Thorfinn reveals that he placed a Norse curse on the mansion to prevent a B&B from ever being opened; and he claims the curse, which may or may not have been real, has caused every misfortune over the past season, including Sam's accident that gave her the ability to see the ghosts. Meanwhile, Isaac sets out to tell Nigel that he likes him but is heartbroken when Jenkins, a subordinate, informs him that Nigel has ascended into the afterlife. Nigel later confronts Isaac, believing he was having an affair with Thorfinn, and the Revolutionary-era ghosts clear up their confusion and admit that they like each other.

Sam and Jay welcome their first guests since the floor incident, which earned their B&B a one-star review on Yelp, but the ghosts become suspicious of the new guests' overly friendly demeanor. When the Arondekars discover the guests' reputation for writing harshly negative reviews, they spy on them for Sam against Jay's wishes, and she struggles to act on the ghosts' multitude of suggestions to appease the visiting couple. Taking offense to this wife and cooking being insulted, Jay stands up for Sam, who tells the guests what they know about their Yelp activity, which they mistakenly thought was anonymous and ultimately earns the B&B a five-star review.

Meanwhile, Nigel confides to Isaac how he feels about Thorfinn energetically disrupting their TV time, and when Isaac asks Thor to be more quiet, the viking brokenheartedly leaves for the cholera pit. That evening, he apologizes to Thor, who turns out to share Nigel's love of watching ants.

To gather more information, she invites Alberta's obsessive fan Todd back to the mansion despite Jay and the ghosts' warnings, and he comes across Alberta's secret diary. This prompts the singer to open up about how she felt discriminated against because of her size; to this end, she ratted out Clara Brown, a rival singer, for bootlegging alcohol so she could earn a gig on stage.

Sasappis recognizes Clara's name and recalls how she was present in the mansion at one time, making her a suspect

Summary: Sam becomes alarmed when the ghosts suggest Jay's new friends may be part of a cult run by a charismatic leader named Micah; Pete changes his attitude after Sasappis criticizes his unceasing cheerfulness.

A small cult claiming to be a business group visits the manor, and their charismatic leader Micah deceives Jay into joining them, delighting Flower but concerning Sam and the other ghosts. While Sam gradually convinces Jay of the truth, Flower opens up to Alberta about how she chose to join a hippie commune instead of supporting her brother Rob, who went M.I.A. during his service in the Vietnam War.

The cultists refuse to leave when asked because, as Jay realizes, the contract he had signed gave them permission to stay on the land indefinitely.

At Flower's suggestion, Sam lies about being intimate with Micah, who has falsely convinced his followers that he is centuries old and that he can make them live forever, to stir up a conflict and drive them out of the mansion. Meanwhile, Sassapis, tired of rooming with Pete, asks the scout leader to be less overly cheerful, and he feigns adopting a more dour and cynical personality.

During a sunset, Pete tells Sass that his optimistic attitude regarding eternity comes from cherishing special moments that happen along the way, which he points out when Sam shows Flower that she wrote an email as a pretend commune member to Rob, who is still alive and wrote back a heartwarming message about his sister.

Sam and Jay's new neighbors, June and Allie, want to cut down an old tree that means a lot to Sass. Sass has Sam tell the neighbors that the tree has a special significance to the Lenape people who lived on the land, noting the thirteen marks on the tree that he claims represent the Lenape language's dialects. This makes Sam want to write an op-ed in the local paper to get people's attention. While she is writing the op-ed, she has Jay sit in the tree so it won't be cut down while she is writing it. Sass confesses to the other ghosts that the tree has no special significance to his culture, and the thirteen marks are for every time Shiki said hello to him.

As protesters arrive at the tree, Bob, who represents the Hudson Valley Lenape Culture Center, arrives and tells Sam that she is incorrect about her Lenape information, and Sass tells her the truth. The tree is cut down, and June and Allie give Sam seeds from the old tree to grow new ones.

Jay hosts a last minute Halloween party after the Arondekars' new neighbors, June and Allie, say they want to go to Liam Neeson's party. To liven up their dull party, the ghosts tell Sam to do a séance with their guests. They bring back Molly, Hetty's maid and her husband's mistress, from the afterlife.

While the guests leave, Sam tricks Hetty and Molly into entering the ghost-proof vault so they can resolve their old tensions.

One man passes through Isaac and smells him, but Isaac tells Nigel that Pete is the source of the stench. Flower forgets Sam is in there and shuts the door, trapping her.

Realizing a feather duster that Allie borrowed for her maid costume is the key ingredient that brought back Molly, Jay hurries to Liam Neeson's house and retrieves the duster.

Back in the manor, Jay fogs up a mirror so Trevor can write where Sam is but misinterprets Trevor's incomplete message. Isaac reluctantly passes through Jay, using his stench as a signal to read the full message so Jay can rescue Sam, and Nigel appreciates his honesty.

Jennifer follows safety precautions needed to remove the arrow that she learned from Pete, reminding him that he was a good leader after all.

The ghosts look over what Sam purchased at the grocery. Trevor refuses to make a dirty joke about Sam purchasing melons. Hetty chastises him for not making lewd jokes because it will make everyone be suspicious about them hooking up.

Summary: A young woman comes to Woodstone to learn more about her great-grand-aunt: Alberta; she and Alberta learn something during Sam and Todd's newest podcast.

Alicia, a lawyer and a descendant of Alberta's younger sister Theresa, books a stay at the mansion to participate in Sam's podcast. She is particularly interested in meeting Todd, who cohosts the show, and when he arrives, they start forming a relationship, much to Alberta's horror.

With the ghosts' encouragement, Sam breaks up the couple during their dinner by revealing all of Todd's embarrassing secrets about his obsession with Alberta. Despite this, Alicia is inspired by her conversation with Todd to pursue singing and demonstrate her voice on the podcast to get some exposure. Although Alberta notes that music is a difficult career to pursue, she enjoys her descendant's voice and sings a duet with her.

Meanwhile, Nigel uses his knowledge of Trevor and Hetty's affair as blackmail. Trevor, realizing his selfishness, breaks up with Hetty, and they finally recount their story to the other ghosts.

During an episode of the podcast, new clues suggest that Theresa may have been Alberta's killer.

