Adm. Albert Jethro Chegwiddden), David James Elliott (Cmdr. Harmon Rabb Jr.), Catherine Bell (Lt. Col. Sarah MacKenzie)
Production Code: 000
Summary: The pilot that aired few weeks after the show's premiere, was aired as a JAG episode, but also a pilot titled "Navy NCIS: The Beginning". The episode is a 1-hour combination of two episodes that aired as JAG, "Ice Queen (1)" and "Meltdown (2)". A murdered JAG officer teams up the JAG staff with agents of the Naval Criminal Investigative Services (NCIS).

The episode begins when a body that washed up from the Potomac is discovered to be a JAG officer. While Adm. Chegwiddden's team is stunned by the news, members of the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (the focus of the spinoff) suspect foul play and begin questioning the officers. NCIS agents Leroy Gibbs, Tony Dinozzo and Viv Blackadder, along with Dr. Donald "Ducky" Mallard, think Harm is hiding something, but a crucial piece of evidence leads them to deduce something far worse. After a JAG officer is found murdered, Harm is arrested for the crime and is court-martialed. The case against Harm appears to be very strong, but Agent Gibbs begins to have doubts about his guilt despite the incriminating evidence. As Gibbs leaves for the Middle East to question a senior Arab terrorist about an impending attack against a Navy ship, he asks his team to dig deeper into Harm's case in the hopes that they will find new evidence that points to another killer before the verdict is read. Harm's cover (hat) found on the river bank is confirmed by Abby as not to have been in the river as long as Loren Singers body. Actually its only been there a few weeks. Harm is defended by a non JAG office lawyer, Lt. Cmdr. Faith Coleman, and Gibbs asks marine Major McBurney to prosecute. Later, when Gibbs is asked on the stand whether he thinks Harm murdered Singer - he replies No! He thinks its a setup for Harm, and starts his team looking for someone with an axe to grind while he flies out to search for Amad Bin Atwa. Harm suggest that Cmdr. Lindsey may have something against him, and then recalls back to when Lindsey was last in his office, and he lifted Harm cap instead of his own. Tony and Viv have Lindsey brought in. Tony gets a confession out of Lindsey (out thinking him). It seems they were arguing, Singer went to leave and slipped in the snow hitting her head on the concrete. Instead of calling for help, Lindsey dumped Singer's unconscious body into the river causing her to drown. He put Harm's cover into place along the riverbank making it look like Harm did it. He looks relieved when Tony tells him he is not the father, although he is still guilty of murder. In the end we find out that Singer was going to Shannon, Ireland and not San Diego - so the father is not someone we know. Harm is released and Lindsey is charged with her murder. Tony and Viv fly out to join Gibbs in the hunt for Bin Atwa. Thanks to some good intel, they now know his location is near Gibraltar, and a navy aircraft carrier is the target. Bin Atwa is spotted in local sea port, and Viv blows their cover by staring at him too long. Heavy gun fire breaks out and almost all the terrorists are killed when Gibbs goes after Bin Atwa on the bridge of his boat. Bin Atwa pulls a grenade, but drops it when Gibbs shoots him - and Gibbs gets blown down the stairwell for his trouble. For a moment Viv and Tony think he was caught in the blast, but see him walking slowly through the smoke, and Viv tries to apologise for blowing their cover...

Summary: While on Air Force One, a Navy Commander dies. Agents from NCIS decide to take the investigation into their own hands and also force Secret Service Agent Kate Todd to help. Now the NCIS team has to figure out if the Navy Officer's death was of natural causes or not.

CBS WORLDWIDE INC. / Cliff Lipson

In Washington, Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs gets a called from Agent Anthony DiNozzo and is informed that Air Force One has landed in Wichita, KS due to a naval commander dying on board. At the airport, Special Agent Gibbs and Agent DiNozzo meet up with Dr. Donald "Ducky" Mallard and they head down to Wichita. When they arrive on site, Dr. Mallard pretends to be the local medical examiner and Gibbs and DiNozzo pretend to be his assistants. They even used the local coroner to help them with their set up. They were able to fool the FBI and other agents, except Agent Kate Todd, who discovers that they are not only pretending to be the local Medical Examiner; they are there to take over the investigation. They offer to take her aboard and help solve the case. Through much hesitation, Agent Katie Todd agrees to work with them. On their way to Andrews, Ducky discovered that the time of death of the deceased is nearly an hour earlier than what the President's physician has claimed it to be. A little later, Ducky discovers why the time of death between him and the President's physician was different. Being that Commander Trapp had lunch with the President, the President's physician probably rushed to evaluate the President's condition. He did call Trapp's time of death. Once he was sure that the President wasn't in any medical danger, he returned and was gone for nearly an hour. After solving that mystery, Gibbs, Agent Todd and Agent Dinozzo, start bagging the food from the President's lunch. While bagging the evidence, Agent Todd throws up, which makes them question if she has what killed Trapp. At a President's conference, Agent Baer and FBI Agent Fornell have a phone conversation about NCIS having control of the investigation. Agent Baer sticks to their side, even though it's in the hands of a retired cop and ex ME's. Agent Baer informs FBI Agent Fornell that he will have Agent Todd turn the body over to the FBI when she and the NCIS agents land in Andrews. Back on Air Force One, Kate tells Dr. Mallard and Agent Gibbs that she has a stomach virus due to the fact that she slept with Major Kerry who had the same symptoms. After interviewing the staff who were held on board, Agent Dinozzo discovers that the food is very secured but the ribs that were served was flown in from San Antonio and the only person who had ribs was the President. Meanwhile, Agent Todd gets hounded by Agent Baer to turn the body over to FBI when she lands, she tries to get him to see on their point of view but it doesn't work. Agent Todd informs Special Agent Gibbs what she has been ordered to do and that she won't disobey a direct order. Gibbs tells her he understands and they land in Andrews. Agent Dinozzo, Special Agent Gibbs, and Dr. Mallard have taken Trapp's body to NCIS. At a medical lab, Dr. Mallard is examining Trapp's body and Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto is examining his clothes. Dinozzo goes to Abby and discovers that Trapp might have been poisoned from his own health food. When presenting for Agent Todd, FBI Agent Fornell, Gibbs and Dinozzo about how Trapp died, Dr. Mallard informs them that Trapp suffered a cerebral embolism and had a number of clots that are not unusual to find after suffering from that kind of stroke. Abby tells them that the food Trapp had was free of poison and with that, it's concluded to be a natural death. Now that the case has been solved, Special Agent Gibbs asks Kate if he could join her on the President's flight; she agrees. At a private luncheon, Kate ends her discreet relationship with Major Tim Kerry. After she drives off, Major Kerry suffers the same stroke as Commander Trapp and dies in his car. On Air Force One, while a group of reporters are waiting to interview the President, Agent Kate Todd confesses to Special Agent Gibbs that she ended her relationship with Major Tim Kerry. Later, Agent Dinozzo is called into the crime scene involving Major Kerry; meanwhile, after hours of searching, Abby finally finds something that may have been a cause in Trapp's death. Back on Air Force One, Agent Dinozzo calls Gibbs to inform him about Major Kerry. Also on the line, Dr. Mallard tells them that Major Kerry had multiple cerebral embolisms because he had a bigger dose of what killed him & Trapp. Abby comes on the line and tells them it was venom from an Australian snake. The venom was injected in the suit and it eventually got into the skin. Major Kerry was the intended target and being that he was sick he wasn't on command until the next day, so he didn't wear his suit until then. She also discovers both Kerry's and Trapp's suits were taken to a certain Dry Cleaners. They believe that this is a classic Al Qaida case and with that solved, Mark gives it to the FBI to handle. So, Gibbs gets Todd in a bathroom stall and tells her what happened, but accuses her of killing Kerry being that she was the only one seen with him at the time. After her reaction, Gibbs tells her he was testing her. He tells her what really happened and Todd confesses that Kerry knew Trapp and must have suggested the Dry Cleaners to him. Gibbs comes to the conclusion that the terrorists are after the President and in their own way, were able to get the President to board the plane they are on now. In the back of the plane, a reporter starts to seize and now is when the story starts to unravel. Special Agent Gibbs figures out what their plan has been and stops a reporter from killing the President just in time. After that controversy, Gibbs discovered that Agent Katie Todd has resigned her old job and offers her a job at NCIS, which I'm sure she will take.

Summary: During a training exercise, a marine's parachute fails to open and he crashes into a parked car where two teenagers were making out. The NCIS team heads to the scene and has to determine if the marine's death was accidental or a murder.

The scene begins in a parked car; two teenagers are making out enthusiastically. Or rather, not so enthusiastically - the girl reaches the end of her tether and starts telling her young man to stop; he starts to make it pretty clear that he's not going to stop. She threatens to scream. With a crash, a human body slams through the roof of the vehicle, splattering both teens with blood. The young lady does, indeed, scream.

Gibbs is working on his boat when Tony enters the basement, fills Gibbs in on the particulars of what we have already seen: the man who fell through the car roof was a Marine on a night-training jump with a parachute that failed. He looks around, sees Gibbs' cell phone in a jar of paint thinner and the land-line ripped out of the wall. He comments that he tried to call; Gibbs simply says, "Don't ask."

Cut to: the scene of the accident. The Marines who jumped are all in custody. The girl from the SUV is flipping out. Turns out, it's her father's SUV. MSgt Shaefer is on duty and unaware that his daughter took his car. Gibbs interviews her; they are interrupted several times by the big-mouthed young man, who behaves boorishly and obviously irritates Gibbs. She expresses the belief that the victim was alive after impacting the car.

Gibbs and DiNozzo approach the car; Ducky is already there on a ladder. DiNozzo goes after more equipment as Gibbs and Ducky discuss the unfortunate incident. Gibbs notes that a number of the parachute's shroud lines failed; he explains that this could lead to the chute "tootsie rolling" (refusing to open in the air, taking on the shape of a Tootsie Roll). Gibbs says the lines look worn, as though they simply broke. DiNozzo returns to the scene, trailed by Kate in a tweed suit and heels, who was having trouble getting past the M.P.s due to lack of photo I.D. She gets her first look at the body and is shocked. "My God! Is this for real?" There is some banter, and Gibbs produces a box, holding it out to Kate and welcoming her to NCIS. The box contains combat boots, because heels are inappropriate for crime scene work. Kate expresses amusement - "How did you know my size?"

Kate goes away to put her new boots on and Gibbs goes away. While working, Tony asks Ducky about the phones in Gibbs' house. We learn that today is the anniversary of Gibbs' third marriage; his ex-wife gets drunk every year about this time and calls him repeatedly (as this will eventually turn out to be Stephanie in Season 5, obviously her character underwent some serious changes in 5 years).

Cut to: an airplane hangar. The rest of the paratroop unit are being sequestered here pending the investigation. Gibbs is confronted by an angry CO who demands that his men be released so that they can tell their families they are all right. He also indicates that the men have another training jump tonight. Gibbs refuses, and grounds the unit. When the CO indicates that he may defy Gibbs and release the men anyway, Gibbs fakes a call to Commandant May of the Marine Corps to enforce his requirements. Here we learn that the dead man's name is Sergeant Fuentes.

Tony goes to investigate the airplane and Kate and Gibbs begin the interrogations. They begin with the members of Fuentes' "stick" (the group he jumped with). These are Corporals Dafelmair, Brinkman, and Ramsey. We learn here that Sgt. Fuentes' nickname was "Thumper" because he was extremely lucky - a walking rabbit's foot. Dafelmair says that a week prior to the incident, Fuentes was hit by a car while riding a new bike and was thrown through a plate glass window, surviving with only a "dinged" collarbone. We also learn that Dafelmair was the first to reach Fuentes after the accident. Gibbs releases the men, requiring them to prepare a written statement, and also confiscates their gear. Kate and Gibbs discuss the interrogation, and begin to believe that Fuentes' reaction time may have been slowed by painkillers he was taking for his injured collarbone.

In Autopsy, Ducky lists the various injuries Fuentes sustains and also confirms that Fuentes had a fractured left collarbone. He also confirms that Fuentes was alive - briefly - after impact. He further states that although Fuentes would have died of massive trauma, the technical cause of death was bleed out from the severing of his femoral artery.

In Abby's lab, Abby is changing her paintings and discussing them with Tony. She has hung a new one, a rendering of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the abdomen, and intends to call it "Blast From the Future." Gibbs comes in, looking for his toxicology results. It turns out that Fuentes was on Percocet and Vicodin when he jumped. Abby believes he took them right before jumping. Gibbs says the Marines in his string probably knew. Abby confirms that his reserve chute was fine. Further, she states that the shroud lines on the main chute exhibited fiber disintegration, but not from textile fatigue; rather they seem to have had some sort of acid-containing cleansing agent applied to them. Gibbs assigns Kate to assist Abby in determining what the substance is.

Tony and Gibbs return to the para loft, where Gibbs questions Cpl. Dafelmair, who (it turns out) is a rigger - someone who inspects and prepares the parachutes before jumps. It seems that Dafelmair packed the chute that Fuentes jumped with. There is discussion of the packing - the chutes are packed, then handed out randomly at jump-time. Between those events, they are kept in the para loft under lock and key. Ramsey and Brinkman are also riggers; Fuentes was senior rigger. The only people with keys to the para loft were Fuentes and their CO, Captain Faul. We also learn here that Dafelmair was a drug dealer before joining the Corps; he got the service-or-prison-time choice from the judge, and chose the Marines.

Cut to: Abby's lab. She and Kate are examining the substance on the shroud lines. They identify it as sulphuric acid. Kate asks Abby how she got interested in forensics; Abby reveals that when she was young, she lived next to a junkyard where the aftermath of car accidents was brought, and she used to sneak in at night and take pictures, trying to learn how things happened and the physics of each situation. Kate reveals that she spent a year in law school before deciding she hated it and going into law enforcement instead. There is banter; we feel that Kate and Abby will be good friends. And Kate still has a great smile.

Cut back to the base: Tony and Gibbs are caught up to by a Marine who brings Gibbs a new cell phone, sent by Ducky. They get a call, and Gibbs says he will be there in twenty. We find ourselves back in Abby's lab; in the darkness of her second room, she is standing amid the stretched-out shroud lines of a second parachute, illuminating them under a black-light. They glow strangely with a substance she identifies as sulphuric acid - the same cleaning solution that was on Fuentes' chute. Kate confirms that nine of the sixteen chutes to be used in the jump were tampered with. Four of them were packed by Dafelmair; the rest by Brinkman and Fuentes. We learn here that Cpl. Ramsey has been on a two-week rigging suspension because Fuentes wrote him up for shoddy work. Abby has found DNA traces on all nine of the tampered parachutes, but it is unidentifiable because they do not have access to Cpl. Ramsey's DNA. Kate suggests using the Armed Forces DNA registry; Gibbs says they can't, because it is only for identifying bodies. Kate maintains that there must be a way around that. Gibbs compliments her devious thinking.

In interrogation, Gibbs lays out his case for JAG Lieutenant Bud Roberts. Roberts agrees that the evidence is good; however, he refuses to lawyer them past the Registry restriction, despite Gibbs' attempts at intimidation. He does, however, agree to sign off on some search authorizations to keep Gibbs happy. Returning to the squad room, Kate and Gibbs discuss his tactics. He compares what he did to horse trading. Tony confirms the reason for Ramsey's rigging suspension and further states that scuttlebutt says Ramsey took a swing at Fuentes over the suspension. Gibbs gets a cell phone call with the caller ID blocked; Tony puts his foot in his mouth about Gibbs' marriage.

Gibbs goes to Sgt. Fuentes' house for reasons unknown. He has a chat with Sgt. Fuentes' young son, Billy, and his widow. He and Billy discuss the unfinished state of the tree house that Sgt. Fuentes was building and Billy's lack of a password for the tree house. Billy expresses his desire to make his father proud and not cry in front of the Marines at the funeral. Gibbs tells him about JFK, Jr. saluting the coffin at JFK's funeral. "You salute your dad today. Nobody will notice tears." He also assures Mrs. Fuentes that he will see justice done.

Back at base, we find Tony practising to jump out of an airplane. This is done by jumping off a raised platform into a sand pit. He tells Gibbs he is doing research for Abby. The three go to execute their search warrant on the riggers' lockers, which were all sealed immediately after Fuentes's death. In Cpl. Ramsey's locker, Kate finds a can of brass stripper solvent which contains sulphuric acid. Ramsey claims it is not his, and is taken into custody. In interrogation, a key to the para loft is found on Ramsey's key chain. Gibbs offers Ramsey a chance to prove his innocence by providing a DNA sample.

Back in the squad room, there is a discussion. The DNA sample will take 24 hours to run; Gibbs does not want to wait that long for answers. If Ramsey is innocent, Faul, Dafelmair or Brinkman may be guilty. He and Kate go to interrogate Capt. Faul. He has a good alibi for the time when the chutes were tampered with. Kate and Gibbs return to the squad room. Tony has more information. Ramsey participated in handing out the chutes despite his suspension. Fuentes supervised from the truck. Kate comments that Ramsey could have given Fuentes a dirty chute. Gibbs twigs on the words and heads back down to Abby's lab, Kate and Tony in tow. He wants Fuentes' reserve chute, but Abby has something more interesting: on the sabotaged shroud lines are traces of cocaine.

Gibbs looks at the reserve in question: it is too clean to have been involved in a bloody fall like the one Fuentes took. They go to examine Brinkman, Dafelmair and Ramsey's chutes, and they find one - number 13 - which is dirty. He examines it and discovers that the reserve is unusable - the cone has been soldered in place. Gibbs orders Kate to call Capt. Faul and tell him that jump ops can resume, but not to identify the killer (who is clearly not Ramsey). Then he tells DiNozzo that they are going to be jumping. He wants the killer to confess.

That night, Gibbs and DiNozzo join the paratroopers on their training jump. There is a conversation on the plane which leads to Tony switching reserve chutes with Dafelmair. When their stick is called, Gibbs confronts Dafelmair about his drug dealing activities. He advises Dafelmair that a confession and the name of his supplier will get him a deal. He cuts Dafelmair's shroud lines - Dafelmair knows the reserve is bad. Dafelmair asks how good of a deal he can get. Brinkman attacks him, screaming "He doesn't deserve a deal!" In the resulting scuffle, Tony is pushed out of the plane.

Back in the squad room, Tony watches news coverage of the arrest. He and Gibbs chat for a moment; he leaves, limping (this is what happens when parachute strapping pulls tight on a sensitive area of the male anatomy). Gibbs watches him leave with some amusement. Gibbs remains behind, doing paperwork. Gibbs' cell phone rings. The caller ID reads "Caller ID Withheld." Gibbs puts the phone in his drawer and leaves.

The next morning, the door to the Fuentes' house opens and young Billy comes out in his pajamas to the sound of hammering. Heart-warmingly, Gibbs is up in the tree, finishing Billy's tree house. Billy wants to come up. Gibbs asks him if he has a password yet. Billy says, "Yes, sir! Semper Fi!" Gibbs admits that it is a good password. Billy comes up, and Gibbs lets the little boy help him finish the work.

Summary: When a Navy commander's body washes up on shore along with the bodies of two drug runners, Gibbs refuses to believe that the sailor who was killed was dirty.

The scene is set: a group of college kids are partying on a beach. Their party is interrupted by the sound of gunfire out on the water. They turn the music off to hear better. Moments later, an unmanned speedboat drives ashore right into the middle of where they all were gathered. They scatter. Upon returning to the site, they find that the back of the boat has been peppered by gunfire.

Gibbs enters the squad room on a Monday morning. DiNozzo is desperately searching for a case to avoid sexual harassment training.

Gibbs opines that if he has to sit through sexual harassment training again, he'll shoot himself. In the nick of time they get a call. A dead Navy Commander washed up on the beach. They arrive to find a local officer talking to a reporter - Diane Fontaine. The officer states that the commander was involved in running drugs. He advises Gibbs that the DEA is working two dead drug dealers three miles north. Gibbs has DiNozzo escort the reporter off the scene, then he and Ducky chastise Sergeant Linn for contaminating the crime scene. Actually chastise is too mild a word for what they do! Verbal disembowelment comes closer.

Gibbs sends Kate to get witness reports, examine the boat and have it towed back to the garage. DiNozzo returns, with Fontaine's phone number, crowing. Ducky comes to the group, still ranting about Linn and the contaminated crime scene. They roll the body over and find that the Commander was shot in the back. Gibbs orders Tony and Gerald to bag the body and any evidence and meet him and Ducky at Fort Story, where the DEA is working the drug dealers.

Gibbs and Ducky arrive at the DEA scene and are met by DEA Agent Fuller and Army CID Captain Bradstone. Agent Fuller believes that the deaths are connected because "How many guys do you know go out fishing in the middle of the night?" Gibbs says that he does. The drug dealers, however, did not. Fuller believes that the dealers were killed for their drugs and their boat. Captain Bradstone's medical examiner is unavailable; he has no objection to NCIS and DEA working the scene as long as he can get the reports. Upon initial examination of the bodies, Gibbs discovers that they are carrying large amounts of $100 bills. Gibbs wants to know how many drug dealers dump bodies and cash.

Returning to the squad room, Kate is incensed that she was left to ride in the tow truck with the boat. She voices her displeasure. She then begins to go over the particulars of the evidence: the gun battle occurred around 0230. The Commander was running from the gunfire: there were six bullet holes in the stern of the boat and two in the engine housing. The partying students heard the attacking boat go up the coast. On the boat was all the evidence that the Commander was simply out doing some night fishing. No drugs. Gibbs tells Kate about the money; she wants to see it. Gibbs notes that the college kids were right: the shooters either went up the Chesapeake or the Maryland coast. He tells DiNozzo to find out which.

In Autopsy, Ducky is sharing a story with Agent Fuller while retrieving the bullets from the Commander's body. When he starts his incision for examination, Agent Fuller does not look well and abruptly excuses himself. Ducky sends a bullet up to Abby. We see Gibbs in the squad room doing paperwork; Fontaine is on the news telling how Commander Farrell was found dead on the beach near the drug dealers' bodies. She goes on to state that a night basketball program Farrell helped found - which was designed to bring at-risk youth off the street - has been suspended because of the suspected drug connection. Gibbs becomes determined to clear Farrell's name and restart the program.

Gibbs goes down to one of the basketball courts and finds two young men who have jumped the locked fence and are playing in the dark. He questions them about Farrell and whether he might have been involved in drugs. The young men are suspicious of Gibbs but, once he assures them that he simply wants to clear Farrell's name and get the basketball court unlocked, they finally tell him that they do not believe Farrell would have been involved in drugs. Here we learn that Farrell's nickname among the young men he helped was "Seadog."

The next day, in Abby's lab, Kate gives a mini-lecture about micro-printing on American money to foil counterfeiters. She has determined that the bills the drug dealers had are fake, because the micro-printing on them reads "Untied" States of America. Tony states that according to the tide charts, judging by the location where the bodies washed up, the dealers' boat must have been entering Chesapeake Bay. Gibbs asks Agent Fuller to bring in the two rival drug gang leaders to help identify and locate the missing boat. He asks Kate if there is anyone with the Secret Service she can trust to help her find out who forged the money without informing their boss. She thinks there is.

As Kate leaves, Abby waves her arms to get Gibbs' attention from behind a window. She uses sign language to tell Gibbs that the AK-47 round that killed Farrell came from the same gun that killed the drug dealers. Tony is surprised that Abby can sign; Gibbs tells him that her parents were/are deaf. Tony asks where Gibbs learned; he does not answer. She comes out and advises him that she has more information. She found gunshot residue on the smugglers' hands, but Farrell was clean. In the elevator, Gibbs asks Tony for Fontaine's number.

Gibbs meets Fontaine for lunch. He offers her further information on the Farrell story in exchange for her being willing to air a story to clear Farrell's name. Returning to HQ, Gibbs refuses to give Tony details about lunch. The drug dealers are there; Gibbs goes down to Autopsy, where they are waiting. Gibbs pulls out the bodies; the drug dealers are Trujillo's. Gibbs explains about Farrell dying in the crossfire between Trujillo's and Wilkins' gangs; Trujillo decides to lawyer up. Gibbs brings out the counterfeit bills, explains that they came from a foreign government known to support terrorism. He explains his intention to hold Wilkins and Trujillo as supporters of terrorism and have them sent to Guantanamo to be held without habeas corpus. It works - Trujillo decides to talk.

Trujillo explains that the dead smugglers took the boat out without his permission or knowledge. Wilkins states that his people did not kill Trujillo's, and Trujillo believes him. Gibbs says he will accept this if Trujillo will give them the boat. Trujillo tries to claim he can't do this, but Wilkins tells them that all of Trujillo's boats are outfitted with GPS equipment. The boat, La Eternidad, is located and the investigation there begins. The boat is shot up and the interior covered in blood. Gibbs sends Fuller out to find information, then stands on the stern of the boat, visualizing the shootout. Tony believes that he is looking at the attractive young ladies in a boat across the way.

Kate is sitting on a park bench, working on a sketch of Gibbs. Here we learn for the first time that Kate is an artist. A woman approaches her, calling her Caitlin. She greets her warmly. This woman is Marcy, to whom Kate has gone for help with the counterfeit money. They hug, but Marcy is not very friendly. They chat for a moment, then Marcy says that "we" were able to trace the money. Kate catches the "we" with consternation. Marcy chastises Kate for thinking anyone would slip her info on this. We see Agent Fornell standing nearby as Marcy explains that "we" had to inform the FBI. Kate is less than pleased.

Back at the marina, Fuller says that Jenny and Nancy - the young ladies Tony was admiring earlier - were very helpful. They saw a young man in his late twenties with a couple of cell phones and a laptop working on the boat. They saw a white van pull up, the men moved heavy suitcases and a third man to the van from the boat, and left. Tony insists he could get more information from the young ladies if Gibbs gives him a chance. Reluctantly, Gibbs allows it.

Back at HQ, Kate is standing in the squad room looking extremely incensed when Gibbs arrives. He asks if she got anything from her friend; she says "Yep." He walks around her to see Fornell sitting in his chair and turns back to her, saying, "You disappoint me, Kate." He then tells her she needs to seriously rethink her definition of the word 'friend.' She says that in Marcy's position, she'd have done the same thing. Fornell makes a crack about her running out of job options, then tells Gibbs that the serial numbers on the fake bills match some that were passed by 9/11 hijackers. The killers are terrorists.

In MTAC, Morrow is on the video chat with the director of the FBI, discussing the terrorists and that the FBI has a database of terrorist information. Morrow wants to know why NCIS didn't have access to this database. There is political maneuvering, and Morrow obtains permanent access to the database with some well-placed threats.

Back at the marina, Tony is enjoying an afternoon with a pair of young Australian 'sheilas' in bikinis. He seems to be working very hard, if his extremely poor Australian accent is taken into account. He gets them to re-enact their afternoon to try and remember more details about what they'd seen. As this is happening, the terrorist database finds a fingerprint match - a Seth Shakir, a Saudi terrorist with a high priority. He's wanted for a bombing in Baghdad. Tony returns from the marina with information: one of the girls remembered that the man driving the van was wearing a uniform. Tony got surveillance tapes and learned that the van belongs to the power company.

Abby arrives, bearing news that she was only able to match prints to the drug dealers in the cooler. She is advised that she did not have access to the whole database, and chastises Fornell. She also says that she found traces of C4 on the boat. Fornell is relieved that the terrorists are "just gonna try to blow something up." Fornell puts out an APB for the power company truck and leaves. Gibbs thinks Fornell is too fixed on his target. He mentions the great Northeast blackout of August 2003, which was caused in part by a tree falling on some power lines. With some research, they learn that three key failures in Virginia's power grid could cascade and black out the entire United States. They head for the nearest node, in Fairfax.

At or near the node in question, Shakir is seen working on his laptop. Gibbs finds a place where a transmission line crosses the node; if this were blown, it would work the same as taking out the node itself. They head for it, and spy Shakir sitting below the tower, working. He sees them arriving and begins to yell in Arabic. He grabs an AK-47 and shoots at their car. Gibbs returns fire. Shakir falls down, dropping his glasses, and crawls back to his computer, attempting to go ahead with the detonation. He is typing in the number to the cell phone when Gibbs shoots him. Shakir tries to continue, but Gibbs and Kate shoot him again and he dies.

They move to investigate the setup, disconnect the computer from the phones, and discuss. Gibbs says they are lucky he wasn't phone savvy; he'd typed in six of the seven numbers to the phone. Kate says he was savvy enough to wire all three phones to the same number. Gibbs points out that if Shakir had truly been savvy, he'd have used speed dial. Interesting comment from a man who acts as if he is a technophobe.

Cut to: a lighted basketball court, at night. Young black men are playing basketball; Fontaine is telling her story to a camera, clearing "Seadog's" name with the media. Gibbs is watching from outside the court. Fontaine finishes her story and approaches Gibbs. They talk. She cannot guarantee the story will be aired, but she is trying. He thanks her, walks away, and is picked up by the Bond Girl in the silver BMW.

While a group of friends are out sailing, one of them goes swimming and discovers a body at the bottom of the ocean. Seaman Russell McDonald's body was in found in the Bahamas, which is near Puerto Rico. That gets DiNozzo started on how much he loves Puerto Rico. McDonald's body had a sword and had chains with weights hooked to them wrapped around his waist. DiNozzo and Todd go to tell McDonald's mother about him. His mother told them about his father and how he dies when he was 12. She also told them that he wasn't the type of person who would kill himself. Gibbs, Todd use that sword from a book Agent Gibbs found in his rack. On a video line, Abby informs Gibbs, Todd and Dinozzo that she found a St. Christopher medal and a character charter for a fantasy game; a massive multi-player on-line role-playing game MMORPG. She also noticed that the sword had nicks in it, possibly was in contact with another sword. So Todd goes investigates that while Abby will try to find out what type of game McDonald was playing and what type of files he had in that game. Gibbs and Dinozzo talked with Ducky next. He found dirt under McDonald's fingernails; the dirt was from the sea floor. With that, he comes to the conclusion that McDonald was still alive when he went into the water. Later on, Dinozzo finds out that McDonald probably got the sword from the Base Exchange Roosevelt Roads Naval Station and the only way he could get one if the cashier wasn't checking IDs. No one is allowed to have swords on board, so if he had one, he would have to hide it. Meanwhile, Gibbs talks with a captain and is informed that if two of his men wanted to stage sword fights and not get caught, they would probably do it in, Damage control, in the machine room at night. While Abby works on MMORPG, Todd talks with the corpsman again to find out if there were any injuries reported that could help. Later, Dinozzo informs Gibbs about the swords and Abby calls Gibbs and tells him that she found a game site called "The Immortals" McDonald frequently went to. His character name was Waylin. The charter she found on him referred to his main rival knight Kinvaras. Their main mode of combat was "Parle", which means Sword Fighting. She also discovered that the guy who plays Kinvaras, logs on from the foster, the ship that Gibbs, Dinozzo, and Todd are on. Gibbs believes that McDonald found out who Kinvaras was and that he was on the ship and decided to take it to the next level. So, if they both had swords, chances are they had to have bought it at the Naval Base Exchange in Puerto Rico. So Dinozzo offers to go down to Puerto Rico, pretend to buy a sword, expose the clerk and find out what he can. Back at Navy NCIS headquarters, Abby finds McDonald's "Weylin's" Profile on Immortals and now has to find out the password to access the information. Meanwhile in Puerto Rico, Agent Dinozzo cons a clerk into selling him a sword and then tells her he's really Navy NCIS and needs to find out who else she has sold swords to. Down in the control room, Gibbs and Todd find scratches on poles; scratches that look like a sword hit it. While discovering more of them, Todd gets into a conversation about McDonald being a Catholic and that he would never commit suicide. Being that she's Catholic herself, she would know because it's suicide is not part of their culture. Dinozzo calls Gibbs and informs him that the Base Exchange was selling swords illegally. They did sell one to McDonald and to three others who Dinozzo has a description of. Later, Gibbs and Todd go through each Seaman's file that matches the description Dinozzo gave them. They run across Petty Officer Ronald Zuger file and learn that he had a cut on his arm from a glass but there weren't any glass shards in the wound. He also matches one of the descriptions that Dinozzo provided. Gibbs finds him on the computer playing a sword-fighting round in Immortals. Meanwhile Abby gets access to McDonald's password on Immortals and skims through his numerous journal entries. She then calls Gibbs but Todd picks up instead. Abby informs Todd that she got into McDonald's journal; Todd offers to read all of the entries. During the questioning, Gibbs learns that McDonald and Zuger did fight for real and it was McDonald's idea to take the game to the next level. He also finds out that Zuger was helping a friend with a computer problem the night McDonald went overboard. Meanwhile Todd reads McDonald's journal entries and learns just how obsessed he was with the game. Gibbs questions Carnahan and asks him about the computer problem that Zuger helped him with the night McDonald went overboard. He learns that he was helping him delete porn off of his computer because he was sure his C.O. was suspecting him of doing just that. On a video communication line, Gibbs talks with Ducky about any other injuries McDonald may have, Ducky tells them he nothing else new. So with that, it does look like a suicide but Todd disagrees, and not because of religious morals. After reading McDonald's journal entries, she learns that McDonald was so intent to finish his battle with Kinvaras that he wouldn't let anything stand in his way. So with that, he wouldn't have a reason to kill himself. While Dinozzo requests Zuger's records, Todd discovers an entry that says when McDonald is off the ship; he will release a great plague on a realm by the next full moon destroying all of his enemies. With that, Gibbs remembers that McDonald applied for NBC program (Nuclear Biological and Chemical Weapons) but failed. So they figure the realm McDonald was referring to was the ship; McDonald was convinced that the crew was aiding his enemy. The group also realizes that the sun is going to set in less than an hour. So Gibbs gets Dinozzo to get Zuger to find out if there was anything on McDonald's computer about any kind of nuclear bomb. Gibbs knows that Navy Ships don't have the authority to carry bio-chemical weapons nor have the materials to make one and with that goes to warn the captain. While Seamen search for around the ship for the bomb, Dinozzo gets Zuger on the web-site to find out if McDonald said anything about setting off a bomb on the ship and Todd and Gibbs learn that there are no missing parts from the ship to create a bomb. While on the computer, Zuger's Kinvaras files get deleted due to a virus McDonald set. Gibbs questions Zuger if McDonald said anything about setting off a bomb on the ship; Zuger tells him he doesn't know anything. Gibbs gets Todd to look over McDonald's diary again to see if they missed something and has a chat with Zuger to find out everything that happened between him and McDonald. As more time passes by, the bomb still hasn't been found, nothing else has been found in McDonald's diary and no other ship or aircraft will arrive in time to help unload everybody off the ship. Gibbs finally gets a confession out of Zuger. Turns out that Zuger realized that McDonald really thought he was immortal and was trying to kill him when they fought for real. So Zuger challenged McDonald to swim across the ocean wearing the weights because that was the only way McDonald could prove to him that he was really immortal and because he wanted to win the game. Gibbs gets called into the Captain's Sea Cabin and Todd still searches for a clue in McDonald's journal entries. With a little over five minutes, Todd puts the pieces together and comes to the conclusion that when McDonald was referring to destroying the realm and cutting of the heads of the crew, it meant two different things. Destroying the realm meant destroying Kinvaras's web-site and cutting of the heads of the crew meant killing the leader of the crew and the leader of the crew is the captain. McDonald was so convinced everyone on the ship was aiding his enemy, the only way to get revenge was to kill the leader. As the sun is about to set, Gibbs and the Captain are arguing about the bomb and Todd and Dinozzo comes bursting in to find out where the captain usually is during sunset; which is in the room they are in now. So the four get out of the room in time before the bomb goes off. Back at Navy NCIS, Abby explains the situation to Ducky. Seaman McDonald is Weylin and Petty Officer Zuger was Kinvaras. Weylin and Kinvaras battling online in the Immortals game. Zuger always wins and McDonald challenges him to fight for real; when they do, McDonald wins. So Zuger goes back to the one thing he knows he can beat McDonald in, Immortals. Then, Zuger realizes that McDonald really thought he was Waylin and challenges him to prove it. So McDonald puts on the weights, jumps into the ocean and tries to walk across the ocean floor to dry land. In the end, Dinozzo gives Todd and Gibbs their gifts from Puerto Rico. Todd gets a bikini (really a bottom and a hat) and Gibbs gets an online fighting game in Spanish. With that, another case is solved.

Summary: A Navy lieutenant who was reported missing nearly ten years ago has been found by a deer hunter. When the NCIS team arrives at the scene to investigate, they see that his remains have been mummified. Now, they have to find out what happened to him and what happened to the one million dollars that he had on his ship.

golf clubs and the mummified corpse we've all been waiting for. Mr. Sportsman flips out, understandably.

Gibbs shows up at HQ just long enough to collect his team and haul their butts out of there again. He pauses long enough to provide us with a helpful map view of Saint Mary's River State Park, which is presumably where Mr. Sportsman found our mummy. There is amusing banter regarding Tony's status as "Gas The Truck Boy". We skip the middle part and arrive at the park, where the local police are all over the scene and Mr. Sportsman is standing to the side, looking a little silly with his bow in his hands. Ducky theorizes that the aircraft drop tank in which our mummy friend is located must have been airtight. Gibbs goes to chat with Mr. Sportsman, who says he thought it was a missile or bomb of some kind.

Gibbs verifies what Mr. Sportsman touched and did not touch and requests his fingerprints for exclusionary purposes. He is very nice. Must be the weather. Kate is taking pictures; Tony is sketching. He reports proudly that he knows what this is - a 314 gallon external fuel tank from

We join a hunt in progress. The camouflaged man with the crossbow is apparently new at this, because he misses the buck he's aiming for by about three feet, shooting a defenseless tree instead. He comes down out of his deer blind and gives chase, only to trip over something and fall. He brushes the leaves off the item, breaks out his handy Boy Scout knife, whacks on it a few times, and then pops the handy hatch open. He pulls out a military bag with the legend "LCDR FARNSWORTH" painted on it, above a Navy insignia. Looking past this curious item into the open hatch, he sees a set of an F-14 Tomcat. Here we learn that tomorrow will be the second anniversary of Tony joining NCIS. Then we learn that our mummy is a Lieutenant, meaning that the bag in the pod could not be his. Kate is to ride back to HQ with the pod on a flatbed.

In the evidence garage, Abby slices the pod open with a power saw. She has gotten some partial prints off the hatch that did not belong to the hunter. She should also be able to obtain a serial number from the bottom of the pod. Gibbs wants the TFOA report for this pod. Abby finishes cutting, and Gibbs and Tony lift the lid of the pod away. Abby evinces glee – "sailor on the half-shell!". There is discussion about the mummy's shoeless state and examination of the pod contents. From the mummy's dog-tags, he is identified as Lieutenant Mark Schilz. The golf bag is labeled as belonging to Lieutenant Lynch.

Kate comes up with Schilz's service record; he was reported missing off the USS Eisenhower on March 4, 1994. Schilz was labeled a deserter 30 days later and received a dishonorable discharge after being charged in absentia with the theft of $1.2 million from the ship safe; Schilz had been the ship disbursing officer. Tony arrives back with the TFOA report; LCdr Farnsworth turns out to have been the pilot of the Tomcat that dropped the pod. Lt. Lynch turns out to be Farnsworth's Radar Intercept Officer. There is discussion of the plot so far. Kate theorizes that Schilz was trying to make his getaway in the cargo pod. Gibbs disagrees; the air would be nearly unbreathable at flight level for an F-14, and the missing money was not in the pod. Tony is set to locate the on-board NCIS agent from the Eisenhower investigation; Kate is set to locate Schilz's widow.

Gibbs goes to autopsy. We learn that the unfortunate deceased suffered a postmortem broken jaw from one of the golf clubs hitting him in the face when the cargo pod landed. We also learn that, four years ago, Gibbs' third wife hit him over the head with a baseball bat. We also learn that Schilz apparently bled to death internally, probably stabbed with something small and thin (like an ice pick, maybe?) Which means that Schilz was murdered and then stuffed into the cargo pod. Back in the bullpen, Kate still has a great smile, and she uses it on Gibbs. They discuss the murder. Gibbs thinks an accomplice may have murdered Schilz, if he had been killed in the disbursing office, it would be next to impossible to transport his body to a cargo pod across a ship carrying 6,000 people. Kate locates Schilz's widow and from a helpful shot of her computer monitor, we learn the proper spelling of his name... and then we edit the recap.

Tony returns with the name of the NCIS agent, Richard Owens, who is currently located at NCIS Pearl Harbor. He puts his foot in his mouth when he describes the 37-year-old Owens as being "considerably" younger than Gibbs, and we all wonder how Tony's managed to make it two years without Gibbs firing him yet. In Owens' report, we learn that on the night of the robbery, there was a report of a man overboard. A life vest beacon was seen in the carrier wake; Schilz's shoes were found in the life vest hold. In his notes (which are attached to the file), Owens theorized that Schilz faked falling overboard and hid out on board until the carrier put in to Norfolk. Tony continues to irritate Gibbs. Something that Tony is a master at.

