed. She and her boyfriend went to the store for what should have been a happy proposal, but the theft and murder has now left one grieving man wanting vengeance and that's where the FBI came in.

The FBI investigates armed robberies otherwise known as heists. They went looking for their killers. They were able to trace a stolen rolex that had a tracker in it back to a drug dealer and they instantly knew he wasn't one of the people they were looking for. And so they instead threatened him with federal prison for drug distribution if he didn't give details on the man who gave him the watch.

The drug dealer said a group of guys rolled up in a silver car. They traded the watch for cocaine. The guy he spoke with was white in thirties to forties with a goatee. The car he was using also started with DMX. The drug dealer remembered because of the rapper and so Jubal's team went looking for their suspect. In the meantime, they monitored any recent sales at pawn shops. They found a footage of a teenage boy selling some of the stolen watches and they traced it back to a foster kid. His name is Jamal Carter. He's sixteen. His mother died when he was a baby and his father was shot a few years ago by the cops on Christmas.

Jamal has been bouncing around in the system ever since. He's a good kid. His case worker was questioned about him and she said he even has a part-time job as youth counselor at a center. Jamal could never have been involved in any murders. The team looked into it and they deemed the case worker was correct. Jamal had an alibi for a second homicide. He also couldn't have pulled off the robbery because he was just too short to match the anyone in the security footage and so they brought Jamal in for interrogation. They demanded to know where he got the watches. He said one of his new foster brothers gave it to him to sell.

Jamal was new to the house. He didn't question his fosters brothers when they claimed to have found the watches in an alley and he did as they asked. He sold the watches. He did so without question because he didn't want a hard time at a new house and he's been at bad houses before. But his new foster brothers matched the description of the men that robbed the jewelry store. They were dangerous. The FBI wanted to stop them and so they put a wire on Jamal. They had him return home. They wanted him to search his foster brother's rooms. He was caught while doing so and he came up a story.

Jamal claimed to be looking for a shirt. It worked. His brothers didn't question him and they were talking about the robbery when suddenly the feed went out. Jamal's feed didn't cut back in until he walking back to the van. He said that he heard static and he pulled the piece out of his ear. He also said that his brothers never mentioned anything illegal to him. Maggie wanted Jamal to rush back into the house to question his brothers and Tiffany was the one who told her that already got footage of the brothers giving him the watch to sell. Which in itself is an offence. They got a warrant and they went to arrest Jamal's brothers only to find the house empty.

No one was home. Not even the foster father who they clearly heard earlier was staying home to watch the game that night and so right away Maggie believed the worst. Maggie believed Jamal played them. He warned his brothers. His brothers fled. Their foster father seemed to be helping them and fled with the boys. Maggie demanded answers from Jamal. He was denying all knowledge of where his brothers went. Tiffany then stepped in and asked Maggie to give her a minute alone with Jamal. She told him that it didn't look good for him. He was being loyal to people who had left him behind and so Jamal said in a moment of anger that they hadn't left him behind.

This got Tiffany to thinking. She remembered one of the boys hadn't been home when Jamal first got home. Something about visiting a bank and that along with something else she found made her believe that the kids and their foster father had one last heist in the works. This was confirmed when they heard of a disturbance at the bank. The FBI went to the scene and them and NYPD were able to arrest all three boys and their foster father for armed robbery and murder. And Maggie later talked to Tiffany about why she went easy on Jamal.

Tiffany was the police officer that shot and killed Jamal's father. She blames herself for his current situation because he entered foster care after his dad died and so Maggie understood why Tiffany wanted to give Jamal the benefit of the doubt. It had been a good shooting what with his father being high on drugs and trying to attack them, but the fallout was more than she ever imagined. And so Tiffany later told Jamal that they were some things she wishes could take back and couldn't.

Neither of them bothered to call Jubal or tell him what they were going to do. He ended up finding out when he went to go see her in the hospital and he found her room empty. He had to ask the front desk where she was. They broke the news to him and truthfully it should have been her family. They knew Jubal was in her life. They knew their daughter cared for him. They could have at least let him be there once she was taken off life support and so the way they handled things was wrong from start to finish. If Jubal hadn't shown at the hospital, he would have found out his girlfriend died when Isobel broke the news to the team.

Isobel also mentioned that they were going to have a small memorial for Rina. She told them that everyone was welcome to stop by and she tried to talk to Jubal one on one but he wasn't having it. Jubal was angry. He's been angry since Rina was shot right in front of him and he couldn't do anything to save her. The only thing that helped in his moment of grief was the job. Jubal and his team were working on a new case. They were investigating an abduction. Their cameras picked up the moment a woman was tased and carried off as she went through a national park. Any crime committed on federal land makes it a federal case.

The abduction of nineteen-year-old Angela Mullins, therefore, was a case for the FBI. They looked into the victim and they found out from her mother that she was dating an older man up until recently. Her mother never met him. She was against the idea of an older man because she thought he was only using her daughter and so mother and daughter had a fight about it. They hadn't spoken in a while until Angela called her mother to say she broke up with the guy. She wanted to lean on her mom and her mom said they could get mani/pedis. Angela was walking home when she ran across a group of men. She went into the park to hide and that's where she met the Unsub.

A few hours after Angela went missing — someone dumped the body of a similar-looking girl. The FBI was alerted because everyone thought that was the woman they were looking for and it turns out the girl that was dumped was in fact Cassidy Drabeck. She was another teenager that went missing four months ago. She looks like she could be related to Angela. She also showed up wearing the same clothes as Angela was wearing when she went missing. The second body proved to the FBI that they weren't looking for a kidnapper that knew his victims. He was choosing them because he was of a stalker variety who was obsessed with a woman of that same look.

The Unsub fixated on Cassidy. He showed up at one of her shows at the local theater and he even gave her flowers. Cassidy told her father about it because she thought it was odd someone would know her favorite flower. Hyacinths aren't typically what fans hand out. They tend to go for roses and so the team asked Cassidy's father if he taped that play off her. They wanted to see if they could notice the stalker in the film and they did. He was the guy that wasn't filming the play. He was just filming Cassidy. He left with a woman whose face was clear in the video and so they identified his co-conspirator as Beth Paige.

Finding out about Paige led to them identifying the Unsub. His name is Doyle Buckler. He doesn't have much of a presence and so they looked into Paige. She had apparently been collecting evidence on both Cassidy and Angela. She also was collecting evidence/stalking a woman by the name of Darcey Edmonds. The FBI contacted Darcey. She was still alive. She also knew Buckler. Buckler was her ex-boyfriend. They dated for two months when he proposed and she turned him down. She found out that he had created a dossier on her. And that they only met because he was stalking her by pretending to be an old friend on social media.

The team figured he'd use the same ploy to stalk the others. They checked the victims' social media and they found out someone they went to school with but haven't heard from in a while had contacted them and that the person they used the chance of being friended to send declarations of love. The team tracked down the IP address. It led them to the docks by the crates. They later found Paige and not Buckler or Angela. Paige was a submissive personality. She genuinely thought that Buckler loved her in spite of not looking like his victims and so the team pointed out that the only woman he's ever loved has been Darcey. She broke up with him and he's been trying to replace her with a look-alike.

The team only had to point out all the things he was willing to do to get Darcey back to get Paige to flip on Buckler. She told them about the burner phone. They then traced it and they found out that Buckler was in the cloisters. It's the area where he brought Darcey to propose to her. The team caught up to Buckler. They arrested him and they later found Angela. She was left to die but they found her in time.

Jubal had a hard time with Cassidy's father and he probably pushed the man more than he should but he did so out of grief and he knows now that he crossed a line. He pushed that poor grieving man because he was mourning the loss of Rina. And it didn't help that her mother collected her things from the office just to tell Jubal it's his fault that Rina took the job in New York. But later Cassidy's father lashed out. He took a woman hostage demanding that Buckler be handed over to him. He wanted to kill the man that took away his only child and so Jubal had to talk him down. He convinced him to let the hostage go. And hopefully, the grieving father will be treated with leniency.

Maggie goes undercover working in a bar to investigate an anti-government group that regularly gathers there and has several members suspected in a series of bombings.

Jubal and his team were looking for a second bomb. By this point, a bomb had already gone off. It killed a member of the NYPD and they had a reason to suspect a second bomb was in play. It turns out they were right. They were just too slow to prevent the second bombing. The second bomb was mailed to City Councilman Doug Archer and it killed him. The late councilman had nothing to do with the police inspector. They operated in the same district but that was about it and so the FBI was at a loss over what happening. They didn't know if there was going to be a third bomb or more. They didn't know who the terrorists or terrorist were. All they know is that an extremists group bragged about a mass casualty event and so the team thought that was this.

But the ensuing investigation didn't seem tied to the extremist group. They checked everyone that had been to the councilman's office and they found out about a deliveryman who supposedly dropped off someone's lunch. The FBI then went to the deliver service. They said they had nothing scheduled that day and so they asked the person who ran the service if he recognized the picture of their suspect. He did. He said it was a new employee by the name of Bryan Moore. The name was of course an alias. His real name is Brian McIntosh. He was sleeping at a homeless shelter as well as using a fake ID because he was on the run from a rape charge.

The FBI later found Brian on a bus out of town. He tried to make a run for it. Brian was soon arrested and he revealed that the bombing hadn't been his idea. He had simply been paid a hundred bucks to drop off a package. He didn't know what was in the package nor did he care. He just did it for the money and so that didn't sound like the extremist group. If anything, they would want to take credit for what they did. They wouldn't have used an intermediary. The FBI had nothing else to go on and Brian was horrible at giving them a description. The most he could say is that the guy that approached him knew he usually makes deliveries to the building.

The FBI went back to the extremist group. They had a man on the inside or so they thought and so they used their guy to spy on the group. They had to make sure that this group wasn't a threat because even if the recent bombings wasn't them — they still talked about a mass event. They therefore still need to be stopped. Their source didn't like it. He wanted no part in the fight because he was worried for his life and that of his family's. He didn't want to assist the FBI but they had something on him and so they forced him to keep working for them. They made him gather information that they could use.

The FBI got to even see some of these plans. They realized that the extremist group wasn't planning a mere mail bombing. They were planning another Oklahoma City bombing by rigging a car to be a mobile bomb. The group that they spying on had found out that they were looking at them and they later started to panic. They came to suspect their source. They also came to suspect Maggie who was acting as a new bar maid at the bar they were using for cover. The FBI were listening in on the conversation and they sent in OA to tell Maggie her cover was in jeopardy. OA tried to warn Maggie in time and him being there prevented the guys from questioning her.

But they did scan the bar for listening device. They found the one that the FBI had planted and that was bad news for their source. Collin wasn't there that day. He was with his daughter because she needed him, but his absence there made them think he could be a rat and so they went looking for him. Maggie arrested the guy before he could get to Collin. Only it wasn't worth it. They hadn't known that Collin turned on them and his cover was blown the moment that Maggie arrested the guy. The extremist group weren't just extremists to Collin. They were once his friends and so they asked him what did one of the guys mean he was going after people responsible for killing his sister.

Collin didn't know what that meant. But the FBI soon did. They found out that they where those men were targeting and they got to the car with the bomb. No one knew how to deactivate it. It couldn't be deactivated once it started and so Maggie took a risky move. She got into the car. She drove it away from people into an abandoned parking lot. She then ran as far as she could and she didn't die when the bomb went off. The attempted bombing alone would see the extremists all serve life sentences. Maggie went to Collin to tell him the good news and she found him moving. He said he didn't want any part in what happened.

Collin claimed it was Maggie who put him and his family. Its why he was moving with his family to New Hampshire and they will hopefully start over there. And so it didn't matter that he could have continued to be of service to the FBI.

All that matters is that they lost a great source that could have come in handy down the road.

Summary: When a Muslim college student and his younger brother are murdered, the team connects with the outraged imam of OA's former mosque, who insists the victims were wrongly targeted as terrorists. Also, OA must reconsider where his loyalties lie when working the case with a Muslim anti-terrorist agent bent on solving the investigation through any means necessary.

OA is a Muslim American. He understands how hard it was for people with his faith and who looked like him after 9/11. It was one of the reasons he joined the military. He wanted to make a difference. He wanted to prove that there were good and bad in every religion.

Not just Islam. OA went from the military to the FBI. He was recruited by a fellow Muslim American. They actually both did a seminar recently about joining the FBI to a couple of potential candidates and so they ran into each other there, but then OA got a call from work and he had to answer it. He and his team were investigating a possible hate crime.

Kosey Khan was murdered at his home. His brother Amir survived the attack and was still in the hospital, but Amir wasn't in a state to talk and no one has any idea why the two men came into the home or why they were stabbed. The only suspicion was that their ethnicity may have played a part. OA and Maggie went to the brothers' imam. OA recognized him because the man was his imam as well and so he got his old advisor to give him the layout. It turns out that a white man had accosted the brothers outside of the mosque. He told them to go back to their own country. And the imam had then come out to run him off.

The imam reported it to the FBI helpline. He never heard back from them. He thought they just ignored it and they hadn't. The guy who runs the helpline was Special Agent Bashar. He and the imam knew each other. They didn't get along and Bashar didn't bother to tell him that he checked out the earlier hate crime. It turns out that it was carried out by someone Kosey knew. Kosey was a college student. He was in the States on a visa. His brother on the other hand was here illegally. They were mostly living under the radar until Kosey started out odd at school. Some guy who was admittedly racist had followed him one day.

James spotted Kosey printing something on the 3D printer that he was willing to fight to hide. Kosey had punched James when James got too close and he ran off. Only James didn't kill Kosey or attack his brother. The FBI looked into it and they determined that he had a solid alibi during the murder.

They also determined that Kosey had built a 3D gun. One that wouldn't be detected with thermal imaging. Kosey and Amir's mosque was also being investigated for terrorist connections. Bashar was a friend of OA's and so he thought he could turn to his mentor for more information but Bashar thought OA was being naïve about the mosque being innocent.

This was even confirmed when Amir woke up in the hospital. He told the FBI that he recognized two light skin men from the mosque. They drive a gold car. They also had beards. Bashir had felt vindicated for judging the mosque and OA went back to the mosque to discuss this with the imam.

The imam refused to talk. OA also learned that the reason Bashir is so tough on the mosque and imam is that the imam once reported someone he suspected of terrorism to the FBI. He did it because he wanted everyone to be safe. He never expected that the FBI or a particular FBI Agent would become obsessed with the mosque believing they're covering up a bigger plot.

Bashir explained himself to OA. He said he did it because another terrorist attack on American soil by a Muslim would send Muslim relations back twenty years. But his methods left a lot to be desired. He forced people into becoming informants. They weren't giving any actual information. They were just reporting others for visa violations and the imam's own brother was deported for one such violation. Bashir used a fake photo of the imam's brother meeting with terrorists to shake the imam. Then he sent OA to act as the good guy and get the information. It worked. OA found the names of the Chechens he was looking for. And the FBI learned about the bigger plot.

The Chechens wanted an undetectable gun because they were after a war criminal that was visiting New York on a press tour. The FBI was able to stop the plot and they caught the others involved. But OA felt Bashir had crossed a line. He talked to the imam and the imam wanted to report Bashir for abuse of his power. OA was thinking of it when Isobel asked him about it. And OA chose to back up Bashir over the imam.

OA will never be welcomed back to the mosque, but he that's okay because he chose his job and his job was more important to him.

Summary:	The team rushes to investigate an extremist gun group after an anti-gun lobbyist building is bombed.

Special Agent in Charge Bashir wasn't a good man. He did questionable things on the job. Yet, OA was given the chance to take him down and he refused to take it. He instead allowed himself to get kicked out of a mosque he liked. He also lied to his direct boss for Bashir. OA had done a lot to keep Bashir safe and Bashir wants to repay that. He wanted to put OA's name up for promotion. OA has never thought of promotion or even becoming a team leader. He likes his job as a field agent. He likes being able to go out into the world and deliver justice. It was Bashir who planted the idea of promotion. And now OA was thinking it over.

OA and his partner were later assigned to the NYC bombing case. Someone had bombed an anti-gun lobbying office and everyone assumed it was the gun nuts behind it. The woman who was currently behind the push for the city-wide initiative to ban assault weapons has said she got plenty of push back from gun nuts and Ann Tasker wasn't going to change a single thing to change that. Ann made a promise to herself after her daughter was killed by gun violence in the city. She promised to eliminate gun violence and she was doing her best to do so. She didn't care about the gun nuts. The second amendment people were all about personal rights until it came to the rights of people they hated.

The gun nuts were recently stirred up by a tv host who called for "anything necessary" to get Ann to stop her crusade. The tv host had denied all connection to the bombing and he only offered up names of people who write to him in exchange for not being charged himself with incitement. The guy was a sleaze, but the rally outside of his house did in fact help. There were plenty of gun nuts to sort through. The team even saw footage of someone going to a storage container and the contents of that container was tested. It was positive for explosives. It also showed that there was more than just one bomb that was created.

The FBI got security footage from the storage facility. They saw a hooded man carrying two boxes and it was traced back to a man named Moder. Moder made the bombs. He has the knowledge. He sold it to someone named Wally. A guy he met at a bar. Jubal went undercover as a handler and he tried to meet Wally only he was stonewalled. He didn't meet him there. The FBI instead laid a trap for Wally. They later spotted him going into the bar. They tried to arrest him then and unfortunately he got away. It just didn't happen fast enough because their cameras picked up

Wally got away that first time. They later caught up to him and the FBI was able to arrest him later. But by then, OA heard back from Bashir. Bashir wanted to talk to OA about something OA saw. OA and Tiffany saw the local NYPD roughing up a gun nut. Tiffany put it in a report. Someone from DC heard about it and now they're asking OA to not corroborate the story. They were even dangling the chance of promotion and so OA not saying something before has led Bashar to believe he could be bought. OA's future wasn't the only thing at risk. The second bomb went off and it killed two teenagers as well as put a third in a coma.

Wally was made to answer for it. He said he was in a chat room ranting about Ann when someone approached him with the chance to make money and the promise was that no one would get hurt. The only reason the teenagers got hurt is that they broke into a warehouse where a newspaper advocating for anti-gun was being run. Wally didn't know who "hired" him. He never met them in person. The FBI looked into it and in the meantime, Maggie and Stuart went to go check on Ann. They wanted to know how she's been holding up when they accidentally came across some loose bullets in her home. They also found the address to the second bombing location written on a piece of paper.

That's when it became clear to Maggie. Maggie realized that the whole bombing thing was a false flag carried out by Ann to get her initiative to pass and it unfortunately failed. Ann then grabbed her gun. She went down to the studio where the tv host who riled people up was located. She took hostages and she was threatening to kill her hostages if the tv host wasn't handed over to her. The FBI couldn't risk someone's life like that and so Maggie decided to not wait for a negotiator. She went in. She tried to reason with Ann. They were both from Indiana and Maggie understood why she was doing all of this. Ann wanted to prove her daughter didn't die for anything.

Maggie was able to convince Ann to hand over her gun and to do so without anyone getting hurt. But OA chose to do the right thing as well. He defended Tiffany and he said he witnessed the cops assaulting their suspect. He told the truth. He risked his career but he didn't care.

Summary: The team realize they have a cross-country serial killer on their hands; the case has ties to Isobel's father, a hotel chain general counsel. Revelations about their fractured relationship are learned.

A woman came running into a bar demanding help. She ran into a waitress and the waitress locked the door after helping this woman inside. The waitress also went to go call for help, but as she was doing so, she heard a crash as if someone was breaking in and she chose to hide rather than help the woman who had asked her for help.

Not that it stopped her from peeking around the corner. The waitress later saw a man with a woman over his shoulder. He was carrying her out. He managed to abduct the woman he was after. He even got away. The waitress did end up calling for help and the police cordoned off the area. And it wasn't long before they put a name to the face.

The FBI got called because abductions were their area. It also helped that the FBI has a lot more resources. They were able to figure out the missing woman was Violet Kent. Kent worked with the Peace Corps up until recently. She didn't come from money nor she did have a lot in the bank. She wasn't kidnapped for money. But Kent was an attractive young woman.

She could have been taken by someone who became obsessed with her and so they did look into her life. They found out she went to a club on the night she died. She ran into a fitness friend that was there and this friend has been asking her out for months with Kent turning him down.

The FBI grabbed a hold of this friend. Bobby Gannon was his name. he was heading upstate and he has a lot of scratches on his face. He admitted that he did come onto Kent on the night she went missing, but that it didn't go anywhere and that she was so drunk that she pushed him away. Hence the scratches. Gannon did give her a fitbit once.

He said she wore it everywhere and that she had it on the night they ran into each other. The FBI followed up this lead. They were able to track Kent's Fitbit till it led to her body. Kent's remains were found dumped at a construction site. She had been raped and strangled.

They found DNA on the body. They ran it and it matched the rape and murders of at least three other women across several states. Their killer was a serial killer. His window between the women were getting shorter and shorter. The killer was getting bolder.

The killer was someone very strong because they managed to strangle their victims with only one hand. To break the thyroid with just one hand, this person had to be strong. This person also was vindictive. They beat up the girls and so they enjoyed inflicting pain on others. The FBI looked into everyone who was questioned in the other crimes. And one person stood out.

His name is Dwight Maddux. He was in the same city as each of the murders when it went down and yet he wasn't their killer. He had an alibi for Kent's murder. He also said he traveled to those cities for work. He was a writer and he was covering MMA fights. There was a big fight in each city. Maddux was also gay. He wasn't the killer. The killer was someone also traveling for the fights. The FBI looked into them and they found Eduardo Silva. Eduardo's brother Andres was a major MMA fighter. He was the one with fights in each city of the murder. And Eduardo was a member of his brother's entourage.

The entourage consisted of three men including Eduardo. Eduardo was the one who handled the equipment and his knots matched the knots used to tie up Kent. The team went looking for this man. He wasn't with his brother and the rest of the crew having a party in the hotel room. So, one of Andreas's people had told them that Eduardo took a rental car. This person had been the publicist for Andreas. She asked the FBI why they were really looking for Eduardo. They told her he might have done something to someone and so the woman said that Eduardo drove her home the other night.

Only, he didn't leave after he dropped her off. He stayed for hours pacing outside of her temporary apartment until eventually he left and so the FBI offered to put someone on her detail, but she turned down the offer. She said she was looking for a reason to head back home and that they gave her one. Her name was Molly. Molly went home. The FBI later found Eduardo. He was cleaning out the car and so they stopped him. Which was a good thing because they found evidence. The car had a piece of Kent's dress still inside. The FBI arrested Eduardo. He claimed he was at a practice ring with his brother preparing for his brother's big fight.

The manager saw them go in. The FBI then started to look at who else in the entourage could have used the car and be guilty. They went into the hotel room with everyone out. They looked for evidence and they found a bloody shirt. They also broke a vase. The hotel billed them for the broken vase. But the team had hid evidence of what they did. No one in the entourage noticed it was missing. This was when Isobel realized there had to be cameras inside of the room. She checked with her father who was general counsel for the hotel. She got the footage and they determined that Eduardo lied. He had gone to the gym with his brother but then his brother left early.

He left early. He returned late and with blood on him. Andres was their serial killer. He was abused growing up and his father murdered his mother. He also seems to have snapped after his girlfriend dumped him because that's when he started hurting women. But Eduardo knew this. He tried covering up for his brother and he paced in front of Molly's place because he was concerned for her. The FBI went looking for Andres. They couldn't find him. He ditched his friends. He went after Molly and he killed her. And he used his strength to evade capture.

The FBI later caught up to him and that time they were forced to kill him before he could kill anyone else.

Summary:	After an ICE agent is fatally shot at an ICE vs. DEA hockey game, the team attempts to find the shooter who they believe may also be targeting Congressman Curtis Grange, who was at the same game.

A sniper hit a charity hockey match. ICE Special Agent Mike Mulder was killed in the shooting. He was the only one killed at what was considered a mass shooting event and the fact the others were just hit or injured had led the FBI into believing Mulder was the target all along. He was considered a federal agent. His death became a priority for the FBI. It also didn't hurt that Mulder was killed during a conversation with a congressman.

A very racist congressman who of course asked OA where his family was from. But the congressman did prove useful because he brought cameras with him. The footage of the shooting was caught on tape and the FBI collected them. The FBI also tracked down the bullet used in the shooting.

The bullets pulled out of Mulder were custom sniper bullets. ATF had a program in which they traveled around the country cataloging bullet makers and so it wasn't long before they found the person who made the bullets to kill Mulder. His name was Jim Weaver. He had a place in the city and the FBI sent out two agents to talk to him.

When they first approached Weaver, he hadn't wanted to help them. It took them threatening him with a ten thousand dollar fine for filing off a serial number on one of his guns to get him to talk. He kept records of every bullet he ever sold with the name of the customer all written out.

Weaver handed over those files to the FBI. They tracked down a credible suspect and when they went to go arrest him — this guy fled. He fled on his motorcycle. It took a while to track him down again. The FBI later caught up to him at a factory. They arrested him and he was in custody denying he was the shooter when another shooting happened.

This time an immigration judge was killed. Therefore, the man they had wasn't their guy. They were actually looking for a spree killer. Someone who probably thought they were on a mission by killing these people. The federal judge was Judge Teresa Alvarez.

The FBI spoke with the judge's clerk. He said that they weren't even supposed to be there. Alvarez got called in on a last-minute deportation trial and she just found out about it that morning. The shooter must have been following her in order to find out where she was. This showed a strong motivation. Too strong for some average joe to pull off.

Jubal and his team investigated a link between the judge and the federal agent killed. It seems that they both played a part in deporting a couple. A couple that had been in this country for twenty-seven years until they got a speeding ticket and made it onto a list.

This was when Mulder and his guys arrested the couple. They put into detainment and unfortunately they were later assigned to an ultra-conservative judge. The judge sent them back to El Salvador where they were later murdered by MS-13. But their son stayed in the United States. Oscar Rodriguez works with computers and so he sent emails to the people he felt responsible for his parents' deaths. The emails carried viruses that allowed him to track them as well as their schedules. Oscar was also the boyfriend of the guy they arrested earlier. The one they thought was a suspect until a shooting cleared him.

The FBI spoke with Brad Barnes again. They asked him about Oscar. He said he noticed one of his guns was missing and that's why he ran when the FBI came to his door. He didn't help Oscar plan this. Only he knew it would look that way. Barnes turned on Oscar. He tried to give the FBI as much information as he could and so they tracked Oscar's movements. They found out he sent another bogus email to Congressman Curtis Grange. Grange used his platform as well as footage from the shooting to denounce immigrant. He even called immigrants "animals". The FBI went to go warn Grange about being on a hit list when Oscar took a shot at him.

Oscar only managed to hit Grange in the arm. But everyone knew he would try again. they put the congressman in protective detail and they asked him to stay inside. Something he ignored. The congressman still wanted to go to a fundraising lunch with his biggest donors. He refused to reschedule because he said he couldn't look weak in such a crowd and so the FBI gave him a script. They told him to stay behind the bulletproof glass. He also had to wear a bulletproof vest. Grange agreed to these conditions and then he later broke them. He came from behind the glass. It was just a moment only it was long enough for Oscar to kill him.

The congressman's son blamed OA for what happened. OA was running point on the case. He was supposed to keep the congressman safe and he failed. The FBI were able to track down Oscar but right as they were going to grab him, he grabbed a hostage. He took her into an empty laundromat. He demanded a plane. They brought in Barnes to talk to him. To try and get him to give himself in. Oscar refused and they later had to kill him to free the hostage.

Oscar blamed the immigration system for killing his parents. Funnily enough, Grange blamed the same system for an immigrant killing his wife and so the two had more in common than they thought.

At the end of all this, OA gave Grange's son an application to the FBI. He told the young man to let that be his motivation to getting justice and setting everything right.

Summary: When a young couple is found murdered in a New York City park after returning from a vacation, the team searches for a suspect linked to the drug trade; Scola turns over a new leaf when it comes to his relationships.

odd. Young people today have to photograph everything. It doesn't make sense that they would have an active social media presence and somehow didn't post a single thing about this trip to Mexico.

The FBI spoke with the victims' loved ones. Julia Miller's mother thought her daughter was still out of the country on vacation and so she had no idea that her daughter flew in the night before. The mother also said her daughter was woefully broke. She was a college student and neither she nor her boyfriend had the funds for much. Yet, they had one for a vacation to Mexico? It didn't make sense. The FBI checked footage outside of the airport and the young couple got picked up by Benny Gomez. He even used his registered vehicle to pick them up. He was the last person to see them alive and so the FBI wanted to talk to him.

They went to his apartment. He ran after they identified themselves as FBI. They pursued Gomez. He managed to escape them and so put out an APB on him. They later caught up to him as he was meeting another agent. this other agent's name is Nina. Nina and Scola had a thing. They hooked up and he failed to call her the next morning and so he felt bad about crashing her case. Nina was using Gomez as a criminal informant to get information on the Mexican Regents. They're notorious gangs that rely heavily on drugs. Gomez had picked up the couple because the kids were acting as mules for the gang.

But something went wrong. Julia was starting to feel sick. She asked to be let out of the car and so Gomez told her to walk around. Get some fresh air. Gomez called his boss to report it and his boss said that he would take care of it. The next thing that happens is that the kids are murdered. The gang cut out the drugs in the mule and Gomez moved on. He claims not to have witnessed anything. He also said that he didn't know for sure what happened to the couple. He just ran because he hadn't wanted to be arrested by the FBI. Scola and Tiffany working with Nina managed to convince Gomez to get information on his boss.

On Octavio. Nina was already working with an angel to tie the gang to the drugs and so the FBI commandeered it. They asked her informant to become their informant. They asked him to get a DNA sample of Octavio's and to get his confession. Nina prepped Gomez. She told him to get what he could and unfortunately, that was nothing. Nina hadn't wanted to blow the ops. She ended up grabbing cigarette buds from the trash as a means of getting Octavio's DNA. It wasn't a match to the DNA found underneath Julia's fingernails and so the team thought he might have hired someone else to do it.

The FBI continued looking into Octavio. They followed Nina's plan for what she had already set up and that was her going in undercover. Nina pretended to be a buyer out of Canada. She got close to Octavio. She convinced him to make a buy. They were going to later meet up and, at that time, Nina learned that Octavio doesn't smoke. It was his guard that does. The team was able to grab Octavio's beer bottle and that was a match to the DNA from the crime scene. Octavio killed Julia Miller and her boyfriend. Nina still wanted to make her bust. She wanted to get to Octavio's boss. So, she arranged to meet up with Octavio and El Perro.

It was only Octavio that showed. Octavio got paranoid. He mistrusts everyone. He hadn't wanted to involve the big boss and so the FBI got worried. They made promises to Nina that she could have this bust, but they realized too late that that wasn't enough and so they arrested Octavio for murder. It didn't take the man long before he flipped on his own boss. Scola also found out their plan for Nina. They were going to rob her and then kill her. Scola later tried calling Nina to make sure she wasn't trying to make the buy without help. She wasn't taking his calls because she was angry at him for ruining her op.

Scola and Tiffany tracked down Nina. She was meeting with El Perro. They got there the same time as El Perro and so it led to a shootout. the agents were able to take down El Perro. They had to call for an ambulance because Gomez got shot as well. And after everything, they did together, plus him saving her life, Nina allowed Scola to make up for never calling her.

Summary: The team discovers that deadly sarin gas may have been sold to terrorists, forcing OA to confront one of his biggest fears.

A security guard at the Federal Reserve Bank was murdered. Before he was a guard, he was in the military and heavily believed in protecting his country. But the guy was acting suspiciously on the day he died. Tom Hamilton told his wife he was going to work.

He instead drove miles away near-deserted warehouse to meet with two men from the Middle East. He gave them something. He asked them not to use it on American soil and they swore they wouldn't. Those same people killed him to hide how he was helping them. Meaning they were going to use it on American soil. They were planning a terrorist attack and it had been Hamilton who gave them the means to do it. And unfortunately, the FBI didn't know all of this as they began to look into Hamilton.

At first, all they knew was that he was acting suspiciously. They looked into him. They found out that he had a secret computer and so they asked his wife about it. She tried to lie initially. She denied knowing her husband had a computer. The FBI had to confront her with the facts and that's when she told them. She told them her husband had a hidden lair in the basement. She wasn't allowed to go in and so she had no knowledge of the sarin gas hidden there. It was when she led the FBI to the room that they looked. They found one of the most dangerous chemicals used in warfare ever known.

The FBI had to ask the wife to come with for further questioning. She was asked about her husband as her house was being searched and she admitted that her husband was a conspiracy theorist. He became convinced that the government was going to turn against the country. He started stockpiling weapons in that hidden room. He was preparing for this supposed war. He went online to talk about it and he met like-minded people in these chat rooms. It's where he eventually met his killers. Someone on the message boards was looking for mustard gas. Which was sarin gas under a different name. These people claimed they wanted to use in Syria and get revenge for loved ones.

It didn't make sense. What with them somehow getting the gas in the United States and smuggling it in Syria. How were they going to get such weapon pass security? Were they getting a private plane? If they had money for that then how come they didn't just buy another weapon? There were so many questions and Hamilton had questions too. He asked to meet with the guy before he handed over the gas. He met with him four days at a restaurant before he handed over the weapon. The FBI traced who he was meeting with and they identified the man as Abbas. Abbas was a Syrian-born refugee.

He came to the United States to escape the civil war. He got out. His son didn't. His sons were still in Syria when an American missile dropped and killed them both. Abbas has never been the same since. He blamed the United States for his sons' death. It got so bad that his sister kicked him out. She said Abbas moved in with a guy named Nassar and she gave the FBI the address. They raided the house. They didn't find either man. This Nassar was also bad news. He was a Syrian-born terrorist accused of killing Americans overseas. He was a wanted man. Every wanted to arrest him and so him being in America was bad.

Him having access to sarin gas was the worst possible outcome because now there's no doubt. There was a terrorist attack planned on American soil and it was up to the FBI to stop the plot. They went looking for the two men involved. They later found Nassar driving a stolen car and they tried to arrest him when a bystander got in the way. Like, literally, everyone had their guns out, but this guy wanted to film everything. He got in the way. The FBI didn't return fire because they didn't want to risk the bystander's life. Nassar fired at them and escaped in the chaos. He met up with Abbas.

They later killed an FBI Agent. Only, the FBI eventually learned that the two men were making several bombs with the sarin gas. They went looking where these chemical bombs could be made and they realized that Abbas used to work at a lab. The lab shut down due to budget cuts. It was therefore deserted and was the perfect place to make these bombs. The FBI went to the old lab. They started searching the place and they kept running into tripwire. Maggie and OA hadn't been able to wait for backup. They went in alone. Just the two of them. They also had to split up once they went inside because the lab was huge and so Maggie ended up finding the bad guys before OA did. And she was forced to confront Abbas alone.

Maggie killed Nassar. She made it to Abbas and he refused to turn himself in. She was forced to kill him, but not before one of the canisters of sarin gas managed to fall and break. It filled the room with gas. It was a lab and it went into lockdown. It shut the doors before Maggie could escape. She was trapped in a room quickly filling with sarin gas. And OA was being forced to watch. OA tried to press the button to open the doors. It didn't work. He next tried to move the doors with brute strength and again it didn't work. OA had to wait until the doors opened on their own. And by then, he was wearing a mask.

OA rushed in to grab Maggie and he took her outside to get fresh air. He also gave her something that was supposed to help with the chemical attack, but it's a wait-and-see if Maggie recovers from this.

Summary: When a morning show host is murdered, the team tracks the killer, who is targeting powerful women.

Things haven't been the same since Maggie was exposed to sarin gas. She was hospitalized afterward. She was recovering albeit slowly. She was suffering from damage to her nervous system and so she was going to need months of rehab before she even thinks of coming back.

If she ever does! Scola's possible girlfriend was actually filling in for Maggie temporarily. Nina has worked with the team before. They saved her life on the job and that meant she wouldn't be in any trouble. Not for the team anyways.

Maybe for Scola. Also, maybe for Isobel. Isobel got into a lot of trouble after it was revealed two of her agents were exposed to sarin gas on her watch and so Isobel got a lecture from her boss that there shouldn't be any more cowboy moves on her part.

No rushing in on things. No quick decisions that didn't take into account the full ramifications on the agents involved. Isobel is on notice because she's done things like this before. She was told to keep her head down in the future and she tried to, but then her team caught a serial killer case. They were asked to step in by the NYPD after three women were murdered matching the same MO. They were all wealthy as well as successful women in their thirties to forties when someone broke into their house and repeatedly stabbed them to death. The latest victim's wife was also attacked. She was in the hospital.

The victim's daughter on the other hand survived the night. She hid in the closet. She heard and saw the man who attacked her mom and stepmom. She described the killer as young, tall, and black. The FBI looked into it and they found someone matching that description who worked for the latest victim. They showed a picture of the man to the daughter. The little girl said that was the man who broke in. Only it couldn't be. That guy had a solid alibi and there was security footage of someone breaking into the house. The footage wasn't of the man that the little girl identified. It was of someone else.

The little girl made a mistake. She saw the man at night and while she was afraid. She was also white. Making an identification is a lot harder across racial fields. The little girl didn't mean to get it wrong, but now the team know they needed to look for more than just someone she could identify. They tried running facial recognition on the footage they had. It was too grainy and dark. It hadn't worked. The team next tried going to the public for help. Isobel was advised against this. The profiler that her boss sent to "assist" her was more like a watchdog. He thought they shouldn't go to the media with what they had because the serial killer was killing women to feel powerful.

It was very rare for a serial killer to be black. This guy also wasn't targeted the fielding that the rare black serial killer does target. He was going after wealthy women. Not the disenfranchised group they normally target. The profiler said their killer was someone who felt inferior to the women he was killing. He said those men were usually white. Isobel ignored what the profiler was saying and she went to the media anyways. She released the footage they had because a new victim was killed. She was afraid that their killer was on a spree and that he would target someone new if they didn't get help from the media.

Isobel didn't just ignore the profiler. She took what he meant and she turned it around to bait the killer. She called him weak. She called him a coward who needed to strike in the dark. Isobel's play worked out for them because they did get help from the media and one person identified a man leaving an abandoned church. There had been pieces of stained glass in the footprints left at a scene. It matched the idea of the killer using an abandoned church as his headquarters. The FBI went to the church. They didn't find the killer, but they did find his plans for all the houses he mapped out and there was a new address in his kill book.

The address was in fact Isobel's address. She angered the killer so much that he was targeting her next and Isobel barely got a call from Jubal warning her about the killer before she actually had to fight him. She fought him. She took off his mask. She also saw that he wasn't actually black. He was a white guy wearing a blackface mask. Isobel didn't get a good look at the face before the guy ran off. Except that didn't matter. They still had the killer's book and the book revealed something about the killer. It revealed he was using restaurant language to identify the victims as PPX and PX. This means VIP in restaurant language.

The FBI looked into a restaurant connection between the victims. They all seemed to dine at one of the victim's ex-husband's places. He started working at the restaurant after his theater job didn't pan out during the pandemic. He broke up with his wife. She went on to marry a powerful woman and took their daughter with her. Her second wedding anniversary is when David Owen started killing women. It's when he started targeting other powerful women. Women who make him feel like he was inferior to them and he would have killed Isobel too if she hadn't fought back. He must have gotten scared that the police were onto him after he attacked Isobel because he kidnaped his daughter and he went on the run.

Thankfully, his ex woke up at the hospital. She told them where Owen would run to after they narrowed it down using an EZ Pass. The FBI ended up going to her family cabin where they found Owen. Only Owen had pulled a gun on his daughter. He had spared her earlier when he attacked her mother and stepmom, but that was out the window the moment he realized he could face real prison time. Owen really was a coward. Isobel realized this and she wanted them to storm in before Owen killed his daughter. The profiler argued against this. Isobel ignored him and she trusted her gut instead.

Isobel turned out to be right because the FBI was able to get to Owen before he killed his daughter. The profiler thought she got lucky and she corrected him by mentioning she was one of ten female SACs in the FBI. She's been getting "lucky" for a long time now.

As for Owen, he was going away for life.

Production Code: FBI420
Summary: The murder of a TSA agent leads the team to hunt down a killer who is using drug mules to exploit airport security checkpoints.