Summary: After learning that Pete's daughter is getting married, at Pete's behest Sam tries to convince her to hold her wedding at the Woodstone bed-and-breakfast; Alberta and Isaac team up to solve the mystery of what happened to Crash's head.

The ghosts tell Sam that they've found Crash's head.

The Martino Newsletter reveals that Pete's daughter Laura is getting married. Pete wishes he could be at the wedding. The ghosts think it would be a great idea to have Laura get married at the manor; Jay is unsure since Pete died at the manor.

Jay has an idea to offer Laura a free wedding service to have the wedding there.

Crash reveals that someone threw his head into one of the hollow trees in the woods. He says someone purposely took his head while he was watching TV. Isaac and Alberta team up to investigate all the ghosts to find out who took Crash's head.

Carol rejects Sam's offer. Pete reveals that the deck at his old place wasn't properly permitted when he built it. Sam thinks she'll have to report the deck to the neighborhood committee to get the wedding shut down and forced to Woodstone Manor.

The anonymous complaint worked and Carol/Pete's family have come to Woodstone Manor.

Alberta and Isaac start interviewing the ghosts. Trevor says he doesn't remember the previous year, and Hetty says she would get rid of the head in a way that no one would ever find it.

Crash reveals that he and Flower used to make out. Alberta and Isaac have a new suspect: Thorfinn.

Carol starts planning the wedding with Sam and Jay. Carol is stuck in her preferences and doesn't bend to Sam or Jay. Pete is upset that Carol is against all of his ideas.

Alberta and Isaac interrogate Thorfinn about Crash's head. They think Thorfinn got rid of the head because he was jealous of Flower and Crash. Thorfinn denies the accusations; he mentions that Flower didn't like Crash and was getting frustrated with him. The pair have a new suspect.

Pete says that lilies are important because Laura loved playing wedding dress-up with Pete; her bouquet was lilies. Jay thinks the best way to get lilies is to plant a clue in Pete's guidebook.

Isaac and Alberta interrogate Flower next. Flower admits to taking Crash's head.

Carol agrees to use lilies, but Little Pete calls out the wording in the booklet is new. Laura doesn't remember the lilies story either. Carol, Laura, and Little Pete call out Sam and Jay for planting the note in the book. They decide to not have the wedding at Woodstone Manor.

Sam apologizes to the Martinos. After saying Pete's special word, Laura feels moved to have the wedding at Woodstone Manor.

It's revealed that Pete got the type of flower wrong. It was orchids, not lilies.

Alberta catches Isaac in a line when he called out The Price Is Right. It's revealed that Isaac was the one who threw Crash's head in the tree stump. Isaac did it to spice things up and solve a mystery, but he ended up just forgetting.

The wedding is held at Woodstone Manor. Pete walks Laura down the aisle.

Crash tells Flower that he missed Flower while in the stump. As Crash starts singing, Flower pulled off her head and threw it outside.

Summary: When Sam's podcast editor gives her one final episode to wrap up Alberta's murder, she, Jay, and the ghosts go into detective mode; meanwhile, Trevor, Flower, and Pete have their own adventure.

Spencer, the new editor of the newspaper, cancels Alberta's murder mystery podcast. He gives Sam one more episode to solve the mystery and finish the podcast. Sam overhears the ghost tell her that the editor is just flexing their power.

While on the laptop, Pete, Trevor, and Flower get an email from the "prince of Nigeria." It's an email asking for their help.

Jay creates a murder board with all the clues about Alberta's murder.

A flashback is shown of Alberta's last night alive; she was at Woodstone Manor doing a performance and attending a party. Hetty and Thorfinn, as ghosts, were at the Manor enjoying the party. Hetty spoke highly of the 1920s.

Alberta is having a tender moment with Earl. Sasappis and Isaac watch them kiss before Earl decides to leave the room.

Alberta finds a bottle outside her room wishing her luck; there was a card that wished her luck. The bottle was poisonous.

Jay goes over the suspects: her sister Theresa, who wants to be with Earl and who eventually ended up with Earl. Sam thinks it could be Theresa, but Alberta is against the idea of her sister killing her.

Flower is unsure about helping the prince; Pete feels like they should help the prince. Trevor agrees to message back the prince and say they can't help.

Alberta thinks Clara could be the killer since she knew Alberta ratted her out. Clara also wore a big hat the night of Alberta's murder, which could've been used to hide herself. The group theorizes that Clara struck a deal with the police to avoid jail time and to get Alberta and Earl arrested for working with the bootleggers.

Todd wasn't joining the group because he's on a Disney cruise.

While the group discusses the murder weapon, they make the connection the basement ghosts. They think they should chat with them about any clues.

Pete, Flower, and Trevor theorize ideas on how to make money for the prince. Trevor comes up with the idea to steal money from Sam and Jay to send to the prince, which will then give the pair back money. They all agree to the plan.

The basement ghosts say they saw a man with a scar on his face enter the basement. They confirm that it was Al Capone who picked up the rat poison in the basement. Alberta reveals she rejected Al Capone a few times; the group believes it was him who did it.

Trevor, Pete, and Flower learn they fell for a scam while searching on Google. They lost all of Sam and Jay's money.

Alberta is excited over finding out Al Capone killed her. Nigel came into the murder room and says he recognized Al Capone. Nigel reveals he saw Al Capone pouring the rat poison into his own drink to commit suicide. He confirms that Theresa took the bottle away from Al Capone before he could drink it.

Alberta is heartbroken over thinking her sister killed her. However, Hetty reveals Theresa didn't kill Alberta because she knew the truth all along.

Hetty reveals she saw it all happen. Theresa gave Hetty's son the bottle of poison and placed it outside of Alberta's room. It's revealed that her son Thomas and Earl were secret lovers. The "T" on the note was for "Thomas." Hetty reveals that the fight Alberta saw Earl had at the party was him breaking up with Thomas during their fight. Thomas killed Alberta in a fit of heartbreak and rage. Alberta is furious at Hetty.

Sam is upset that Trevor, Flower, and Pete lost the money. However, she saw a fraud alert earlier and stopped the transaction. She begs them never to do this again and stop using the laptop.