Kate interviews Schilz's widow; she is remarried with a daughter who is Schilz's daughter, born the same day Schilz went missing. We learn that Mrs. Schilz did not get any death benefits or dependent support from the Navy for her daughter due to Schilz's dishonorable discharge. We get our first glimpse of Kate's bleeding heart, and we learn that Schilz called his wife in the hospital from the Eisenhower the morning he disappeared (which was a big deal in those days). In MTAC, Gibbs and Tony talk to Owens via video conference. Gibbs casts a number of aspersions on Owens' investigation and the more Gibbs talks, the more incompetent Owens looks. Owens is a little unhappy about this. Gibbs orders Owens to report to the Eisenhower in Norfolk on Saturday morning.

In the evidence garage, Abby has been examining the pod. She has learned that the pod, which is attached to the Tomcat by two hooks, was deliberately set up to fall off the plane; whoever set it wanted it to fall off in the ocean but succumbed to epic fail. Tony continues to needle Gibbs about his age. Kate arrives back from Mrs. Schilz's house, bleeding heart on her sleeve. She tells Gibbs that Schilz called his wife at 0533 on the morning of the robbery; the call lasted twelve minutes. We learn here that the assistant disbursing officer was an Ensign Wiles - who, oddly enough, is the former Mrs. Schilz's new husband.

Saturday morning finds Tony doing the crossword while waiting with an impatient Owens for Gibbs to show up. Gibbs and Kate are at a shooting range, interviewing former Ensign Randy Wiles. We learn here that Mrs. Wiles does not know that her husbands served together. In a move straight out of a lame romantic comedy (Bounce, according to our self-referential scriptwriters), Wiles fell for his former shipmate's widow and never told her who he was. Gibbs points out that a more believable plotline might include stealing the money, setting Schilz up, killing him, getting away with it and marrying Schilz's wife. Wiles points out that he works the shooting range during the day, does accounting at night, sends Alicia to public school, drives a crappy car and lives in a rented house, none of which would be true if he had a stolen million dollars. Gibbs inquires after the disbursing clerk, Petty Officer Toner. Wiles explains that Toner enlisted to catch an officer.

Gibbs arrives at the Eisenhower and discusses the case with Owens. Owens explains that Wiles and Toner could not have committed the theft; Wiles was at an all-night poker game, and Toner was under figurative lock and key - that tour was the first time females were allowed at sea on extended cruises, and they were (supposedly) carefully watched; Gibbs inquires how many of those females came back pregnant. The answer: quite a few. Kate calls, advises Gibbs that Farnsworth and Lynch were both killed in a ramp strike two years ago. Gibbs says if they were still in the Navy two years ago, they probably weren't involved in the theft. She has traced Toner to Westchester, PA and is on her way there to question Toner.

She arrives at a country club just in time to interrupt Toner's tee-off. She sits down for a nice chat about the expensive country club Toner belongs to and the expensive house she lives in. Toner, who seems to enjoy calling Kate "honey," smirks and provides a winning Ohio Lottery ticket and newspaper article to go with; she claims she won $2 million. Cut: Abby enters Autopsy, shouting "Fore!" and causing Ducky to duck out of reflex. We learn that Abby does not like being called Abigail, and a niblick (it's a golf club with a very specific shape) is not a sex act. We further learn that the unfortunate Lt. Schilz died of a puncture wound to the chest caused by a thin, sharp object, and had odd post-mortem hairline fractures to the pelvis and lower lumbar. Ducky asks Abby to recheck that area of Schilz's uniform for any anomalies.

Gibbs is investigating the disbursing office, and begins to suspect that there may have been something going on between Owens and Toner. Owens denies it, claiming that Toner had something going on with a Petty Officer Ted Martínez, who left the Navy in June of 1994 and was a plane captain on the Tomcat that dropped the pod with Schilz's body. Kate calls to share the information about the lottery with Gibbs; she will call the state lottery board in the morning to confirm the information. The information about Martínez gives him means to stuff Schilz's body into the cargo pod. DiNozzo makes yet another crack about Gibbs' age and - WOO! First headslap ever!

Gibbs walks into Abby's very noisy lab - ("It's the Newlydeads.") - just as Abby pulls an anomalous orange fiber off Schilz's uniform. She has also matched some of the prints on the pod to PO Martínez. One print did not match Martínez; Abby is trying to locate its owner. Gibbs has a suspect; we do not learn who yet. Gibbs comes up into the squadroom and is surprised to find Owens there; Owens wants to help with the investigation. Gibbs sets him to searching for Martínez.

Kate arrives in the office around 14:00 on what seems to be Sunday afternoon. Gibbs and Tony are asleep in their chairs; Owens is still working at 'his' desk. Gibbs wakes to the smell of Kate's coffee, which he subsequently snitches almost out of her hand and drinks half of, much to Kate's horror. Owens has tracked Martínez to Guadalajara, Mexico, before losing the trail. Gibbs brings Abby coffee and asks about his fingerprint. She has nothing good enough to take to court, but she does have info on the fiber: cotton canvas, dyed Orange #7. Not a life preserver; those are made of urethane-coated nylon. Gibbs twigs: it's from an orange mail bag. In the squad room, Kate is verifying Toner's story with the Ohio Lottery; turns out, Toner did hit the lottery - for $37,000.

Owens discovers that Martínez was murdered in a motel in Piedra Negras. Gibbs sends Kate to bring Erin Toner in to HQ. She has to come voluntarily. Kate goes, feeds Toner a story about making a virtual recreation of the theft for Martínez's trial, and attempts to appeal to Toner for the sake of Schilz's daughter receiving benefits due her from the Navy; Toner suggests that they play the lottery. Kate pulls a paper out of her bag, and advises Toner that if she doesn't come to D.C. voluntarily, Kate will sign orders having Toner recalled to active duty as a material witness in the case - "All I gotta do is ink 'em, honey, and your ass is back in the Navy."

Back at HQ, Abby plays a virtual recreation of the theft showing Martínez forcing Schilz to ransack the safe and carry the money to the plane, then killing him and stuffing his body in the pod. Toner is sarcastic about the animation but claims the scenario works for her. Gibbs says it doesn't for him; Schilz would have known Martínez was going to kill him and would have resisted; Martínez would have had to kill him in disbursing. They share the mail-bag epiphany with Toner. A fingerprint match comes up on the second plasma, and he says he'll get back to it. They move forward with their theory, discussing how Martínez would have gotten attention with his body-stuffed mailbag, and Owens remembers how Toner used to turn heads on the ship. Toner tries to leave; Kate grabs her arm and says "Not till the show's over."

Abby puts a second scenario up on the plasma; this one, better animated, shows Martínez dragging the full mailbag while Toner follows behind, flirting with passersby to keep attention away from Martínez. Toner stands, says the animation is better but it isn't evidence. She threatens arrests for assault and unlawful detainment; Gibbs says she's free to go. As she moves to leave, he gets back to the fingerprint match: it's Toner's fingerprint. She asks where they found it: "Mark's uniform? All that proves is that we got it on." Gibbs says no; they found it on the pistol that killed Martínez, which they got from Mexican authorities. They threaten her: a confession, or extradition to Mexico.

That evening, in the squad room, Owens comments that in Hawaii, it takes forever to get anything out of the federales. Tony allows that they have the same problem in D.C. Owens is astonished to learn, as they all pile into the elevator, that the fingerprint match was faked. The elevator closes on smiles all around. They all have great smiles.

Summary: An NCIS agent who used to work under Gibbs asks for the team's help investigating a case where sailors on an aircraft carrier are dying of a drug overdose, but have no history of any kind of drug abuse.

We find ourselves in a club, at what looks like a pretty good party. A young man, sweating and perturbed, makes his way through the crowd. His friends wonder where he went, calling him Wilkes. Moments later, in the back of the kitchen, a cook opens the walk-in freezer to discover the young man standing there, still sweating and perturbed but now disturbingly lacking in clothing.

Gibbs is in his basement, working on his boat, with a ball game on the television. His phone rings; he lets the machine get it. The voice on the line announces itself as Stan Burley, admonishing Gibbs to put down whatever he's doing with "that stupid boat" and pick up. Burley goes on to say he needs Gibbs' help with a case on the Enterprise - and he addresses Gibbs as "Boss." Gibbs answers - "Okay. You got my interest." Burley, who we see on an aircraft carrier (presumably the USS Enterprise), explains about the young man in the freezer: an arresting-gear operator who "went whacko" on liberty in Rota, Spain. When he was found in the freezer, his body temperature was 106. Gibbs knows that the young man must be a chronic drug user from the symptoms; Burley suspects amphetamines, but the young man's last random drug test - less than three weeks ago - was negative.

At HQ, Tony and Kate have arrived with their luggage, ready to head for the carrier. The group discusses Burley; Abby and Ducky remember him fondly. Ducky asks Kate to take Burley a cricket ball; apparently it's one of the few sports Burley does not play. Tony is clearly upset by all the love being shown to Burley. Gibbs gets off the phone and says their flight is waiting; they exit. Arriving at the plane, Tony explains to Kate that she will get lost. There is a detailed explanation of the labeling system of the bulkheads, by which the ship is navigated. Watch the episode. Tony and Gibbs are clearly yanking her chain about getting lost, though navigating a ship that size is bound to be somewhat confusing at first.

On arrival, the team is met by Stan, who confirms that Wilkes's tox report came back with traces of meth. Tony is made to feel insecure by Burley, probably by accident, but Tony has a rather delicate ego despite his bravado. Kate is sent to interview Petty Officers Niles and Shrewe, Wilkes's buddies; Tony is sent to interview CPO Reyes, their CO. Gibbs asks for deck tapes of Reyes in action; Burley can provide. Kate does, in fact, get lost; she finds her way into a men's head and has an embarrassingly funny conversation with a man at a urinal, who gives her directions. Gibbs goes to sickbay to interview Wilkes, who vehemently insists he does not use drugs, nor anyone on his crew.

Kate finds the deck 5 berthing, is told that Niles has gone up to work out in the hangar bay. We note that she is writing on her hand instead of using her Palm Pilot or a notebook and the idle mind wonders why. She finds Niles, who admits he messed around with drugs in high school but says he doesn't touch the stuff now. He also does not believe Wilkes would do so; Wilkes is 4th-generation Navy. Cut to Gibbs on the ship's bridge; the ship's commander advises Gibbs that the Enterprise is being temporarily rerouted on a search-and-rescue mission. The skipper is very adamant about needing any existing drug problem found and stopped.

We find the flight deck crew in action. It's all very exciting. Reyes is not forthcoming with Tony. He saw nothing unusual, heard nothing unusual. Tony clearly does not buy it. Another plane is coming in for a landing, but before it can, another crew member - Petty Officer Schrewe - goes nuts on the deck, screaming about the flyer calling the meatball. The incoming plane is waved off at the last moment, and Schrewe is taken to sickbay. The doctor says it looks like the same situation - chronic, long-term meth use... but Schrewe's last random drug test was also negative, just like Wilkes. Gibbs requires the doctor to make sure Schrewe is conscious to be interviewed at 1500. Gibbs sends Tony to toss Schrewe's rack and Kate to interview the urinalysis coordinator.

Watching the flight deck tapes, Gibbs and Burley find an anomaly - one crew member virtually dancing around on the deck. The tape was made before the liberty stop at Rota; Burley says the drug supplier could have restocked at Nice or a previous port. Kate interviews the urinalysis coordinator. Urine samples are not tested on board; they are shipped stateside. He explains the testing procedures and some ways that the men may try to beat the test. The coordinator feels it unlikely that two men in six weeks should be able to beat the test, but claims that anything's possible. high seas

Gibbs goes to sickbay to interview PO Schrewe, who also claims he has never done drugs, drunk alcohol or even used tobacco in his life. While Gibbs is interviewing Schrewe, a Code Blue is called on Wilkes, who dies. Gibbs watches this occur. Gibbs, Kate and Tony stand on a balcony watching as a large group of men inspects the flight deck. Gibbs believes Wilkes was killed because he would give up his supplier; Kate points out that the whole situation makes no sense. Tony asks after Burley; Gibbs says he is looking at flight deck footage still, and goes to see how he's doing. Kate tries to make Tony's fragile ego feel better, but the sentiment gets lost in translation. Tony and Kate both have great smiles.

In autopsy, Ducky is working on PO Wilkes's body. Gibbs goes into the conference room where Burley is watching tapes and gives Burley a bagel; in return, Burley shows him footage of Reyes handing his men something. Gibbs wants the footage sent to Abby for enhancement, and wants Kate and Tony to get the air boss's take on Reyes. The air boss takes Kate and Tony to watch Reyes putting his crew through what is either hazing or punishment, and mentions that the crew's performance is 50% above average. Kate, Tony and the Air Boss watch from above; Gibbs watches from a secluded alcove to the side as Reyes drives two men through some kind of jumping push up exercise thing. It looks like a scene from "Full Metal Jacket."

Via video conference, Ducky explains how PO Wilkes died - someone put air in his IV drop and the air bubble went into his heart. Instant, unstoppable death, and without question not an accident - the gas bubble in Wilkes's heart was 6% CO₂, meaning it was breath. Gibbs questions the medical corpsman in sickbay but there is no evidence he was involved. Burley found a second set of prints on the saline bag; Wilkes's. He killed himself after taking a call from his "very proud retired CPO father."

Abby, via video conference, reports that all the urine she has retested was clean, but there's a twist: Wilkes and Schrewe's urine are exactly the same - they came from the same person. Kate and Tony now know that someone has been swapping out the urine samples. They go to check the record books and find out who it might be. Abby also reports to Gibbs with the new video; she was able to bring the resolution very high and we see that Reyes is providing his men with small white tablets. Gibbs and Burley go to find out what those tablets might be; Reyes claims they are caffeine tablets such as might be purchased over the counter at any convenience store.

Tony runs the tablets through a drug ID kit and gives a mini-lecture about how it works; they turn up clean. Gibbs is sure Reyes is the supplier. We learn that Tony's work history is a bit uncertain; he has a history of changing jobs every eighteen months to two years. It is pointed out that Tony has now been with NCIS a little over two years. We also learn that, prior to coming to NCIS, Burley was a Senator's aide. Gibbs orders the three to toss Reyes's bunk tomorrow morning while Reyes is occupied with flight ops.

While they are searching, the search-and-rescue mission finds the survivors they are looking for. The trio finds nothing obvious, so they turn off the lights and start using the black light to search. Kate finds some sort of residue on the shelf in Reyes's locker. They examine it in the drug testing kit; it is clean. Gibbs points out that there's no reason for caffeine capsule residue to be on the shelf unless the capsules were emptied for some reason. They decide to go to the one person who might still be holding actual meth capsules: PO Niles. Gibbs interviews Niles, who stridently insists that the only pick-me-up he uses is a cup of coffee in the morning and "a couple of these when I'm on deck" - and he provides Gibbs with a bottle of capsules that looks just like the ones Reyes had. These capsules test positive: they are meth.

Gibbs expresses the need to catch Reyes with the evidence in hand. He has a plan. Of course. We cut to the Air Boss's workstation; he is expressing concern about the crew to Reyes, pushing Reyes to dip into his meth stash. We watch Reyes, who apparently thinks he is quite clever and sneaky, go into the urinalysis coordinator's office. We watch a bit of a rescue operation. Reyes comes out a few minutes later, and Burley goes in, followed by Kate and Tony. They confront the urinalysis coordinator, who (as it turns out) was assigned to two previous ships with Reyes on which Reyes's crew had the distinction of best performance rating on the ship. Burley demands Reyes' stash.

Rescue helicopter lands on the carrier; a survivor is helped away. Reyes enters a room; he is met by Niles, looking worried and sweaty, and claiming that he needs something to help get him going. Reyes takes Niles aside and gives him a capsule; Niles asks for a second, and receives it. Niles studies the capsules in his hand for a moment and then, looking betrayed and sad, he hands the capsules over to Gibbs, who has done his ninja sneak-up-on-you trick and is standing behind Reyes.

Reyes knows he's done for, but tries to justify himself by saying he did what he had to do to get his men up to snuff. Gibbs is deeply unimpressed and arrests Reyes.

We finish up with a very touchy-feely scene on deck as the HQ team is leaving. Burley thanks Gibbs for his help and shakes his hand. Gibbs leaves; Kate shakes Burley's hand and follows Gibbs. Tony comments that Gibbs has never shaken his hand; Burley tells Tony that it was two years before Gibbs looked him in the eye, three before he called him by name and four before he got the name right... then says that Gibbs must really like Tony. Tony's fragile ego feels much better; he shakes Burley's hand and follows Gibbs and Kate.

Gibbs warns Kate about the takeoff, which is going to be as rough as the landing was, only backwards. They take off. Gibbs hollers to find out how Kate is doing; she does not respond. He asks Tony, who responds, "She's smiling." (Which is good, because Kate has a great smile.)

Summary: A decomposed body is discovered in a tub of acid at a naval base and Ducky and Abby learn that the victim was a submariner. Gibbs discovers that there have been no reports of a sub crewmember missing, so he deduces that one of the subs has an imposter on board. With this new information, the team must find out which sub the man posing as the victim is in and what intentions he may have towards the sub.

Our scene opens nice and industrial: a man on a forklift is loading pallets of large metal drums onto a truck to be carried away. One of the canisters is knocked over and falls open, revealing that it is full of some kind of acid and what appears to be a mostly-acid-eaten corpse.

We find Tony on the phone speaking to an Agent McGee, a case agent who sounds green and needs advice about what to do with whatever he's got. There is banter. Kate knocks over Gibbs' coffee to the sound of background music that would be more appropriate just as the axe murderer appears behind the blonde co-ed. Gibbs looks like he's going to commit murder, and Tony looks panicked. Kate offers to get him another cup; he refuses, saying the coffee down the hall isn't coffee. As they gear up Tony, looking very concerned, says they are in uncharted waters as he has never seen Gibbs without coffee.

Arriving at Norfolk, we meet the fresh young Agent McGee, who is wearing a surgical mask over his face. He's apparently new at this. (But isn't he cute!) Ducky examines the body, discusses the hydrochloric acid, and opines that the body was in the acid less than 24 hours, judging by the damage. Judging by what's left of the clothes, the corpse was an enlisted man; he has a discoloration on his left forearm that Ducky cannot identify, but anyone who knows body art immediately recognizes a tattoo. Gibbs goes to the gate and interviews a gate guard. They know that, with security as tight as it is, the body could not have been smuggled on the base; therefore, he was murdered on base by someone with base clearance. Outside the main gate, a small group of protesters walks in a circle, chanting save-the-whales slogans. That night, Tony makes McGee stay and stand guard over the crime scene before he and Kate leave.

The next morning, Ducky and Abby video conference with the team in Norfolk (including McGee). Ducky confirms cause of death on the body was blunt force trauma to the head. Abby confirms that the mark on the arm is in fact a tattoo - the tail of a dolphin, which tells Gibbs that the dead man was a submariner. Gibbs asks McGee for the number of subs in port; we get some insight into McGee's lack of organization skills as he attempts to locate the list. He comes up with it (finally) and we find that the USS Philadelphia left port this morning. Gibbs wants a copy of the alpha rosters. While this is going on, Ducky is giving a lecture on the history of tattooing over the video conference. Gibbs looks extremely exasperated.

Gibbs, Kate and Tony are walking along the docks, discussing that the body was probably put in the acid to obscure its identity. McGee runs up with the alpha rosters, and tells Gibbs that everyone on all the ships is accounted for - including the Philadelphia. Gibbs wants to talk to the submarine squadron commander. McGee advises that he avoid Captain Veitch, who can be "difficult." Gibbs gets right in his face and asks if McGee doesn't think Gibbs can be difficult. McGee is sure Gibbs can, and Gibbs leaves.

Veitch adamantly denies the possibility that someone could slip aboard a sub as an impostor. Gibbs is equally adamant that the possibility is quite real and must be investigated. Gibbs wants the Philadelphia called back, and Veitch refuses; she is on her way to a NATO training mission. Gibbs says that's fine; he wants himself and Kate transported to the sub to conduct their investigation on board. Veitch kicks up a fuss about allowing Kate onto a sub. Gibbs has Kate leave, and then becomes "difficult." Here we learn that Kate has been trained as a profiler. He gets his way and Kate, after a completely unnecessary show of righteous indignation, goes with Gibbs to the sub. She has a great smile.

Gibbs and Kate take a plane to an aircraft carrier, then a helicopter to a frigate, and from the frigate they take a very small boat out to the sub. They explain the situation to Commander Peters. He will cooperate, but the sub is about to commence an Anti-Submarine Warfare exercise in the Atlantic and he is very interested in winning the bet he has with the opposing sub captain. In her lab, Abby works on building a computer model of the dead submariner. She has examined his stomach contents and determined he had a Big Mac and fries as his last meal (and she now knows the composition of McDonalds Special Sauce). Back on the sub, Gibbs and Kate are interviewing their five suspects.

They begin with Petty Officer Drew, who does not know his right from his left and claims to be from South Boston but has no accent. They move on to Petty Officer Thompson, who claims he graduated high school a year late due to mono. After the interviews, Kate and Gibbs have found nothing. Gibbs quizzes the skipper about how the ship could be harmed from the inside; there is a laundry list of ways. The skipper wants them gone; Gibbs says they'll leave when they're done. In her lab, Abby has finished her computer model; he does not look like any of the suspects. She emails the picture to Tony for him to show it around on base in Norfolk. McGee asks Tony what Abby looks like, despite having seen her on the video conference the day prior. Tony tells McGee in no uncertain terms that Abby is out of his league because McGee has no tattoos nor the urge to get one on his buttocks.

On the sub, the sonar has located their target. Gibbs and Kate are certain that the impostor is on this sub; it is the only thing that makes sense. They further deduce that the accomplice must have altered the service record before arriving on the sub; he either worked in personnel or has an accomplice. Gibbs demands that the sub be taken to periscope depth so he can contact Tony. He passes on his suspicion about the service records and sends Tony to investigate.

Ducky comes to Abby with good news and bad news: no DNA match on the body, but Gibbs' theory of altered service records is a good idea; Abby can check crew photos of the five suspects' previous postings. Tony and McGee check out personnel; McGee saves the day by recognizing that if the impostor was working in the personnel office, he would have quit before taking up his fake posting. He learns that Joshua Fox quit recently. On the sub, Gibbs is pushing water down Kate's throat for some reason. Then he sends her to the bathroom to distract the COB, 'unhydrate' is the word he uses, and let him sneak out to question a suspect again. She points out that he could have just asked, and goes, allowing him to escape.

Tony and McGee drive out to Joshua Fox's address and break in to investigate. Gibbs goes to question PO Thompson, who lied about his extra year of high school. Thompson admits he wasn't home sick; he was in juvie. The record was sealed, but Thompson was afraid if the Navy learned of it, he'd never get posted on a sub. Gibbs is caught by the COB and dragged back to the wardroom with Kate. Abby has no matches on the photographs; Ducky gives her a hint by using the word 'absent.' Tony and McGee discover that Fox is an anti-sonar whale-hugger activist and has been developing a tiny canister to deliver sarin gas into a sub's air conditioning system.

Tony gets an emergency message to Gibbs on the sub via low-frequency transmission, advising him of the threat of sarin gas on the ship. The skipper reads it, sends for Gibbs and Kate, has the air conditioning turned off, and orders the ship to surface in an emergency blow. Kate is thrown into Gibbs, who is up against the wall; they hang onto one another for dear life. All the shippers can be heard sighing into their handkerchiefs. The COB comes to get them and they head for the bridge. In her lab, Abby identifies the dead submariner as Petty Officer Drew, who was absent the day the crew picture was taken and had to be in a make-up photo.

On the sub, Drew, who knows he's done for, asks permission for a head call. He leaves as Gibbs and Kate arrive and receive their first message; just then, a second message arrives from Abby identifying Drew as the impostor. The skipper hands it off to Gibbs and Kate, who go looking for Drew. In what may possibly be the fastest suicide ever, Drew has gotten out of his uniform, into his bunk, and suffocated himself with a plastic bag in the space of what might be thirty seconds.

Tony passes the information about Fox and the eco-terrorists to Gibbs. The skipper is heading the sub back to Norfolk; they submerge because subs are faster underwater than on the surface. The ventilation system must remain off due to the continued gas threat; the canister has not been found. Tony returns to D.C. and brings the canister prototype to Abby. She asks about McGee. She also determines that the canister has a bi-metal trigger, which is set off by either extreme heat or extreme cold. This particular canister responds to cold - a temperature of five degrees centigrade, to be exact. On a sub, the air conditioner system or the freezer could be cold enough to trigger this canister.

On the sub, Gibbs is bugged by the lack of sarin gas release. Kate blows it off - "He never had a chance" - but Gibbs doesn't buy it. Why would he commit suicide before he could release it if he knew he was going to die when it was released anyway? The conversation is interrupted by the arrival of ice cream, which might as well be eaten because it will otherwise melt; it had to be taken out of the freezer to make room for the body. This is standard operating procedure on a sub - which the fake Drew would have known! Gibbs goes quickly to the freezer, realizing the fake Drew booby-trapped himself. They open the body bag to find that the gas has already released - inside the corpse. He swallowed the canister before committing suicide. Gibbs and the COB carry the body down to the torpedo room and stuff it into a tube. Kate has run to fill in the skipper, who calls down to the torpedo room with permission to fire. They do so, and live to fight crime another day. And the ice cream is saved also.

Back at HQ, there is banter until McGee arrives with his final report. Tony asks if McGee didn't learn how to use email at MIT. Kate is surprised - "You graduated from MIT?" Gibbs adds, "And Johns Hopkins." McGee is a brain. Then Gibbs asks why McGee is in D.C., and McGee announces that he has a lunch date with Abby. Tony, amused, offers to take McGee to her, reiterating that McGee is not Abby's type. McGee refers back to the "urge" Tony mentioned before (tattooing his buttocks) and states that he took care of that; he went with "Mom." Tony is left speechless as McGee gets in the elevator to go down to the lab.

Kate and Gibbs watch from their desks; Kate wonders what McGee said that left Tony speechless, and Gibbs replies, "He told him he got a tatt on his ass." Gibbs walks away, and we watch Kate watch the elevator, a speculatively sexy look suddenly crossing her face. Clearly, Kate is intrigued. As are we all.

Summary: The NCIS team head to Cuba to investigate a Navy translator's connection to smuggling at a detention center after he suddenly dies at the wheel of his car when returning to the U.S. from Guantanamo Bay.

We join a Jerry Springer episode in progress on the side of a rural road. A biker dude and his chick have broken down. She is complaining that she needs to get back to her old man and he assures her he will get her there. A car comes along and the biker dude tries to flag it down, only to have it swerve off the road at the last minute and hit his bike. Infuriated, Biker Dude snatches the driver's side door open, swearing to kill the driver... who is already dead.

We rejoin our dead motorist as he is being reduced to his component parts on Ducky's autopsy table. An obstruction has been found in the lower intestine. While Gerald opens the intestine to locate the obstruction, Ducky tells an appetizing story about a sumo wrestler's gallstones. Gerald interrupts him to state that the obstruction actually is stones - a number of large, square-cut emeralds. The emeralds perforated the lower digestive tract, causing a number of conditions that led to a painful death. Ducky shares this with Gibbs, but it's not so much the stones as where the stones came from: the deceased smuggled them into the country from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where he was employed as a translator at the terrorist detention facility. The deceased is identified as Petty Officer Second Class Khalil Sa'id, from Egypt, a recent transfer to Gitmo from Bahrain, and Gibbs announces that the team is going to Cuba.

Gibbs comes down to Abby's lab, where she tells him that she has a gemologist coming to look at the emeralds. She is going through all of Sa'id's personal belongings. In them, she has found a number of unmailed letters, all with the same return address: NCIS Special Agent Paula Cassidy. There is also a shirt which smells of a peculiar cologne; Gibbs tells Abby to brand it. On the way into the elevator, he runs into DiNozzo - literally, spilling his coffee in the process. DiNozzo has booked them on a flight to Gitmo; Gibbs says to unbook it, because the Navy is giving them a priority ride today.

On the plane, Tony is waxing ad nauseam about the ride - a $40 million Gulf stream aircraft. Gibbs, who is trying to work, gives Kate the file on Paula Cassidy, who is out of the loop on the case until they find out why Sa'id had her unmailed letters in his luggage. On arrival at Gitmo, they are met by Cassidy herself, who has arranged them a car and one of the nicest houses on base. Cassidy is clearly aware that she is under investigation: her files have been pulled, her interrogations cancelled, and then the top Major Case Team from D.C. has arrived on her turf. She queries Gibbs, who tells her nothing.

They enter their house on base, where Gibbs wants to get to work, but Tony and Kate are too busy fighting over the best bedroom. Gibbs gets on the phone with Abby, who has identified a second scent on Sa'id's clothing - a woman's perfume. Gibbs tells her to brand it. Her gemologist is coming tomorrow morning. He gets off the phone and Tony and Kate want him to mediate between them on who gets the good bedroom; he solves the problem by kicking them both out of it and taking it himself. He has the Wisdom of Solomon, does Gibbs.

The next morning, Tony rolls over to find that he has gained a bedmate in the night: a large iguana. With a scream reminiscent of a terrified virgin, he jumps out of bed, training his gun on the creature. Kate and Gibbs both come running, armed, and we learn that Tony sleeps in the nude. Something Kate finds very amusing. Gibbs is severely unimpressed and exits the room complaining that he needs coffee. In Abby's lab, her gemologist has arrived, bearing gifts: a bottle of Vudu cologne that Abby's mother said was something she could use. He seems dismayed when she sets it on top of her shelf with the myriad of other colognes she has purchased for use in the case. He verifies that the emeralds are real, and high-quality - each emerald is worth at least $20,000. But there's more - judging by the distinct color, these emeralds were mined in Afghanistan.

The FBI translator - Bill Gamal - arrives, bringing all the transcripts of the translations Sa'id did with an inmate called Nasser Al-Jazair. Nasser is a recent arrival from Afghanistan who insists he was picked up by mistake. An interrogation room has been booked for Gibbs for this afternoon. They dive into the files; Gibbs sends Tony out to investigate Cassidy. When he returns, his information is that Cassidy is very popular with the gentlemen on base. She hangs out at a club on base. Gibbs sends Tony to check out the club and observe Cassidy if she is there; Gibbs and Kate go out to Camp Delta to interrogate Nasser.

Tony is discussing a movie with the bartender at the club; he knows nothing about the movie or the actors. Cassidy shows; Tony flirts, but she isn't buying it. Gibbs interrogates Nasser with Gamal translating and Kate watching from observation. At the news that Sa'id is dead, Nasser reacts strongly, and pulls out his prayer beads. Tony watches Cassidy dance, and is outed by the bartender as investigating her. They verbally spar. Tony orders tequila and a beer and asks Cassidy to dance. At Camp Delta, Gibbs gets little information from Nasser. He shows Nasser a picture of the emeralds. Kate knows that Nasser already knows about the emeralds - she can tell from his body language. Nasser requests to be returned to his cell to pray; Gibbs orders him transferred to isolation instead. Nasser flips out, starts yelling in Arabic that Cassidy promised him a transfer to minimum security. Tony and Cassidy are dancing when Gibbs calls, orders Tony to bring Cassidy back to their house.

At the house, Gibbs questions Cassidy about Nasser. His transfer to minimum security was a reward for cooperation. Cassidy demands to know what is going on. Gibbs asks about the letters; Cassidy claims Sa'id was going to mail them for her because mail out of Gitmo is slow. Gibbs wants to open them; Cassidy refuses. Gibbs threatens a court order, tells Cassidy that Sa'id is dead. She finally gives them permission to open the letters. She also offers to let them search her apartment; Gibbs accepts and sends Tony to check Cassidy's apartment and Kate to check Sa'id's. They discover that Sa'id had a key to Cassidy's apartment, but she has no key to his.

Sa'id's hard drive arrives at Abby's lab. Ducky tells Abby that his mother wears Chanel No. 5 a la Marilyn Monroe. At Gitmo, Gamal reports that Nasser is extremely upset about his transfer to isolation. Gibbs cares, we can tell. He is tossing Nasser's cell. He finds nothing. In the house, he video conferences with Abby, who has found that the perfume on Sa'id's clothing is called Escada. As she says this, Tony and Kate return. She also reports that Sa'id deleted more than 20 GB of porn from his laptop before turning it in to Gitmo security. Tony reports that there is a bottle of Escada in Cassidy's apartment. Kate reports that Sa'id's room was completely bare; he did not plan to come back to Gitmo. Tony thinks Sa'id copied Paula's key without her knowledge. Gibbs insinuates Tony is thinking with his libido; incensed, Tony goes to bed. Kate defends Tony; Gibbs tells her that romance between agents never works. The voice of experience?

The next day, Gibbs meets Cassidy and questions her about the key. She says she lost a key; Sa'id could have stolen it, possibly to gain access to her computer. She kept her interrogation notes there, including a note that she had become suspicious of Sa'id's translations, which seemed shorter than the actual conversations taking place. She notes that Sa'id took leave the day after she wrote that. Gibbs tells her about the emeralds and that he thinks they came from Nasser; Cassidy remembers that Nasser claimed constipation on his arrival at Gitmo and was given a laxative. In the lab, Abby is going through Sa'id's porn, noting that the file sizes are too large to be simple images. She finds Easter eggs hidden in the porn - secret links that hide more information when clicked. In this case, it's communications written in Arabic and diagrams of the camp. She sends them to Gibbs.

Gamal translates the letters; they discuss someone called "Son-in-law" and his movements in the camp. It turns out that one of the prisoners at Gitmo is one of Osama bin Laden's sons-in-law, and that Nasser was actually sent to Gitmo to kill him. Now they need to find this son-in-law, for which all they need to do is transfer Nasser to minimum security and wait to see who he tries to kill. For this, they must tread carefully. They put Cassidy back on Nasser's interrogations (she tells him that Gibbs has gone back to D.C. and been reprimanded); then she moves Nasser back to his old cell, and he is moved from there to minimum security as he was promised.

They set up sharpshooters to mind their target; they believe he will try to do the kill in the exercise yard. Instead, Nasser creates a diversion and slips into another barracks where he finds his target. The security guards are in the yard, so the agents all run for it; Cassidy shoots Nasser in the shoulder before he is able to kill his target. When Tony points out that he would have killed Nasser, Cassidy says no; she didn't want to make him a martyr.

Cassidy flies back to D.C. with the Washington group. Kate indirectly cajoles Tony into going and sitting with Cassidy to try and make her feel better. Kate has a great smile. Tony and Paula make up.

Summary:	After a marine widow receives a call from her dead husband, the NCIS team takes on the case and has to exhume the body to deduce whether the call was a prank or not.

We open at a funeral. Two mourners discuss how the deceased's command will not even tell his widow - Sarah - how he died. We learn the deceased's name - Jim. Just as the grieving widow is located, on a couch and looking lost, the telephone rings. She stands and goes to answer it - and the voice on the other end of the line identifies itself as her husband, insisting he is not dead!

We join our heroes at the firing range, where a number of shooters are practicing. Tony asks Kate if she's nervous; she sarcastically confirms that she's "shaking." A siren sounds; they shoot. Another siren sounds; they stop. Everyone heads down the range to check their targets. We see that the target is a drawing of a man holding a woman hostage. In multiple shots, Kate has only hit her target twice - a double tap in the head - and all her other shots went wide to the man's safe side. Tony, by contrast, has hit his target every time - except for once, when he shot the hostage's ear off. (Tony: "She'll live!") They debate who won. Gibbs ninjas up behind them to check their work and decides to add a little pressure to the situation. He tells Kate to relax her shoulders (complete with a little shoulder-rub that gets all the shippers hot and bothered), tapes Tony's beloved NCIS cap over the face of the hostage on his target, then does the same on Kate's target using her PDA. When they both protest, he advises them not to miss.

As they head back to their firing positions, Kate and Tony discuss the feasibility of breaking into Gibbs' house and setting his boat on fire. Gibbs gets a call - they've caught a case. He tells them the situation that we, of course, already know. But before they leave, he wants to see how Kate and Tony will shoot under pressure.

Back at HQ, Tony sulkily bequeaths his beloved hat - which now sports two 9mm holes - to Abby, who is appreciative. He has called her from her lab for help; he is trying to get the records on the dead Marine, Major Jim Kidwell, but his computer won't allow it. They find the problem: he doesn't have a high enough security clearance. Abby inquires how the Marine died; that is pretty much the info Tony was looking for.

At the Kidwell home, Gibbs and Kate are interviewing the widow. Gibbs points out that in most cases of this type of crank calling, the prankster turns out to be someone who knows the prankee; usually someone with a grudge. Mrs. Kidwell insists she thinks the voice was her husband's. Gibbs asks permission to put a trace on the phone in case another call comes. The doorbell rings; a woman enters with two children. She is introduced as Lisa Peary, whose husband was in Kidwell's unit and died with him. Mrs. Peary and Mrs. Kidwell feel that as Marine wives they have done their part; they got two sealed caskets and no information from their husbands' command. Now they are demanding answers.

Returning to HQ, Gibbs asks Tony for information; Tony is only able to say that Kidwell was involved in classified stuff; he has lost his security clearance due to a paperwork mix-up. According to NCIS personnel, he's actually dead! Kate tries to get the information; she is blocked as well, and she was cleared for Air Force One with the Secret Service. Gibbs also tries. While he is trying, Kate picks up her PDA. There is a bullet hole right through the center of it. She looks very sad, and yearns wistfully for a warranty that covers bullets.. Gibbs is also blocked from the information. He returns to his desk and receives a phone call. Turns out, NCIS is being blocked from the information they are looking for. The call is from Kidwell and Peary's CO; he wants to meet with them privately on base at Quantico.

The team meets with Lieutenant Colonel Walsh off the record; he is a tall and well-built Caucasian gentleman in his middle forties. He tells the team that Kidwell and Peary were on a classified assignment in Central America and went native as part of their cover; they were murdered by a prostitute who spiked their drinks with formaldehyde over an unpaid bill. Gibbs says he wants the paperwork. Walsh says he will see what he can do and leaves. As the team heads back to their car, Gibbs gets a phone call: it's Abby. She says that the technicians installing the trace at the Kidwells' home located another trace already on the line - one that came from Quantico. Gibbs storms into Lt. Col. Walsh's office. The Colonel's aide says he is in a meeting, which Gibbs barges into, team in tow. He demands to know where Lt. Col. Walsh is. A thin Black man in his early forties stands up and identifies himself as Lt. Col. Walsh.

The real Lt. Col. Walsh has no idea how his men died. He also doesn't know who they were working for. Walsh is an administrator; when his Marines go out of country, they could be working for anyone. Walsh does not know who they were working for; Gibbs and Tony interpret this as "one of the A's: CIA, NSA..." Gibbs wants to know of Walsh stopped to check and see if his men were inside those closed caskets before sending them on to the families.

Back at HQ, Gibbs and Morrow discuss the case. Gibbs does not buy the official story; he knows that either Kidwell and Peary died doing something they shouldn't have been doing, or Kidwell really did make that phone call. He asks Morrow for help getting into the sealed records; Morrow will see what he can do.

In Abby's lab, Kate and Tony are arguing over a program Abby is running which - if done properly - can generate an image of the phony Col. Walsh. Gibbs wants Tony to pull the dead Marines' LES's (Leave and Earnings Statements); Kate volunteers to do that, citing the very shaky excuse that Tony has a better handle on the program. Gibbs allows it, and Kate pulls Tony into the next room to find out what LES's are and how to get them. She vanishes upstairs. While she is on the telephone, she breaks out her trusty sketch pad and pencil. When she returns to the lab, she finds the rest of her team laboring over the computer to produce an image of... Illya Kuryakin. No, wait, that's a young Ducky, that's who that is. And since apparently Kate is the only person doing any work today, she produces her sketch of the fake colonel. Tony grabs her sketch book and flips through it, finding Kate's unflattering caricatures of himself drooling over something in a skirt and Abby as a vampire bat. Predictably, Abby falls in love with the one of herself and demands to be allowed to frame it and hang it up.

Gibbs wants the LES's in twelve hours; he wants Abby to run the fake colonel's picture through the military databases. Leaving his trustworthy team to do the legwork, he visits Maj. Kidwell's grave, and is photographed without his knowledge.

The next morning, Gibbs arrives at HQ at the same time as Mrs. Kidwell, who reports that there was another phone call, this one to Maj. Kidwell's friend, Maj. O'Donnell, who has the call on tape because it came to his answering machine. Abby runs the tape against voice-recognition software, comparing the voice on the machine to Maj. Kidwell's voice from some old home movies. A tiresome explanation ensues, because Abby needs lines and we need technical details, but it's always fun to listen to her talk about things we don't understand, so we put up with it about as long as Gibbs does. Long and short: it's definitely Kidwell on the phone.

Kidwell's casket is exhumed and brought to Autopsy. The casket is opened with O'Donnell there as a witness. He confirms that the extremely fresh body in the casket is in fact Kidwell.