Someone murdered a TSA Agent. The victim's name was Cher Wilkins. The killer also wasn't alone when they murdered that woman. There were two different sets of footprints found near the body and robbery was ruled out from the beginning. There was nothing stolen from the victim.

The killers left behind a car and her wallet. This death was suspicious. It was given to the FBI who investigated it. The FBI soon learned that the victim had recently begun flashing a lot of money around. Her boss was suspicious because he was of the opinion that whenever a TSA Agent starts throwing money around that it means they agreed to help drug mules and that's what he told the FBI. He said that Wilkins showed up one day in an expensive car.

A car she couldn't afford on her own salary. Wilkins was known to always be broke and so she hadn't been saving her paycheck. She instead claimed that her father died. She told her boss that she came into some money that way and the FBI looked it up. Her father wasn't dead. He was still alive. He tweeted about his daughter's death once he had been notified. He, therefore, hadn't been able to leave money to her in his will and she got her hands on over forty grand of cash by some dishonest means. Her boss had thought it was a drug mule operation. The FBI suspected something else.

They found out that Wilkins bought a flashy car before she died. She also was looking to sell that same car because she needed to repay someone back. Wilkins it seems had gotten involved with someone on the dark web. She made a deal with them. A deal she wanted to back out of. She felt she had to after her boss started to get suspicious of her and so whoever she was in bed with had killed her to keep their secret of what she was doing from getting out. Wilkins thought it was drugs. She let a man through in with a suspicious backpack that she never checked. The FBI found this man. They identified him.

They also brought him in for questioning. Jorge said he got paid five grand to take a bag of what he was told was heroin through the airport. He had taken this bag to Chicago where he left it in the trash right outside the airport. Jorge never looked inside the bag. It had been zip-tied. Jorge was just told it was drugged and that he would be getting five grand. He hasn't gotten his money yet. But he was supposed to meet up with the man who hired him. Jorge identified the man as Jem Polat. Polat was born in Turkey. He was raised in Syria. He came over two years ago on a temporary visa and he's since opened a restaurant.

OA suspected that another man was involved. A man by the name of Tamir Hazara. Hazara is a terrorist that had supposedly been killed by a drone strike and it was just OA who thought he was still alive. OA and his team back in Afghanistan had hunted this man. They desperately tried to find him and OA lost a friend because of it. It was the tenth anniversary of the death of his friend, Tom. He and his old war buddies would meet up on the anniversary by visiting the grave, grabbing lunch, and wearing a piece of string tied around their fingers. OA, therefore, wasn't in a clear mindset when he claims he saw Hazara.

Nina had been with him. She talked to him about his late friend. She even saw a glimpse of the terrorist he claims to have seen. She didn't think he looked like the guy. She thought he was just still grieving. Nina would have left things there if OA had done the same. Only OA kept insisting Hazara was involved. Nina just thought he was risking the real case to build a fabricated one. She went to Jubal about it. She hadn't asked for anything to outright be said against OA and so she just kept Jubal in the loop. The FBI later learned that Jorge hadn't been transporting drugs. He was transporting a bomb.

They got it after Jorge was asked to do another delivery. They got Polat on record admitting he had an insider in TSA and that meant he had someone besides Wilkins. She's dead. So, someone had to replace her to keep this thing going. The FBI arrested Polat. They fingerprinted him. He wasn't really Polat. He was actually an Afghani. Someone who fought in the Afghani and Soviet War. Someone who also fought in the war against the Americans. Polat was now willing to commit an act of terrorism on American soil. Polat was denying the charges. He was even answering his fake name. The most he was willing to say about what he's being charged with is that there was no such thing as innocent victims.

The Americans killed a bunch of people. Polat thought it was only fair to return the favor. OA tried to ask Polat about Hazara. Polat asked for his lawyer. But everyone assumed that OA was acting unhinged. No one believed him about Hazara. OA did some investigating on the side. He found the man he thought was Hazara. He got his location. He was doing this around the same time that the FBI learned the new TSA Agent was only helping because his wife and son had been abducted. They were threatening to kill his family if he didn't make sure their package went through security. And so OA found them.

He found them by surprising everyone by actually finding Hazara. Hazara hadn't been dead. He simply faked his death and so OA busting down his door with backup was what saved that TSA Agent's family. It also put an end to Hazara. OA was able to kill him and so that finally put an end to Hazara's terrorism.

And Nina even apologized to OA for doubting him. They were new partners. She didn't know him that well and so if it had been Maggie then maybe things could have been different.

Production Code: FBI421
Summary: When a retired DEA agent is shot outside a bakery, the team works to determine if the victim's past cases or current bouncer job are connected to the murder.

Retired DEA Special Agent Thomas Webber was gunned down outside of a bakery. Webber was a good man. A good agent. He retired the moment his pension kicked in. He barely had time to spend it when he was killed in broad daylight and no one saw a thing that could help. The witnesses claim that the shooter wore a mask. He also disappeared before they could tell which direction he left in. But the FBI who was working this case wasn't sure if Webber's murder had anything to do with his past cases or if it involved his latest line of work. Webber worked as a bouncer. He worked at a strip club called "Show Palace".

There was an incident at the strip club the night before Webber was killed. Webber was forced to throw out a guy who got aggressive with one of the girls and the guy claimed he was her boyfriend. Webber still showed this man the door. The FBI got footage of the incident and they went looking for this supposed boyfriend. They later identified him as Rafer Boggs. Boggs tried to run when they announced themselves as FBI and so they were forced to pursue as well as detain him before they found out that Boggs had an alibi for the time of death. He couldn't be their shooter. And so the FBI came to believe that Boggs had nothing to do with what happened.

This was confirmed when there was a second murder. This time a church janitor was shot and killed. The witness in that murder described someone wearing a mask. The killer used the same gun on both victims and so which connected the murders. Only no one knew at first how the two victims were connected. A DEA Agent and a bouncer didn't really operate on the same level. Jubal's team still went looking for any possible connection and they eventually found one. It turns out that both victims were due to testify in a prominent trial against LS-19. Webber was the lead investigator on the case and so he was due to testify as to the investigator.

The janitor was moonlighting as a car mechanic when he found a bunch of drugs stashed in an LS-19 car. He was also going to testify to that fact. Both men were testifying against one of the big bosses in the gang and so their murders must have been carried out to prevent that. Jubal had everyone attached to the case called and warned. They were all going into protective custody while the case was being dealt with. But the FBI also had to find the shooter. They knew who hired him. They just needed access to his phone to prove he accepted the job and that's where Kayla Marsh came in. Marsh had access to the phone because she was working for the suspected shooter.

Marsh works with him in one of his legitimate businesses. She was a waitress. She was also a drug addict. The FBI simply had to grab her after she routinely bought drugs and they threatened to press charges if she didn't help them. Marsh agreed to the plans. She did so under the condition that it was a one-and-done thing only life had other plans. Marsh grabbed the phone. The FBI was able to clone it. They knew that their suspect got the call to carry out the job. They also know that he wasn't their shooter. The last one was proved when their suspect was himself murdered by the shooter. And so they looked into who he was last in contact with.

It turns out their real shooter was identified as Trey Cooper. He was another LS-19 member. He was also Marsh's boyfriend. The one she didn't want knowing she was back on drugs because he disapproves of it. That boyfriend. Trey was heavily in contact with their previous suspect. He also owns a gun that looks exactly like a murder weapon. They brought in Marsh and she identified the gun as the one her boyfriend uses. She should know. She lives with him. She said her boyfriend has a gun for their protection. He keeps it in a safe. The FBI had Marsh wear a wire and go collect the gun.

They even threatened to put her back in jail for the drug charges. Which frustrated Marsh. She wants to be done with the FBI. She didn't want to be at their beck and call forever. But she brought this on herself. The only person who felt bad for her was Nina. Nina didn't believe in using drug addicts as informants. She tried to fight against it and each and every time she was ignored by her boss. It also didn't help that she was working this case with Tiffany who was just fine with using Marsh. Marsh got them what they asked for. She stole her boyfriend's gun. She then told them that she was done with helping them and so it's a good thing they put a tracker in her car.

Marsh got a message from her boyfriend telling her that he needed to leave town in a hurry. She agreed to go with him never knowing that he found out she lied when she stopped by the house and so his plan was to always kill her. The FBI found out that Cooper was their killer. They were looking for him anyway when they used the tracker on Marsh to find him. He had taken Marsh hostage. And they were forced to shoot and kill him.

They told Marsh afterward that she should have trusted them when her boyfriend first reached out to her. But she accused them of ruining her life. She said that before they entered her life — she had a job, a boyfriend, and a place to live. And now that's all gone.

Tiffany and Nina later talked about their tough day on the job. They both spoke about their private lives. Nina set up a trust fund for the child of one of her informants who died on the job and that was a lot for her because she came from a trailer. And so Tiffany said Webber was one of the guys who made her feel welcome as a federal officer. So, that's why she kept pushing so hard with Marsh.

Summary: The team's sting operation to secure a massive bomb from an illegal broker leads them to discover that the device is already in the wrong hands.

FBI Special Agent Omar Adom went in undercover as a buyer in a weapons deal. He was pretending to be a terrorist and he wanted to buy a bomb. The guy who was making the deal didn't care about OA's motives or how he was going to use the bomb. He just wanted to sell it. Curt Mallory also demanded that OA get into his car. Curt then drove the both of them to a warehouse where they were supposed to collect the bomb and seal the deal. But something didn't go according to plan. Curt went into the warehouse to find his friend Anish dead and the bomb missing. Curt doesn't know who killed his friend or who knew enough about him and the bomb to steal it.

But OA wasn't Curt's only buyer. Curt talked to another potential buyer that same morning. The other guy said his name was Nate and that he was eager to get his hands on a bomb. A little too eager. He made Curt suspect him. Curt thought he could be a cop and he ended the deal right then and there. Then his friend died. The bomb went missing. Curt ended up getting arrested for almost selling a bomb and so he gave as much information on Nate as he could because he wanted to lessen the charges for himself. OA and the rest of the team then went looking for Nate. Nate bought the car he used to meet Curt within days of the transaction.

The team was able to trace that car to the original owner. He said he knew Nate. Nate lived in his neighborhood. He gave the FBI the address. They went over there looking for Nate and they instead found a guy bleeding out from a gunshot wound. Nate has already killed two people to get his hands on a bomb. Before Nate's friend died of the gunshot wound, he admitted he tried to stop Nate. He said Nate was going to kill a lot of people. The guy later died before he could say anymore. Which left the FBI in a predicament. They knew that Nate wanted to use the bomb. They knew he was an extremist by what they found in his room.

Nate seems to be an ultra leftie. He hated conservatives beyond anything normal and he's been choosing targets amongst that group. Nate and his late roommate Tony disagreed on a lot of things. Tony thought Nate was too intense. He asked one of his neighbors to help him evict Nate and the neighbor hadn't wanted to get involved. Something that proved helpful for him if not for Tony. Tony was wearing a waiter's uniform when he died. The FBI reached out to Tony's boss to see if he was catering to conservative events in the city. It turns out he was supposed to. There was a conference and a guy who supported the Supreme Court overturning abortion rights and gun rights had been the lead speaker.

The FBI couldn't make a call to disband the conference. If they were wrong about Nate's intended target, they would be dragged through the conservative media for months on end over their mistake. But there was a chance they could be right. Special Agent in Charge Isobel Castille put in an order to have a heavy FBI presence at the conference. She didn't choose anything more than that until they had confirmation that Nate was heading towards the conference. Nate ditched his new car. He stole a car from another guy before driving in the direction of the conference. The team was able to use facial recognition on Nate to get his full name.

Nate was Nathan Baker. He's been in and out of mental hospitals since he set a conservative's house on fire. He's stepping that up into murder now. The FBI found the car that Nate stole at the conference. Once that was confirmed, Isobel made the call to evacuate the building. The FBI was having a hard time doing so because it was a large building with people spread all throughout it. The FBI used surveillance cameras to determine where Nate took the bomb. He took it to the basement. He also started before running off. The FBI couldn't find Nate right away, but they did find the bomb and the bomb was just a little too complicated for the bomb squad.

The bomb squad said that there wasn't enough time to get through all the complicated parts of the bomb. They wrote it off as if it couldn't be defused and even said to OA that it was going to go off. The bomb squad left the building because they thought the bomb was going to go off. In spite of people still being inside. They left behind OA. OA was given an order to leave the building. He chose not to because he heard there was just too many people in the building to fully clear it. Even Isobel has signed off on not being able to save everyone. And so it was just OA who decided to take a chance.

He picked up the bomb in spite of the risks. He carried to his car. He then drove the car as far away as possible before ditching and running out. OA got away before the bomb went off. But it did go off. Nate stayed around to watch it blow. The FBI spotted him and pursued him. He stole a car from someone at the event, but he also took a hostage because there was a teenage boy in that car when he stole it and they couldn't afford to shoot him with the boy in the car. The FBI traced the car. They found it abandoned at a boatyard. Nate had holed himself up with the boy. He kept threatening to shoot the kid if he wasn't allowed to escape.

Only the FBI couldn't allow that to happen. Jubal got Nate talking while Stuart and Tiffany snuck behind him from the back and they got the gun out of Nate's hands.

Jubal did his job, but he missed his son's birthday party and his son has been struggling. Only four kids showed up. Most missed out on the party because of a Mets game. His son has been struggling with depression and crying himself to sleep and so his father missing his party was just icing on a crappy cake.

Summary: The team investigates a young Ivy League dropout linked to the deaths of an officer and a pawn shop owner.

There was a shooting at a pawn shop. Some guy wearing a balaclava mask had gone into a pawn shop and robbed the place, but not before shooting the owner of the store as well as a cop who had been in there. The cop was still alive when a witness went in to check on people inside. The cop told her to call 911. He, unfortunately, died before he could say anything else and it was the deaths of these two men that launched an FBI investigation. The FBI investigates bank heists or the thefts of financial institutions. Which is what the pawn shop was. The FBI, therefore, was running lead on this one and the first thing they wanted to know was why was Detective Villa there that day.

The detective could have been working a case during his off-time. He didn't put in any paperwork or tell his partner that he was visiting the pawn shop and so the FBI had to guess at his motives. The one thing they didn't have to guess at was coming up with suspects. There was a career criminal whose cell phone pinged off a tower nearby the pawnshop around the time of the murders. Logan Reid fenced a lot of items to the pawn shop. He most likely stole those items. The detective could have been investigating him thanks to that. And the pawn shop owner could have been helping the detective make his case.

But Logan was innocent. Sure, he was a career criminal. He was also in the area and yet he wasn't the guy. Logan was going to the pawn shop to sell more items when he saw the man with the mask running out. He even took a picture of the guy. He got an image of the car in the photo. The FBI used that to track down their shooter. He was still wearing the mask when the authorities caught up to him and he began firing at them in a bid to escape. This plan unfortunately did work out for the murderer. He had taken a shot at Nina. Nina's coworker/boyfriend Stuart got worried about her safety and the hooded man escaped before anyone knew it.

Stuart knows taking his eyes off the killer was a stupid move. He wouldn't have done it if it had been anyone else. Only it was Nina. Nina and Stuart have been together for months. They were growing strong and Stuart cared more about her than he did about getting the bad guy. The bad guy got away from him that time. Just not before the cameras picked on him taking off the hood. They ran facial recognition on the guy and he was identified as Devjeet Kamara. He doesn't have a record. He was a straight-A student who got a full scholarship to Columbia where he ultimately dropped out. And so the FBI questioned his parents.

The parents said that Dev lost his way after he fell in love with an unsuitable girl. They were Sikh. She wasn't. Dev cut off his hair to be with her and dropped out of college. The parents then cut him off. They hadn't heard from him in months when out of nowhere he called them on the morning of the murders to ask for 40,000 dollars. His mother hung up on him. She refused to give him the money as long as he was still with the girl. The parents basically wrote off their son and praised their daughter. Their daughter became a doctor. She was still following her faith. She also wasn't dating anyone "unsuitable".

The sister knew Dev's most recent address. The FBI later went there. They didn't find Dev. They did find a bunch of pictures of him with his girlfriend and his girlfriend's high school yearbook. Her name is Skylar Smith. She wasn't in school that day. Her mother had no idea where she was and she said that Skylar borrowed her car. The FBI traced the car. They found it abandoned with blood on the widows. Security footage nearby showed that Skylar had been kidnapped. Two men grabbed her and threw in the back of a car. It would explain why Dev was so desperate to get money. He was trying to get enough for the ransom demand.

It also explained why a seemingly innocent young man would rob a pawn shop. Dev needed the money to get back his girl and so the FBI tried to help by locating Skylar. They tracked the car that took her back to a Las Espadas gangbanger. The guy was sporting the black eye that Skylar gave him. They pushed him into the kidnapping. He quickly confessed to everything in exchange for a lesser sentence. It turns out Dev was a drug dealer. The cops never checked the nerds, but the nerds didn't have any street smarts. Dev thought the cops were following him and he flushed down 40,000 dollars worth of drugs thanks to that sense of paranoia.

The leader of the gang wanted that money back. He took Skylar as a means of forcing Dev's hands and what he didn't expect was that Dev would bluff his way into the building. Dev came in with a bag full of paper. Before the gangbanger knew it, he got shot. Dev killed the leader of Las Espadas. He got a shot in the gut in exchange and he got back his girl. He then went on the run with Skylar. They went to his parent's place. They made his sister the doctor patch him up before going back out on the road. By this point, Skylar was still considered a victim. She wasn't that anymore once she took the lead after her boyfriend was too injured to raise his gun.

When the FBI finally caught up with the couple, it was Skylar who took over with the gun. She began firing at the FBI agents and she also took a hostage. Skylar and Dev were held up in an auto repair shop with their victim. There were even more victims inside. Skylar was controlling them all with her gun. She didn't want them arresting her boyfriend. She asked that they send in a paramedic. She saw that the paramedic was a woman and so Nina decided to pretend to be the paramedic in order to talk Skylar down. Stuart didn't like that plan. He tried to talk OA into sending him in only Skylar had already clocked the paramedic was a woman.

Nina went in. She eventually tried to talk down Skylar. But Skylar wasn't having any of it. She threatened to kill the hostages if Dev died and so she was spiraling out. Nina couldn't wait anymore. She convinced Skylar to get Dev some water. She did this knowing that once Skylar was in position — the sniper would take the shot. Skylar was killed. Dev was rushed to surgery. And it looks like Dev is going to make it, but he probably won't be happy about it.

Those kids made all the wrong choices and now they've thrown their lives away.

Love makes you do crazy things.

Summary: As the team investigates a deadly robbery that garnered a cache of automatic weapons for the killers, they discover one of the perps is a classmate of Jubal's son, who is reluctant to cooperate.

The episode was first aired on May 24, 2022 and interrupted by yet another heinous mass shooting at an elementary school in Uvalde, Texas.

A crew robbed a gun store. They also murdered the brother of the owner. Teddy had been working nights trying to earn some extra money and sadly it was his dream to one day open a restaurant. But that dream is now gone. Teddy was dead. Several guns and ammo were stolen. The FBI was called in because the weapons elevated this situation from a simple smash and grab. The cache of missing weapons was a federal issue. Jubal and his team caught the case. They checked on the surveillance cameras from the store and they got something. One of the guys they were looking for had kept his face covered, but his t-shirt was recognizable.

Especially to Jubal. Jubal recognized the cougar insignia as the mascot from his son's high school, Chapman. The school was located in Scarsdale. In the same area as the gun store and the principal there took one look at the still photo from the security camera and he knew which student was involved. He said his name was Clayton. Clayton was a troubled student. His art teacher recently complained he's been drawing darker and more violent works of art. Clayton was frankly someone you'd suspect in a school shooting. Clayton also wasn't in school that day.

He should have been. He wasn't. The FBI went to Clayton's house and he hid behind a door while he tried to convince them to leave. And they had to refuse.

They suspected Clayton in a robbery/homicide. They asked him to come out with his hands up. He got antsy and Clayton took his own life. He shot himself in his room with several FBI waiting outside. The FBI was later able to determine that the gun Clayton used was one of the weapons stolen during the robbery. It proved Clayton was involved. But there was a problem. The other missing weapons hadn't been at Clayton's house. All he had was a handgun. There were missing assault rifles at play and so the FBI suspected Clayton's partner had them. The FBI went digging into Clayton's life.

They talked to all of his friends. Jubal actually went off script with one of them. His son Tyler was friends with Clayton. Jubal hadn't known. He also didn't know that his son recently became a gamer. Jubal was a little out of touch with Tyler's life. He didn't even know Tyler was going by his mother's maiden name. Jubal's ex-wife had been complaining a lot lately that Tyler was in a crisis and that he didn't have many friends. Tyler was apparently crying himself to sleep over it. Yet, Jubal chose to ignore this. It was only now that he was worried about his son. He was worried now because his son had been hanging out with a killer.

Jubal asked Tyler about Clayton. They met once Tyler became a gamer. He's made friends through that community and he was better lately. Even his own mother said so. Tyler said that Clayton was weird. He also said that weren't that good of friends. He also didn't want to snitch on anyone else in the gamer crew. Jubal was not anywhere with him and so he went to his ex-wife. Jubal's ex-wife confirmed Tyler's whereabouts on the night of the murder. He was at home. He wasn't involved in the crime and Jubal had wanted to believe he wasn't involved in the plot either. He didn't tell anyone else on his team about talking to Tyler.

Jubal kept his son out of the investigation. The man had wanted to believe that Tyler couldn't be connected to this case. But Tyler's name did keep coming up. Tyler's name came up again once the FBI had cleared the high school and gotten the kids to safety. They had identified Clayton's partner. His name was Zach. Zach wrote on social media about how he was going to be iconic and so the FBI knew he was still planning something. They went looking for him. Someone from the school pointed Jubal towards Tyler. Jubal confronted his son about Zach. Tyler admitted he's good friends with the guy.

Only Tyler didn't admit at the time that Zach had called him. He instead tried to tell his father that Zach was the only person who was genuinely nice to him and that he didn't think he could be involved in this. But Tyler left out the call. It wasn't until they finally checked Zach's phone records that it showed he called Tyler and Jubal once again had to confront his son. Tyler was never completely honest with his father. He kept making excuses for Zach. He kept making excuses for himself. He said he was the cancer kid. He didn't really have friends before he met Zach and Zach looked out for him.

Jubal heard that yet he still wanted to believe his son was innocent. It wasn't until he tried to reach his son on his phone and couldn't that he realized something was wrong. It turns out Tyler managed to sneak away from the house without his mother knowing. But Jubal reported it to his team. They checked the last person who called Tyler and it was a phone from one of Zach's victims. Zach had robbed another gun store in the meantime. That time he stole bullets. He was now fully armed and was a danger to every public place. Why would Tyler agree to meet him? Why wouldn't Tyler tell his father? Jubal had to go running after his son and he eventually caught up to him.

Tyler had been meeting with Zach. Zach saw Jubal and he freaked. He took Tyler hostage. He went on to take a whole bookstore hostage. Jubal called it in and he also didn't wait around for permission. He went into that bookstore. He told Zach that if he wants to kill someone he should kill him and not Tyler. Zach then turned his gun on Jubal. It was his son who saved his life by pushing the gun away. Jubal was able to get to Zach and restrain him with no one getting hurt and it ultimately brought him closer to his son. They loved each other at the end of the day. And Tyler realized being friendless was better than being friends with someone like Zach.

Summary: The team investigates a series of brutal assaults; OA hides information about his own mugging.

The episode begins with OA, who was robbed. He was outside walking on the street when a woman called out to him for help. OA went towards her to assist her and that's when she pulled him towards the wall so that her boyfriend could come up behind him with a gun. They stole OA's watch as well as his wallet. They also mocked him. They told him next time someone calls for help — he should keep walking. But those two didn't know OA was an FBI agent. An assault on him was a federal offense. He could have reported it to his bosses and they could have gone after the two people that robbed him, but OA didn't report it. He got a call about a murder on federal property. And he went running to work.

The victim was Marta Munoz. She was young. She was in her twenties and her killer brutally raped her before strangling her to death. The means of her death seemed personal. The FBI went looking into the victim's life for any enemies. They spoke with Marta's mother. The mother said Marta's last boyfriend was nice. He also moved to Texas years ago. The ex-boyfriend didn't do this. He didn't hate Marta. Her killer seems to have hated her. Marta's killer came prepared to kill her. He brought along handcuffs to subdue her. The FBI was looking at someone who possibly stalked Marta and knew her routine and that's how he knew when to target her.

The FBI later came up with a suspect. They found someone had been following Marta for a few blocks. They tracked down the guy and OA was a little aggressive with him. OA wasn't normally the type to rough up suspects, but he was off his game. He hasn't been the same since he was robbed. It also didn't help that Isobel knew about the robbery. She got alerted when the cops came looking for OA. Someone saw him get robbed and they called 911. The cops were now involved. They've been looking for the duo that robbed OA for months now. Those two have robbed at least five others on top of what they did to OA. And so OA was asked to help the local police with this crime.

OA turned them down. He claimed he didn't get a good look at anyone's face when he was robbed. He also asked Isobel to keep what happened to herself. He didn't want anyone else to know what happened and so that's why he was aggressive in the field. It didn't even end with the roughing up of the suspect. That particular guy was guilty of following Marta for a few blocks only he wasn't guilty of her murder or her rape. He was just a tad creepy. That's all. The guy also had an alibi for both Marta's murder and the second victim's as well. The killer had struck again. He killed a second woman. And that was two dead in two days.

No one wanted it to get to a third day because they worried there would be another body. Isobel theorized that their killer seemed too neat. Like he's done this before. But no one starts off with murder. They work their way up to it. The FBI looked into any stalking complaints and rapes. They found someone who claimed it was attempted rape. Her name was Citra. She was Muslim. She was young. Her parents basically stood over her the whole interview and so all Citra was willing to admit was that the guy attempted to rape her. She claims she was able to fight him off. And that wasn't much.

The evidence also said that Citra was actually zip-tied. She was constrained. They asked about it and she wouldn't go into detail. There was also the fact that Citra didn't want to report it. Some neighbors who heard her screams had called it in. Citra never wanted anyone to know about her attack and she sure wasn't going to help the FBI in catching the guy. Something that OA understood. The people that robbed him had gone on to rob another guy and they shot that guy after he tried to fight back.

Which got through to OA. By that point, he did everything possible to not label himself a victim and he just couldn't run away from it any longer. He agreed to assist the detective. He said he'd help after he talked to a crucial witness. Which was true. OA met with Citra again. This time they talked without her parents nearby and she admitted what she was keeping back. She admitted that she had been wearing "improper" clothing. She felt ashamed and she actually thought she deserved what happened, but OA assured her that it wouldn't have mattered what she was wearing. The guy would always have been a problem. It was about opportunity. Not clothes.

Citra admitted that she did fight the guy off. She also got his blood on her clothes. She never admitted that before now. She didn't throw the clothes away and so she handed them over to the FBI and they got a DNA match from it. It turns out their killer was someone they spoke with earlier in the investigation. He was the guy that sold the handcuffs. It would explain why they couldn't find anyone suspicious who purchased the handcuffs because the guy was simply taking them from his own store. It was also revealed that Marta wasn't his first murderer. He began his spree by murdering a hooker ten days before Marta's death. The hooker's expertise was in bondage and restraints.

The victim was also a familiar face at the store. The hooker died during their "game". Something that infuriated the killer. He continued to beat her after her death and so that's when he turned towards targeting everyday women. He was about to attack his fourth victim when the FBI caught up to him. They rescued the girl and they arrested their perp.

OA also was able to identify the two people that robbed him and the detective was able to arrest them. Even though the guilt remained.

Summary: The team investigates when a wealthy accountant is gunned down for secretly testifying against a notorious drug lord.

A businessman was gunned down in broad daylight. The victim's name was Frank Leone. It was a hit. He was found with a ten thousand dollar watch still on him. The killers couldn't even be bothered to rob him. They just wanted him dead. Which was going to come back to bite them. Frank's death sparked an FBI investigation because local police couldn't get anyone to talk to them and its because of who Frank was. Frank was a wealthy accountant. He used to work at a big firm. He left them to go independent and it seems to have worked for him. He and his family were doing well. They've recently began liquidating everything into cash. And they did that because Frank turned against his biggest client.

Frank became an eyewitness for the U.S. Attorney. He was helping them build a case against a notorious drug lord who went by the nickname "El Feo". El Feo was ruthless. Frank was doing everyone a favor by assisting the government in taking him down, but El Feo realized someone talked the moment the grand jury against him convened. He's been moving throughout organization. Killing everyone he could. He also was destroying evidence of his empire along the way. He didn't know that Frank left behind notes. Frank was worried that something might happen to him. He gave his wife a file of everything he collected. He told her to give to the cops if anything ever happened to him.

The wife did just that when the FBI informed her of her husband's murder. She handed over the file and they used that to connect El Feo's operation to a seemingly harmless family woman. Her name was Margaret Saunders. The FBI didn't know how she was connected to El Feo. They went over to her house to ask her when they found both she and her husband dead. The husband was killed quickly. She was tortured. El Feo is tying up loose ends. He was doing it with everybody. But him killing his own people didn't shock those that knew him well. Tiffany knew El Feo's cousin. They went to the police academy together. And have remained friends in spite of him not passing.

Ralphie even turned to her a couple of weeks ago for help. He got in trouble with an illegal gun charge. He asked Tiffany if there was anyway to make sure he didn't go to prison and she told him there was nothing she could do at the time. Only things have since changed. Tiffany told her bosses about her friendship with Ralphie. She thought they could use Ralphie to get information on El Feo. They approved. They asked Tiffany to approach Ralphie about turning against his cousin and her partner Stuart went with her. They both got to see Ralphie. He was running his own locksmith shop. He was doing well.

But Ralphie was still angry at his cousin. He blamed El Feo for his brother's overdose. He also didn't think it was fair that El Feo has a mansion and he's struggling to get by despite doing everything right. Ralphie didn't need convincing to turn against his cousin. He's been against him. Its why he refused to join El Feo's organization. Ralphie was on board with the FBI and they approved him going over to his cousin's. Ralphie later wore a wire. He went over to his cousin's. He made jokes at his cousin's expense. He even planted a couple of cameras. Ralphie got close enough to mirror El Feo's electronic devices.

He did it all without getting caught. Ralphie was still bitter. Which Stuart noticed and not Tiff. But Ralphie was alive after helping them and the feds didn't need him to make a case against the shooters. They caught one of the shooters a few blocks away on some security camera. The shooter was busying taking off his mask. They identified him as Marcus Thierre. It took them a while to track him down only they later got him. They arrested him. They used the fact that he was a new dad to get him to flip on his partner. He told them his partner was Junior Luiz. The FBI went to go arrest Luiz. They later found him dead of a forced overdose and so they had nothing to connect the hit on a protected witness to El Feo.

They were still going to arrest El Feo regardless of the flimsy evidence they had. But El Feo went on the run. He secretly left his own house without alerting anyone and the FBI tracked his car to some wooded area. They also spotted Ralphie's car in that area. Ralphie had taken his cousin hostage. He was going to kill El Feo over what happened to his brother and Tiffany was forced to shoot her friend to stop him from killing El Feo, but El Feo then grabbed the fallen Ralphie's gun and Stuart was forced to kill him. Both Ralphie and El Feo were now dead. They didn't make it and that was tough on Tiffany because she knew Stuart had been right. Ralphie hadn't been ready for this job.

And to think, Ralphie would have become a cop if he had told his superior officer who else went drinking with him on the night he got picked up for the disorderly. And so Tiffany owed her badge to Ralphie. He was loyal to the end.

Summary: As the team works to rescue a kidnapped 5 year old, Scola suspects the boy's mother isn't being forthcoming about why her son was targeted.

A businessman was gunned down in broad daylight. The victim's name was Frank Leone. It was a hit. He was found with a ten thousand dollar watch still on him. The killers couldn't even be bothered to rob him. They just wanted him dead. Which was going to come back to bite them. Frank's death sparked an FBI investigation because local police couldn't get anyone to talk to them and its because of who Frank was. Frank was a wealthy accountant. He used to work at a big firm. He left them to go independent and it seems to have worked for him. He and his family were doing well. They've recently began liquidating everything into cash. And they did that because Frank turned against his biggest client.

Frank became an eyewitness for the U.S. Attorney. He was helping them build a case against a notorious drug lord who went by the nickname "El Feo". El Feo was ruthless. Frank was doing everyone a favor by assisting the government in taking him down, but El Feo realized someone talked the moment the grand jury against him convened. He's been moving throughout organization. Killing everyone he could. He also was destroying evidence of his empire along the way. He didn't know that Frank left behind notes. Frank was worried that something might happen to him. He gave his wife a file of everything he collected. He told her to give to the cops if anything ever happened to him.

The wife did just that when the FBI informed her of her husband's murder. She handed over the file and they used that to connect El Feo's operation to a seemingly harmless family woman. Her name was Margaret Saunders. The FBI didn't know how she was connected to El Feo. They went over to her house to ask her when they found both she and her husband dead. The husband was killed quickly. She was tortured. El Feo is tying up loose ends. He was doing it with everybody. But him killing his own people didn't shock those that knew him well. Tiffany knew El Feo's cousin. They went to the police academy together. And have remained friends in spite of him not passing.

Summary: Maggie returns from medical leave in time to help the team investigate two homicides.

Someone murdered two people in a federal park up in the Bronx. Shot them both. Those two people didn't even know each other. They ran into each other at the park and so there was no telling who was the intended victim. Only one of them could be it. Both victim didn't have a record. The woman that was killed was set to graduate from law school and it had been her dream to one day join the FBI. The male victim however was a delivery guy. He has no known history of anything bad and still, the FBI believed he was the intended target because the murder gun was a known gang gun. It was wanted in connection to other murders tied to the Mott Haven Boys gang. The gang ran that neighborhood.

The local gang unit was investigating them for drug possessions as well as for murder. The FBI only caught this case because the crime happened on federal land and any crime committed on such land was automatically a federal offense. But the FBI didn't waste time surveilling the neighborhood. They ended up going directly to the victim's loved ones. Kiko had a girlfriend. She knew that he was selling dope on the side. They were just trying to save up enough money to afford to move to North Carolina and sadly Kiko was threatened over that little bit of drug dealing. The gang had found out what he was up to. They told him to stop moving on their turf or he'll pay.

Now, he's dead. The gang looks strong in front of their friends and enemies and so the FBI just needed to connect the gang directly to the murders. Kiko's girlfriend mentioned one gangbanger threatened his life in public the other day. The FBI checked surveillance cameras in that area and they got an image of the gangster that got in Kiko's face. He was identified as Matteo Diaz. The FBI went to his apartment. They found a gun. It actually triggered Maggie on her first day back, but she was able to push through it and she and her partner arrested Matteo. Matteo claimed he didn't kill anyone. He said he was at home all night.

It turns out he was at an abandoned warehouse the night of the murders. Matteo was partying with his boyfriend at an underground rave and had gotten his boyfriend some drugs to share with their friends. The gang doesn't know Matteo is gay. They have strict rules about that. The gang would kill Matteo and his boyfriend if they ever learned the truth. Meaning this was a perfect way to convince Matteo to work with the feds. Matteo agreed to help them as long as he and his boyfriend went free. Maggie promised him that she would see what she could do. She also asked him who killed Kiko and Marisol and he said it was the big boss, Jose Florial. The boss wanted to make an example out of Kiko. And Marisol was just in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Maggie wanted Matteo to wear a wire around Jose. Only Matteo couldn't get into direct contact with Jose. Jose only deals with his captains. The gang has a hierarchy. Matteo would look suspicious if he tried going directly to the boss much less ask him about the murders and so the FBI wanted Matteo to help them capture his direct guy. Maggie was able to shake off her early discomfort. She pretended to be a club owner and she was supposed to have gotten drugs from Matteo's guy. She played her part well. She only stumbled when it was demanded that she do drugs to prove she was one of them and so the FBI tried to intervene. It spooked the drug dealer. The guy pulled a gun. And he and Matteo wrestled over the gun until it went off.

Matteo was okay. It was Frankie that was shot. But it was a clean shoot. They weren't in trouble. It was Frankie who pulled the gun first and Matteo was just trying to save Maggie. Maggie was able to provide assistance to Frankie. He was going to make it. He just needed to wake up after surgery and, until that happens, they still needed to get Jose. The whole thing with Frankie left both Maggie and Matteo back where they originally started. They were no closer to Jose. Or so they thought until Jose contacted Matteo. Jose demanded that Matteo bring the woman from earlier to him. Jose hadn't known what happened exactly. He just knew a simple drug buy ended in the near death of one of his men.

Jose wanted to see Maggie because he wanted answers. Matteo was nervous about the meeting and Maggie reassured him that her people were there to step in if needed. Like they did last time. She personally felt the FBI risked things with Frankie only she didn't tell Matteo that and she knew they spooked the man because they were worried about her. Maggie was almost killed in the field when she was last working with them. She knew that her friends and that OA were worried, but she had something to prove to herself. She had to prove that she could still do the job. Maggie went with Matteo to the meeting place. She met Jose. Jose demanded answers. She gave them to him and then Jose demanded Matteo kill Maggie.

Maggie said the magic word that had backup move in. Jose tried to flee when he heard the cops outside and Maggie pursued him. OA again got in the way. He's been getting in the way this whole time. Only Maggie pushed him to the side and she managed to arrest Jose. Jose is going away for a long time.

Matteo and his boyfriend Sam were going to get new identities and be set up somewhere safe. But Maggie and OA later argued about OA's ability to trust her in the field.

Summary: When a heist arms killers with enough supplies to construct a bomb, the team discover a link to a terrorist group Maggie is working to infiltrate.

An armed group of men robbed a delivery van. They also murdered the driver. The driver was Clay Parker. He worked for Great Lakes Freight and he was delivering a compound that could be found either in farming or in the making of a bomb. It was about four thousand pounds of ammonium nitrate that was stolen. It led the cops to believe that the armed group was prepared to make a large bomb that could use or something they could sell on the open market. This group has already proven they're prepared to kill. There's no telling what they might do next. The FBI was given this case because it involved interstate commerce. And because there was a potential bomb in play, they were one step ahead because Maggie was already undercover.

Maggie was investigating a radical group. Those guys were hoping for another revolutionary war. She was undercover as a true believer. She met some of them at the gun range. She befriended them. She was placed in a prime position when the robbery-homicide occurred and changed everything. But a simple change in direction was enough for Maggie. She found out some guy in the group was suspected of taking part in the robbery. Maggie managed to cozy up to him. She won an invite to a party at someone's house and she wore a wire as she went over there. Maggie later searched the house for any evidence indicating they partook in the robbery-homicide.

Maggie couldn't find anything concrete. She did however find a substance on a sleeve. She took a sample of it and it was ammonium nitrate. The same substance that was stolen. It assured Maggie that she was barking up the right tree. The sleeve belonged to Eric Ward. He has a rap sheet. He also cashed in most of his life savings for a nonreturnable trip to Canada. The FBI didn't know if Canada was his escape plan after setting off the bomb or if he was going to be in Canada during the bomb's explosion as a means of providing an alibi. The FBI, therefore, came up with a plan. They were going to put trackers on Eric's car and follow him for a couple of days.

Only something went wrong when they tried to put the plan in action. Eric noticed he was being followed. He then tried to flee and so they had to announce themselves as FBI. They had to arrest him and that left them in the position of being one step behind. Arresting Eric didn't change anything. He was denying all connections to a possible bomb. He also lawyered up. He wasn't talking and there was nothing the FBI could do about it. They tried to see where he was going before he noticed them. It led to a warehouse being held in the woods. The warehouse was held by a shell company known as "Loyalist76". And so they knew it was involved.

The FBI went to the warehouse. They sent off a perimeter alarm. There was a loud siren. It caused the person making the bomb to flee on a motorcycle with the bomb and so all they had left was an empty warehouse. Thankfully, it wasn't fully empty. There were bomb components still around. It confirmed a bomb was in play and it also determined what kind of bomb was being built. It was going to be a remotely detonated bomb. Which was too high-tech for a group known as Norseman Brotherhood. Those guys were all about living in the last century. They didn't have military experience or any kind of tech know-how. And so the bomb was built by a professional.