The ghosts try to overhear as Hetty apologizes and begs for Alberta's forgiveness. Hetty was heartbroken that her son committed murder and didn't want to hurt her friend. Alberta is hurt that Hetty would keep a huge secret from her.

Trevor, Pete, and Flower ruminate over the scam. They fall for another scam while watching a TV commercial for reverse mortgages.

Kelsey, a woman claiming to be the daughter of David Woodstone, Sam's uncle and Trevor's former coworker, arrives at the mansion, stating she is the rightful heiress. Trevor counters that this is impossible because David was banned from a strip club where he met Kelsey's mother, an exotic dancer.

At the club, Sam and Jay encounter the ghost of David, who explains that he had been sterile since before he met Kelsey's mother. Using this information, the couple gets Kelsey and her lawyer to admit that they had plotted to buy the mansion and resell it at an immensely high profit to pay off gambling debts.

Elsewhere, the ghosts put Hetty on trial for allowing her son to kill Alberta, and although she is sentenced to be banished into the forest for a year, Alberta forgives her on the condition that she shares a room with Flower, to which Hetty agrees.

Sam reluctantly gives half the profits from Isaac's book to him, which he plans to spend on a new one-person bed. Understanding that Nigel is worried about what this means for the future of their relationship, Isaac proposes to him, and he happily accepts.

Jay's plans to convert the barn on the property into a restaurant are stunted when he and Sam find an owl perched on the rafters, which Thor immediately believes is Flower reincarnated, as they fell in love over their affinity for owls. Hoping to reach a compromise, Sam keeps the owl caged in the main house, only for guests to find it too noisy.

The Arondekars help Thor let go of the owl as they remind him of Flower's free spirit, and he agrees that "Flower" should be free. Following a memorial service for Flower, Jay releases the owl into the wild, only for it to turn back and attack him.

At the same time, Pete tries to make up for his unintentionally offending the cholera ghosts by inviting them to move upstairs. Pete confronts Sass about the ethics of his actions, but Trevor persuades him to trick Jay into buying a Kathy Ireland poster for him.

That night, Jay overhears Sass talking to Trevor, blowing his cover. Sass apologizes in the next dream and forms a new friendship with Jay.

Elsewhere, Isaac informs Sam and the younger ghosts about Thorfinn's previous ghost girlfriends before Flower, both of whom moved on to the afterlife while dating him.

During the party, Sam talks to Carol in front of her friends, unaware that she has died. Confused, Sasha and Nico find

While Sam and Jay are out of town for the weekend, Stephanie comes down from the attic and bemoans how Ralph, her cholera victim boyfriend, moved on to the afterlife several months earlier. Thorfinn explains who Stephanie is to Nancy, reminding him of how he used to explain things to Flower, whom he believes has been communicating with him from beyond and saying she is "well" whenever he walks in the forest. The other ghosts correctly conclude that Flower is still on earth and stuck down the well in the woods, where they find her unable to climb out due to her phasing through the walls into the dirt. Sasappis and Isaac recall a time they and Thor were stuck in a hole but navigated their way through dirt back to the manor's basement.

Apparently, there was another ghost in the house, and in the hole, a Puritan woman named Patience, but they lost hold of her when Isaac sneezed, leaving her to an unknown fate. Mark prepares to fill the well with cement, so Trevor, unable to open a drawer to access Sam's tablet, uses Mark's phone to contact the Arondekars, though they can't see any of the ghosts over video chat. Hetty reluctantly reveals her manner of death, which the older ghosts weren't present to witness: she strangled herself using an early telephone cord to avoid trouble with the law for her husband's crimes and to protect her son. She uses this cord, now part of her ghost being, to rescue Flower, who joyfully reunites with Thor as the Arondekars arrive home.

He is soon distracted by the selection of razors in the superstore Jay takes him to and gets lost, encountering a ghost couple that was trampled to death in a 2005 Black Friday sale. After the store closes for the night, a violent gang of ghosts, whose leader was a chef killed by a meat cleaver in his head, chases Pete out. Using some key locations from the Hudson Valley he once knew that still exist as well as the stars, he finds his way back home. Concluding that his power is the result of never being able to travel as much as the clients he served did, Pete accepts Sam and Jay's offer to be sent on a vacation to St. Lucia so he can spend time with his family.

Meanwhile, Thorfinn struggles to admit to Flower that he had an affair with Nancy while the hippie was stuck in the well. Flower is taken aback when he tells her the truth, but she and Nancy eventually agree to a polyamorous relationship with him. As they celebrate, Thor reveals he also slept with Carol, and Nancy remarks that she did the same.

Summary:	Isaac's wedding day jitters are exacerbated by the arrival of a surprise guest.

Isaac has an erotic dream about Chris, the stripper who gave him a lap dance. Sasappis assures him that this was only induced by pre-wedding anxiety, but when Jay hires a DJ for the wedding reception, Chris arrives. He also mentions having a boyfriend and a low opinion of Alexander Hamilton, making Isaac only more attracted. The captain becomes excited by the possibility of Chris dying from an allergic reaction to Jay's crab recipe, but is later disappointed to hear he was rushed to the hospital and will survive. Although Nigel is upset by his reaction, they talk things through.

Meanwhile, when Nancy learns that the basement ghosts have been excluded from the wedding, Thorfinn and Flower join her in the basement out of sympathy. The two then agree to attend the wedding in Nancy's honor.

In St. Lucia, Pete has an affair with Donna, a ghost who died in 1982 when an early cell phone fell on her head. He ends it when he starts disappearing in pieces due to being away from Woodstone for too long.

Returning to Woodstone and interrupting the wedding, the restored Pete gives a speech that causes Isaac to change his mind. Though the revolutionaries break up on largely unfriendly terms, Sam and the other ghosts encourage Isaac to maintain hope for the future.

Thor declares he only wants to date Flower, but they agree not to marry right away out of respect for Isaac.

Carol then announces she is about to marry Nigel's subordinate Baxter.

Nancy invites Isaac down to the basement for a "present", and he is dragged through the wall by a vengeful Patience, the ghost he lost in the dirt.

Summary:	While Sam and the ghosts race to find him, Isaac comes face to face with Puritan ghost Patience for the first time since she was lost in the dirt.