Kate and Tony discuss the case in the squad room. They have no explanation. Gibbs isn't through with the case; they keep working. Ducky begins his autopsy. He is going to have a hard time determining time of death; the body has already been professionally embalmed. Cause of death is another question. The official cause (line of duty) usually implies injuries received in combat; aside from minimal bruising at the wrists, Maj. Kidwell is unhurt. Except for being dead, of course. There's also no way to tell if he's been poisoned because there's no blood left in his body due to being embalmed.

Upstairs, Kate has the LES's in order and ready to be examined. Gibbs thoughtfully informs us that the reason he wants them is because they will tell where Kidwell was stationed and who was paying him. Useful information. He walks away; rounding a corner, we see him receive a phone call. It is Mrs. Peary, who does not appreciate being interrogated by Special Agent DiNozzo, who she says is with her now at the playground where she is airing out her children. Gibbs looks over the wall and sees DiNozzo standing at his desk, on the telephone. Apparently, Tony has either mastered the art of being in two places at once, or something hinky is happening. Gibbs asks Mrs. Peary to keep "DiNozzo" there, and heads for her location.

In autopsy, Ducky finds that the embalming incision in Maj. Kidwell's neck has been stuffed with newspaper. He sends Gerald with it to Abby, and returns to inspecting the incision. With a start, he jumps away from the body, horrified, then announces that he knows how Kidwell died.

At the playground, Gibbs runs up to Mrs. Peary, but the fake DiNozzo is gone. He shows Mrs. Peary Kate's sketch; she identifies him as the fake DiNozzo. He finds out what direction the man took and sends Mrs. Peary home. Then he chases the man. He locates him on a side street, chases him, and shoots at him as he enters a bulletproof sedan and drives away.

Back at HQ, Tony and Kate are working up the information from the LES. We learn here that Tony is a two-fingered typist. Gibbs returns, tells Kate and Tony about his encounter. They tell him that they have learned that Kidwell and Peary were transferred to a new unit in September, but they don't have the information on it because its number wasn't in the Marine Corps database. Gibbs advises them that it was definitely CIA on account of the economy-class armored car. They head down to Autopsy, where Ducky advises them that the dearly departed was embalmed alive. In Abby's lab, she has processed the paper in Kidwell's neck, which was definitely newspaper - dated December 12, 2003. The funeral when the call came in was December 8; the current date is December 14.

In the squad room, plans are made to examine Peary's grave using ground-penetrating radar. We move to the cemetery, half-expecting Buffy Summers to come running past at any moment chasing something with fangs. The radar is calibrated using the grave of Miss Agatha O'Leary and her poodle, Fluffy. Then it is turned on the grave of Maj. Peary, revealing that the casket contains what appear to be cinder blocks.

In her lab, Abby has identified the identity thief; his name is Jack Canton, and he is definitely CIA. Abby got his identity from the Marine detachment at the Colombian embassy. Despite the lateness of the hour - 3 a.m. - Gibbs sets Kate and Tony to find out where the newspaper was published that was found inside Kidwell. He and Morrow get the director of the CIA out of bed and demand answers. It turns out that Kidwell and Peary were kidnapped by Colombian insurgents. The CIA paid the ransom - $2 million - but the insurgents killed the Marines anyway. It further seems that Canton was the agent responsible for paying the ransom. It looks like he kept the money for himself and left the Marines to die. Canton is now on his way back to Colombia. The CIA director insists he will handle this in-house. After the call is over, Morrow tells Gibbs to go get their Marine.

The team takes a priority ride to Colombia - slung between pallets. It doesn't look pleasant. Tony reads a magazine and eats a hamburger; Gibbs sleeps and Kate is violently motion-sick. Gibbs wakes when they are about half an hour out of Colombia. Kate learns that there is no bathroom on a cargo plane; women everywhere shudder in sympathy when Gibbs offers her a plastic bag and the relative privacy of "if you want some privacy, you can probably go down behind those boxes there."

On arrival, the team meets with Canton's partner, Gonzales, who says they've lost Canton; they tracked him to an insurgent camp, but he was gone by the time they got there. The newspaper came from a town called Bosa, which Gonzales confirms is about ten miles away. They trek to Bosa, where there is apparently only one funeral home, which is currently in use seeing an elderly lady off on her final journey. Canton's car is parked out front. The team moves in. Through a small window, Gibbs sees Peary on a table, his own live embalming about to begin. He shoots the embalmer. They storm the funeral home. Tony and Gonzales come in from the front; Kate and Gibbs come in through the back.

As they make their way in, Tony is shot at from around a corner, then a grenade is thrown into the hall where Gibbs and Kate are. They manage to get back alive, but Gibbs is wounded in his right shoulder by the explosion. From around the corner, Canton speaks: he will shoot Peary if Gibbs doesn't come around the corner unarmed. Gonzales steps forward instead, trying to talk to his partner; Canton shoots him in the heart.

Gibbs tells Kate quietly to relax her shoulders, tosses his weapon and comes around the corner. His arm is dripping blood from his shoulder wound. He speaks with Canton, who taunts him while holding Peary hostage. Kate and Tony signal one another silently, then burst around the corner, shooting.

The scene changes to a suburban yard, decorated very tacky for Christmas. The two Peary children are kicking a soccer ball in the front yard under their mother's watchful eye when a car drives up. They stop playing to watch as Tony, Kate and Gibbs (whose right arm is in a sling) get out of the car, followed by Major Peary. There is a tearful reunion which is all filmed from the left side. The camera rounds to the right, and we see that someone has shot Maj. Peary's right ear off.

On the sidewalk, Kate and Tony debate who actually shot the Major's ear off. They have just decided to ask Gibbs when the Mysterious Redhead in the silver Beemer shows up. Gibbs hops in, kisses her cheek and, with sexy Bond-ish music in the background, the Beemer drives off, leaving us all to wonder just exactly who drives around with the top down in Virginia in winter.

Summary: After being buried alive, a woman comes out of the grave with amnesia and the only thing she remembers is that there is a bomb aboard a Navy ship. While trying to help Jane Doe recover her identity, the team finds out that not everything is what it seemed at first.

The scene opens on a snowy road; a car is making its way through a wooded area. The camera pans through the wooded area and we watch a woman in a dress dig herself out of a shallow grave. Bleeding from a head wound, she makes her way up to the road and stops the next car to come by. She doesn't know her name, but she does know that there is a bomb on a Navy ship and people are going to die.

Opening credits.

We join Gibbs in his basement. This morning he is not working on his boat; he is asleep under its shell. The television blares the opening of the U.S. Farm Report as the telephone rings. It is Tony, calling from the office at 05:20. He's slept there all night; the boiler in his apartment building blew, so he has neither heat nor electricity and will not for a month. He teases Gibbs about falling asleep working on the boat. Gibbs heats his coffee in a very unsanitary manner, if not a typically male one. Tony fills Gibbs in on what we've already seen. Gibbs has Tony send Kate to the hospital. Tony leads in to asking if he can stay with Gibbs. Gibbs flatly refuses. Indications are that things didn't go well at all the last time Tony stayed with Gibbs. Who's surprised? Talk about the Odd Couple!

At the snowy crime scene, Ducky is taking pictures. He gives Gibbs a lecture about why graves are dug six feet deep. We learn that this grave was quite shallow and apparently hastily dug; the grave digger also left no tracks. Gibbs sends Ducky out to check if there are any more bodies. At the hospital, Kate learns about amnesia from a doctor who rambles in a way that is not nearly as cool as Ducky. We learn that our Jane Doe suffered blunt force trauma to the head and had some petechial (pinpoint) hemorrhaging on her eyelids which indicate suffocation (probably from being buried alive). Kate gets her first look at Jane Doe, who is lying on a gurney looking sad and pathetic with a bandage wrapped around her head. There is discussion of the amnesia and we learn that Jane Doe's memory may come back in a flash or may come back slowly over a period of days or weeks. We watch as Jane Doe is hustled into a wheelchair and taken past Kate into the bowels of the hospital, for some neurological tests. She gives Kate some puppy-dog eyes as she passes.

Back at the crime scene, Gibbs is on the phone with Kate, who wants to put Jane Doe's picture on TV to find someone who knows her and can help her. Gibbs, who is looking at things more from the perspective of finding a culprit, says no. He wants the gravedigger to think Jane Doe is dead. Gibbs is clearly unimpressed with Kate's humanitarian standpoint. He is busy digging up the dirt of the shallow grave and running it through a soil sifter, looking for clues. Thus far, he has found an arrowhead and a shark's tooth, which he gives to Ducky, who has not found any more bodies. We learn how a shark's tooth could get into Rock Creek Park, and then Ducky wants to notify ARPA. Gibbs will do so, after he finishes processing. Ducky points out that the fine for disturbing an archaeological site is $250,000, but Gibbs points out in return that it was a crime scene first. We think Gibbs' time line may be a bit off, but he's in charge. (And he's hot, so who wants to argue?) Ducky starts telling another story.

At the hospital, Kate is interviewing Jane Doe and taking her fingerprints. Jane Doe is a very sweetly pathetic sort. Kate wants Jane Doe's clothes to run through forensics looking for explosive residue. Kate begins to take fingerprints; Jane Doe believes she may have done this before. Kate says this is good news; Jane will be in a database somewhere. Jane pessimistically points out that it might be a terrorist list. Kate points out that knowing a bomb is there doesn't mean Jane placed it. The crucifix around Kate's neck makes Jane have a flashback of being in a church.

Back at the crime scene again, Ducky is telling another story. Tony is listening while Gibbs actually works. He segues into trying to ask Ducky if he can stay at his place, and Ducky neatly blocks that line of inquiry. Gibbs finds a key in the dirt he's sifting through. It goes back to the lab and Abby, who reports that it is a magnetized key to open a magnetic lock, a hotel room or any high-security lock. Kate arrives inquiring about the fingerprints and clothing. Abby has no hits on the prints yet but the gas chromatograph is still running on the clothing. Gibbs asks about the interview; we learn that Kate has learned nothing of use but is definitely bonded with Jane. The gas chromatograph reports that there are definitely traces of high-grade explosives on her clothing.

In the hospital, Jane Doe now believes she is a terrorist. She goes on about strawberries and blueberries and Kate tries to be nice to her. Kate points out that the residue could have come from a legitimate occupation. The woman replies skeptically that maybe she is an explosiveshersteller which is apparently German for bomb-maker. This is a clue! Perhaps Jane works for a German firm out of D.C. This only makes Jane believe more strongly that she has placed a bomb on a ship; Kate points out that maybe Jane knows who did put the bomb there and that person tried to kill her. "Why do you believe in me?" Jane asks. (We all wonder the same thing, Jane.) Kate replies, "Why do you like blueberries?"

Outside the room, the doctor refuses to release Jane as long as she doesn't know her name, though she's in no medical danger. Kate and Jane come around the corner with the miraculous news that Jane has remembered who she is - her name is 'Maureen Ingalls' and she lives in Alexandria. Kate will take Maureen into protective custody at her home. The doctor takes Maureen to get a set of scrubs since she has no clothing. Gibbs, who knows better, asks who Maureen Ingalls is; we learn that she is Kate's cousin. In the conversation that follows, Kate goes very mama-bear over Jane Doe. Gibbs allows it, but clearly has reservations.

In the lab, Abby has matched the key to a system manufactured for a hotel. Tony notes tiny writing on the key's surface. It reads "The Apartment" when magnified, etched by a micro-laser. At Kate's extremely nice apartment (which must cost a pretty penny for a place that size in D.C., and we all begin to wonder how much she makes), Jane knows that the ship in question was not a carrier or a submarine. Kate notes that there are no active battleships, so the ship must be either a cruiser or a destroyer. Jane is sure it's one or the other and suggests searching them. Kate points out that there are 18 destroyers and 7 cruisers in Norfolk alone.

In the lab, Abby has found that there are only three hotels in the D.C. area that use the magnetic keys. The first one is the Jackson Hotel (whose number Gibbs knows off the top of his head). They begin calling hotels. Kate and Jane are looking over a list of ship names, hoping one will jog Jane's memory. We learn that Navy cruisers are named after famous battles and the destroyers are named after Navy heroes. (Useful the next time anyone wants to play Trivial Pursuit, yes?) Jane finagles her way into getting Kate to take her out to dinner. She's a bit on the melodramatic side. Most of us would just say we could use a sandwich, but Jane is weak from hunger. They get coats; the one Kate gives Jane is floral and fairly ugly. But Jane thinks she has a coat like this. Kate points out that it is a designer coat carried by only a few stores in the area.

In the lab, we learn that none of the hotels micro-etch their keys, but that the Jackson takes permanent residents. Tony pushes his luck wanting to know how Gibbs knows so much about the Jackson; Gibbs finally breaks and tells him that his ex-wife lives there. Kate and Jane go shopping, but Jane doesn't remember anything until a big bald guy wanders into a women's apparel shop. Jane has a flashback to the man who attacked her, who was apparently also big and bald. Gibbs and Tony are investigating the room at the Jackson that matches the magnetic key. The key opens the door; when they enter, they find the big bald guy from Jane's flashback lying dead on the floor of a head wound... and surrounded by loose cash.

There is negotiation with the D.C. Metro detective who comes to investigate; Gibbs wants to keep the investigation as it is related to Jane Doe and the possible bomb. Ducky embarrasses the Metro ME into giving up the body. The corpse has been dead at least eighteen hours. Tony begins checking the room for bloodstains on whatever object might be the murder weapon; it turns out to have been a bust of JFK.

Kate and Jane go for dinner someplace nice. Kate throws the name of the dead man - Walter Richter - at Jane; she has no reaction. She does have a flashback of being at a similar restaurant all alone and sad and pathetic. In the lab, Abby has found a partial palm print on the bust of JFK. There's not enough to use for identification, though. However, on the good news side of things, a print lifted off the desk in the hotel room belongs to Jane Doe. In Autopsy, Ducky places the time of death of the victim at least 44 hours ago. It's a safe bet that the dead man is not the grave digger.

Tony finds good news in the background on the dead man; Richter was the head of security for a German firm called BFF, which makes bomb-detecting devices for the U.S. Navy. At the BFF headquarters, Gibbs and Tony question Richter's boss, a German fellow called Dr. Brauer. Brauer was at the hotel suite Friday, entertaining some business associates from Berlin. The hotel suite is registered in Richter's name to keep it secret from any competitors. Tony inquires about their explosiveshersteller, who Brauer identifies as Suzanne McNeil.

Brauer asks if Suzanne is dead; they do not answer, instead asking what Suzanne does. She formulates explosives for BFF's tests. He asks again to be told that Suzanne is not dead; Tony answers that Suzanne is not dead. Brauer freezes; his hands tremble. Clearly something is not right; Tony and Gibbs both comment. Brauer plays it off as a natural response due to Gibbs' line of questioning. He shows Gibbs and Tony a picture of McNeil - she is Jane Doe.

Back at HQ, Kate takes Suzanne to see Richter's body. Suzanne has a flashback to Richter giving her an envelope full of cash - six months severance, and he advises she takes it. She remembers whacking Richter with the JFK bust. She tells Kate that she remembers nothing, and leaves quickly.

At BBF HQ, Gibbs is on the phone with Kate. He has emailed Kate Suzanne's personnel file, and has some ideas about why Brauer might want her dead. Kate calls out to Suzanne, who has her back to Kate; she reacts, but only with her face and eyes, carefully controlling her body. She remembers; we know she remembers.

Tony has learned that the new bomb-sniffer BFF is working on isn't working as well as it should. It is being tested in a lab at BFF. Brauer shows them to the lab. Kate gives Suzanne her personnel file to try and jog her memory, and points out to the "sad and lonely woman" that there is still time for a husband and kids. Suzanne points out in a very jaded manner that the good ones are all married. Tony and Gibbs question Brauer about his relationship to Suzanne; he points out that he is happily married. Gibbs makes a reference to the movie "The Apartment". Bauer denies having an affair with Suzanne. In the lab, we find that the tests being run on the bomb-sniffing equipment are done on a mock-up of the interior of a Navy ship.

At HQ, Suzanne is still "trying to remember." Kate tells her to give it time; Suzanne points out that she may not have it since someone tried to kill her and someone bashed in Richter's head. She asks Kate to take her to her job, let her sit at her desk and try to remember there, in familiar surroundings. Kate falls for it. Gibbs and Tony watch a test of the bomb-sniffer. We get more information about Suzanne's job - her job is to make explosives that the bomb sniffer can't detect, to push its boundaries and make it better. Bomb maker - 1; sniffer - 0.

Kate does something silly; she lets Suzanne go to her desk alone, and waits in the lobby, where she meets up with Gibbs, Tony and Brauer. Suzanne returns to the lobby. She flashes back to the church; Brauer was at the church. She flashes back to the restaurant; Brauer was there with his wife. She flashes back to struggling with Brauer and then falling, hitting her head on a chair leg. She approaches and greets Brauer as though she does not know him. Gibbs points out that this is good and bad; bad because she can't give Brauer the explosive formula and good because she can't pin her attempted murder on Brauer. They go apart to speak privately.

Suddenly Kate's brain begins to function as she watches the conversation. Everyone cheers. Suzanne accuses Brauer of not having the guts to leave his wife but he could bury Suzanne. She warns him to keep a pleasant face; he wouldn't want the agents to suspect anything. Gibbs and Tony discuss the lack of possibility of Tony coming to stay with Gibbs. Kate is actually thinking for the first time all day. Brauer points out to Suzanne that what happened in the office was an accident; she was out of control. He offers her anything. She wants a wedding ring. He says he'll give it to her; he'll divorce his wife and marry Suzanne. She doesn't buy it; he didn't even have the guts to dump her in person - that's what Walter was for.

It occurs to Kate that Suzanne knew how Richter died without being told and without seeing the wound. Finally. Suzanne stands up with a small round object in her hand - a highly volatile explosive compound. Brauer jumps up, screaming that she has a bomb. Suzanne turns and says "Sorry, Kate" before dropping it. The whole world goes to hell.

Outside, later, the medics are patching up Kate, who was closest to the explosion and got pretty banged up. She also looks like someone just kicked her puppy in the head and pulled her braids. Tony wants to help make her feel better; Gibbs knows this is not possible. Kate will have to work through it on her own. Tony walks away; Gibbs calls after him to let him know he can stay at Gibbs' place. Gibbs and Kate share a significant eye contact across the busy parking lot.

Summary: When a Navy commander, who was a technical advisor to a civilian contractor for a Navy weapon, is found dead on the beach, the NCIS team investigates the murder using satellite technology.

We join two idiots in the progress of violating several federal laws. It seems that the one in charge of the satellite was repositioning from Cuba up to Quebec and glitched over Little Creek Naval Base at just the right moment to spot a woman sunbathing nude on the beach. Unfortunately as they are watching, the woman sees something unusual - someone has pulled up onto the beach in an SUV - and she gets up to run away. They zoom out to see what is going on, and they watch in pixels as the man who pulled up on the beach is murdered.

Tony enters from the elevator, munching on a doughnut. He offers one to Kate, who refuses, saying she likes keeping her belt notched exactly where it is. (She also sounds a little hoarse; Caitlin seems to have a cold.) There is brief discussion of Tony's weight, about which he seems to be a wee bit sensitive. Gibbs comes in during this conversation and smirks a little bit (which is very nice), then gets a call. We watch Tony tighten his belt to the point that he can't breathe. Gibbs hangs up and announces a murder at Little Creek. Red-faced from the lack of air, Tony follows Gibbs out as Kate, calling Ducky, grins at him. Kate's got a great smile.

The team is approaching the body across a familiar stretch of beach. A fellow in fatigues tells Gibbs that he located the body after an anonymous tip was called in to base security. The victim has been identified as Lt.Cmdr. Thomas Egan. As they approach the body, Tony points out that the body has not been robbed; he is still wearing an expensive Tag Heuer watch. Kate begins taking crime scene photos. The fellow in fatigues reports to Gibbs that Egan was attached as a technical adviser to SideScan, a civilian contractor on the base. He knows nothing else as the SideScan work is classified.

Things get busy when Ducky realizes the tide is rising; the body must be kept dry in order to preserve evidence. Everyone kicks it into high gear. Gibbs and Tony begin taking measurements as quickly as possible; Kate takes more photographs. Measurements are taken; Kate notes that Egan's dive knife is missing. A wave comes up; Tony self-sacrificially tosses himself between the very cold water and the body, successfully keeping the body mostly dry but soaking himself in the process. Did we mention it's January in Virginia? Brr.

At the SideScan offices, Egan's co-workers are shocked and appalled to learn that he is dead. They last saw him early that morning as he was heading out to do some underwater tests on a piece of equipment. The man (Overmeier) asks if they found a device with Egan's body. Turns out, Egan was working on a hand held sonar gun. Overmeier's company developed the gun; Egan and the woman (Cmdr. Tyler) were evaluating it. Gibbs seizes Egan's computer and anything else he thinks they might need. This does not make Tyler or Overmeier happy.

At the Little Creek Quarterdeck, Tony (dressed fashionably in Ducky's spare jumpsuit which is at least two sizes too small and several inches too short - why hasn't his voice gone up an octave?) is obtaining the information about where the anonymous tip came from. The call came in at 09:32, no name, but the voice was male and nervous. The caller ID on the call was blocked. Tony goes to McGee, who hacks the database to find out who made the phone call. While McGee works, we learn that he is still seeing Abby occasionally. McGee locates the number; for some reason there is an asterisk after it. Tony tells him to find out why.

Kate and Gibbs go to Egan's house to interview his wife. Gibbs can't read the small print on Kate's PDA. Lieutenant (Mrs.) Egan answers the door, looking all sad and crying. Lt. Egan states that she was gone all weekend to Camp Lejeune for a seminar; when she arrived home, the notification detail was at her house to tell her that her husband was dead. She last spoke to her husband around 10pm the previous night, and was unaware that he was going diving that morning. However, as a SEAL, it was not unusual for him to go diving many times in the week. She also did not know what his project was; the Lt. Cmdr. was very strict about classified information.

In Autopsy, Gerald is going to open the body bag when it moves. He jumps back. Ducky is exasperated with him until he, too, sees the body bag move. They open it carefully; a crab jumps out.

Kate and Gibbs park out on a strip of asphalt somewhere. They discuss the possibility that Egan's death is espionage. Tony arrives and shares that the anonymous tip came from a restricted phone in Langley, VA; which leads Gibbs to believe it's the CIA.

Back at HQ, Kate enters with a computer tower. Tony, dressed again in his own clothing (thank God), is eating a "nutrition" bar. Kate mocks him for it, pointing out that it's not nearly as healthy as he thinks it is. She reads the ingredients, which make us all want a banana, and Abby arrives for Egan's computer. Abby asks after Gibbs but he is in with Director Morrow, trying to get a meeting with the CIA to find out about the anonymous tip. Time of death was established as 09:30, the tip came in at 9:32, and Langley is over 200 miles from Little Creek. Abby points out that this is impossible; Gibbs, who has arrived to retrieve his coat, rebuts that it's not impossible if someone from the CIA was watching on a high-definition satellite.

Gibbs meets privately with someone from the CIA (Roper), who insists that this could not have happened. Gibbs points out everything he has - dead Egan, missing classified prototype, and anonymous phone call originating from the CIA building. Roper does not deny the capability, but points out that domestic spying, such as what this points to, is illegal. Gibbs points out that they both work for the same government, and politely (for Gibbs) asks for Roper's help. Roper refuses. Gibbs takes another route - Abby has a boytoy who works at NASA and can help them track down their satellite user. Great insight into Abby's deeply playful nature. Ashton locates the building and office from which the satellite was controlled that saw the murder.

That evening, Kate and Gibbs wait on the street in front of the building where the young satellite controller (Worth) lives, waiting for him to come home. There is slightly flirty banter that makes the shippers sigh. Kate has a great laugh. Worth arrives home; they approach. Worth doesn't want to talk; he's on administrative leave and under investigation for his unauthorized activities with the satellite. Gibbs offers to go to bat for Worth if Worth tells him what he saw. Worth admits he was watching the nude sunbather when the murder took place and couldn't see the murderer. He tells Gibbs that all satellite transmissions are recorded on a hard drive at Langley; if he could access his computer, he could show Gibbs exactly what he saw. Gibbs gets on the phone with Roper and threatens to have Worth talk to a Congressional oversight committee if Roper doesn't let them see the satellite shots.

In Autopsy, Ducky determines cause of death to have been that Egan was stabbed with his own dive knife, and judging by the angle of the thrust, the assailant was probably left-handed. Abby is working on Egan's computer; it was password-protected and took some time to get in. Tony, Gibbs and Kate arrive to find out what she has. Gibbs has brought a copy of the satellite shots for Abby to enhance. Abby reports that Egan's notes indicate he was hinky about the reliability of the sonar device. On the beach, divers are searching for the sonar device.

Abby is unable to clear the picture up enough to make an ID. Tony suggests looking for Polar Tanning Girl instead; perhaps she saw something. Abby prints him a picture of the girl's face. Kate is to stay with Abby and go over Egan's files to learn about the device. Ducky comes to tell Gibbs about the assailant being left-handed. Ducky also found traces of a female's DNA on Egan's body - meaning that Egan was probably having an affair with someone, since his wife was gone all weekend. Gibbs goes back to the Egan's home to question Egan's wife. He asks questions about SideScan and Egan's project. He asks about how much time Egan spent at work; indications are that Lt. (Mrs.) Egan seems to know about the affair. She checks her watch and we note that she wears it on her right wrist, as a left-handed person might.

In the Little Creek Base Gym, Tony watches women work out. (Typical Tony.) He shows the photo to the gym manager, who says that it could be Gina, who comes in every day around noon. Since it is 11:40, Tony decides to wait. Also typical of Tony, he has to play with the equipment while he does so. Gibbs meets with Cmdr. Tyler privately to inquire about the device. Tyler admits Egan did not think the sonar gun's range was as good as promised; if he turned out to be correct, the Navy would not purchase the gun from SideScan and Overmeier would lose a lot of money. If the prototype is not found, SideScan would get an extension, giving them time to correct the flaws. He tosses out the suspicion of Egan's affair; Tyler admits she and Egan have been seeing one another for months. She, too, checks her watch; she wears it on the left wrist, as a right-handed person would. (Some lefties also wear their watches on their left-wrists as well.)

By the time Gina gets to the gym, Tony is out of his shirt and jacket and just in his undershirt, so when he approaches her, she thinks he's hitting on her and blows him off. Tony gets his ID and comes back, opening the interview. At SideScan, Kate and Gibbs are pretty much cleaning out the office and all the files. Gibbs confronts Overmeier about his suspicions; Overmeier is blustery and full of himself. Gibbs points out that Egan's death buys Overmeier time; Overmeier blusters some more. Gibbs has Overmeier sign a receipt for his files; we see that Overmeier is left-handed. Outside, Gibbs and Kate discuss Overmeier's left-handedness, and Kate points out that he and Tyler could be in it together. Gibbs says they could in a way that indicates he doesn't think they are. He gets a call from Tony reporting that Gina is in fact the polar tanner. Gina reports that she thought Egan was alone at first, but when she glanced back, she saw him arguing with a woman who was definitely military.

Returning to HQ, we get the rundown from Kate and Tony. Egan's killer was a woman (eliminating Overmeier) and left-handed (eliminating Tyler). Gibbs points out that perhaps they followed the missing prototype too hard; it's possible the murder had nothing to do with that. They begin to examine Lt. (Mrs.) Egan instead, who had a motive as she knew her husband was having an affair. Kate points out that Lt. (Mrs.) Egan has an alibi. Gibbs points out that she plays golf left-handed; he saw the clubs. They go back to the house to question her again.

Gibbs has an unusual method of questioning. He tells Lt. (Mrs.) Egan that he thinks Egan was killed over flaws in the SideScan sonar prototype thing. He and Kate further state that they need the prototype to build a case against Lauren Tyler. Kate asks about the affair; Lt. (Mrs.) Egan pretends to be all surprised. She continues to insist that he never talked to her about the project. She asks why they think Egan was killed. Gibbs straight-up lies; he tells her that he thinks Overmeier bribed Egan and Tyler to keep quiet about the sonar gun's flaws, and that Tyler killed Egan when Egan refused the bribe. He stresses the need to find the prototype as conclusive proof that Tyler was involved in the murder.

Outside, Kate and Gibbs discuss their little play-act. Gibbs thinks Lt. (Mrs.) Egan took the bait. Kate hopes they are right, because her bleeding heart would feel bad if they put an innocent woman through that. Gibbs calls Abby and has her get back in touch with Ashton for some more surveillance.

There is discussion in MTAC - Ashton admits to Abby that the satellite he is using is technically down for maintenance. They are watching the Egans' home. Lt. (Mrs.) Egan leaves in a big hurry. Abby redirects the satellite feed to the computer in the car where Kate, Tony and Gibbs are waiting. They get some separation and then head out in pursuit. Lt. (Mrs.) Egan leaves the base and heads south. Gibbs follows. In the midst of pursuit, the satellite signal is lost; turns out the satellite was down for maintenance for a reason. Ashton gets it back a few moments later and she is re-located driving into the woods.

We watch her get out of her car and hurry over to a place marked with some rocks. Pushing the rocks aside, she pulls out the sonar gun and the bloody dive knife. Gibbs' voice offers her a hand, and she gasps, turning; standing above her on a slight ridge like Charlie's Angels are our Intrepid Team, catching her in the act.

Back at HQ Tony comes in with Ducky's spare jumpsuit in a dry-cleaner's bag. He is late because he had to go pick it up. Gibbs is not pleased; turns out Tony's phone has been ringing off the hook. Gina apparently decided Tony was cute after all and has been calling nonstop. Tony's not interested; she's not attractive enough for him. Tony's version of letting her down easy is just not answering her calls. Gibbs warns him to handle the situation. There is banter regarding Gibbs getting whacked on the head with a golf club, and Gibbs has a great smile.

Summary: The NCIS team is called in when a severed leg bearing a marine tattoo is found in a trash bin, leading them to a small town where a murder scheme is afoot.

As the episode begins, we watch a truck drive up to an empty building in the middle of the night. A man gets out dressed for dumpster diving and proceeds to do just that. He finds a boot in good condition and pulls it out - only to find that it still contains the foot and lower leg it belongs to. With a gasp, he throws it.

As we join the team, they are just beginning their workday. Tony inquires how Kate's date last night went; we find that he has been eavesdropping on her when she is on the phone. Kate's date was cancelled on account of surgery - he wasn't having it, he was performing it. Abby pops in and asks about the date as well;

she just gets a sarcastic look. Tony fills her in; they agree that surgery is a pretty good date-cancelling excuse.

Gibbs comes in with the familiar order to "grab your gear" - they are going to Clarksburg, WV to see the leg. Kate inquires why they are going to West Virginia to see a leg; Gibbs says it belongs to a Marine. Closeup on the leg - it's got a Semper Fi tattoo on it. First clue. It's also got a Marine Corps emblem on the boot heel. Second clue.

The local LEOs are about as down-home as you can get, cracking jokes about how the leg landed on a set of stairs as though it was going up them. Gibbs is not amused. Ducky reports the limb was severed postmortem, but can't establish a time of death due to the lack of, well, a body.

Kate, taking crime scene photos, notices a seed wedged in the sole of the boot. Ducky tries to take off to an antique store and is pressed for a time by Gibbs. He is willing to commit that the limb has been dead less than twenty-four hours. Gibbs, grinning, lets Ducky go.

Gibbs interviews the junk dealer, who spits tobacco juice somewhere in the vicinity of Gibbs' shoes, then jumps into the dumpster to check for more evidence. Tony and Kate begin a discussion of tattoos. Tony thinks tats on a woman means she's "up for anything;" Kate asks if he thinks she's up for anything. He says she hasn't got a tattoo; she says no, not any that he will ever see. Tony looks like he doesn't quite know what to do with that information. He also learns a valuable lesson on not judging a book by its cover!

In Abby's lab, Ducky takes on the role of Captain Exposition and teaches us that Super Glue in gaseous form will bond to latent fingerprints on human flesh. We learn that Abby is one of those older sisters that makes you wonder how the little brother survived childhood. There is one fingerprint on the leg. In Autopsy, we learn that the victim had a titanium ankle joint, which will have a serial number traceable to the doctor who performed the surgery. The victim was also dismembered with a power saw. Ducky goes into a tangential story about his Grand Tour of Europe after he graduated from high school (the looks on Tony and Gibbs' faces are priceless).

In the squad room, Kate calls to find out about the ankle joint and Tony obsesses about her tattoo. Between the two of them, they locate the orthopedic surgeon who installed the joint. Gibbs interviews the surgeon, who provides the victim's name: PFC Thomas Dorn, who (according to his service record) has been dead for two years. According to the service record, a Dr. Sylvia Chalmers of Harmony, WV, presided over the death, which was due to myocardial infarction (heart attack). No autopsy was done.

In the lab, Abby finds a piece of trace evidence on the sock. In the car, Kate and Tony debate the relative merits of small towns and Kate actually uses the phrase "a slice of Americana" which makes even her most devout fans want to stab her in the eye. In the squad room, Abby reports to Gibbs that the fingerprint on the leg didn't have a match in AFIS and the trace evidence on the sock was a piece of straw. In Harmony, Tony flirts with the doctor's receptionist (and her very bad hillbilly accent). In Abby's lab, she reports that the seed came from a sycamore tree.

In Harmony, Dr. Chalmers comes across as a sweet and slightly out-of-it old woman. At the time Dorn died, she was the only doctor for 40 miles. She states that Dorn came in on his own, short of breath and having chest pains. There is a great deal of folksiness in the room; Dorn came into the doctor's office instead of an exam room because they only have one and the Thomas twins were in it with the measles; when Dorn collapsed, they called for an ambulance, but it was working a car accident way out on Turtle Creek. Kate wonders why the coroner didn't do an autopsy; turns out, Chalmers was the coroner at the time. Kate mentions that they are going to be exhuming the body; Chalmers advises them that Dorn's sister had the body cremated. She goes on and on about feeling sorry for the sister. Tony shows her a picture of a Marine, asks if she recognizes it. She says no, and Tony tells her that is PFC Dorn.

As they leave, they discuss the fact that the doctor wore Estee Lauder perfume. Tony gets back on the tattoo thing; Kate tells him it's a rose on her butt and asks if they can please move on. In the squad room, Abby reports that the levels of Digitalis - a heart medication - in Dorn's leg was lethally high. Kate and Tony arrive back and pass on what they have learned. It's obvious they bought Chalmers's sweet-but-stupid act. They have found the sister - actually a half-sister - living in Maryland. Kate and Gibbs head out to question her. We learn that Abby knows where Kate's tat is, but isn't telling. (And all the Kate/Abby shippers cheer.)

Upon arriving at Melissa Dorn's house, the first thing we see is a giant sycamore tree in the front yard. Melissa Dorn is a redhead and Gibbs' automatic redhead reflexes kick in. Kate prepares to do lots of eye-rolling. We learn that Gibbs is an only child. Kate says they are working a case with a tenuous connection to Dorn's. Melissa hasn't kept any of his personal effects. She offers Gibbs coffee, and they wander off to the kitchen to flirt, leaving Kate to snoop around and see if she can find anything. The flirting, which doesn't bear repeating, gets very overboard, causing Kate and millions of viewers to roll their eyes. Kate finds nothing to give them probable cause, but Gibbs takes a seed sample from the big sycamore outside. He brings two sycamore seeds to Abby, tells her they are from the same tree, and asks for a DNA match. She says six hours.

In the squad room, Tony finds a motive for the murder of PFC Dorn: his half-sister collected $750,000 in life insurance. He and Kate go to question the insurance adjuster, who says the company paid the claim to avoid a lawsuit. They discuss Gibbs' flirtation with Melissa; we learn that all three of his wives have been redheads. Kate actually acts jealous over the flirtation. In the squad room, Gibbs talks the case over with Ducky; he is stumped. They discuss the facts. Then Gibbs asks Ducky who he would get to pose as a Marine. Ducky's reply: "You." Something dawns on Gibbs and he begins to laugh, grabs his coat and heads out. In the lab, Abby pulls up her DNA - and gets a negative match.

Gibbs goes to question Dorn's former CO, a Gunny Vestman, who remembers Gibbs when Gibbs was an MP at Camp Lejeune. Vestman's memories of Dorn are not so positive: he remembers that Dorn was a druggie who was about to be drummed out of the Corps when the accident that caused the titanium ankle joint did it for him. Dorn was tight with a Corporal Morgan, who went UA the same time Dorn died, and both of them ran with a redhead called Melissa. Vestman further says that both Dorn and Morgan were "shacked up" with Melissa (and the audience shudders en masse). Gibbs now takes on the role of Captain Exposition: he thinks Dorn and Melissa killed Morgan, identified him as Dorn, cremated him and claimed the insurance money.

In Abby's lab, she is flipped out over a positive match. Gibbs tells her good work, and she flips out further over the fact that one sample from the tree matches while the other sample, ostensibly from the same tree, does not. Gibbs confesses that the non-matching sample came from a different tree; he was giving Abby a blind test. She reacts predictably. Gibbs is pretty pleased; the DNA match places Dorn at Melissa's house, giving them probable cause to search. The team heads to Maryland. Tony goes over the barn floor with Luminol and black light; Gibbs and Kate take the house. Tony finds marks on the barn floor that indicate where a body may have been dismembered; around and in the marks, he finds traces of blood.

Kate and Gibbs use the old glass-of-water trick to obtain Melissa's fingerprints. Tony comes into the house and almost immediately twigs to the presence of someone else in the house. He and Gibbs go to investigate the upstairs and in a very dramatic scene, they discover, hiding in an upstairs closet - Dr. Sylvia Chalmers. When they bring her downstairs, she is addressed by Melissa - to the surprise of everyone - as "Mama." Chalmers goes into detail about how Melissa defrauded an insurance company at the behest of her "wicked half-brother" and goes on about how everything is Melissa's fault; Gibbs points this out to Melissa.

Gibbs goes on to tell Chalmers that the digitalis in Dorn's leg can be identified by a chemical marker as having come from a stock belonging to Chalmers. Melissa tells Chalmers that the investigators know Chalmers killed Dorn and chopped him up. Chalmers slaps Melissa and says that they can't use anything she's said in court; Gibbs retorts that Melissa was read her rights and waived them; they can use it all.

Back in the squad room, Tony reports that Dorn's left arm was found in a garbage dump in Chiefton, right arm in Katy Lick and torso in Marshville; left leg and head are still unaccounted for. Tony cracks a joke about Kate's tattoo, and Gibbs indicates he knows what the tattoo is (and probably where it is).

Summary: The team investigates when a Marine recruitment officer is found shot to death by a sniper with a grudge, who leaves a white feather behind.

A Marine recruiter, Sgt Alvarez, is shot in his office in Washington D.C., NCIS is called to investigate. Abby determines that from the angle and power of the shot, the weapon most likely used was a sniper rifle.

Alvarez has kept all his correspondence from his recruits, and the first idea is that he has been assassinated by someone with a grudge against him, perhaps because the recruiter promised them a better career than the Corps could deliver. Almost all of the correspondence is complimentary. however, because Alvarez did care deeply about giving the kids he recruited better lives. There are only two complaints, and one of the two guys (the other guy is in Iraq) is interviewed. But it turns out this suspect has become a committed marine.

The next day, another Marine recruiter, this time in Maryland, is shot in the same fashion, except for the fact that Abby thinks the shot was fired from a car, rather than a building like the first incident. Since the two Marines were shot in different states, the FBI claims they now have jurisdiction and they tell Gibbs he will very shortly get a call from his Director telling him to back off. Gibbs tells his team to recover the bullet and when Kate finds it, and the team calls him to tell him this, he pretends the call is the one telling him to leave. As they leave, the team also recovers a white feather, too small to be a common pigeon feather, which they suspect might be the killer's "calling card."

Although there is damage to the bullet, Abby can determine it was fired from the same type of weapon as the one that killed the D.C. recruiter. So now they look for and eventually find, blown into the ventilation grille, the same type of feather at the D.C. Recruiting center. So it's definitely the same guy, and it might be someone who has been rejected from the Corps and so has a general grudge against recruiters, and also wants to show he is 'better.'

But how will they stop the next attack when there are so many possible targets at recruiting centres? Gibbs decides to set a stalking horse; he gets a lot of TV publicity for the re-opening of the centre. And in order to catch the shooter, Gibbs poses as a Marine recruiter, with Kate posing as his commanding officer. Gibbs refuses to wear a bulletproof vest under his uniform shirt with the excuse that it would show. Tony rigs three sensitive microphones to telephone posts so that Abby can triangulate the position of the shooter. After a long day of Kate analyzing everyone that talks to Gibbs, they find a white feather on the water cooler and so discover the shooter is the water-delivery man. At that moment, a shot is fired, only to be stopped by the new bulletproof glass in the recruiting center. The shooter's position is located through the mikes, and he is killed in the attempt to arrest him.

The sniper who shot the marine recruiters was a chap who'd been refused admittance due to psychopathic personality traits - he'd applied to become a sniper, but his profile let him down. Although Gibbs ruefully admitted that the chap was a really good shot.