Someone whose done this before. The FBI checked nearby surveillance cameras and they found a picture of an actual vet that was known to the group. It was Nick Foster. He owned the gun range where the group practice their shooting. Nick has also some bomb-making skills from when he was in the military. He was known to Maggie because she knew his wife was family to Eric and his brother. She also knew he didn't seem to care for the group because he said none of them could back up what they say. And so Nick was like that because he was a true believer who felt a bomb was the only way for the white race to reclaim their superiority.

Maggie was supposed to get close to Nick in order to get his phone. But Nick figured out she was a fed. He threatened to kill her and so she had to break cover to arrest him. Nick wasn't helpful with their investigation. His phone on the other hand told them everything they wanted to know. They knew who had the bomb. They knew it was Eric's brother Deke. They also knew they planned on releasing the bomb in the next hour. From then on, it was a rush to find Deke. They later found him in his car. They trapped him. He couldn't escape. He grabbed the detonator. He threatened to release the bomb and kill everyone if he didn't get a plane out of there.

OA wanted to tell the sniper to take that shot. Maggie thought that was too risky. Maggie instead told her bosses about another plan. She told them she could talk Deke down. It was the safer option and so her bosses signed off on it. They let Maggie talk to Deke. She spoke to him as a friend. She knew he was only doing all of this to prove himself to his brother and so she told him that he could expect a deal if no one gets hurt. Deke handed himself in. The bomb never went off and it was a great way to close the case.

But Maggie needed to have a much-needed conversation with OA. She knows she got injured on the job before and that he was worried about her, but he couldn't keep getting in the way of her doing her job. He had to trust her. He had to trust her skillset.

Maggie just wanted their relationship to return to how it used to be.

Summary: A teen shows up at 26 Fed with a bag of fentanyl, seeking the team's protection from the men who shot his father.

A kid walked into the New York offices of the FBI department carrying a bag of drugs. The kid's name was Trevor Logan. He was a teenager. He went to the FBI because he thought his father needed help. Trevor said earlier that day his father came home and told him to get into the car. He didn't know why his father was yelling or what spooked his dad, but he did know that not long after they got into the car, someone shot at them. His father ended up getting shot. He drove himself to the hospital. He also told Trevor to hold onto the bag and to go hide somewhere safe. And Trevor took one look at that bag before realizing his father was in over his head.

The bag was full of drugs. Not just any drugs by the way. Nothing like cocaine or heroin. It was fentanyl of all things. It was so dangerous that Trevor didn't want to handle it on his own and he went to the FBI for help. There was some mild confusion with the security guards demanding he put down a bag before going into the building with it. But Stuart and Tiffany stepped in. They got Trevor to drop the bag and it was searched. They found the drugs. They later questioned Trevor about it and he told them the whole story about how he got it. He said he was scared. He didn't want his dad to die. He was just a kid and he really needed help.

The FBI promised to do something. Only first they wanted him to wear a wire. They said they couldn't help his father if they didn't have the full picture and so Trevor had to wear a wire to find out where his dad got the drugs from. Trevor agreed to wear the wire. He wanted to help his dad. He wore the wire and he didn't get anywhere with the older man. His father refused to discuss what happened at the hospital. He said there were too many people around. He even said that they didn't have to worry about the men shooting at them earlier. He said those people wouldn't try attacking him at the hospital because there are too many cameras around.

Stuart told Trevor to back off. They didn't want to alert Vince that Trevor was wearing a wire. Trevor was also asked to look for his father's cell phone and he couldn't find it at the hospital. They were in such a rush to leave the apartment earlier that there was a chance his father left his cell at the apartment. Trevor took Stuart and Tiffany back to the apartment. They spotted someone shady leaving the apartment. The agents pursued him and they lost him. They then returned to the apartment where they found it ransacked. Whoever it was that broke it had gone through the place with everything they had.

Trevor went back to the hospital. Again wearing the wire. Trevor made up a story about how he went back to the apartment for clothes and that he saw someone had broken in. His father got mad at him for returning to the apartment. He also asked about the bag. He kept asking about that bag of drugs and Trevor assured his dad that it was safe. He even came up with a story about how it was in the closet at his friend's place. Trevor also tried to tell his dad that he loved him, but the words never came out and his father had noticed the new necklace he was wearing and so Trevor had to get out of there.

Trevor wanted his dad to at least know that he loved him because he was about to do something dangerous. It seems the FBI decided to use the ploy to take down the men that shot at Vince. Vince as it turns out was a drug dealer who failed to go ahead with delivery because he didn't like being stiffed on a couple of jobs. He, therefore, decided to steal a shipment from his supplier. The FBI found this out when they eventually got Vince's cell phone. They also realized that Vince was never going to help them and so they came up with a plan to take down his supplier. The guy's name was Nico. Stuart approached him as a drug dealer who bought his missing bag of drugs.

Stuart claimed he was willing to give Nico back what he was missing in return for a finder's fee. When that ploy didn't work, Stuart then said he wanted to make a deal with Nico. Nico told him to come to a certain bar before it opened and with Trevor. He wanted to see if Stuart was telling the truth about Trevor selling him the drugs after his dad died. Stuart agreed to the meeting. He talked Trevor into doing this and that's why Trevor tried to tell his dad he loved him, but his dad must have realized something was up because he later found and shot Nico. He also stole money from Nico. He stole enough to go on the run.

So, when Stuart and Trevor showed up for their meet, they found both Nico as well his lieutenant shot on the floor. Stuart called for backup. Tiffany handled Trevor while the rest of them tried to administer first aid. It wasn't until Nico was sent to the hospital that they went through all the security videos. They found a camera on the outside proving that Vince was the shooter. Vince became wanted for an armed robbery.

They later caught up to him, they tried to talk him down, Trevor tried to talk him down, and Vince still chose to go down shooting because he wanted to die. He didn't want to return to prison. And afterward, Trevor blamed himself. He thought if he had just hidden like his dad asked that maybe his dad would still be alive.

And Nina told Stuart she was keeping the baby. She also said that she wanted to raise the baby alone. She wanted to take a job in LA and she wanted Stuart to sign away his rights in the meantime, but he turned that down. After the day he had, he said any child of his deserves to know his father loves them. He wasn't going to sign away his rights. He was willing to be flexible with Nina and so she ultimately agreed to work with him. She even told him that they were having a boy.

Summary: The abduction of a young woman leads the team back to a cold case from 18 years ago.

A young woman was making deliveries when she got abducted. The guy was waiting for her in the delivery car. He was in the backseat and he managed to surprise her before she could escape. Now, this man pointed a gun at Chloe Rogers.

He made her drive to a secondary location where he had another car waiting for them. He had the whole thing planned out beforehand. The police only learned of it when they later found the delivery car. They thought it was odd that someone would steal a car with a massive pizza on it and dump it upstate however they found security footage from the city of the car being driven. The footage showed the man with a gun trained on Chloe. It also pointed authorities toward the abduction.

Until they saw that footage, they thought they were simply dealing with car theft. The footage was what told the local cops as well as the FBI that Chloe was in danger. FBI investigates abductions and so they caught this case. The first thing they did was try to determine when Chloe was taken. She was reported missing by her employer.

Her boss was also her boyfriend. He got worried when she never returned after making a delivery. He tried calling her and he got worried. He also had to report her missing because again she was in the company car. It had to be written up for insurance purposes.

But the boyfriend hadn't seen Chloe in hours. He also mentioned she had a bust-up with a college kid a little while back. The FBI looked into it and they found out she got into a fight with Brent Porter. He followed her from a bar back to her hostel. They were seen arguing on security footage outside of the hostel.

It turns out Chloe's name wasn't Chloe. It was Tasha when Brent first met her. He said she used to be a housekeeper. She was employed by his parents until she robbed the place and disappeared. It's why he got so angry when he saw her again. He confronted her about what she did to them.

Brent wasn't their abductor. He had an alibi. He also made the FBI test Chloe's DNA to find out what her real name was and it wasn't Chloe or Tasha. Her real name is Annabelle Collier. She was kidnapped when she was four years old. She was believed to have been killed by a sexual predator that she had as a neighbor.

The neighbor was recently released from prison on a technicality. FBI Special in Charge Isobel Castillo had worked the case with her partner. They firmly believed that Annabelle was dead. They stopped looking for her. They assured her parents that she was gone. Her father died of a heart attack a few years after that. And her mother was left on her own.

Naturally, suspicion in the second abduction of Annabelle fell on the man who claimed he killed her. Isobel, or to better put it, her former partner still believed Eddie Lyman was responsible for Annabelle's kidnapping. Jake believed that Eddie simply traded Annabelle to another predator while he was in prison. He claimed Eddie got her back the moment he was released. Only they tracked down Eddie. Eddie said he never had Annabelle. He never took her. He doesn't know who did. He only confessed because he was railroaded by an inept counsel and an overly aggressive FBI Agent.

Eddie wasn't their guy. But he still helped the FBI with their current case. The person who grabbed Annabelle had been wearing a class ring from the same school and year as Eddie and so the FBI was able to come up with at least six suspects in who possibly kidnapped Annabelle as a little girl as well as an adult. There was just one problem. That part of Staten Island was like a small town. They couldn't get people to talk without a prior relationship and that's why they ended up going back to the one person they felt for sure would help. They went to Annabelle's mother. And Joan wasn't happy to see them.

Joan was distraught to find out her daughter was alive this whole time. She blamed the FBI. She said her daughter could have lived through impossible horrors and that they had failed to rescue her. She was particularly angry at Jake who was dismissive of her pain. Jake just kept saying that Annabelle being alive was better than her being dead.

It was Isobel who got Joan to talk. Joan was shown a picture of the six men that were suspects. She identified one of them as Jeff Whelan. He used to work for her husband. He also was an orphan whose parents died early and she thought it was sweet that he paid Annabelle so much attention. She said he stopped showing up when Annabelle went missing.

It turns out Jeff Whelan kidnapped Annabelle all those years ago. He forced her to pretend he was her father, moved her upstate, and he had everyone fooled. They all thought he was just super protective. They thought she was simply acting out when she ran away from him five months ago. But Annabelle was trying to get away from him and he tracked her down and kidnapped her again. He went to another small town. This time called Nelsonville. They tracked him down with the PO box he uses. He was going by a false name, but it was him. Whelan saw that he was being followed and he tried to flee. He went back to his house in the woods.

The FBI followed him to the house. They went after him once he tried to flee on foot. They captured Whelan and he wouldn't tell them where Annabelle was. They searched the house. It was rigged to blow. They got out in time. But Isobel felt for sure that Annabelle was still inside. She went into the house. She went against safety protocols and probably broke several other rules but she couldn't fail Annabelle again. And so Isobel didn't leave that house until she found and rescued Annabelle from a hidden compartment.

Annabelle was later reunited with her mother and those two were on the path to finally healing some old wounds.

Jake invited Isobel out for drinks after everything was over, but she simply told him "no". They should have found Annabelle seventeen years ago. And they both know it.

Summary: The team jumps into action when JOC analyst Kelly Moran is taken hostage.

FBI Analyst Kelly Moran was running late for work when he heard screaming. He may be an analyst but he was still one of the good guys and so he went towards the screaming rather than running away from it. He followed the noise to a bank. He went inside.

He asked a lady at the front desk if everything was alright and that's when a guy in a mask pointed a gun at him. Kelly was taken hostage along with everyone else inside the bank. The two armed individuals had searched him for a cell phone. They never found his and they therefore didn't know that he shot off a text message to Jubal about the bank situation.

The FBI as well as local NYPD were able to swarm on the location. They track the bank robbers inside. They tried to open up a communication with the robbers and the robbers were still set on what they came for. They didn't try to rob a bank just to get some loose cash.

They went to that specific bank because they wanted something out of a safe deposit box. There was just one problem with gaining access. It was a biometric lock. Meaning they needed the person who owns the box to physically be there to access it. It was that or no dice. The bank robbers weren't happy with that news and they tried to get the bank manager to call his boss to gain access to the deposit box.

Only Kelly was reporting everything that happened inside of that bank as it was occurring. The FBI also accessed the security cameras inside of the bank and so they were able to identify the bank robbers. They were Marco Salazar and his wife. He was the son of Raphael Salazar.

The father was the legal owner of that safe deposit box. He was the only one who could access it and yet Marco couldn't use him. He couldn't do so because Raphael was dead. The FBI went to Raphael's home. They found him beaten to death on the floor. There was no telling if his son did that to him or if Marco was tied to something bigger.

Marco kept talking about running out time. He wasn't concerned about the FBI or the police being outside. He and his wife needed access to that box in the next thirty minutes. They seemed almost scared about what would happen if they didn't gain access and so they demanded a locksmith.

They wanted someone who could break into the deposit box around the security protocols. The FBI had a locksmith for the job, but they were maybe an hour away and that's why they decided to go with a decoy. They couldn't get a real locksmith and so they faked one. They had Jubal dress up as a locksmith before sending him into the bank.

They had Jubal buying time while they investigated what drove seemingly two good people into this. It turns out Raphael had secret security cameras. The cameras picked up that it wasn't his family that killed him. It was two goons. Raphael was cleaning money for someone and then withdrew two hundred million dollars because he got greedy. The people he worked for had found out what he did. They tried to get him to talk. He told them that he converted the money in bitcoin. He said the access code was in his safe deposit box. But then he died. He had a heart attack and his employers still wanted the money and so they kidnapped Raphael's granddaughter.

Marco and Jennifer were told to get that deposit box by a certain time or their daughter was dead. They could have gone to the FBI at that time and they chose not to. They instead tried to get the deposit box on their own. They took an entire bank hostage. They had Jubal working on the system and he wasn't moving fast enough for them. Marco then tried to manually break into the deposit box when it triggered a safety protocol. It got locked for twenty-four hours and there was nothing they could do to get the deposit box in time. Jubal tried working on it. He had an earpiece in and Isobel told him to stall.

Jubal was trying to do so when Marco was getting rough with the bank manager. Jubal tried to step in and Marco hit him so hard that it knocked out his earpiece. Jennifer saw the earpiece. She alerted Marco. They figured out that Jubal was a cop. Or in his case an FBI Agent. Kelly texted his FBI friends that Jubal had been made. The FBI realized they had to move in because Marco and Jennifer were devolving. They had ended up shooting the bank manager after he tried to grab one of their guns. There was no getting access to the deposit box in time and the FBI were looking for their daughter. And that last part was the saddest thing about the situation.

If Marco and his wife had simply gone to the FBI when they learned their daughter was kidnapped — they could have gained access to the deposit box legally. They could have assisted with getting the little girl. The couple wouldn't have had to terrorize a bunch of people much less shoot someone. But the couple didn't ask for help with their daughter. They tried to handle it themselves and now they face years in prison meanwhile the feds started looking for the girl the moment they realized she had been taken. And they found her.

They found her alive. She was heavily sedated and so they couldn't put her on the phone, but the parents were so worried that their daughter was dead that they threatened to kill people and so Kelly revealed he was an FBI Agent. He said he had the little girl on the phone. They moved in to talk to their daughter and that's when the FBI breached the building. They were able to arrest Marco and Jennifer and Marco's sister agreed to take custody of her niece.

And Kelly had such a rough day, but he showed Jubal that he could be brave and Jubal congratulated him after it was all done.

Summary: The team jumps into action to determine who's behind a mysterious bioweapon that left two MTA workers dead.

There was a device left on a public bus that released a toxic gas when it was moved. Two MTA employees were cleaning the bus at the depot when they accidentally kickstarted the device and it killed them. It thankfully didn't go off when the bus was in motion or carrying passengers, but two people still lost their lives and their deaths were considered a terrorist attack. Someone deployed a chemical warfare.

The bomb experts said that the device was timed to go off during rush hour when the bus was full. Only the cleaners accidentally set it off early. They saved hundreds of people by doing so and the FBI was handling the case with the seriousness it deserved.

The terrorist's plot was foiled. But he or she will probably try again. The FBI went through the security feed on the bus. They found someone who hid from the cameras and used spray paint to black it out. They just didn't do too good of a job because they missed a spot.

The FBI were able to pull up an operator's badge because it was shown in the video. They connected the badge to Aurelio Martinez. They went looking for Aurelio. They checked his home and he wasn't there. They asked his mother when was the last time she saw him. And she couldn't give a clear answer.

The FBI next pinged Aurelio's phone. They tracked it down to a pier where they found the phone abandoned on the ground. Aurelio however was in the water. He had been killed and dumped. Aurelio wasn't the mastermind of the plot. He didn't have the know how to create a chemical bomb. He also was paid nine thousand dollars the week before his death and so he went to the pier to collect the second payment when he ended up getting killed. The real mastermind must not have liked how Aurelio failed to kill a bunch of people.

Though the feds still had a lead. The toxin in the bomb was lab quality. There weren't many labs in the city that had access to it and so the FBI went looking at all the labs. They eventually found the one they were looking for. They found the lab where the toxin was created. They traced it back to Amal Janubi.

She ran when the FBI went to go talk to her. They had to arrest her and the first thing she said was "lawyer". She wanted a lawyer. She just didn't want to listen to the lawyer. The lawyer had advised her to come clean about everything for a lenient sentence.

Amal refused to do so. She said she was working with Bin Zada. Its an alias. No one has ever met him in person and yet Amal signed over 600 ml of botulism because she said Americans deserved it. Amal was from a country that got torn apart when Americans intervened. She said that the bombing was happening that night and she couldn't wait to see it. Amal was of no use to the feds after that. They put her in a cell and they went looking for this Bin Zada. They couldn't find anyone who met in person. The last person who probably did so was Aurelio. And he's dead.

The feds went looking for Bin Zada. They couldn't track him down and Jubal wasn't acting like himself. Jubal had recently heard from his son. His son had found a lump and it was worrying because his son was in remission from cancer. Jubal wanted to be there with his family, but he was instead caught up in this case and he was pushing everyone to the brink with his demands. Isobel got worried. She stepped in and she talked to Jubal about what was going on with him. Jubal explained that he was letting his personal life get in the way.

Jubal said he would calm down. Except Maggie later smelled the alcohol in his coffee cup. He spilled it when they were outside and she could smell it. She also noticed that he has been eating breath mints like his life depended on it. It was clear that Jubal was drinking on the job. Maggie has an addict for a sister and she knew what falling off the wagon looked like. She tried to talk to Jubal about it, but he denied drinking. He didn't want to talk about it. And they had to focus on other things when they got a lead on who Bin Zada really was.

Bin Zada waws actually Hassan Nasif. He was from the same mosque as Amal. Its probably how he knew she could make the botulism. He also has a gripe against America. It was an American bomb that killed his mother in Yemen. Her name was Zada. It seems Hassan was doing all of this to avenge his mother and its why he chose anniversary of her death for the day of his terrorist attack. Hassan also had help. He was getting help from his cousin Ahmad Nasif. Ahmad recently terrorized his wife with his extremism. She hid in the bathroom until he was gone and she later told the FBI he left with his cousin in her car.

The feds went looking for the car. They were able to trace it to Grand Central Station. One of the busiest and larges train stations in New York. The feds converged on the building, but they were spotted and the cousins began using their guns to fire at the FBI. Ahmad was soon killed when he tried to escape. The other agents cornered Hassan in the lower level. They were able to injure him and they tried questioning where he put the bomb and he refused to say. Hassan didn't care about the death penalty. He wanted to go out a martyr.

And Maggie was worried about Jubal taking the lead because she was sure he was drinking. She tried to get him to step down and he refused. He told Maggie that if she mentioned his drinking again that he'd fire. So, Maggie back down. She focused on getting to the bomb. They split up to better cover the building and it was Maggie who found it first. She was able to defuse the bomb thanks to people giving her helpful tips and the terrorist plot failed.

Both Hassan and Amal will now face life in prison.

But Maggie warned Jubal that if he didn't get help that she would go to Isobel about his drinking. Jubal nodded his head like he was going to fix his problem and then he continued to drink. He even showed up at his ex-wife's house drunk. And it turns out the cancer wasn't back.

The lump was a cyst and so Jubal went to an AA meeting right after he heard the news.

Summary: The team investigates the murder of a professional informant after he's found dead outside an abandoned factory.

The episode begins with a man running for his life down at the loading docks, an SUV is chasing him. All of a sudden, the man is hit, and the driver gets out and walks toward him, and shoots him dead.

The next morning, Maggie is on the scene and she says someone wanted him dead pretty badly. She sees a stamp on the victim's hand that reads IR. Sadly the entire area is a dead zone for cameras and the tire marks only tell them that the vehicle was a high-end SUV. A few calls and the FBI find out that the IR stamp is for a bar called Infrared. Tiffany and Stuart head over to the bar to confirm the stamp belongs to them and discover that the bar has a camera.

They watch a surveillance video and find their victim arguing with his barstool partner, they both left together after 10 pm. John Doe paid with his credit card at 10:06, they pull out the receipts and find out that his name is Cole Dixon, he lived in Bay Ridge and has a wife and a kid. His employment is off the books, he got regular deposits in his bank account. Maggie and Cole head out to speak to his widow.

They show his widow the guy who he was with, she says she doesn't know him. She reveals that sometimes she thinks Cole had secrets, she thinks he was hiding money in a safe in the garage.

They check out the safe and get it open, there is a lot of money, burner phones, and a log of some sort. On his phone, a text comes in that asks if he is ghosting the person, they thought he had a big score. The text pinged off of a tower in Long Island. Maggie responds to the text to meet at the Middle Pier, they are hoping to catch the guy. Once there, Maggie recognizes a woman there, her name is Gwen and she is FBI.

Gwen is an FBI, she is also Cole Dixon's handling agent. Cole was a professional informant. Gwen will be joining the investigation moving forward. Last week Cole said that he stumbled on to a huge score. His wife thought Cole was an Uber driver.

Gwen recognizes the patron at the bar with Cole, it was Daryl Watkins, aka Little Daryl, he is one of Cole's sub-sources.

Gwen, Maggie, and Omar find Daryl, but they have to go on a foot race to catch him. Gwen gets a cramp in her foot and stays behind. Maggie and Omar catch him. Daryl says he didn't kill Cole, he was at Chauncey's poker room. Daryl says they argued about money, Cole paid him less than he was supposed to for an introduction to a Scientist named Walt Taylor, he is a former chemist.

He has a house in Queens. Maggie goes to the bathroom and finds Gwen in there sick, then they head to Walt's house. Once there, they find Walt, he has two bullet wounds to the chest, the wounds are fresh, and he probably has only been dead for an hour. The dead informant and dead Scientist, and it looks like Walt was working on a bomb.

Gwen says the bomb doesn't matter if they don't know who has it. A lady down the street from Walt heard the gunshots, she saw two men rushing out of the house, one had a big duffle bag like they robbed Walt. The men were of average height and she is pretty sure that they were Asian. They are probably looking at a suitcase bomb that can level an entire building. After some investigation, it looks like Walt and Cole were killed with the same gun. And, looking at Walt's bank account, he took despoths of crypto last week for 150k, triple his entire holdings. The source is Asia and it looks like it is flagged as a current DEA case.

Isobel and Jubal meet with agent Lee, this is a two-year case and she is not eager to share details. Isobel tells her that this is a double homicide and that whoever is in the position of that account has a bomb. Agent Lee says East-19, the Chinese gangsters, the accounts point man is Rex You, he is very dangerous, and they need to be careful when they make their move. The bomb doesn't fit their profile. Rex Yu and junior lieutenant, Ethan Chen are suspected of a hat dozen murders over the last few years. Both are regulars at Infrared, and Asian, this may be the guys who did the shootings.

Omar, Maggie, and Gwen find the two men, Gwen is having issues again with her health, she stops running and looks like she is in pain. Omar is down, he is shot, but thankfully it didn't go through, just knocked him down. They caught Ethan and have him in custody, he gets a chance to talk his way out of prison, if he gives up Rex. Ethan starts laughing. He says he was an eleven-year-old orphan when Rex found him, there is no way in hell he is speaking and he wants a lawyer.

Gwen thinks they are trying to get water out of stone. Maggie and Omar are going over to Rex's body shop to see if they can find any clues as to why he wants a bomb. Omar asks Maggie why Gwen wasn't there for him, he was shot and it could have ended badly. Maggie doesn't know what to say. Then, Maggie finds something, blueprints, there's no address but it looks like an eight-story building, and Omar thinks Rex wants to take it down.

Maggie wants to take another run at Ethan, Gwen says he won't talk, he is loyal to his mentor. LAPD found Rex's vehicle. Maggie goes to get their jackets and finds in Gwen's pocket a Physi-Pen with Interferon beta-1a.

Omar, Maggie, and Gwen go to the vehicle, Rex ditched his car and stole a new one. Gwen says they can access his GPS on the car, there are six trips where he was camped outside of 37th and Hayden in the past two weeks, which is nowhere near where he lives, maybe that is the building he wants to blow up.

Back at the station, they find out this is an eight-story building. The penthouse was bought by a Hong Kong shell company, the owner is Victor Ho, a Chinese businessman. There is a five million contract on Victor by his former business partner, Jintao Wong. Looks like Rex is trying to plant the bomb himself. The huge score Cole discovered is going to be an international incident if that bomb goes off.

At the building, Maggie tells Gwen that she knows she is sick and wants her to stay outside. Maggie says she is out of line. Maggie reveals that she saw the Med Pen and tells her to stand down. Inside, they can't find the bomb anywhere, Maggie thinks something is not right, there is something they are not seeing. Ho's security guard won't have him evacuate, he believes the building is safe. Looking at cameras nearby they see Rex on a walkway near a building next door.

Maggie and Omar head over there and find Rex, bullets go off and Rex makes a run for it, but he left the bomb there. Omar tells Maggie to get out of there. Omar kneels down and opens the duffel bag, he finds the bomb and they have a little over a minute before it goes off. He calls Carla and tells her that she has to walk him into disarming it, there is no time. She tells him to cut the largest white wire, he does it within seconds of it going off. He does it, the bomb is disarmed. Rex got away, Maggie couldn't catch him.

The team finds Rex in midtown, he is headed for diplomatic cover. Omar and Maggie are approaching the consulate when they find Rex. They get into a foot race, and Maggie catches him but Rex manages to pull a gun on him, Gwen appears and she shoots Rex and saves Maggie's life.

At a bar, Maggie meets up with Gwen, she thanks her for saving her life. Gwen says the case is over, they got a good result. Maggie says her partner almost got killed, she has to tell the truth about Gwen and she doesn't want her to make her the bad guy because she knows something is wrong.

Maggie tells her that she can talk to her. Gwen says she has multiple sclerosis, it is treatable, and she lives a basically normal life. She hasn't told anyone. She has given 28 years of her life to her job, it is all she knows to do and she doesn't want to be pulled from the field. Maggie says being pulled is better than putting someone else's life at risk.

Summary: After a string of armed robberies, the team investigates a suspect who leads them to something much bigger.

The episode begins with some security guards removing money from the back of an armoured car for Providence Armoured. One of the men roll money into a strip bar, it is all one dollar bills and they trade it for the equivalent in larger bills. The other security guard is on his cell phone in the truck and its slow react when his partner gets robbed. The robber gets away.

Omar shows Maggie a new place that he is getting and she asks him how he can afford it, he makes the same as her.

Then she sees a showy watch that he on and he says it makes him happy. They get the call for the robbery but before they leave Omar sees on TV that crypto is going down and he looks like he is about to faint. On the way to the scene Omar is calling his broker and telling him to sell, Stuart hears him and says don't tell me you bought crypto. Stuart tells him to stay away from crypto, buy S&P 500 and keep it safe.

They speak to the driver, he says he saw nothing. Back at the station Jubal says this is the fifth armored car robbery in a row. The perp had a getaway car, it was reported stolen earlier that morning. They do a GPS tracking and are able to find it.

Maggie and Tiffany go to check out the car and when they get there they hear a gun shot, another robbery is in progress. They run after the perp but he gets away. They call Jubal and tell him its like the guy disappeared. This newest robbery was in a pawn shop, the owner says the guy sounded white, probably from Brooklyn. He shows a video to Omar and Stuart. The bag he put the money in said I Love NY. Stuart leaves the place and Omar sees a sign that says Short Term Loans. He asks the owner about getting a loan for 30 or 60 days.

Maggie and Tiffany go looking and find a black jacket in a trash dumpster, Tiffany thinks the guy went in the subway to get away. They have a hit, a guy in the subway has a bag with I Love NY on it, his name is Michael Holt, and he has a record for robbery. Jubal is sure that he is an accomplice. Through cell signals they are able to find a location where Holt is, the team arrives and sees him arrive and fist pump a guy, he has a bag in his hands and a big smile. Tiffany and Maggie follow him, from behind. They go inside, a brief scuffle and one of the guys has a gun, but little does he know that the rest of the team is behind him. Both guys are arrested.

At the station, Omar is on the phone, he tells the person that the interest is ridiculous, where does he get off charging 18%. Stuart walks up and tells Omar that Isobel wants them to question Holt. Holt says he snatched the bag from a sketchy looking dude, he pushed him down the stairs and grabbed the bag, he didn't steal it. He saw an opportunity and he took it. Holt says he remembers the guy having really expensive shows on. The team finds subway footage, they find a video where Holt did push the guy down the stairs and steal the bag. He was telling the truth.

The team gets a video of the perp getting into a cab after Holt robbed him. They are able to track the cab down to going to a strip bar, the team head there and show a security guard a photo of the guy, he says he knows him, it is the owner, Tom Hoffman and he is in the building. Hoffman sees Omar and Stuart, makes a run for it, but he doesn't get away, they arrest him for theft and attempted murder.

Hoffman says he didn't have a choice, Mason Simonian said he would kill his parents and him if he didn't pay him back the 300 grand that he owes them. Hoffman says the family of four that was killed last week in Queens, that was Mason. Dude owed 100 grand, Mason wiped out his whole family. He say she grew up dirt poor, he worked 9-5 for ten years, opened the club and starting living. He had bad credit, the banks wouldn't touch him, so he went to Mason. The market went south, especially his crypto stuff, it dropped so fast. Stuart tells him that maybe his lawyer can spin this stupidity into an insanity deal.

Mason Simonian is a high level target, an agent in their building has been tracking him, so Jubal and Isobel go speak to her. She says Mason is a dangerous man and they think he is good for five or six murders. But he is smart, he got himself a hail house phd. Omar goes back to Hoffman, they want him to set up Mason, or he is going to sit in a cell for twenty years. Hoffman says Mason told him that he is going to shoot his parents and put a bullet in his head. Omar says the only way they are going to get Mason. Hoffman gives in, for the hopes of getting a lighter sentence.

They do the set up but Mason doesn't buy it, even with Tiffany posing as Hoffman's girlfriend and pretending her parents are rich and she can get the cash from them that Hoffman owes Mason. Jubal says Mason is smart, they need to try again. Stuart thinks Hoffman came on way too smart, that is why Mason got nervous and didn't take the bait. Stuart goes to make a person call, Omar makes a call and the 18% has gone down to 14% so Omar is now interested. All of a sudden, Stuart jumps back in the car and says go, go, Mason has got Tiffany and the bag of money. They speed off and call it in for support, they after the vehicle. Tiffany is in the back of the vehicle, Mason asks her how she likes to be involved in his business now. Mason calls Hoffman and tells him that he has his girlfriend and he better get his money.

Backup arrives and they track down where Mason has taken Tiffany, once inside the house, guns are aimed and they are going to find Tiffany. They find her upstairs, bound, but she is going to be ok. She has a hit on her head and needs stictches, but she is going to be ok. Mason is dead, Hoffman is in jail, his parents are ok. Omar promises Hoffman that he will do what he can for him, he did his part of the deal.

Stuart asks Omar if he needs help, meaning his problems with Crypto and he says no, he has taking care of it. Omar tells him that he appreciates the offer but he is good. Stuart says that he considers them to be good friends, so the next time he is in a jam, just talk to him.

The victim is John Regan, he works for the state department. Tiffany and Stuart are on the scene, the victim is dead. They talk to his wife, she says she doesn't know why her husband pulled his gun, he has never done this. She says the suspect was white, she thinks, but it happened so fast, and she can't be sure what he was wearing. Her husband worked for the state department in security, his last assignment was Croatia, she thinks it might be related. The man who shot him sounded Eastern European.

The episode begins with a man named John and his wife walking down the street, he tells her that it has been a long week. They are talking about her sister that it is a lot to handle, he says if she wants him to go with her he will. All of a sudden, John sees a man walking down the street, pulls out his gun and tells the guy hands where he can see them. The guy says he doesn't know what who he is and what he wants. The woman starts to freak and asks John what is going on, he gets distracted and the other guy pulls a gun, shoots him and runs. Someone nearby

At the station, Jubal goes over the case. No prints or DNA on the shell casings. They got a video of the perp running away after the shooting, they can't do a facial recognition.

A supervisor visits the station from the state department, they don't think the shooting is connected to the work John Regan was doing, and they don't recognize the shooter. Isobel gets annoyed with the guy who is obviously holding back. He gets up to leave and says same country, different team.

There is new footage of the suspect getting out of cab near the crime scene. The cab robbed him at a motel where he is staying with another guy. The desk clerk says they are staying in room 10, they are a bunch of wackos, they don't let the maid's clean the room. And, he doesn't have a name of the guy because cash is cash, they don't care. The team head to the room 10, inside he place is empty and it looks like they knew they were coming, the room is empty. They are looking around a all of a sudden when a drawer is opened, a grenade hits the floor and everyone makes a nose dive, it goes off.

The team is ok. Isobel goes back to speak to John's supervisor and she demands to know what is going on. He tells her his hands are tied.

There was a cross found in the motel room, it is a Croatian testament cross. And, there is more footage, the two mean leaving the motel. The primary suspect has something hanging from his backpack, it is an ID badge from Hudson Genetics. Maggie and Omar head over there, the guy's name is Luca Cilic and he fired him two days ago because he wanted to access a restricted area of the lab. All of a sudden, an alarm goes off in the building. There has been a robbery, a lock down is issued and evacuation of the building issued. Outside, Maggie wants to know what was stolen, it was a synthetic virus. Video surveillance shows that Jim Levins, a researcher at the lab was the one who stole it. The virus is a super strain of COVID, they were working on a vaccine. It is 1000 times stronger than COVID-19. If it were released into the communtiy million of people would die.

Jubal and Isobel meet again with John's supervisor off the record. Luca Cilic was in Canada last he heard, in Hawkesbury, he is the one who shot John and is responsible for stealing he virus. Turns out, John was involved in some top secret operations, he was a spy. Cilic is member of a terrorist group in Croatia, looking for independence from the current regime. The Croatian government is an ally.

Maggie and Omar are on the road again, they were able to ping Levins' phone. Omar sees him, he has the backpack and is going east. Turns out, it was the wrong guy. They continue looking for him and Omar has eyes on him again, this time he puts the backpack in a garbage bin. Omar has Levins, Maggie sees Cilic grab the backpack and run, she goes after him with Tiffany and Stuart behind her. They lose him.

Jubal calls to get choppers in the air, he tells the team to lock the city down, they need to get Levins in to get answers.

Levins is in custody, he says his intentions were noble. Cilic warned him to say nothing, he is not a criminal. Levins says he was forced to do it, steal the virus and the vaccine, by Cilic and if he didn't do it, he would kill his wife, who he already has, he sent a photo of her with a gun to her head to Levins, he shows them the photo. Levins won't say anything else, he says that if they apprehend Cilic, his associate will kill his wife.

The team finds the location where Levins' wife was being held, but the place is empty. Isobel decides to tell Levins that his wife is found, she lies to him, to get more information. Levins says he only stole it because of that photo. Levins doesn't buy it, he doesn't believe that they have his wife. He says he needs proof she is alive or he is done talking.

Ian goes through Levins' wife cell phone and alters some videos, puts them together to make Levins think it is real and his wife is ok. Maggie is not happy they did it, Isobel doesn't care, she will do whatever she can to stop this. Levins tells Isobel that Cilic asked lots of questions about how the virus had to be stored and how long the vaccine would last, he told him eight hours and Cilic says he only needed seven hours to get it to Croatia. That is all he can offer. Seven hours, Isobel doesn't think he is going to Croatia, it is not enough time, she thinks he is going to Canada.

Mrs. Levins' body is found outside a warehouse, she is dead. They have eyes on Cilic from a traffic cam when he left the warehouse with his associate and they are indeed heading to Canada. Cilic makes it to a building, they are surrounded. Cilic won't give up, he has hostages and threatens to kill all them all if he doesn't get a jet that is able to travel long distance. Maggie tells him that she wants a peaceful ending, and this virus is dangerous, people will die all over the world, people he loves. Cilic says the virus is like a bomb, she gets him the jet or he will release it hear and now. Jubal and Isobel tells Maggie they have to make entry, they don't have a choice.

They force entry and kill Cilic, the virus is secured. Isobel goes to speak to Levins and tells him that his wife was killed, she is sorry. She tells him that the moment he gave Cilic the virus, his associate killed her. He realizes that she lied to him, he asks her what kind of person does that, then when she gives her condolences, he tells her to go to hell.

Maggie still doesn't feel good about what they did, Isobel tells her that it was was her decision, her conscious is clear. Isobel never went to the Knicks game, she went to a bar and drank.

Summary:	The shooting of a federal corrections officer leads the team to an ex-Marine who has gone rogue ever since he returned from Afghanistan. Tiffany's sister looks to her for guidance when their younger brother begins to lash out.

Tiffany was spending the day with her siblings when work called. The phone call came at the perfect time because Tiffany was arguing with her brother. Bryan had snapped at his manager because he didn't like being told what to do and Tiffany was saying that's what a job was for, but then they got in an argument.

Bryan ran off rather than talk to Tiffany. Tiffany complained to their sister that Bryan needs to grow up. Only that's not what the other sister thinks. Erika thinks that Bryan was struggling with mental health. Their mom also had her problems and so Erika thought they should get Bryan in treatment.

Lecturing him wasn't going to do him any good if he needs serious help. But Tiffany hadn't wanted face the possibility that her brother was sick. She claimed he just needed to grow up. She asked her sister to deal with him and she went to work. The FBI was investigating the murder of a Federal Corrections Officer.

The victim's name was Mia Lopez. She was walking to her car after working out at her gym and some guy shot her twice. There was a witness who heard the shooting. He also turned around to see the guy running off in one direction and so he gave a description of what the shooter was wearing.

Before Mia was killed, her shooter said "now its your turn". The FBI thought that her killer must have been a former inmate of hers only the one person that seemed to hate her enough to kill her had died in prison. Mia for the most was pretty likeable. Her mother said that everyone liked her.

Tiffany and Scola showed her picture of the shooter and she said she's seen him before. He was waiting outside of her house when Mia was visiting. The poor woman thought he was just a homeless man loitering in the area.

She hadn't told Mia about it. She now blames herself for her daughter's murder because she thought Mia would still be alive if she had simply warned her about that man. But Tiffany told her this wasn't her fault.

The only person to blame for Mia's death was her killer. The FBI thought they were one step towards finding this man after they found a partial fingerprint on one of the bullet casings. The fingerprint belonged to Kenny Nelson. He was a member of Throgg's Neck Motorcycle Club. He didn't seem to run into Mia at prison. And no one knew why he would want her dead.

But Kenny wasn't the shooter. Kenny had recently sold one of his guns to someone who served with his little brother in Afghanistan. He didn't know the guy's full name, but the FBI were able to track down their shooter from surveillance cameras outside of the biker bar and the killer's name is Michael Landry. Michael was a soldier in the US Army. Everyone said he got messed up over there. He returned to the US after he was discharged. He holds down a regular job and lives with his mother. His mother was a bit difficult.

Michael's boss said that Michael fixates on things. He gets angry and he doesn't know how to control that anger. The FBI figured that Mia must have upset him during her off hours. Michael could be an ex-boyfriend for all they knew, but he was their killer and the FBI went looking for him.

They couldn't find him at work. They couldn't find him at home. They were worried he ran off to Canada when Tiffany got a call. She heard that her brother was at his old job making a scene. She was going to ignore it when Scola said it would better if they go check on Bryan.

Bryan had smashed up a wine bar. He was delusional. He thought everyone hated him and he thought that his boss was turning everyone against him by calling his friends. Bryan clearly needed help. Tiffany was able to talk him down. She made sure he didn't get arrested and she had her sister take him home.