The episode begins with a flashback to 1662 when a woman named Patience is banished from her Puritan community for being too severe, as she argued for sentencing a five-year-old girl to death on charges of witchcraft for talking to a doll. She swears to become the most brutal and perfect Puritan ever.

The show then follows the aftermath of the last season's finale, with Isaac breaking off his wedding to Nigel after Pete's return. The ghosts discuss the botched wedding, while Sam and Jay talk about their restaurant with Mark and go in search of Isaac to get his thoughts on the tiles for the restaurant's floor.

In the finale of the last season, Isaac was pulled into the dirt by the new ghost, Patience, with the help of the basement ghosts. While there, Patience accuses Isaac, Thorfin, and Sasappis of abandoning her, but Isaac, as usual, is able to convince Patience that the trio had been looking for her when she went missing. Believing Isaac, she quickly forgives him.

Meanwhile, at the house, Isaac has gone missing, and Sam, Jay, and the other ghosts look for him. We find Nigel brooding in the library after being abandoned by Isaac. Later, since one of the ghosts, Nancy, had been behaving oddly, she finally reveals that Patience had kidnapped Isaac. In a demonstration of how Isaac had been sucked into the dirt, Patience kidnaps Sasappis as well, acting upon Isaac's feelings about missing his friends and wanting to be with them.

Now, everybody turns to Flower to uncover the location of the dirt, which Flower confirms to be under a willow tree. However, it is later revealed to be the lyrics of a song, with Jay becoming the lone victim of Flower's unpredictable memory as he had been digging for hours.

While in the dirt cave, Isaac promises to be a better person once he's outside the cave, once "God holds up His end of the bargain." Eventually, Isaac and Sasappis mock the way Patience repeats her name, and she overhears them. Hurt, she decides to be alone and returns the two to their friends.

Later, Isaac decides to correct the wrong, with the ghosts making a human chain to pull Patience out of the dirt. Isaac and Sasappis apologize to her for abandoning her. The episode ends with Patience spending the night with Alberta, bombarding her with questions.

Summary: Sam's dad visits, straining her bond with Patience. Isaac navigates post-breakup with Nigel. Thor and Flower face an awkward situation involving Nancy.

The episode begins with the news that Sam's father is coming to stay with her and Jay, along with his girlfriend. Patience is completely against the couple sharing a room, and when tested, she unleashes her power to make the walls bleed, which scares off an unsuspecting delivery person.

Elsewhere, Flower and Thor want to break off their relationship with Nancy, while Isaac feels uncomfortable being in the same house as Nigel. They decide to swap roles: Isaac will break up with Nancy for Flower and Thor, while they ask Nigel to leave the house for Isaac.

Meanwhile, Sam's father, who has been an absent parent for much of her life, arrives with his girlfriend. Sam and Jay try to suggest they sleep in separate bedrooms, but it comes across as if Sam doesn't want her father and his girlfriend there. Despite this, they comply, though Sam's father sneaks into his girlfriend's room at night—while Patience watches the entire thing. The next morning, they wake up to "Sin" written in blood on the walls. They assume Sam is behind it, leading to an argument where Sam accuses her father of being absent from her life.

In the meantime, thanks to Isaac's charming personality, he successfully conveys Flower and Thor's breakup message to Nancy. However, the other two struggle to ask Nigel to leave, and eventually, Isaac tries to handle it himself but fails. Instead, he tells Nigel that he'll move to the shed, feeling proud of his act of kindness.

The other ghosts overhear Sam's father telling his girlfriend that Sam's mother was the reason he could never be around when she was young. Sam apologizes to her father and expresses her desire to be closer, leading to a reconciliation. The couple decides to stay longer with Sam and Jay.

The episode ends with Nigel telling Isaac that he'll be moving back to the shed himself since the ghosts there can't stand having Isaac around!

Summary: The ghosts, seeking some excitement during a low-key Halloween, join Patience in putting Sam on a witch trial.

The episode begins with Sam preparing for Halloween. However, Jay convinces her to forgo the holiday since they've had unfortunate incidents every Halloween, starting from when their gazebo burned down in Season 1. Meanwhile, Patience becomes convinced that Sam is a witch when she sees her voice activate a Halloween decoration.

Since they're not celebrating Halloween, Sam and Jay organize a yard sale to get rid of the many antiques they own. At the same time, Patience rallies the ghosts to vote on whether Sam is a witch or not. The ghosts vote in favor of Sam being a witch, partly out of amusement and partly to avoid Patience's wrath. When they see a statue at the yard sale dressed exactly like Sam, they believe Patience has really turned Sam into a statue.

The ghosts try to warn Jay against selling the statue, with Trevor attempting to send a text message to him, but it's too late. Meanwhile, Isaac distracts Patience by getting her to watch a television show, while the other ghosts try to track down the man who bought Sam's statue.

They manage to trace the buyer thanks to the website address written on the back of his car, and Trevor relays the information to Jay. Jay goes over to reclaim Sam before the statue is destroyed, as the buyer runs a YouTube channel focused on blowing things up.

Unfortunately, the statue breaks when Jay brings it back home, but it turns out Sam was never the statue after all! Sam had been helping a yard sale customer move furniture into their house. Jay apologizes to Sam, and they reconcile.

Meanwhile, realizing there is "far too much temptation" in the house for it to be a suitable place for "the pious," Patience decides to return to the dirt, revealing there are more ghosts like her!

Summary: Trevor, who has catfished his way into a remote financial analyst job, is in hot water when he's summoned to a mandatory in-person work retreat. Also, Hetty and Sass start a rumor about Pete.

The episode begins with Hetty and Sasappis feeling jealous of Pete's ability to leave the mansion. They start a rumor that Pete's girlfriend, Donna, doesn't actually exist.

Meanwhile, Trevor reveals to Sam and Jay that he had been working as a financial analyst on the dark web, and his team is organizing a work retreat. He needs one of the living to pretend to be him—namely, Jay. Sam and Jay agree to host the meeting at Woodstone, with Jay posing as Trevor's online persona,

"Michael Jackson."