Guest Stars: Sean McGowan (Lieutenant Wallace), Kirk B.R. Woller (Lt. Commander Julius), Kate McNeil (Commander Green), Heidi Dippold (Laura Seeger), Stephanie Hodge (Sheriff Charlene Dupray)
Production Code: 01014
Summary: A navy dentist stops near the parked car to help a stranded motorist who pulls out a gun. The team investigates a murder with the help from a local sheriff, Charley, when they find out about similar murders of a Navy civilian employee and a pilot who was going through a nasty divorce. They suspect the wife but she has a perfect alibi.

A navy dentist stops near a parked car to help a stranded female motorist, who pulls out a gun.

In the squad room Kate is dealing with her emergency contact information. Tony volunteers and against her better judgment, Kate accepts. Tony immediately makes it a big deal and Kate changes her mind to Abby. Abby is walking through reading her horoscope and is grateful that she is not a Libra. Gibbs comes through carrying two cups of coffee. The phone rings and they're off to the crime scene.

They arrive on the scene and met the local sheriff, Charley, who is reluctant to turn over the investigation to them. Charley, who insists several times that Gibbs call her that, drives a hard bargain before conceding that they can do the forensics work. The investigation is hers and all prosecution will be in her county. It's an election year.

The crime scene is markedly different from what we saw in the opening. It now looks like the dentist had the flat tire and was changing it when he was attacked. Ducky tells Charley the biblical tale of the good Samaritan. Ducky flirts, but Charley shoots him down. Charley is much more interested in Gibbs and is quite direct about it. Charley even manages to get Gibbs after hours number, just in case she needs to get a hold of him.

Back in the autopsy suite, Ducky has determined that the bullet was most likely a hollow point. Gerald comes in and Ducky explains how the dum-dum bullet got its name. Gerald says that he actually finds that interesting. Ducky responds as opposed to what?

Gibbs interviewed his CO, a woman, while Tony and Kate search his apartment. The CO says that the major spent most of his off time doing collectibles on the internet. Tony stumbles across the dentist's ebay login "igottoomany" and the dentist definitely has too many. The dentist collected lunchboxes and has a whole room full.

They're all back at the squadroom and Sheriff Charley has been trying to contact Gibbs. The sheriff wants to video conference and tell Gibbs about the similar homicide two counties over. The team starts checking the new victim, a civilian who worked at the same base as the dentist, for ties to the first one, and the dentist's CO. They also are to get the records from the local LEOs for this murder.

Back in Ducky's autopsy suite, Ducky has determined that the cause of death is pretty straight forward. The gunshot residue indicates that the dentist was shot at a close range. Ducky also found a powder on the victim's wrists, most likely corn starch. Ducky starts to tell Gibbs about the use of corn starch in latex gloves, but Gibbs cuts him off. Without missing a beat, Ducky continues his story with Gerald as his new audience.

Abby is in the garage, working on the supposed flat tire from the victim's car. She and Gibbs try to out bluff each other as to whether or not they know what the other is thinking. It ends in a draw with the conclusion that they should play poker together sometime. Abby has discovered that the flat tire was not really flat, the air was let out. Gibbs inquires after the tire tracks lifted at the crime scene and Abby replies in a manner which makes Gibbs note that she is particularly feisty today. After looking at the tire track evidence, they move on to fingerprints. Abby found fingerprints on the hood. Gibbs asks if she ran it through AFIS, as Abby says AFIS. Gibbs remarks feisty and psychic to which Abby replies it's a killer combination. Abby also found corn starch on the lock of the trunk, but Gibbs all ready knew that. Abby stops and then says "Ducky." They have determined that this was not a crime of opportunity, but a very well planned out murder.

Back in the squad room, Kate is having trouble with the phone tree of the county clerk's office. She cannot seem to get a real person on the phone to request the records of that crime. And that's when Charley walks in. She is in civilian clothes with her hair loose. She's bringing gifts, the evidence from the other crime scene, but she will only give it to Gibbs. Once it's delivered, she informs Gibbs he owes her dinner. Gibbs inquires as to whether or not Charley has always been this shy. She responds that there are two kinds of people, the ones that go after what they want, and everybody else. Gibbs takes her to the cafeteria for dinner.

When Gibbs returns, Kate and Tony are standing looking at the plasma screen, with knowing smiles on their faces. Gibbs ask if they have something to say, they reply no in unison and turn back to their work. The crime scene appears to be almost identical to theirs. But one of the local LEOs noticed a wet patch of grass and bagged it. The local LEOs were still waiting for DNA identification on the urine. Gibbs tells them to get the sample to their lab where they will rush it. Cut to a shot of a car on the side of the road with its blinkers on, followed by a dumped, naked body. The last shot is of a car with its blinkers on, but these are red blinkers, not white as in the previous shot.

As they arrive at the crime scene, Tony goes on and on about the car, an X4. This car does not have a flat tire like the previous victims' cars did. Charley is on the scene, waiting for Gibbs. Kate says it looks like the work of the same person, but Ducky disagrees. This body was killed elsewhere between 2 and 3 in the afternoon and then dumped here. They think this is the work of a copycat killer.

Gibbs thinks they are looking for a woman. Charley says "what's your thinking, doll?" Gibbs says that men prefer hands on killing, women don't. Women leave crime scenes meticulously clean. What would cause a man to pull over at night? A damsel in distress. Charley says "hand-some AND smart." Gibbs assigns Kate and Tony to go over all the records on base, looking for a disgruntled employee. Gibbs says he is going to go and interview the latest victim's REO. Kate wants to know if there is any rhyme or reason in how Gibbs makes assignments. Gibbs answers "yea" and then walks away with Charley, both of them laughing.

The latest victim's REO says they should be looking at his wife, soon to be ex-wife. The divorce was very nasty and Jimmy came from a wealthy family.

Gibbs and Kate interview the widow, Laura Seeger. She says she is very upset at her husband's death despite the rancor of their divorce. She tells them that she knows she is at the top of their list of suspects and to just ask her the questions they came to ask. Gibbs asks if she killed her husband. She says no. She provides an alibi and also agrees to provide a DNA sample.

Ducky finds that the two autopsies were nearly identical. "It was deja vu all over again" which leads to a discussion between Tony and Kate on the difference between Yogi Bear and Yogi Berra. Ducky says he found something in the victim's nose and he took a swab to it. Gibbs comments that's kind of old school, isn't it and Ducky says he goes where the evidence takes him. Then Ducky starts to tell a story about a corpse with jelly from a doughnut on his face. Sadly, we'll never hear the end because Gibbs interrupts to ask about the swab.

The victim had sawdust in his nose. Laura Seeger said that her husband had a woodshop at the back of their property. There was also a dog hair in the nostril. Laura has dogs. Laura also seems to have a solid alibi, but they'll check into that.

Abby is in her lab listening to something on headphones when Gibbs sneaks up on her. Abby does not appreciate it. But she has something for him, something that will rock Gibbs' world. Abby has matched the bullet from the first victim to the third victim, which means there was not a copycat killer. All three were killed by the same person. The new speculation is that Laura Seeger killed two strangers to cover up killing her husband, making it look like a serial killer.

Gibbs wants a report on the DNA match. Abby tells him he cannot rush science. There won't be a match for at least 18 hours.

Charley shows up in the squad room with the video tapes from the bank to verify Laura Seeger's alibi. She hasn't looked at them because she can't watch movies alone. She also picked up a copy of Sleepless in Seattle, just in case. Gibbs is finding Charley's pursuit of him amusing. Laura Seeger is on the bank's video tape just like she said she would be. Her alibi has been confirmed. Gibbs wonders if the bank uses a central system for their security tapes. Laura could have had an accomplice change the time. "How hard is it for an attractive woman to get a guy to do what she wants?" Both Charley and Kate answer that it's easy. Tony tells them it was a rhetorical question.

Gibbs hands out assignments, including one for Charley, although she tells him it will cost him. Gibbs keeps the tapes so that Abby can go over them and make sure the shadows are consistent with the time of day.

Back at Laura Seeger's, she doesn't appear surprised to see Gibbs at her door. She also doesn't seem to be surprised by anything he says, including that they found sawdust and dog hair in her late husband's nose. Laura insists that she has nothing to hide and doesn't understand what Gibbs wants from her.

Kate and Tony discover that the Seeger's pre-nup means that Laura would have gotten nothing in the divorce. If Seeger died before they were divorced, she would inherit all that money. In the conversation we discover that Tony thinks ABBA are Swiss not Swedish, and denies the truth (but at least he likes them). Gibbs returns and it is clear from his demeanor that the interview with Laura did not go as he had hoped.

Abby has called Gibbs and is ready to rock his world again. Laura Seeger's DNA matches the DNA from the urine sample at the second crime scene. They cannot match because Laura has an iron-clad alibi. But they do.

Gibbs and team plus Charley show up at Laura Seeger's with a search warrant. Laura has an alibi for her husband's murder, but not for victim number two, the crime scene with the urine. Laura insists that someone is setting her up, that someone must have stolen her urine and planted it at the crime scene. Laura gave two urine samples within the last month and her doctor is the woman who was the first victim's CO, Commander Green. Turns out she had a problem with Seeger; he filed a sexual harassment complaint against her. The matter had not gotten to the review board yet; Seeger was killed before it did. Commander Green asks Gibbs if he's trying to insinuate something; Gibbs responds he doesn't insinuate. Gibbs wants the medical records from Laura Seeger's physical; Commander Green declines. They discuss whether or not these medical records are military records and Commander Green says she'll have to check Gibbs' interpretation, which will take a while. Gibbs asks for her alibi; she was at a medical conference in D.C.

Back in the squad room they are discussing the fact that both of their prime suspects have iron-clad alibis. That the DNA at the crime scene was from one of their prime suspect and also in the possession of their other prime suspect. Tony is in favor of it being the Commander because that whole sexual harassment thing is just wrong. Kate gets a phone call from Arlene in Records which answers the question.

Cut to nighttime with the team moving in a vehicle talking to the OnStar operator. They have a location on the vehicle they are tracking. Charley rogers that she has that location. Tony chimes in that they've made their pickup and hopes they get there before someone else does.

There is the rear of a vehicle with the same white lights blinking that we've seen before. A man's feet are walking up to the vehicle. It's Gibbs, flashlight in hand. He commands the person in the vehicle to put her hands where he can see them and opens the car door. Laura Seeger emerges from the vehicle. Laura is handcuffed as more police cars arrive. Laura is taken to the rear of one of the police vehicles only to see her identical twin sister in the back seat of the car.

Back in the squad room, Tony is fixated on the twins thing. As they are talking Charley comes on the TV for a press conference about the arrest. Charley starts out saying there is a group of people she would like to thank and Tony is certain they are about to get the credit they deserve. Charley calls them unsung heroes and Kate responds not once you start singing. Charley, however, is talking about the citizens of Graysen County. Kate and Tony are surprised; Gibbs is just amused. As he says, "It's an election year."

Summary: Gibbs risks his career when his former commanding officer is accused of stealing funds.

Gibbs receives a package. Gibbs receives orders to find Colonel Ryan, his former commanding officer, because federal authorities have a surveillance tape of Colonel Ryan entering the country under an assumed name, apparently talking with someone but they cannot tell who he is talking to. Gibbs know where Ryan use to go when he was on leave and thus approaches the country holiday cabin, finds a dead body and a tripod. The dead man was a FBI agent of Fornell's. The cabin shows signs of attack; Gibbs denies that Ryan would have attacked the cabin or killed the man. The cabin has been booby-trapped: Gibbs sees the bomb as they are searching and they all run out. After a tedious wait for bomb disposal, Kate accuses Gibbs of needing glasses. Just then the bomb blows up.

Turns out that, in Iraq, Colonel Ryan's task force was charged with recovering money Saddam had stashed around the country. His task force did a good job, they found close to thirty million in U.S. currency. There seemed to be a problem though. Shipments were lost and cancelled at the last minute. Mistakes in the amount being shipment were incorrect. Ryan knew it had to be someone in a very high position in the U.S. government. Ryan sent a decoy shipment with $2 million in cash to draw them out. They killed Ryan's task force and captured Ryan. Ryan escaped.

When Gibbs found Ryan he mentioned the tripod and told Ryan to give him the tapes, that his lab had technology to get information on the damaged tapes. Ryan told Gibbs that whoever was stealing the money, could be CIA, NSA or even NCIS, but who ever it was, they were funding something and killing anyone who found out about it.

When everyone was back at the squad room Fornell told Gibbs that he was looking for Ryan and doesn't care whether Ryan is guilty or innocent. So Gibbs cannot work with Fornell on this, he has to work around him. Gibbs tries to keep his team out of the loop to protect them.

Gibbs in his basement working on his boat, Ryan enters. From their conversation, we know that Gibbs worked with Ryan (his Commanding Officer) and the XO (executive officer) whose name was Cameron. Cameron was supposedly dead 14 years ago, but Ryan brings him to Gibbs basement. Gibbs tells Ryan that Cameron died in his arms and Ryan tells Gibbs apparently he did not.

Gibbs calls the squad room, and Kate tells Gibbs that after Abby cleaned up the tape, they now have an I.D. on one of the shooters at the cabin: Reserve Army Colonel Mike Granger. Ryan tells Gibbs that Granger is just a foot soldier and that they need to get the one who is the head of the conspiracy.

Ryan takes Gibbs to a warehouse where he has stashed enough weapons to blow up D.C. The FBI followed Gibbs and Ryan to the warehouse, everyone holding their weapons on Ryan. Ryan keeps yelling instructions to Cameron, who stays out of sight.

Gibbs persuades Fornell to allow all of them to go see Colonel Granger, to check Ryan's story before anyone loses their life.

In the office of Colonel Granger, Ryan is not acting himself and is talking to someone. Gibbs approaches Ryan, who has a gun and has threatened Col Granger. Fornell has drawn his gun but holds fire, and lets Gibbs approach Ryan. Gibbs talks Ryan into giving up and Gibbs lets Fornell in on "what's happening." We see the scene from the perspective of Ryan, so we see Cameron arguing against Gibbs' urging for Ryan to put down his weapon. Cameron is standing behind Gibbs. But eventually Ryan gives up his weapon after Gibbs repeatedly clarifies what happened 14 years ago, in the heat of battle, when Ryan, Cameron and Gibbs were fighting together. Ryan collapses into Gibbs' arms and Fornell puts down his weapon at the sight of the broken soldier being comforted by his Gunny Sergeant.

Finally, in an end scene at the hospital, we hear the doctor explaining that paranoid schizophrenia is not abnormal at such a late stage in Ryan's life. Gibbs relives the actuality of when his XO died in his arms in Desert Storm and all Ryan keeps on saying is "I don't understand". There was no conspiracy. Ryan was talking to a ghost of Cameron, not wanting to believe Cameron's death was real. Gibbs knew that Cameron could not be present in DC: he had bled out in Gibbs' arms and Gibbs couldn't save him.

Summary:	A terrorist holds Ducky, Gerald, and Kate hostage while NCIS try to figure out how the terrorist got inside and how to get their people out safely.

A dead terrorist is brought back to NCIS headquarters to be autopsied. Gerald opens a body bag to another body claiming to be a foreign sailor he is presented with an armed man who then takes Gerald and Ducky hostage in Autopsy. The terrorist (we do not know his name yet) demands all the evidence from the dead terrorist to be brought to Autopsy so that he can get away with it. Ducky phones Abby and asks her to bring it down. Abby has a new-found phobia of Autopsy so she is unable to go down and as Gibbs or Tony are not in the squad room she asks Kate to go. Kate goes and pretends to be Abby, but the terrorist is not fooled, noticing that Kate is carrying a gun, which a forensic technician wouldn't be, and takes Kate hostage as well. Also, because Ducky lied, the terrorist shoots Gerald in the shoulder. Gibbs is now made aware of the situation as Kate did not come back and the security video in Autopsy is not working. They put a small camera down into Autopsy and get a picture of the terrorist before the terrorist shoots the camera. The hostage rescue team appears and tries to bargain with the terrorist for the hostages. The terrorist asks Gibbs to come down and to bring some other evidence with him, he also asks Gibbs to come unarmed. Gibbs comes and places the box down, the terrorist gives him Kate's gun and they shoot at each other. The terrorist hits Gibbs in the shoulder and it is a through and through. Smoke canisters go off and the hostage rescue team gets in and there is a lot of confusion. When the smoke has cleared Gibbs walks over to the body lying on the floor, supposedly the terrorist he shot. He turns the body over and it turns out to be the dead terrorist and the live one has got away.

The doors to autopsy open and Ducky asks Gerald "He's not a American naval officer?" and Gerald replies "they said he was a royal navy commander." Ducky inquires as to whom, and Gerald did not know, assumed British, and Ducky goes on to name several countries with Royal navies. Gerald explains that the embassy told NCIS to bring him to autopsy. Ducky asks which embassy and Gerald tells him Israeli. They are both curious about Israeli sending them the body. Gerald wheels out the body and opens the bag on Ducky's command, and stands there shocked. Ducky walks over and is too shocked to see a gun pointing at them and the body very much alive.

The person tells Gerald to shut off the lights, and then shoots out the video camera. The man with a very thick Israeli accent asks how they alert people when they are conducting an infectious autopsy, and Ducky remarks that they hang a decomposing body in the corridor. The man then goes on to explain that when he asks a question he wants the truthful and immediate answer or else he will put a 9mm hollow point slug (bullet) in one of Gerald's ball and socket joints. Ducky rather the slug be in him, but the man doesn't agree. Ducky then tells him the real way they put alert people, a lit red sign in the corridor, the man instructs Gerald to do so, and to lock the doors bring him greens and breathing gear. Ducky asks what he wants, and the man says in due time.

Cut to the Evidence Garage – Tony asks Kate if she had ever had a nightmare, she replies no. They continue on nightmares and Tony reveals that he had a recurring one as a child about vampires, and one being in the canopy of his bed. Kate asks if he still fears vampires, and hints that it had to be a female; he tells her that it was after his blood not the pride of his childhood. She is shocked to know that he was proud of it at the age of 5. We also learn that his mother told him bedtime stories and had kept candles in his Louis XV bedroom to enhance the effect of the trompe-l'oeil (trick-the-eye) murals on his walls. Kate remarks that the candles, trompe-l'oeil, and the canopy bed makes for his bete noire to be a vampire. Gibbs enters the conversation wondering what Tony is telling Kate to forget, and then comments how he does crosswords and that is how he knows what Bete Noire means, then asks if his father taught him how to report, and Tony goes off on his childhood, overlooking Gibbs true intent. Then realizes it and tells him what they found in Kasam's room. They found Koran, prayer rug, fast food wrappers, Aspirin, sinus spray and breath freshener, no brush or toothpaste, and no computer. Found minute traces of nitrate. Gibbs explain that Gitmo said that Kasam was to execute a attack on the naval base at Norfolk.

He worked at a fast food place, Kate looks for Cyber cafes. Gibbs is mad he didn't think of that and Tony calls him more smurf than Alpha Geek, and then it dawns on him that he still uses a notebook and a pencil instead of a PDQ, and Tony corrects him that it is a PDA, and that he could teach Gibbs to use it, and Gibbs gets angrier and that McGee teaches Tony and Tony teaches him and that it is backwards. Gibbs leaves on a coffee run and Kate wonders what his deal is, and Tony says that, that is Gibbs Bete Noire.

Cut to Autopsy – where a body is being taken out and put onto a table. The man sees the bullet wounds and says that they hit the Right Ventricle and the Left Atria, and that Ducky didn't do an autopsy, Ducky explains that it was late and he was to do the autopsy that day. The man asks if he drew blood, and Ducky replies yes, he then asks if it is kept in there, and Ducky says no. The man asks if he sent it with Kasam's clothes to forensics, Ducky says yes. Ducky asks the man if he is a pathologist, the man ignores and asks where the lab is. Gerald answers that it is one floor up directly above us. Ducky tells him that there is a stairwell outside that he could use. The man asks about the elevator, and Ducky thought that the guy would think that is too risky, and then the man asks if it was an emergency elevator, ducky says that would be alarmed, so the man asks if there is a camera, and Ducky paused and replied yes. The man got angry and pulled out his gun and pointed it to Gerald's shoulder and Ducky explains that he answered promptly and didn't lie. The man adds the rule that they are not allowed to try to trick him either.

Cut to a little box and a caf-pow being set down on a table. Abby hits the play button, and her screen shows Android Lust playing. The phone rings in her office, he answers commenting that Ducky is in early, a very agitated Ducky tells her to turn her music off, and asks for the evidence back, and she tells him that she hasn't done anything with it yet, Ducky persists and says that he just needs it all back, and essentially yells at her for it. Ducky says he needs it for a theory, and then Abby goes on about her Bete Noire how she can't go down to autopsy, her nightmare is her lying on a autopsy table with her all opened up. Ducky tells her that they opened a infectious body and she could just leave it at the door or get Gibbs to do it. The man doesn't believe that conversation and asks, and questions Gerald about it. HE thinks that a code word could set it off, but Ducky reassures him that they aren't agents. The man reveals that he fears butterflies. The man then asks who Gibbs is. Ducky says that Gibbs is the only other person that Abby told about her nightmare and the man asks if he is an agent, and Ducky says yes, and then tells him he just wants to get the man what he wants so he can leave.

Cut to Abby's lab – Abby takes a sip of caf-pow, gathers all the evidence and heads to the elevator. Her fear kicks back in and can't push the down button, so goes up to the squad room. The man asks if Gerald had been working with Ducky long, and Ducky starts talking about his youth, then the Man and Ducky start talking about the Battle of Waterloo. The man then again inquires about Abby and her fear of autopsy. Gerald then goes on to say, that he didn't understand since she sleeps in a coffin, it's the kind of kinky thing Abby would do.

Cut to squad room – Kate is the only person at her desk. She asks where Gibbs and Tony are, but they are both in unreachable places, so she tells Kate about the evidence and her nightmare. Kate volunteers to take everything down, and then reasons out that Kasam is the only body down there and he couldn't be known to be infectious without the blood test, Kate calls down and Ducky pretends she is Abby and that she convinced herself that she could overcome her fear. Gibbs and the Director were talking in the elevator on the way to MTAC, talk to 2 agents via video feed about Kasam.

Cut to squad room – Abby is pacing back and forth trying to figure out how to overcome her fear. Gibbs goes over and asks what is wrong, Gibbs asks about Kasam's clothes and Abby told him how Ducky wanted everything back. Gibbs gut goes into gear and tries to figure out the medical emergency that had Ducky tell Abby he wanted everything STAT.

Cut to elevator outside autopsy – Kate knocks on the autopsy door, and Ducky tells her to leave it there, and Kate wants him to sign, and Ducky says that he can't open the door, Kate says how she beat her phobia, and Ducky calls her Abby. The man sees her gun and confronts her.

Cut to squad room – Gibbs goes into hostage situation mode, and gets the team together. Calls the director tells him the situation, places 4 agents around autopsy, gets the floor plan, and asks abby to move her gaschromatograph, so they can get a flex-cam down into autopsy, since the man blew the camera out. Tony and Gibbs go to the basement stairwell cut to autopsy – The man has Kate on a table and pats her down, and finds out that she is really Kaitlin Todd, not Abby. He then asks about Kasam, and she stays silent refusing to answer him. Ducky says that it wasn't her, it was Gibbs. The man is going through the evidence, and finds the blood. The man asks if it is all the evidence, Ducky and Gerald say yes. The man asks Kate if they searched Kasam's room, and Kate still says silent. Then Ducky explains the rules on the man's request. When they got to the trick rule, the man says how they did try tricking him, when Kate came down by her pretending to be Abby, and Ducky calling her Abby. So the man shoots Gerald's left shoulder.

Cut to Gibbs running down basement stairwell – They open the door and see the No Entry infectious warning sign, and that autopsy is dark. Show Pacci in garage and him and his partner checked out the ambulance and Balboa and his partner, Gibbs told them to disable the bell and go down to autopsy and not open the doors. Gibbs says he going up to MTAC, and Tony asks if they have a hostage situation, Gibbs says time to make a phone call, and leaves.

Cut to Ducky putting Gerald on the table, to help with his gun shot wound. The man threatens Kaitlin that he would regret having to put a bullet in Gerald's knee, since she keeps insulting him. Tony sees Kate run past the door, and run back.

Gibbs in in MTAC and explains who is in autopsy, other than dirtbags. The director calls autopsy, and the man tells him to answer. The man then tells Kate where to put the morphine for Gerald — correctly. Ducky answers, Gibbs asks what is up with the sign Ducky tells Gibbs they opened an infectious body, and Gibbs then asks if Kate is down there, and Ducky says no, on instruction of the man, then Gibbs tells Ducky to let him know when he can come down because he is curious now. The entire conversation is done to sound very casual. Ducky tells the man that he can't wait to weigh his liver, for making him lie to Gibbs. Tony sees the man, and describes the man. The director tells him that the FBI hostage team will be there shortly, and they need an eye in autopsy, and Gibbs runs out going to get that eye.

Cut to Gerald being lifted to a seated position by Ducky and Kate Kate says that the bleeding stopped so its good, and the man says 'yes and no, correct Doctor Mallard?', and Ducky explains how he clamped the artery, the man then explains that Gerald will lose his arm unless the artery is repaired soon. Kate asks why Ducky can't do it, and Ducky explains it's an autopsy room not an ER. The man then asks, again, where the evidence from Kasam's room is, Kate tells him its in the evidence garage one floor up. He asks if it is the way he came in, Ducky tells him its upstairs next to forensics.

Cut to Gibbs in Abby's lab – Getting a flex-cam into autopsy, they see that there is only one intruder, the man sees their camera and shoots it out.

Cut to the man in autopsy. He takes off his greens and is dressed in all black. He tells Ducky and Kate to put Kasam in the body bag, and alarm goes off, and he asks them to do it "now, please" The man says how that soon they(NCIS/FBI teams) soon call to negotiate their release Kate tells them that they don't negotiate with terrorists, and the man tells her, seductively, that once they get to know each other she won't call him a terrorist.

Cut to squad room – The building is being evacuated and the FBI hostage team is brought in, and briefed. Gibbs explains that he is in charge he doesn't want anything to happen to them

Cut to MTAC – Nobody recognizes the man. They make a connection to Hamas, and Gibbs tells them that the man wants Kasam's body and blood, to hide that they had an infectious man working on base.

Cut to evidence garage – Abby telling Gibbs and Tony all the diseases he could have had. They go to get the evidence from the room. Gibbs goes through everything to find what the virus was, and they go to find duplicates to give the man. Abby uses her PDA and immediately tells them the location of the nearest tea shop, then takes the originals for testing for the virus.

Cut to MTAC, and them negotiating with the man. The man knows the director's name, and he demands the evidence that Tony and Gibbs were getting duplicates of.

Cut to autopsy – Kate picks up a dissecting tool and attempts to stab the man. But confronts him about it, then attempts, and he grabs her, and basically tells her it was a test.

Cut to Abby video-ing into MTAC that she found the virus. The man calls MTAC, and tells Gibbs to come down alone with all the evidence from Kasam's room.

Cut to squad room with Tony running in saying that he got everything Gibbs enters the elevator to go down He arrives and enter autopsy, it's pitch black. The man comments that Gibbs looks older than he expected. He tells him to put the stuff down, and walk to the door with his hands on his head. Gibbs pulls out the nasal spray, and then opens the evidence bag and uses it, he tells the man that the real stuff is on its way to CDC The man asks Gibbs how far away from Kasam he was when he shot him. Gibbs tells him 37' and a few inches. The man remarks how he is a very good shot. Gibbs says he would like to demonstrate. And the man then says that Kate said she wanted to shoot him too. The man offers Gibbs a chance to demonstrate and gives him the clip to Kate's gun. Gibbs takes the gun, and puts the clip in, and then asks the man why, and shoots him, Gibbs get shot and a smoke bomb goes off, as the hostage team runs in. They search for the man, leaving Gibbs on the ground. fade out fade in to Tony waking up Gibbs, Gibbs asks if he got the guy, and Tony says yes. They look at the man on the floor, and Gibbs turns him over and says that it is not the man.

Cut to squad room – Tony discussing what happened to Kate, and mentions how Gibbs said that he thought that he was wearing a bullet proof vest, Kate says how when she tried to stab him she felt the vest. Tony asks if she fell for the man, and her facial expression hints at it.

Cut to Ducky leaving autopsy, with Abby lying on the table; she smiles and closes her eyes.

Cut to a Gibbs' basement – He is sitting there with a sling on his left arm, and gun in his hand, and he turns and fires twice, and shoots a picture of the man in the head, dead center.

Howard Carter)
Summary: When the body of a marine is found after a party in an illegal night club, the team investigates a number of possible leads - including blackmail and accidental death.

The scene opens up on a party at a night-club, following a young man leaving the party to use the restroom. As he stands at the urinal, blood starts to drip on him from the ceiling. Finished, he finds a garbage can to stand on and pokes at a large wet spot in the ceiling. The ceiling collapses and a dead body falls out.

The NCIS team arrives at the crime scene. Tony engages Kate in small talk in an attempt to get her mind off of the terrorist. Kate insists she isn't thinking of him. Gibbs is "growling like a wounded bear" but that would be because he was wounded by the terrorist. Tony feels sorry for the terrorist because he wouldn't want Gibbs on his track. Kate says that they will never see that guy again. Tony responds maybe not, but Gibbs will.

Ducky is all ready at the scene. Gibbs says they're late because "someone knew a short cut." Ducky came on the GW Parkway, after stopping to visit Gerald at the hospital and he still beat them to the crime scene. Gibbs asks after Gerald and Ducky replies that he will be in rehab for months. Ducky then gets right in Gibbs' face and says "I want that terrorist on my table, Jethro."

Gibbs gives out assignments. Ducky fills them in on the details of the petty officer's (Chris Gordon's) demise. Gordon suffered multiple traumatic injuries before he fell from the ceiling, that fall only added to the injuries. Gordon was dressed after he was killed. Ducky found safety glass in Gordon's hair. There were indications that Gordon had a cell phone, but no cell phone was found.

The main question right now is how did the petty officer end up in the basement ceiling. The team moves out to the parking lot and finds a blood trail. The blood trail leads them to tire tracks. Someone accelerated and ran over Gordon. Gibbs wants to talk to the person who ran the nightclub but the local LEO on the scene interviewed him and let him go. Gibbs snaps at the guy about letting material witnesses leave the scene and the LEO says "he had to go."

Cut to a high school as the team walks through the courtyard and approaches a young man named Darin Spotnitz. They question him about the petty officer and Darin says he wasn't working the door. Darin brings out his PDA and Gibbs comments on it, actually using the correct term. Until Darin corrects him and gives him the complete details on the phone. Darin beams the info to Kate. Darin is not quite 17 and he is the person who runs the moving nightclub. He goes into a huge business spiel about how the professors say the way to succeed is to motivate your employees. He disagrees, saying he keeps costs down and controllable to turn a profit. Darin has put a name brand on his parties and people flock to them. His PDA rings and he goes to answer it, a remark from Gibbs stops him. Darin hands them his business card with his contact information and for the first time shows concern. Concern that they are going to tell his parents since he isn't old enough to even be in a nightclub. As they walk away, Kate calculates Darin's profit from one night.

Cut to the naval base. The team is there to search PO Gordon's quarters. Someone else has all ready searched them. Tony explains the naval housing situation to Kate as Gibbs starts to work. They continue chatting until Gibbs tells them to get to work. As they search they comment on what they're finding. Searching the DVDs reminds Tony that he needs to return Gigli. PO Gordon was in to reality shows, including Punk'd. Gibbs, of course, does not know what that is. When Kate and Tony explain it to him, he realizes it is like Candid Camera. Kate and Tony don't know what that is. Then Gibbs notices that the stereo is on, but you cannot hear it. The speakers aren't connected. They find $40,000 hidden in the speakers; all $100 bills, non-sequential serial numbers.

The scene shifts to PO Gordon's work station, the supply depot. Gibbs interviews his section chief as forklifts zoom around them. The section chief says Gordon was a good worker, although a bit of a practical joker. He also tells them about Gordon's four friends. Gibbs informs him of the $40,000. The chief says he doesn't believe it was drugs nor gambling. The PO wasn't high enough up in rank to influence contracts so no kick backs either. Gibbs tries to intimidate the chief by saying someone would have to be his level to get kick backs. The chief agrees.

Back in autopsy, Ducky has unanswered questions. PO Gordon's injuries are consistent with being hit by a car, but he had baby powder on his hands. There is also latex on the safety glass that Ducky removed from Gordon's scalp. It's as if PO Gordon was wearing something made of rubber over his head when he was hit.

In Abby's lab Abby confirms that it was rubber on the shards of glass. Gibbs asks if it could have been a hat. Abby says maybe if you grew up in Dorkville. Gibbs replies that he grew up just west of there. Abby goes on to describe what possible reasons that PO Gordon could have had latex on his head, starting with bondage/S&M gear. Abby then starts to describe what one of her dates wanted her to do at which point Gibbs stops her. Abby says it is no different than a Packer fan and Gibbs disagrees.

They move on to the tire tracks. Abby gives Gibbs a list of the cars that use that particular tire. All the blood at the scene was the victim's, no drugs but he was legally drunk.

They talk about the baby power on the victim's hands. Abby says that guys have all sorts of rituals before they go out. One guy she knows does a full upper body workout just seconds before his date so he's all pumped when she arrives. Gibbs asks if Tony knows Abby knows that. Abby responds with her own question does Tony know that Gibbs knows?

Abby is going to do a computer simulation of the accident to see if the latex may have come from the car.

As a parting shot, Abby asks if Gibbs has any fetishes. He replies that he has three ex-wives and cannot afford any fetishes.

Back in the squadroom, Kate is trying to figure out what Tony's employment classification is. He declines to tell her so that she won't know how much money he makes. Telling her all about his dates is braggin; money is personal. Gibbs walks in and announces the time. Tony asks if they're quitting early. Gibbs' look tells him that they are going back to the naval base to interview Gordon's four buddies who are starting work soon. As Kate and Tony gear up, the camera swings around Gibbs' desk area and we see the facial recognition software running non-stop against the terrorist's picture.

Gibbs has the four buddies in the interrogation room, asking about how they choose that party, how they got there, etc. They all tell the same story, they went together in one car, one of the men's, and Gordon met a "babe" and left with her about midnight. One of the men drives a Taurus, which is on the list of cars for the tires. He is not the man who said he drove. He also says that he loaned his car to his brother and it is on the way to Phoenix.

Gibbs is suspicious because their stories are so similar. He doesn't like their description of the girl, all the same, yet generic. They know where Gordon is. What happened to that girl? They put out an APB on the missing Taurus and go to see the door keeper from the event.

The scene switches to Soul Cuts, Antoine Mann's salon. He owns the salon and moonlights as the bouncer for Darin Spotnitz. It's all part of Antoine's plan to retire by 50. Antoine remembers the five sailors. Claims that Gordon did not leave the club with a woman at any time. The owner of the Taurus left with the woman.

Back at the squad room, we zoom in on the facial recognition software still running non-stop. Gibbs feels they have missed something important in their investigation. Why are they all lying? To protect Wong (the owner of the car)? Or some other reason. Kate questions the facial recognition software. Gibbs ran it against every known terrorist, why is it still running? Gibbs is running it again.

Tony reviews the known facts of the case. Gibbs doesn't want to interview anyone again until they know how Gordon got the $40,000. He advises Kate and Tony to be like Woodward and Bernstein and "follow the money." Tony is wondering about the fact that the cash is all in $100 dollar bills. If it was drugs or gambling or theft, it wouldn't be all $100s. They decide the money had to come from a bank. Maybe blackmail or ransom? Blackmail seems likely but who would Gordon have been blackmailing?

Gibbs has gone down to Abby's lab to check on the accident recreation. Abby is extolling the virtues of her software. Gibbs brings her to a halt with a curt "Abby." Abby protests that Gibbs likes it when she talks tech, but she does move on to her findings. Abby has confirmed that Gordon was wearing the latex, it did not come from the car. Abby continues on with details of the parameters she has feed into the accident recreation program. The conversation goes off into a tangent about databases of databases. Gibbs tells Abby that she is spending too much time with Ducky. Again, Abby gets back on track. Abby is positive that the car that hit Gordon was a Taurus. Unless, of course, it was a Mercury Sable.

In the squad room Tony finds a pre-paid phone card in Gordon's wallet. If you have a cell phone, why do you have a pre-paid phone card? So that you can't trace his calls. But they have the card, so they can trace his calls. The number one number called belongs to Bartext Corporation, which was just awarded a big defense contract. The chief said Gordon wasn't high enough in rank to benefit from kickbacks, but perhaps the chief was taking them, Gordon found out and was blackmailing the chief.

Gibbs gets off the elevator asking about all Tauruses who have base parking permits. They are all accounted for except Wong's. So far the APB on Wong's car has turned up nothing. Gibbs asks about Mercury Sables. Tony didn't check on them but realizes it's the same car. The chief drives a Mercury Sable. Tony and Kate explain their blackmail theory to Gibbs. So they're off to the base to take a look at the chief's Sable.

At the base they discover the car is gone. The chief did not tell his crew where he was going, but if they really need him they call his cell phone. Gibbs calls Abby and asks her if she can trace the location of a cell phone. Abby says she can trace a cell phone's location to within 100 yards as long as it is a newer phone with GPS installed. They discuss the legality of this. Abby describes it as a charcoal grey area of the law. Gibbs gives her the number and Abby dials it. You hear the chief saying hello over and over as Abby determines his location and gives Gibbs the address. The address belongs to Bartex Corporation.

Gibbs and crew arrive at the address just as the chief is trying to leave. Gibbs blocks him in with the staff car. The chief at first declines to discuss why he is at Bartex but Gibbs tells him it is either here or in front of the Admiral. The chief asks to keep his answers confidential, Gibbs replies with a curt no. While this conversation is going on, Tony and Kate are examining the exterior of the car as closely as possible, looking for signs of a collision or recent repair work. According to the chief, he was offered a position at Bartex and is seriously considering taking it, but didn't want anyone to know about it until he had made his final decision. The chief pops the hood of his car. There is no damage to the car, the windshield is the original equipment. This is not the car that hit PO Gordon.

On the drive back Gibbs is driving so slow that other motorists are honking their horns and passing them by. Gibbs is doing 40 in a 65 mph zone, exceedingly unusual for him. Tony and Kate try to engage him in small talk but Gibbs isn't having any of it. "Not again" Gibbs mutters. "We are not going to lose again" this time said emphatically with a slap of the hand on the steering wheel. Gibbs tromps on the gas and does a highly illegal U-turn complete with squealing tires. "We are going back to that warehouse and we are staying until we nail whoever hit Petty Officer Gordon."

Gibbs is back, complete with a fish-tailing high-speed turn back into the parking lot of the crime scene. Gibbs gets out of the car and you can see the determination and purpose in his stance. He surveys the scene and the work gets started. Tony asks Kate if she has plans for tonight. Not really she replies. Good says Tony because the last time Gibbs was like this, Tony didn't get home for a week. Kate says the sad part is that that would actually be an improvement over her social life.

They all fan out and start searching for whatever clues there are that will tell them what actually happened in that parking lot.

Kate finds the first clue: some latex snagged on a hole in the chain link fence surrounding the parking lot. They bag and tag it. Tony asks Kate if she knows what that is. Kate replies yes she does, it's evidence.

Gibbs finds something on the ground in the parking lot on the other side of the chain link fence. Gibbs holds the edge of his knife to it and you can see writing reflected on the knife blade. Kate asks him to tell them what he is looking for, Gibbs replies they should have patience. Kate doesn't think Gibbs really knows what happened, but Tony does. Kate takes a picture of whatever is on the ground. Tony finds fresh cigarette butts. Two of the friends smoke; they can DNA off the butts. Tony finds marks on the ground from a tripod and Gibbs finds the wrapper of a tape for a video camera. Kate asks Gibbs for information again and he responds by showing her the tape wrapper and saying they filmed it. Filmed what she asks, but Gibbs doesn't reply; he just forms a picture frame with his gloved hands and looks through it to see his car parked by the tire tracks in the parking lot.

Back in Ducky's autopsy suite, the four friends are lined up two on each side of the body drawer. Ducky pulls PO Gordon out of his drawer and his friends can see the crude stitching of the "Y" incision for the autopsy. Ducky informs them that an autopsy is required in a murder investigation. One of the POs asks to be excused by Gibbs steps up behind him and tells him that chance was lost three days ago.

Now all four of the friends are sitting in the interrogation room, stewing. Tony, Kate, and Gibbs are watching through the one-way mirror. Tony is taking bets on who will break first. Gibbs doesn't care which one it is, he knows that one of them will break. Gibbs inquires as to the status of his video tape; Abby is cleaning it up as they speak. They all file into the interrogation room.

Tony and Kate explain to the four POs why you never put suspects together in a room. But they don't care about that today. Gibbs displays the piece of latex in its evidence bag and says quietly we know what happened. Now it's just a question of time, how much time they'll all do at Leavenworth.