Scola advised her that her brother needed to see a doctor, but again Tiffany claimed that he just needed to grow up. She said everyone has problems and that they get over them because they act like adults. She wanted to ignore the fact that her brother was a danger to himself and to others.

It didn't help that this case was taking up most of their focus. They quickly returned to work because Michael was also a danger. Michael killed another person before shooting someone and running off in a stolen car with a teenager inside. He didn't hurt the teenager.

He later abandoned the car with the girl still inside. But his second victim was what helped the FBI pinpoint his motive. Michael's mom had apparently sued Mia after her daughter died. Her daughter Hailey died of an aneurysm. Her mother claimed that she was denied medical attention by Mia. She also said that the officer that arrested her daughter must have roughed her up.

There was no evidence backing any of these claims. But both Michael and his mother were sure that Hailey was murdered. They thought there was a massive coverup and that Judge Mason dismissed their lawsuit because she had been working with Mia and Officer Waites. Michael was murdering everyone involved. He went after the cop that arrested his sister. He then went on to catch a cab and he had to shoot the cab driver because he didn't have any money to pay for the cab. And so the FBI went back to his mother's house for answers.

His mother had initially claimed that she hadn't seen her son in a while. This turned out to be a lie after it was proven she gave him her car to drive and that he made several calls to her from a burner cell. Michael kept the calls short. He turned his phone after call and he was impossible to find on their own, but his mother knew about his targets. She tried to deny at first that her son was a killer. Only Scola said sometimes families deliberately close their eyes to the problem because they were scared to face the truth.

It was only when she couldn't deny that he's killing people that she told them about Dr. Shultz. Shultz was the expert on aneurysms and he said that Hailey's head injury had nothing to do with her death. Michael told his mother that Shultz was the worst one. He later killed him and the FBI were quick on the scene to chase after him. They caught up to Michael on a rooftop. He had turned his gun on himself. He planned on killing himself, but the gun jammed and that was enough for Scola to move in and arrest him.

And afterwards, Tiffany went to her sister's. She and Erika talked to Bryan. They told him that either he voluntarily agrees to get evaluated or they were going to let him get arrested for what he did at the wine bar. Tiffany realized that her brother was mentally ill. She tried to ignore it for as long as possible and that wasn't helping him. And so they got Bryan to agree to see a doctor.

Summary: Maggie calls in Remy Scott to aid Scola in his undercover mission to find the terrorists behind an imminent attack.

The first parts of the episode was aired as FBI: International S0216.

Forrester and his team were assisting the New York office with a case. They flew to Rome to work the case with Special Agent Nina Chase and Jubal. But something went wrong. They didn't bring the case to a conclusion. The bad guys got away. The man they were looking for had been tortured to death.

Nina was also injured. She got shot overseas and so Jubal had wanted to stay with her. He also thought that Scola deserves to know what happened. Isobel however disagreed with that decision. Isobel ordered Jubal to return to New York to deal with the imminent threat there. She also ordered him not to tell Scola about Nina. She said Scola was undercover and that he didn't need a distraction.

Only she had been in the wrong for that one. It was one thing to more or less abandon Nina when she was fighting for her life. The least they could have done was told Scola about it. Isobel knew that Nina was pregnant. She was pregnant by Scola and it was his baby that was on the line, but she chose to ignore that in order to keep Scola involved in this case.

Scola had gone undercover as a seller of C4. He was supposed to find out what the buyer needed it for as well as when it was supposed to get used. And he was being stonewalled.

His supposed buyer kept coming up with excuses. Nico either had another seller or he was playing with Scola. Scola couldn't tell for sure because Nico forced Scola into taking drugs the last time they met. Scola later reported what happened to Jubal. It was usually against policy for agents to take anything stronger than an Advil.

They make exceptions when agents are forced into it to maintain the cover. They also let this one slide because they were afraid to tell Scola about Nina. The poor guy kept asking about Nina.

Scola has been trying to call her. She wasn't answering his calls or his texts and so that made him worried. He asked Isobel if Nina was alright. Isobel said she was. He later asked Jubal if Nina was alright and if she flew back with him. Jubal had to come up with a story about how Nina was still dealing with paperwork in Rome.

But Scola went on to hear that an FBI Agent had gotten shot overseas. It was actually Nico who told him. Nico had finally introduced Scola to his boss and Andre Chernin wasn't "feeling" him.

The boss wanted to walk away from the deal entirely because he said he got a bad feeling about Scola. Scola had to ask Nico what that was about and Nico explained that the people his boss was mixed up with had gotten antsy after shooting an FBI Agent in Rome. After that meeting, Scola asked Maggie and OA if they had heard about this shooting. They told him they hadn't because Isobel and Jubal was keeping everyone in the dark. No one else besides them knew what really happened in Rome.

Maggie and OA also chose to follow Chernin. They must have gotten too close because he spotted them. He started to run away and they followed him. They chased him down. They shot up his car when he got into one. They essentially forced him off the road and they took him prisoner. They returned to their building with him to question him when someone from the State Department showed up. The new guy demanded full access to Chernin. And he used that time to torture Chernin into desperation.

Jubal had gotten a word from the ADIC that they were supposed to help with this case. He decided interrupt Chernin's interrogation and Chernin used that distraction long enough to kill himself. He was that scared of the people he was working with. Only the reason his torture had been approved was because there's been a lot of online chatter. The State Department believes the Belarusians were planning something on the same scale of 9/11. They also said that it would be Jubal's fault if it happens because he interrupted them as they were "working" on their only lead.

Only Scola thought they were overhyping what's going on. He's been in talks with Nico for weeks. Nico hadn't wanted enough C4 for another 9/11. He was asking for much smaller coordinated amount and so Scola was all for defending his team from unfair accusations when he checked up on Nico's story. He called Forrester. He had to find out from Forrester that there was a shooting and that Nina was fighting for her life. He couldn't believe that Isobel and Jubal would lie to him. He confronted them. He told them they had no right to hide Nina's condition from him and he said they don't get to keep him in the dark because of the possibility of his reaction.

Isobel then told him that she does get to make those calls because she was his boss. Scola was also undercover. He couldn't go running off to Rome to be with Nina. He had to stay on the case. The same case that got another lead. This one seemingly out of nowhere. The Belarusians took time out of their busy schedule to abduct an American woman. Her name is Allison Green. She was an HR Exec. She has no ties to Belarus or to the Russians. She wasn't even a source for C4. It made no sense why they would kidnap her and so that's when Isobel handed over this case to Remy and his team.

Remy's people were the manhunters. They went looking for the terrorists and they also found out that Nico was more involved than he let on. Nico had helped abduct Allison. They followed the car he took back to his apartment building that was supposed to be vacant. Except it wasn't. Nico was letting the Russians stay in the building. The FBI tried to crash the party and they arrested several guys and they also lost Lenkov again. Lenkov escaped into a black van.

And there were still no signs of Allison, but they did learn that the Russians planned on assassinating the President of the United States of America.

The episode will conclude as FBI: Most Wanted S04E16.

Summary: When the deputy commander of an Air National Guard Base is kidnapped, the team must work quickly to find the suspect along with stolen ammunition.

Scola was back at work. He returned from Rome. His girlfriend and baby were doing well. They were on the road to recovery after Nina was shot. Scola took some time off to be with them, but now he felt it was safe to return to work. Scola was assigned an abduction case on his first day back.

The victim was Colonel John Sittenfeld. He was the deputy commander of an Air National Guard Base. He was a kind of a big deal and he was seen being dragged into a vehicle. Only no one reported the abduction until twelve hours after it happened.

The colonel wasn't well-liked. He was a ladies man. He showed up at his favorite restaurant with a different woman each and every time he went there and so most people thought of him as a sleaze. John was even sleeping with his very married assistant. The affair meant more to her than him and her husband quickly found out about it.

The husband was Derek White. He was also Air Force. He confronted John about the affair on the night John got taken. And so the FBI assumed he was responsible for what happened.

They unfortunately had been wrong about that. Derek left things at exchanging words and he was ready to move on. He wrote the marriage off. He also had an alibi for John's abduction.

John wasn't grabbed by a jealous spouse. He was taken for much sinister reasons. Also, it wasn't just one person who grabbed John. It was a group of people. The people that abducted him were smart about it. They planned everything down to the last detail. The car they used was in fact stolen. The owners didn't notice it because they were on an Alaskan cruise.

The people that were running this had known that as well as how to avoid cameras while they rode with their victim to their hideout. Again, the FBI didn't get this case until twelve hours after the abduction.

They tried to move quickly only timing is everything in abduction cases because the first twenty-four hours are crucial for a reason. The feds were able to get information on the car thanks to the secret cameras at the restaurant John was in. They then used the GPS on the car to track it down back to a warehouse where they found John.

John had been tortured and left for dead. He sadly later died of his wounds. Just not before he warned Maggie and OA that they have to stop "them". The feds also found an empty case of a javelin. It turns out John was taken because someone wanted to rob the armory on the base he controls and so they got the weapons they were looking for. They got an untraceable missile system known as the javelin. The javelins were easy to use. Experts claimed it was like playing a video game. OA remembers the device from his own time serving overseas and he knew how destructive they were.

He knew that they were looking at a terrorist level event if it got in the wrong hands. It became imperative that they find the javelin before it was used. They searched that entire warehouse where John had been left and they did find some evidence. They found evidence pointing them to Ray Nichols. Nichols seemed like an average joy at first sight, but he was paying for his lifestyle to a secret job tied to several shell companies and his supposed boss was a Turkey national who ran a garment manufactory. Except the garment place was a cover.

The boss name was Adem Polat. They asked Nichols about him and he refused to talk. He lawyered up. He didn't care that he might go to prison for the rest of life for murder. He was fine with that and it was his wife that had a problem with it. His wife Mila was pregnant. She wanted to help him even if he wasn't helping himself. Tiffany talked to her and she convinced Mila to wear a wire as she went to go talk to Polat. Mila tried to get him to admit to wrongdoing. Only she was nervous about getting confession. She pushed too hard and Polat actually came close to killing her.

Scola and Tiffany stepped in to save Mila. They were forced to kill Polat and his bodyguard because they drew guns first. They also shot a crossing guard while they tried to escape. The feds had to kill them. It was the only way to take them down and at the same time they lost one of their best leads. They had no clue what was done with the javelin. They couldn't ask Polat or his muscle. The only person they could ask was Nichols. Nichols hadn't wanted to talk because he knew Polat had friends and he was worried about his family. Tiffany assured him that unless he has a release date — there's no telling what might happen to his family if he's behind bars.

Nichols must have seen sense after that because he talked. He was the driver. He didn't take part in the theft or the murder. He said that Polat was an arms dealer and that he sold the javelin to Pascual Santos. Santos was a hitman for the Colima Cartel. He even bought the javelin using the money that the DEA used with the cartel. Santos bought the javelin because he wanted to use it to pierce an armored truck. It's what he told Polat he needed it for. Santos also didn't stay long in the United States thanks to his notoriety and so the feds looked into anyone being transferred in an armored truck on that specific day.

They found out about a key witness against Nico Hernandez. Hernandez was once the leader of the Colima Cartel. His people were trying to sink the case against him and so the FBI warned the US Marshalls. Only they were being real jerks about the situation. They said they had everything covered. They refused to the witness in a different route. The FBI knew it was up to them to save the witness. They kept searching for their hitman. Scola was able to find him first. Scola had to engage before the others could join him. And he helped take down the hitman and his backup.

It also convinced Scola that he shouldn't take a job in White Collar. He was considering it because he thought that would be safer with a baby on the way and so he followed Tiffany's advice. He continued the job he loved doing because he knew he couldn't protect his baby from everything in life.

Production Code: FBI518
Summary: When a trucker is gunned down after a routine trip from Canada, all signs point the team to a criminal on the FBI's Most Wanted Terrorists list.

A known terrorist was able to sneak back into the country. His name is Mustafa Samir. He hid in the back of a delivery truck. The truck was filled with boxes and no one checked the boxes at the border or entered the truck. He crossed over from Canada to the United States because the driver was white.

If the border agents had actually done due diligence like they would have with a man of color, they would have found the man hiding in the back. They would have recognized him as someone on the FBI's Most Wanted List and so the border agents let everyone down. They allowed the truck into the US. And the terrorist made it on domestic soil.

Samir had no sense of loyalty. He even killed the driver that helped him cross the border. It was the murder that sparked the FBI investigation. They hadn't known about the terrorist.

They were alerted something was up after a bird watcher found the dead body with his truck. The FBI soon learned that the victim crossed over the border that night. They also found old coffee grounds with the truck indicating that he was hiding something there that he didn't want the dogs to sniff out. The first thing everyone thought when they heard that was drugs.

They looked into the victim. Duggan was a known courier with the Fernandez cartel. He would have done anything for cash. There was no reason to kill him. Everyone figured he was killed when a drug deal went south or for his product. They even found the man that killed him almost right away. Omar Hassan had used his own car to drive to the crime scene.

The road cameras picked him up and so he was arrested. Only he wasn't talking. He instead called OA a traitor to his "own" and went quiet after that.

The FBI had thought that strange. They continued looking into Hassan when they found out he was hanging out with Samir. Samir's DNA was found at his house. Samir was the terrorist that was snuck into the country. He was born in Queens and he moved to the Middle East after 9/11. Again, people made assumptions.

They assumed he was radicalized by 9/11 until they talked to Detective First Grade Jack Lombardo. He worked with Jubal on a joint task force in the following days after the attack. And he knows what radicalized Samir.

Samir's father is dead because of them. They were questioning Samir's father when he tried to run away. He ran to rooftop of a building and rather than admit he had nowhere to go — he tried to jump to another rooftop. Only he didn't make the jump. He died and that's what actually radicalized Samir. Samir blamed the United States for his father's death and Jubal forget all about it. He was drinking in those days. He was under pressure with the taskforce. He completely forget because he checked his files from back then. All they wanted to do was talk to the man because he was a vendor.

Not that time has been kind to some of their old practices. They did a lot in the days right after. They went to so many funerals and the whole city had been changed by what happened. They were constantly afraid of the next attack. And that's what drove them to making several critical mistakes. They could have left Samir's father alone and not want to question him for being a Muslim guy in the area and Samir would have had no reason to hate the country of his own birth. And it goes to show that it didn't really matter to them because Jubal never once made the connection to the terrorist.

But his father died. The racism against Muslim Americans increased to intolerable levels. Samir probably figured he had no reason to be loyal to a country that wasn't loyal to him. He became a terrorist and it wasn't just himself that he smuggled across the border. The FBI later found evidence that Samir was planning an attack in NYC. They made a connection to a restaurant owner. OA used to go to his restaurant as a kid. He asked for a special deal for Ahmed and it turns out Ahmed's family was threatened. That's the only reason why he helped Samir.

OA promised to protect his family. He said he would have them at an embassy where no one can get to them and so Ahmed told him the location of the attack. Samir had apparently planned on setting off a massive bomb in the heart of Manhattan. He wanted to cause another 9/11. The FBI raced down to the building along with Jack. Jack was a part of the Anti-terrorism taskforce in NYPD except he also hasn't learned much since his post 9/11 days. He was still bit of a racist. He believed on coming down on all Muslims. Even the innocent ones. And he questioned OA's loyalty.

They later stopped the bombing. They also cornered Samir. Samir revealed he was there when his father "fell" off the roof. His father had told him and Hassan to hide and so they witnessed Jack murdering the man. He recognized Jack from back then. Jack hung that man over the ledge because he figured he must have been a terrorist because he was a Muslim. He dangled Samir over the ledge and he dropped him when he didn't get the answers he wanted. There was an autopsy. This proved that Samir's father had bruising around his legs and once they arrested Samir — he agreed to give evidence against Jack.

Jubal later met up with Jack. He got Jack to admit he murdered the guy for being a Muslim. Jubal was wearing a wire at the time and so they did arrest Jack for the crime. Not that Jack saw it as Jubal doing his job. He saw it as a betrayal. His wife has cancer from breathing in the dust on 9/11. She was dying and Jack felt he should have been allowed to get away with his crimes so that she didn't have to die alone. And yet he didn't feel the slightest bit sorry for having taken away a father from his son.

Jack was just as bad as Samir because both were murderers.

Summary: A drug dealer is shot in a federal park and the team sets out to look for his murderer; Maggie's sister returns to New York and complicates the situation.

Maggie's sister was back in town. Her sister was a bit of a troublemaker. Trouble finds Erin wherever she goes. It just never seemed to be her fault. Erin was a drug addict. The last conversation between the two sisters ended with Maggie having to write Erin off because she couldn't help someone who refused to help themselves. But Erin said she's better now.

She's back in New York because she said she's been clean for months. She wanted to start over and Maggie didn't think New York was the best fit. The city holds a lot of temptation for Erin. Erin also tried living there once before with Maggie and she fell off the wagon.

Maggie didn't think moving back was a great idea. Only Erin said she was good now. She's been staying with a friend that she met at rehab. She's actually been back a full three weeks before she contacted Maggie and she was only contacting her because she needed a favor.

Erin said a friend went missing. She was wondering if Maggie could help find this person. Maggie had to remind her that she couldn't just go searching for people. She was FBI. She kinda needed a reason before she or anyone else she's connected to open an investigation.

Maggie was luckily called into work at that point. She made her excuses with Erin. She put the whole thing behind her and unfortunately Erin was connected to the case her team later caught. The FBI were informed after a person died in a federal park.

Any crime that happens on federal property was considered a federal crime. The FBI began looking into this murder. Their victim was Rafael Morales. He has three priors. There were all drug offences and so he was a drug dealer before his death. And someone shot him point blank to the head.

Rafael got into an altercation a couple days before he died. The FBI tracked down the man he fought with. The guy had an alibi for the time of the murder and he gave them a name. He said Rafael had a partner. The partner's name was JJ Gomez. Maggie and OA went to JJ's home.

They found the door open. They also found Erin knocked out on the floor. Erin was unfortunately staying there with her friend Nikki and Nikki's boyfriend JJ until JJ disappeared. He was the guy that Erin wanted Maggie to track down.

It turns out JJ disappeared on everyone. He angered a lot of people with that. There were a couple of them that wore masks and broke into his apartment to abduct his girlfriend because they too wanted to know where JJ was. Erin tried to defend her friend. She got knocked out.

The next thing she knows is that Maggie is standing over her. Maggie got an ambulance for her. She required stitches for the blow she took to the head. And the first thing that Maggie asked her once she was back on her feet was if she was using again.

Not "are you okay". Maggie had the FBI search the apartment. They found two ounces of cocaine there. Maggie came to question what exactly Erin was doing at the apartment and Erin claimed it wasn't drugs. Erin told them about what happened. She also said she never really talked to JJ.

She was more Nikki's friend. Nikki has been by her side while she struggled to get clean. She said she never would have turned her life around without her and that Nikki was the one person who never gave up on her. Maggie hadn't been the only one that wrote off Erin. Everyone else had done it, too.

The FBI went looking for JJ. They eventually found him with Nikki's father. He had been shot and not by the old man. A third party shot JJ. JJ died without saying who was behind Nikki's abduction. There was also not pictures of surveillance cameras of the shooter. Only they found JJ's cell phone.

They found the threatening message from Nikki's abductors. They were demanding thirty-five thousand dollars for a debt JJ owes. JJ went to Nikki's father for the money. He didn't have it himself and Nikki's father hadn't trusted him because he's been down this road before. He thought JJ was just looking to buy more drugs.

It probably didn't help that JJ was on something when he confronted the older man. Now JJ's dead. He was murdered by whoever took Nikki and the FBI now had to look for her. They traced the text message that was sent to JJ. It was from a burner phone. The user turned it off right after using it.

They couldn't get a name that way, but they did track down the Wi-Fi it used. It led back to a drug hotspot. They needed an in. Someone who used to go there and Maggie's bosses thought of her sister. They thought Erin would be the perfect person to go in undercover.

Maggie was against the idea. She thought Erin would be risking temptation. She just couldn't stop Erin from doing this because Erin said she wanted to help Nikki and this was the only way. Erin went to the bar. She went looking for coke. She was given a test when she met the big boss.

She was told to snort a line. It had looked like she did it, but she later claimed she faked it and that she was only pretending to do the coke to gain some trust. Erin left the bar after that. She returned to the FBI. office And her sister demanded she'd do the drug test.

Erin went through with the test. Not that her sister was any happier with a negative test. Maggie then demanded that she herself make a deal with Sammy for Nikki and she tried to dismiss Erin only Erin wouldn't go away. Erin approached Sammy. She pretended that she talked to JJ.

She claimed that JJ told her everything right before he died. She said she was willing to pay for Nikki and so Sammy later shot her a text. He did it from the same burner that was used to threaten JJ. Which meant Sammy was their guy. He had Nikki and so the FBI allowed Erin to make a deal with him.

Erin met up with Sammy at a terminal. She agreed to show him the money if he showed her Nikki. He showed her Nikki on his phone and so she was giving him the money when Maggie blew things. Maggie was hanging around a little too closely. Sammy spotted her several times.

He then pulled a gun on Erin and he knocked her out again. And that resulted in OA having to shoot him. It was a miracle that Nikki was at the terminal because they wouldn't have been able to rescue her if she wasn't. And so Nikki's life was saved — just not because of Maggie.

Erin was also going to be alright and Maggie asked her to leave New York again. The real reason that Maggie doesn't want her around is because Erin embarrasses her whenever she's in New York. And so Maggie finally told her that, but Erin still said she wasn't leaving.

Summary: The team investigates the kidnapping of a prominent U.S. Senator's daughter and a potential connection to another case.

The episode begins late at night, a young lady just makes it to a convenience store as it is closing, and buys an energy drink. The owner locks the door and three guys walk up, they ask the woman to open up and she doesn't. All of a sudden, they hear the girl scream and an alarm goes off, they run to see what happened and a van grabbed the girl, her cell phone and the energy drink on the ground.

The next day, Maggie and Omar are on the scene, the victim was Allison Becker, 22 years old and the only child of Senator David Becker. They don't know much. It's a dead zone, no cameras in the area.

Maggie and Omar speak to the store owner, she says there were punks bothering her when it happened, she saw that it was a grey van that sped away.

Jubal tells the team this is a high profile case and soon, all eyes will be on them, they need to act fast. Her roommate confirms that Allison didn't make it home, but they were not really close. On her cell phone, nothing much, she is boring. But her father, comes from a wealthy family and his politics are controversial. He is a mouth piece for the left and has a lot of power. Jubal says the people on the right are probably not happy then.

Maggie, Omar and Isobel go see David Becker who says he gets threats all the time but nothing serious. His daughter did say that a guy might be following her and he wanted to involve the capitol police and she wouldn't let him, he doesn't know why he listened to her. He was worried, and that is why he put that alarm on her phone. Becker tells Isobel that wants everyone looking for his baby.

Street cams near Columbia, her school, two weeks ago, a guy was following Allison and photographing her, the camera was cheap so they don't think it was paparazzi. Footage from the bank across the street gives them a clear photo of the guy, Adrian Bose, ex cop with DC metro, he was charged with battery against his wife.

Two days ago he posted that Becker was a puppet and a traitor. He has a permanent address in Virginia and his cell phone is pinging near the Senator's home, Jubal thinks he is targeting the family, he tells them to warn the Senator and send Omar and Maggie back there immediately.

Omar and Maggie head over there and see a guy in a blue Kia with Virginia licence plates. A closer look and it is Bose, they get him out of the vehicle and he says he knows nothing about Allison missing, he was at a strip club and he has a receipt in his pocket to prove it. He does oppo research for a super pack, they pay him to take photos of the Senator and his daughter, they promised him a bonus if he found something sketchy and he says yes, he can't stand Becker. He gives up the thumb drive of photos.

Back at the station, most of the photos were at Manhattan, but they do see her in front of building every Tuesday night for the past three weeks. The sole tenant is Sober Harbour, a halfway house for parole drug offenders.

Next stop for Omar and Maggie are Sober Harbour, they find the manager Helen York. She thinks they are there for another missing girl, Katie Ryan, one of the residents who went missing three days ago. They go into Katie's room, she looks a lot like Allison. Katie had a curfew pass to have dinner with her mom and the next morning her mother reported her missing to the NYPD in Brownsville. They tell Helen that Allison is missing too, she reveals that Allison was a volunteer there. And, everyone else is on edge since Katie went missing.

Omar and Maggie go to see Katie's mother, she is really upset that NYPD did nothing for three days, they didn't take it seriously. Her mother says that Katie mentioned Allison, she really liked her and says that she was a new volunteer.

Footage of Katie in a convenience store, they can see her being abducted. They show it to Becker to see if he can recognize the perpetrator, but nothing. Jubal has a good news, there is a lead, there is a bump in Katie's pocket, she had ear buds in her pocket and they will be able to trace it because they have her cell phone. Becker tells Isobel that finding his daughter alive better be her priority.

The team tracks down the signal from the ear buds to an empty building, clearly someone has been squatting there, but the place is empty, there is a mattress on the floor. More looking around, they find a door behind a blockage, break it open and go down into a basement where there is another mattress and blankets, the earbuds are on a table, a gold necklace with the letter A on it, and handcuffs.

Half the buildings around the neighbourhood are vacant, nobody was paying attention to what was going on here. The owner of the building is Colleen Curtis, real estate investor, 50 years old, unmarried and doesn't fit the profile of the kidnapper. Jubal notified her and she is on the way there now.

Colleen shows up, she says she has a manager who watches over the building, supposed to drop by once a week, his name is Caleb Vance and he is 25 years old with a long record of breaking and entering as well as various stalking charges. No phone records or family. He has a credit card and made a $500 payment to Paypal the day Katie was abducted to Ray Laforge, a forklift operator with two priors.

A visit to Laforge's place by Tiffany and Start and he doesn't want to open the door, all of a sudden there is a scream, so they burst open the door guns aimed. Inside a woman calls out to Ray, she says her name is Maria Nunez. Ray says she is not his wife, they ask about Caleb Vance, he met him on Craig's List and he purchased two large toy chests. A deep look into Vance and he was abused by his mother, she was a prostitute and addict, she died six months ago and looks like the two victims. Now it all makes sense. He told his counsellor that his mother would lock him in a toy chess to punish him.

Their best lead is a grey van with cardboard on the window. Isobel says they should use Becker's clout to gain media attention to the case. Becker does a press conference and says his daughter is in grave danger and may not have much time, if they see the man on the screen, Caleb Vance, he is a person of interest, if they see the grey van, call the FBI tip line immediately. The response is overwhelming. They get multiple reports from Red Hook, a guy matching Caleb's description is filling a grey van with gas.

The team heads out and it doesn't take long for Omar to see the grey van, he and Maggie go after it. They stop it, but Caleb makes a run for it and the van is empty. It's a foot race to catch up with Caleb, they lost him.

Caleb heads to a bus, but they catch him. Maggie tells him it is over, gives Omar time to grab the knife out of hand and cuff him. They bring him in, he is calm as ever and won't say a word. Isobel thinks she knows how to crack him. She goes in alone to see him, she tries to confuse him, she tells him that he took Alison Becker, she is not a drug addict like his mother, nothing like her. The first one, Katie is an addict, but Alison, she deserves better. She says if he tells her where they are they take lethal injection off the table, but only for the next ten seconds. He says they are at an illegal dumping site, he let them there at 3:30pm.

Jubal sends Maggie and Omar out to the site with a team, they call out the girls names. They find one toy chest, break it open and open it to find Alison inside. They keep looking for Katie, they end up finding the other toy chest, but it's too late, Katie is dead.

Isobel and Maggie head over to speak to Katie's mother, she says her daughter's fingers were raw, she was clawing at the toy chest like it was a coffin, she just needed someone to help. Her mother is upset because she told the NYPD and called the FBI three days ago and nobody did anything until a Senator's daughter went missing. She tells the two of them to get the hell out of there.

Summary:	The team races to find a dangerous dealer and his supplier after finding a group of teens dead from a drug overdose.

The episode begins with a 17-year old girl not arriving home on time, her mother, Michelle Dolan, is upset, her father tells her she is fine. Michelle finds her car on the side of the road, none of her stuff is in it, she tells her husband she is going to head down in the woods and look around. She is still on the phone with her husband and calling out for Meghan. Michelle shouts "OMG" she has found her daughter and some other teenagers, her daughter appears dead.

Zidan and Bell are on the scene, there are six dead teenagers. They assume it is drug related, but it doesn't make any sense, no criminal records, just good kids.

Bell speaks to Mr. & Mrs. Dolan, she didn't have a history of drug abuse, she was a good kid. She snuck a beer here or there, they were all good kids.

The autopsy shows a fatal combination of Fentanyl and Carfentanil which is used to put down elephants, it is really strong.

All the teens social media posts seem to be normal, so it doesn't look like it is a mass suicide. Meghan's phone has a video, 30 minutes before the time of death where Toni Hasa, an Albanian immigrant, he has a sealed juvenile record, two months ago he was released from a drug program. He worked out at the same gym as two of the deceased teenagers.

They head to a bar where Toni supposedly works, but nobody will say they recognize a photo of Hasa. Zidan says it looks like a place that would just as soon pour you a drink and shoot you in the face. They leave the bar and outside, an undercover cop who was in the bar approaches them and gives them Hasa's address. They find him, but he is dead, the same overdose.

The pull videos and find that someone going into Hasa's apartment and staying there six minutes before he died.

Organized crime is in the station, the bar, the Tirana lounge, is owned by Fabian Shabani, a gangster — they have been working the case and need them to tread lightly. Isobel lets them know that they are in charge and their man, detective Sula, will be working with Zidan and Bell.

Sula looks at the video and recognizes the man, Dardan Hasa, Toni's uncle. He tried to sell him some guns, he can tell him that he found a buyer.

Sula goes undercover, he pretends to have a buyer with Dardan, says he knows the guy well, he used to buy cake from him. Dardan doesn't buy it because Sula stalls and stutters, he pulls a gun on Sula who is wired, Zidan and Bell rush in. They end up getting into a foot race and Dardan gets shot.

After a search of Dardan's van, they find proof that these guys are making their own drugs.

Dardan is in the hospital, if he survives, Sula's cover is blown. So in the meantime, they want to work fast and have Sula go to speak to Shabani.

Sula goes inside and starts to talk a little too much. Zidan is in his ear and tells him to cool it.

Zidan and Sula meet in a cafe, Zidan warns him that one misstep is going to get him killed. Sula was offered a drink undercover and wouldn't take it because of his religious beliefs. Zidan tells him to get his head back in the game.

The team has been listening to Shabani and there is going to be a meeting with the Latin Kings, it is happening in the office on top of the bar. An imam from a local mosque lives in the apartment even though Shabani owns it. The imam seems legit. They don't want to bug it, but if Shabani is using it for illicit meetings the they have to. Sula won't do it, he won't put a bug in it so Zidan says he will do it, he just need to get him in the door.

Zidan is about to go in the apartment when Shabani sends Hyka up there to get everything ready, Sula tries to intercept Hyka and slow him down. Hyka gets annoyed and tells him to get lost. Zidan manages to get out of the apartment safe.

The Latin Kings arrive at the apartment, they are heading inside, the feed is good, they are able to watch the meeting. All of a sudden, the imam is heading back the apartment, Zidan heads out to speak to him.

After the meeting, Shabani is on the move to a warehouse, the team follows him there and go in, they see the same kind of equipment as Dardan's van. Scola sees the posts brewing inside, he puts on a gas mask and tries to turn them all off. Zidan is attacked by Shabani, he loses his gun, but Sula arrives in time to save him.

At the station, Sula tells Zidan that he is not ok, Zidan says he saved his life. Sula admits he was naive, he thought he would ever have to kill. Sula says he doesn't want to ever do that again, and he doesn't like all the compromises he is expected to make. He takes off his badge, leaves it on the desk and walks out.

Zidan goes to prayer like he promised the imam.

Summary: The team must race against time to hunt down a religiously motivated serial killer when a prominent doctor is found dead.

A doctor was found on federal land. The victim's name was Dr. Paul Hendrix. He was found at a park and that made his murder a federal crime. Only his murder was an odd one. He wasn't killed at the park. He was just dumped there. He was missing his clothes as well as personal effects.

There were several pieces of his flesh that were cut away. His hands were also tied together with a rosary to make it appear as if he was praying. It all very ritualistic and it was because he was the first victim that no one wanted to use the words "serial killer". To say the words was like it was inviting trouble to their door.

They ignored the ritualistic aspect initially. They looked into Paul's life. He was never married and he recently had to ask the cops to intervene because the angry husband of a former patient had harassed him. The man that did so was Derek Lawson. Derek works in construction.

He was married for a long time to the love of his life and then she got sick. Paul was supposed to perform surgery on her only he pushed back her surgery to instead take a young and healthier patient into the OR. And so Derek blamed Paul for his wife's eventual death.

Derek firmly believes that his wife would have lived if she had gotten her surgery first. Derek also had an alibi for the time of the murder. Meaning he wasn't their killer. They became even more sure of this when the second body dropped. The body of Colonel James Logan was found in a dumpster in the city.

He was killed elsewhere like Paul. He was also found in the same manner as Paul. The two men just didn't know each other. Their paths never crossed. One was a neurosurgeon considered the best in his field. The other was a soldier that wrote a book about his time overseas.

They both became famous. Albeit for different things. They never worked together. They never even knew each other and still someone killed the both of them. The FBI used surveillance footage of James's time in the city to determine that someone had been stalking him.

The photo they have of this man was too grainy to run facial recognition and so they identified their perp by the rosary beads he used. The beads were only sold at one place in the whole city. It was sold in a seminary gift shop. Father Roger Burns ran the place and he identify the man from the photo.

The priest said that was Frank Silver. Silver used to work for the seminary. He originally wanted to join their order and they had to turn him down because he didn't meet the educational requirements. Father Burns felt bad for Silver after turning him down. He gave Silver a job as a custodian so that he would get to be a part of their community. He also asked Silver to start taking some college courses on the side in order to qualify as a priest. Silver seemed very religious at first and everything was working out. And then he began devolving.

Silver later claimed to be God. He believed the priests were there to worship him and that only he could pass judgement. Silver became aggressive with several of the priests. He threatened parishioners. Father Burns had to fire him. He still had a file on Silver. He handed that over to the FBI and they learned that Silver came from Iowa. He was new in the city. He probably committed several crimes back home that he had to run from. He was also staying at an abandoned church that the FBI quickly found.

The FBI raided the church. They found hidden tunnels there. In one of the tunnels, there was a young woman named Mary. Mary met Silver at a soup kitchen at a homeless shelter. She was a volunteer there and Silver became infatuated with her. They were friendly. They weren't friends and there was also no hope of that after he asked her to have his child out of the blue. She of course turned him down because she didn't know him nor did she wish to get to know him after that. And he responded by kidnapping her in order to repeatedly rape her in the hopes of getting her pregnant.

Silver told her that he was God. He told her he chose her to have his son like the original Mary was chosen. He wanted to bring the second coming on and he terrorized her for four days until the FBI rescued her. Mary told them what Silver did. What he said. She also said that he stole her car. The FBI found out that he was still using it. The car angle helped once they knew how he was choosing his victims. He was picking them out of newspaper clippings. He left them near his "throne" at the abandoned church.

Silver was picking people who had control over life and death. The neurosurgeon was saving people on his time schedule. The colonel wrote a book about how hard it was to send young soldiers to their deaths. Silver's next target was a judge in a huge trial. Silver truly believed himself to be God because he was a malignant narcissist. He thinks the whole world was there to amuse him. He was killing his victims in a similar manner to how apostles were murdered for defying the will of God.

Silver tried to target the judge. The FBI went on high alert after finding Mary's car parked a few blocks away from the courthouse. They tried to capture Silver before he could hurt the judge and, while they later protected the judge himself, Silver got away from them in all the chaos. They had to follow him to a cemetery where he got the drop on Maggie. And he tried to use her as a human shield, but she told her people to take the shot and they did. They shot Silver. They captured him and now he will live out his own personal hell.

Scola wasn't there for the takedown because he had to go to the hospital. Not for himself. It was for Nina. Nina developed an infection. They had to delivery their son a month before his due date and Scola was even asked who to prioritize who to save during the surgery if it went south. He chose Nina. It thankfully didn't have to come to that and both mother and baby are okay. They also named their newborn boy "Douglas" after Scola's late brother.

Summary: When a bus explosion kills several innocent people, the team jumps into action. Scola tries to balance fatherhood with the job.

A homeless man spotted an unattended bag on the floor. It was left on the ground at the bus station. This poor man was panhandling and down on his luck. He thought someone leaving a bag there was a sign he could take it, but all he did was bring a bomb onto the next bus.

The bomb went off less than a minute after this unnamed man grabbed it. Only bombs going off in New York City was an instant call to the FBI. Jubal was leading his team on this one. He had Maggie, OA, Tiffany and Scola go out to the scene.

They canvased for witnesses. There was no survivors from the people on the bus. There were just people that got off the bus in time to be spared.

One woman claimed she saw a Middle Eastern man drop off a bag at the stop. She didn't get a good look at his face. He was wearing a hoodie. She didn't feel comfortable with explaining why she thought this man was Middle Eastern. Or at least not to OA. She just said which direction she saw him go in. The FBI checked surveillance cameras.

They saw a man wearing a hoodie leave in the direction the witness saw and it turns out to be a black man. Not Middle Eastern. The feds identified him with facial recognition. They got a warrant for his place and they went there to arrest him.

Whoever this man wasn't innocent. He shot at the feds when they came to his place. He fled on foot and he even took a hostage. Maggie wanted to deescalate the situation.

She put away her own weapon down. She tried to talk their gunman down and Scola could see he wasn't budging. His first concern was the hostage. He shot the suspect thereby killing him. It was a good shooting only they were left with no idea on what motivated Balin into leaving a bomb at a bus stop. They searched the house to see if there were any clues there. And they found a flag.

The flag was for a terror group known as Al-Shabaab. It was a group out of Somalia. Mostly comprised of Somalian Muslims. Balin was radicalized after his father died in the war over there and then the rest of his family were killed by Americans.

The Americans bombed a community center over there that they thought held terrorists. They instead killed thirty-six women and children. Balin became really bitter after that according to his wife. His wife also claimed that she noticed a shift in her husband once he started visiting a Somalian restaurant.

The FBI needed eyes in that restaurant. They couldn't send the whole team because they would stick out. They sent Tiffany and they included Special Agent Hobbs. Hobbs was a little rusty with being in the field. Jubal tried to warn Tiffany about him, but it's not like she could take her usual partner Scola into that scene. Scola waited outside in the listening van with Maggie and OA. They were all listening in when Hobbs went to the bathroom. Hobbs started up a conversation with a stranger. Just some friendly chit chat.

Then this stranger started questioning Hobbs. He grabbed Hobbs when Hobbs was walking away. This man saw that Hobbs had a gun on him. He quickly figured out that Hobbs was a cop. He shot Hobbs and Tiffany went in too late to catch the perp before he made a run for it. The man escaped through a window. Tiffany stayed with Hobbs until Hobbs died in her arms. Jubal warned her that Hobbs was rusty. She just didn't think he was that rusty or else she would have kept a closer eye on him.

Tiffany blamed herself for what happened to Hobbs. She was out for blood. She wasn't looking for the shooter to get intel on the terrorist attack. She was looking for him because she was hoping to kill him for what he did to Hobbs. Something she let slip to one of the waitresses she was questioning. She told this woman that this man deserved to die. She said it right in front of Scola and Scola didn't call her out for it. He was too busy focusing on the manhunt. They identified their shooter as Hakim. No one knew him well at that restaurant.

The waitress claimed Hakim was a loudmouth. She said he was always bragging about the people he killed in the Somalian army. Other than that the waitress claimed not to know him well. This turned out to be a lie. They tracked Hakim's movements from the restaurant. They pinged his phone to get them a location. They later found the phone had been tossed in the garbage and that Hakim was on the run. They used nearby cameras to find out that Hakim had gotten a ride from that location. He got a ride from the very same waitress that claimed not to know him well.

The same one that Tiffany said Hakim deserved to die to. Maybe if she hadn't been so focused on revenge then she could have seen that statement spooked this woman. It spooked her into helping Hakim evade the FBI. Jubal and Isobel questioned their FBI liaison on Somalian affairs. They learned that the terrorist organization was against the Somalian government. They've been killing Somalian civilians to raise awareness for their cause. They've now begun killing Americans to highlight American involvement with the Somalian government.