When the team arrives, Sam conveys Trevor's messages to Jay, who converses with the group through a Bluetooth earbud. During the meeting, Jay decides to improvise, but Trevor soon discovers that his team thinks he's outdated and uncool. This disappoints him, as the job has been a way for him to feel alive again.

Eventually, he learns he's actually idolized in the financial community for helping a colleague during a hazing ritual by giving him his pants and money. This realization makes him happy and satisfied, and Jay, along with his "workplace homies," fulfills a tradition of running around without pants to honor Trevor's legacy.

Meanwhile, as the rumors about Donna spiral, Hetty and Sasappis decide to reveal the truth to Pete. Pete realizes how condescending he's been, boasting about his ability to leave the mansion to those who don't have that privilege. The episode ends with the ghosts discovering that Donna was, in fact, a cold-blooded murderer when she was alive!

The episode begins with Sam breaking the news about a theatre production wanting to rent their ballroom. While the crew is gathered, Sasappis is enamoured with a theatre actor, Marissa. The crew finds that the lead actor had to pull out of the production, so there's an audition to be held. Alberta encourages Sam to participate in the audition to fulfill her dream of performing on stage, but Sam denies.

Later, Sasappis meets Marissa through Jay's dream and later reveals to the other ghosts that he's dating her in Jay's dreams, only to realize that it's not Marissa but Jay's figment of imagination. So, basically, Sasappis had been dating Jay. He becomes sad over this, and Pete comes forward to use his power to find more ghosts like him, bring them back to Woodstone, and play matchmaker for the housebound ghosts.

Meanwhile, Alberta convinces Sam to appear for the audition and conducts exhaustive training for Sam. On the day of the audition, though, Alberta is overcome with determination and decides to play dirty to ensure Sam gets the role.

She instructs Flower to go through Marissa so Marissa feels unwell and destroys her audition, but Flower ends up revealing this to Sam, who gets hurt. Alberta apologizes to her, explaining that she went too far since Alberta wanted to relive her glorious days performing on stage through Sam.

They reconcile, and through Alberta's encouragement, Sam nails her audition, ultimately performing in the lead role as part of the crew!

Summary:	When Sam's book publisher requires source material for her biography on Isaac, she and Jay take a field trip to find a diary he claims he hid when he was alive.

A publisher tells Sam she must find any primary sources to confirm if any of the information in Isaac's book is true. To protect Isaac's existence as a ghost from being discovered, she and Jay follow his instructions to find his lost journal, conveniently found beneath a cobblestone outside Fort Ticonderoga, but every entry in the journal is useless and related to food, especially sandwiches. Jay proposes a scheme to fill the blank pages with knowledge about Isaac's life, which the Revolutionary dramatically narrates, drawing the attention of both the upstairs and cholera ghosts. An assessor arrives and puts on his smock for work, making Sam mistake him for a cholera ghost and admit her and Jay's scheme. Sam works out an agreement with the publisher whereby Isaac's book can still be published as a young adult vampire romance fiction and persuades Isaac to go forward with the plan.

Several of the ghosts observe Jay stepping on a ghost snail and plan to take turns caring for it. When the snail goes missing, everyone assumes Thorfinn ate it until Trevor, who feigned indifference at first, admits he took it because he died while his dog Bucky was still alive and misses having a pet. After Trevor shows the snail The Cutting Edge, he calls it a "good boy" and appears to begin moving on to the afterlife, only to realize the snail is ascending very slowly instead.

A depressed Henry checks in at Woodstone and offers to form a band with Jay. After Henry turns against Jay when he and Margaret have an argument, Thorfinn learns from Bjorn that Henry forgot their anniversary, so the Arondekars lure them into having a romantic dinner to rekindle their marriage, only to discover that their "anniversary" was actually to celebrate the first time they had an orgy.

Isaac receives a backordered children's dinosaur bed meant for him and Nigel to share after their wedding, and Nigel seeks to claim ownership, prompting Jay to move it to the shed. Nigel regifts the bed to Baxter and Carol. Isaac is taken aback but then impressed when Nigel criticizes the bed as anatomically inaccurate.

While the disembodied Jay finally meets the ghosts face to face, Bela walks in on Sam and Pete, the latter possessing Jay's body.

Pete drives the Arondekars out to the local DealMart for last-minute shopping but soon learns that his daughter Laura will be moving to Australia for a new job after the holiday.

Fearing he would disappear before making it back to Woodstone from that long of a trip, Pete takes the car to Philadelphia spend one last Christmas with Laura and her son Little Pete. He stops at a gas station to use the restroom, allowing Sam to track him down.

Back at the manor, Jay spies on his parents discussing their son's decision to pursue a risky career of running a restaurant instead of more stable work. Mahesh reflects on how they immigrated from India to America to make life better for their children.

Moved by his father's words, Jay decides to let Sam and Pete visit Laura's house, where Pete, maintaining character as Jay, gives his daughter a snow globe per his classic tradition and tells her he is proud of her. They embrace, expelling Pete from Jay's body, which starts acting as a zombie with no soul in control.

Returning home, Sam lures the body with a French fry to the sconce by the fireplace, shocking it and allowing Jay's soul to reenter. Jay reveals to his family that he named the restaurant in Mahesh's honor.

At the same time, Sass talks to Flower about having his trust broken, but when he remembers becoming a ghost and meeting Thor for the first time, the two elder ghosts mend their friendship.

Against Jay's warning, Sam hires Kelsey, the con artist who previously feigned being her cousin, to play the part of the investor. She keeps trying to convince Kelsey to leave, but Kelsey becomes so absorbed by the false narrative she spins that she cons $15,000 off of Mark.

To convince Mark to withdraw the check he gave Kelsey, Sam tries telling the truth but claims the Jay had no idea of the scam and that Mahesh was the investor. Isaac finally agrees to let the Arondekars have more of a voice in planning the restaurant.

Meanwhile, Hetty asks Sam to investigate her ancestry, hoping to find out if she is descended from royalty, but she is horrified to learn she has an Irish ancestor named Mary Shaughnessy.

Summary: Thor returns to therapy to work through his angst over being abandoned by his Viking shipmates; Jay's sister, Bela, attempts to help him with the restaurant.