Carter breaks first (the one who asked to be excused from autopsy) saying it was all just a joke. Wong tells Carter to shut up and asks for a lawyer. Morgan wants to cooperate, Wong says they have nothing. Tony and Kate imply they have Wong's car and have found blood on it. Wong says there is no way they have his car. Gibbs tells him they don't need his car and shows them a video tape cassette. Kate and Tony roll in a VCR and monitor. Gibbs stands to put in the video tape reminding them that they had their chance to come clean in return for help on their sentencing. All of them, except Wong, start to volunteer information before Gibbs can play the tape.

They claim it was Gordon's idea, a practical joke he had been planning for months as pay back for when Wong set Gordon up with a transvestite. Wong still wants them to stop talking but the others say that they can't live with what's happened to Gordon. The girl was a call girl. She was hired to lure Wong out of the club into the parking lot for the joke. Footage of what happened at the club is played. Then we see the other friends setting up the joke. Gordon is getting into a costume while someone else sets up a video camera.

Next we see video of Wong and the call girl making out in his car and of the other men videotaping it. Bright lights flash distract Wong. Back to the making out. The others open up a cooler of dry ice.

Kate says she didn't think Wong would scare that easily. Wong insists he didn't know it was Gordon.

Back to the video and the bright lights are back along with an eerie sound and the steam from the dry ice. Now the call girl hears and sees it. Gordon is dressed in an ET costume and walking through the mist towards the car. The girl starts screaming and Wong starts to panic saying he cannot find his keys. Wong starts the car and floors it, running over Gordon.

The other three POs are crying and extremely remorseful for Gordon's death. Wong is dry-eyed and saying that it was just an accident. Gibbs inquires about the $40,000. They deny that they knew that Gordon had that kind of money. They say they are sorry they hid the body they knew it was wrong.

Gibbs asks Wong specifically if he didn't know about the money. Wong replies that the only thing he is guilty of is manslaughter, they saw the tape. This tape? says Gibbs, waving the cassette. This isn't your tape, but you're in it they tell him. Gibbs puts the tape in the player. It's a video surveillance tape from a bank. They watch Gordon cashing a check with Wong looking on.

The other three POs look at Wong with disbelief on their faces. Gordon inherited money and took his buddy along to the bank with him when he cashed the check. Wong still insists it was an accident, but they have a witness. Kate opens the door and the call girl joins them. She tells them that Wong knew it was a prank and Wong was giving her a thousand dollars to go along with it. Wong knew it was Gordon and that it was a prank.

Back up in the squad room, Tony turns off the light over his desk. He invites Kate to join him for Chinese food. Kate says sure and wants to ask Gibbs as well. Tony tells her Gibbs is busy doing the same thing he does every night. The camera pans over to Gibbs watching the facial recognition software running and running.

Goodwin (Defense Lawyer), Tim Kelleher (Agent Pacci), Roxana Zal (Mrs. Foley), Cody Estes (Kevin Curtin), Cristi Harris (Vicki Spain), Archie Drury (Rod Spain)
Production Code: 01018
Summary: The team is looking for an ex-SEAL who escaped from prison in search of revenge. He is determined to find the real murderer of his wife.

James D. Curtin, ex Navy SEAL, breaks into a couple's house to change his clothes after he escapes prison. The couple is left unharmed. Curtin was in Leavenworth for killing his wife and their cable repair man.

NCIS is called into find Curtin and apprehend him. In the squad room of NCIS headquarters Kate tells Tony she sleeps with a gun under her pillow in case of intruders. Gibbs thinks this is a good idea. Gibbs decides to find out what direction the fugitive is headed in.

Kate and Gibbs interview the parents of Curtin's dead wife, and his son Kevin. Kate is left at the house to protect them in case Curtin shows up as they suspect he might show up to see his son.

Tony interviews Lt. Commander Faith Coleman the JAG lawyer who helped convict Curtin. Tony learns that Curtin called the police and was found with blood on his hands and on the murder weapon.

Gibbs interviews Commander William Foley, Curtin's boss, and part of the group of SEALs that showed up at Curtin's trial to support him. Abby explains that Curtin made a finger print of the guard's using tooth paste, and he used this finger print to escape the prison.

Curtin shows up where his son is and ties up Kate and is now in possession of Kate's service weapon.. Agent McGee is outside watching the house, but doesn't see anything. McGee eventually unties Kate but by the time he does this Curtin is on the run. Kate lies and says that the police had found Curtin's car in order for Curtin to find a new escape plan. He hijacks someone and is shot at and injured by Kate.

We learn about Gibbs obsession with Ari through his conversation with Kevin. Meanwhile Tony and McGee look for evidence and Tony does the Tommy Lee speech from the movie The Fugitive.

Gibbs realizes Curtin is after the person who really killed his wife and the cable guy. He had come across information in prison that led him to the guilty party. The two JAG lawyers who tried the case were called in to go through the evidence that Curtin had access to in prison. They find a call log that wasn't available at trial and they find a connection between Curtin's dead wife and the Foley's. Kate and Tony interview Commander Foley's wife and Gibbs interviews Foley himself.

McGee interrupts Gibbs interrogation of Foley to tell him the killer had given her herpes and Foley's medical charts show that he did not have an affair with Curtin's wife after all. In the squad room Tony reviews the call log and discovers that the call from Foley's number to the dead woman was made when he was away. Tony figures out the killer and jealous lover of Curtin's wife is Mrs. Foley and not Commander Foley.

NCIS arrests Mrs. Foley and Kate acts as a decoy to draw in Curtin, so they can bring him in. Kate gets her service weapon back from Curtin. Curtin will eventually be exonerated for the murders Mrs. Foley committed; whether or not he has to face charges for his escape, is left open ended.

Summary: An NCIS agent has been murdered while investigating a case and the team's job is to find out what happened.

Evening guards complain about false fire alarms in a building being renovated. They call the elevator to ride up and turn off the alarm. The opening door reveals a man's body, disemboweled.

Tony answers Kate's phone, and Kate catches him. Kate makes a date (with someone called Dwayne, to Tony's derision), but does not get out in time. Gibbs comes in to say a fellow agent, Chris Pacci, has been found murdered. Chris sat behind Kate. The three of them flash back to Chris trying to speak to Gibbs about a cold case.

The team finds out the CCTV does not work yet and the janitor did not see anyone come in. At the building, the team discovers Pacci was shot on the 6th floor, staggered along the hall to the elevator, and rode down. He was disembowelled in the elevator, when he was already near death. Ducky is upset to be doing an autopsy on someone he knows. We get a flashback reconstruction.

When they look at Chris' desk, they find his weapon (NCIS operatives are supposed to be armed at all times). So this suggests he had left the weapon behind when tailing someone, not wanting an alarm to be set off. Gibbs tells Kate and Tony to go to Pacci's flat that evening, so Kate has to cancel her date.

Kate and Tony arrive to search Pacci's apartment. The phone rings. Shock! It is McGee calling from Norfolk. Pacci had asked him to find civilian files on a 3-year-old car accident. Tony orders him to DC by 0700 next morning.

The bullet in Pacci is a Smith and Wesson .356. Abby tells this to Gibbs but she has no more info about what Pacci was working on. Gibbs and Ducky are in Autopsy. X-rays showed a "foreign object" that Pacci had apparently swallowed. They speculate that the killer had slashed Pacci looking for it, but didn't have enough time to find it, and was scared off by the alarm. The object, identified by the young autopsy tech, is a memory card, probably from a digital camera.

The case McGee brought concerns the death of a Lieutenant Commander Voss in a car accident. Voss's former commanding officer had spoken with Pacci recently. Voss had been under investigation for procurement fraud; about $12 million total; no money has been recovered, before or after Voss's death. Gibbs reckons Pacci swallowed the memory card because he knew Ducky would be doing the post-mortem. Later Pacci's camera, minus card, is found in the stairwell. Kate suggests Ducky looks at Voss' autopsy report 3 years on. Gibbs and Kate go to interview Voss' commanding Captain to ask about the case. The Captain explains Voss got away with the fraud for four years. Pacci had just wanted to know who Voss had dated.

Pictures on the memory card show neighborhood scenes and a striking woman. McGee uses clues in the pictures to pin down the address - only one street with the right kind of street furniture also has the right kind of mailbox with a 3 digit number and Tony then finds the woman's name (Amanda Reed) and credit report off the address. First impressions are that she is a solid citizen. Gibbs identifies the window the pictures were taken from, and they rent the apartment for a stakeout. This is the great moment when Gibbs and Tony are mistaken for a gay couple. The building manager reports seeing an identical badge - it must have been Pacci.

Back at the office, Tony discovers that the townhouse where Amanda Reed lives, and bought with cash, was previously in the Voss family for 3 generations. But Kate has no apparent driver's licence or automobile. It is established this will be McGee's first stakeout.

Alternating among office, lab, stakeout, and witness interviews. The lady takes prescription drugs, and has expensive tastes (Prada bag). Pacci's computer shows he had checked out a Bangkok visitors' website. Per the real estate agent, Pacci had contacted her, asking to be notified if the Voss townhouse went up for sale. She forgot till afterwards, but Pacci seemed happy to hear Reed had bought it. Per a check of their records, Reed had lived near where Voss was stationed, for some years. After some stakeout banter (and comparing themselves to the film Stakeout), they comb her garbage, finding nothing helpful on the first check - there are a lot of beauty products, leading to speculation that Reed is older than she looks. Later, the garbage goes to Abby to check for fingerprints.

After a sharp phone conversation with the historical society about painting her exterior woodwork, Reed comes out to work on her flowers. Tony slips out to talk with her in person, much to the others' disgust. Tony says to Reed his name is 'Stringfellow.'

Gibbs gets the tissue samples from the Voss accident case. He had been identified by a DNA match. Ducky knows the medical examiner to be competent, but Gibbs wants Abby to retest the DNA. She can tell quickly that the tissue samples are not from Voss, as the blood types do not match. So Voss is alive....."with all those millions".....

Gibbs and Kate are driving to check on the bad DNA match. The tech who certified the match, Joshua Lurie, is dead, 2 years ago in a car crash. Later, Kate finds out Lurie was Voss's high school classmate. So Voss has likely killed at least 2, the person wrongly identified as Voss, and Lurie. They realize Voss was watching Pacci watching Reed.

At the stakeout, McGee and DiNozzo see a package being delivered. Tony slips out again to see the return address. He's disconcerted to see it is anti-aging cream. Then Amanda Reed opens her door and catches him. Tony flirts his way inside; they make a date for a nearby restaurant. Gibbs rings up McGee to be told that DiNozzo is in with Reed and then manages to warn DiNozzo that he is bait. McGee follows to the restaurant, from the stakeout apartment.

As the field team is leaving for the restaurant, Abby rushes in with a shocker. All the fingerprints from the garbage are from one person, Amanda Reed - AND Lt Commander Voss!! "She is a he...."

Awaiting their food, Tony and Amanda are flirting. Tony's cell rings, and it's Gibbs. Tony says he has to take it, but Reed goes into a passionate appetizer clinch with him instead. Amanda excuses herself to the ladies' (!) room. Tony calls Gibbs back and gets the unwelcome news. Tony confronts Amanda while McGee lurks. Amanda attacks, Tony retaliates, and is pulled off by 2 chivalrous men from the bar. There is a melee, a fine bar brawl, with McGee identifying them a Federal agents, and trying unsuccessfully to get someone to catch him-her.

Gibbs and Kate arrive just in time. Faced with Gibbs' gun at point-blank range, Amanda/Voss makes a desperate try to bring up her gun. She is shot, presumably killed. Kate waves her NCIS badge so the customers release Tony and McGee.

Back in the office, Gibbs is going through Chris' effects before they are boxed up. The others are discussing Voss/ Amanda, and transgender films like The Crying Game and Victor/Victoria. Voss / Amanda had not yet his operation. Finally Kate comes up to Tony and he, knowing she is going to tease him says: "Go on then, I can take it." So Kate says: 'What was it like, tonguing a guy?' And Tony says: 'Forget it, I can't take it.'

Summary: A marine goes missing after a date with a reporter. During the investigation, the team discovers that three former members of his unit are dead and suspect the unit commander to be a serial killer.

A couple are sitting in a bar discussing his missing buddies. The Marine is concerned that the woman will also be involved. She reminds him that her husband finding out could also be dangerous. The waitress brings a drink from an admirer and the Marine drinks it and then leaves the woman telling her he'll call.

Outside the bar the Marine starts to light a cigarette, gets dizzy, says "I should have told. . ." and collapses. He awakens in an underground area, chained to the wall, his only companion a skeleton.

Open on the squad room with Kate walking up to Tony's desk. Banter ensues regarding Tony's typing, fashion sense, and spying on Kate. Turns out he's playing a video game. You see Gibbs approaching as Kate tries to warn Tony. Kate then tries to cover by saying she was giving Tony advice on getting his ears pierced. Gibbs remarks that if Tony wants to look like a gay pirate, that's Tony's call.

Gibbs then informs them that a Marine gunnery sergeant is missing. They are involved because this gunny knows how to arm small yield nuclear weapons. They gear up and follow Gibbs to the elevator. As the elevator doors shut, Gibbs lets Tony know that he knows all about the computer game.

The Marine is Bill Atlas and they track his pick-up truck to the bar. Tony, of course, hits on the waitress. The waitress identifies the Marine from the picture. Kate stays to interview her while Gibbs and Tony go out to the parking lot to look at the pick-up truck.

The Marine was 1 year away from a 20-year pension, so they don't believe he just walked away. Tony spouts statistics about missing people to which Gibbs replies he's not big on statistics.

Whereupon Tony inserts his foot into his mouth by remarking on statistics on failed marriages and Gibbs' marital track record. One of Gibbs' hard looks and they are back at work.

Soon, however, Tony is taking pictures of the waitress instead of the crime scene. Gibbs finds Atlas' lighter in the parking lot; Tony the unlit cigarette.

Cut to Atlas. He hears footsteps approaching. Someone is watching him through a cut-out in the door. Atlas tries to reason with the observer, then begs for food, then shouts "say something" and starts frantically trying to get out of his chains.

Cut back to the bar parking lot. Kate has a sketch of the woman who was with Atlas the other night. Tony is back flirting with the waitress. Gibbs is losing patience with Tony. Tony comes over to report that he got her name. Gibbs could care less until Tony reveals that he got the waitress to remember that the woman paid with a credit card and he's got the woman's name, Carol Powers, and her occupation, journalist. Tony gets a grudging "Good job" from Gibbs.

They pull Carol in for a chat. Kate is handling it in the squad room. Carol denies knowing Atlas and denies the affair. Things immediately turn hard ball and Carol is in the interrogation room facing Gibbs. Carol denies that her husband knew she was having an affair. She says that Atlas contacted her 3 weeks ago, telling her that several of his friends had gone missing and he might be next. Atlas was worried that someone in his unit was killing them.

Kate and Tony are observing the interrogation. Kate believes her, Tony thinks Atlas was just lying to get Carol in bed. Tony tells Kate all men lie, it's expected of them. Kate reminds Tony that not all men are like him, to which Tony responds "You honestly still believe you look 25?" Kate's rueful answer: "not anymore."

Gibbs walks Carol to the elevator, letting her know that her husband will find out about the affair. Carol semi-threatens to publish her story but Gibbs is very clear that he doesn't care. Kate asks why Gibbs was so hard on her, it's because Carol reminds Gibbs of his ex-wife. Which one? All of them.

They discuss the husband's alibi which is valid and then they talk about Atlas' story about men missing from his unit. They are concerned that terrorists, at which they all glance at Gibbs' computer which is running face recognition software non-stop on the terrorist from Bete Noire, are taking out EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) personnel.

They also discover that Atlas has a new CO, one with whom he had a physical altercation several years ago. Then they are interrupted by a phone call from Abby.

Cut to Atlas. The watcher is back. Atlas again demands to know who it is, what they want, what organization are they with. Silence. And then a swarm of bees is released into the cell with Atlas.

Cut to Abby's lab. Abby was bored so she ran every single test she could think of on the cigarette. How bored was Abby? She's building a model of the battle of Gallipoli. They digress to look at her model until Gibbs' angry looks get them back on track.

Abby found traces of brawn (spelling?) which is a mixture of speed and cocaine and can be bought over the counter in Japan and Okinawa. Atlas was stationed in Okinawa. Gibbs wants to go to Quantico. Tony starts to talk about rush hour traffic but is silenced by Gibbs' look. Kate and Tony leave to get the car.

Gibbs says he has something more constructive for Abby to do with her time. He also tells Abby that Gallipoli was an amphibious operation, which piques her interest. Fortunately her diorama is on styrofoam so it will float. We do not hear what Gibbs wants Abby to look at. Instead we Cut to rush hour traffic. Tony jabbars about rush hour and Gibbs threatens him. Tony slurps his drink, which Gibbs takes away and throws out of the car. Tony accuses Gibbs of littering, Gibbs doesn't care. Kate is on the phone and learns that Atlas' CO, Major Sacco, is not at Quantico but out in the field disarming a bomb.

Cut to a pickup truck in the middle of nowhere with two people in a haz-mat type suits trying to disarm a bomb located in the bed of the pickup truck. The men fail in their attempts to disarm the bomb and it goes boom. They are being lectured by Sacco when Gibbs arrives.

Sacco is not concerned about Atlas' disappearance. He feels that Atlas is a "marginal" Marine, has alcohol problems, and that they are better off without him. Sacco acknowledges their problems in the past but does not clarify them. Gibbs and team believe that Sacco is hiding something. As they are walking away, Gibbs starts to say "You two might want to cover your..."

and then a big explosion occurs. Kate and Tony drop to the ground, Gibbs finishes "ears" and continues walking.

Gibbs is taking a more scenic route back to avoid traffic. It's Tony's turn in the back seat and he is feeling car sick. Abby calls, Kate answers. Abby has investigated the Atlas/Sacco incident and discovered that three other Marines from their old unit have gone missing. All three that are now missing, carried as deserters, served with Atlas under Sacco in the Philippines.

Cut to Atlas. There are still some bees buzzing around. Atlas is trying to kill them, but he is in a bad way.

Cut to the squad room where they're looking at the three missing Marines they just found out about. They have all disappeared without a trace, spread over several years. Gibbs isn't ready to bring in Sacco, he wants more information on what went on in the Philippines in 1992. Gibbs makes assignments and leaves. Tony reminisces about the good old days when Gibbs confided in them. Kate says they didn't exist. Tony is glad that he isn't the only one who doesn't remember them.

Cut to Gibbs in MTAC viewing the clip of the terrorist over and over again with a flashback to the shoot out where Gibbs shoots the terrorist and the terrorist shoots him. Gibbs rubs his chest where the terrorist shot him.

Cut to Abby's lab. Kate is coming in to help Abby research the 1992 EOD team and discovers that Abby is now making boats for her Gallipoli diorama. Getting back to the case, Sacco's EOD unit in 1992 was clearing out the ammunition storage dumps because they were closing the base. Kate asks how big his unit was; Abby replies that they could ask him but in her experience men lie about those things. Then she replies six men.

Abby has identified the sixth man. He got a bad conduct discharge for assaulting his CO in 1999. Abby has been trying to find him, without luck. As she is speaking to Kate, Abby is getting ready to leave. Abby is going to a party. Kate doesn't understand how Abby gets to leave; Abby replies that she just asked Gibbs. Abby tells Kate to call if she needs help, but tells her to just disregard any background noises she will hear.

Cut to the squad room. Tony is full back in his chair, asleep and snoring. Gibbs walks in and hovers over him, takes a piece of the pizza from Tony's desk, and hollers at Tony with a mouthful of pizza. Tony responds that he cannot hear anything since the explosion yesterday. Gibbs tells him to find Kate and be prepared to brief him.

Tony springs into action, shouting for Kate. No response. Tony screams and Kate pops up from the floor behind her desk, very disheveled. Tony keeps a toothbrush, etc. in his desk drawer and begins to clean up. Kate just stands there looking unhappy.

Cut to Atlas. We hear the door slam. Atlas wakes up and asks who is there in a very quavering voice. Atlas sees a cross on the floor and picks it up. Atlas realizes who has captured him and starts screaming that he didn't know, that they have to believe him, he didn't know.

Cut to the squad room. Gibbs is still eating the cold pizza. Kate and Tony have cleaned up. Kate declines the offer of pizza. They're still trying to track down the sixth man, he hasn't been heard from since 2002. Sacco was stationed in the vicinity of all the Marines who've gone UA. All they really have is a vague recollection from another Marine that the fight was over a woman.

Tony asks to shadow Sacco to see if he can find out something. Gibbs agrees. Tony tries to convince him to let him go, Kate tells him that Gibbs already agreed. Tony blames the explosion for his faulty hearing. Kate wants to go along, Gibbs says no. Gibbs warns Tony to call in every hour. If he misses a check-in, don't come back. (All of Gibbs' lines are delivered with a mouthful of pizza.) Kate tells Tony to be careful; she doesn't want to be stuck working with cranky Gibbs herself. Tony starts to say he's not so bad as Gibbs returns to the room and hollers at Tony for still being there.

Cut to Abby's lab. Abby has tracked down the sixth man, Cohen. They found him chained to a wall in a sewer system, dead. Abby is also worried about Tony. Abby has a weird feeling; Gibbs is not concerned, tells her that Tony can take care of himself, that Tony does his best work without an audience. Abby asks Kate if she is concerned about Tony, Kate says she thinks Abby is suffering the aftereffects of her party. All Abby drank was Red Bull. How many? asks Kate. Eighteen.

Cut to Tony in a car, talking to Gibbs on the phone. Tony is tailing Sacco. Gibbs tells Tony about finding Cohen dead. Tony follows Sacco to the bar. Gibbs is getting a search warrant for Sacco's house. Gibbs is concerned for Tony, he tells him to watch his six. Tony's response: Always.

Cut to the interior of the bar. Tony asks for a sarsaparilla, bartender gives him a look, settles for a ginger ale. The waitress appears and chats up Tony.

Cut to Abby's lab. Kate and Gibbs are going through all the evidence from Cohen's crime scene. They find a cross which is odd since Cohen was Jewish. Sacco is Baptist.

Cut to the bar. Tony tries to hide from Sacco by hitting on an attractive woman, who has a very large boyfriend. Tony fast talks his way out of that one and goes looking for Sacco who has left the bar. Tony reports in to Gibbs and as he's talking on the phone he starts to get dizzy. Tony tells Gibbs he thinks he screws up as he falls to the ground, drops the cell phone and his car keys. He manages to pull his weapon before he passes out. Someone walks up and takes the gun from his hand.

Cut to Atlas watching Tony wake up. Welcome to hell.

Cut to the bar parking lot. They find Tony's cell phone. Kate and Gibbs do not voice their concern, but it is real. They do not know where Sacco is. And know Gibbs needs to report in to the Director that he has lost an agent.

Cut to Atlas. Tony is not chained and is looking for a way out. Atlas is amazed that it has only been a week. He is in very bad shape. Tony has a plan, it's just a little fuzzy. He tells Atlas to think positive. Atlas does. He's positive he's screwed. And he laughs. His sense of humor is still there. Tony says Rule Number 9. Atlas has no idea what he's talking about. Tony finds out that Gibbs' Rules are not from the Marine Corps. Rule Nine is always carry a knife. Tony uses it to unscrew the chain from the wall.

Cut to the squad room. Kate is profiling the killer. Gibbs realizes that Tony saw something, but Tony probably didn't realize how important it was. McGee comes running in, Gibbs tells him he's late. Kate tells McGee to use Tony's desk, Tony has other things on his mind than his desk right now.

Cut to Atlas. Tony has the chain loose. Atlas is looking at the cross. He wants to confess. Atlas tells Tony that he deserves this punishment, that they killed four girls and that Sacco was in love with one of them.

Cut to Ducky in autopsy. Ducky has reviewed the autopsy report for Cohen. Ducky comments on the honey bee stings but also says that's not what killed him. Cohen starved to death and it took weeks, possibly months. Gibbs is relieved because it means Atlas and Tony are probably still alive. Ducky tells Gibbs he'll find them. Gibbs asks if that's a question or a statement. Ducky says a little bit of both.

Cut to Atlas. Tony is using the chain and his knife to try and open the door, throwing the knife out the cut-out in the door to try and hook the handle. Atlas tells the story of the girls. How they tried to ship them home in a packing container but they didn't end up on the ship with the girls. The girls starved to death. The girl Sacco loved was one of these girls; she left Sacco for Atlas. Atlas figures that's why Sacco saved him for last.

Cut to exterior. A vehicle pulls up and Sacco gets out, complete with sidearm. Sacco enters the building and begins going down into the basement.

Cut to Abby's lab. Abby and McGee are working side-by-side, sharing the same Caf-Pow. They've found a match with a fingerprint from the cross found with Cohen. It matches a print on Carol Powers' credit card receipt from the bar. Kate assumes it is Carol Powers. McGee recommends more tests but is interrupted by a phone call. They've found Sacco's vehicle. Gibbs wants an arrest warrant for Carol Powers. McGee calls Gibbs Boss and corrects it to Agent Gibbs. Abby tells Kate to bring him back.

Cut to Tony. He's still trying to open the door. Atlas says he'll never make it. Tony says Atlas must not be a Marine then. The Marines he knows, they don't quit.

Cut to exterior. Gibbs and Kate arrive on scene. The LEO recommends waiting for the canine unit as they are down in the sewer system. Gibbs asks about the second car there, it's a stolen vehicle. Gibbs tells the LEO that he doesn't get lost and goes in. Sacco is also down in the sewer system. He finds the empty cell and begins yelling for Gunny. Now you see Tony helping Atlas as they run through the sewers. Sacco continues to yell for Gunny as Tony hauls Atlas around.

Gibbs and Kate hear Sacco screaming. Kate takes it as a sign that Tony is still alive. Who else pisses people off like that?

Atlas has to rest. Tony gives him 10 seconds to rest while Tony reconnoiters. Tony realizes they're going in circles and makes a mark on the wall. Atlas begs Tony to leave him when Tony hears Gibbs whisper his name. Gibbs and Kate are on the other side of the wall; they talk through a grate. Tony has to keep moving because Sacco is right behind them. Tony takes off carrying Atlas. Sacco is still chasing them. Tony finds a room filled with sunlight. There is a window blocked by bars. Tony remarks that his father was right, he is going to end up in the gutter.

Sacco comes around the corner and finds Tony and Atlas in the room. He is surprised to see Tony and asks why Tony didn't stop. Tony tells him to put down his weapon first. Sacco is surprised that Tony thinks he will shoot him. Sacco says that he followed her there. That he didn't want to believe it but she was completely insane and they had to get Atlas out before she came.

Tony asks "Who?" just as Sacco is shot twice in the back. Sacco collapses. The waitress comes into view and answers "That would be me."

The waitress completes the story of the botched shipping container. Sacco found her alive. The other girls had died. She has been killing the other men.

Gibbs and Kate have reached the opening to the room. They are listening to the waitress ramble on. Kate has orders to take her out if Kate thinks she's going to shoot anyone else.

She was the youngest of the four girls. The others gave her their food so she could live. She ended up living in the container with their corpses. She's been hunting down and killing those responsible, even though it has taken her eight years.

Tony tells her they can't let her do this. "We?" she asks as Kate comes around the corner and commands her to "Drop it!" The waitress is startled and drops her weapon which discharges. Tony catches her and puts her in a hold as he answers "My friends." Kate has her weapon trained on the waitress.

Cut to the elevator at NCIS. Gibbs, Tony, and Kate are in the elevator. Tony has not changed or cleaned up since coming out of the sewers. Tony is badgering Gibbs to get him to admit that Gibbs was worried about Tony, that he cared about Tony. The elevator opens and Gibbs strides out. Tony chases after him, continuing to question him. Gibbs stops and turns and looks at Tony. "Tony, as far as I'm concerned, you're irreplaceable." Gibbs has taken Tony's face in his hands and he gives him a light, affectionate slap on the jaw. Gibbs turns and walks away with Tony following telling him how he knew it all along, that Gibbs really did care for him.

They come around the corner and Gibbs says "Forget about it McGee. He's still alive." McGee looks up with that deer-caught-in-the-headlights look. He's sitting and working at Tony's desk. McGee's look turns into a smile as Tony gets a look of disbelief on his face. They all look over at Gibbs behind his desk. Gibbs has that self-amused smile on his face.

Summary:	When a body of a murdered marine is found in the forest, the investigation leads to the local militia and a weapon deal gone wrong.

A bunch of skateboarders find a body of a marine in the forest. When NCIS arrives at the scene, they discover that S.Sgt Grimm, an armorer who was on the boxing team, was killed with a missile. Kate meets Grimm's teammates in the gym, including Corporal McClain, who casually asks what happened and says she barely knew Grimm since they trained in the same gym.

Abby finds a serial number on the weapon that killed Grimm and traces it to the Armory where Grimm's had been stationed. Kate and Tony go to Grimm's apartment and discover his computer's entire hard drive had been reformatted.

Abby is able to recover the erased data and finds the last file Grimm viewed – a picture of weapons on the floor of Grimm's apartment. Gibbs was also pulling out the pictures of the weapons on the Internet.

The team discovers Grimm had placed seven phone calls to a pawn shop the day he died. DiNozzo goes undercover at the pawn shop where the daughter of the imprisoned store owner is running the business now and is asks Tony to sell weapons to her. When they pull the guns on each other, she turns out to be an ATF Agent, Melinda Stone. Melinda informs Tony that ATF is running the operation. She talked to Grimm on the phone without knowing who he was and set up the meeting time but he never showed up.

Kate goes back to the gym and confronts McClain, who was transporting weapons with Grimm the day he died. McClain said she just signed out on the shipment that had the missing missile, Grimm dropped her off right after they left the base and she went to see her boyfriend, who was shipping off to Iraq. Later, Kate goes to Grimm's unit and talks to S.Sgt. Rafael who says everything is always according to the procedure including Grimm signing in the weapons three days earlier.

Gibbs tells Melinda to call the buyer and set up the meeting where he would be going undercover.

Kate is now interrogating Rafael, who failed to mention that he attended the Armory School with Grimm and they kept in touch. After he is shown a picture of Grimm's body, Rafael admits that Grimm talked him into signing out the weapons as a one-time deal that would be good for the three people involved. Corporal McClain's alibi doesn't check out after her picture is shown to the hotel clerk and her boyfriend says that they broke up a month ago.

Melinda and Gibbs meet with the buyers – the local militia, who take them along to test the weapons and dispose the tracking device that was in Gibbs' watch on the way. When militia starts checking out the weapons, the first one is fine, but the other models are not in working condition. When Gibbs offers to lower the price he gets shot by the militia's leader. The militia leader makes Melinda call her supplier for more weapons. The supplier turns out to be McClain and when she goes to the storage area she is arrested by Kate and Tony.

When the militia leaders receives a call, he helps Gibbs up and it is revealed that it was an undercover operation with ATF really watching Melinda Stone since many things looked wrong during her last operation. It's also revealed that Grimm was killed during an argument.

Summary: Gibbs and his team investigate the death of a SEAL that occurred during a training exercise. As the investigation progresses, they come to suspect that the death was a murder rather than an accident.

Lt. Johnson falls to his death during a training exercise when his D-Link breaks, as he is rappelling down a cliff. Since his team was training for a secret mission, most of the information is classified. Abby finds someone's partial fingerprints on the D-Link and also discovers that the faulty D-Link (see image at bottom in photos section for an idea of what they are referring to) was handmade from an aluminum which is weaker than the factory manufactured ones that are made from steel. She assumes that someone substituted Lt. Johnson's link in order to kill him.

NCIS now has 38 hours to find out what happened exactly or the mission would be cancelled. All special team members had no contact with the outside world except Petty Officer Vengal who called his pregnant wife. He broke security another time two weeks prior and was written up for the unauthorized absence. Vengal says he had to take his wife to the doctor. Searching Johnson's locker, they find evidence of 2 calls from his own cell phone, also during the no-contact period. Abby finds a match on the D-Link in the criminal database – it's Mrs. Johnson's.

Johnson's widow says the criminal record is for a car theft when she was 16 and it was her boyfriend who stole the car. As for the fingerprint, she was just picking up the stuff her husband was leaving around. Tony asks if her husband was sleeping in the den and she says they were having problems. NCIS confiscates their laptop. From Johnson's notes, they find out that Vengal lied as he took his wife to a doctor on a different day and during a check of his record, discover he was not recommended for a promotion.

When Kate checks Johnson's phone records, she finds out he called Father Clannon, his best friend, however, Father Clannon can't talk to NCIS about things said during confession, or otherwise in confidence with a religious advisor. In the evidence room, the cell phone is vibrating as it receives a text message from an e-mail account asking Lt. Johnson why he wasn't there. Abby and McGee start hacking the servers while talking about their relationship.

PO Vengal is brought in to be interrogated. It's revealed that he was late to the squad meeting and was written up but he lied about taking his wife to a doctor because he went to an off-base doctor himself for an inner ear infection so he wouldn't be taken off the mission. He had no reason to kill Johnson as it would get the mission cancelled and Vengal put everything on the line to go on that mission.

Now the team has to start from scratch. Kate wants to know how rappelling works so she would have a better understanding of the case. When she tries it out, she realizes that the faulty D-Link was lighter than the regular one and such an experienced climber as Lt. Johnson would've noticed the difference.

With less than an hour left for the mission to start, NCIS finds equipment in Lt. Johnson's garage where the D-Link was made and Abby finds love letters on Johnson's secret e-mail account. Mrs. Johnson says she suspected something a couple of years ago, and about two weeks ago, followed her husband when he told her he was going hunting.

She tracked him to Baltimore where he spent two days in the hotel and when he came outside, she saw him hug a man. She didn't tell this to NCIS because she didn't want to embarrass Lt. Johnson and hoped his death had no connection to it and now she blames herself for confronting her husband. Gibbs tells the CIA that Lt. Johnson's death was a suicide.

Summary:	The terrorist from "Bête Noire" returns with a plan to attack the President. Gibbs and his team must follow the clues to reveal his identity and find Kate, who was kidnapped by the terrorist.

Gibbs spends a night in the office and sees a dream in which Kate is dead, in a body bag shot in the head. When he wakes up, he sees McGee and Abby who tell them that McGee wrote a program that can determine a person's age from the photograph and the program can speed up the search for the terrorist that Gibbs is determined to find. Gibbs then asks McGee if he stayed at Abby's place. "You sleep in the coffin?" He then leaves McGee, who has a shocked look on his face. "A coffin? You said it was a box sofa bed. That's why you wouldn't turn the lights on. I can't believe I slept in a coffin." Abby smiles, "Not just SLEPT."

Tony is out running, and is out-run by a striking woman in much better physical condition than he is, who says she is Swedish. Gibbs meets Kate in the coffee shop and asks her to profile that terrorist. Kate says he is not a fanatic and he is not in it for the money but for the risk. Gibbs can't understand why the terrorist didn't kill him when he had a chance.

The terrorist is in Washington and he gets a missile launcher. Together with his accomplices, he plans to use the training missiles to attack the Marine Helicopters when the President flies to Camp David with the Prime Minister of Israel, who is visiting. The plan is to provoke an emergency evacuation and then attack the president when the helicopters leave. The only problem is that the terrorists don't know which helicopter is Marine One.

When Ducky, Kate and Tony are eating lunch outside, Tony sees the Swedish girl he met in the morning and runs up to her. When Kate is about to cross the street, she sees the terrorist on the motorcycle and gets into someone's car to follow him, only to be kidnapped by the terrorists.

Back in the office, Ducky suddenly realizes that the terrorist knew anatomy and must've gone to medical school in Britain.

The terrorist allows Kate to call Gibbs only if she tells Gibbs that she got food poisoning and went home sick, and if Kate refuses to tell Gibbs that, Marta, the Swedish girl will kill DiNozzo when she meets him later. Meanwhile, McGee finds a match and the terrorist's name is revealed – Dr. Ari Haswari. His father is Israeli and mother is Arab.

Ari wants Kate to tell him which helicopter is Marine One. Kate tells him she doesn't know and Ari says he believes her. Marta becomes very angry and pulls the gun on Kate. Ari takes the gun away from her and when she tries to call the terrorists, he shoots Marta and asks Kate to call her friends at the Secret Service. Ari reveals that he is an Israeli and in Mossad.

The terrorists are arrested and on the news it is presented as a drug dealer arrest. Ari is not detained, as he is deep undercover. His dad was in Mossad and Ari was a sleeper agent all his life. The Directors want Gibbs to forget about Ari. Gibbs agrees on one condition – meeting with Ari. They meet in the basement of the morgue where Marta is lying in the body bag. Ari will be going back to Middle East and report that Marta was the double agent. Gibbs shoots Ari in the shoulder before leaving and says it'll make Ari's escape more believable.

Summary: A wife and an 8-year-old blind daughter of a Navy Captain are kidnapped and the Captain is a hostage in his own office, communicating with kidnappers, who watch his every step via computer camera. NCIS team investigates the scheme where a large amount of money is involved.

A Navy Captain is taken hostage by his own computer in his office and his wife and 8 year old blind daughter have been kidnapped and the kidnapper wants $2 million before he will let them go. The Captain's Secretary comes to NCIS with the note he gave her and asks them to help. Kate and McGee go and look at the Captain's house and they find no signs of forced entry. Gibbs goes to the Captain's office as a Gunnery Sergeant pretending to give the Captain some paper work but also slips in a camera so that they can track what is happening. They still can't communicate with the Captain so Tony goes in as a Chinese takeaway delivery boy and slips him an electronic earwig which the Captain puts in his ear. They can now speak to him and Gibbs tells him what to do. The Captain bargains for his daughter and the kidnapper leaves her at a train station. Kate and Tony go to pick her up and once back at headquarters the team discover that she has extraordinary hearing. Abby and McGee are trying to hack into the Pentagon but because the air conditioning in the building is not working the computer overheats. They move down to Autopsy where they hack into the Pentagon again and see what the kidnapper is showing the Captain. The 8 year old daughter helps them track down where the kidnapper and her mother are and Gibbs, Kate and Tony go to find them. McGee is left to tell the Captain what to do but the Captain takes the earwig out and sends the money to where the kidnapper wants it. McGee then tells the kidnapper that the FBI are outside and to come out with his hands up. The kidnapper takes the wife and runs but is trapped between Gibbs and Kate and Tony. The wife is now safe and Abby and McGee are trying to track down the money. The family are reunited and then the money comes back to Washington D.C. The team go to arrest who ever is taking the money out and they find the Captain and it turns out that he set up the whole thing so that he and his family could get away with $2 million.

Summary: A marine helicopter is discovered in the middle of a crop circle in a rural area and the pilots are missing. Soon, NCIS discovers that only one of the pilots was on the flight, that there is a decade long feud going on in town, and that the missing pilot is out for revenge.

A man driving a farm tractor down a narrow dirt road stops suddenly when he sees a marine helicopter sitting in the middle of a pattern of crop circles in his cornfield.

Kate is appalled to find DiNozzo clipping his fingernails at his desk in the NCIS squadroom. McGee, sitting at his desk nearby, compares getting used to DiNozzo's behavior with the Stockholm Syndrome ? the need for a kidnap victim to cooperate with his captor in order to survive. Gibbs enters and orders DiNozzo to get the truck: the team is going to Smokey Corners, West Virginia to investigate the marine helicopter in the crop circle. vanished

When the NCIS team arrives, the marines are already investigating the scene. Marine Lt. Col. Curtis Teague introduces himself to Gibbs and makes no apology for contaminating the scene ? he has two missing marines to locate. Gibbs informs him NCIS will need to take elimination prints from all of his men, and Teague orders his men to stand down. There is no damage to the aircraft and it still has 60% of its fuel supply. The helicopter took off at 23:00 for a night proficiency flight and the flight controller lost the signal 10 minutes out. He was notified of the helicopter's location by the local sheriff just after sunrise. Gibbs orders DiNozzo to sketch and shoot, Kate to bag and tag evidence from the helicopter, and McGee to lay out a search grid of the field. A marine helicopter flies over and Teague tells Gibbs that they've just begun an air search for the missing marines. Teague is ignoring the fact that the helicopter is in the middle of a crop circle, for now, but wants to know Gibbs' thoughts. Gibbs does not believe the marines were abducted by aliens, but he won't ignore anything. Teague gives Gibbs his camera card containing overhead pictures of the site, and tells him that the pilot was Captain Todd Newell, and the co-pilot was Captain Patrick Barnett. The two young pilots share an apartment off-base.

Gibbs hands the photo card to McGee and tells him to send it to Abby. McGee hesitates, as Abby is obsessed with the paranormal - giving her pictures of a crop circle may be distracting. As McGee hurries off to follow orders, Gibbs and Teague agree that they will try to keep this matter from the media.

DiNozzo remarks to Kate that he should have been a pilot as helicopters are "chick magnets." Kate disagrees, telling him that she dreaded traveling on Marine One with the president. DiNozzo nonchalantly scratches his crotch, and Kate scolds him for his "locker room mentality." He is not affected and tells Kate she can scratch anything she wants to in front of him. vanished

Gibbs interviews the farmer, Logan Clay, who tells him that he didn't hear anything strange during the night. The local sheriff, Sheriff Thompson, tells Gibbs that this isn't the first crop circle in the area - a 1994 crop circle was investigated by the Air Force, but they never received any answers. Both men saw bright lights in the sky last night, just like back in 1994. When the sheriff tells Gibbs that he'll ask around about anything strange that may have been seen, Gibbs asks him if being sheriff is his full-time job. The sheriff responds that he also runs the local Grain and Feed Store.