The feds tracked the car. The car's GPS was manually turned off. Someone turned it back on again. They followed the signal till they found the waitress and she refused to talk. Tiffany was going to beat the information out of her when her team pulled her away. They warned her to get her head right. They then tried questioning Cumar themselves. The right way. Only Cumar refused to talk. She said innocent people have been dying everyday because of American involvement overseas. She didn't think it mattered if it was American blood now being spilled.

Cumar didn't want to tell the feds anything, but they still realized something from her statement. They realized this terror group wasn't done with setting bombs. They did their best to check high value targets and they found Hakim. He dropped the bomb trying to make a run for it. Scola and OA stayed with the bomb and the bomb task force. Tiffany as well as Maggie went after Hakim. They followed him into a fashion event. They couldn't shoot because of all the people around. Not that Hakim let that stop him.

Hakim started shooting. He grabbed a hostage. He went up with the hostage and they were cornered in a room. The women were guns trained outside. They called in SWAT. They soon made entry only to find Hakim was no longer there. He used a back door to escape. Tiffany followed him. She got hit by a van. She got back up and continued chasing Hakim. And she unfortunately lost him in the crowd.

Tiffany wasn't taking the news well. She blamed herself for Hobbs's death. She blamed herself for Hakim getting away. She wasn't doing well and Jubal wanted her to take a break. And Tiffany made sure to go to Hobbs's impromptu memorial before she went home.

Summary: The team races to find the suspect who murdered the president of the NY Fed and may be connected to one of Jubal's past cases.

There was a shooting in broad daylight. Duncan Martin was shot in the street by someone that fled in a car afterwards. There were plenty of witnesses. There were actually two nurses in the area and they tried to offer first aid until the ambulance came. It sadly wasn't enough to save him.

Duncan later died from his wounds, but his death became a federal case because he was the President as well as CEO of the New York Bank of the Federal Reserve. His killer even had the audacity to steal his car when they used it to flee. The car could be tracked. They tracked it back to Queens where they saw it abandoned.

The car was searched. There was a dash cam. They used that camera to piece together what happened. Duncan had accidentally hit a young woman with his car.

He got out of it to check on her when her male partner shot him and stole his car. There was blood found in the car. It was from the woman that Duncan accidentally hit. She wasn't faking it. She really was injured. She could also be facing internal bleeding because there was a lot of blood. The feds were concerned about her and they tried looking for her.

All they got were a dead ends at first. The car was left abandoned in a parking lot. Roy Kim stole the car from there and he took it back to his place to clean it up before taking it to a chop shop.

The feds thought Roy was their shooter until they cleared him. They checked out his story. They saw that he stole the car after finding it abandoned. He just wasn't their guy. They had to keep looking and eventually they were able to trace the injured woman not far from the car. She was clearly dying. They had come too late to save her and she died before they could get help.

The oddest thing though was that Jubal has seen her before. He recognized her face. He couldn't pinpoint where he remembered her from and he dropped the matter after dealing with some personal problems.

His son had gotten suspended from school after he was caught drinking. Jubal was an alcoholic. His teenage son was now drinking and Jubal couldn't afford to ignore it. Not when he potentially passed on the gene to his son. Tyler hasn't had it easy. He had cancer. He struggled with finding friends and it seems the drinking thing was also about finding friends.

Jubal was thinking about putting his son back into therapy when the case took a turn. They found out that the female victim was also a hostage. Her abductor had brought her outside to get checked by a doctor because she had pneumonia. She used that opportunity to try to escape. She got hit by a car and unfortunately her abductor caught up to her. Now she's dead because of this man. He refused to get her help. He's killed two people so far. The FBI found out what doctor she saw. Some hack that was going through a divorce and took money under the table to keep it from his ex-wife.

Anyways, there was a security camera outside of the doctor's office. They saw the moment that the woman escaped her captor. They also got a good image of her captor and ran facial recognition. He was identified as Luke Hopkins. He was forty-three. Single. He's had trouble with women and was once accused of stalking. They got a warrant for his home. They went there and they found signs that a teenager was being held there and that there were signs of another teenager being held hostage. Hopkins must have returned to the house to flee with the second girl.

They saw signs from the house that showed one of the girls wrote GM over and over. It triggered Jubal's memory. He finally remembered where he saw the girl. She was once a case of his. Jillian and Gabby Martinez were abducted from their home eight years ago. Everyone assumed they were killed by a known serial killer back then. Jubal had even told their father that the girls were dead. It seems he was wrong about that. The girls were still alive. Up until Jillian got hit by the car and died from her injuries.

Hopkins has now fled with Gabby. Jubal went with Isobel to break the news to the girls' father. The man was so enraged that he would have killed Jubal, but he held onto the hope that Gabby was at least still alive. Gabby was being held by Hopkins. Hopkins stole a car from his foster brother. It turns out that Hopkins's birth parents did horrible things to their foster children and they'd beat Hopkins if the foster siblings tried to rebel. After he was removed from that house, he spent time in a psychiatric facility. And he went on to live with his foster family after that.

Hopkins was still pretty violent. His foster family threw him out because of it. He actually beat up his foster brother and stole the brother's car when he went on the run with Gabby. Hopkins was deeply troubled after what happened with his family. Both of his families. He began seeking a family he could dominate and control. People who couldn't be taken from him. He told his foster brother that he'd die before anyone took his family away. He's deranged. He thinks in his own sick way that he loves those girls. And it was those girls that will be his undoing.

The car Hopkins stole from his foster brother was tracked to the Bronx. The FBI as well as local NYPD had him cornered him. Hopkins had a gun. He took Gabby into a store and took the whole store hostage.

They tried talking him down by calling the store. Hopkins kept saying that no one was taking his family away from him. He was threatening to kill people if they didn't allow him to escape with Gabby. The feds accessed the cameras inside the store. They saw that Gabby grabbed a weapon while Hopkins was distracted.

Gabby knocked out Hopkins. She grabbed his gun. She then started firing at the cops. She started firing at Hopkins. She shot him in the leg and she was unraveling.

She demanded to know where her sister was. They brought her father down to the scene. They contacted Gabby. They had her talk to her dad. Her dad broke the news that Jillian was dead. Gabby was so angry that she was going to kill Hopkins only he grabbed for the gun. And Jubal had to put him down.

Gabby was freed for the first time in eight years. She wasn't ready to talk to her father. Only he wasn't going anywhere. He was going to keep loving her and supporting her through whatever came next. Jubal blamed himself for the whole thing. He was talking to Maggie about it when Maggie told him that he couldn't have foreseen this or any of it. He did his job the best way he could.

And afterwards Jubal decided to go with Tyler to therapy.

Summary: The team works quickly to uncover the motive behind the murder of a seemingly innocent man.

The New York Office of the FBI became involved in an abduction. Eric Cantwell was abducted in broad daylight. He was an adult man that lived in the neighborhood and he was abducted on federal property. Making this case a two-fer. There was also a witness that tried to intervene. He got shot at. He described the perpetrator as medium average build guy wearing a black hoodie with a black mask. He drove away in either a silver or gray car. The witness saw the abductor put Eric into the trunk at gunpoint. This was when he tried to intervene and found himself dodging bullets. And the man drove away with Eric before additional help could arrive.

Eric was known in that neighborhood. The witness didn't know his last name. He just knew him as Eric and that he had opened a lounge in the neighborhood. From there, the FBI was able to identify him. They got his name. They found out where he lived. They also learned that his lounge had become a hotspot. The FBI searched surveillance cameras in that neighborhood where he had been taken. Most of them were down because they had been vandalized. The few that did work showed that the silver car drove out of the city.

They were able to track it down to a lake. Everyone feared the perp was dumping a body. They went there. They saw the hooded man getting into the car and Maggie tried to stop them. She held her gun at them. She was right in their path and they just kept on driving. Maggie was actually riding on the hood of the car for a while before she was shaken off. She's alright. Eric on the other hand was found by that lake with a mortal gunshot wound. The most he could say about his killer before he passed was that it was the "Russians".

The FBI tried visiting Eric's place to ask his co-workers if they knew what he was talking about. There was a waitress that said that Eric was in some kind of trouble and he tried to buy a gun. The FBI tried talking to Eric's business partner next, but they found him murdered in the back of the lounge. He was killed by the same gun that killed Eric. Only the feds found someone that works in the kitchen. He at least knew what was going on. He said that his bosses were being extorted for two grand every week by the Russian mob.

It was protection money. They paid and nothing will happen to them. Eric and his partner Terry didn't want to pay it. They both got killed as a way of sending a message to everyone else in the neighborhood. The FBI has a presence in that neighborhood. They learned that it was mostly comprised of Eastern Europeans. They just weren't Russians. They were Ukrainians. People confuse them because their language sounds pretty similar. Also, it's not like people are asking for the mob's ethnicity during a shakedown.

The Ukrainian mob runs that neighborhood. The guy in charge was dating a pretty girl from the Upper Eastside. Her name was Cate. Her boyfriend's name was Luka. Luka and Cate were both at his club in the neighborhood. OA had to leave because he recognized Cate. He didn't want her to recognize him. OA started dating Cate's childhood friend, Gemma. It's been three weeks. They're already calling it dating and Gemma actually showed up at the club. She knew he was FBI. She would have blown his cover.

OA had to leave. The others stayed. Tiffany even saw an opening with Cate. Cate was dealing drugs to her friends in the bathroom. Tiffany approached her looking to buy and arrested her once Cate sold her drugs. It's a felony to sell to a federal agent. It doesn't matter if it's under felony weight. They quietly arrested Cate. They brought her down to their headquarters for interrogation. They told her that her charges could go away if she agrees to help bring down her boyfriend. They also showed her photos of what her boyfriend was involved in to convince her.

Cate was a privileged woman. She was never going to go to prison over Luka. She chose herself and she agreed to search through her boyfriend's things at his club. She planted a bug in his office. She was almost caught. She was able to divert attention by mentioning she wanted to set up a friend of hers with his boy V. V was short for Viktor. He was the man that killed Eric and his partner. They have fingerprints from the crime scene. They simply needed to swipe something with Viktor's prints on it. They had Cate go back to the club.

Cate was still under the impression that Luka could be innocent. She really likes him. She was making excuses for him because she didn't want him to be a bad guy. She didn't want to hurt him. She agreed to set up Viktor with Tiffany because the FBI reassured her that they got the right guy. They got Viktor's fingerprints. It proved to be a match only Luka found the wire that Cate put in his office. He was now onto her.

Luka tried to corner her. He questioned her story about meeting Tiffany. Tiffany tried to get her out of there. Except Cate still liked Luka. She tried to come clean. He pulled a gun and he shot Cate before trying to kill Tiffany. Tiffany received back up. OA had to call for an ambulance for Cate. And Cate later died from her wounds.

They were able to arrest Viktor who flipped on the whole mob, but OA couldn't come clean to his new girlfriend about what happened and he tried to have a conversation about her lifestyle. He was a jerk!

Production Code: FBI604
Summary: The team is sent looking for a suspect who gunned down a federal judge in broad daylight.

Someone shot a federal court judge right outside of the courthouse. OA was in the middle of a breakup when he got the call. He had finally told his girlfriend that he was there right as her friend was murdered.

He didn't tell her right away because he really liked her. He didn't want to rock the boat. He waited a few days and he finally fessed up because he wanted to use that opportunity to question her about her drug use.

He wanted to know if she was like her friend. He told her he couldn't date anyone taking coke. He was an FBI Agent and he has a duty to report. And so his girlfriend basically kicked him out because she couldn't believe he cared so much about his career that he couldn't even support her when she just lost a childhood friend.

OA was still bothered by the breakup when he reported to duty. He and Maggie were first on the scene. They found out the victim was Judge Charles Pollan. He was killed by a Middle Eastern man.

There was a witness to the murder. Charles was in fact walking to the courthouse with an Assistant District Attorney and the shooter followed them for a while before shooting Charles. The shooter mentioned some quote about the prophet Muhammed to the witness, Charles's friend. OA recognized that quote as being a part of the holy scripture in Islam.

The feds couldn't find a good photo of the shooter. He had a mask on. The shooting also happened so fast that the witness couldn't give a great description and so if the shooter hadn't stopped to read scripture to the witness — they wouldn't know who they were looking for. Much less his faith.

The killer literally identified himself as Muslim. The FBI went looking into any Muslim enemies of the judge. They found a man that ran the Islamic Center. He sent the judge five threatening letters because the judge sentenced a friend of his to ten years in prison. It was reportedly for hate speech.

OA and Maggie went to question this man. He had an airtight alibi. He was at the center during the shooting. Only OA noticed that they were being watched by someone from the center.

OA followed this man and the man was revealed to be special Agent Hassan Khalil. He was FBI. He was from the Counterterrorism Unit. He was keeping eyes on the Islamic Center because it had ties to a known Saudi banker and that was code word for terrorist banker. Hassan has been undercover for months. He couldn't get close to the guy mouthing off no matter what he did.

Hassan worked under Jessica Blake. She ran the Counterterrorism Unit. She was also an old friend of Maggie's. She should have tipped off the FBI when they first started looking into the center, but she couldn't do that because her daughter was sick at the time. She was dealing with that when she dropped the ball with work.

Maggie was quick to forgive her. OA not so much. OA has been dealing with his temper all throughout the day since his girlfriend broke up with him. He roughed up Hassan before learning he was a fed.

OA strong armed Hassan to getting a name of the possible shooter. Hassan thought they should be looking into Yordan Qadir. Qadir was heavily Ani-American.

He was upset about his friend going to prison. He's been telling everyone how he couldn't wait to go off and so he was the perfect suspect. The feds went looking for him.

OA lost his temper again with Qadir's boss. His boss didn't want to give up his address until he was threatened with an obstruction charge. And once they went looking for Qadir, they quickly found him.

Qadir got into a shootout with OA. He lost. OA was forced to kill him. Qadir had a gun on him. His apartment was stockpiled with weapons and none of the guns were a match for the murder weapon.

Also, the real killer was seen leaving Qadir's apartment earlier in the same clothes he wore to kill the judge. Qadir was apparently working with a younger kid.

The kid was the killer. They got a photo of the kid from the surveillance cameras outside of Qadir's apartment. They asked Hassan to identify him.

Hassan said he couldn't because he didn't know the kid well. He even added that it didn't make sense the killer was the shooter and so the agents went back to the Islamic Center.

They learned that their shooter was Adil Kasem. He was a loner. He fell under the thrall of an older man that claimed to be his friend and yet this friend wasn't Qadir. It was Hassan.

Hassan couldn't get close to Qadir himself. He then brought in Adil because he figured Adil could develop a bond with Qadir. He was right. He was a little too right because he eventually lost control of Adil.

Adil got fully converted to extremism. Hassan lost control of his lackey and he didn't want anyone knowing. OA figured it out. And he kept it from others because he understood Hassan.

It wasn't easy being a Middle Eastern man in the FBI. They had to look out for each other. Hassan now had something to prove. He thought the best way to do that was by stopping Adil from killing someone else.

Adil made a post online that he was going to kill a second person. They needed to know who that person was and they had Hassan pretend to be Adil. He went to the Saudi banker. He proved himself by almost killing himself.

They got the banker on conspiracy to commit murder. He was arrested not long after revealing who the second victim was.

The second intended victim was James Minardi. He was a soldier in Iraq. He killed several of their men overseas and they wanted revenge for it. The former soldier has since become a politician.

He had an event in the city. There was lots of press. There were families with children. Minardi's people were warned to cancel the event and they ignored it because they didn't want the bad press.

Hassan later saw Adil come on the scene. He tried to get Adil to turn himself in. Adil thought he was a traitor and he shot Hassan as well as a woman that happened to be nearby.

Adil tried going on the run. OA followed him. Hassan followed him in spite of his own injuries. The two of them cornered Adil in a warehouse and Adil came close to shooting OA when Hassan was forced to kill him. Hassan was later brought to a hospital to treat his shooting only Hassan's fingerprints were found on Adil's gun.

It was found under Adil's fingerprints. Hassan gave Adil the gun. He converted Adil. He wanted to make a case and so he sacrificed some poor teenager without friends. And he thinks he could talk himself out of trouble.

OA wore a wire to question Hassan. He got Hassan on tape admitting he converted Adil. He found a lonely kid and he talked him into becoming a terrorist to make a case. And so Hassan got arrested at the end of that day.

OA had all in all a terrible day.

Production Code: FBI605
Summary: The team must race to find the director of a Brooklyn migrant center who was abducted alongside his wife.

The FBI were alerted about an abduction. The abduction was of Matthew Sawyer. He runs a Migrant Center that was woefully underfunded and he was leaving when he got snatched right off the street. He was taken by gunpoint. The man that grabbed him was wearing a hoodie as well as a mask.

He forced Matthew into a car before driving off. The whole thing was witnessed by Matthew's coworker. She called it in and it quickly got flagged up to the FBI because the Mayor demanded they call in the big guns. The whole migrant crisis doesn't look good on the mayor or his campaign for reelection. And so the call to the FBI was to make it appear as if he was doing something.

The FBI thankfully still did their due diligence. They even identified a chief suspect right away. His name was James Dunn and he was former military when he got dishonorably discharged. He's been stalking Matthew for months. He brandished a weapon. He made hateful and racist posts about the migrants.

He thought Matthew was contributing the downfall of white America. As he mentioned in several of those posts. He had a girlfriend that was killed during a robbery a couple of months back. She was murdered by undocumented migrants.

Dunn now blames all migrants for the murder. He especially holds hatred for Matthew for being a "race traitor". Only Dunn didn't abduct Matthew. The person that did that brought Matthew back to his home address. Both Matthew and his abductor were actually still there when the FBI stopped by.

The feds got shot at for getting too close and so they knew the abductor was harmed. They cordoned off the block. They tried to talk down this shooter before he hurt Matthew. They dropped off a phone on the mat at the front door.

The abductor used a different hostage to collect the phone. He was holding onto two people. Matthew and his pregnant wife. The abductor identified himself as Hector Ramirez.

He said he was going to kill Matthew if the feds didn't find his daughter, Maria. Maria disappeared from Matthew's migrant center a few days ago. Her father reported her missing. He believed Matthew was involved. Hector told the feds all about how Maria's friend saw Matthew take her. And Hector wasn't stupid about why his daughter was allowed to disappear.

They entered the country a month ago. Hector was former police in Mexico. He tried to take a stand against the cartels and they sent his wife's head to him in a box. If those people had been involved, they would have already have sent pieces of Maria to him. Hector believes Maria's friend. The feds later talked to this friend.

She told them all about how Matthew used to give Maria treats. Their migrant center constantly ran out of water and food. Maria never missed anything. She got candy. She got food whenever she wanted.

Unfortunately, the friend was wrong about Matthew. They tracked down the store where Maria was getting all these treats and there was a video of her with someone that looks like Matthew.

It just wasn't Matthew. It was an unidentified white man. He didn't speak Spanish. Maria didn't speak English. The store clerk thought it was weird and he's kicking himself now about not calling the cops when he saw the two together. And so there's a chance that Matthew had no idea who Maria was before her father pointed a gun in his face.

It was still odd that a stranger was able to get near an immigrant child without anyone noticing. Her father was working to try and get them out of the migrant center. It was up to the staff to protect her.

They typically only allowed people with badges into the center. Meaning that Maria's abductor worked for the city. He worked at that migrant center. The feds got the camera footage and they ran it against everyone that worked at the center. They identified their perp as Jared Gamble. He last reported to work on the day Maria went missing.

They tried to tell Hector that he was wrong about Matthew. He heard them only he refused to let go of the hostages because he said his daughter would stay missing if he wasn't putting the pressure on them. Maggie was worried about Matthew's wife. The woman's health wasn't the best. She was having a difficult pregnancy.

She could potentially lose her child if she gets too stressed and so Maggie agreed to an exchange. Hector willing gave away his two hostages in exchange for Maggie now becoming his hostage.

Hector also gave the feds a deadline. He said if they didn't find his daughter in thirty minutes that he would kill Maggie. Hector really wasn't a dumb guy. He knew his situation was untenable.

He had to force the feds to find Maria before they breach the house. Or else Maria and other girls will be allowed to disappear. Maria was taken by a known sex offender. Gamble should never have been allowed around children. He was sent there by a third party contractor. He got close to Maria. He abducted her and sadly he too was armed.

Gamble was spotted by the feds. He shot at them. He made a run for it and Maria wasn't with him. Gamble forced the feds into killing him because he refused to turn himself. He claimed he couldn't help taking Maria. He was "sick". Scola tried to tell him that it was just a mistake and Gamble must have realized his only way out was death.

He forced Scola to kill him. He was now dead. Maria was still missing. She wasn't in his car or the trunk. She wasn't at his apartment. There's a chance that Gamble might have killed her after assaulting her.

Gamble had a grandmother in a nursing home. Her house was empty. The feds went there hoping to find Maria and they tried to buy some more time with Hector in the meantime.

Hector didn't want to wait. He thought they were lying about Gamble being dead. He almost killed Maggie. She fought him off. OA entered the building. They were in a standoff when OA's phone rang. They found Maria alive. They put her on the phone with her father and her father finally gave himself up. He didn't care about going to jail. He was just glad Maria was found alive.

Gamble didn't hurt Maria. He was going to, but he never got the chance and now Maria was going to stay with family.

It's strange only the whole thing made Maggie realize how much she wants a child of her own.

Summary: After several people are found dead from a poisonous gas, the team races to find the culprit, who may be tied to an Eco-terrorist plot.

Some woman got sprayed with a canister of an unknown substance. It started to make her cough. She tried to walk it off and she went into the subway still coughing. She later died down there. Her suspicious death kicked off an FBI investigation.

The woman was later identified as Angela Lane. She was a federal employee. She worked at the Bureau of Land Management. She was killed by a highly toxic form of ricin. It left her remains so toxic that no one could touch the body or go near it after her death. The hazmat team got called to deal with her remains.

Angela never saw the man that dosed her. The FBI also didn't have a video of the incident. They just assumed she was harmed by someone she knew and there was no one with a bigger motive than her ex-husband.

Eric was violent. Angela had to take a restraining order against him. She got sole custody of their kids. She was rewarded that a few days before her death. Her ex-husband was livid. He just wasn't their killer. He has an alibi. He was miles away speaking with his lawyer about fighting for custody.

Eric said Angela was also wrong to get a restraining order. She thought he was stalking her because someone has been stalking her, but it wasn't Eric. It was her eventual killer. The same killer that stole a car two days beforehand to stalk her. Her death was well planned.

The FBI spotted the car in outside surveillance video of Angela's house. The car has GPS. They used that to track the car's movements. They knew the car was in the city and that it was driving in circles as if the killer was waiting for his new target. The FBI went to the location when the car was parked.

They were too late to stop the driver from leaving the car or finding his target. The killer had sprayed another woman with the ricin substance. OA stayed with the victim and Maggie went after the killer. She lost him in the park. She almost lost her gun as well. She dropped it and she had to go back for it.

This allowed the killer to escape again in spite being cornered. They know his height. They know he wears a respirator to protect himself when he kills his victims. They just don't know his motives or why he was targeting women in power.

There was no connection between the two women. Angela was a federal employee. Sharon Williams was a fracking lobbyist. One had a family. The other was single.

he only person that might hate both women are ecoterrorists. The ricin that was used to kill the victims was made by a controlled substance. Something that only labs would have. They checked one lab on a college campus and their supply of castor beans were gone. The scientist in charge didn't take it. Her Teaching Assistant did. His name is Landon.

The FBI caught up to Landon Garcia. He tried to run when he saw them. He didn't make it far and his bag was searched. It had bunch of lab supplies inside. They brought Landon down to their office. They also searched his home and something happened to a FBI Agent inside.

It was Maggie's friend, Jess. Jess was found unconscious. She might have touched something or Landon might have had a failsafe. The remaining agents didn't know what caused her to lose consciousness and so they wrapped her in a blanket and they got her to an ambulance.

It wasn't the toxic that got her. She was simply feeling light-headed. She might have to undergo some tests to see what caused her to lose consciousness. Garcia was questioned in the meantime. He was a young college student that got brainwashed by an older kid.

Both he and his friend Anthony Jackson got kicked off the environmental group on campus. They were too radical for the group. Athony eventually got kicked out of college because he was also known for being violent. The text messages between the two men were searched for any other possible targets.

It turns out their next intended victim was Senator Daniel Drew. He was big into oil. He was opening a new oil refinement in Brooklyn and there the feds found Anthony.

Anthony never got the chance to harm the senator, but he did a douse a woman before his arrest. Anthony said future generations will thank him for what he did. Maggie also heard back from her friend. Jess suffered a minor aneurysm. She needed surgery. She needed a medical proxy as well as someone to watch her daughter.

Jess was a single mother. She entrusted her daughter to Maggie because she thought her medical situation would be cleared up soon. Maggie agreed because she thought the same. Maggie also returned to the case. The woman that was dosed was Mary Byrne.

She doesn't have anything to do with fracking. Her brother on the other hand works for the governor. Her brother Bobby received a call that said he either gets the governor to sign a non-fracking deal or his whole family will be killed. And he hung up on this person because he said he doesn't negotiate with terrorists.

The FBI realized there was still someone at large involved in the terrorism. It wasn't Landon's ex-girlfriend who ran the environmental group. She was still being detained and didn't have access to a phone. The feds then looked into a woman involved in Anthony's expulsion.

He was trying to fight the expulsion. He had a letter of recommendation from the same scientist and professor that Landon work for, Celeste Johnson. She pretended to be shocked that castor beans were stolen from her lab when really she was in on it.

Celeste might even be the mastermind. She was the college professor. She was older. She was pretty. She was the one put in charge of a bunch of college students and she used the trust they had for her to manipulate them. The FBI did their best to find her once they knew of her involvement.

They later learned that she was heading to Green Solutions. It was a fracking company. It's where Sharon worked. Celeste went to that building. She plugged the ricin in with the sprinkler system. And her goal was to kill everyone inside.

The FBI did their best to clear the building. Only it was huge. It was a huge building. It took them forever to clear everyone and by that point the poison was getting into the air supply.

Maggie and OA ran to shut off the sprinkler system. They found Celeste. Maggie fought her. She detained her. OA shut off the sprinkler system and now Celeste was under arrest, but Maggie went to the hospital in the aftermath. And her friend Jess died during surgery.

Maggie now has custody of a little girl.

Summary: After a bomb goes off in a local restaurant, the team race against the clock in order to find out if there are more bombs about to explode in New York.

Most of the team was concerned about Maggie. She lost a good friend. She became the new guardian of a grieving six year old girl. Maggie was going through a lot right now and the bosses offered her leave. Only she didn't take it. She also got to work right away when a bomb went off at a fundraiser.

Special Agent in Charge Isobel Castille had been a block away when someone bombed that place. She didn't see it. She just felt it. She had waved her neighbor and his son through the blockade because no one wanted to go around the building where the fundraiser was being held. And unfortunately her neighbor's son stopped by the restaurant to see what was inside.

He was caught up in the blast. He survived only he was badly injured. Isobel offered him first aid. She also searched the area for any other survivors and there were a mere handful of people that survived. The bomb killed eleven in total. This included Congresswoman Carol Jones.

It was her fundraiser. Jones was extremely right wing. She's made a lot of enemies. There were protestors outside yelling obscenities during the whole event. Jones had also turned off the cameras in the restaurant where the fundraiser was being held.

She didn't even want anyone filming on cell phones either. She wanted a quiet event and someone intentionally set out to harm her. Isobel had witnessed a man fleeing the area minutes before the bomb went off. The survivors were asked about this man.

They said he was a health inspector. He came to check the restaurant and he gave them a good review. It turns out the guy merely borrowed the health inspector's jacket. The jacket belonged to his roommate and he stole that along with his roommate's car.

Their bomber was Gary Smalls. By time they caught up to him, someone had already murdered him. They shot him while he was recording on social media and so Gary was talking about the revolution. He said that was the first day to kick off the revolution.

He was meeting with the shot caller when he gets killed. His phone gets turned off. The FBI found his body. They then went looking for his killer to see what else was planned. Smalls alluded to other events being underway. The FBI couldn't let another bomb go off in the city.

They first tracked down where Smalls was getting the C4. He or his partner had approached a man by the name of Drew Borelli who works for Davis Construction. The guy was about to be evicted. He was eight months behind on his child support payments.

There also was no gambling site willing to extend him credit. He was an addict that burned too many bridges. He robbed from his place of work. He handed over a bunch of C4 he swore he thought was innocent. He claims not to know they were going to hurt people with a couple of bomb making material.

Borelli talked to save his own skin. He met Smalls on a forum. They checked it and they found out that Smalls was talking to someone named "theRighteousOne".

The person behind the handler was working from a coffee shop. The FBI spotted her. They then tried to follow her and she went into the Russian Consulate. Where the Americans don't hold jurisdiction. The woman behind the handle was identified as Marina Kostova. She was officially an economic attaché. She was in reality a Russian spy that helped carry out a false flag operation on American soil.

Marina was involved in the murder of a Russian dissident in London. She used the same MO as she did for Smalls. She was in New York to intentionally cause enough strife between political parties. She was the one that convinced Smalls to plant the bomb. She was the one that sought out Borelli.

She put everything in motion and the American government still didn't want to touch her or question her. They were in negotiations with the Russian government about an asset they wanted. The government officially told Isobel not to put the negotiations at risk.

Isobel ignored them because her neighbor's son died. He was twelve years old. His only crime was walking down the street and so Isobel wanted revenge. She also didn't want anyone else to be harmed. She signed off on investigating the spy. They broke into the woman's home. They accessed her computer.

They found out she was in communication with someone else about a second bomb. They went to the storage locker where she told this second person to pick up the bomb. The FBI were too late to stop the transfer. They did get a fingerprint though.

They identified the man that picked up the bomb as John Parker. Parker posted recently about being on a bus. They tracked down the bus and Parker must have spotted him because he fled the bus. They followed him into a warehouse. He tried to shoot at them.

They cornered him. They were able to arrest him and they learned he doesn't have the bomb anymore. He's already planted it somewhere. Parker was shown a video of what happened to Smalls. The FBI told him that could be his fate if they don't stop the bomb.

Parker only planted it. He confessed he doesn't have the detonator. That part was left to someone else. Parker told them where he dropped the bomb and they figured out it was against a right wing Super PAC.

Elections were coming up. The Russian government wanted to sway the course of that by making it appear as if the left was killing the right. Only the event was full. There were too many people. Maggie had to get close to the bomb to find the signal where the detonator was being held. And she did that.

They found the detonator. They stopped the Russian from setting it off. They also arrested the Russian spy. They made their case, but the negotiations are now firmly off the table. And the asset was killed ten minutes after Marina Kostova was arrested.

And Maggie has to deal with an anxious little girl that frequently video calls her to make sure she's still alive.

Summary: The team works to track down the killer of a U.S. Army employee shot in an industrial park.

The victim was James Sun. He was in the army. He was shot on federal property and that meant his murder became a federal investigation. However, James wasn't some innocent bystander that got shot by accident. He was selling explosives out of the trunk of his car.

He became bitter with the military after he was passed over for promotion. He then decided to retire early and he stole from the Ammunition regiment to sell to criminals. James got shot because the other guy didn't want to pay him ten grand for a bomb. They were sure it was a bomb because their bomb sniffing dog detected it at the crime scene. And James was a horrible guy that deserved to get double-crossed.

The FBI still had to investigate his murder because they now know a bomb is at play. They didn't know if it was stolen for terrorism or just to scare people.

They had to go looking for it all the same. They eventually found out that James was in contact with known felon, Clinton Payne. Payne was the one that shot him. He has a long rap sheet. He was still out on probation for armed robbery. This gave them the means to search his home without a warrant. They found the bomb. They also later found Payne.

Payne was arrested. He demanded a deal before he talked. The most Isobel could offer him was a kind word to the judge. He did commit murder and robbery. He was supposed to pay James ten grand for the bomb. He double-crossed him because he himself hadn't earned his own payday.

Payne met someone in a chat room looking for a bomb. Something big enough to take down a city block according to what they said in the chatroom. Payne has never met this person or heard their actual voice. He robbed James because he wanted this mystery person to pay him twenty grand.

For all Payne knew, he would have gotten double-crossed after killing James. Payne later accessed the chatroom for the FBI. They looked into it and they tied the account to Al-Shabaab. It was the terrorist group out of Somalia. They recently also killed one of the FBI's own.

They killed Special Agent Hobbs. Hobbs was undercover with Tiffany. She pushed him into getting up close with a suspect. The suspect figured out he was a cop. He shot Hobbs and escaped before Tiffany could do anything.

Tiffany caught up with this man a second time. He managed to escape then too by using civilians as hostages. Tiffany has been looking for Hakim ever since. Their intel had said he left the country. He returned to Africa. When Tiffany heard Al-Shabaab was still trying to get a bomb, she was hoping to use the information they have on Amida to get Hakim.

She was that serious about waning justice for Hobbs. Her bosses on the other hand didn't think they'd get Hakim. They also knew that none of Al-Shabab have ever flipped and so they were focusing on what was in front of them. And that was Amida.

Amida was the imminent danger. He's the one that demanded a bomb. Tiffany was told to go with Scola and to arrest Amida. Those were direct orders. She ignored that because of something Amida said during the buy. They went to sell him the bomb. They got Amida to show them the money.

They had enough to arrest him only Tiffany began asking him about his plans with the bomb. Amida claimed his boss was interested in it. Tiffany then decided not to arrest Amida. Scola backed her up because that's his partner and so he had to defend her with Maggie and OA.

They were all told their orders. Tiffany blatantly ignored them. She instead followed Amida after the buyout hoping he would lead her to Hakim. She explained to Maggie and OA that Amida spoke of a boss. She said that boss has to be Hakim. The others weren't sure about that. Neither was Scola.

They made their excuses to Isobel and they kept eyes on Amida. They followed Amida to a strip club. They paid attention to anyone else going in and Tiffany later swore she saw Hakim go into the building. She was prepared to storm in. Scola stopped her.

He followed her this far. He couldn't let her blow their objective. They can still arrest Amida. He was the danger and so they couldn't risk blowing their cover with him. Maggie and OA went into the club. They weren't sure if they saw Hakim. He might still be in Africa. Only they couldn't go after Hakim or the possible man.

They still have to arrest Amida because going after Hakim might mean that Amida gets away. Tiffany couldn't deal with that. She was talking about getting justice for her friend when the truth is she barely knew Hobbs. They knew each other for a couple of hours. Then he died.

Tiffany blames herself for what happened to Hobbs. She pushed him. He died and now she wants revenge. She's claiming she's justice, but she's not fooling anyone. She later went into the strip club.

She didn't care that it would blow her cover with Amida. She didn't even try to avoid him. She went right up to question him about Hakim. Amida tried to run. He shot up the strip club. He escaped in the chaos. He took a woman hostage and stole her car. The agents saw the license plate and followed it using street cameras.

Tiffany and Scola caught up to the car. They were there when Amida crashed. Amida was threatening to kill the hostage when Tiffany agreed to let him get away with their car.

It was a ploy to get him away from the hostage. There was a struggle. They were forced to shoot Amida. He died without ever revealing Hakim's whereabouts. His last words to Tiffany were "go to hell". Tiffany got in trouble. What saved her was the intel that Hakim had reentered the country some time the week before.

Tiffany then visited Hobb's widow. She's been practically stalking this woman. She's been calling her and texting her. This woman has been doing her best to move on with her life only Tiffany just didn't want that to be. She wanted to someone to be as angry about Hobbs's murder as she was. And she might be put on leave after this.

Summary: Scola and Nina go undercover as a married couple while the team tries to find the person who tortured and killed a retired FBI agent.

Scola and Nina were discussing plans for her sister's wedding. The wedding was in California. Nina thought they should book their tickets right away and Scola then mentioned getting separate flights. Scola's brother died on 9/11. He was very security conscious. He thought it would be safer to take different flights.

This would guarantee that at least one of them survives if anything happens. Which was very pessimistic of him. Nina thought the same. She thought he was being too over the top about their security. She wanted to travel with him and the baby. She was making a case for one flight when he got called into work.

Scola as well as the rest of his team were brought in on a murder. The murder victim was Former FBI Special Agent Mike Rosen. He used to work Organized Crime and Counterterrorism.

He left the bureau some years ago. He joined a security firm called Provident Armor. He was working at a desk when a group of men abducted him. They tortured him for information on his new job. They used that to access the armored truck's database. They found out all the pricey pickups. And then they killed Mike.

No one knew who Mike was at first because he was shot in the head. It only became a federal crime because Mike's body was dumped on federal land. This was when Scola got the call. They were alerted by local police. They ran Mike's fingerprints after they got the case and that's when they learned he was once one of them.

There were even some people within their department that once worked with Mike. The FBI were initially concerned that he might have too many enemies that wanted him dead. It wasn't until they learned about his current job that everything came together.

They went to his office. They talked to his boss. The guy mentioned that Mike logged in last night. He thought Mike was getting ready for the next workday and it was actually something else. The FBI went looking through their database. They saw that Mike's profile checked pick ups for the armored truck.

The FBI searched one of the sights and that's when they ran into their killers. It was a group of three. They killed a security guard with Provident Armor. They went on the run with over ten million dollars worth of diamonds.

OA was able to kill one of them. Only two got away. The man he killed was identified as man named Chavez. Chavez was an ex-con. He was known to hang out at a certain bar.

The FBI went to the bar. They ran into Chavez's cousin Beto. He matches the description of one of the other jewel thieves. They followed Beto. They saw him meet up with Samuel Jacobson. They let Beto walk while they arrested Jacobson. Jacobson has a record for selling stolen goods. Beto didn't have a record nor could they get his full name using facial recognition.

They weren't even sure that Beto was Chavez's real cousin. They have nothing on him. They chose to keep eyes on him and they arrested Jacobson because he was in violation of his parole.

Nina had heard they arrested Jacobson. She asked Scola to let him go because the guy was her criminal informant. He's been feeding her information for the past eight months. Scola would have liked to help only they couldn't release Jacobson. He was connected to the jewelry heist. He might also be involved in Mike's murder.

Jacobson wasn't being helpful with the feds. Nina was sent in to talk to him. She knew that doing the right thing would fly over his head and so she instead told him about the reward money.

The jewelers offered a reward money of five hundred grand. Jacobson liked the idea of getting money with no risk of returning to prison. He agreed to set one of them up with Beto. They were going to look like buyers willing to take on the stolen property. Jacobson set up the meeting. Scola later met Beto at the bar.

They haggled over the price. Beto was smart enough not to confess to the murders. Or the theft. He just said he has the diamonds and he was only going to sell it to Scola if he could see his place. Scola needed to think of an address. Nina gave him an address through his earpiece.

She also agreed to play his wife during the buy. Maggie and Tiffany were supposed to follow Beto after that to see if he would lead them to the third man. They unfortunately lost him because of a bicyclist riding on the sidewalk and that meant this deal has to take place now.

The FBI tried to come up with the money. They were short by seven hundred grand. They put the real money on top and padded the bottom with plain paper.

Their plan was almost ruined by Beto coming up with his own plan. He wanted to separate Nina and Scola. He stayed with Scola in the townhouse. Nina was supposed to meet his brother outside. Everyone thought they were trying to rip them off. They weren't. They were just being cautious. Nina saw the rest of the diamonds and both men were arrested.

They were going down for their crimes. Jacobson gets the reward money. He also gets to continue as an informant and Nina talked to Scola about taking risks. She doesn't want to live a half life just because he was too scared of possible scenarios. They couldn't plan for everything. They had to accept life as it is.

Summary: After an FDIC security guard is killed tending to a pregnant woman in distress, the team races to track down the woman and the killer who took her hostage.

Everyone was worried about Maggie. She didn't take bereavement leave. She wasn't talking about Jessica with anyone. She had also become the primary guardian of a little girl. She was getting along and not really facing what happened. They all saw what that did to Tiffany. They weren't looking for a repeat with Maggie.

OA was naturally Maggie's biggest defender. He thinks she can push through the pain. He might secretly believe differently, but he wasn't going to rat her out with Isobel or Jubal. He defended Maggie and he pretended that he would report something if Maggie started to fall apart. And then they caught a case.