Thorfinn starts acting more aggressively as the anniversary of his desertion in North America approaches. Following another therapy session where Sam translates for him, the livings and ghosts agree to send Pete to Norway and find a Viking ghost who can finally answer why Thor was left behind.

As Pete travels, Thor learns from Bjorn that their tribe later moved to another village due to a cod shortage, so the Arondekars remotely configure a traffic control trailer sign to redirect Pete.

In the right village, now a historic tourist site, the Viking ghost Gorm explains that Thor was left behind because one Viking was counted twice after removing his hat, and the crew decided it was too risky to go back and rescue Thor after they realized their mistake. Pete attempts to leave by ferry but struggles to find an alternate route home since ferry services are closed for Sámi National Day.

Seeing Pete return half-faded into oblivion, Thor's appreciation for his present-day friends and the sacrifices they make for him grows.

Production Code: GHO412
Summary: Flower interferes with the opening of Jay's restaurant based on a prophecy from her old cult leader.

The episode opens with us in the past, when Flower was still alive. While in her cult, we find out that the cult leader used a piece of "moon rock" to lead the people. When Flower asks if the world will end "next week," the leader decides to turn to the "moon rock" again. He learns that the world will end on Feb. 13, 2025.

Flower tells Sam that the date of the restaurant opening is when the world will end. She wants Sam and Jay to get underground to save themselves, but nobody is willing to listen to her. So, she decides that she needs to stop the restaurant from opening to get them underground.

It's not like Jay needs Flower to destroy his restaurant opening, though. The chefs he's chosen to work there are enough to destroy the whole place. There's a guy who is always high, a guy who is always trying to hook up with the women he sees, and a woman who is nervous as hell about the job.

Flower certainly tries, though. This is when we learn that the basement ghosts have powers. They run through each of the chefs in the kitchen and gives them all cholera. It's going to be a rough night for all of them.

Sam and Jay are understandably angry and upset with her. Sam finally breaks it to Flower that the cult was a scam. She's not going to remember this forever, but it shows that the ghosts can take things way too far. With the sun already set, Flower learns that the "prophecy" was wrong, and Sam breaks it that the leader lied.

With the anger died down, Sam goes to see how Flower is. All Flower has ever wanted is to belong and feel special. She's wanted it so much that she hasn't seen that she belongs in this group of ghosts. Flower even has a good idea to help save the opening night. The ghosts will dictate what needs to be done and Sam can shout out the orders.

I have to laugh how Mark is pulled in and just goes along with everything. I really want to see Mark learn about the ghosts at some point. He deserves to find out after everything that he's been through.

Jay's speech about family disagreements is perfect. It's that reminder that the ghosts have become family to Sam and Jay. They do get annoying, but all family gets annoying after a while.

Jay is also able to explain the cholera. It was the lettuce they ate. The poor lettuce farmers. It's always the lettuce. Why do we eat healthily?

Trevor shares that the ghost table will have four seats. Isaac and Trevor will get two of the seats, and the other ghosts will need to pitch why they should get to sit at the table.

This leads to Hetty refusing to beg for a seat at the table, so she's out. However, it's soon clear that Trevor is pushing Hetty out for other reasons. He was hurt by the way things ended between them. Sure, Trevor broke up with her, but it's because Hetty didn't even talk to him before things with Thor.

Finally, the two are able to clear the air. They were a power couple in the house, and maybe there is a medium ground. They can be "power friends," which means that they just wait to be able to show people that they are better.

Summary: Jay upsets a restaurant owner after using a recipe in his restaurant that Pete had shared with him.

We open the episode in 1982, watching Pete work with customers as a travel rep. The end of the scene sees a man walk in looking for traveler's cheques, and we just know that this is going to come up again.

However, we then jump to the present day, with Pete sharing his "family" recipe for arrabbiata sauce. It includes diet Dr. Pepper, and I think I'm on board with this. I use diet coke to make a sweet and sour style dish all the time! Pop works!

Pete isn't too sure about using the recipe for Jay's restaurant because it was Carol's family's recipe. Carol is worried, and it's soon clear why that this is more worrisome than a customer leaving a bad review. Carol notes to Pete and a few other ghosts that her nephew is in the restaurant and is the one making a stink about the sauce. The nephew is in the mafia.

I feel for Jay. He just wants to have a successful restaurant. This is his dream, but the ghosts always make it a problem.

Pete gets to know a lot more about the work that he did. The travel agency was a front for the mafia, and only Pete was the legitimate employee. I do wish that Carol had had a conversation with Pete about this, but it just goes to show how selfish she was. Carol says that she thought Pete had figured it out and didn't want to talk about it, but I don't believe Carol for a second.

Jay agrees to take the dish off the menu, but there is still an issue. When the mafia returns, Carol makes it clear that the mafia will bleed the restaurant dry until they need a loan and then burn everything to the ground.

Carol may have a way to deal with the situation, but she refuses to go against the family. Well, Pete stands up to Carol pointing out everything bad Carol did against Pete. It turns out that Carol kept the books for everything against the mafia, and it's all in a storage facility.

It's perfect to get the mafia off their back. That's not the only way the storage facility is a win. It turns out that customers sent postcards back to Pete. While the travel agency may have been a front, Pete was good at his job and made people's holidays great.

Since the ghosts have had to double up in rooms, Hetty has dealt with Flower sharing everything on her mind. It's not a good night's sleep for the matriarch of the house, so she wants find a way to get her out. That's not too hard.

Hetty suggests to Flower that she and Thor move in together. This isn't something Trevor likes, and it doesn't take long for Flower to tell Trevor that it was all Hetty's idea—although not intentionally. This is Flower!

Well, there's a big ploy in this. The two decide they're going to play the ghosts against each other. Trevor suggests that he moves in with Hetty, but Alberta and Isaac don't want them getting back together, so they agree to make some sacrifices. Isaac will give up his lodgings for the couple and will move into Alberta. It gives Hetty and Trevor their own rooms, which is just what they wanted.

Summary:	When Jay becomes obsessed with the success of a fellow chef, Isaac serves up a cautionary tale about his own rivalry with Alexander Hamilton; Elias Woodstone returns from hell with a limited-time offer for the ghosts.