Abby is thrilled to receive the pictures of the crop circle and tells McGee over the phone that it reminds her of Glastonbury in the 1980s. McGee tries to convince Abby that crop circles are hoaxes that he equates with tarot cards and telephone psychics. McGee insists that there is a logical explanation for the crop circles but Abby tells him that she needs pictures, specimens of the stalks down to the roots, and soil samples. In order to get his cooperation she offers him a look at her new tattoo and he can't resist. It's a pity that at this point McGee doesn't know the tattoo is on Abby's ankle!

Gibbs releases the helicopter to the marines and drives the truck back with McGee and all of his samples, leaving DiNozzo and Kate to check out the pilots' apartment. Gibbs wonders why there haven't been any gawkers to look at the crop circle ? this type of incident usually draws a crowd, but the only people there are the farmer and sheriff. As he turns to leave, Teague stops Gibbs to report that his overhead search has found a burnt-out area just north of the crop circle and they go to investigate. The fire is still smoldering when Gibbs, McGee and Teague arrive at the burned out remains of a small cabin. McGee begins processing.

At the pilots' apartment, DiNozzo and Kate are looking for anything that suggests the two didn't just leave on a routine flight. DiNozzo immediately spots a famous men's magazine, the December 1992 issue featuring Pamela Anderson's debut. Kate leaves him ogling the magazine in the living room and steps into the hallway to see steam coming out through the bathroom door which is slightly ajar. She pulls out her weapon and walks quietly down the hallway. Pushing the door open, she begins to lean into the room when Capt. Barnett grabs her from behind and puts his arm around her neck, demanding to know what she is doing in his apartment. DiNozzo steps into the hallway, his weapon trained on the captain, and commands that he let her go.

Gibbs stalks into the interrogation room and wants to know why Captain Barnett is not cooperating with his team. Barnett curtly tells Gibbs that he was with his girlfriend on Saturday night, had just gotten home to shower and heard someone in his apartment. He denies knowing where Captain Newell is. He says that, if the flight record shows that he and Captain Newell took off last night, that's what they did. Gibbs slams his hand down on the table and advises the captain to give him direct answers. Gibbs leans close to the marine, whispering that their helicopter was found 150 miles away from where it should have been and that Captain Newell is missing. When Barnett still doesn't respond, Gibbs leans closer and lowers his voice, so that DiNozzo and Kate cannot hear him in the observation room next door. DiNozzo tells Kate that Gibbs is using TBI ? truth by intimidation ? and begins counting down from 5. When he reaches 1, Captain Barnett starts talking. He says that when the two pilots were leaving for the base, Newell got a call on his cell phone that disturbed him. He said he wasn't feeling well and wanted to call the base to cancel the flight. Barnett tells Gibbs that he doesn't know who the call was from, even though he "rode his butt" to try to find out. Newell just got angry and told Barnett to lay low for the rest of the night, saying that he'd explain when he got back. DiNozzo leaves to pull up Newell's cell phone records.

Abby is excited as she carries a stalk of corn into her lab, and she asks McGee if he felt any sort of energy when he was within the crop circle. Each time McGee tries to get Abby back on task to work on the evidence of the fire she returns to the subject of crop circles, and tells him she is running analyses of the plants within and outside the circles. McGee warns her once more before leaving her to her obsession.

According to the records at New River, Captain Newell signed the log for the aircraft, but no one remembered seeing Captain Barnett. Newell is an only child and grew up outside Orlando, Florida and there doesn't seem to be anything linking him to West Virginia. His parents died two years ago. Newell does have a record of impulsiveness and fighting. DiNozzo tells Gibbs that the last phone call that came into Newell's cell phone was the previous night at 21:30; he didn't make or receive any calls after that, and his cell phone is currently off. The call came from a pay phone in Smokey Corners, West Virginia.

Back in Smokey Corners, Gibbs and Kate check out the phone booth attached to a service station and notice a young woman peeking out the window, watching their every move. Inside the store, Ritt Everett, Daphne's father, makes a call, advising someone to get there as soon as possible. Kate dusts the pay phone for prints, but it has been cleaned. Gibbs uses his pocketknife to open the coin container and tells Kate to get the coins to Abby for prints. Everett comes outside to see what the two agents are doing, and tells Gibbs that he didn't see anyone using the phone Tuesday night. Sheriff Thompson drives up and asks Gibbs if he's having any luck with the case. He tells Gibbs that after asking around he's found that many farmers in the area are complaining that their animals are acting up. Gibbs shows the two Captain Newell's picture, but they don't recognize him, and there aren't any families named Newell in town.

Gibbs gets a call from Abby who is angry because the Air Force won't give her their files on the 1994 crop circles in Smokey Corners. When Gibbs tells her he'll make a call, she insists that it is a conspiracy as big as Area 51. She has found that the cabin fire was arson ? the arsonist used gasoline as an accelerant, but she is still working on the debris. Kate catches Daphne Everett as she leaves the store and shows her the picture of Captain Newell.

Watching from inside the store, Ritt Everett and Sheriff Thompson are concerned about Daphne, but Everett insists, "Long as both sides stick to the story, we'll get through this."

Daphne nervously tells Kate that she can't talk about it with her daddy there, but he will be leaving for the VFW at noon and Kate should come back then.

Logan Cole is watching the make-shift marine field office near his field as the search dogs are being loaded into a truck. Lt. Col Teague reports to McGee and DiNozzo that the search dogs are being called off as something has screwed them up - they began acting up as soon as they entered the woods. McGee suggests that they don't tell Abby about this development, and DiNozzo recounts the plot of "Invaders from Mars," a 1950s sci-fi movie about aliens landing in a field who took over the locals' minds. He calls it the scariest movie that he ever saw. When Gibbs arrives they tell him that all of the locals have the same story about BOLs ? "Balls of Light" ? that they saw in the night sky. Abby claims that they are created by manipulating the atomic particles in the atmosphere.

Back at the lab, Ducky asks Abby to run a tox screen on a tissue sample from a body exhumed in Arlington. Looking down at the dozens of evidence containers on her lab table containing corn stalks, soil samples and burned debris he sees that she is overwhelmed. He tells her that, since his body has been dead for 36 years, a few days of delay won't matter. She asks him for a second opinion about something she has found on the inside door handle from the burned cabin. Checking the microscope, Ducky believes the slide shows mammalian cells, probably from a human. There was someone trapped in the cabin fire, possibly the marine aviator, but no remains were found.

DiNozzo and Gibbs walk the cabin debris site again, wondering why they didn't find human remains within the structure. Gibbs tells him to get the cadaver dogs up to the site to begin searching for a body. When Logan Clay arrives, he informs Gibbs that the cabin wasn't on his land; the land has belonged to the county since the last owner, Monroe, died. He died in a hunting accident and the track has been abandoned ever since. Kids did use the cabin to mess around. Gibbs only stares at the man, clearly unconvinced.

When Kate arrives back at the service station to speak with Daphne, she doesn't find her. Ritt Everett is waiting for her in the nearby barn, but Kate tells him she only came in for gas. Everett leans close through her car window trying to intimidate her before Kate drives off.

Gibbs goes to the West Virginia State Police to get any information he can about Smokey Corners. Captain Grant tells Gibbs that he doesn't get to Smokey Corners much ? they never call in the State Police. He tells Gibbs that there is a feud going on up there, and it has been going on for decades with the east side of the valley fighting with the west side. He was told by his predecessor to stay clear: they take care of their own problems. He doesn't know of any murders that ever occurred there.

McGee is scanning the cornfield with a magnetometer per Abby's request. Kate and Tony laugh about the fact that Abby's new tattoo that she promised to show McGee is actually on her ankle. McGee excitedly kneels down to examine something that has registered on the instrument, and brushes away the corn stalks to find a rubber alien mask with a small magnet buried beneath it. He turns to DiNozzo who makes the Vulcan hand sign at him. Gibbs arrives to speak with Abby over the computer link. She tells him that she found two partial prints on the coins from the phone booth. She identifies one local man named Greg Sikes and DiNozzo immediately begins a background check on him. Teague arrives with the news that the cadaver dogs have found something. The dogs have led the marines to a shallow grave containing a burned body.

DiNozzo and McGee arrive at Greg Sikes' trailer and while McGee is knocking at one door, DiNozzo enters through another. The two search the trailer and DiNozzo finds a half-eaten sandwich. McGee comes up with two strips of photos showing Greg Sikes and Daphne Everett. Back at the lab, Ducky is examining the burned body, and has determined that it is the body of a man somewhere in his mid-twenties to thirties. He also has a bullet wound in his chest. Abby reports that the DNA she found on the door knob of the burned cabin was not Captain Newell's but belonged to Newell's male sibling. The dead man was Captain Newell's brother.

Since the Captain's service record showed that he was an only child, he must have lied about having a brother for some reason. In the lab, Abby is still obsessing over the corn stalks, and is trying to prove that the corn stalks within the crop circle have been changed in some super-human way. McGee tries to convince her that she is looking for something that isn't there. He shows her the overhead pictures of the circles again, showing her that in most of the circles the stalks of corn were bent down in a circular pattern going clockwise, but, in the circle with the helicopter, those stalks were bent down going outward from the center by the downdraft of the helicopter. The corn stalks were still standing when the helicopter began to land.

Kate and DiNozzo find that Todd Newell's mother remarried when he was nine years old, and he was adopted by his step-father. Newell's mother's first husband was named Sikes, and the couple had two boys, Greg and Todd. Todd Newell was born in Smokey Corners, yet never mentioned anything about his childhood to his co-pilot, Captain Barnett. Todd and Greg's father died several years ago in another "hunting accident." Kate and DiNozzo gather their gear to head off to Smokey Corners to try to find Daphne Everett. Before they can leave, McGee brings Abby to Gibbs' desk to admit that the crop circles were bogus. Abby is still not convinced. She wants to know what made the dogs unable to follow the scent trail the first day they searched for the missing marine. Gibbs begins to tell her that the cadaver dogs didn't have any trouble the next day, and then stops. He realizes why they haven't been able to find Captain Newell. He hurries up the stairs to MTAC and explains that only another marine could figure it out.

Gibbs connects to Lt. Col. Teague in MTAC and tells him that Captain Newell is still alive and evading their search. In his SERE training, Captain Newell was taught a technique to evade enemy dogs using GS powder, the irritant used in gas mask simulations. Lt. Col. Teague knows it well; he even keeps a few canisters of it in his vest. When Newell used it on the dogs, it made them useless. The captain would also have pilot night-vision goggles and a survival radio to monitor their searches.

In the car on the way back to Smokey Corners, DiNozzo is driving Kate crazy. He accuses her of having PMS, and then notes that he thought that wasn't until next week. They approach Sikes' trailer hoping to find Daphne there when they see her running out of the trailer and getting into her truck. Kate pulls the car in front of the truck and Daphne tries to run for it. Kate and DiNozzo catch her, and Kate notices that Daphne's face is bruised. They tell her that they know Greg Sikes was her boyfriend and she admits that she is pregnant. She believes that Greg is hiding from her father but they inform her that Greg is dead.

That night, McGee is sitting nervously in the passenger seat while Gibbs drives erratically towards Smokey Corners. Gibbs knows that whatever Greg Sikes said to his brother made Captain Newell break regulations and take a marine helicopter to West Virginia. He landed in the farmer's field because it was the closest open ground to the cabin where his brother was hiding. He arrived too late to save his brother. McGee believes that whoever killed Sikes knew they couldn't cover up a marine helicopter with another "hunting accident" story, so they made the crop circle hoping the military investigation would back off and do the same kind of cover-up the Air Force

Daphne tells Gibbs and Kate that she and Greg were from different corners of the valley, so they tried to hide their relationship from everyone in the area. The last time she saw Greg was at the pay phone at the service station ? he was calling his brother for help. The two brothers were reunited when their mother died two years ago - they were the only family each had left. Daphne believes that Captain Newell has been drawn back into the feud, and is going after Daphne's father for revenge. Gibbs orders McGee and Kate to take Daphne out of the area. He calls Lt. Col Teague and tells him to withdraw his men from the area to make Newell believe that the marines have gone. Gibbs is hoping to draw Newell into making a move on Ritt Everett.

Sheriff Thompson and Ritt Everett stand outside the service station and watch the marine trucks leave town the next morning. Ritt immediately goes inside his store and begins loading his rifle. The sheriff tries to tell him that "they pulled it off" and "this thing is going away," but Ritt won't be placated. Everett believes that he has to get Greg Sikes' brother before he gets him.

Out in the woods, Captain Newell watches the marine helicopters fly off and comes out of hiding.

DiNozzo and Gibbs enter the store and confront Sheriff Thompson and Everett, DiNozzo holding his weapon on the armed man. Gibbs tells DiNozzo to read Everett his rights for the murder of Greg Sikes. Everett responds, "Greg Sikes is dead? I thought he went hunting." Gibbs tells the two that the West Virginia State Police are on their way, but he will detain both of them until they arrive.

After nightfall, Captain Newell makes his way towards the small store adjoining the service station using night-vision goggles. The NCIS team is posted around the area, waiting for him to make his move. Newell moves cautiously behind some old cars parked behind the station. Trying to get a better angle, DiNozzo moves slightly in the barn next to the station, and makes a noise. Knowing that Newell made DiNozzo's position, Gibbs calls for the lights, and all of the outdoor lights come on all over the yard, blazing in Newell's night-vision goggles. The team surrounds Newell, demanding that he lower his weapon. Newell holds his gun on Gibbs and tells him that it has always been an eye-for-an-eye in the valley, and this won't end until Ritt Everett is dead. Newell knows he'll never fly again, so he doesn't see a reason to surrender. Gibbs assures him that, since Newell hasn't hurt anyone, yet, he'll do everything he can to help him. Gibbs also tells him about Daphne and his brother's baby. Newell lowers his weapon.

In the NCIS interrogation room, a clean and uniformed Newell explains his family history to Gibbs. He tells him that their mother was always ashamed that she left Greg behind when she moved away from Smokey Corners, but that their father wouldn't let her have both of them. He took the marine helicopter because it is intimidating and he thought it would scare the locals. He arrived too late and the cabin was in flames with Greg trapped inside. Everett and others began shooting at him, and he was hit in the leg. He couldn't get back to the base, and thought that all that was left was revenge.

In the NCIS squadroom, McGee asks Kate who sent her the beautiful bouquet of flowers she is arranging on her desk. She smiles and tells him they are from DiNozzo. He realized that he has been pushing her lately, and sent her the flowers as an apology. Kate is very impressed because they are from her favorite florist. "How did you know?" she asks. "He went through your purse and got the phone number off your PDA," says Gibbs as he walks past.

Summary: A body of a woman in a Navy uniform is found by two sailors. Ducky links the murder to an unsolved case 10 years ago, and starts behaving strangely. A serial murderer leaves a note on the body, promising to return.

As the team begins an investigation into the murder/rape of a Lt. Jane Doe at Norfolk, Tim briefly meets up with an old friend, Petty Officer Cluxten - the person responsible for the initial crime scene work. Ducky does an initial time of death, and a quick analysis of the body, but, being in a hurry to catch his plane for a meeting in London with the Society of Medical Examiners, he states he's going to leave the confirmations and autopsy to another ME. Just before he leaves the scene a chance comment by Gibbs has Ducky heading back to check the body for something specific, and looking very distressed when he finds it.

Back at headquarters the team strikes out in all the avenues they've pursued to identify the naval Lt. Jane Doe; then Ducky (who had given up his trip to London) reveals that he's been holding back information from the team - the victim isn't a Lt. There had been an almost identical murder/rape 10 years earlier, and that Lt. Jane Doe had never been identified, in part because she wasn't a Lt. at all. She wasn't even military. The murderer was never caught, the body never identified, and 10 years later her ashes were still a possession of Dr. Mallard, who deeply regretted he was never able to send her home, or let her family know what had happened to her.

The relationship between the old case and new continues to develop as the DNA from the semen taken from both bodies matches, and a note, very similar to one found near the first crime scene, is found at the second as well. As one very promising suspect is ruled out, Tim and Tony head out to check another - a former enlisted man who had just been released from prison 2 months earlier. However, there's a problem ? he had died 5 weeks prior to the second murder/rape.

Tony and Kate canvass the bars surrounding the base and identify the second Jane Doe as a drummer at a lesbian bar nearby; meanwhile Petty Officer Cluxten takes the opportunity to observe a real forensic lab at work (where Abby shows a few ?claws? over Cluxten's rapport and history with Tim).

Things take a turn for the worse - for although the team had identified the body, all they have are dead ends when the new note shows no fingerprints or DNA, and both of their suspects have been cleared. No-one's quite sure what direction to go in next (not even Gibbs) until the results of another DNA match Abby was testing came in ? the dead man's DNA matched the DNA from both the semen found on both victims. Puzzlement and confusion fade as the team realizes the semen at the second crime scene was taken from the stored evidence of the first crime scene and planted to send investigators hunting after a ?serial rapist and murderer?.

While watching the records from the evidence storage lockup the day before the second murder, Tim discovers that Cluxten is the one who removed the evidence and then makes several connections. Firstly, he remembers that Petty Officer Cluxten used her mother's name rather than her father's (who happened to be the investigating NCIS agent of the first case). Secondly, Cluxten had had a friendship with the victim that observed the military's ?don't ask, don't tell? policy. Gibbs confronts Cluxten with these facts, the video from the evidence lockup, and, finally, with the death of the murderer of the first victim 5 weeks before the second murder, that of Cluxten's lover, had taken place and Cluxten admits her guilt by becoming very upset at the one ?flaw? in her perfect plan for murder.

Floyd Johnson (AFIP Medical Examiner), Blue Deckert (Federal Marshal), Mary Pat Gleason (Nurse Wells), Curt Doussett (Policeman Randall), Robert Costanzo (Jimmy Napalitano)
Summary: The NCIS team finds a place where the mob has been dumping bodies for a long time, and one of the victims is an undercover FBI agent. The FBI suspect a mole and arrest Fornell. Gibbs sets out to find the real mole and clear Fornell.

A man awakens, hands bound, in a junked car, side by side with a skeletal figure burned beyond recognition. Realizing he's in a military testing ground, he frantically makes a run for the edge. He doesn't quite make it before a 500 pound bomb hits a little too close.

Interrupting Gibbs' version of 'close combat training?', the team gets called in to the Marine bombing range in Quantico to investigate. They arrive at the scene to find Gunny Sergeant Deluca, CID, already investigating 'with a swarm of military personnel on site as well as EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) teams trying to clear the site. Gibbs is naturally upset at Deluca's handling of a crime scene; however Deluca believes this to be accidental death - a civilian scavenger in the wrong place at the wrong time. It doesn't take long for Tony to discover a clue that this was no 'scavenger' ($500 dollar shoes), and for Gibbs to trace the dead man's tracks back to the car containing the burned skeletal figure. The Marine bombing range appears to be a 'bone yard' - a serial killer's dumping ground.

Back at headquarters, Abby comes up with a match in the database for the first body's fingerprints - only to have her computer expertly hacked. As Tim and Abby, in vain, to stop the attack, Gibbs applies a little common sense and saves the day - by unplugging the computer. Abby sets a trap for the hacker and completes a backtrace, discovering the hacker in question is the FBI. Shortly afterward the FBI shows up, with Fornell wanting to know why NCIS was asking questions about an undercover FBI agent. When he is presented with the dead agent's body, Fornell first turns down a joint investigation, then asks to speak to Gibbs privately. While in Gibbs's personal conference room, Fornell asks for Gibbs's help and reveals that the dead agent was undercover with a mafia boss's organization — a man Fornell had been trying to bring down for years. The mafia boss, Napalitano, always seemed to know whenever the FBI was trying to infiltrate his organization. The FBI thinks one of their agents is a mole, feeding information to Napalitano—and they think Fornell is that mole. Gibbs agrees to help, but has to watch helplessly as Fornell is arrested. Shortly thereafter damaging evidence shows up (some sent anonymously) and Fornell, to most everyone's shock, hangs himself in his cell.

Gibbs arrests the mafia boss's son for manslaughter (the team had matched his blood with that found on the dead FBI agent) to pressure Napalitano into revealing the mole. He offers the boss a deal — if Napalitano gives up the mole, Little Ricky won't hang himself in prison — he won't even go to prison, as the evidence against him will get lost. Agent Charles, one of Fornell's FBI agents, objects, both to letting the FBI agent's murderer go free, and because he doesn't believe Napalitano will keep his end of the bargain. Gibbs sets up a meet anyway, and takes Agent Charles as his one allowed backup because Charles can confirm whether the person handed over as the mole is FBI or Justice. In a standoff with the mafia boss (Gibbs having arranged primacord around Little Ricky's neck, hooked up to a dead-man switch), Agent Charles reveals himself as the mole just before Jimmy Napalitano gives him up. Agent Charles begins to plan out how everyone else is going to die in a primacord explosion; however Napalitano's hidden backup sniper kills Charles before he has a chance to arrange it. With nothing more to trade, and primacord hanging around his son's neck, Jimmy Napalitano reluctantly leaves his son with Gibbs to face manslaughter charges.

Back in the office, the rest of the team is stunned when Gibbs walks in the next day with a very much alive Fornell keeping him company.

Call of Silence

Season 2

Production Code: 02007
Summary: Ernie Yost, an elderly Marine veteran and Medal of Honor winner, confesses to murdering his best friend almost 60 years ago in a war battle and the NCIS's job is to solve all the secrets and save Ernie from prison.

A former corporal, a Medal of Honor recipient from WWII, came to Gibbs claiming to have bashed his buddy, Wade Kean, to death while serving on Iwo Jima. Gibbs, of course, doesn't believe him and investigates it just to humor him.

Cpl. Yost began reporting the murder to 911 and no-one believed him. All of the self-blame for his buddy's death began when his wife, Dorothy, passed away. Cpl. Yost is grieving for the loss of his wife, he waltzes with Kate for the memory of her and it is one of the most touching scenes to have been aired. To see the old gentleman crying was so sad.

Gibbs attempts to let Cpl. Yost go home but is stopped by the confident and alarmingly professional Lt. Cmdr. Faith Coleman, played so wonderfully by Alicia Coppola. She is ordered to prosecute the Cpl. which nobody wants to happen especially Gibbs. Gibbs is not prepared, on any level, to let the Cpl. go to his grave carrying a guilt that he didn't deserve.

Gibbs tells Tony to take the Cpl. home and to stay with him which is where Tony uncovers some awful evidence. Wade and Dorothy had been high school sweethearts. Could the Cpl. have been so jealous of Wade as to kill him so he could marry Dorothy?

Gibbs, with a few tricks up his sleeve and the help of a former Japanese Imperial Army Lieutenant who runs a local sushi shop, helps the Cpl. to remember what happened. In a heart-breaking memory, Kate, the Cpl. and Cmdr. Coleman end in tears and the Cmdr. knows the answer.

"Cpl. Kean was killed in action, not by Yost,"

In my opinion, one of the most touching moments was actually when Cpl. Ernest Yost and the Japanese Lieutenant eat sushi together and the episode ends on them raising their glasses to each other.

Production Code: 02008
Summary: A Navy Commander dies after a successful surgery. While researching the commander's past, the team finds out that he earned a lot of enemies lately and tracks down an ensign, making him the prime suspect. Soon Abby realizes that they've got the wrong man.

A Navy commander appears to spontaneously combust while staying in the hospital and recovering from a heart surgery. At the scene, the team meets Dr. Byers, who performed the heart surgery. Ducky is immediately smitten by her and later asks her on a date.

The team discovers that the commander was not well-liked and picked on one shipman in particular, Ensign Evan Hayes. Since Hayes was known to have visited the commander before his death, he becomes a suspect. When Gibbs and Kate confront him at his high school swimming pool, the only place where he had ever felt happy, he admits being suicidal and draws his gun on Gibbs. Kate shoots Hayes before he can harm Gibbs, and Hayes dies.

Later, it is found that Hayes had an alibi for the time of the commander's combustion - he was at the home of his former swim coach, talking about his problems. Kate feels immensely guilty for shooting an innocent man, but Gibbs tells her that it was "suicide by cop" and that she should "get over it".

In revisiting the physical evidence, Tony discovers that the explosion was caused by a cigarette placed in a matchbook 12 minutes prior to the explosion. As the cigarette burned, it eventually lit the matches, which ignited an explosion due to an open oxygen line. The only person in the commander's room 12 minutes before the explosion was Dr. Byers. She appears relieved at this finding and confesses that the surgery was not successful and the commander died during recovery. She had failed at a similar surgery before and believed that another failure would cost her her medical license, so she tried to make the commander's death look like an accident and not due to an unsuccessful operation.

Summary: A Marine's wife, shoots an intruder in self defense when he is about to rape her. The team finds out that the wife was leading a double life, while her husband was serving overseas. Allegedly, she has been chatting with a stranger on the net and had no idea about his true intentions. The team believes that she might have lured him to her home, not knowing that he is a serial rapist.

A woman is home alone watching a horror movie when a man enters her house and attacks her. While the man begins to undress, she pulls out a gun and fires.

When the team arrives on site Gibbs hands his coffee to Tony telling him not to drink any. Tony then passes it off to an unsuspecting McGee telling him it's for him. Kate plays along. Inside the MP on-scene tells them the man has been taken to the hospital and that there was no forced entry, most people on base leave their doors unlocked. When Gibbs is talking to the woman, Laura Rowens, she tells him she never saw the man before and that her husband has been deployed for about half of their marriage.

Tony and Kate have gone to the hospital to question the man. However, the attractive doctor won't let them in to see him until tomorrow, despite Tony's flirting. On a pretext Tony sends Kate to check on the MP guarding the room, but really to fingerprint the man. As she is doing this the man regains consciousness. He grabs Kate's arm and tells her it was a game that Laura invited him, he thought she loved him.

Abby can't find a fingerprint match for the man. He is not in the database, no record. So she is running his DNA in hopes of identifying him, however, it will take awhile. Fortunately, the MPs manage to ID the man as Jeremy Davison from his car registration. Warrant in hand Gibbs and Kate head to Davison's home. Kate finds a provocative picture of Laura Rowens on his computer as well as explicit emails she sent him. His sister Michelle's arrival interrupts the search. When they tell her what happened she says she knew this would end badly. She tells them her brother went on a date last night with a woman he met online.

Back at the squadroom the team is spitballing theories when Abby and McGee come up. They have found that both Laura Rowens and Jeremy Davison were members of a sex website, 'Where discriminating adults go to play.' And according to their profiles they shared the same fetish, rape fantasies.

They bring Rowens into interrogation. Gibbs confronts her about her activity on the website, which she admits to. However, she said it was only ever online. When he shows her the picture from Davison's computer she is shocked, claiming she only ever sent it to her husband. She says she never met Davison online, let alone sent him anything. Rowens is further confused by the emails. Gibbs is pressing her about them when Abby rushes into observation saying we screwed up big time. Kate reluctantly interrupts the interrogation at Abby's insistence. Abby tells a rather upset Gibbs that Rowens is telling the truth, she didn't write the emails. Unfortunately, Abby doesn't know who did.

Jeremy now seems the victim and target. He thought he was actually communicating with Laura Rowens and was set up to die. In order to determine who was pretending to be Laura, they need access to the sex website's mainframe. Abby says they need to be inside the system to do it, can't hack it from the outside. Kate remembers the company had a job opening for a computer programmer. McGee gets very excited about the idea of going undercover but Tony says he is too 'cop' and wants to go himself. McGee responds with Tony's inability to pass as a computer programmer. Kate says Tony does have online dating experience, and Tony admits to a relationship with a HotJugs24. Luckily, Gibbs has a solution... Abby will do it.

Tony and Kate have gone to the hospital to see if Jeremy had any enemies. He is upset and confused when they tell him the relationship was not real. When his sister arrives she asks if the handcuffs are still necessary. Kate promptly removes them. Meanwhile, Abby (undercover as Miss Gibbs) and McGee backtrace the email writer. When Gibbs, Kate and Tony arrive at the address they find the writer, Victor Grotinski, dead in front of a bank of monitors. His throat has been slit and his eyes gouged out.

While searching the scene they find jars of pee but no eyeballs, the killer took them. Tony also notices a hidden camera in a vent. The tape shows Grotinski having sex, it is the woman he is with who kills him. Unfortunately, the tape is grainy and Abby needs some time to clean it up. Meanwhile, Ducky has sent evidence to Abby and she is trying to isolate and ID the female DNA. But it will take even longer than the photo, 10 hours. Up in autopsy Ducky describes the technique used to slit Grotinski's throat, it is the same way a Marine does it. Based on this Gibbs wants Laura Rowens picked up, Kate sends the MP. At Rowens' house the MP finds Grotinski's eyeballs and takes her into custody.

Gibbs, Kate, and Tony go to the hospital to see what Jeremy Davison can tell them about these new developments. While they are questioning him and his sister, Abby gets some unexpected DNA results. McGee is surprised because he thought she said it would take longer. She immediately tries to call Gibbs to tell him that the DNA ID is wanted for 5 other murders. However, their cell phones are off at the hospital.

Meanwhile Gibbs is picking up some hinky vibes from Davison and his sister when the as-yet grainy video of the killer is mentioned. She squeezes his hand and his heart rate increases. After the team leaves the room, the woman gives Davison a very unsisterly kiss and tells him they need to leave now. As they exit the hospital Gibbs is there to arrest them. With Kate and Tony covering them Gibbs finally answers the phone. Abby quickly tells him her news, Davison is wanted for murder, and Gibbs replies we know already. This doesn't exactly please Abby, who turns on McGee demanding if he knew.

Later in the squadroom Kate is feeling relieved that they didn't let the serial killers slip through their fingers. Their name wasn't even Davison, Grotinski had set up that identity for them. They note how easy it is to pretend to be some one else online. At this point McGee reveals that he has tracked down HotJugs24, a heavily tattooed, overweight, middle aged man.

Summary: While on an undercover operation as an escaped prisoner who is forced to stick to a convict that owns a key to an expensive ancient Iraqi sculpture, Tony mysteriously disappears. The GPS locator that Abby planted on him doesn't work anymore and the team must find Tony, because his life is in jeopardy.

Antiquities have been stolen and NCIS need to find them but they don't know where they are. Two men stole them, one is at large and the other is in prison. Tony goes undercover and pretends to be a convict and, chained to the man who was in prison, goes on the run in a hope that the man might lead him to the stolen items before they are sold. Tony is being tracked by the team and Gibbs and Kate follow his signal, leaving McGee at headquarters. They lose Tony's signal when he goes into a stream and then again when he crashes the car with a tracking device in. McGee has to deal with a very difficult person from the government and Kate and Gibbs try to find Tony. Tony and the man meet up with the other man at a house and they spend the night there. In the morning the 'man at large' is gone and the other man says he must have already gone to sell the items. Gibbs and Kate get to the house after Tony has left and they find the body of the man that had supposedly already gone to sell the items, they then know that Tony's life is in jeopardy. Tony lets them know where he is by phoning Gibbs on the man's cell phone and they track him through there. Kate and Gibbs are on hot pursuit of them and when they arrive to where Tony is, Kate arrests the man that they were going to sell the items to and Gibbs goes to see what is happening in the car. When he gets there he sees the man dead and Tony with his head forward. Tony slowly lifts his head up and shows that he is fine.

Summary: The team takes upon an unusual case when a telemarketer reports a possible murder of a petty officer who appeared to be dying over the phone. With the help of the Virginia officials, the team finds out it was just a practical joke. However, the person is soon found dead.

A telemarketer from a phone company calls a Navy lieutenant to advertise the phone service, but he hears a struggle over the phone and believes that the lieutenant has been murdered.

The team begins investigating the case and find that the lieutenant's body is not in his home, but they do find blood. After some time, Abby, McGee, and Kate all rush to tell Gibbs their findings, each believing that his or her finding is the most important. Abby reports that the blood drops in the lieutenant's home are not directional because they are spherical, meaning that whoever left the blood stood and let blood drop, took a step, dropped some blood, and took another step. McGee finds that the sound from the telemarketer's recording is unidirectional and came from the lieutenant's computer. Finally, Kate says that the lieutenant had requested that day off and had told the telemarketer to call him back at that specific time. With these facts, it seems that the lieutenant faked his own death.

Gibbs and McGee head to the office where the lieutenant worked as a computer programmer. Gibbs immediately takes a liking to Karen Wilkerson, who was the lieutenant's boss. McGee asks the man who worked next to the lieutenant about the lieutenant's work and obtains copies of his codes and other files.

Back at the lab, McGee and Abby analyze the code, which deals with prescription drug shipments for the government. They find 3 suspicious lines of code, which appear to cause the shipment of various drugs directly to the lieutenant. The code had not yet been released in a fully functional form, but it had been working to some extent. Thus, the lieutenant had been receiving and selling drugs for some time but likely faked his death because the code was about to be released.

While searching for the lieutenant, they discover his body, which is certainly not a suicide, as he was shot at close range in the back of the head. The team believes that the lieutenant may have had a partner who wanted to take the drug money for himself. The team interviews the lieutenant's former roommate as well as the man who worked next to him in the office, but they are unsuccessful.

Gibbs takes a break for a date with Karen in his basement, where he is holding her closely and showing her how to sand his boat. As they begin to kiss, Gibbs' phone rings, and he takes the call. He is informed that the team has analyzed cigarette butts found at the scene of the lieutenant's death and found out their brand. Gibbs asks Karen for a cigarette, and she hands him one of the same brand that was used by the killer. He confronts her with this and says that he hopes she isn't the killer and kisses her.

Summary:	A woman claims to have seen a murder of a sailor in an apartment across from hers. Gibbs assigns the case to Tim who believes that he can resolve it himself. However, when the less of physical evidence happens, Tim pursues the team to help him.

A woman is relaxing in her home when she looks out the window and sees a struggle across the street. She immediately gets a video camera and frantically tries to tape the masked figure in black and the man across the way.

At the NCIS office, Kate has a toothache and needs a root canal, but she is afraid of going to the dentist. Gibbs walks in and sends McGee to investigate the report of a woman who saw a struggle across the street. McGee goes alone because the police department doesn't think anything bad happened, but the woman was insistent.

The detective at the scene, Detective Floyd, says that nothing happened; no sailor was strangled, and there was no sign of a struggle. The man who lives in the apartment, Mr. Thorne, is actually a civilian. McGee goes to visit the woman, Erin Kendall, anyway. She says that she knows it was a sailor because of his uniform. Her video is no good; the figures are not visible because she got there too late. There seems to be a chemistry between McGee and Erin; they both went to MIT.

McGee calls Gibbs and says he thinks something might have happened and that they should move forward with the case. The remaining team members rush to meet him at Erin's apartment. McGee explains that there is little hard evidence but that he has learned from Gibbs that he has to go with his gut.

Abby says that the crime scene produced few quality prints. She finds prints from a missing sailor, Petty Officer Keith Dylan. While McGee is happy that he is right about something having happened, Gibbs points out that it means a sailor may have died.

DiNozzo and Kate reenact the strangling across the way while Erin, McGee, and Gibbs watch. Erin says that it looked exactly like that. DiNozzo falls to the ground, starts sniffing the floor and asks for the alternate light source (ALS); he detects urine on the floor.

Gibbs opens the convertible sofa in the apartment and finds two suitcases. One is an empty gun case. The other may have contained drugs, they guess.

Dylan's commanding officer says that Dylan was a reliable officer, and he is surprised that he is late for work today. DiNozzo finds that Dylan had a girlfriend named Meg.

Abby found that the urine is definitely human, and she is analyzing the DNA in the epithelial cells found in the urine. The second box at Thorne's place had traces of cocaine, but 4 out of 5 bills contain levels of cocaine that can be detected. Thus, this case probably contained money. Kate reports that Robert J. Thorne must be an alias because all his bills are under phony names, and he has paid everything in cash. DiNozzo finds that Dylan's home is messy, his girlfriend does not live there, and she currently has a yeast infection.

Detective Floyd calls McGee to inform him that he has found the body of a sailor. Ducky says that the time of death was 12 to 14 hours ago, corroborating Erin's story. Gibbs asks McGee how they should proceed. McGee thinks they should look for a connection between Thorne and Dylan, watch both apartments, and obtain a composite sketch from Erin and Thorne's building manager, Jeremy Pryor.

McGee and Kate visit Meg to ask about Dylan. She is surprised and saddened to hear of his death. Kate notices her wedding ring, but she says that her husband is in Iraq and would not have known about Dylan. Dylan said she could move in with her and he would provide with her with his large sum of money. She has never heard of Thorne.

Abby found that the fibers found on Dylan came from a car. Gibbs asks her to analyze the prints found on the gun application.

McGee is on the phone with Erin, having a casual conversation. Erin panics when she hears noises and sees a doorknob turn. She screams as someone attacks her, and McGee rushes across the street from Thorne's place, which he was watching. Erin is not moving. McGee bends down to tend to her, and the attacker hits him. McGee shoots at him but misses his target.

Detective Floyd says that his medical examiner will take Erin because this is a case of a civilian killing another civilian. McGee feels guilty about not being there to save Erin, but Kate says that he was exactly where he should have been.

DiNozzo interviews the Pryor, who woke up due to the gunshots. Detective Floyd interrupts and says he will take over the interview.

Kate says that her hypnotist really helped her with her fear of the dentist, so she recommends that McGee undergo hypnotism in order to better remember the appearance of the attacker. He goes through the motions of what he did when he was on the phone with Erin and what she said. The hypnotist asks him to look at the attacker's face, but he can't see it. The attacker is wearing a jumpsuit and jacket. He is wearing a large watch on his right wrist.

Abby finds that the gun from Thorne's couch was used in two unsolved murders. Thorne's gun application has prints that match Dylan's corpse - they are the same man. Dylan was probably a hit man with an assumed identity. The killer of Dylan and Erin was probably the person who stole the money from Dylan's second suitcase. McGee realizes that Pryor wears his watch on his right wrist and has the keys to Thorne's apartment. Shocked, he runs off into traffic and is hit by a car.

Back at the office, McGee asks for quiet while writing up his first report. Kate says that for her first report, Gibbs made her rewrite it twice. DiNozzo had to rewrite his five times. Gibbs walks by and congratulates McGee on passing on the first try, so Kate and DiNozzo realize he is currently working on something else. They find that he is writing a sympathy note to Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, and they remark that it is a nice thing for him to do.

Recurring Role: Brian Dietzen (Jimmy Palmer)
Guest Stars: Kevin Sizemore (Marine Sgt. Moore), Marieh Delfino (Judy Moore), David Lipper (Marine Sgt. Caine), John Lacy (Park Ranger Kett), Tim de Zarn (David Runion)
Production Code: 02015
Summary: A Marine falls off a cliff, and his camera records him falling. The prime suspects are his wife and his best friend with whom he had a picnic in the camp. Gibbs finds out they had an affair behind a dead man's back and he tries to persuade one another to blame each other. In the meantime, Abby reconstructs the case using her computer skills to handle the Marine's camera.

We're watching the sunrise in a beautiful, natural setting through the lens of a video camera. The camera goes tumbling and you hear scuffling as the picture in the video camera shatters and turns to snow and then ends frozen on the face of a dead person.

In the squad room, Kate is talking on the phone with a girl friend. They are discussing something that happened on the other woman's date when Kate realizes that Tony is listening to their conversation and abruptly hangs up. Tony tries to wheedle more information about this date out of Kate, but she's having none of it. McGee walks through and Tony tries to draw him into the conversation which has turned to Spike Steel, a porn star. Kate says Spike Steel reminds her of Tony which makes Tony wonder how Kate knows what Spike Steel looks like. Gibbs comes in and starts handing out assignments, there is a dead Marine (Sgt. William Moore) in Shendoah River State Park.

Sgt. Moore, his wife, and best friend (Sgt. Caine) were camping together. Sgt. Moore went out alone to film the sunrise. The park ranger tells Gibbs that the trail is slippery in the early mornings and Sgt. Moore must have slipped. Gibbs questions the ranger's assumption but he remains certain it was an accident. There is no sign of the video camera.

Kate and Tony are walking in to the crime scene while Tony wonders what's keeping McGee. Kate tells Tony that McGee has joined a gym. We hear panting and footsteps running and here comes McGee, arms loaded with Ducky's gear. It's another quarter mile to the crime scene and McGee plunges on ahead with Tony commenting that McGee should get his money back from the gym. Tony is still comparing himself to Spike Steel remarking that they both need stamina in their chosen lines of work.

Flashbulbs flash as pictures are taken of the corpse. Ducky is quizzing Mr. Palmer on the preliminary findings. With some prodding Mr. Palmer arrives at a preliminary cause of death that matches Ducky's supposition on the subject. Mr. Palmer does not understand the flesh wounds, however, and Ducky explains that a coyote has been feasting on the body. Ducky details which portions of the body are eaten in which order to which Mr. Palmer comments "That's, uh, gross, Doctor." Ducky chuckles and tells him they're lucky that the coyote didn't chew off the head and carry it away. One of Ducky's coroner friends in LA says that coyotes take it to go. Ducky remarks that they're very strange in LA.