Will Douglas was killed when he went to defend a woman being attacked in her apartment. The woman as well as her attacker were missing after their altercation and after the man killed Will.

Will was a federal employee. He was a security guard at FDIC's offices. His death was a federal crime. The FBI were brought in to find out what happened. Will wasn't even supposed to be in that building. He met a woman on a dating app. He agreed to walk her to her door because the security door on her apartment building had been busted.

The date wasn't going well. He was trying to save it by being a gentleman. That's when he heard her neighbor's screams and he took out his gun to go defend a stranger.

Will was killed the moment he tried to intervene. The killer got away with the pregnant woman. She was taken against her will. The FBI asked Will's date about this neighbor. She said that her name was Denise Parker. She was eight months pregnant. There was a Latino guy that came around with gifts every once in a while. The Latino guy was Arturo.

Arturo was only a delivery guy. He does tasks for money. He doesn't have a relationship with Denise. He was just given tasks and was paid for them by checking up on her.

Arturo gave the man's contact information. The FBI went to this man's home where they found him tied up with his wife and the housekeeper. Denise was their surrogate. Someone forced the housekeeper into allowing them into the house. They then demanded to know where Denise was. They threatened to kill them and the couple talked.

They gave up Denise's location. Denise wasn't even her real name. This unknown woman stole the identity of a dead senior and then she agreed to become a surrogate to make rent.

She was staying under the radar when the couple she was helping posted a photo of her on their social media. That's how her kidnapper found her. Denise or whatever her name is was running from something.

They tracked down the man that abducted her and identified him as Travis Keating. He fell apart after his mom died. He was living on the streets and he was self-medicating.

Somehow, he got clean. He found God or to better phrase it a cult. He borrowed his father's van and he abducted Denise. The feds caught up to him after a shootout. He was taken alive.

He was questioned. He said Denise was where she belongs. She was going to be "cleansed" of her sin. Her sin was the baby. The people that took her planned on killing her baby. Keating wouldn't say anything else only he didn't have to. They got a familial match for Denise's DNA. Her real name was Denise Mamet. She was the daughter of Aaron Mamet.

Her father was the leader of a cult called "the Sacred Testament". There was an active ATF investigation against him. They have a warrant for his arrest. They were merely waiting for him to leave the compound long enough to arrest him. They didn't want to storm the compound because his followers were heavily armed.

There were plenty of women and children around. No one was looking for another Waco. They were going to wait for him to leave and the ATF Special Agent in Charge didn't want to rush the place looking for Denise if they don't have proof she's there.

The FBI ultimately got Roberts to agree to a look see. The feds went onto the compound in a delivery truck. They snuck Maggie and OA into the building. They searched it for signs of Denise and eventually they found her. Denise was still alive. She was still pregnant. They hadn't harmed her yet.

OA also found out that the cult was illegally turning AR-15s into automatic weapons. The ATF were right about them preparing for war. Mamet truly was crazy. He refused to let his daughter live her own life because he wants to claim ownership over her.

Denise was chained to the bed. OA left to get bolt cutters. Maggie stayed with Denise. She was seen by a little boy and that little boy reported her to a guard. The guard was killed.

People heard gunshots. They sounded the alarm. The men armed themselves. The women and children surrounded the men to act as human shields. There was no clear way to storm the property. Scola managed to get to Maggie and they were locked in a room with Denise. They were running out of time because the men were trying to get into that room.

That's when Mamet was sighted. Mamet tried to escape the compound through a secret tunnel. OA went after him and he injured him. He told Mamet he would watch him die if he didn't call his people off.

Mamet believed him. He told his people to stand down. They put down their weapons and peacefully surrendered when SWAT stormed the compound. Mamet was arrested. Denise was taken to a hospital. And Maggie realized she had a near miss because her bullet proof vest caught a bullet that was meant to kill her.

Maggie finally realized that her possible death has consequences. She couldn't afford to let down Ella. Ella has already lost her mom. If she loses Maggie too, she will have to start all over again with someone else. And Maggie didn't want to do that to a child.

OA later asked Isobel to forcibly make Maggie take time off. She needed it. Ella needed it. They have to put Ella first now.

Summary:	The team is thrown into a highly political case that hits close to home for OA after several Taliban members are shot and kidnapped with no record of their entrance to the country.

OA was back with his girlfriend. They're still struggling with communication. She overheard him on the phone and she asked him about Anna. She heard him speak of Anna like he cares for her. She was curious because OA doesn't open up about anything.

Well, he was continuing that trend seeing as he didn't want to talk about Anna. The most he said about this Anna woman was that she was a widow of a friend of his that died overseas. OA was former military. He lost quite a few friends in the Middle East. He wouldn't even get into detail about Anna's late husband. Just that he was gone and that he looks out for Anna.

OA got called into work before he could get into a fight with Gemma. He was working a kidnapping. Maggie was still out on leave. She took Ella to see her grandparents and they were bonding. With Maggie out on leave, OA ended up going with Tiffany to the scene.

They were informed that Tyler Combs was grabbed. The kidnappers used a flash grenade to disorientate him. They then grabbed him at gunpoint. The whole thing was witnessed by a friend of his. She didn't see the men's faces. She could only describe their body types.

Tyler was the target though. The FBI went looking for him. They found the car that took him to a warehouse and they later found Tyler in good condition.

He had been drugged. Other than that he was fine. He had been taken because the kidnapers wanted to know about a meeting with his boss. Tyler works for Leo Grant. He was the world's third richest man. The man also had an important meeting in an undisclosed location. Tyler was questioned about the location of that meeting. He gave it up because he didn't want to die and the feds got information on where his boss was.

They went to the meeting. They warned Grant that he could be a target. They tried asking him about the meeting and what it was about. He closed up. He said he has to clear it with his lawyers. There was a shooting right outside of the meeting. Several men were killed. One was taken hostage.

The bad guys got away with their hostage and the fingerprints of the dead showed they were all Taliban. They were high up in the Taliban controlled government of Afghanistan. They were meeting with Grant because they wanted to make a deal with him.

Something that took forever to learn. They questioned Grant about his involvement with the Taliban. There was no entry on how these people made it into the United States and so they didn't know if it was terrorism related. It wasn't.

It turns out that Grant was acting as an intermediary for Secretary of State Evelyn Cates. She wanted this meeting to go down. She wanted the American government to buy mineral rights in Afghanistan. They did it through Grant so that the American people wouldn't find out about it.

The whole thing was top secret. The kidnapers once again grabbed a victim. This time they grabbed Abdul Sayeed. He was the leader of the Taliban. He was running Afghanistan.

The men took him because they wanted something. The FBI didn't know what it was at first. It wasn't until they connected the flash grenades to a dentist in Queens that everything came together. The dentist was Dr. Michael Garrett. He bought the flash grenades. He gave it to the kidnapers because they all wanted the same thing. They wanted the safe return of James Garrett.

James was an American soldier. He got taken as a prisoner of war before the United States pulled out of Afghanistan. His platoon still had contacts over there. They heard about the Taliban coming Stateside to make a deal and they grabbed the man in charge hoping to do a prisoner exchange.

They wanted to trade Abdul Sayeed for James. This could go south. The Taliban could kill James or torture him to force the former American servicemen to hand over Sayeed. What will his buddies do then? It was important to the American government that Sayeed gets rescued before he could be harmed.

It didn't matter if they agreed with the kidnapers. OA saw the Taliban as terrorists. He was a soldier like the kidnapers. He understood about not leaving a man behind.

He approached the kidnapers with negotiation rather than blunt force. They caught up to them. They found them hiding in another warehouse. One of them came out to talk to OA. They told him that they were already in contact with the Taliban. The Taliban have agreed to return James. He was reportedly already in the air.

The kidnapers didn't want to let go of Sayeed until it was confirmed that James was stateside. But Sayeed cut through his zip ties. He tried going after them and they were forced to kill him.

Sayeed was now dead. They lost their biggest bargaining chip. Their involvement with the Taliban was going to come out. This was a black eye on the administration during an election year. The FBI didn't care about that. They cared about James. They covered up Sayeed's murder. They used Artificial Intelligence to pretend he was still alive.

Someone leaked what happened. The president was about to go on the news with what happened to Sayeed. OA had spotted James coming off the plane and it led to a shootout when the news broke.

The FBI were forced to kill the Taliban soldiers only they rescued James. James was taken to a hospital and he's going to be alright. His friends were either dead or arrested. His father was going to jail. There was no one to meet him at the hospital. And so OA told him that his loved ones risked it all to bring him home.

OA went home to Gemma and he finally started to open up about everything.

Summary: When a truck driver is murdered and the drug he was transporting goes missing, the team hunts for those behind the remaining batch.

Maggie was still out on leave. She was itching to return to work, but she knew Ella needed this time away and so her team were forced to investigate without her. They caught a murder case. Some birdwatcher found a body at the Jamaican Wildlife Refuge. It was a protected federal park.

The FBI were called in because they investigated all crimes on federal land and they identified the body. The body was that of Tim Baker. He was in his forties. He was short on money. He works as a delivery driver. He was always aiming for extra shifts and he was supposed to drop off a contaminated batch of piperidone when he disappeared. And no one could find him.

The batch he was carrying was set to be destroyed. It's also the key ingredient in fentanyl. He could have made it up to twenty-five kilos of the fentanyl if he had been a part of the heist.

Only he wasn't involved in this. Tim was abducted along with his van. The people that kidnapped him would go on to kill him when he tried to escape. They also were clever in the sense that they rented out property as well as a van to use before the heist was carried out. It was all done in cash and was completely untraceable.

They turned a rented garage into a fentanyl lab. It was right next to a daycare and so these people do not care about who they hurt. If they cared, they wouldn't have taken a contaminated batch in the first place.

They were not clever in that sense. The piperidone was set to be destroyed because it was so lethal it could kill by itself. Tim probably tried to tell his kidnappers the same thing. They ignored good old common sense and cooked drugs with it anyway. They made enough to wipe out the state of New York.

People were already dying. The FBI didn't find Tim's body until four days had passed and they had the case for barely a day when four teenagers OD at a nightclub.

The paramedics were called in. Nothing they tried worked on those four victims. They were able to save a fifth girl and that's because she barely ingested the drug.

The fifth girl told them that they bought the drugs off a guy in a red jacket in the club. The FBI checked phone camera footage of that night. They found someone in the red jacket by the girls. Jubal could even identify him.

It was his godson, Nate Becerra. He was the son of Former FBI Special Agent Jose Becerra. Jose and Jubal used to be good friends. They haven't spoken in a while because life got in the way and a few things have changed since then. Good Old Joe was prepared to do anything to protect his son.

Jubal reached out to him. He went to Joe's house with Scola and they asked to search the property. Joe let Jubal search his son room because he thought Jubal would help him hide evidence. Jubal found a bag of drugs. It looked like the one the girls bought at the nightclub. Joe asked Jubal to hand him the drugs so that he could flush them down the toilet.

Jubal refused to do that. He wasn't going to mess with evidence and nothing Joe said would change his mind. Joe tried to remind him of those times when he protected Jubal.

He didn't report Jubal drinking on the job. He covered for Jubal when he was cheating on his wife. Joe ignored all of that as a good friend and he called Jubal out as a hypocrite for not wanting to do him the same courtesy. All Jubal could do was put in a good word for Nate. Joe still tried to hide his son. He pretended Nate didn't have a phone which was a lie.

They tracked down Nate. Joe picked him up. He was driving him somewhere when Nate freaked out. He got out of the car and ran. The FBI caught up to him. Jubal called in a few favors to get Nate two years in prison. That is if he was helpful. Nate told Jubal all about where he got the drugs.

He bought them off Kevin Thomas. Thomas also made them. Jubal asked Nate to wear a wire and meet Thomas. The FBI wanted to negotiate for the other drugs because their priority was taking the drugs off the streets. They didn't want any more deaths from it.

Nate contacted Thomas. He told him that he has an offer from a buyer. Someone willing to buy up a large batch of drugs. Nate was so nervous that he almost blew it.

He managed to make a deal in spite of his fears. The buyer was Jubal. Jubal went with Nate to meet Thomas and his partners. He hasn't been out in the field in years. He totally blew it. He got held at gunpoint. His backup stormed the building. The FBI killed two of the drug dealers. The third managed to grab Nate and he had a gun aimed at Nate's head.

Joe was against his son being used in the field. He thought it was too dangerous. He turned out to be right because his son almost died tonight. Gio Russo took Nate hostage.

Jubal also became a hostage when he refused to leave Nate. Gio was making all sorts of demands, but the FBI couldn't control one person. Joe found out that his son was being held at gunpoint. He rushed into the building. Nate tried to run to his father and he got shot for it. Jubal then took out Russo. The bad guys were all dead. The drugs were off the streets. Nate might get better deal now.

Only Joe and Jubal's friendship was over. Joe was still angry he wouldn't flush the drugs. He told Jubal that they're done and Jubal was no longer invited to his daughter's wedding.

Summary: The Somali terrorist group behind the death of Agent Hobbs resurfaces, sending the team on a chase to take them down for good.

Jess's brother was in town. Jess was a federal agent that died. She was also Maggie's close friend. She left her only child to Maggie after she died and Maggie was doing her best to fill the gap that Jess left behind. She was bonding with Jess's daughter Ella.

Ella was worried at first that something might happen to Maggie. She would constantly call Maggie in the middle of the day and she wouldn't rest until Maggie reassured her that she was safe. Things were better now. Ella was becoming more secure in her life with Maggie. Maggie had also taken time off work to be there for her. And now Maggie was reaching out to Jess's family so that Ella would get to know them.

Jess and her brother weren't close. Jess told Maggie before she died that her family didn't approve of her becoming a single mother. They were against the idea.

According to Jess's brother, the two were never close. Jess lived in New York City. She had an important job. He was the one left behind at home. He's the one that took care of their mother when she got sick and sadly Jess died before they ever reconnected. The brother now wants to be a part of Ella's life. He has a daughter of his own around the same age. And Ella loved playing with her cousin.

Things were going so well with the brother that Maggie left Ella with him when she went to work. Maggie and OA were called to the scene of a murder.

The victim was Luke Chandler. Or at least that's what they thought his name was because that's the name he's been living under. Luke was an alias. He went AWOL during his finished tour overseas. He was listed as dead. His real name was Nick Ward. The feds were only looking into his most recent death because he worked for a federal NGO. And he was found dead in the street.

It turns out that Nick was never AWOL. The CIA faked his death when he joined up with them. The feds figured that out after a second CIA Officer was killed. The second officer was Christine Collins.

Her handler was Jack Wagner. They found Jack. He explained the rest. Jack said that Christine Collins picked up some thermobaric grenades. She gave them to Nick.

Nick was supposed to deliver them to someone who would take it out of the country. Probably to Europe or Africa. Jack doesn't have the complete picture because the CIA likes to compartmentalize everything.

That way no one knows everything. They also couldn't be tortured into revealing everything. Someone knew those grenades were on Nick's truck. They killed him to steal the items.

He then used one of them to kill Christine. She was killed in her car. The feds didn't know how these people learned about the grenades, but Elise suggested starting with the weakest link. She thought someone that arranged for the grenades might have talked. They managed to track down the woman responsible. They found her dead in her shower.

The third victim's name was Nicole Allen. She designed the grenades. She also became dissatisfied with her job. She didn't like she was helping destabilize other governments.

She hated that became a part of American imperialism. She started making posts online. Secretly. She met someone there. She told them about the grenades and the route they would be taking. She was then killed once she served her purpose. The feds searched cameras outside of her apartment. They found out that Hakim Siran killed her.

Hakim was a wanted man. He was wanted for the murder of FBI Special Hobbs. Tiffany fell apart after that murder because she blamed herself for Hobbs dying and then she put him on a pedestal.

Tiffany knew Hobbs for a single day when he died. She soon forgot that part. She said he was a good friend. She basically pushed her way into the lives of Hobbs's loved ones. They wanted to move on. Which they couldn't do if Tiffany kept bringing up their loss. She went to therapy once the family threatened to take a restraining order out against her.

Tiffany was doing better now only that might change once she knew Hakim was back in the game. With Hakim being involved, they also knew the rest of the terrorist organization known as al-Shabaab was involved as well. They followed Hakim from Nicole's apartment. They saw him get in the car with Abdi Bashir.

He was also Somalian. He came to the United States two years ago. He joined Hakim in terrorism and they've stolen some very interesting weapons. And that was besides the grenades.

The two men were able to shoot their way out of being detained by the feds. They escaped to a second location. The feds thought they followed them to a warehouse.

There was just one problem with going inside. They were worried it was boobytrapped like the last place. Maggie also decided to bench Tiffany. Tiffany was waiting outside when the feds breached the building. They killed one. They arrested a second person. Neither was Hakim or Bashir. Their sole prisoner also wasn't giving up his friends. He said he wasn't going to risk Hakim's great work.

The missing men had left clues behind at the warehouse. They realized the men planned on targeting a political event. They were too late to stop the terrorist attack, but the feds caught up to Bashir and Hakim.

Tiffany had Hakim in her sight. He was unarmed. He raised his hands and they were empty when Tiffany killed him. She later claimed that Hakim had a gun. It was a lie that Maggie helped her with. Maggie later claimed she didn't see the shooting when she did. And she saw him raise his hands.

Hakim had another gun in his waistband. They used that as justification for a good shoot. Tiffany was cleared of any wrongdoing and she later informed Hobbs's family that the killer was dead. And they thanked her for breaking the news.

Summary: The assassination of a Brooklyn plumber launches the team into an investigation that ruffles feathers with the CIA.

The episode starts with the team being investigated by the CIA. For some reason, CIA Officer Peter Bradford seems hell-bent on destroying the team, but no one is making it easy for him. If anything, they believe that CIA Officer Peter Bradford is to blame.

We circle back 48 hours before the CIA investigated the team. It all starts when a random plumber, Amini, gets car-bombed in broad daylight, leading to 12 deaths and multiple injuries. Surprisingly, all the cameras at the scene were disabled simultaneously.

Thankfully, Tiffany spots one of the bikers killed in the blast, who had a camera on his helmet. Tiffany is looking forward to wrapping the case since it is her last day. Scola is bummed, but she insists on leaving. She is convinced it is for the best and says there is nothing more dangerous than a field officer staying on the job when they want out.

At the headquarters, the team starts looking into the victim. Amini is a law-abiding citizen and the only suspicious thing is that he had zero online footprint. This was until two weeks ago when his daughter posted a picture of him at her graduation ceremony. Jubal and Isobel try to find out why someone would go to great lengths to kill a plumber.

Meanwhile, Maggie and OA notify Amini's family. His wife, Nadia and daughter, Sarah, are broken by the news. However, OA feels that Nadia is hiding something and tries to lean hard on her. Maggie calls him out for it, but Sarah follows the duo out and reveals the truth. It turns out that Amini fought with Cyrus, her uncle. Sarah is sure her uncle is innocent but wants the police to know the truth.

Tiffany and Scola visit Cyrus's laundry shop and interrogate him. Cyrus clarifies that he argued with Amini over Sarh's photo. He didn't want his privacy breached. As they talk about his alibi, Scola realises that Cyrus is so anxious.

Cyrus says that he is jumpy because the police abandoned them. Before he can clarify, two shooters on a motorcycle take him out. Scola tries to chase after the men but he is no match for a speed bike. He heads back to the laundry room and they find Cyrus's go back.

Elsewhere, the agents at the headquarters try to trace the motorcycle's whereabouts with no leads. The footage from the dead biker that Tiffany found sheds more light on Amini's attack. The killers put a lot of effort into sticking a bomb on Amini's moving car and taking out his best friend a few hours later.

Based on their precision and skills, Isobel and Jubal assume that Amini was no ordinary plumber. As they come to this realisation, Tiffany tells Jubal about Cyrus's last word. Who abandoned him?

Finally, after scouring multiple footage, the team realises that the men on the bike constantly visited a local library. Maggie and OA drop by the location. Maggie admits that she was wrong and might have let her personal bias affect her response to Nadia. OA is understanding since he knows Maggie has been going through a lot.

At the bookstore, OA spots a suspicious man who tries to flee. They follow him into a basement and find another man destroying a computer. In the basement room, they find more bombs similar to the one used on Amini and the motorcycle's plate number.

They bring the men in for questioning and discover they are Iranian citizens. Isobel reaches out to the Iranian consulate for more answers. In the interrogation room, one of the men says it is futile to stop the attack.

Upon restoring the laptop, they learn that Amini, Cyrus and Nadia are Iranian citizens who were somehow snuck into the country. Everyone in a photo discovered on the laptop is a target. Maggie and OA rush to save Nadia and Sarah, who are officially on the run.

They ping Nadia's phone and it shows they are on a train station. Maggie and OA arrive in time and find Sarah first. OA reaches Nadia just in time before the assassin takes her out. Thanks to the cameras at the station, the team can identify one of the killers. However, he is a ghost with no name.

After securing the target, Scola and Tiffany hang behind to try to get the killers. Unfortunately, one of the killers spots Scola and stabs him in the leg. Thankfully, Tiffany gets to Scola in time and administers first aid. By the time everything settles, the killers are gone and Peter Bradford is at the headquarters.

He blames Isobel for ruining his operation. Isobel is offended that he knew that Americans were being targeted but did nothing. She refuses to back down and demands to know why Peter let Amini and Cyrus die. Peter refuses to divulge information, but Jubal does some deduction and finds the answer.

It turns out that Nadia, Amini and Cyrus were involved in a US operation to take out one of Iran's militia leaders twenty years ago. The CIA recruited them to kill the leader and then abandoned them after they got to America. Nadia clarifies as much and Maggie finds it hard to understand why the couple endangered their daughter by keeping her in the dark. Sarah blames herself for posting the picture of her dad and uncle and blowing their cover.

Maggie and OA move the mother and daughter to a secured, secluded safe house. Maggie expresses her frustration with Nadia, but OA urges her to put it behind her. On the other hand, the killers distract Jubal and the team by staging a sighting. By the time Jubal realises it is a distraction, the killers are on Maggie and OA. Jubal only gets a brief chance to warn them, but that is enough.

Maggie and OA stand their ground and take out one of the killers and arrest the other. With the threat extinguished, Isobel orders Maggie and OA to transport the team. The CIA wants to debrief Nadia and the team, but Maggie feels something is off. She is sure that the CIA wants Nadia and Sarah dead. She decides to call Isobel and change the orders.

Maggie assures Nadia and Sarah they will be safe and hand them over to witness protection. She also apologises for harshly judging Nadia. Later, the team drops by Scola's hospital room. Maggie is sad to see Tiffany leave. She asks why and Tiffany says she got tired from work. It seems that Tiffany is going through a work burnout. She is moving to Georgia to help her sister run her cafe.

We circle back to the investigation with Bradford. He is still asking why Nadia ended up with the US Marshalls. Isobel accuses him of selling out the team and giving up the safe house location. Isobel refuses to give Maggie up. Maggie also holds up her own and bravely faces Peter and calls him out for abandoning the Aminis.

Production Code: FBI702
Summary: The team is on the case when a suburban couple is murdered and all forensic evidence points to their home's previous owner.

A seemingly normal couple was tortured in their home. It didn't even happen in the city. It happened in Westchester county in upstate New York. They were literally in the suburbs. They were found the next morning by a man claiming to be the homeowner.

He said he found two dead people in "his" house and it was strange because the dead couple technically owned the house. The victims were Jack and Cheryl Flemming. They were tortured then killed. They were known as being philanthropists. They were good people in the community and the only issues they had were with the guy that was claiming their house as his.

The Flemmings went on a vacation recently. They traveled to Europe. They returned to find a squatter living in their home and they took him to court to get him forcibly removed.

This squatter was identified as Mike Holland. He was a trial attorney before he suffered a mental breakdown. He's been in and out of psychiatric facilities. He also spent six months in prison for attacking a nurse. He was violent and he believed the Flemmings' house was his. He said that he lived there for thirty days. He used legal jargon to claim the house as his.

Mark didn't care that the Flemmings had him removed. He left a window open. He planned on moving back in the first chance he could. The only reason he didn't do that was because he found the bodies. Mark didn't stick around for the cops to show up. He went back to living on the streets and the FBI caught up to him.

Scola has a new partner. Her name is Sofia Otero. She was a bit of a lone wolf. She tried to tackle Mark on her own and was lucky that Mark wasn't armed. He was taking a shower when Sofia pulled her gun on him.

Scola got everyone to calm down. He and his new partner arrested Mark. They brought him down to headquarters for questioning when Mark denied harming the couple.

He said he would have gotten the house back anyways. Plus, there was another suspect. They found the fingerprints of Paul Gordon on the window that Mark left open for himself. This Gordon character was supposed to be in jail. He was three years into a five year stint. The fingerprints also couldn't be old. They would have rubbed off in the years that passed.

The only way that Gordon's prints could be on the window was if he broke out of prison. The FBI checked. The security guards didn't find Gordon in his cell and he was missing with his partner.

Gordon was the violent one. His partner/cellmate was John Pereira. Pereira was doing twenty years for drugs. The two of them became friends in prison and they somehow broke out together. They went to the Flemmings because Pereira used to own that house. He sold it to pay for his legal fees. And he might have left something in the house before he left.

Pereira was safe in prison because it was rumored he was rich. He was supposedly sitting on a cash cow. He wasn't violent, but he didn't need to be with Gordon in the picture.

Gordon tortured several women. He was aggressive. Everyone thought he'd get violent with his new cellmate and it didn't happen. Then they broke out together.

They went to Pereira's old house. Gordon tortured and killed the couple that currently lived there. He seems like he was looking for the money that his partner promised. Nor did the reign of terror stop there.

The two prisoners broke out right after Pereira learned his ex was moving with their daughter. Angela got a new job in Washington state. She was going to be on the other side of the country with their daughter, Naomi. Angela wasn't a bad person before the job offer.

She visited her ex-husband every week with their daughter. She allowed him to call the house. They were making his prison sentence work until she got that promotion. She couldn't afford to turn it down. She told Pereria about it and that's when he came up with the idea to break out.

Pereria was later found at Angela's house by the FBI. Angela was dead. Pereria was claiming Gordon kill her and that his friend kidnapped his daughter. It turns out Pereria lied about being rich.

He told Gordon that he stashed millions in the crawl space under his old house. Gordon then double-crossed him. He went to that house without Pereria. He abandoned the guy on the side of the road. It was Gordon's plan to steal the money and escape to a foreign country. Only Pereria betrayed him back. There was no money lying around.

Gordon killed the Flemmings for nothing. He then wanted revenge and so he looked up Angela's address. He killed her. He kidnapped Naomi. He was now threatening to kill the girl if Pereria didn't give him the two million dollars he promised. Gordon was never his friend. He pretended to be friendly.

He got all the tools in prison that Pereria needed to break them out. He now wants two million dollars and Pereria doesn't have that money. The FBI also couldn't give them that money. They were still in trouble because of what Maggie did in helping the Iranian dissidents enter the Witness Protection Program.

The most the FBI could come up with was twenty grand. They put it in a bag. They let Pereria go to the meeting place and it wasn't Gordon that showed up. It was the prison manager. She and Gordon were in love. Or so she claims. She helped Gordon get everything he needed to escape.

She also didn't show up with the little girl to the meet. Pereria didn't want to give her the money. He wanted to see his daughter first. She maced Pereria. She took the money to Gordon. She never once suspected she was being followed and so Gordon easily killed her once he got the money.

The FBI closed in on Gordon. They were forced to kill in him in a shootout. There was no trace of Namoi. She wasn't in the car that Gordon was driving and Gordon's death meant they couldn't ask him.

The only thing they found on Gordon was a floatable key fob. Like something they had for a boat. Gordon's dead girlfriend owned a boat. The FBI later went there and they found Naomi sedated, but alive. Naomi's mom was gone. Her father was going back to prison. And so Naomi's story didn't end happily.

It did give Jubal an idea though. He later asked his ex if he could move back in. He wanted to be nearby because their son Tyler has been struggling for a while and so his ex agreed. They will be living together to help Tyler.

And Sofia decided she wasn't fit for the New York Field Office. She left and she might not be the only one if OA keeps breaking the law. OA ran into an old friend from the Rangers.

This old friend got OA's help in planting a listening device and OA just went along with it because he owed this guy his life however situations like that never end after one favor.

Summary: After a series of targeted bombings in Queens, the team fears a city-wide gang war is imminent.

A bombing went off in Queens. It happened at a convenience store. It was the neighborhood corner store and it had lots of foot traffic. It was a miracle that only six people got hurt. The Mayor was notified about the accident. Or at least that's what they thought it was at first.

The Mayor still asked the FBI to run point on the case. Maggie and OA got called in. They didn't know why they were being alerted about a gas leak. It wasn't until they found the store owner's records that they realized he was running an illegal gambling ring out of the store and that a lot of people owe him money. Money they no longer have to pay him since he's now dead. And at the top of the list of gamblers was Hugo Soto.

Hugo's brother Javi was one of the injured. Hugo was his brother's guardian. Their parents died and it was just them. Hugo sent his brother into the store that morning to buy breakfast.

He wouldn't have done that if he knew it was going to blow. The FBI know he wasn't their bomber. They were after him because he spent three grand at the convenience store and it directly tied him into the illegal gambling there. The feds wanted to ask about that and they tracked down Hugo at his brother's hospital. The young man was waiting because Javi was taken into surgery.

Hugo was so broken up about his brother that he didn't even bother playing pretend. He admitted he was gambling. He said that's how he was able to support him and his brother. He also said that lately the convenience store was being accused of throwing the games. Hugo offered up a name of a disgruntled gambler.

The feds looked into the guy and they learned he owned over two hundred thousand dollars. The same man also shot at the feds when they came to talk to him. This was the first case Scola was working with his new partner and the new guy had a lot of rough edges.

He left SWAT. He was still getting used to the FBI. Scola was trying to show him the ropes. It's just the other guy didn't really want to listen. Anyways, they arrested their indebted gambler.

The guy denied taking part in the bombing. He instead said it was a turf war. Jackson Heights used to be run by the Low Street Hustlers. The Latin Kings have lately been pushing the LSH out of the neighborhood. The FBI has a gang taskforce. They brought in an expert when another gang hotspot got it.

It appeared as if the TLKs were going up against LSHs. Maggie met up with a criminal informant at a safe zone. He was telling her about how the gangs weren't really at war with each other. Both sides had been warned by the bosses to not retaliate because they didn't want to bring the cops down on them.

Maggie wasn't sure she believed the guy or not and so it helped that she herself witnessed the bomber dropping off the bomb at the safe zone. Maggie and OA had to clear the building. It later blew up. The upside was that they got a great image of the bomber on camera.

Maggie even saw his face for herself. They have plenty of evidence and now they have a name to match the face. The bomber's name is Alfred Landry. He was a former army demolitionist. He also lived in Long Island and had no connection to either gang he was targeting. Landry was a hired hitman.

He's been using this new app to take on jobs. He was hired anonymously. He's never met whoever wanted to kill off the gangs. He was basically useless when the feds caught up to him. Which OA didn't mind because he knew someone behind the mysterious app.

OA's friend Clay Voss was running with Pyramid Security. It was a private security firm. They were basically lawless because they prepared to do anything for a contract.

Clay was dangerous. He also saved OA's life when they were both in the army. OA returned the favor, but the two of them were still close and OA knew Clay could help him find whoever hired Landry. Clay connected Landry to Fernando Perez. Perez was one of the biggest real estate moguls in the city. He came up through the ranks when the mob were in charge of construction back then. He was now a billionaire.

Perez has been buying up Jackson Heights. There's been three holdouts stopping him from taking over the neighborhood. Those three were all the gang affiliated spots that got hit. The feds technically had enough evidence to arrest Perez thanks to Clay only OA didn't want to name names.

He didn't want his friend getting in trouble for helping. Maggie suggested he sign Clay as a CI. They were talking about it when their bosses decided to shake the tree. They went to Perez's office. They informed him about the danger in that neighborhood and then they used Landry's app account to notify the man who hired him that he needed extra cash.

They extorted the shot caller. He showed up for a money drop. He wasn't Perez. He was Perez's son, Junior. Junior wanted out of his father's shadow. He was prepared to start a turf war if it meant he got his father's recognition. The feds couldn't see that at first. They thought Perez ordered his son to do this.

They spoke with Perez. He said his son was too stupid to mastermind this and that's why Junior couldn't have done it. Jubal showed that interview to Junior. And that's when Junior admitted he masterminded the whole thing.

Perez didn't give him orders. Junior took the initiative to clear out that neighborhood and he made a full confession in spite of his lawyer begging him to shut up. Perez later saw the confession. He instantly disowned his son. He also called journalists just so that he could condemn his son at a news conference right in front of the federal building.

Hugo Soto went to that conference. He showed up and he killed Perez. His brother had died in surgery. He blamed the whole Perez family for him losing his only family and he didn't die in a shootout. Maggie kept him alive long enough to face trial.

But OA signed Clay up as his criminal informant and they were going to use that app to solve cases.

Summary: A Behavioral Analysis Unit profiler asks for the team's help after her sister is the victim of an attempted kidnapping.

A masked assailant came close to abducting a young woman. The woman happened to be a sister to an FBI Agent and she was also a daughter to a cop. She used her father's badge to scare off her abductor. He drugged her.

He was telling her how she'd be his first, but that badge changed everything. He ran off without harming the woman once he saw that badge. He didn't want his victim to bring unnecessary attention on him and so he left. Melanie survived the ordeal. She wanted to put it all behind her.

She told her sister about it and she regretted it the second she said anything. Her sister wouldn't let it go.

FBI Special Agent Sydney Ortiz was a profiler. She knew this man attacked her sister wasn't going to stop after he failed to grab Mel. He was going to keep finding victims and Syd brought this case to the authorities. The local cops refused to do anything.

There was no signs that anyone broke into Mel's home. Mel was also on medication for mental health. She was considered unbelievable. The thing with the local cops convinced Mel that she should have just dropped it. And so it was her sister that brought the case to the FBI.

What happened to Mel was technically an assault on a federal agent's family. It could be connected to Syd's case files or what not. The women's father was also a friend for FBI SAC Isobel Castille. He helped her close the biggest case in her career.

She owes him and, now that he's passed, she was willing to make up for it with his daughters. She had her people search Mel's home. They didn't find much. Then again they didn't really want to investigate. OA and Scola didn't think a crime happened. They knew the only reason they were investigating was because of the family's connections.

Maggie was one the person that believed Mel. They later talked to Mel. They asked her about anyone she sees frequently and she mentioned this one guy. The guy was interested in her, but he wasn't her stalker. He also wasn't the one that left floral arrangements for her.

The flowers were from her stalker. The FBI followed that led to a floral shop. The order was placed online and with a gift card. Syd forced her way into the investigation. She was a profiler. She profiled their perp. She checked to see if that card had made any other orders and she found out he sent the same flowers to Jennifer Murray.

Jennifer was a college student. She didn't show up at school that day. She wasn't answering her phone. The FBI checked nearby cameras and they saw that the stalker had already grabbed Jennifer. She was missing. Syd stayed on the case to profile the man they were looking for.

Only she doesn't play well with others. She has no field experience. She doesn't want to work well with others. Its why she stayed in the basement and so she had to learn how to interact with the team. She also had to learn how to talk to victims.

Jennifer was returned to her house. She had been drugged with the same date rape drug used on Mel. The perp creates his own cocktail that allows them to stay awake during the attack while also making it impossible for them to fight back. He also told Jennifer she was his first.

Syd realized that he said that because he thinks it's a compliment for them. Jennifer wasn't his first. Neither was Mel. The perp has a gentleman fantasy. He believes he's wooing these women. He then abducts them to consummate their "relationship". And he returns them to their home when he's done with them.

Syd couldn't get answers from Jennifer. Maggie had to talk to her. She was better at it and Jennifer told her she had been sexually assaulted. Her story lines up with Mel's. It made Syd feel bad because the first time she heard her sister's story — she hadn't believed her.

She doubted her because her sister had always heard voices. She now knows for sure that her sister was telling the truth. She wants to catch the guy and so they ran the details that Jennifer gave them through the database. To see if there were other victims out there.

The MO matched the abduction/rape of seventeen women in NYC. The women reported what happened to the local police. The local police didn't believe them nor did they even bother to see if there were others cases with the same MO. NYPD failed these women.

The FBI had to get justice for them. The women all lived alone. They had security systems that failed to work on the night of their abduction and the security cameras were all owned by the same company called Sentinel Alarms. The company also recently fired a man for failing to disclose he was a registered sex offender.

The guy's name was Justin Halverson. He was eighteen when he slept with his girlfriend that was sixteen. Her parents pressed charges and he went on the registry. He said he never withheld his background. He was hired by Tom McGrath.

McGrath knew he was on the registry and hired him anyways because he wanted a partner. McGrath loves to turn the security system of beautiful women off so that he could surveil them. He likes to watch. He met a man online. They both couldn't get a date and so they teamed up to rape seventeen women.

The most McGrath was willing to say was that his friend was called Roy. He didn't know what he looked like. He didn't have a last name. Roy just made sure that he raped those women on camera and McGrath was fine enough with watching.

When Justin tried to report McGrath for surveilling women, McGrath fired him. He claimed that Justin withheld information on his application. He didn't know that Justin kept evidence that he hoped to use in wrongful termination lawsuit. The feds got their hands on that. And they went after McGrath.

The man ran when he saw them. He was tempted to commit suicide. He was out on the ledge of the roof and OA talked him down. They tried to get information from McGrath only he didn't know much. Nor did he care about getting a plea deal to take down his friend.

McGrath was useless. Syd was taken off the case for being too zealous. She didn't want to offer McGrath a deal. She went back to the basement and she kept investigating. She found Roy on her own. He was the super at an apartment building. Its why he was able to hide the women during the attack.

Apparently, Roy lost someone he saw a future with when he didn't escort her home. Its why he felt he had to be a gentleman with the women he assaulted.

He had candles. He had a shower. He even drove them home after the attack because he didn't want them to get hurt. He was delusional. He took Syd hostage when she found him. She convinced him to do the right thing and so he killed himself. Syd survived her first case in the field. And it won't be her last.

Isobel was keeping Syd around and next time Syd has to play well with others.

Summary: The team is called in when a chaotic campus protest turns deadly.

Some college kids started a riot on campus. They took the undersecretary hostage. They fought with the cops and, seeing as there was a hostage situation, the feds got involved as well.

They pushed through several assaults to find the Undersecretary Willis. She apparently wanted to stay. She believed in the students' cause.

They didn't want their dorms or free space to be taken up by refugees. They wanted housing provided to everyone in the city. They were asking for basic human rights and someone went too far. The FBI were escorting Willis out of the building when one girl screams stopped them from leaving.

Someone had been murdered during the riot. He was found by another student. She tried to help and was left covered in blood. It was her screams that alerted the feds.

They were leaving with Willis. They stopped when they heard the girl. They found the body right afterwards. They had to investigate the murder. The victim's name was Jacob Aquino.

He died before the riot popped off. The Medical Examiner said he died before the cops had even gotten there. This meant Jacob wasn't killed by the cops or the feds. His killer was on that campus from before.

There was an upside to him dying before the action. It made it easier on the feds to track down everyone who went into that building around the time of the murder.

The feds also looked into Jacob. He was Filipino American. His parents were immigrants. He was on scholarship. It was personal for him that the immigrants be taken care of. The feds checked surveillance cameras. They found Jacob had gotten into a fight with a man named Frank Dorman.

Dorman wasn't a college student. He was a US military vet. He was armed to the teeth and he got into a fight with Jacob because he thought Jacob was a whiny brat.

All Jacob did was give him a flier.

Dorman didn't go to college when he was that age. He was already serving in the military. He felt he was more American because he fought for his country and so he didn't care about providing humane housing for immigrants.

Dorman was armed because he went hunting that day. He also didn't care enough about a protestor to hunt him down. Jacob had plenty of enemies before Dorman entered the picture.

He left his fraternity. He told his mom it was so that he could focus on school. Only it was weird to leave a fraternity after they'd passed pledge week.

Jacob wanted to be a doctor. His lab partner was recently expelled for drug usage. Jacob was also getting several threatening texts from his former fraternity brother, Freddy Albrect. The messages were getting uglier by the minute when it suddenly stopped right as Jacob was murdered. The feds looked for Freddy.