When Jay expresses his frustrations over his struggle to compete with a rival restaurateur, Isaac tells the story of how his rivalry with Alexander Hamilton began.

In a flashback to 1776, Isaac hopes to buy a neck ruffle to impress his mentor James Madison at a meeting to discuss the first draft of the Declaration of Independence.

After a brief chat with Hamilton, who bought a ruffle himself, Isaac learns the ruffles at the shop are sold out and assumes Hamilton stole his from him.

At the meeting, Madison reluctantly gives Isaac an embarrassing out-of-style ruffle.

The meeting goes peacefully until Isaac gives into temptation and attempts to forcibly seize Hamilton's ruffle, knocking over a candle and setting the document on fire.

As Hamilton escorts Isaac out, he quietly confirms his suspicions that he stole the ruffle.

Back in the present, Pete consoles Isaac by explaining that the phrase "pursuit of happiness", which Isaac used when speaking to the Founding Fathers after the fight, became part of the final Declaration, leading the overjoyed Revolutionary to boast about being "famous".

Elias arrives from Hell to announce that, due to his voluntary return to Hell in the second season, he has been promoted to a demon who administers torture and collects souls for the Devil.

He almost tempts Thorfinn to sell his soul until his friends remind him of the good deeds he has done in the afterlife.

Later, Elias, who can now also physically reincarnate, tries to entice Jay to sell his soul in exchange for improved business, but Jay declines.

Derek visits the day before the party, and the ghosts suspect he is having an affair with the maid of honor.

Alberta orders Sass to enter Alicia's dreams to inform her of Derek's infidelity.

The next day, the ghosts learn the maid of honor is actually Derek's sister, and they were talking about a TV show.

Alberta admits she abandoned her musician fiancé instead.

Feeling her ancestor's presence, Alicia asks for a sign, and she hears Alberta humming a love song, confirming that Derek has been faithful.

Sam researches Alberta's former fiancé and learns he had a happy life with a loving family; although his wife was one of Alberta's rivals, she is happy for him.

Meanwhile, Jay is ecstatic when a famous critic gives an extremely positive review on his restaurant, only to discover that Trevor bribed the critic in exchange for Jay covering for him at his work retreat.

Jay is crestfallen and invites the critic back, asking him to give an honest review, in which the critic writes that he indeed liked the restaurant.

Guest Stars: Crystle Lightning (Shiki), Taylor Ortega (Joan), Edna Katz-Silver (Elderly Woman)
Production Code: GHO417
Summary: Pete makes good on his promise to find someone for Sasappis by bringing in a wisecracking 1940s screenwriter who also has the ability to roam.

Pete promised to find someone who would come to the house and be with Sasappis. Well, he made good on that promise, and Joan is certainly immediately interested in Sass. She finds his innocence cute, and she doesn't judge too much when he struggles to get through an introduction when first meeting her.

In fact, she seems great for Sass. She's confident and doesn't mind putting Trevor in his place, making Sass smile throughout their interactions. So what stops them from getting together?

It turns out that Sass is still struggling to get over one particular woman: his love Shiki. He feels like if he knows that she isn't interested in him at all, he can move on from her. So, Pete goes out to find out if Shiki has any interest in Sass, regardless of the fact that neither of them can leave their respective boundaries.

At first, Shiki says she isn't interested, but then she finds out that Sass was the one that left her the dead deer. That changes everything for her, but when Pete goes to the house to tell Sam, they all realize that there's the problem of Sass and Shiki not being able to be together. Is it fair that Sass is forever pining for a girl that he can't have?

Hetty thinks that the kinder option is to lie to Sass. Only, Jay doesn't get the message that they will lie to him, so Sass quickly finds out the truth. Oops!

As much as Sass is angry, he also understands why they lied to him. However, now he wants to find a way to be with his girl, and Joan tells him to think outside the box.

How about inside the box? I love that what initially seemed like just a side story to tell Joan came up as a potential option. Sass will put himself inside the ghost box, and then Sam can take that to where Shiki is. While he can't cross the boundary, maybe it's possible when he's inside the box.

The B story was about Thor and Alberta. After Jay notes that it looks like friends revenge bailed on the restaurant the night before, Thor gets an idea. He can revenge bail on Alberta. It turns out that 50 years ago, Alberta bailed on Thor's 1000th birthday party. Well, he only needs to wait a few centuries to do the same to her.

He decides to encourage Alberta to put on a performance, and he promises to be there. Of course, he decides that he won't show up, only he does quickly to find out if Alberta is hurt by him not being there. Alberta didn't notice he wasn't there and turns up when he is there, so it doesn't quite work out, but it does allow the two to talk later.

Alberta shares that she was a young ghost at the time, and she was terrified at the idea of spending centuries trapped as a ghost. So, while she initially wanted to go to the party, she ended up not facing it. She does apologize for it.

Well, Alberta isn't all that sorry, it seems. When she gets Thor to meet her for a friend date at the fountain, she ends up bailing — with Sam sending Jay out to tell Thor.

Summary: Jay, Sam and the ghosts attempt to fix the ghost trap in hopes of getting Sasappis across the ghost boundary to visit his longtime crush, Shiki.

To fix the ghost trap so Sasappis can use it to cross the ghost boundary, the Arondekars invite Janis, a Latvian ghost hunting expert, to Woodstone.

Sass reconsiders his plan as Janis explains that attempting to bring a ghost in a trap over the barrier could result in that ghost being squashed into oblivion between the barrier and the trap walls.

Joan, whose romantic feelings for Sass have become sincere, rehearses her confession with Pete, while Sass overhears them and concludes that Joan, in whom he has become interested, is seeing Pete instead.

Heartbroken, Sass enters the upgraded trap, now able to hold up to 100 ghosts, but after hearing the truth from Joan, he unsuccessfully begs Jay, who is about to run some errands, to release him.

Thorfinn enters the trap and shocks its circuits, allowing him and Sass to escape back over the barrier just as Jay crosses it.

Sass and Joan reunite and begin passionately kissing. Meanwhile, Flower criticizes Trevor for wasting the money from his corporate job by bidding on a pair of ice skates from The Cutting Edge, rather than helping the world by donating to charity.