All during this discussion Gibbs has been surveying the area around the body, in particular looking up at the cliff Sgt. Moore fell off of. Ducky tells Gibbs that he has noticed nothing unusual for now. McGee shouts that he has found the camcorder. It's in pieces and slightly submerged near the edge of a small stream.

Gibbs is interviewing the wife and friend. The wife says that Moore was obsessed with the camcorder, a birthday gift. If he hadn't been filming, he might not have slipped. There was a drunk in the same area with them last night. The drunk had a camper and was quite loud, they asked him to keep it down, he didn't, so they went back to talk with him again. The drunk took a swing at them, they put him in a headlock till he calmed down, and then the drunk took off. They have no identification on the drunk, Sgt. Caine says he was harmless. Moore is back from 8 months in Iraq, his wife comments on the irony of him dying filming a sunrise.

Abby and Gibbs are walking through the hallways towards Abby's lab. She is explaining that it really isn't that simple to recover footage from a camera that has been immersed in water for hours. "How long?" Gibbs asks. Abby goes into a detailed explanation of everything she needs to do. "How long?" "Three maybe four hours," Abby replies. Gibbs gives her the look that says that answer is unacceptable. Abby does not respond so Gibbs has to accept it. Abby then questions Gibbs on where he is on the technology scale and ends the conversation with "Peace out, man!" and the peace sign. Gibbs looks bemused and leaves her lab.

Ducky is in his element lecturing Mr. Palmer on what coyotes will eat. Basically, anything they can chew. Unfortunately for Ducky, the same cannot be said for his mother. She can no longer chew anything. "Have you ever seen a ribeye steak that's been reduced to baby food by a Cuisinart?" Ducky asks Mr. Palmer. Ducky then describes the rest of his mother's dinner entrees, ending with the Sunday treat, sushi through a straw. While he talks, Ducky has been working, examining the body. He's found something unusual in Moore's hair, which must be taken directly to Abby for identification. Ducky then invites Mr. Palmer over to his house for dinner one evening. Mr. Palmer accepts, although he looks less than enthused about the prospect. Mr. Palmer leaves to take the specimen to Abby and Ducky smiles to himself and then goes back to examining the body.

Abby works on identifying the sliver Ducky removed from Moore's scalp. It is a piece of wood, Northern White Ash to be precise. Not from a tree, but a baseball bat. "Somebody did a Barry Bonds on Sgt. Moore's head, Gibbs."

In the squad room, McGee, Tony, and Kate are gathered around the plasma discussing Sgt. Moore's service record. McGee doesn't know what an EI is, Tony tells him, but he does know what a MOUT is, interrupting Tony as he tries to tell him. Tony is "instructing" the probie. The probie insists that if he needs to know something he will ask Tony . . . where Gibbs or Kate is. Kate asks if the two of them are done and finishes summing up the case. As she finishes, Tony head-slaps McGee and tells Kate that now he's done. Kate wonders if either the wife or the best friend murdered Sgt. Moore. Tony and McGee think it is odd that a single man is hanging out with a married couple. Kate doesn't understand why that's weird. She spends time, without a date, with married couples. Who usually invites her, they ask. Usually the guy she responds. McGee and Tony share a knowing look and a laugh at Kate's expense. Kate insists that men and women can be just friends. Tony laughs. McGee says "Technically." Kate asks what he means by that and Tony responds that she'd have to be pretty ugly for that. McGee and Tony start laughing again. McGee claims he didn't say that, but his laughter is unabated. Gibbs walks in on this, asking what they are doing. They all cover up, saying they are discussing suspects. Gibbs tells them to get going, he's found another suspect. As they walk away, Kate remarks that Tony and McGee are about four years old.

Abby is in her lab drawing on a scrub cap with magic marker. Hers has a skull and crossbones on it. It goes with her black and white striped prison shirt. Everyone remarks on the hat, McGee finding it attractive in a weird way. Gibbs merely wants to know why. Abby is recycling the hats from the clean room where she worked on the video tape. She asks Gibbs how he likes it. He says it suits her and hands her a Caf-Pow asking what she found on the tape. Abby doesn't have the complete tape done, but she did find a POI (person of interest Tony whispers to McGee). Before she rolls the tape, Abby starts the disclaimer about how the tape has been edited for time and content and may not be suitable for all ages. Gibbs becomes impatient and Abby rolls tape.

A very grainy, distorted, and broken up homemade video tape starts playing. The three campers are discussing whether or not they should go and confront the drunk whose music is very audible in the background. They do go to the drunk's camper and confront him and the drunk throws the first punch. The video goes in and out of focus and the next thing you see is the drunk in a head lock being told he's now on tape assaulting them. The drunk agrees to leave. Gibbs wants an ID on the drunk. Abby has managed to get a shot of the license plate and has the name (David Runion) and last known address. "Good work, Abby" says Gibbs as he leaves the lab. Gibbs also orders Tony and McGee back to the park to find the spot where Moore was killed before he was tossed off the cliff. Tony orders McGee to gas up the sedan and meet him out front and strides out of the lab.

Abby stops Kate from leaving and asks her if she really likes her hat. Kate hesitates and says it's different. Abby made a hat for Kate as well. McGee is standing there as Abby presents Kate with the hat and urges her to put it on. Kate's hat has flowers all over it. McGee sighs and digs out his wallet. Abby bet McGee twenty bucks Abby could get Kate to wear the hat. As McGee leaves the room, Abby gives Kate one of the tens McGee gave her, saying "Your cut."

McGee and Tony are back at the park, looking at the crime scene. McGee complains that Tony could have helped carry things, but Tony is having none of it. He carried the camera, that's help enough. They find a drop of blood and signs of a struggle so need to search the woods. Tony starts to warn McGee about something, but McGee cuts him off. He's tired of being treated like an idiot, he graduated top of his class at FLETC, and he knows how to search a wooded area. McGee drapes his coat over Tony and goes into the woods. Tony watches him go with a smile on his face.

Back in the squad room, Kate has found David Runion. Runion is in an RV park near Shenendoah Park and he served time for assault and battery after nearly beating a man to death with a pool cue. Kate and Gibbs are rolling. Kate asks about a warrant, but they don't have any evidence. For now, Gibbs just wants to talk with him.

McGee is deep in the woods, pretty much crawling on his hands and knees and digging through the underbrush until he finds the baseball bat. Tony comes in and takes pictures of it. McGee apologizes for being so brusque before and Tony says to think nothing of it. He tells McGee how brave he thinks McGee was to crawl around in all that poison ivy. McGee is hopeful that Tony is joking, but he's not. "Leaves of three, let them be, McGee." Tony then tells McGee not to touch him and gets up and goes back to the car, leaving McGee to bag the baseball bat.

Gibbs and Kate have arrived at Runion's camping site. There is a small terrier out barking and snarling at Kate as she approaches. Kate backs off from the dog but Gibbs gets down on one knee and reaches in and scratches the dog's head and neck until the dog starts to lick him and then the dog rolls over for a belly rub. Gibbs tells Kate that dogs can sense sarcasm as he gets up and moves towards the trailer. Kate tries to follow and the dog snarls at her again. Kate edges past the door as Gibbs pounds on the trailer, announcing themselves and saying that want to ask questions. There is no answer from the trailer. Gibbs draws his weapon, opens the door, and goes in. No one is home. Gibbs does a cursory search while Kate guards the door. Gibbs finds a bag of marijuana as the dog starts to bark outside. Kate looks out and sees Runion approaching with an armload of firewood. Runion sees her in the door of his trailer, drops the firewood, and takes off. Kate and Gibbs pursue him with the dog barking accompaniment. Runion thinks he has eluded them, drops down into the brush, and says "Idiots." At that moment a gun cocks and is put to the back of his head. "Put your hands behind your head," says Gibbs. Runion wants to know how he did that. Gibbs used to do that for a living, but then Runion would be dead instead of under arrest. Runion has no other questions.

Runion is in interrogation complaining that he has to go to the bathroom. Kate and Tony are in the observation room watching. Tony is eating chips. Runion threatens to soil himself and Kate thinks they should let him use the restroom. Tony thinks Runion is bluffing. Kate describes Runion's trailer and puts Tony off his chips.

Gibbs enters the interrogation room and Runion tells him he needs to go to the bathroom. Hold it is Gibbs' response. If he can't, good, then this will be quick. Runion denies knowing Sgt. Moore. Gibbs shows him Moore's picture. Runion still denies it. Gibbs shows him the restored video footage of the fight. Runion denies it. He says he ran from them because of the pot in his trailer. Runion has a medical condition. "What?" asks Gibbs. "Stupidity?" Runion insists that he didn't do it and that he was sleeping in his trailer at a rest stop when the murder occurred. Kate is checking his alibi, trying to find out if there is any video surveillance or security guards at the rest stop Runion mentioned.

Abby is piecing the sliver from Moore's head into the bat that McGee found in the woods. McGee comes in for a report and learns that the bat is the murder weapon, but it has been wiped clean of prints but is covered in urushiol oil. McGee turns and faces Abby who reacts violently to his face. McGee's face is a cluster of red blotches. Abby cannot describe it to McGee so gives him a CD to look at his reflection. McGee knows that it is going to hurt. Abby recommends calamine lotion and a mask.

In the squad room, Kate is on the phone requesting the video surveillance tapes. The sheriff asks her out, but he's married. As Kate hangs up the phone, she says "and my mother wonders why I'm not married." Tony startles Kate by saying his mother wonders the same thing. Tony is standing right next to Kate's desk. Kate tells him to stop sneaking up on her. Tony is only practicing that creepy way that Gibbs' used to sneak up on them. "Used to?" Kate asks. Tony says that Gibbs has been wearing Ben-Gay so he can smell him. Kate smiles and looks away. "Is that a fact, DiNozzo?" We hear Gibbs' voice but do not see him. "Knee better, boss?" We see Gibbs' face appear from right behind Tony's head. "Much."

Gibbs asks for an update on the case. Tony and Kate are working to verify Runion's alibi. Kate asks if Gibbs thinks Runion did it. "Oh yeah" says Gibbs as he leans over and opens a desk drawer, pulling out a rag, which he then throws at Tony's head. "And Tony is cleaning it up." Gibbs calls maintenance and tells them they don't have to clean in interrogation. Tony does not believe Gibbs is serious until Gibbs stands up tall and looks at him. Tony says he used creepy in the most affectionate sense of the word. Gibbs just looks at Tony. Kate suggests that Tony wear gloves and Gibbs hollers for McGee.

McGee is visiting Ducky for a medical opinion on his rash. Ducky hasn't seen such a bad case since two young lovers fell asleep naked in a field of poison ivy. As he talks, McGee attempts to scratch. Ducky automatically gives McGee's hand a smack. "I don't think Sarah has ever forgiven me for that one," Ducky continues. As Ducky applies a salve to McGee's arms and face, he explains to McGee that the rash is on his face because it spreads by contact. McGee now has a different problem. While he was searching for the baseball bat, he relieved himself. Oh says Ducky. Then the light dawns and it becomes "oooooooooooooh." Ducky backs up and tells McGee they'll have to take a look. McGee is embarrassed but drops his trousers. Ducky assures him that he is a doctor and he has seen everything there is to see. Ducky takes one look and says "Good lord." McGee looks down and asks if it's bad. Ducky assures him that everything is fine, he just didn't expect to see so much, uh, swelling. Now McGee is panicking. If Tony finds out about this, he'll have to quit. Ducky assures McGee his secret is safe with him. At that precise moment, Mr. Palmer walks in with some forms for Ducky. Mr. Palmer takes in the situation says he'll come back and does a quick 180. "Him I'm not sure about," Ducky tells McGee.

Up in the squad room, the surveillance video is up on the plasma. There is Runion and his trailer and they stayed all night. The wayside is about 2 miles from the park. Gibbs' phone rings and it is Abby.

McGee is in her lab and they are discussing his poison ivy. McGee wants the truth about how bad he looks. But McGee and Abby decide he would prefer a lie to the truth at this point. Gibbs, Kate, and Tony walk in and get their first look at McGee. Shock and revulsion are their immediate reactions, although McGee assures them it looks worse than it really is. Tony compares McGee to the Elephant Man. Gibbs wonders if McGee can still work. McGee assures him he can and Gibbs takes that at face value, although he steps way around McGee to see what Abby has for him. Abby has more of the video tape but not the very last shot. That she had to send out to the Naval Photo Lab and Abby hopes to have it back tomorrow. Gibbs, of course, wants it now. And since Abby doesn't have that for him, why is he in her lab? Because Abby did find something on the tape. There is footage of the wife and the best friend, who probably didn't know they were being taped. There is a frame of the wife looking right into the camera and saying "Honey what is wrong?" Tony asks Kate if she thinks men and women can still be just friends.

Abby is trying to lip read the conversation between the wife and the best friend. Gloria, Abby's deaf mother, felt lip reading was not her strong suit. The wife says "We have to <something> him" as everyone suggests a word for the <something>. Kate says kill, McGee murder, Tony love. Gibbs smacks Tony in the head with his notepad. Tony wishes Gibbs would stop doing that. Gibbs says he will when Tony stops blanking up. Kate looks at the tape again and watches Mrs. Moore touch Sgt. Caine's face in an intimate way. Tony says it just proves his point about the sexes. Gibbs wants both Mrs. Moore and Sgt. Caine brought in tomorrow, but they are not to know why. They'll be playing Gibbs' favorite game, musical interrogation rooms.

Tony and McGee are walking through Quantico on the way to pick up Sgt. Caine. McGee feels everyone is staring at him. Tony chides him for not listening to him; McGee says that if he did listen to Tony, Gibbs would have fired him. Tony raises his hand to head-smack McGee but stops. McGee asks him why. Tony spins a yarn about feeling sorry for the new guy, but then reveals the real reason: it would be like touching a leper. Tony and McGee pick up Sgt. Caine who asks about the accident. He is informed it was no accident and he tells them that the drunk must have overheard that Moore was going to be filming up there in the morning. Does NCIS need him to ID the drunk? Nope, they want to know how Sgt. Moore reacted when he found out Sgt. Caine was sleeping with his wife. Caine asks if she told them and McGee shows him the video tape footage on his cell phone. They arrest him.

Mrs. Moore is sitting with Kate at her desk in the squad room. She doesn't understand why she had to come in to pick up her husband's effects. Gibbs offers her a bottle of water. They ask what kind of man her husband was, was he jealous? At that moment, Tony and McGee bring Caine through the squad room in handcuffs. Where do you want him, boss? Interrogation room 1. Mrs. Moore does not understand what is going on, but Gibbs assures her she will tell him. Mrs. Moore goes to interrogation room 2.

Abby calls Gibbs down to her lab to show him the end of the video tape. It looks like Moore slipped and fell. The killer taped over the ending but there are a couple of seconds of the original tape there. Abby explains to Gibbs how she will attempt to clean it up so it is viewable. Gibbs only wants to know when. Abby tells him he doesn't have to take the fun out of everything and that it will take a few hours. Gibbs tells her she did a good job, but that she only has 20 minutes. As she protests, he tells her to get McGee to help her.

In the observation room we see the two interrogation rooms side-by-side on the monitor. Kate admits to Tony that she may have to agree with him about the sexes. It's Biology 101, he tells her. Kate asks Tony if he thinks she's attractive. Sure he responds. So why hasn't he ever? "Because I know you."

Gibbs walks into the interrogation room with Caine. Caine is scratching, it seems he has poison ivy. Gibbs inquires about the length of Caine's and Moore's friendship. They did boot camp together in San Diego. "A Hollywood Marine" Gibbs says derisively. Then he asks just when did Caine start screwing Moore's wife.

Gibbs is now in the interrogation room with Mrs. Moore. Mrs. Moore doesn't understand why she is there. She knows Caine didn't do it, because he was with her that morning. "By with me, you mean in the same sleeping bag?"

Caine is vehemently denying that charge. She's not lying to protect him, but because she's insane. After Moore left to film the sunrise, Caine went to take a shower. He was gone an hour and she was at the camp site when he returned. So she had an hour to kill Moore? No way. Oh, so then you had an hour to kill Moore?

Mrs. Moore doesn't believe Caine would say that about her so Gibbs orders Kate to play back the tape of Caine's recent remarks. Gibbs asks if Mrs. Moore really believed Caine loved her. Their affair started when Moore was in Iraq. Gibbs looks away from her in disgust.

Gibbs meets Tony out in the hallway. Now is the time to put the two of them in the same room. Gibbs is going to get more coffee. Gibbs, Kate, and Tony are in the observation room watching Mrs. Moore and Caine in the interrogation room. Caine says it was just a fling that should never have happened, she asks why he said he loved her then. Why did he kill Moore, if not to be with her. Caine screams at her to stop saying that and then she tells him that she's pregnant and the baby is his. Tony thinks this show is better than cable. Kate wants to know which one is telling the truth. Gibbs just drinks his coffee.

Abby and McGee are working on the video tape. It plays and the image is out of focus but McGee makes some tweaks. We hear Moore say "is that you Roger" and then we see a baseball bat come into the frame, followed by Runion's face.

Up in the squad room, McGee is showing them how Runion did it. His trailer never left the rest stop, but Runion did. Abby did some video magic and now you can see Runion's shadow moving back into the trailer. It was 4 miles round trip on foot. Kate gets off the phone with the sheriff with the news that Runion posted bail on the pot charge and he's out of jail. Gibbs is ready to go pick him up. What about Mrs. Moore and Sgt. Caine? "Let 'em suffer for a while. I think Sgt. Moore would appreciate that."

Runion is packing up to leave. The dog is barking and bounding between the pick-up truck and the trailer. Runion heads into the trailer as the team pulls up. Runion goes into the trailer and comes back out with an automatic weapon and starts firing at the NCIS vehicle. The team takes shelter behind the car doors and return fire. Gibbs advises Runion to give up but Runion goes into the trailer and breaks out the window to start firing again. The team is outgunned and Runion is not going back to prison. Kate has a plan, but Gibbs has a better idea. Gibbs leans around the car door and whistles. The dog comes running to Gibbs and hops into the car. Gibbs advises Kate and Tony to cover their ears, takes aim, and shoots the propane tank attached to the trailer. It explodes and the entire trailer goes up in flames. "I think you got him, boss" Tony says. Kate is cuddling the dog and asking what they're going to do with it. Gibbs looks at her and she says no way. Tony offers to take the dog and reaches in to pet the dog, who growls and snaps at Tony. "Good dog. I think I'll call you Tony." "It's a bitch, Kate."

Back in the squad room, Kate and Abby are talking about whether or not Tony likes Kate. Tony is walking by, hears this, and ducks down to continue eavesdropping. Not her usual type says Kate, but cute. Adorable says Abby. Maybe we could share Tony. Tony gets a huge grin on his face and starts to stand up. Tony the dog catches sight of him and starts barking like crazy. The dog has a pretty pink bow on and Kate and Abby are petting her. They tell Tony he can come out now and ask if he got the dog food. Tony says no as he reaches in to pet the dog, who bites Tony's finger. Abby has a studded dog collar for little Tony and Kate is thrilled because now they can tell them apart. Tony says at least he doesn't hang out with married people. Kate asks Abby to tell Tony that men and women can just be friends. Abby agrees with Kate. "Without having sex?" Tony asks. "Oh no, they'll have sex" is Abby's response. Kate is horrified. Abby doesn't believe that Kate never had sex with a friend. Tony smirks. "What is wrong with you people" Kate asks. Gibbs thinks that's a good question. He also wants to know what they did to the dog. Kate says they're taking care of her unless Gibbs wants her. That's a definite no. They put the dog on the floor and she starts eating. Tony starts looking for his ball cap. Kate and Abby deny any knowledge of its whereabouts. Gibbs looks around and does a double take. He sees the dog, complete with pink bow and studded dog collar, eating out of Tony's ball cap. And there is Gibbs' half-amused smile again.

Summary: NCIS starts the investigation after petty officer Manda King is found dead in the bartender's bed. The suspect is the owner of the competing club where Manda's sister sings.

We see a man waking up in bed with his lady friend. As he cuddles up to her, he notices that she is freezing cold. We hear a knock on the door and see blood all over the man's hand as he moves to get up and answer the door. He sees the blood and rolls his lady friend over to see that she is quite dead and he leaps from the bed in surprise. The knocking becomes a little more insistent. The man opens the door to find two police officers. The police officers see a man with blood all over his face.

Tony and Kate enter autopsy squabbling about Tony eating some of Kate's food without asking. Ducky is performing an autopsy and tells them to show respect, this is a place of peace and dignity. Tony makes a remark about Kate who gives him a shot in the gut with her elbow. Kate stalks up to Ducky and tells him that they need a mediator, or she will have to go to Employee Relations. Tony likens that to tattling, but Kate disagrees. Tony calls it the adult version of "I'm telling Mommy." Kate calls him juvenile and it very quickly disintegrates into a volley of "Am not" "Are so" exchanges. Ducky continues to work on the autopsy with Mr. Palmer's help, doing his best to ignore them.

Kate tells Ducky they need an unofficial mediator. Ducky recommends Gibbs, but realizes that probably won't work. Kate says they thought of McGee but neither of them have any respect for McGee so they thought of Ducky. Ducky is delighted to be third on their short list. He takes comfort in the thought that he beat out Abby. Turns out they just came from Abby who turned them down. Ducky sighs and says "he is busy, but" and motions with his head at Mr. Palmer who grabs up some blood samples and disappears to take them to Abby.

Ducky is very busy, but he's flattered that they would trust their relationship to him. He likens it to marriage counseling, which sets off all sorts of alarms for both Kate and Tony. Ducky is looking forward to helping them. He starts to tell them about his study of psychology at the University of Edinburgh, but Kate cuts him off to tell him her side of the story. Kate left her desk for a moment and when she came back Tony was eating half of her tuna fish sandwich. Before Ducky can say a word, Tony is making hand gestures that indicate Kate is crazy and overreacting. "See, I'm hungry. We're buddies. It shouldn't be a big deal. It's not a big deal. But little miss tighty twisty pants blows everything out of proportion and it becomes a major deal." Kate is horrified by Tony's description of their problem. He ate her entire lunch. Both Kate and Tony are imploring Ducky to tell the other one that they are right. Ducky thinks the problem lies a little deeper in their relationship. "There's clearly a latent sibling rivalry being expressed by your adolescent and sexually charged bickering." As he speaks, Ducky is slowly backing up and away from the two of them who are pursuing him across the room. "It all stems from a desperate desire to please a father figure, and I think we all know what that is," Ducky continues. Tony and Kate have Ducky cornered in front of his desk. Kate doesn't understand what this has to do with her sandwich and Tony denies any father figure being involved.

Ducky is saved by the father figure as Gibbs comes into autopsy looking for Tony and Kate. They have a dead petty officer and they need to get going. Tony and Kate leave autopsy each claiming a chore to do with the other claiming they've all ready done it. "There are clearly issues here," Ducky says to the closing elevator doors. "We need to meet twice a week. At least."

The local LEO is giving a report on the body of PO Manda King. They have Willie Taylor in custody. Willie tends bar at Sugar Street. Ducky's initial cause of death would be the stab wounds. Ducky found something around Manda's nares. Gibbs isn't sure that he has nares, but Mr. Palmer assures him that all mammals do; they are your nostrils. The sample is to go to Abby. Mr. Palmer tries to explain to Gibbs that he didn't mean to imply that Gibbs didn't know what nares were, but Gibbs ignores him and asks for the time of death. Ducky lists all the reasons why it will be difficult to be precise but Gibbs wants an answer. Ducky tells him 0330 to 0500. The LEO tells them they had an anonymous 911 call at 5:30 about a woman screaming in this apartment. Ducky amends his time of death to 0530. Gibbs tasks McGee with finding the anonymous caller.

Mr. Palmer notes that the body has been moved and the LEO tells them that the suspect admitted to rolling her over. Tony has found the waste basket and calls Gibbs over to look at the evidence of a night of lots of passion. Those also get bagged and sent to Abby. Tony drops that task squarely into the probie's hands. Kate reports in on her conversation with Manda's CO. She was a good sailor, straight laced and was on track to be promoted to the personal yeoman to the captain. That doesn't track with what they see at the scene of the crime. Manda told her shipmates she had business in Norfolk, but not what it was.

Gibbs is interrogating Willie in the local police station. Willie insists that Manda is not the girl he took home last night. Gibbs finds it a bit hard to believe that he went to bed with one woman and woke up with another. Tony and Kate are in the observation room and Tony remarks that he hates when that happens, it's never pretty. Kate gives him a dirty look and he apologizes. Kate writes it down and informs Tony that she's keeping a journal so she can tell Ducky.

Willie tells Gibbs that the knife wasn't his, he carries a Swiss Army knife. He only had a couple of drinks, yet his blood alcohol level was .12 percent. Willie admits to having a few more drinks than he said. Bartenders act friendly and the patrons buy them drinks. Willie met Manda in the parking lot where she was looking for her keys. Willie hadn't seen her before and he just thought "damn he was a lucky bastard." Gibbs asks if the lucky bastard got the woman's name. "Manda." What a coincidence. The dead sailor they found in his bed was named Manda. Willie still insists that was not the woman he slept with. Willie doesn't have a last name or phone number. Things just progressed really quickly from a kiss to going back to his place. There are no witnesses who can verify Willie's version of the story.

Willie insists they just had a good time. The cop says they found traces of meth in Willie's blood. Gibbs wonders if Manda had meth as well. Willie denies doing drugs with Manda. Willie gets very frustrated and insists that this is not the girl he slept with. Gibbs looks at Willie and at the picture and starts to believe Willie is telling the truth.

Gibbs, Kate, and Tony come in to Abby's lab; McGee is all ready there. Gibbs wants the condoms tested both inside and outside. Gibbs wants to make sure that the outside DNA matches Manda's. Tony tells Abby that the suspect is claiming that Manda is not the girl he slept with. Abby says that happens to girls too. You go to bed with some guy whose all dark and gnarly and you wake up next to someone who works in a bank and has fake tattoos. McGee takes the criticism a little personally saying he used to work in a bank. Abby assures him that his tat is real and he does not disappoint. Tony and Kate exchange a look and turn simultaneously to look at Abby and McGee. McGee realizes this isn't the time to be discussing this and moves on to report to Gibbs on the anonymous phone call, it was made from a pay phone outside Willie's apartment.

Gibbs is holding the evidence case with the murder weapon. There were no prints which is odd; he sleeps with her, he stabs her, and yet there are no prints. The blood on the knife is Manda's and Abby is running a tox screen on it. The powder Ducky found in her nose was meth and Abby is pretty sure they'll find meth in her blood. Kate wonders why a straight laced PO would OD on meth. Tony says maybe she wasn't so straight laced. Everyone has a funky side, except for Kate. This earns Tony another shot in the gut from Kate's elbow. Tony quickly tells Gibbs that he's sure that he doesn't have a funky side either. Gibbs moving on, they need to find out the truth about Manda King.

Manda's father is in the hospital, dying of end stage lung cancer. His other daughter is caring for him. Manda has been at sea for 8 months so they really don't know if she's seeing anyone. Gibbs promises the father that they will make sure Manda's murderer is punished. The father describes Manda as a hard worker who dedicated her life to raising her younger sister, Samantha. Samantha tells her father that Manda was promoted to captain's yeoman. Gibbs tells them about finding the drug residue in Manda's nose. Samantha insists that's a lie. She and her father refuse to believe it. Samantha doesn't think her father needs to hear this. Gibbs needs to know who Manda really was in order to find her killer, but her father insists she was a good girl.

Back in Abby's lab, the DNA tests are not finished yet but Abby found an answer using blood typing. The sample on the outside of the condoms does not match Manda King, so she did not have sex with Willie Taylor. Willie was set up.

In autopsy, Ducky is explaining the actual cause of death to Gibbs. The knife did not hit anything fatal and she did not bleed to death or as Ducky likes to say there was no exsanguination. It's a lovely word and he can't help saying it, he tells Gibbs. She was stabbed after she was dead. She died from the overdose. Gibbs called it an accidental overdose, but Ducky corrected him. There was so much meth in her system it had to have been a suicide. Tony pokes his head into autopsy to tell Gibbs that Willie is in the building.

In interrogation, Gibbs is wondering if Willie knows why he's here. "Yeah," he says. "I'm a ping pong ball. They serve me to you and you smack me right back." No, Gibbs informs him, they know he's telling the truth. PO King OD'd, someone stabbed her, and then put her in Willie's bed. Who would do that to Willie? Now that they know Willie is completely innocent, he wants an apology. Gibbs tells him he's getting to slide on the meth charge, that should be good enough. It doesn't seem to be to Willie so Gibbs gets up and leaves. Willie catches him before the door closes to tell him that the bar where he works, Sugar Street, needs the sailors to stay in business. If NCIS ties the murder of a sailor to him, Sugar Street will close. Who benefits from that? A man named Ian Hitch who owns a bar called Teaz. Sugar Street is Teaz' only real competition. This is the kind of stunt that Hitch would pull.

Hitch's nickname is Bulldog because, according to Tony, a bulldog bites you in the ass and never lets go. Hitch was charged with manslaughter twice in Manchester, England, but never convicted. McGee has heard of Teaz, and that they have very hot dancers, but he never went. Honest. Kate is sure that Tony is going to beg to take the lead on this case. What Tony was going to say was that Hitch probably used one of his dancers to seduce Willie and if Willie can identify her, they'll have an in. Tony is now chronicling Kate's opinion of him for their sessions with Ducky. Gibbs has no patience with this. "You done?" he asks. "Almost," Tony answers. "Done or fired are the choices." Tony is done.

Gibbs does not want Willie anywhere near Hitch. McGee recommends pulling their names from their W2s and getting pictures from the DMV. Tony explains how the dancers work for tips and their names, Tiffany Glitter, etc., will not be on their driver's licenses. Then he says he really should take the lead on this, nearly stopping as he realizes he has fallen into Kate's trap. Kate and Gibbs both laugh at him.

Tony and Kate are at Teaz wearing glasses that have cameras in them. Abby is up in MTAC receiving their signals and capturing their images. They start with Tony who is watching a dancer's bottom as she gyrates. "Well, what do you know" says Gibbs. "DiNozzo is finally looking where he is supposed to be looking." Tony heard that. Abby tells Tony to look at their faces as she does screen captures of the images. Tony has to be reminded to move on. Tony is having a great time, even though Gibbs keeps reminding him that he can see Tony. Kate has to get closer to get her pictures. Gibbs directs Tony to a back booth and they get a picture of Hitch. McGee runs the facial recognition software and verifies that it is Hitch. The DJ introduces the featured singer, Jade, who turns out to be Samantha King. Tony is bobbing his head up and down in time to the music and Gibbs has to tell him to stop it so MTAC can see what's going on. Jade is a big hit in the club.

Kate approaches Jade as she leaves the club. She wants to know why Samantha is signing the day after her sister is murdered. Jade doesn't answer and glances over her shoulder at a couple of men watching them. Tony won't let her leave until they get some answers. The bouncers call for reinforcements and go over to stop Kate and Tony. Tony pulls his gun on them and tells them that Lulu (Kate) wants to sign Jade to a recording contract. Tony also gets verification of how Hitch got his nickname. Jade assures them that Hitch would not have killed Manda, even though she wanted Samantha to leave this life. Kate calls Tony Bruce and says they're going, Jade isn't interested.

Back at the squad room, the team is showing Willie the pictures of the dancers. Willie is enjoying the view and tells them that he doesn't know, he sleeps with a lot of women. Tony tells him he's a Morman, while Gibbs just rolls his eyes. Willie gets flustered by Tony's remark and picks out a possible suspect, but claims he was really drunk. Gibbs forcibly sits Willie down and tells him he's going to have to do better than that. Willie says he's doing the best he can, but Gibbs gives him the look, and Willie starts getting serious with the photos. Willie identifies one woman as a strong possibility, Summer Diamond. Gibbs is still unhappy about the "I think" part of Willie's answer. Tony goes into a little speech about how there's always something about a woman you remember, even 20 years later. Kate groans and Willie is confused, he thought Tony was a Morman. Willie remembers that the woman had a bulldog tattooed on her butt. Tony knew there was something and starts to tell a story about this woman who squeaked. Kate gets offended and asks if he wants to tell that story to Ducky. Gibbs assures Kate that Ducky has all ready heard this story, everyone has heard this story, and Tony can tell it to Kate while they go and pick up Summer Diamond. The only one who wants to hear the story is Willie, and he doesn't get to.

Summer is in the interrogation room with Gibbs. She does not recognize the photo of Willie. She does not go to Sugar Street. She works 6 nights a week at Teaz and does not go clubbing on her one night off. Gibbs shows her a photo of the bulldog tat but Summer assures him she dances practically naked so hundreds of men have seen that. Summer denies having slept with Willie. She also tells Gibbs that every single dancer has that tat; it means they're in Bulldog's crew. "I'd have thought he'd use a bite mark," Gibbs replies. Abby knocks on the door and comes in to take a DNA mouth swab.

Abby and Gibbs are in the hallway when Ducky comes up telling Jethro he needs him right now. Ducky missed something in his initial examination of Manda King. Ducky found a mark, a perfect circle, in Manda's nose, probably made by a funnel. Someone stuck a funnel in her nose and poured meth into her. It wasn't suicide but instead "a horrible, painful death."

Kate is having lunch with Samantha King and telling her exactly how her sister was killed. Manda was restrained and meth was forced down her nose and throat until her heart failed. Willie has been framed for this murder and they think it is by Hitch. Samantha again protests that Hitch wouldn't do it. Why not asks Kate. If Sugar Street is declared off limits, Teazwill get a huge surge of new business. But Kate knows that's not why Hitch did it. Mrs. King died when Samantha was 3 and Manda raised her. When Manda found out Samantha was hooked up with Hitch, she was determined to stop it. Hitch told Samantha that he had record company connections and would make her a star. She believed Hitch; Manda did not. Samantha cannot leave because she signed a contract. Manda was trying to get her out of the contract but Hitch had her killed.

Kate offers to help Samantha, but Samantha knows she cannot leave Hitch, he owns her. Samantha says Hitch will get away with the murder and then Hitch phones her. Against Kate's advice, Samantha answers her phone. She tries to lie to him, but he's right outside the restaurant watching her. Kate pulls her weapon in anticipation of problems but Hitch identifies her as Lulu, assuring her that Jade all ready has a manager. Jade tries to agree, but is told to keep quiet.

Hitch wants to know what labels Lulu scouts for. Kate tells him it's none of his business, but he disagrees when she's after his property. Hitch is holding Jade's hand very firmly in his own. Jade is only available to Hitch and Lulu and Bruce might want to leave town, tonight. Hitch pulls Jade up from the table and walks out with her.

Gibbs walks into the squad room carrying his usual cup of coffee. He tells Kate she should have taken back-up with her, but Kate did not expect Hitch to show up. Gibbs keeps looking at Kate who assures him it won't happen again. "I know," he tells her and goes to McGee, wondering how Hitch found Samantha. Samantha's cell phone belongs to Hitch so he is most likely using the GPS in the phone. Gibbs calls Hitch paranoid and Tony says that kinda reminds him of someone. Gibbs looks at him, but Tony says Hitch should be paranoid about losing Samantha, with her voice she could be the next Brandy. Gibbs doesn't know who that is, Tony and McGee do. Kate feels the point is that Hitch will kill Samantha before he would let her go. Gibbs phone rings; Norfolk Homicide found the body of a young woman, hit and run victim, with Gibbs' card in her bra.

The victim's name is Keisha Scott, also known as Summer Diamond. Gibbs tells the detective that they had her in NCIS for interrogation yesterday. Kate keeps on, saying they believe she is the woman who had sex with Willie. There is no way this was an accident. They tell the detective that Ian Hitch is involved; the detective recognizes Bulldog's name. He says that explains the lack of witnesses, Bulldog has this part of the town in his pocket. Gibbs wonders if the detective is also in Bulldog's pocket. Gibbs is taking Bulldog down. The detective assures Gibbs that he may find who did the hit and run, but he won't be able to connect it to Bulldog. The detective says Bulldog's lawyer will have him out as soon as he takes him in. Gibbs asks for jurisdiction and the detective gives it to him. "How soon can you have the rest of your team down here?" he wonders. Pretty soon Gibbs assures him as he whistles and gestures. The NCIS evidence truck and Ducky's van immediately pull into view.

Tony says there is no way it was an accident because Summer is practically naked and it was only 35 degrees out this morning. Ducky points out bruising on the shoulders to Mr. Palmer, making it possible that she was shoved in front of the vehicle. As always, Ducky will know more when he gets the poor girl back home. Kate found broken glass, probably from a headlight. Gibbs hollers for McGee, telling him the locals think it was a hit and run. What does McGee think? "Me?" McGee asks. "Uh, me?" he asks again as he looks around the crime scene. "Answer the man, probie" is Tony's advice. McGee doesn't think it was a hit and run. "Why?" Gibbs wants to know. There are no skid marks before or after the body. Whoever hit her didn't slow down. Gibbs gives a small, satisfied smile then dispatches Kate and Tony to pick up Samantha, making sure her cell phone is off, and not telling her about Summer.

Back in the squad room, the picture of Hitch is up on the plasma. Gibbs wants to know where he was when Manda was killed and when Summer took her half-naked walk. McGee is on it. Kate and Tony exit the elevator with Samantha, who is not really happy about being there. She's worried that Hitch will discover where she is. Tony says no problem and tasks McGee with rigging her cell phone GPS to show that she is at the hospital with her dying father from noon to 1730. Samantha tells Gibbs she isn't going to talk so can she go, but Gibbs assures her she isn't here to talk, but rather to see. "What?" Samantha is surprised. "A friend" Gibbs assures her.

Down in autopsy, they unzip Summer's body bag. Samantha is very upset but still refuses to believe it was Bulldog. Summer has a 2-year-old, not even Bulldog would do that. They assure her that Bulldog is tying up his loose ends and that if she talks, they will protect her. Samantha still refuses to talk to them. "Your sister is in the freezer, maybe you'd like to say good-bye" suggests Gibbs as he strides to an autopsy drawer and opens it. Samantha believes that Summer is on that slab because she talked to Gibbs, and she isn't going to make the same mistake. Gibbs agrees, it's not happening to her, but rather because of her. Samantha tells him that's enough and either charge her or she's leaving.

Samantha is walking out of the squad room with Gibbs, Kate, and Tony trailing behind telling her that if she leaves, they cannot protect them. McGee interrupts to tell Gibbs that Hitch has a very good alibi for Summer's murder. Bulldog was in New York promoting his club. McGee has verification of this alibi. "He always wins" Samantha says as she picks up her cell phone. "I tried to tell my sister that but she didn't listen. I hope you do before I end up dead too" and Samantha leaves.

Gibbs is down in autopsy going over the cause of Summer's death with Ducky. She had multiple fatal injuries indicative of vehicular homicide. If Ducky had to pick one, it would be internal bleeding although her neck was broken on impact. If she had survived, she would never have danced again. She also had meth and alcohol in her blood, although not enough to kill her like Manda King did. All Ducky can tell from the bruising is that someone held her very firmly. There is a procedure that Abby can use to lift prints from the dead skin but Abby needs Gibbs' approval first. Why, Gibbs wants to know. "Well, it's prohibitively expensive and rarely works," Ducky tells him. "So's getting married" shrugs Gibbs. "Do it." Ducky just laughs.

Back in the squad room, Tony is trying to rush McGee through his work. Tony's isn't just hovering around McGee, he is actually eating cookies above his head, dropping crumbs on McGee's head and brushing them off. McGee finishes and puts his results up on the plasma. Tony compliments Kate on her cooking and says just how good these cookies are. McGee asks for one and Kate opens the tin to discover one cookie left. There were a dozen in there. Tony's response "They were really good." Gibbs shows up and wants to know what they have for him. McGee has rigged Samantha's phone so that they can keep track of them. As they stand there, Gibbs helps himself to the last cookie out of Kate's tin. McGee starts to suggest that that cookie was his, but thinks better of it and explains to Gibbs exactly what he did. Samantha is 20 miles outside of Norfolk and moving. "Good work, McGee. That's a good job," says Gibbs and hands him the cookie. McGee admits that it was Tony's idea so Gibbs takes the cookie back and eats it himself. Kate simply stands there holding the cookie tin with a horrified look on her face. "That's so not right" Tony whispers to her as Gibbs barks out assignments. McGee is to help Abby and Tony and Kate are with him. They're going to visit Ian Hitch and bring Samantha back. Gibbs is not going to let her end up like her sister.

Abby is down in autopsy with Mr. Palmer who wants to know how this is going to work. Abby isn't quite sure since she's never done it before, but she's sure they'll figure it out together. Mr. Palmer asks Abby to call him Jimmy, which she has done, but he isn't paying any attention to anything she says, but rather staring at her with a particularly insipid look on his face. Abby is explaining that they are using super glue which should adhere to the fingerprints and then when it dries they can peel them off like a sticker. Jimmy really isn't paying attention and manages to dump over the pot of super glue and then knocks Abby over as she's trying to clean it up. Mr. Palmer puts his hands in the super glue and then helps Abby up, who is beginning to think she would be better off doing this procedure alone. It's too late for that, though, because they are now super glued together.