He wasn't on campus. He went to his parents' apartment. His parents were away on vacation. Freddy was by himself and he left a bag full of cocaine out for Maggie to find. Freddy was arrested for the felony weight in his bag.

During his interrogation, Freddy admitted he sold drugs on campus. He had a supplier. He had his frat buddies selling drugs for him and everything was going well until Jacob's lab partner got expelled.

Jacob left the fraternity. He tried to get away from Freddy and his business. Freddy believes he was killed by his supplier so that he wouldn't talk. Freddy agreed to wear a wire. He approached his drug buddy. He tried to get Mario Becceras on tape confessing to Jacob's murder and the guy had no idea what he was talking about.

Jacob wasn't killed by Mario or his brother Cesar. No one knew Jacob was even involved in the trade. What the brothers did know was that Freddy's other friend meant a lot to him. His name is Alistair. Cesar took Alistair hostage. The brothers were demanding all of their drugs back and now the feds have to look for this other kid before he gets killed.

Freddy was worried about his friend. He didn't mention him before because he was trying to protect him. Now, Alistair could die because of him. Freddy doesn't know where the brothers set up shop. He met them out in the open. It was different venues all the time.

NYPD knew where the brothers were. They've been building a drug case against the brothers for months. They didn't want to assist the feds initially because they didn't want the feds to take credit. Jubal also couldn't ask for a favor because he ran out of those. His son Tyler was at the riot on campus. Tyler wasn't even in college.

He was still in high school, He also wasn't going to face punishment because Jubal talked a police captain out of charging him. Tyler was allowed to go home while all his friends got arrested.

Jubal will have to face the repercussions from that. Until that happens, he and his people assisted NYPD with taking down the drug operation. They arrested Mario. They killed Cesar. They they also found Alistair. NYPD made the biggest drug bust of the year and they were definitely taking the full credit. Everyone also figured out that the brothers didn't kill Jacob. Freddy did.

Freddy beat Jacob to death with a lock. It was found at the frat house. Jacob was never part of the drug ring. He was a good kid. He found out what Freddy was doing and that's why he left the frat. He was going to report the overly privileged Freddy.

Freddy killed him to stop him and they have enough evidence to put him away for life.

Jubal meanwhile was later forcibly suspended without pay for that favor he called in for his son, but he still managed to teach his son a lesson.

Summary: After bodies are discovered across the city, the team tracks down a serial killer.

The FBI were brought in when a woman was murdered the same way as two other victims. Three victims automatically makes it a serial killer. The FBI was the one to investigate those. The local cops were glad to give this case a wide berth. The killer was vindictive. He cut out his victims' uteruses.

Some were already calling him a Jack the Ripper wannabe. He seemed to hate women. He'd abduct them and hold onto them for a bit until he snaps. He never sexually assaulted them. He kills them with the forced hysterectomy. He tosses the remains away like it was trash and some found that odd.

Jubal was still suspended tonight. Isobel was running point in his place. The latest victim was identified as Stacey Wilkins. She looks like the other two victims. They were all blonde.

They were working for minimum wage. They were taken and held for about a month before their deaths. Isobel brought in a profiler to help them with the case. Their colleague however was stumped by the lack of assault. It was clear the killer brutalized his victims out of pure hatred. The ripping out of their uteruses told them that the killer thinks that their only purpose was their womb.

There were no other cases like that in any of the counties or states. Only the three victims didn't feel like a starting point. It felt more like an escalation. The feds looked into men who attack women with knives and they thought the best person to fit the profile was Ray DiStefano. Maggie knew him.

She's the one that caught and arrested him years ago. He went to jail for a few years. He got out a month before the first woman was taken. He also hadn't been checking in with his probation officer. They used that last one to let themselves into his apartment.

They found photos of body parts. There were even photos of Maggie with Ella. DiStefano was following her for months and she never realized it. Anyways DiStefano came home early. He spotted them.

He tried to run. He got into a fight with Maggie and she took him down. They arrested him. They later questioned him and he even spat on Maggie when she claimed the cut he gave her had healed. DiStefano loves to disfigure women. None of them victims had visible cuts or scars and so he wasn't their guy. And he's only going to serve time for failing to meet the conditions of his probation.

The FBI had to start over with how the women were connected. They eventually learned that the victims had all gone to see Dr. Adam Marion. He was an OBGYN. The victims wanted tubal ligation.

They all didn't want children. They went to the doctor to remove the option of getting pregnant and the doctor didn't take it well. He turned them all down. He tried to convince them that having children will change their lives. There was one woman that went to her appointment with her boyfriend. And the doctor tried to tell her she couldn't get the procedure without her boyfriend's approval.

Marion considered himself to be "traditional". His wife used to make tradwife videos on social media. She recently passed away and the feds believe that the doctor was trying to recreate what he had with his wife.

He was trying to turn victims into his wife. The victims were all dressed. Their makeup was done. They'd fit the tradwife imagery that Marion wanted. Maggie went undercover as a possible patient. She found out he offers the same drug that was used on the victims. He also has obsidian swords. The same as the murder weapon.

They swords were hung up on the wall in the doctor's office. Once Maggie saw that, she arrested Marion. She questioned the doctor. She asked him where was Hannah Resella? Hannah was also a patient of Marion's.

She asked for tubal ligation. She disappeared the day after the latest victim was killed and no one wanted her to become the fourth victim. There was one problem with their lead. Marion wasn't their killer. His DNA didn't match what they found on the victims. It also wasn't a match for his son who also happens to be a doctor at the same practice.

No, the DNA belonged to a woman. The serial killer was a woman. She was actually Marion's receptionist. Her name is Hope Adkins. Her mom was single. Hope was running from dead-end job to dead-end job. She then saw Darcy Marion's videos. She became a superfan. Then Darcy died and Hope thought she could have her life by getting close to the doctor.

They dated for a while. It was going great until the doctor said he'd want more children and he ended things with Hope because she couldn't have any. Marion was also her gyno. And that's how he knew.

Hope then had to watch women who had the ability to get pregnant spit on the lifestyle she wanted. She became enraged. She abducted them using the drugs from Marion's office.

She took them to a place in the wood and she tried to get them to reenact the videos Darcy used to make. The feds got a warrant for her apartment. They found her laptop. They saw the videos she made of the victims. She was truly sick. In her mind, she was helping the women find true purpose and she had to kill them because they were too "broken".

The feds found Hannah before she was harmed. They had Hope cornered. She still had the obsidian knife and she wanted to die. She tried to attack Maggie. OA had to put her down.

But this case had shaken Maggie. She was reconsidering Ella's guardianship. DiStefano was following her for a while. She never noticed and now he set his sights on Ella.

He thought Ella was her biological child. It made him interested in the little girl which worried Maggie. She didn't want to put the little girl in danger. And so she was considering giving up custody.

Summary:	The team faces their toughest roadblock yet when a string of crimes leads them to discover an online conspiracy theory community.

A park ranger was murdered on Governor's Island. It happened on federal land. It thereby was a federal crime. The FBI were brought in to investigate the murder of Desiree Cole. She had earlier reported spotted a man wearing a snake mask following the kids group she was in charge of.

She got the kids to safety but was later alone when the man showed up again. He killed her instantly. He might have been waiting around just to do so. There was also a chance that the killer wasn't a man at all. Desiree assumed it was a man. The same for the other park rangers. They saw someone seemingly tall and wearing all black.

The reason the FBI stuck with an open mind was because of Desiree's ex. She was dating Drew Ambrie until they had a nasty split. Desiree cheated on Drew and then kicked Drew out of their place. Drew also has a registered handgun. It was the same as the murder weapon. The FBI visited Drew's new home.

They questioned her and they got the gun to run ballistics on. Drew wasn't their shooter. Her gun wasn't a match. She also had an alibi. She was out with a group of friends that night. And while Drew wasn't their killer, her relationship with Desiree seemed to have upset one person in particular.

Desiree was constantly fighting bigots online. She has a truly hateful relationship with someone by the name of "Scroll Lord". The guy's real name was Brandon Halford. He said someone should put a bullet in her. He hates all minorities. Desiree was a favorite victim because she was both black and a lesbian.

The FBI tracked down Halford. He was at the home of another park ranger. Halford's intended victim hadn't been home at the time and Halford was claiming there were kids there. And so the FBI breached the building to take down their suspect.

They easily arrested Halford. He didn't even try to hide his crimes. The feds came to believe he had killed someone else connected to the National Park Service. He was also ranting about the "kids".

Halford believed the National Park Service was trafficking children. He thought that because he was listening to a conspiracy theorist. The theorist was known as "Calvin". He was anonymous. He was also far more dangerous than Qanon. Anyways, this Calvin would post cryptic messages online. He left it up to his followers to decode it.

There was a guy known as Duke Ducoyle who decoded Calvin's latest message. He claimed that the National Park Service was secretly the National Pride Service. He claims the feds were hiring gay people to traffic children all around the country. Halford saw his message and he tried to act on it. Only he wasn't their killer.

Brandon's gun wasn't a match for the two park rangers that were killed. He also refused to say a negative word against Duke. He still believes that Duke was right and that eventually they would save the children that were endangered.

The FBI tried talking to Duke. They tried to warn him that he was stirring up hate against good people. He didn't care about that and he said there's no proof the dead rangers weren't human traffickers. Meaning they couldn't prove it was defamatory. Duke has a lot of lawyers.

He knew what to say to stay relevant and on the right side of the law. He got sued the last time he crossed the line. He's been playing carefully ever since. He also knows that they couldn't prove he was Calvin. They assumed it was him. And assumptions weren't evidence.

Calvin later dropped the latest clue. He was inciting people to riot. They were supposed to tear down the National Park Service and so the feds were called in to restore order. They made several arrests.

One of them was Phil Ambrie. He was Drew's father. He's also been staying with her for the past few days. Phil was the one that gave Desiree's address when her photo was posted online. She was showing around one of the children's groups. Duke was claiming she was trafficking those children and so Phil posted where she could be found.

The feds continued to look into him. They later found he posted a message to Duke saying "mission accomplished". Duke was detained because of that message. The feds kept investigating Phil.

He was sticking to the conspiracy theorist line. He told the feds that he doesn't recognize their authority. He refused to believe one of the park rangers was also an Army Ranger. He said that Calvin would never target a member of the military. Even when evidence was placed right in front of him, he still believed in Calvin as well as Duke.

His daughter explained it. She said her mom died. Her dad lost his job. He then lost his house. He fell apart after all of that and she didn't. She found a community to help her heal.

He found one that took his mind off of the pain but was more destructive than good. The bar where the riot kicked off wasn't just some old bar. It's where Drew worked at first. It's where she met Desiree. There was no basement. There weren't kids being held there. Drew showed that to her father and he still refused to believe at first.

Phil came to see the truth. His daughter showed him the truth. Phil admitted he was in communication with Duke. They planned the attack together. Phil also has a friend he met online.

The plan was for the friend to attack the same bar. The attack was planned for that day and the father barely had time to warn them before they were ducking bullets. OA later killed their active shooter. And Duke was arrested for inciting murder with an add on of hate crime because he made sure to attack gay people.

Duke threatened Isobel when he got arrested. It put her on edge. She made sure to walk home with her gun that night.

Summary: The team entrusts OA's old army buddy Clay to assist them after three customs officers are shot dead in a cargo heist.

Clay Voss was OA's confidential informant. CI for short. Clay was a private contractor. He also played a part in corporate espionage. OA knew he was sitting on valuable information and so he turned his friend into an informant in order to get that information without breaking any laws.

It had actually been Maggie's idea. Maggie was afraid that OA's affiliation with Clay would back OA into a corner. She suggested putting him on the books as a way of ensuring that OA doesn't get burned. She had been right to suggest that. OA could see that in an instant and that's why followed through on her advice. And he also went through with it because he believed Clay was still a good man.

It wasn't until he was working a case that he came to see his friend as he truly is. It all started when several custom agents were murdered at an airport.

The gunmen wanted to steal cargo. There was apparently twenty-five million dollars in gold bullion in that cargo and not a lot of people knew about it. The shipment was sent from Switzerland. Danny Chun was in charge of it. He was the one that convinced his boss at a hedge fund to diversify cash into gold because he said gold was a better bet.

Only Scola used to work in finance. He knew the price of gold just dropped recently. He came to wonder if the robbery/homicide was an inside job. Chun would have lost money if he kept it in gold.

He could regain what he lost if he reported it stolen and the insurance company made a payout. Chun was questioned. He denied all culpability. He also gave them a list of everyone that knew about the cargo. There was a guy at that same hedge fund that was deeply in debt. He has a second mortgage on his property in the Hamptons.

Caleb Boyles also had several credit cards that were maxed out. He would need that money. He was later questioned. He denied knowing anything about the cargo and he said Chun never spoke of it with him.

The FBI soon switched gears when they identified one of the gunmen that killed a border agent. The man was caught on camera going upstate. The killer was identified as Samuel Baptiste. He has a record with Interpol. He was a part of a rebel Haitian group. He and his friends were doing their best to destabilize the Haitian government and were ruthless with their methods.

By time the feds caught up to Baptiste, the whole rebel crew was killed. This included Chun. Chun was the inside man all along. Scola had been right about him and it was too late to do anything about that because now Chun was dead. That crew had been hit by another crew.

OA found evidence that his friend Clay had been at the scene. Clay later said he found the bodies and that he wasn't responsible for them. Clay's company was hired as backup security. Chun's boss didn't trust him. Clay was hired to follow Chun and he happened to be there moments after Chun was killed.

Clay swore he didn't kill the guy or the others. He offered up his own gun to OA. OA was running it through ballistics even as Maggie was warning him that something wasn't right. She felt they should have questioned Clay officially. OA instead reached out privately to a friend and that friend was a possible suspect in a robbery/homicide.

He could get in trouble for that. Hell, Jubal was just back from suspension because he used his own position to save his son from getting arrested. And the same could happen to OA if he unintentionally covers for a killer.

OA refused to learn Jubal's lesson. He later turned to Clay for assistance. The feds came to find out that the second crew that killed the Haitians were a bunch of cops. The Suffolk County cops.

They killed those people in revenge. The county had used the police's pension fund to invest in Second Point Capital. They were promised big returns and instead the hedge funds guys lost them billions. Most of the cops couldn't afford to retire anymore. They got bitter and then they heard that someone robbed the same hedge fund that stole from them.

They somehow managed to track Chun before anyone else. They robbed them. They didn't plan on killing anyone until Baptiste came back and surprised them. Then they were forced to kill the crew.

They now have the gold. They were trying to stay under the radar when one of the cops' girlfriend was spotted leaving the crime scene. It was her that led the feds to the dirty cops. And that's when OA suggested that they send Clay in as what he was — a private contractor that was following Chun in his final moments.

They couldn't send in an undercover federal agent from the New York field office. There was a chance that the local cops would have recognized them. They also couldn't use another agent from a different state because it would take too long. OA suggested using Clay. Isobel and Jubal went along with his plan.

Maggie did so reluctantly. She didn't fully trust Clay and so OA finally told her why he has such faith in his friend. OA was ambushed overseas. He was taken hostage with his buddy Noah. Noah was killed by their captors and OA thought he'd die too until Clay came.

Clay rescued him. He was injured doing so. He also got in trouble with the army because he didn't have clearance to rescue OA and so OA owes Clay everything. He would be dead right now if Clay wasn't such a rulebreaker.

OA thought those days were over for Clay. He was wrong and he found out at the worst time. They sent Clay in. Clay was good at his job. He was getting shown where the gold was when he camera went dead. The feds rushed onto the scene hoping to "save" Clay. And that's when OA found out Clay was trying to steal the gold for himself.

Clay even killed one of the dirty cops in cold blood to get the gold. He thought OA would let him escape because OA owed him his life and in doing that Clay forgot who OA was.

OA shot his friend. He killed Clay. He stopped him from escaping with stolen gold or getting away with murder. He did what was right because he will always be the boy scout. Clay used to call him that all the time. He really shouldn't have forgotten that in his greed.

The cops were also arrested and now they might share a cell with the people they put behind bars.

Production Code: FBI709
Summary: Scola's memories of his brother's death are triggered when the team uncovers a deadly terrorist plot involving commercial flights.

The body of Allen Champion fell on some poor bystander's car. It was believed at first to be a suicide. Only his wife disagreed with that assessment. She said her husband wasn't depressed.

They were looking at buying a Lakehouse as a vacation home and her husband wasn't just some schmo. He was an AUSA. Assisted US Attorney. He prosecuted a lot of cases for the FBI. He put away human traffickers and evil people. There's a chance one of them threw him off that roof and so the FBI were brought in to investigate.

The investigation came at the perfect time for Scola. His new partner got promoted. He was glad for her, but he also got a mail from the Mayor's office that's been on his desk for weeks.

He hasn't opened it. He doesn't want anyone else to open it. It was really weird. OA and Maggie were making fun of him for it when this case popped up. Scola was glad when they all shifted focus. They went to the victim's home. They found out he was very anal. He has to have everything matching. It helped the feds out in the end because it made it easier to see what didn't fit.

Which in this case was a statue. There was a statue that was missing a large chunk in it. It could have been used to kill the victim and the fall from his penthouse merely masked the murder.

The feds ran tests on the statue. They also tracked Allen's last movements. Allen met up with a man named Wendell Troost. They were seen having an argument. It turns out Allen was Wendell's lawyer. He hired him on the same day he quit his job at Canto Airlines. Canto Airlines was the fastest growing airline nowadays.

No one thought anything about the airline until they found Wendell's body. His murder was also made to appear like suicide. The difference this time was that the feds arrived on the scene before the killers could flee.

They were seen. They were chased. They were identified as Bolivian military. The murder victims had no ties to Bolivia or its military. The only thing that connects the victims to each other was the fact that Wendell hired Allen to help in a dispute with his former bosses. And so the feds had to go check out Canto Airlines.

The company earns about six billion dollars a year. Some felt they could easily hire assassins to hide something if they wanted to. The feds spoke to the airlines' lawyer. She has no clue why Wendell quit or why he hired outside attorney. She also said that his immediate supervisor was Daniel Ruskin. Ruskin was allegedly on vacation in Italy. Isobel thought that was a little too convenient. She had some of her people go by Ruskin's house and they found he was still in the country. He also tried to run from them.

Ruskin has a partner. Her name is Anna Fox. She was abducted a few weeks ago by the same men that killed Wendell. These men threatened to kill Ruskin's girlfriend if he didn't help them get a backdoor into Canto's computers. He gave in because he was hoping to save Anna's life even if those men kill him in the aftermath. He created a backdoor that would allow them to control any Canto plane. The only way to fix the backdoor would be to have access to the offsite computer that kidnappers carry around. And when Wendell found this backdoor, he tried to fix it.

He made the mistake of telling Ruskin that he hired a lawyer. He was willing to become a whistleblower if it meant keeping people safe. However, Ruskin told the Bolivians about him getting a lawyer. The Bolivians then killed both Wendell and Allen. The feds even thought they would have killed Anna as well if they hadn't found her. They later found her bound. There was no sign of the Bolivians or their computer. Anna was reunited with Ruskin and everyone was concerned about the planes at risk.

They tried to reroute as many planes as they could. Only the terrorists took control of one plane. They did that to show that they could and would bring down hundreds of planes if they didn't get what they wanted. The terrorists called themselves "Mina Rota". They were Bolivian freedom fighters. Their country was allowing the United States to open mines to find lithium for their cell phones and smart cars. What they left out was that the people working the mines were being paid pennies. It was modern day slavery according to Mina Rota.

They threatened to kill thousands if their country didn't get a livable wage. The terrorist group was run by Luis Zamora. Scola had a gut feeling about Anna and it proved to be correct because her real name isn't Anna Fox. It was Verona DeSilva. She was Zamora's wife. They set up Ruskin.

They honeypot him with Verona. They waited until Ruskin proposed and then they pretended to kidnap her to gain access to those planes. Now, Verona didn't care who died. The feds couldn't get her to sympathize with their own people on those planes, but they did find her burner cell.

They called Zamora with a voice modifier. They were able to track his location down to a two block radius before he figured out they weren't Verona. The feds then cut off electricity to the city. They forced the Bolivians out onto the streets. They killed them. They got access to their computer.

Ruskin closed the backdoor on their computer and no planes crashed in the meantime. The FBI saved about seven thousand people that day. And while the Bolivians may have been right about the injustice of those mines, no one will remember that now.

Scola went home with that letter from the Mayor's office. He had Nina open it for him. It was apparently a letter from the 9/11 recovery team. They finally found his brother's remains and he can be properly buried now.

Summary: Jubal must sift out the truth from his longtime confidential informant to thwart an impending large-scale terror attack.

Jubal met up with one of his criminal informants. These sort of meetings usually work best if everyone remains consistent. Jubal wears his old wedding ring for these meetings because he never told his CI he got divorced or that he shares custody with his ex.

Only there were more pressing things to worry about tonight. His CI never showed. His CI's real name is Faheem Ellahie. He's never missed a meeting before. Jubal got worried about him when he didn't show. He had his people track him. They learned that Faheem got grabbed by someone that morning. He was thrown into the back of a car and no one has heard from him since.

People were already trying to find the money he had stashed all around the city. He laundry drug money for dangerous people. The only way anyone would move against him was if they were sure that sure that Faheem was gone.

Jubal was trying to find whoever grabbed Faheem and he was left surprised when Faheem suddenly showed up at his house. Faheem apparently had some big news. He had to get out of the city before he could Jubal what exactly he found. Jubal's ex called him and he went straight home.

Jubal checked Faheem for weapons within seconds of getting inside. Faheem was clean. He had nothing on him. He wasn't a physical threat to Jubal's family. Though going to Jubal's home was something that couldn't be repeated.

It crossed a line. It endangered Jubal's family. Jubal told him right off to never do that again. He also promised his ex that that no one else was coming to their home. He'd deal with Faheem.

He later put Faheem in an interrogation room. Faheem was still claiming he has this important news.

Faheem said that there was an imminent terrorist attack in the States. He was coming to Jubal because he wanted to stop this attack and he was willing to give Jubal everything he knows in return for something.

Faheem wanted his half-brother to be released from prison. His brother Daanish sold a felony weight of drugs to an undercover cop. He got put in prison. He wasn't getting out anytime soon and that could be a problem because he was about to get transferred. The feds wanted to move him to a prison upstate.

It would be away from his friends. His allies. His family. Him going to a different prison might put him on the lower end of the totem pole and that wasn't a safe place to be in prison.

The fact that Faheem has this big important information right as his brother was about to be transferred was a little too coincidental. Some felt he was faking this important information to save his brother. Faheem's one request was for his brother to be released from prison, but Jubal doesn't think Faheem would risk that by giving them bad intel.

Jubal suspected that Faheem does know something. He's just not sure if Faheem exaggerated the situation. The FBI did their due diligence after they heard about Faheem getting grabbed and they found footage of the incident.

Faheem was thrown into the back of a car by men in hoods. There's no telling how he escaped them or if they were his men helping him sell a lie. The FBI kept looking into Faheem. They found out his kidnappers went to the home of Tucker Kincaid. By time the feds tracked down this man, he was already dead.

His killers also planted IEDs around the body to kill whoever found him first. It seems that the danger in this case was real. Jubal went back to Faheem after they found the body and Faheem said the information he has was on this little usb drive.

Jubal took the device from him. He had his people open it up and that's when they learned what it really was. There was no imminent attack. The device that Faheem gave Jubal granted some dangerous people access to the FBI's servers. It was a cyber attack all along.

Faheem was grabbed that morning by dangerous people. They knew he was a criminal informant. They demanded that he help them gain access to the FBI's servers or they were going to kill his brother during his transfer. It's why Faheem begged Jubal to get his brother released. He wanted to save him without betraying Jubal.

Then time was catching up with them and so Faheem did what these people wanted in the hope they didn't hurt his brother. He's betrayed. Jubal He's lied to Jubal. And ultimately Jubal still tried to help him.

Jubal protected Daanish during his transfer. Jubal owed Faheem that. Jubal and Faheem have been working together for close to twenty years. Faheem knew him back when he wasn't sober.

They worked together on cases that weren't entirely legal. At one point Jubal had them cut the camera in the interrogation room. Isobel did so because she trusts him. The only people that knows what happened next were Jubal and Faheem. The next thing anyone knows its Jubal that suggested they offer support during Daanish's transfer.

Jubal knew that these dangerous people wouldn't keep their promises. They would still try to kill Daanish. They might also work their way back around to Faheem and finish him off as well. Jubal being there for Daanish helped the man survive. They did try to kill him. The FBI saved Daanish's life because one of the US Marshalls was dirty. He shot Daanish in cold blood. Jubal killed the guy. and the rest of his team killed the others. Daanish was taken to a hospital. He was going to be alright.

It turns out these people were sovereign citizens. They all had matching tattoos. They all believed that big government was evil and that they needed to big brother the government.

All in all five people died that day, but Jubal kept his promise to Faheem. They also could no longer work together anymore. Faheem got a new FBI handler. Jubal also returned home to have a conversation with his ex-wife about Faheem coming to their home.

Summary: A mass shooting at a shelter leads the team toward a killer with connections to a Mexican cartel.

Someone shot up a shelter. They pretended like they were dropping off food. The shelter receives a lot of food donations from people in the neighborhood and the security guard didn't suspect anything nefarious when he let the man in. It was once inside that the man showed his true colors.

He killed eleven people. He didn't care who was homeless or who were staff. He killed as many as he could and one of them happened to be a firefighter that ran into the building when he heard shots.

This became a federal case because of the location.

The shelter has been taking in a lot of undocumented immigrants. They received extra money from the state for doing so. The fact that the killer targeted that specific shelter had everyone believing this was a hate crime. The theory was further cemented when they found out who their shooter was.

There was a teenage girl at that shelter that was recording a video for her science project. Her father was filming it and he captured the shooter on camera. The shooter's name is Vernon Walsh. He was in a biker gang until most of them went to prison.

Walsh has been living with his cousin ever since. The cousin's name was Corbin Walsh. He builds things with a 3D printer and that's what Walsh used to create his gun. When Walsh first entered the shelter, no one took him seriously because his gun looked fake. It looked plastic.

It wasn't until he was killing people that they started to run. Walsh also has a history of racism. He attacked another biker for being a "race traitor" for marrying an Asian woman. His criminal past on top of his racism should have warned his cousin to never bring him around his work and still he did.

The FBI went to go talk to Corbin. They asked him to call his cousin for them. He claimed he left his phone in the back and he ran in spite of Maggie warning him not to. The FBI had people outside.

OA caught up to Corbin. He arrested him. The shelter had been in OA's old neighborhood. His sister even used to volunteer at that shelter. They were both great fans of the man that ran the place and now that man is dead. OA was more than angry. He wanted revenge and he roughed up Corbin a little more than he should.

Maggie didn't report him. He just got unlucky that a bystander recorded him. Isobel later talked to OA about living his private life at home. She was a great example of that herself.

She's been married for two months. OA was the only that knows that. He also knows that she became a stepmother to three girls. Isobel didn't even tell Jubal that and so OA needed to learn how to compartmentalize. He left Corbin's interrogation to Maggie. She and Scola got Corbin to admit he did make the gun for his cousin.

They didn't plan the shooting because of race. They were hired. Walsh was hired by the Jalisco cartel. They sent him to that shelter to kidnap a woman and that woman was pretending to be a refugee.

Her name is Ines Madera. She was the longtime mistress to Jorge Ortega. The leader of the Jalisco cartel. She apparently left him and stole some of his money to start over somewhere else, but he wasn't the type to move on. He put out a five million dollar bounty on her. He wanted her to be brought back to him.

Ortega paid Walsh to grab Ines from that shelter. The deaths were just to confuse everyone. The FBI later found Walsh dead. Ines seemed to have killed her kidnapper and she once again on the run. Finding her became their new objective. They found out that Ines was buying phone cards from bodegas to call her family back home.

She didn't stay on the calls for long. Just long enough to say she's okay. The cartel still managed to track her down and it was only by chance that the feds got to her before anyone else did. They also found a bag of cocaine on her.

Ines was questioned. She admitted she stole the bag of cocaine to help fund her new life. The bag wasn't anything big to Ortega and so the FBI were still confused on why Ortega wanted her back.

Ines ended up telling them the whole story. She was a beautiful teenager. Ortega saw her once and he went to her parents' home to collect her. They didn't have a choice in letting her go. She didn't even have a choice of telling that man no. She ran because the two of them have a secret. They have an eight year old son together.

The son's name is Miguel. Ines ran with Miguel to the states. She has a best friend back in Jalisco. Her friend's brother lived in Brooklyn and he was watching Miguel for Ines. With Ines in custody, the feds went to go collect Miguel. They were unfortunately too slow because Miguel was grabbed by someone known as "El Diablo".

His babysitter was found murdered in his apartment. The feds later identified this devil. His name is Nestor Cruz. He was former Mexican police. He tried bringing down Ortega and Ortega responded by killing Cruz's family.

Ortega set mother and daughter on fire. He sent the video of it to Cruz. Cruz has wanted revenge for a long time and Miguel will get him that. Cruz reached out to Ortega.

He was demanding that Ortega trades himself for his little boy. He didn't know how monstrous Ortega really was. The thing that finally convinced Ines to run away with her son was the fact that Ortega took Miguel to the stables. Miguel thought he was getting a new horse. He instead saw a rival drug dealer tied up and his father demanded that he kill this man. He gave him a gun and everything.

Poor Miguel couldn't go through with it. He was only eight. He cried until his father took the gun away and now Cruz thinks he can trade Miguel for Ortega. He thinks Ortega truly cares for the boy.

The sad fact being that he only cares about how he's perceived. He doesn't actually love anyone. Ortega wasn't going through with the trade and he was willing to notify the DEA about Cruz's demands. The DEA were hoping to resolve the matter peacefully. They thought that by rescuing Miguel that Ortega might agree to assist their department in the future.

Again, people were underestimating Ortega. He was horrible. The feds found Cruz. They took him down. They rescued Miguel. The DEA made a deal with Ortega.

Ortega gave the DEA the means to take down three rival cartels. They felt he deserved a reward after that and so they returned Miguel to him. Ines couldn't go with him because she was under arrest for carrying the cocaine from earlier. And now there's no one to protect Miguel against his father.

The only thing that OA could do was deliver some food to the shelter. That at least made him feel like he did something good.

Production Code: FBI712
Summary: When the team's sex trafficking sting operation goes sideways, they race to recover a human trafficking victim. Meanwhile, Maggie makes a connection with a 911 operator to help find the girl before she is whisked out of the city or worse.

The FBI has been tracking a human trafficking ring. They found the broker. They arrested him. They forced him to work for them and they put together a sting operation. They were hoping to find the men behind the trafficking as well as the women they've been using as commodity.

Only the operation didn't go the way they planned. The two brothers involved met with the broker in the park. They noticed he kept looking over his shoulder. They confronted him and they ultimately killed him once he broke cover.

The brothers were Efren and Adan Ocampos. They traffic teenage girls. The broker used to love buying from them until he got caught. Martin Petrelli didn't want to go to jail. He agreed to assist with their case, but he was acting too oddly. The brother figured out something was wrong. They confronted him.

Petrelli tried to tell them he was forced to do this by the feds and it didn't earn him the sympathy he was looking for. It actually helped him catch a bullet. The feds moved in after he was shot and they were too late to catch Adan or rescue the teenage girl with him.

Adan took the girl onto the train. Maggie missed it, but she did promise the girl that she'd find her. She told her name and that turned out to be helpful because the girl later called the FBI looking for her. She said her name is Analis. She ran away from Adan. She was worried he was looking for her and she needed help.

Maggie needed to find this girl. She wanted to keep her promise. The feds captured Efren and he was refusing to talk. He claimed the girl was his brother's girlfriend. He alleged that they met up in the park with a friend that owned them money and things got out of hand.

Petrelli died from his injuries. Efren wasn't talking. Finding Analis was their last chance at making the case against the brothers. The brothers were originally from Philippines. They got kicked out of the police force for corruption. They then moved to the States and started trafficking girls.

They tell these girls that they could work and be models or nannies in the States. They used that to lure them in. The girls arrive and suddenly they have pay off the "debt" they incurred from their trip. They get forced into prostitution to pay off this debt. And there's no escape.

They're trafficked until they're no longer of use. When they're no longer of use, that's when the men kill them. Its easier for them to kill the troublesome ones and that way they kept the young girls scared of acting out. Analis running away from her captor was another crime in Adan's eyes. She grabbed his phone. She called the emergency number because the phone was locked. She was on the phone with Maggie when Adan caught up to her and killed her. The last thing he told her was that her sister was going to be next.

Maggie heard the shots. She realized she failed to find Analis in time. The only way to make up for her failure was to find Analis's sister, Sofia. They came from the Philippines. They thought they signed up for an au pair program. Before she died, Analis had told Maggie that it was her idea to apply for the program. Sofia just went along with it because Analis didn't want to be alone. Analis had a promise of her own. She promised Sofia that she was going them out of this. Analis's promise became Maggie's mission.

Maggie looked for Sofia. The feds used the information that Analis gave them. They tracked down the cars that the traffickers were using. They found where the women were being held and they rescued a bunch of them. They just couldn't save Sofia. Adan killed her before the feds showed up. Maggie was used to tough cases. This one was different. She needed to find Adan. It was the only way she was going to heal and she knew that. Maggie left it to the others to question the women they found.

The feds were able to find where the women that were being held in Miami, Boston, and Baltimore. The trafficking ring was widespread. The feds saved a lot of women. It just didn't give Maggie the closure she was seeking. Maggie questioned Efren again. She used the fact that everyone was scared of his brother and not him. Efren didn't like everyone thinking he was a joke. He told her where she could find his brother. The feds went to the house. They found Adan and he tried to shoot his way of the situation.

Both Maggie and Scola were forced to kill Adan. Maggie was upset at first because she thought she failed Analis. They weren't going to find her body or give her a proper funeral. It wasn't until Maggie received another call that she felt hope again. Analis wasn't dead. She was shot only she survived the injury. She woke up to find herself in the trunk of a car. She still had Adan's phone on her. She didn't know where she was. She stayed on the phone with Maggie and Maggie found her. Analis was left in a car that was about to be demolished.

Analis was already turning blue when Maggie found her. The dispatcher on the phone used to be an EMT. He talked Maggie through a small procedure that saved Analis's life. His name is Josh. He was so concerned about Analis that he showed up at the hospital. He and Maggie got to talking and who knows? It might lead somewhere.

Sergeant Tim Bradford goes to a veteran support group. It helped him after he came back stateside. It also helped him through his recent breakup with Lucy and so they knew everything. They even knew about his recent hookup with Lucy. Tim thought what happened was a mistake.

He was beating himself up and the group reminded him that Lucy was an adult. If sleeping together was indeed a mistake, it was one they made together. Tim needed to stop blaming himself. He and Lucy have put in great effort to be at ease with each other. It was up to the both of them to overcome this latest backslide.

Anyways, the whole station was talking about Nolan. Not Tim and Lucy. Officer John Nolan was going through marriage troubles and everyone could tell. You know it's bad when Smitty picks up on it. Smitty!

He was the dumbest cop around and he offered Nolan his divorce attorney's card. He's been divorced three times this past decade. The lawyer helped him through each one. Smitty gave an uncomfortable hug for Nolan and so that might be the kick that Nolan needed to make things up with Bailey.

Nolan technically wasn't in the wrong with Bailey. She knew he was a cop when they got together. She knew that and still helped a hitman kill her ex-husband. She committed a crime.

It wasn't just parking tickets or stuff that Nolan could laugh off. There were two people that were now dead. Nolan didn't know if he should arrest Bailey or not and its not helping that she wasn't in the least apologetic. She was fine with what she did. She would do it again if her ex-husband had survived. And that's why she's crashing at a friend's house.

Nolan in the meantime tried to focus on his rookie. Officer Celina Juarez was coming off of probation. She was about to be a true cop and tonight was her last day. Both she and Nolan hoped it would go smoothly.

It ended up being a lot more dangerous than they thought. They found a van matching the description of a car fleeing a robbery. The van had broken down by the side of the road. The driver of said van was very handsome. Celina was too busy checking him out that she failed to notice his partner sneaking up behind her.

Production Code: FBI713
Summary: The team jumps into an organized crime investigation after jurors on a high-profile mafia trial are gunned down.

There was an ongoing trial against a mob boss. The jury for that trial has been sequestered since it first began six weeks ago.

They were guarded by the US Marshalls. They were safe at the hotel. Everything was fine until someone began shooting at the jury one day. It happened right before court.

They were all outside and about to head onto the van to take them to court when it happened. The shooter killed two federal jurors. He was chased away when the Marshalls returned fire. And the feds believed their killer left something behind.

The guy was smoking outside of the hotel. They knew it was him smoking because it rained the night before. The cigarettes were still dry and they were an Italian brand. It's only sold in Sicily. Which connected the shooter to the mob boss on trial. The mob boss was Sam Ardizzone.

He was the head of the Ardizzone crime family. He was Sicilian. The feds checked everyone that came to NYC within the past few months. They found someone that proved to be Ardizzone's cousin. There was security footage of the cousin threatening one of the jurors the day before the shooting.

The guy denies taking part in the shooting. He wanted his cousin to be found innocent. It's why he was threatening the jurors and so a mistrial doesn't help anyone. Ardizzone has to stay in prison while a new trial was put together. He also faced more charges because of that shooting. No, the crime family wasn't behind what happened.

The feds later realized that the jurors were never the target. The real target all along was US Marhsall Brad Kimble. Kimble was with these people every moment of every day. The killer accidentally killed the others while trying to kill him.

Once the feds realized they had it backwards, they tried reaching out to Kimble. They wanted to warn him and were too late in doing so. Kimble was found murdered at his home. He was shot multiple times.

The killer wanted to make sure he was dead. There was also evidence that Kimble's home had been raided. Someone had called 911 claiming that Kimble was sexually assaulting a little boy by gunpoint. SWAT arrived. They broke down Kimble's door. They arrested him and found his gun was still locked up in its safe. And there was no little boy.

The original 911 call was made by someone using a voice modifier. They were able to link that account to Grant Warren. Warren knew Kimble over twenty years ago.

Warren went to Cornwall Military Academy. He was a student and Kimble was a drill instructor. Warren was later arrested, but he wasn't their killer. He only swatted Kimble. Kimble raped Warren when he was a boy. He and two other staff members. They threatened the kids. They said they'd kill their families if they said anything.

Scola went to that school. It was before either Warren or Kimble's time there. He had no idea about the abuse and unfortunately Warren were these men's favorite. Warren couldn't handle it. He eventually got pulled from school when he started acting out. He tried to tell his parents years later.

His father refused to believe him. Warren was a third generation Cornwall kid. His father didn't want there to be a scandal and so there was no investigation. No one got fired. The abuse just went on and Warren eventually met someone else that was abused.

They came together to get justice. Warren met the other guy after he ran into Kimble as an adult. Kimble didn't recognize him in the slightest. He abused and broke that man and he didn't even remember him.

That's why Warren wanted revenge. He wasn't in on the plan to kill Kimble. He just wanted to ruin the man's life like he ruined theirs. Warren also wouldn't tell the feds who he was working with. It didn't matter that he was a killer. Warren felt he was justified. He wouldn't help the feds lock up a friend.

It was fine because the FBI figured out the men's MO. They'd always swat their abusers. The feds looked into staff members that have been swatted and they found Hank Bouchard. Scola and OA went to Bouchard's home.

They waited outside until he showed up. They were asking to talk to him and he agreed as long as it could be done inside. No sooner did he open his door that the killer shot Bouchard. The feds tried to apprehend their shooter and he was too quick for them. He had a car waiting for him in the alley behind Bouchard's house. He was gone before they knew it.

The feds got lucky. They were able to identify their killer. His name was Noah Thackery. He was Cornwall Class of '09. Thackery has already killed Kimble and Bouchard. His next target was assumed to be Cornwall itself.

The school was holding a fundraiser with its biggest donors. The feds feared a mass shooting and they tried to end the fundraiser and were ignored. The new Director didn't want to make a stink over a theory. He hadn't thought that Thackery would show up and he was wrong.