Trevor and Hetty plan to teach Flower a lesson by having Trevor give her $5,000 to use as she sees fit, but then have Hetty tempt her by mentioning scented candles Flower could buy and smell.

Instead, Flower has Sam outbid Trevor on the skates for her, then demands $10,000 from him for charity otherwise she will have Thor zap the lights to set the skates on fire.

Trevor and Hetty are shocked Flower outwitted them.

Pinkus, Trevor's former coworker to whom he lent his pants, arrives at the mansion with his daughter Abby and tells the Arondekars how he found a phone number in Trevor's pants for Trevor's now-deceased girlfriend Laurie Goldstein, whom Pinkus married.

However, he has not told Abby that Trevor is her biological father, so he confides this to the Arondekars.

At Trevor's insistence, Sam asks Abby questions so he can get to know her better.

However, when he tries texting Pinkus to tell Abby the truth, he mistakenly sends the message to Abby due to the similarity of her name to Adam, Pinkus's first name.

Though Abby is angry with Adam for lying, Trevor puts together a photo montage on her phone of the father/daughter moments she and Adam shared as she was growing up, motivating her to reconcile with her living father.

Elsewhere, Pete prepares to break up with Donna, who swears she did not kill her husband Gerald and requests that Pete interview other ghosts to clear her name.

Pete meets Richard, the late husband of Linda and Donna's former neighbor who died with a Walkman that only plays the album Purple Rain, but he assures him that Donna was the killer and he could not intervene as a ghost.

Taking notes, Jay realizes that Prince released Purple Rain in 1984, meaning Richard was alive at the time.

Richard admits Linda killed Gerald out of revenge for accidentally trampling her flower garden while parking his car.

The Arondekars file an anonymous tip to incarcerate Linda and exonerate Donna.

Sam considers investigating more cold cases with Pete before deciding that meeting the other ghosts' needs is enough work.

On April 20, the Arondekars host a re-election fundraiser for Tad, the mayor of Hudson Valley, at Jay's restaurant. The ghosts recognize Tad as Stephanie's prom date, and he uses the story of how he tried to defend her from her killer to promote his image as a brave leader. Stephanie is furious to see him, telling Sam that he ran away in fear instead.

To gain Stephanie's approval, the Arondekars prepare to call out Tad during his speech, but Nancy confirms with Isaac that Stephanie lied yet again, having witnessed Tad's attempt to defend Stephanie.

Just as Sam and Jay claim that Tad ran away during his speech, Isaac whispers the truth to Sam, who then claims they were making a false accusation as a test of Tad's courage. Stephanie confesses she lied because she was upset that, five days after her murder, Tad became romantically involved with former classmate Melanie del Vecchio.

Sam and Jay apologize, claiming they were high on marijuana because it was 4/20. Melanie, who is now Tad's wife, appears and clarifies that she and Tad bonded over their grief for Stephanie, for whom they named their daughter. They forgive the Arondekars and agree to help them with their restaurant license.

Meanwhile, Jay tasks Pete with keeping his marijuana-loving chef Gabe in check; when Pete catches Gabe smoking pot in his car, he smells the smoke and becomes high himself. Flower encourages him to be more relaxed about life, and Alberta finally becomes interested in Pete due to his new attitude and recent history of standing up for himself, but before she can kiss him, he snaps out of his high and decides to remain faithful to Donna.

In Montreal, Canada, Pete encounters Kyle, a man who started seeing ghosts after a bird hit him in the face on a roller coaster. He brings Kyle to Woodstone, where he and Sam immediately connect over their shared ability and she hires him as a new assistant. Feeling left out, Jay starts digging into Kyle's past when Bela, who is attracted to him, says she has been looking up pictures of him online. Jay learns that Kyle spent six months in prison for breaking and entering, but as he attempts to use this information against him, Kyle explains that he knew an old woman named Marian who, when she died and became a ghost, asked him to recover a family brooch she left behind in the house and had planned to pass on to her daughter. Failing to negotiate a peaceful way back into the house, Kyle resorted to crime in order to give Marian closure. Moved by his words, Sam reconsiders her decision to fire him but then dismisses him anyway as he attempts to kiss her.

Elsewhere, Sasappis expresses his worries about his first night of being intimate with Joan to his friends. Thorfinn suggests acting strongly by picking up and carrying her to bed, as he demonstrates with Flower; when Sass tries to do the same, he accidentally throws Joan out of the house through the bedroom wall. That evening, Joan reminds him to let go of his worries and trust his instincts, and they share a kiss, awakening a napping Pete, who sees himself out. Later, Sass subtly informs his friends that sex with Joan was a success, and the ghosts rejoice.

Summary:	Sam and Jay host a big party for the launch of Sam and Isaac's vampire book.

Sam convinces her publisher Sharon to let her host the launch party for Isaac's autobiographical vampire novel at Jay's restaurant so Isaac can celebrate with the Arondekars.

Patience, who comes out of the dirt to pursue an evil presence she senses, threatens to ruin the party, believing it is the source of the evil as she learns what vampires are from the main ghosts. Sasappis and Trevor try to divert her attention by having her investigate the mansion, where Alberta privately tells Hetty that she had an erotic dream about Pete.

Hetty reveals this secret to Patience to keep her from going back to the restaurant, and Patience rallies most of the Woodstone ghosts to place Alberta on trial.

Alberta describes how her feelings for Pete have become sincerely romantic, and she notices Pete listening among the crowd before walking away.

Jay's sister Bela, who has been seeing Kyle without her boyfriend Eric's knowledge, then enters the room, gossiping on the phone with Kyle about Sam and Jay's plans to stall Patience, who furiously returns to the restaurant and makes the walls bleed in the middle of Sam's reading of a passage from the book.

Jay passes this off as a special effect for the presentation, making a humiliated Patience leave amid the applause.

During a conversation with another publisher, she mentions Jay's publicist, whom he had neglected to tell Sam about.

Sam is horrified to learn the publicist is an incarnate Elias, who made a deal with Jay to doom his soul to Hell and warns Jay that he has little time left on Earth, causing Jay to avoid anything that could potentially kill him.

Pete returns from a trip to St. Lucia to break up with Donna and shares a kiss with Alberta, who brings him up to speed on how the launch party ended.