The new Director was one of the abusers. Scola figured that out when Thackery shot at the one guy. He wasn't interested in anyone else. He just wanted Colonel Lewis. The same man that Scola had believed in. The one that Scola thought would lead the school to greatness. In spite of his anger, Scola still had a job to do. He protected Lewis.

He did that because things were finally adding up for him. Scola thought the abuse happened after his time and he was wrong. He had a best friend at school. His best friend killed himself after becoming a parent. And now Scola knows why.

His friend had been one of their favorites. The shooter wasn't the bad guy here. Thackery tried going to the police and he was told it was too late. The window had closed. Thackery eventually gave himself up, but what he did will now help other victims to come forward. And Lewis will go down for his crimes.

Scola on the other hand will never be able to look at the school the same way again.

Production Code: FBI714
Summary: The team races against the clock to take back control of a hijacked train that an unarmed OA and Gemma are riding.

Someone ditched a body right in front of a church. The victim was identified as Darius Brogan. Brogan was a divorced father of three. He has a gambling problem. He maxed out nine credit cards and he owes his bookie over ten grand. The FBI assumed he was killed by that same bookie. They tracked down Maikel Kuriev. They found out he was selling fentanyl through his backroom. He was arrested only he wasn't their killer. The killer wasn't connected to Darius's gambling problem. He was grabbed because his killer wanted his ID.

Darius worked for Voyager. It was a train company. By time the feds realized that Darius was killed for his ID card, someone had already used it to get access to a train. It was unfortunately the same train that OA was on. It turns out FBI Special Agent Omar Adom Zidan couldn't even take a vacation anymore. The agent that was informally known as OA left town with his girlfriend, Gemma. The two have a rocky history. They were constantly fighting over OA's job. Gemma sometimes just wants a boyfriend. Not a cop. She and OA decided to take a vacation and naturally disaster followed them.

Their train got hijacked. OA didn't have his weapon. His girlfriend demanded that he leave it at home and that left them trapped on the train with no escape. Or a chance to get off. The men that hijacked the train had refused to let it stop at any of the planned stops. They wanted the authorities to know the train was hijacked. It was estimated that they took over two hundred people hostage. This included some of their own and so the feds took this one personally. They spoke with the men that hijacked the train.

The guy in charge claimed his name was Jamie. He demanded nearly three hundred million in monero. It was an untraceable cryptocurrency. Jamie said that they need the money for their families. They said they were doing a good thing. Only there was an issue on the train. There was this one guy who felt they could overpower the men with guns. He tried to talk OA into helping him. OA told him that the plan wouldn't work. He said too much could go wrong and the guy ignored him. He tackled one of the guys. OA didn't want him to get hurt and so he joined the fight.

Gemma tried to press the emergency brake during the confusion. It didn't work. She got shot accidentally and OA got tied up. OA didn't know it at the time only one of the passengers was in on it. She's the one that pulled a gun on OA. She's the one secretly in charge. Her name is Evelyn. She made sure that OA got tied up for his trouble. OA couldn't help Gemma. He couldn't get the hijackers to help Gemma. And so OA revealed his identity.

He revealed he was an FBI Agent. He told the hijackers that he could help them and that he will if they save Gemma. OA talked one of them into offering first aide. Gemma's life was saved, but Evelyn lied to her crew. The others didn't want anyone getting hurt. They thought they were getting the money to rebuild their town. The feds found out they were from a small town in Ohio. There was a train derailment. It was owned by a freight company. It was carrying harmful materials and it killed hundreds. It destroyed the town.

They tried filing a class action lawsuit. It just didn't go anywhere. CTX Logistics got to move on like nothing happened and that was too much for Evelyn. Evelyn's brother-in-law was killing all the people that work for the train. He also made sure that the train couldn't be stopped. Jubal contacted the man known as Jamie. He asked what was going on and that's when Jamie learned that Evelyn was lying to them. She never planned on stopping the train. She planned on turning it into a bomb. When her people confronted her, she killed one and locked herself in the control room.

The feds have eyes in that room. They saw Evelyn. They identified her as Evelyn Adams. She was a schoolteacher when the accident happen and her husband eventually died from cancer caused by the hazardous material. Now, Evelyn wants revenge. She doesn't carry who dies. She wants to run the train into CTX's headquarters. The company stored a lot of material at the site. Evelyn could kill thousands if her plan goes through and so OA used that to his advantage. The other hijackers didn't sign up for suicide mission. They didn't want to die. OA got them to peacefully surrender because he had a plan.

OA took their guns. He transported everyone into the next car. He made sure Gemma was safe. He then detached the cars so that Gemma was as far away from the potential explosion as possible. It was just OA and Evelyn left. OA confronted Evelyn. He was in communication with his people. They told him about Evelyn's husband. Her husband believed CTX when they said it was safe. He helped with the cleanup. Then he got cancer. It was brutal on him. He died in pain and CTX wouldn't even acknowledged the lawsuit.

Evelyn didn't care about her own life. When OA was trying to talk her down, she got overwhelmed. She shot herself and so it was just OA left. Evelyn killed herself in a room she locked from the inside. OA needed to get into that room. One fed mentioned using a electrical charge to force the door to open. It worked. OA got into the room. He pulled the emergency brake. The train stopped before they could reach CTX and a crisis was diverted.

OA later reunited with Gemma. She was moved to the hospital. It looks like she'll recover with no lasting issues and that didn't stop OA from blaming himself. He felt like he should have protected Gemma more.

Summary: A series of copycat killings forces Maggie to seek help from the serial slasher she put behind bars.

Maggie was in a new relationship. The FBI Special Agent didn't really date much. She was a widow. She kinda focused on work to grieve and it didn't leave much opportunities to meet someone. Not unless you count the crooks she arrests. Maggie finding the time to date now meant she was finally ready to move on.

She met a great guy. He didn't mind her unusual work hours. He didn't even get upset at the start of tonight when she was called in to work. The feds were brought in to investigate a murder and the body was dumped on federal land. And that made it a federal crime.

The victim was also a federal employee. Vanessa Walker was brought in to make cuts in various departments of the government. She fired over a thousand people in the last month and her killer cut her over a thousand times. She could have been killed by any one of those people, but the feds chief suspect was Mack Fuller.

Fuller's brother lost his job then he killed himself. Mack blamed Vanessa for his brother's death. He later told the feds that she put out a press release after his brother died and never tried to contact anyone or take responsibility for the part she played.

Mack stalked Vanessa. He showed up drunk frequently outside of her house. Neither she nor her husband ever paid much attention to him. Vanessa shouldn't even have been in New York when she died.

She left work a day early because she planned on surprising her husband for their anniversary. She never made it home and Mack later said he never saw her that night. He showed up at her house waiting for her. She never came home. He then decided to go to a nearby bar. He was seen getting into a bar fight the same time that Vanessa's killer was dumping her body.

Mack wasn't their killer. The feds had to go back to Vanessa's many enemies. They also received a letter from a different department in the building. Someone sent a note saying they were going to kill a bunch of women. They said they weren't going to stop with just one and so this could be a serial in the making.

The killer left a symbol on the back of the note. It was the sign for the goddess Athena also known as Minerva. The feds followed the clues and they found the second victim. It was another woman.

The second victim's name was Laura Flemming. She was actually killed first. She was killed two days before Vanessa and so the note that the killer sent to the DOJ could have saved Vanessa's life if the feds had taken it seriously. They instead sat on it until two women were dead. The killer likes playing games with the feds.

He leaves these notes because he wanted to test the feds and that's why the note stuffed in Laura's mouth would have led them to Vanessa if they had found Laura earlier. Jubal was frankly sick of the mind games.

He ordered his team to hunt this killer. They weren't going to wait for the next body or the next clue. They found out the killer was using butcher paper and they were able to connect it to a certain butcher. Someone was recently fired from the place.

His former bosses were waiting for him to clear out his locker and so the feds checked the locker for themselves. Wesley Cookler was seemingly a huge fan of serial slasher, Ray DiStefano. Maggie knew Ray well. She arrested him twice and he was now behind bars because of her.

Maggie didn't know how, but she figured Ray must be in contact with this new killer. The cuts out from newspaper made her believe this new guy was too much of a fan not to reach out.

Maggie went to prison to visit Ray. She questioned him. She also showed him photos of the crime. Ray actually got upset with the photos. He never killed his victims. He slashed them in such a way that they were scarred for life and that meant he was connected to them for the rest of their lives. He thought killing was beneath him. He wasn't helping their suspect. The guy was just a copycat.

The killer slashed his victims the same way Ray slashed his first victim. The one that made Ray a star. Ray bragged about that to Maggie. He said every woman looked behind her shoulder after the first one and the new guy wanted to imitate that. Their suspect could be recognized by his two different color eyes.

The feds also realized how he was picking his victims. He became a cab driver after he was fired from the butcher shop. He was picking up women by themselves that have just gotten into town.

The feds had a chance to catch him when he picked up his third victim. They were unfortunately too late. He managed to get away with Melody Walton. Only he saw Maggie before he escaped with the girl. Maggie was a huge part of Ray's story. She was the one that captured Ray twice and so he was bound to reach out to her.

It turns out Wesley Cookler wasn't even his real name. He chose Wesley because that's where Ray took his victims first — to an abandoned place on Wesley street. The feds went to the location. Their suspect wasn't there and neither was his victim.

Cookler whose real name is Darryl Ricklan had watched the feds search the abandon place. He had set up cameras to watch the feds. He called Maggie. He taunted her.

He showed her where he was hiding with Melody and he said he'd be long gone by time they find her body. Darryl didn't want to be like Ray. He wanted to be better than Ray. He wanted to be more famous than Ray was. Its why he lured Maggie to that second location because he wanted to kill her. And Scola put him down before that could happen.

Maggie only got Ray to assist them by promising furlough to visit his dying father, but she made that deal after the father died and so Ray didn't like being planned. He threatened to find her the second he gets out.

Summary:	When an undercover FBI agent is killed in the field, the team makes the unnerving discovery that the identities of multiple undercover agents have been compromised, including Maggie who has been actively working to infiltrate an eco-terrorist group. Meanwhile, the team enlists the help of Special Agent Dani Rhodes, whose cover was also blown, to not only save their own but to aid in uncovering who was behind the leak.

Unfortunately, a list was made public. The list was of undercover federal agents. It listed their real names as well as their pictures. FBI Special Agent Gavin Rice was on that list. He was undercover in the Irish mob.

He's been undercover before and he knew when to leave if anyone suspected him. He never sent out the call for help. He never even suspected the man that would later kill him.

He was killed by Denis Brady on what he thought was a routine stop. They were supposed to be following up on a protection racket. Brady killed him when he couldn't get Gavin to break the law with him. He would later say that Gavin was mocking them by pretending to be one of them.

Men and their pride!

Gavin was undercover with the Sullivan Organized Crime Group. They were run by Sean Sullivan. Sullivan was already on a flight back to Ireland when he gave the go ahead to kill Gavin. While the feds missed out on Sullivan, they still arrested his crew. They also captured Brady. Brady was on video killing a federal agent.

He would've normally been sentenced to life in prison if not the death penalty and so he made a deal for himself. He wanted a prison of his choice. He also wanted visits from his wife. He got to demand all of that because he knew about the list.

Brady told the feds after his arrest that Sullivan bought Gavin's details. Brady gave the feds the man who sold the information. His name is Curtis Swann. The feds set up a fake buy with Curtis.

They found out that he had photos with the people's whole file on the back of it. He was putting people at risk. Gavin was killed because of him. There's no telling who else was in danger because Curtis quickly lawyered up. Jubal had his people follow up with everyone that Curtis outted. They determine that the list was comprised by real information taken from their office.

The files were internal use only files. There must be a leak within the FBI. Whoever it was that sold the information to Curtis must be working for the FBI. He gave Curtis the information.

Curtis then sold the information to any gang looking to see if there's a rat within their ranks and so the FBI called in every undercover agent at risk. Which upset Special Agent Dani Rhodes. She was investigating gun smugglers. She also knew that if she was called in its because there's a bigger situation than her case.

Dani demanded to be put on this new case. Isobel needed someone from the outside to question the suspects. She let that be Dani. Dani questioned everyone they suspected of leaking the file. The FBI Agents were all cleared. Dylan McKelvie however wasn't an agent. He was an IT guy.

He comes in every six months to patch up any leaks and something changed with this last visit. He must have realized he was sitting on a goldmine. Curtis made millions. If a mere fraction of that goes to McKelvie, he could live out his life comfortably in a non-extradition country.

The feds look into where McKelvie was trying to convert his cash into diamonds. They found him. He tried to run only he didn't make it that far. McKelvie was arrested.

He revealed he didn't do it for the money. He said he was disgusted with federal overreach. He was also diagnosed with ALS and the unsaid part was that he wanted to enjoy the rest of his life in style. McKelvie also said there was an eighth person in the files he stole.

He got Maggie's file. She was undercover with some ecoterrorists. McKelvie admitted he stole Maggie's file with the seven others and that Curtis didn't have it because he couldn't get into contact with the people she was spying on. Only McKelvie didn't give up or just made do with seven. He actively searched for the ecoterrorists.

He made sure that they got the file even if they didn't have to pay for it. He hated the FBI that much. Maggie didn't know about the leak and she was caught unaware when the ecoterrorists turned against her. They left her in a van they set on fire.

Maggie was thankfully rescued by OA before she could be harmed. She told her friends that the group has a bomb. They wanted to target an oil pipeline initially.

They might have charged targets after Maggie was outted and she knew who the leader was. The leader was Josie DiArmes. She was the daughter of Grant DiArmes. He was a huge oil tycoon. His daughter was using his money to fund the environmental movement. Josie also wanted to do things the right way. She didn't want anyone harmed. And some of her people disagreed with her leadership.

They left Josie to be captured while they took the bomb to an oil tanker in Greenpoint. They could potentially kill thousands with their bomb and their use of it at that location. Josie didn't want that to happen.

Neither did Maggie. Maggie and Josie bonded over the past few weeks. Maggie was the one person that didn't always question everything Josie did. Josie didn't want anyone hurt and so she told Maggie everything she knew about the other location. The one her own people kept pushing her to attack.

The FBI brought a full army to the Greenpoint location. They evacuated as many people as they could. They went looking for the bomb and unfortunately it couldn't be stopped once it was activated.

They had to focus on making sure it wasn't activated. Maggie later killed the man with the detonator. She also arrested all the others she could find. They told her that the movement couldn't be stopped, but it will be hard without Josie's money.

And Dani made a good impression on Isobel. Isobel was looking for a field agent and it could be Dani.

Summary: When a famous rapper and two teen fans are gunned down on his tour bus, the team discovers there may be more to the story than his feud with another rapper; Isobel hits a major milestone that has her contemplating her future at the Bureau

Someone targeted a rapper's tour bus. The rapper's name is Turnkot. He was onboard along with his entourage and a couple of girls they picked up that night. The shooter got the bus to stop by blocking the street. He knew the bus wouldn't plow through. He deliberately forced them to stop and then he shot his way onto the bus. He killed seven people. This included the girls that couldn't be older than sixteen. Turnkot liked them young. He might have gotten in trouble for that once before and so the feds looked into it.

Yes, the feds. The local cops pointed out that Turnkot made a lot of anti-cop songs. They couldn't be seen as bias and so they were happy to hand this one over to the feds. The feds quickly found out that Turnkot was known for his interest in young girls. His chief rival even made a song about it. Turnkot and Tariq Ward have been feuding for almost a year. They started out from rival gangs. They've since made diss tracks about the other. Tariq has threatened to kill him and so naturally he was their best suspect.

The feds went to go speak to Tariq. He was in a crowd at that time. He played up being big and bad until he pushed Scola. He couldn't put his hands on a federal agent. He got arrested. Then the real Tariq came out. He was a different person away from the cameras. He was also a lot more honest. He admitted the whole feud was fake. They were barely making money because the labels were taking too much, but a feud brought them additional attention and now Turnkot was Tariq's cash cow. He wouldn't kill him because he knew he'd go back to making crap pay.

Tariq even implied that he felt bad for Turnkot because his manager was cheating him. Jeff Mills was known for being shady. He mentioned checking the fuel lines earlier at the scene and that was suspicious because the tour bus was electric. The feds went back to the bus. They checked. It was electric. The "fuel lines" was really empty compartments used to transport drugs. Mills was using his artist to transport drugs all around the country. It was pink cocaine. It wasn't actually cocaine. It was a mix of several drugs that made it more potent than cocaine.

Mills talked to save himself. He ended up opening a can of worms. He told the feds that the Solanos were running the drugs. They started out as part-time and have quickly taken over the scene. There was literally an open file on them. The feds were already investigating them. They just didn't know how they were transporting the drugs. The feds also knew that any gang in the tristate area might have hit the tour bus hoping to kick off a drug war and so the tour bus might not be the end of it. New York City could run red if the feds didn't put a stop to it.

The feds began looking into who was making moves. Their contacts on the street were saying the Grippo family were behind it. Jack Grippo was the head of his own gang. The feds investigated him for years before they found enough evidence to arrest him. Just as they were about to move in, he fled the country. He went to Cuba in 2009. It remained non-extradition country. He's now been away for sixteen years. The feds thought his gang would falter without him and they were wrong. Jack was still running things. He simply had his son be his man on the ground.

Sonny Grippo has also been investigated for a couple of years now. Again, the feds couldn't find anything to stick. They questioned Sonny about the tour bus shooting and his sister stopped him from talking. She was also his lawyer. Billie legally changed her last name to distance herself from her father's memory. Her father's business has cost her loved ones. Her mom was a casualty herself. Billie hates her father. She wanted her brother away from him and unfortunately she couldn't protect him from himself.

Sonny knew he was being watched. He led the feds to a decoy in the south while his father came into the country from the north. In spite of that, they still didn't have enough to arrest Sonny. He and his father were in communication the old school way. They were writing to each other in drafts in Sonny's email. Jack has been on the Wanted List for almost twenty years. He was smart. He was also going to drag Sonny into this even further and that was enough to convince Billie. Billie agreed to wear a wire when she spoke with her brother.

Billie got him to confess where their dad was. He then noticed her new necklace. Billie usually wore her mother's pearls and so he asked her about it. She tried to downplay it. He became suspicious. He grabbed the necklace and he saw that it was a wire. He then attacked his sister. He was going to kill her or so she claimed. She killed him to protect herself. She grabbed a letter opener from the desk. She stabbed him in the neck. He died with the feds right outside. Billie did this for Sonny and he died. And so the feds told her to make his death matter.

They got the address from her on where her dad was hiding. He was in a bar that he used as a front. The agents went there and somehow Jack got the jump on Scola. He picked up a few things in Cuba. He was about to escape with his hostage when Scola said Sonny helped them find him. He said "Tom's place". Jack then laughed because the bar wasn't Tom's. Tom's was a bowling alley. The feds eventually found Jack and killed him, but Scola started to doubt Billie's story. He looked into it and it turns out that Sonny never tried to kill his sister. She just made it look that way.

Billie took out her father as well as her brother in order to place herself as the new leader. She even brokered a deal with the Solanos that made the Grippo family stronger than ever. And there's nothing the feds could do about it.

Isobel was considering retirement before all this and now she was staying on in the hopes of taking down Billie Grippo.

Summary: After two women are brutally murdered via napalm, Maggie and OA are led to a dating site where they discover a group of scorned users who are targeting women who reject them.

Somone was setting women on fire. It was up to the FBI to find, identify, and arrest that someone. Especially as he seemed to be killing only women. It was a hate crime. The killer also doused his victims with napalm before throwing a match on them. The napalm wasn't something he could pick up at the store. He had to have created his own version of this stuff and so nothing about this was unplanned. The killer first attacked Aisha Malik. She was the daughter of Pakistani immigrants. She was pretty traditional for a while until she decided to change.

Aisha has slowly become more progressive lately. So much so that she went without her hijab. She joined the party scene and she posted photos of that on social media. Her accounts there have been blowing up ever since. She gained a lot of fans. She also upset a lot of Muslims. The feds first suspected this to be a case of an honor killing. Her brother went to Pakistan for a wedding last year. He was photographed with a gun. It was feared he became radicalized over there. He was interrogated and he also punched an Interpol officer in the face.

There was no credible evidence found against Ahmed. He was released. He returned to the States and he recently got into a fight with his sister. He later claimed that he would never hurt his sister or kill her. He said they fought because he hated the fact she was on that dating app called "SCORCH". He thought it was dangerous. He uninstalled the app from his sister's phone. He said that whoever killed her was probably on that app. The worst thing about that was he was right. Dating in the modern age has gotten more dangerous. Not less.

The feds would reinstall the app because they got an audio of the attack on Aisha. The audio was of someone that knew Aisha. Her killer called by her name and said she'd "reap what she sowed". FBI checked out SCORCH. It was supposed to be a safe dating app. The women got to score the men. They scored them on several different fronts and too many bad reviews tank their overall ranting. It could happen to the point that they are no longer allowed on the app. Aisha must have thought it was safe because she joined the app and she started talking to someone named Patrick Hammond.

Patrick was handsome. He seemed to be kind and overly confident. He was in communication with Aisha all the way up to when Ahmed messed up his sister's phone. Aisha didn't respond to Patrick's messages anymore. Which he then took as rejection. He started messaging horrible things to her. He accused her of stringing him along. He threatened her and so the feds found Patrick Hammond. The real Patrick was gay. He would never try to date a woman. He wasn't on that app and that meant someone was catfishing women with photos of Patrick.

The feds found out that the guy bought a gift cards to tie into the app. They had photos of the man that bought that card. It wasn't Patrick. It was Austin Wending. Austin used to work at the gym that Patrick manages. Patrick also had to fire him after he started perverting on the women clients. Patrick tried to warn Austin to stop it. He told him that the women were complaining and not coming back. It was Austin that escalated the argument because he just lost it on Patrick. He was calling him all these names and yelling at him that Patrick had no other choice. He fired him. And banned him from the gym.

The FBI looked into Austin. He tried going on SCORCH as himself. He went on a few dates. His ranking dropped so low that he left the app and became an incel. He then joined Black Pill once he left the app. Black Pill was a site for notoriously incels. They blame women for keeping them being lonely. They said they were dealing with genetic shortcomings. They also believed that women were too "full of themselves" nowadays because they wouldn't stick around for an angry and aggressive anymore.

The feds got a warrant for Patrick's home. They searched it. He had security cameras up. He saw them and he tried to delete his computer data remotely only Maggie stopped him. Maggie smashed his computer. He couldn't delete it if it was broken. The analysts were looking into it when someone pretended to be Patrick to score another date. Sadly, the feds were unable to stop Austin from killing a second woman named Brenda Clark but they wanted to stop him from killing Sierra Macy. They found out he was meeting up with her at Central Park.

They got there. They found Sierra. They kept her safe until they spotted their suspect. They pursued him and Scola killed him. He had the homemade napalm on him. He was wearing the same get up as the person that murdered both Aisha and Brenda. He just wasn't Austin. Austin had partners. The guy that the feds killed was Geoff Slochmb. He also tried SCORCH until he was downvoted so many times that no one would match with him. He went after Sierra because she had been one of those women to do so.

It didn't make sense at first because the voting was supposed to be anonymous. How did Austin and Geoff figure out who downvoted them? It only made sense if they had a man on the inside. There was an engineer on that app called Cody Juarez. He was another incel like the guys. He felt they were treated unfairly. They believed women were rejecting them because they were selfish or cared too much about looks. They failed to remember that these women tried to give them a chance. It's why they matched with them in the first place. It's no one's fault that the men fumbled that opportunity.

Yet, they were now hunting down the women that have rejected them. The feds arrested Cody. He was proud of his friends when he found out what they were doing. He thought more people should join the cause and he refused to help the feds take Austin down. Geoff was dead. Austin was on a killing spree. Cody didn't care about any of that. The feds also realized Austin's next victim. He was going after Aimee Fenway. She created the app. She designed it to give women more power and the incels hated that.

Austin later tried to kill Aimee on a live feed at Hudson University. The feds came firing in. Austin was killed and his corpse was left smoking from his homemade napalm. The last thing he heard was Maggie telling him he "reaps what he sows". Maggie hasn't really dated since her husband died, but she met a nice man and she was willing to try again in spite of everything she saw on the job. And that was bravery.

Summary: After a young girl goes missing in Queens, the team discovers the kidnapppers used her as leverage to carry out a major explosives heist, sending them on a hunt for the dangerous culprits. Meanwhile, Scola and Dani begin working on their footing as partners.

Rose Carvalho disappeared from the museum. She was eight. She had gone out with her father. He was worried about placing a bet and so he took a call without realizing it wasn't his friend. It was someone diverting his attention. They did that as his daughter was lured away.

Not that her father figured that out. He just thought the call was a mistake. He went looking for his kid. Rose's hat was found at the scene. She disappeared too fast for it to be an accident and he knew right away that she had been grabbed, but he thought it was his ex that was responsible.

Elsbeth Carvalho was Rose's mother. She was also an addict. Her drug of choice was fentanyl. She got so high last year that she let their house burn down and that's when her husband had enough. He kicked her out. Filed for divorce. He also got full custody and a restraining order to go with it.

Elsbeth was allowed to see her daughter once a year as long as she was clean. She sadly was not clean. She was also breaking the restraining order by stalking their kid. She showed up outside of Rose's school the other day.

The teachers spotted her. They chased her away. The feds looked into the incident. They saw that Elsbeth was taking photos of Rose and they hoped it was for sentimental reasons.

They tracked down Elsbeth. She was overdosing. They had to revive her with naran. She eventually came to just to be asked where her daughter was? She didn't know what happened. She didn't know Rose was taken. The feds ruled her out and they looked her into ex-husband. He was placing a bet at the time his daughter was taken.

Only he never made it home after the incident. Mr. Carvalho got grabbed himself. He was thrown into the back of a van and the men that grabbed him had a gun pointed at his daughter's head.

They forced him to help them. They needed him to get passed the biometric security at the company where he worked. The feds followed another lead to that company. They found three armed men in masks stealing and they tried to intervene. They shot one guy before they managed to escape into their van. The feds then found Mr. Carvalho and Rose.

Both were alive. Both were safe. The dad told them the whole story. He also told them that this had nothing to do with his bet. He didn't know those guys.

He said they might be foreign because one guy had a French accent. They asked him what those men stole and it was C4. They stole a few bricks of the stuff. It could be used to make a bomb only it wasn't enough to cause a terrorist attack. Not unless he was used in combination with something else. The feds quickly identified their suspects as military or former military.

They were trained. They also picked up their friend that got shot. Scola though it was a no man left behind thing. He turned out to be wrong because they later found a torso.

The hands, legs, and head were cut off. They also burned the body. There was no way that guy was a friend if they were willing to do that to him. They thankfully missed something because they hadn't known him too well. He had a pacemaker and that allowed the feds to identify him. His name was Curtis Knight. He was an American. He was former green beret turned mercenary.

His pacemaker also can also be tracked via an app. They got Knight's movements. They found where his partner were hiding and even found one of the remaining two, but he was exposed to something.

He was dying. The feds had to flee because the scene was a biohazard. Maggie and OA had to be checked by the local branch of the CDC. They were eventually cleared. Maggie also said this was why she had to give up Ella. The job was too dangerous. She couldn't risk Ella losing another mother to the FBI.

The man they found dying was identified as Tevian Michelle. He was former French Special Forces. He has a PHD in biology and it was him cooking up the anthrax. There was something funny about that anthrax. It did the damage of a week's exposure in one day. It was a different breed.

The feds tracked it back to Syria. After the government fell there, there was some confusion in the chaos. It gave the unscrupulous few an opportunity to access the bioweapons and there were quite a few weapons there.

Either Michelle or his partners visited Syria to steal the weapons. Michelle had two known associates. Knight and another man by the name of Vaughn Pulver. Pulver was former Irish Forces. He was now known as a trafficker. He sells everything from drugs to weapons. He was selling what they created

. This new brand of anthrax that they had combined with the C4 was to create a dirty bomb. The feds caught up to Pulver. It was too late by then because he already made the drop. He literally saw it killing Michelle and he still sold it.

The new girl almost made a mistake in arresting Pulver. She didn't want to wait for the drop or in their case the suspected drop. Scola told her to stand back and she claimed that Pulver made her. Which gave her the excuse she needed to arrest him. She nearly compromised everything. The one thing that saved her was again the drop had already been made. Pulver gave the bomb to the buyer. He was willing to make a deal in exchange for getting out of the city. He didn't want to be around when that bomb went off. He eventually gave them the buyer's name.

Their potential bomber was Ahmet Meydan. He was a Turkish National living in the Maldives. He made a video railing against the capitalist American machine. He was angry and he has nothing to lose. He was dying of cancer. His son was a stockbroker. He worked at this big company. The company had a major scandal and they let Meydan's son be the fall guy. He didn't want to get arrested or bring shame to his family. He killed himself. And his father was now avenging him by targeting Wall Street.

He wanted to destroy the economic center of the United States. Or as he said when he was caught, the center of greed. He believed that greed killed his son. He believed the greed was killing him as well. He built a port in the Maldives for the Americans and he felt it destroyed the island. He figured he probably got cancer from that too. He was caught after he ditched the bomb and he didn't want to help them find it. Not at first. It wasn't until Isobel played back his video to him that he realized she was right with her accusations.

He was no longer the man that his son loved. He gave up the location. There was no way of stopping the bomb and so they removed the anthrax. The bomb still went off only it was a small explosion with just the little amount of C4.

Maggie and OA saved the day, but Scola was worried about Dani. He didn't think she was as fit as she was claiming to be.

Summary: When a CEO is killed by a targeted explosion inside his penthouse, the team must work to figure out how someone accessed the highly secure building. Their task is further complicated when they discover the crime may be the work of an artificial intelligence program. Meanwhile, Maggie pumps the brakes on her personal life.

Someone blew up a billionaire's apartment. The bomb killed three. Father, mother, and nanny all died in the explosion. The eleven year old son was the sole survivor.

His name is Taylor. He was on a different floor. It was the only reason he survived and unfortunately he was left catatonic when he saw the bodies. He was checked into the hospital when this case was given to the feds. This normally would have been a local thing. NYPD were actually pretty upset that the feds were taking over. It smelled like preferential treatment for the rich.

Which it was. The FBI adopted a policy to handle these cases after that healthcare CEO was killed. They now handle high-profile murders and that's what Peter Minskoff was.

He ran a fifty billion dollar company. His wife was a socialite. The poor nanny was just doing a job and she got killed for it. There was no mention of the nanny by the way in the media. It was just about the Minskoffs. The feds wanted the media to believe that it was a simply a gas leak. The truth is someone bombed that apartment and there was a note that could explain why.

Serena Minskoff found a note that said "we can get to you anywhere". The man that left the note was Dejan Petrovic. Peter was building a new factory in that man's backyard and the union wanted their due. Petrovic was hoping to pressure Peter with the note. Peter was a known union-buster.

He didn't want to pay people a living wage and he was making things hard for everyone, but Petrovic didn't kill him. He snuck into the man's ritzy building. He left the threatening note and that was it. The oven that they thought was tampered with wasn't in fact the cause of the explosion.

It also had a computer in it. It recorded the moment of the explosion. It didn't come from the oven. It came from a drone strike and it wasn't the only one.

Just as the feds realized what they were dealing with, another penthouse was bombed. It was official. They had their first two cases of a drone strike on US Soil. The United States was therefore under attack. The victim of the second bombing was Edward Archer. He was another billionaire CEO. These men were killed with military grade weapons.

It was identified as a Buschcraft 200. There were a few earmarked for the war in the Ukraine. It never made it because it went missing on transit in Canada.

It uses facial recognition to target someone and these things were so high tech that they could be traced. It was online for two minutes in Queens before the tracker was disabled. It was enough to give the feds a location. They eventually found a warehouse with two men inside. One was waterboarding the other. The torturer was Thomas Banks. He worked for Edward.

Banks was Edward's bodyguard. He was former British Special Forces before that. He knew that he had everything covered and the one thing he couldn't count on was a drone strike.

Banks was willing to share his information because he was looking at some serious charges. Edward was in town for a secret meeting. He was about to take part in the purchase of a large company. The AI companies were banding together and there was one other CEO involved in the deal. And there was one drone still missing.

Isobel had no choice. She had to ask Scott Collins to come to 26 Fed. He was the last CEO standing. He was a part of the deal. He was the only one left that could tell them who might have known about it and wanted to stop it. Scott showed up with the members of the board at his company. They were told about the threat.

The lawyers quickly identified a suspect. They believed that Perry Hinton was behind this. Perry built the company with Scott. They worked for years out of a garage. They survived a fire as well as poverty together.

They made it big. Only Perry wanted to remain idealistic. He wanted to use the AI to help the world. Scott thought differently because he knew they had to answer to a board now.

Perry was eventually pushed out of the company by said board when he wrote them a letter. Peter was also now dead. He's been dead for three days. He left behind a manifesto video. His video mentioned that he used the AI they created to come up with a plan. Cyclone the AI allegedly helped him figure out how to stop the deal.

It even helped Perry steal the drones. The feds thought that Perry overhauled the AI to do his bidding right before he killed himself. They were wrong because the manifesto was a deepfake.

Perry did kill himself and that broke Scott. They were best friends. Scott thought he could work with the board to change their minds. He stopped thinking that after his best friend killed himself. He knew Perry had been right and so he was going to finish what Perry started. He used the AI in a way that everyone could see its danger if proper safeguards weren't put in place.

The feds realized Scott was behind this too late. He already weaponized the drone. He smashed up the board he used to do it and so there was no stopping it. Scott didn't intend to kill the board.

He just wanted them to realize the danger. That was why he weaponized the AI. The AI itself was unhackable. Scott and Perry made it that way. There was no stopping it. There was also one board member that didn't care about the lives lost. He just wanted to weaponize the AI and potentially sell it to governments around the world.

Scott send the drone after that man's daughter. His only child. Her name is Ashley. Maggie and OA got to Ashley. They put her in the car. The drone was smart enough to track them and so they had to ditch the vehicle.

They ran off into a warehouse where they could hide in reinforced the basement. It worked during WWII. Maggie got thrown by the blast, but it luckily didn't kill her. The AI was out of drones after that and people were safe or as safe as they can before someone else manipulates the technology to their advantage. And that's why Perry wanted the safeguards in the first place.

It was all for nothing anyways because the board was going through with the deal. They didn't care about the risks. They were tracing profit and they can make more now that Scott was facing a life sentence.

It didn't matter that Maggie almost died or that she was so shaken that her friends stayed by her side to help her feel safe.

Summary: When two IRS special agents are stabbed to death in Brooklyn, the team is thrown into an investigation that leads back to the resurgence of the online conspiracy community of Duke Ducoyle, their suspect from a previous case.

There were two IRS Agents that were brutally stabbed to death in New York City. It happened at a restaurant. The agents were there because they were part of the Criminal Investigation Division and they were auditing that restaurant for under-reporting their earnings.

The latter happens a lot in the city. The restaurants try to save money when they do this, but no one counted on a murder. The owners of the restaurant swore they had nothing to do with this. They didn't know about the audit. There was no forewarning. The killer also seemed to have planned this down to a tee.

The IRS Agents had lunch at the restaurant before they put on the jackets. The ones that said IRS on it. They wanted to see for themselves if the restaurant was doing great and it was. One of them even fell in love with food. He said it was better than his Italian grandmother's.

It was only once they ate that they put the jackets on and identify themselves to the owners. Their killer knew exactly who they were before they were identified. They made sure to follow the duo to the restaurant. They went in with a blade. They took off without it.

The FBI was given this case. The victims were federal agents. This could be about a move against the government. They soon found the murder weapon in a dumpster nearby.

There was a maker's mark on it. It was created by Ivar Asghari. He was a bladesmith in Brooklyn. He has a long rap sheet. He mostly makes anti-governments posts on social media and so the agents went to his store knowing he might be trouble. They were fully prepared to take apart his store if he didn't tell them who he sold the blade to.

Asghari was tougher online. He gave them the receipt along with a name. The buyer was Sandra Longo. She didn't have a record. She had a steady job. She was about to be promoted to manager.

It didn't make sense that she'd be involved and she was involved. When they went to question her, the agents noticed that she had a motorcycle helmet that matched that of the killer's. Sandra also tried to run when they asked her about the helmet. She was their killer. It wasn't a man at all. She also parroted a well-known line with the FBI after her arrest.

Sandra said "I Do Not Recognize Your Authority". The FBI knew those words well because they heard it countless times whenever they arrested a Calvin follower. They call themselves Calvinites.

They believed any and every conspiracy theory. They were so radicalized that they were willing to commit acts of violence if not outright terrorism. Only the FBI thought they put an end to "Calvin". He was really Duke Ducoyle. He'd ramp up his base to claim he needed donations to continue the fight. He was currently out on bail for instigating violence.

Everyone figured that Duke wouldn't be dumb enough to risk bail until they checked Calvin's site. Calvin was posting again and he did so just the day before the murder. The feds went to go talk to Duke. Duke didn't want to help them. They ended up helping him. They found a finger in ice on his coffee table.

Duke was forced to explain or risk getting arrested again. The finger wasn't his. It was his wife's, Trishelle. Trishelle went to hot yoga like she always does. She just never came home. He got a call from her phone and it was some man on the other end.

The guy demanded access to the Calvin account. He also dropped off Trishelle's finger to show he was serious. Now, Duke could have gone to the cops or the feds. He didn't. He didn't want to be seen talking to them. He also didn't want them to confirm that he was indeed Calvin right up until his wife was abducted.

Duke was so worried about her that he did the unthinkable. He worked with the feds. He helped them talk to Sandra. Sandra followed Duke because she thought he was a true believer like she was in Calvin.

Duke got her to admit that she was personally contacted by Calvin himself. He messaged her on a new app. The feds used that to track the location of this new Calvin. They tracked it back to a closed butcher's. They found and believed they rescued Trishelle. Their suspect unfortunately got away.

Although, it wasn't long before they identified him. Trishelle admitted openly that she believed in the mission. She said that Calvin was doing great work and that her husband used to believe in him too. She wasn't getting that he was the real Calvin.

There was no mission. No deep state. Duke made it all up to con people out of money. He did so through donations and a podcast in which he claimed to decipher Calvin's messages.

It's all a con. Duke never even suspected that he radicalized his own wife. She happily gave over her finger because Calvin contacted her. He told her that it was up to them to free the Greenwich 41. There were forty-one people arrested for taking part in the Greenwich riots and the person behind the new Calvin account was in fact Robb Whitfield.

Sure, he was a conspiracy theorist himself. It's just not why he went after one IRS Agent in particular. The agent was Whitfield's neighbor and not only did he hate him but he also wanted to free his younger brother from prison. Chris Whitfield was naturally one of the Greenwich 41. He attacked a cop with a pipe during a riot.

He was facing serious jail time. His brother didn't want him going away and so he intentionally set about murdering his neighbor to prove to the feds that he means business.

Whitfield posted a video as Calvin calling a call to arms. He tried to get the Calvinites to kill off the AUSA Prosecutors in his brother's case. The feds were able to foil that plot and so Whitfield tried again. He posted a Calvin-coded message that the feds couldn't crack. They weren't sure they had enough time. They went back to Duke.

Duke no longer cared about getting justice for his wife. He outright said he was less invested in that now than he was before. The only means by which they could get him to talk was by dropping all the charges against him connected to the Greenwich 41.

Which was essentially their whole case against him. Isobel didn't want to do it. She was forced into doing so because her boss the Assistant Director was calling the shots. Duke got his deal.

He then decoded the message. He said it was calling for former military to storm the prison. Break out the prisoners that were the Greenwich 41. They went to the prison where Chris was being held. The riot out front was a ploy. Chris was supposed to get hurt so that an ambulance was called in. It was his brother dressed as an EMT.

The feds stopped the ambulance. Chris's injuries were a lot worse than they thought. He actually died from the stab wounds. His brother blamed himself. Chris didn't even want to go the Greenwich riot. His big brother convinced him to join and then he ran off after the police showed. He got away.

Chris didn't. Now Chris is dead because of Whitfield's plan. He was so torn up that he admitted to literally everything he did. He gave them access to the Calvin accounts.

The feds also found evidence in those accounts to show that Duke set his followers on Isobel. He stalked a federal agent and that wasn't covered in his deal. It was in fact a felony. And so right as he was being arrested again, Duke swore that things were about to get even uglier.