Abby tries to pull herself away from Mr. Palmer, who simply slides along the floor in his booties. As McGee comes into autopsy, he finds the two of them in a hug, although that certainly is not Abby's intent. McGee wants to know what Palmer is doing, but Jimmy doesn't seem able to find words, he just smiles. Abby wants acetone and band aids, FAST.

Kate is riding shotgun with Gibbs driving and she has tracked Samantha's cell phone back to Teaz. Gibbs calls for DiNozzo, who is snoring in the back seat. "I'll wake him up," sighs Kate. "No, no, I've got a better idea," Gibbs tells her. "Hold on." Gibbs floors it and then slams on the brakes. Fortunately, Tony had on his seat belt. Kate laughs while Tony mumbles something about a dream. Tony is to call Abby and see what she has for them.

In Abby's lab, Abby is lecturing McGee saying that he didn't have to yell at Mr. Palmer, now he's terrified of McGee. McGee finds that cool. Abby is lifting the prints from the bruise on the right arm and she's wondering if He-Man (McGee) has found a match for the prints from the left arm. McGee tells her he will apologize to Jimmy later just as a match pops up on the monitor. The print belongs to one of Hitch's bouncers, Richard Blue McGinty.

Tony has the information and relays it to Gibbs who floors it and leaves rubber behind.

In her dressing room, Samantha is having second thoughts about her dream. Hitch sent Blue to get her and Blue tells Samantha it's a little late for that.

The team pulls up to the club and head inside.

In Hitch's office, Hitch has discovered that Lulu isn't a talent scout after all but rather a Navy cop. Samantha says she didn't tell them anything, but Hitch pulls a gun from his desk and aims it at her.

The team is tracking her in the club using her cell phone, while Samantha is trying to convince Hitch that she isn't playing any games with her. He doesn't believe her. Hitch tells Samantha that's exactly what Summer said, did she know Summer was dead. Samantha doesn't answer, but her face gives her away.

The team hears two gun shots as they go up the stairs to enter the club. Their progress is slowed by all the dancers running from the club away from the gun shots. In the office the team finds Blue standing over Bulldog's body with Samantha in the background. Blue says Bulldog was going to kill Samantha, he didn't have a choice. Blue drops his weapon and Kate goes over to protect Samantha.

Gibbs walks in to Abby's lab with a Caf-Pow and wants to know the status of the evidence, has it gone to Norfolk yet. McGee and Abby are working on it, but there is a small problem. Summer's DNA does not match the DNA found on the outside of the condoms. They did get a partial match on the DNA from the Armed Forces DNA database, however. It's a 70 percent match.

In the hospital, Samantha is talking to her father, telling her how proud of her he will be, how everyone will know her name. Her father is telling her that he has always been proud of her and how he wished that he, no, we, would be around to see it. Manda always loved her singing. Gibbs and the team are there and they need to talk to Samantha, outside. Her father only has a few hours left to live, so Samantha wants to get back to him. Gibbs tells her this is not about Blue, but about her. They know Summer didn't set her sister up. What they don't know is if Samantha was going to split the money with Blue or use it to make a demo tape. They know everything, Manda told them. Manda's DNA is the near match to the DNA on the condoms and only a sibling could have that close of a match.

Samantha set up her own sister. They used the GPS chip in her phone to place her at the scene of both her sister's and Summer's murders. "Setting up Ian Hitch was a nice touch," Gibbs admits. It gets Samantha out of the record contract, plus she gets all of her father's money when he dies. The look of puzzlement leaves Samantha's face and instead she just looks annoyed. "She's dead and still screwing with my life," she says. "Go say goodbye to your father," Gibbs tells her. "If I were you, I'd keep lying to him."

Back in her father's room, he tells her that he always believed in her, that she's going to make it, she'll be famous, he can feel it. Then the flatline sounds and he is gone. "That's right, Daddy," she tells him. "I'm gonna be a real star." The scene ends on a shot of Gibbs' disapproving face looking in from the corridor.

Summary: When a Petty Officer working in the Intelligence receives a pair of blue eyeballs in the mail, the NCIS team starts investigating the case. The sailor commits suicide during the investigation, which leads the team to one of his lecturers, who is working for the CIA in Panama.

Beginning: A mailman puts a box in a mailbox of an apartment complex while a woman walks by while talking on the phone. She stops by her mailbox and takes out her mail, including the box and opens it while continuing to talk on the phone. When she opens the box she sees a pair of eyes and screams and drops the box.

In Autopsy: Ducky and Palmer examine the eyes. Gibbs walks in and asks what he has found so far. Ducky then asks where they came from and Gibbs says they were sent to a Petty Officer and the mailman put it in the wrong box. Ducky then says that the eyes were well preserved with the expertise of a surgeon.

In the Squadroom: Tony is sitting back in his seat and Kate thinks he's sleeping with his eyes open. He says he's meditating and Kate asks if it's about how much he drank the night before or if he's trying to remember a dates name. He says he doesn't kiss and tell, and McGee finds it hard to believe and says he knows more about Tony's sex life than his own. Tony then says that McGee doesn't have a sex life, and Kate says they should find out more about the package. Gibbs walks in and asks if anyone has anything for him and Kate mentions a donation firm. Gibbs then asks her if they are missing a pair of blue eyes and she says no. McGee then says that he contacted the post office and he's running the tracking number from the barcode. Gibbs then stands up and looks at Tony who is laying back in his chair. Tony then tells Gibbs the package was addressed to a Petty Officer on a 72 hour leave due back the next day. He also says he's a student at the Navy and Marine Corps Training Center and he's been living at that address since the year before and that nothing stands out except for a speeding ticket and he didn't pay his cable bill the week before. Gibbs then says glad that at least someone is working. Kate tells Gibbs that nobody had reported the eyes missing, and McGee says where the package was shipped from and Gibbs starts to head out. Kate asks Tony how he knew the info and he says to work smarter not harder. Tony then tells McGee to find out what ship the package was on and tells Kate to hurry up.

At the Apartment Complex: A woman tells the team that this isn't the first time the mailman put the mail in the wrong box, and that she once got a video of college girls flashing the week before. Kate asks the woman when the last time she saw the Petty Officer was, and the woman says a couple of days before. Tony then asks her what she can say about him and she says he quiet, he keeps to himself and he has a girlfriend. Gibbs then asks if him and his girlfriend live together and she says she can't tell and that she thinks he made her a key. She says it's a violation of the lease, but she looked the other way. Gibbs then asks her if they can look at the Petty Officers apartment. The woman was so shaken by the contents of the box that she says yes and then she notices that Gibbs isn't wearing a wedding ring and offers to watch that video of college girls with him. Tony then tells the woman that Gibbs is indeed single.

Inside the Petty Officer's Apartment: The team looks around and discovers that his girlfriend is dominating the apartment. Tony finds some evidence of him while Kate finds the girlfriend's clothes and questions her taste. The Petty Officer walks in and Gibbs introduces himself and explains why they are there. He says he's never been to where the package came from and he broke with his girlfriend the month earlier. He also says he doesn't know anything about eyes.

At the Apartment Complex: Kate mentions that there is open lipstick in the bathroom, and that the girlfriend is definitely living there. Gibbs then tells Kate and Tony to survey the Petty officer and starts walking when his cell phone rings. It's Abby and Ducky, Gibbs keeps walking while talking on the phone.

The Phone Call: Ducky starts talking, but then stops and tells Abby to go first and Abby tells Gibbs that the eyes are female. Ducky then says that the woman lost her eyes involuntarily. He then mentions that she was most likely poisoned and died of cardiac arrest.

In Abby's Lab: Ducky thinks that they lost the connection, Abby points out that Gibbs hung up. She then tells him he can finish telling his story to her.

In the Car: Kate looks out the windshield with binoculars and tells Tony to wake up. Tony is already awake, and Kate asks him to turn the heat up. Tony then says he can't because the exhaust will give away their position. Kate then says that she's really cold and Tony says they should press their bodies together with her naked and she says there is not enough liquor in the world for that. Kate then mentions she needs a vacation to a place warm with no cell reception and Tony mentions the tropics. Kate agrees and watches the Petty Officers window when the lights go out. They then hear gunshots and rush over to the apartment and clear the place weapons drawn and notice the girlfriend dead and a revolver on the floor.

In the Petty Officer's Apartment: Ducky examines the body and concludes the body is of a trans-sexual. He also concludes the weapon was held directly over the heart and that the death was instantaneous. Kate concludes that she was a woman trapped in a man's body and killing herself set her free.

Allan Witten), Hilary Salvatore (P.O. Jessica Smith)
Summary: The team investigates a suicide case, believing that the main reason of her death is a nervous breakdown, but Ducky believes that she was actually murdered. FBI Special Agent Fornell helps them in the investigation. The traces lead them to revelation that she was involved in a love triangle.

NCIS arrive at the petty officer's home to find her in a state of extreme anxiety concerned that somebody was after her and that she could hear voices. While Gibbs was trying to get her to talk, the Bethesda Psychiatrist responsible for the patient barged in upsetting the woman even more. She was taken back to Bethesda and sedated. Late in the evening she called NCIS saying she wanted to talk to them, but when they got there, they found her dead, apparently she'd hung herself with her bedsheets. However, back at the morgue, Ducky soon discovered she'd been smothered to death first and then hung to make it look like a suicide. Abby gives a practical display of how it was done in her garage/workshop at NCIS.

Another lead on this case was the petty officer's CO who was being investigated by the FBI, for getting himself rich on naval money through government contracts. NCIS couldn't get info on the case, so Gibbs took payback on Fornell (Gibbs a few episodes earlier had helped him get out of a tight spot when he was being framed). Turned out the CO had been having an affair with the girl and that the plan had been to use the money when he got divorced from his wife. Meanwhile it seems the petty officer had told her sorrows and plans for the money to a fellow inmate at Bethesda psychiatric wing who in turn told another.

The voices the murdered girl had been hearing were created through a radio receiver/broadcast setup hidden behind a ventilation grille in her house.

Summary: A marine is found murdered on the school campus, and the NCIS discovers a suspect immediately. However, they are back at zero point when they find the suspect murdered. Tim & Abby discover a trace in the e-mails, called "Red Cell," which leads them to believe that the marine must have been involved in a serious death game.

A marine is found murdered on the school campus with bruises all over his body. They have a suspect, another marine who has gone missing. They start getting cryptic messages which leads them to their only suspect's body. Tim and Abby discover a trace in the e-mails, called "Red Cell," which leads them to a group of marines who play with paint ball guns around campus. The marines in this group lead the team to a girl who both the dead marines knew. As Tony and Kate take the girl out to the car she explains that the Gunnery Sergeant was making her sleep with him and she had told the two dead marines and they had gone to tell him to stop and they had ended up dead. Kate and Tony rush back to the room with Gibbs and the Gunnery Sergeant in only to find it locked and hearing a fight in the room kick down the door only to find that Gibbs has subdued the Gunnery Sergeant and he tells them to arrest him.

Summary: When a young Marine is murdered in Iraq while saving people's lives, a body of a young woman is found between his belongings in his hometown, and he is considered a murderer. Gibbs believes that he is innocent and decides to prove it.

The episode opens with a young woman being let into a storage locker by the manager. The locker is rented by a friend not her. She is looking for a photo of his mother so he can be buried with it. To the woman's annoyance the manager is interested in buying the truck. He moves a tarp in the bed revealing skeletal remains.

Tony comes in, very upset because he thinks his car has been towed and he keeps being put on hold. Abby comes up to talk with Kate about their weekend plans. Much to Tony's interest they are going to a spa. Before they head to the crime scene, McGee notes that Petty Officer

Dobbs (the actual renter of the storage locker) was killed in Iraq and is up for a Silver Star. Ducky IDs the body from the locker as Nora Webb, a friend of the young woman (Emmy Pool) and PO Dobbs. She went gone missing their senior year, and the police had always suspected Dobbs was involved. Ducky estimates the time of death was around when she went missing. Lt Cmdr. Coleman arrives at NCIS to see Gibbs. Sec Nav wants JAG involved because Dobbs is up for the Silver Star and they want to make sure they don't award it to a murderer. Coleman and Gibbs butt heads, of course. Coleman passes on orders from Sec Nav: the team has 24 hours to solve this, which means no spa visit for Kate and Abby.

Kate and Gibbs go to talk to the local LEOs who say Nora was last seen leaving a party with Dobbs. They then head to the nursery her parents run. Meanwhile, Abby is missing her spa time and happily discovers Palmer knows massage. Tony catches him, headslaps him, and chastises him about sexual harassment. Abby and McGee tell Tony that he acts like Gibbs when Gibbs isn't around. Bringing her Caff-Pows, turning off the music, deeper voice, staring at her—but he doesn't have the right stare. The 24 hrs is up and Lt Cmdr Coleman is pushing for a resolution, if they don't have a result PO Dobbs' star will have to be withheld. Ducky has concluded that Nora Webb was strangled and convinces Gibbs to follow his gut. Gibbs wants to call in Emmy Pool because he feels she is hiding something. However, he is too late; the police have found her with her wrists slit.

LEOs don't want to hand over the apparent suicide to NCIS, but allow the team to look around. They say she had been depressed and on meds since Nora Webb went missing. Gibbs tracks down Lt Cmdr. Coleman to buy them some more time. He is waiting for her at her car when she finishes her morning run and convinces her to let Ducky examine Dobbs' body in order to delay the funeral and the necessity of deciding about the star. Tony and Kate have gone to talk to Nora's parents again. Her mother is helpful, explaining how hard it has been, particularly on Emmy Pool. She mentions selling the nursery and moving on. Abby has excitedly discovered that the plastic Nora's body was wrapped in has only been manufactured for 4 months, so the body must have been moved recently. She is hoping the news will please Gibbs enough for her and Kate to get some spa time. Unfortunately, Lt Cmdr Coleman relays that Sec Nav has decided not to award the Silver Star.

McGee and Gibbs realize that the person who dumped the body could have used someone else's code to gain access to the locker (Dobbs' had only been used once) and start checking the surveillance tape. Meanwhile, Lt. Cmdr. Coleman comes in to help, she wants to be around if the team pulls off a miracle. They recognize Nora's father on the tape and Abby learns that fertilizer was found on the body. Tony and Gibbs go to arrest him. He confesses that he and Emmy Pool were having an affair and Nora found out. He killed her before she could tell her mother. Petty Officer Dobbs can now receive the Silver Star. Lt. Cmdr. Coleman asks Gibbs to go to the funeral and ceremony with her, he agrees. At the end of the episode, the team is watching a car chase on TV and it's Tony's car. He is devastated when it crashes.

Production Code: 02022
Summary: When Tony opens a mysterious letter thinking it's for him, a small puff of white powder comes out, releasing a possible deadly virus. Kate calls for help and as a precaution, she and Tony are isolated in a bio-hazard isolation room. While McGee and Gibbs are determined to discover who sent the envelope and how to cure their friends before its too late for them, Tony's health gets worse.

As they enter the office, Tony is teasing Kate about having a cold and trying to give her remedies. He tells her about "socky bombing" and then is appalled that she's never heard of it. McGee chimes in that he hasn't either. Tony laments that he works with a pair of "wankers" just as Gibbs walks in and says, "And you make three, DiNozzo." Gibbs asks Kate about her cold and tells everyone he's never had a cold or the flu. Tony remarks to Kate, "If you were a bug, would attack Gibbs?"

McGee's handing out the mail and holds up an envelope with a kiss on the seal. Tony snatches it from his hand, saying that he recognizes the lips and the scent. He slits open the end, blows on the envelope to open it, and white powder erupts in his face. Gibbs climbs onto his desk and orders everyone to evacuate. Kate notifies security, and McGee reminds everyone of what to do as Tony rinses off his hands and head. After everyone has evacuated, Kate calls out, "Let's hit the showers, Tony!" Tony looks up and replies, "I thought you'd never ask!"

As the team showers, Tony wonders who would send him Anthrax, to which Kate replies, "Pick a girl, Tony!" Tony laments the burning of all his name brand clothing. McGee tries to cheer Tony up by saying that the powder might not be Anthrax, it could be small pox, bubonic plague, cholera. Tony interrupts him before he can go any further, and McGee switches to other less-harmful powders—foot powder, face powder, talcum powder. Suddenly, Tony remembers honey dust, a gift he gives to women at Christmas time. Gibbs chimes in that "it makes a woman's skin feel silky smooth" and when kissed tastes like honey. He received a box of it last Christmas with no card. Tony winces, and admits that the post office must have screwed up, giving Gibbs honey dust instead of a bottle of Jack Daniels. Kate suddenly remembers that the post office irradiates their mail, and if it has DNA, it dies. Tony thinks he's off the hook, but Gibbs brings him back to reality by saying, "Unless the post office screwed up again!"

In the autopsy lab, the team is getting their blood drawn while Gibbs is chastising McGee for not giving him the letter. Kate reminds him that Tony snatched it from McGee's hand. Gibbs tries to leave autopsy, but Ducky won't let him. Gibbs hollers that he's been scrubbed, sanitized, and maybe even sterilized, but Ducky is adamant. The medical team comes in to collect Tony, and Gibbs insists that Kate go along as well, since she's fighting a cold. Kate and Tony leave, arguing as they go.

In her lab, Abby gives a sample of the powder to the CDC, then puts a sample through one of her machines. She cartwheels around her lab while waiting for the results, which Gibbs sees via the monitor in autopsy. Abby tells Gibbs it'll be a couple of hours before she's able to determine the identity of the powder.

At the naval hospital, Tony remarks to Kate that her urine is too dark, which completely disgusts Kate. A Dr. Brad Pitt introduces himself and makes a joke about his name, which makes Kate laugh. As they follow the doctor to the isolation room, Tony remarks that Kate would have elbowed him for a joke like that, and Kate obliges him with an elbow to the stomach. In the isolation room, Tony and Kate are introduced to Nurse Emma, with whom Tony immediately starts to flirt. The doctor informs them he's starting them on prophylaxis, which causes Tony to snicker. Annoyed, Kate tells him that it's for the prevention of disease, and Tony replies, "That's why I use 'em!" Nurse Emma begins to laugh, and Kate admonishes, "Don't encourage him." Tony follows Kate to the bed next to hers in order to annoy her, but the doctor suggests that they maintain some distance.

Back at NCIS, Abby is discussing the letter with Gibbs, telling him it's SWAK—Sealed With A Kiss. She asks Gibbs if he ever got a love letter, and Gibbs returns with the question, "Does a 'Dear John' letter count?" Abby replies that she feels sorry for Gibbs. She discovers that the letter has a return address. Gibbs tells McGee to use Ducky's PDA to make a note of the address and sends Palmer to get replacement weapons and cell phones. Palmer asks, "Pistols?" Annoyed, Gibbs yells, "No, Palmer! Crossbows if you think they'll work better!" Gibbs orders Abby to open the letter, and she discovers a very unique, traceable paper with calligraphy writing on it. Meanwhile, McGee exclaims to Gibbs that he can't find Ducky's PDA, to which Gibbs yells, "It's a pad and pencil, McGee!" Gibbs asks Ducky to read the letter. As he does, they learn that the powder was a genetically altered strain of Y. pestis, which in Latin means plague. This particular strain would cause pneumonic plague since it was breathed into the lungs. Abby counters that it might not be alive since it needs constant moisture, and McGee remarks that it also would have been irradiated by the post office. Gibbs reminds McGee that he received honey dust!

By reading the letter further, Ducky discovers that the Y. pestis has been altered to be antibiotic-resistant. He also discovers that an antidote will be made available if NCIS will make public the results of a certain case. Suddenly, Abby exclaims, "Uh oh." She found a moisture strip inside the envelope. Ducky remarks that the incubation period is less than a day, and that it usually kills in 12 hours. McGee discovers that he can't access the case file they need, so he and Gibbs leave autopsy, despite Ducky's objections.

At the naval hospital, Tony remarks that he feels like the king of cool, and Kate groans, knowing that he's thinking of a movie. Tony explains that Travolta is the king of cool, and he starred in the movie "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble." Kate pleads with Tony not to tell her about any more movies. Tony agrees, then proceeds to talk to Nurse Emma in the observation room about the movie.

Gibbs and McGee enter Abby's lab in bubble suits, so as not to contaminate anyone or anything. McGee uses Abby's computer to look up the case and discovers that it was a rape case. Gibbs wants to talk to the investigating officer, but they can't because it was Agent Pacci, who's now dead. Gibbs reads that the case involved a senior college student who was raped at a hotel where a crew of midshipmen was staying. However, DNA evidence cleared all of them. The case was never solved. Ducky calls up Cassie to help them since she was Pacci's probie.

As Gibbs and Abby study the office surveillance video, they realize that Tony came back late. Gibbs remarks that Tony always does his best work at night. Abby continues to examine the letter and discovers that there's a SWAK on the inside of the letter as well. Gibbs orders her to irradiate the letter and pull it out for a closer look.

Tony ponders whether the UV lights in the isolation room are actually helping. Kate argues with him, and he eventually relents. Kate then asks Tony if he's afraid. Tony scoffs, asking if she's ever seen him act afraid. Kate admits that she hasn't, but they're used to dangers that they can confront. She comments that anyone with half a brain, then stops and says, "Never mind. You're not afraid." Meanwhile, the doctor comes into the observation room to inform Nurse Emma that Tony's blood is infected with Y. pestis.

In the lab, Abby runs a test on the lipstick and discovers that the predominant ingredient was lead, which explains why the bacteria was protected from the post office's irradiation. As she examines the letter, Cassie arrives, and Ducky informs them that everyone's blood is fine except Tony's, and he doesn't have much time. Cassie catches up on the investigation and she says she knows who they're supposed to think sent the letter.

As the doctor examines Tony, they realized they played each other in basketball—Michigan vs. OSU. Nurse Emma informs Kate that Tony's been infected, and the doctor breaks the news to Tony that he has the plague. Kate yells at Tony that only he would get a disease from the Dark Ages. Tony asks why she's so upset, and Kate confirms that she's infected, too. Tony is deeply sorry. Kate promises to make his life hell for this. Tony comes back by bringing up some movies having to do with plague, and Kate returns an insult by informing Emma that Tony thinks speaking Italian turns women on. She walks away, sneezing, and Tony yells, "If I catch your cold, I'll be very pissed!" Tony asks the doctor if Kate will be okay.

Back at NCIS, Cassie rehashes the details of the case. She was permitted to interview the victim, but the woman had traumatic amnesia. It was the woman's mother that accused the sailors; the mother was and still is the head of a pharmaceutical company with the best microbiologists working for her. Gibbs sends Ducky to Bethesda to check on Kate and Tony and leaves with Cassie to find the mother.

The doctor questions what Kate is doing staying with Tony; after all, she might get infected. Kate insists that Tony needs hope. Tony hollers out, "Did you tell Dr. Brad about the wet t-shirt contest?" Kate counters with "Did you tell Nurse Emma about the transsexual you tongued?" Embarrassed, Tony argues, "Never happened." He begins coughing up blood and his breathing becomes labored.

As Gibbs and Cassie enter the pharmaceutical company, Gibbs instructs Cassie to serve the warrant while he shoves his Sig in her face. They make their way into the mother's office where she is waiting for them. She remarks that it's about time and insists that they re-open her daughter's case and admit that a midshipman raped her daughter. Gibbs warns her that this dramatic act will send her to prison for the rest of her life. When he sees that she doesn't care, he realizes that she's dying. She wants the truth to help her daughter heal, or she won't give the antidote. Gibbs lies and says they don't need the antidote because the post office destroyed the bacteria. He arrests the mother, and she gives up the name of the doctor who made the bacteria. Gibbs races to his lab.

At the hospital, Tony is getting worse, but he's still making jokes. Kate remarks to Emma that his humor's always been sexist, juvenile, raunchy. Emma interjects, "Funny!"

The microbiologist tells Gibbs that there's no antidote, but once a person's infected, the bacterium dies after 32 hours. However, the damage is done, and the person has only a 15% chance of survival.

Tony has developed full-blown pneumonia and is becoming cyanotic. He apologizes for torturing Kate and asks why she's not sick. She remarks that she's stronger than him, and he argues with her that she is not until he begins coughing uncontrollably. The doctor orders Kate to leave. Kate leaves, crying, and sobs in Ducky arms that Tony is dying. Gibbs comes in to tell everyone that the bacteria is dead and orders Tony to listen; he will not die. Gibbs lightly taps Tony on his forehead and repeats the order, to which Tony agrees. Gibbs leaves, giving Tony his new cell phone, and suggests that he change the number since women keep calling for 'Spanky.'

Gibbs meets Cassie and the victim, Sarah, at another hospital, where he discovers that the mother went berserk in the car, so Cassie took her straight to the hospital. Apparently, the tumor in her brain is making her crazy. Sarah apologizes and says she tried to tell her mom that it wasn't a midshipman because they were all cleared. She insists that she still doesn't remember. Gibbs gives her a penetrating stare and asks, "Are you sure?" In a very unsure voice, Sarah replies, "Yes. . ." Cassie looks at her and states, "You know, don't you?" Sarah breaks down and confesses that she wasn't raped at all. She was at the hotel with her boyfriend, and he tied her, naked, to the bed, then left to get food. He never came back because he was killed in a hit and run. When she was discovered, she made up the story to save herself and her family from embarrassment.

At the naval hospital, Kate asks to sleep in the isolation room with Tony. She thinks Tony's asleep, but Tony mumbles something about how this reminds of the end of the movie "Alien." Kate laughs.

Summary: A group of serial terrorists seek revenge and send Ari (guest star Rudolf Martin) on an assignment to kill Gibbs. The NCIS team goes on a hunt after him, but when they discover that Ari has a second plan, it is already too late. . . the NCIS team will have to face the death of one of their team members. . .

Two men are killed in a car, one of which was in the Navy. The team are called in only to find that there is a bomb attached to the car and they run for it and Tony only just makes it out. They investigate this and Gibbs goes out for a coffee and meets Ari. Ari tells Gibbs how he is meant to kill him but if he can find a terror cell that he won't. Ari has left a bomb under the table and when he leaves Gibbs takes it and runs round the corner and throws it into a dumpster before it explodes. When he gets back to headquarters he finds that Fornell has already been there and told the team that Ari is after him. The director wants to talk to him and tells him that he is not following Ari but sticking to investigating the deaths of the two men. The director also puts Gibbs under protection under the authority of Kate. The whole team stay at headquarters that night. The following day they find that there is a terrorist cell planning to bomb several ships coming into port that day with thousands of people waiting for their families to come home. They also find that Ari is the leader of the terrorist cell and used the hands of one of the dead men to get access to a weapon that they activate. Gibbs phones Ari and Abby gets his position. The team race to an area with old warehouses in. McGee stays by the car to try to disarm the weapon and Gibbs, Kate and Tony go into the warehouse. There is a gun battle and they make it onto the roof where Gibbs has to shoot the control for the weapon to stop it as someone has shot through McGee's computer. Kate then sees a shooter about to shoot Gibbs and she jumps in front of him and takes the bullet. Gibbs and Tony kill the shooter and then go and see whether Kate is OK. The bullet was caught by her vest and they stand her up. Ari gets onto a roof top a couple of buildings away and gets a clear shot and kills Kate just after they have stood her up. It finishes with Tony and Gibbs trying to see who shot Kate and where from.

Season Three

Kill Ari (1)

Season 3
Episode Number: 47
Season Episode: 1

Originally aired: Tuesday September 20, 2005 on CBS
Writer: Donald P. Bellisario
Director: Dennis Smith
Recurring Role: Pancho Demmings (Gerald Jackson), Alan Dale (NCIS Director Tom Morrow), Lauren Holly (NCIS Director Jenny Shepard)
Guest Stars: Sasha Maxime (Virginia State Police Officer), AJ Tannen (Mossad Agent), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David)
Production Code: 03002
Summary: After the terrorist's attack, the NCIS team is shocked and is trying to cope with Kate's sudden death, each in their own way. Now, their mission is to collect all the possible info on Ari and find a way to stop him before he does any more damage. Meanwhile, while feeling guilty over Kate's death, Gibbs is informed that the NCIS director is leaving, and the replacement is Jenny Shepard, a woman Gibbs worked with in the past and had a romantic history with.

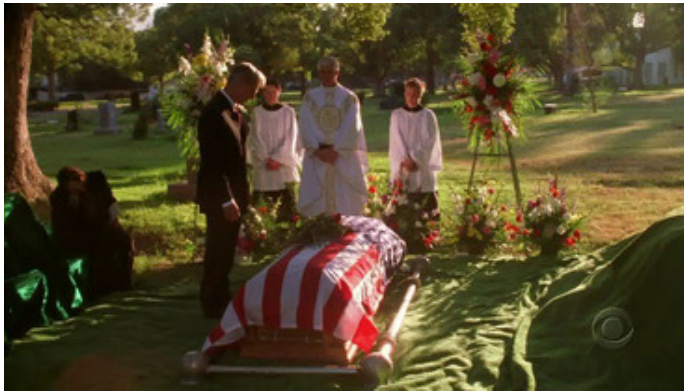

All three remaining agents (Gibbs, Tony, and McGee) as well as Abby and Ducky "daydream" about Kate while trying to get leads on Ari. They "talk" to her, but it's all in their imagination. Tony and Ziva get off to a bad start when she walks into the bullpen when he is "talking" to Kate. Viewers are left with questions about Ziva's loyalty when Ari calls her and they talk about personal things. There are also serious questions raised as to whether or not Ari was the one who killed Kate. Gibbs thinks otherwise when it is shown that Ari is leaving his brass behind and it turns out that the sniper gun used is the one Gibbs used to use as a marine and its nickname is 'Kate'. Ari calls Ducky and tells him he's holding Gerald hostage again. Ari says he didn't kill Kate, and he wants to have a chance to prove it to Ducky. He says if Ducky will come meet him, he'll let Gerald go. Ducky gives his word he will come, but when he is walking towards Ari and Gerald, you can tell someone has a sniper's scope on him. This episode was a two-parter, and the audience is left wondering what will happen to Ducky and Gerald.

Episode Number: 48
Season Episode: 2

Originally aired: Tuesday September 27, 2005 on CBS
Writer: Donald P. Bellisario
Director: James Whitmore Jr.
Recurring Role: Lauren Holly (NCIS Director Jenny Shepard), Pancho Demmings (Gerald Jackson), Rudolf Martin (Ari Haswari), Alan Dale (NCIS Director Tom Morrow)
Guest Stars: Gloria Votsis (Dana), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David), Sasha Alexander (Deceased Kate Todd)
Production Code: 03004
Summary: Still stressed over Kate's death, Gibbs is even more hurt when Ari kidnaps Ducky and decides to play with his mind. Gibbs sends Tony to follow Ziva, and after Jenny and Gibbs are almost shot to death, he is even more determined to finish once and for all with Ari, and Ziva's strange connection to Ari will be just the help that he needs.

Ari is at it again! He kidnaps Ducky to get Gibbs off the trail of his accomplice, who tries to help Ari get away. Gibbs decides to use the new Mossad Agent Ziva David to his advantage. She is Ari's control agent in the Mossad. For some reason, Ms. David is very passionate about Ari's innocence in the tragedy of Caitlin's death. Ari sends a decoy sniper to get Gibbs off of his trail. Gibbs catches on and sets up a trap for the terrorist. He actually gets a bet going with Ziva and tells her that if she'll help him set it up, and Ari doesn't show, he'll give up the chase. Fortunately for Gibbs, Ari shows up and admits to killing Kate just to cause Gibbs pain. He says Gibbs reminds him of his own father who didn't care about him except to make an agent out of him. He trains the gun on Gibbs, ready to shoot and suddenly a shot echoes from the top of Gibbs' basement stairs. Ziva is there, and has shot Ari. At this time, we find out that Ziva is actually Ari's half-sister. While she escorts the body to Tel Aviv, Gibbs races to the funeral of Caitlin Todd. The episode ends in a way that is bittersweet. It leaves the viewer sad that Kate is gone, yet knowing that her killer got what he deserved and they can move on with peace that her death was avenged.

Mind Games

Episode Number: 49

Season Episode: 3

Originally aired:	Tuesday October 4, 2005 on CBS
Writer:	George Schenck, Frank Cardea
Director:	William Webb
Show Stars:	Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), David McCallum (Dr. Ducky Mallard), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo)
Recurring Role:	Stephanie Mello (NCIS Tech Cynthia Sumner), Jessica Steen (Special Agent Paula Cassidy)
Guest Stars:	Chad E. Donella (John Briggs), Tom Wright (I) (Warden Sam Kelleher), Scott Williamson (Virginia Governor Charles Norin), Christopher Shyer (Kyle Boone), Lawrence Monoson (Adam O'Neill)
Production Code:	03001
Summary:	Gibbs is ordered to talk to a convict that is about to be executed, in order to discover information about the place where he hid his victims, but when the plan doesn't work, the team must solve the case in their own way.

Gibbs is ordered to re-interview a serial killer, Kyle Boone, who is on death row and about to be executed. Two of Boone's victims have been found, but he claims to have killed 22; he now claims to want to reveal the location of the other bodies, but only to Gibbs.

Gibbs detests Boone, and it is suggested that Gibbs' then-wife left him because of his obsession with the Boone case. In fact, Ducky says that Boone's mind games changed Gibbs; prior to this case, Gibbs acted more like DiNozzo.

Also appearing in this episode is Special Agent Cassidy, who is working with the team for a week. She is not allowed to sit at Kate's desk because, according to DiNozzo, it is "still Kate's desk".

While interviewing Boone, Gibbs meets Boone's lawyer, O'Neill, and Briggs, a man who is writing Boone's biography. Boone is not in a rush to tell Gibbs where the bodies are, even though Gibbs tells him he only has 2 minutes to talk. Boone instead asks about Gibbs' (ex-)wife and Kate. Finally, Gibbs learns that Boone had a scrapbook containing photos of his victims, which the team finds inside the chimney of his family's old farmhouse. Boone, excited about this development, asks to see his scrapbook again, but Gibbs refuses.

By analyzing the photographs of the numerous young women in the pictures - there are more than 22 - Abby and McGee are able to ascertain the location of Boone's dumping ground. McGee, DiNozzo, and Cassidy head there, finding a clearing amongst trees with no cell phone reception. When McGee finds a skull and Cassidy finds a new body with Boone's signature (a heart shape cut into the victim's back), Cassidy runs to the truck to call Gibbs. Gibbs is able to hear her despite some static, but after the call, Cassidy is knocked unconscious by a shovel and thrown into the trunk of a car. The kidnapper took a Polaroid of her and left the photo on the NCIS van, which DiNozzo and McGee are dismayed to see.

The team now believes that there is a copycat killer working with Boone who has killed the 4 most recent victims in Boone's scrapbook. Therefore, they search the record of Boone's visitors at the prison and find a likely suspect - Briggs, the man who is writing Boone's biography. The team finds his location by tracking the GPS chip in his cell phone and intercept his car. Unfortunately, Cassidy is not in his trunk. Instead, she is in an abandoned farmhouse with O'Neill, Boone's lawyer. When Cassidy asks him how Boone convinced his lawyer to become his replacement, he laughs and says that he sought Boone out so that he could learn from him. O'Neill lunges at Cassidy with a knife, but she dodges his blade and attempts to fight.

In the NCIS interrogation room, Gibbs threatens to burn Boone's scrapbook unless he reveals the location of Cassidy. At first, Boone appears extremely distraught, but he later laughs and says that he does not need the scrapbook because he has the images in his mind. Gibbs, filled with anger, puts a gun to Boone's head; however, he realizes that it has been Boone's plan all along to get Gibbs to murder him so that Gibbs' life would be ruined. Instead of harming Boone, Gibbs orders that Boone be taken back to prison. Boone taunts Gibbs as he is being led away, saying that the copycat killer is cutting out Cassidy's tongue at that very moment. However, Gibbs surprises Boone by showing him that Cassidy is alive and well in the NCIS office, albeit bruised and with her arm in a sling. Upon seeing this, Boone begins to scream and tries to break free, but he is unsuccessful.

Show Stars:	Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), David McCallum (Dr. Ducky Mallard), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David)
Recurring Role:	Brian Dietzen (Jimmy Palmer)
Guest Stars:	Jason Grutter (Camera Man), Byrne Offutt (Judd Kearns), Burnadean Jones (Sally Smith), John Berg (General Grant), Larry Clarke (Director), Robert Blanche (Brett Willis), Barbara Niven (Dr. Elaine Burns)
Production Code:	03005
Summary:	When a corpse of a man is found inside a tomb that comes from the Civil War, the team discovers that the victim, a Sergeant, was buried alive. During the investigation, Abby tracks down the last phone call of the victim. Meanwhile, Gibbs is informed by his new boss Jenny Sheppard that agent Ziva is now a full-time NCIS agent.

This episode begins with Dr. Burns of The Smithsonian Anthropology Lab discovering a Civil War-era tomb. All this is being filmed because of its antiquity and it being sealed and unopened. Once opened, the Dr discovers that the tomb isn't really ancient, because the body has been buried with a cell phone, certainly something not of that time (as one of the cameramen remarks)

The team is called to investigate, with new member Ziva observing. McGee and Tony are taking photos (with a statue of a bear) when Gibbs enters, prompting all to share what they have found out. Ziva asks why she has a hole in her hat, in which Gibbs replies, 'It's for ventilation'. Ziva requests to drive back, so she can feel as if she has been of some use, we see her driving skills, or lack thereof. Tony and McGee are frightened, with Tony eventually throwing up on McGee. They later switch drivers to Tony.

Back at the office, McGee does his usual computer-tech searches, and finds a receipt which matches the dead corpse's bank account receipts. Tony and Ziva get another lead from Abby to search the construction site in which the tomb was found for any evidence, and find nothing. Ziva comes back all dirty, as Tony made her do all the work, but she can't shower until she leaves for home (As Gibbs tells her)

Back to the receipt lead, McGee and Ziva are able to get the deposit box of the dead soldier, and in it find some interesting artifacts. They are also given a video of 'the brother' who has been inquiring about the box, but the bank has never allowed 'the brother' access to it. In the box, a mummified hand with an old ring is attached, and a treasure map. As they prepare to leave the bank, McGee and Ziva are stopped by a tourist asking for directions. (This is Judd Kearns, a member of the same civil war club, who needs the map in order to find the treasure.

He doesn't seem to know about the ring, which is a good thing – as it will lead the team to the same destination!)

Back at the lab, Abby is processing the cell phone that was found with the staff sgt, and finds that the last call is just random numbers. McGee and Abby find that these numbers weren't really random but rather a text message. Tony is stuck finding out what Oxbow and Kearns mean, when McGee remembers it was on the missing map. Gibbs is angry that that map has been stolen, to make matters worse, no photo was taken. At this point, we are shown how skilled Ziva really is, as she has reconstructed the map from memory. According to her, 'At Mossad, officers who fail to observe generally don't last long.' Abby is a little jealous when McGee compliments how talented Ziva is, but is back to work when she starts to process the hand and ring. Ducky and Dr Burns (who has taken a liking to Ducky) try to understand the history of the ring, and realize it might belong to a wealthy family in Manasses.

The team, with Dr Burns head off to Manasses Battlefield Park, where the Civil war re-enactors are gathering. At the park, Ziva, Ducky and Dr Burns head off to look for the buried treasure. Gibbs, Tony and McGee find the person from the bank video (the brother) who makes a run for it. He claims he knew nothing about the staff sgt's death and that he was only paid to be 'the brother'. Ziva and the Dr's are having better luck as they find the site. Ziva proceeds when she hears people talking and tells Ducky to call Gibbs for backup. Ziva's backup does not arrive because Ducky hasn't called him.

We find out that Dr Burns was behind it all, together with the two men who are unburying the casket filled with civil war guns and weaponry. They killed the staff sgt, because he found the map and casket and wanted to give it to a museum. Dr Burns, however, killed him before they could get the map. Dr Burns is holding Ducky hostage, but again Ziva's training allows her to kill Dr Burns AND detain the two men. Tony remarks 'Remind me not to piss her off.'

Back at the office, Ziva is sitting in Kate's old desk. She finds Kate's drawings of the team and tells Gibbs that 'Kate wouldn't mind' – meaning Ziva is now part of the team and she should sit at Kate's old desk. In the next episode, we see that she has now moved from the desk at the back, to Kate's one at the front.

Summary:	When a non-commissioned officer is shot to death on the freeway, the NCIS team takes upon the investigation. The first lead, a fact that the victim was leading a double life, takes them to a possible solution of the crime, but the tables are turned when the victim's dying message is discovered and it leads them to a totally different clue.

Petty Officer Jerry Smith is driving down a highway, talking to his wife on his cell phone. She is asking him about plans for their 6-month anniversary, which he does not seem to care very much about. Suddenly, Smith is shot through the neck, and his car veers off the road and down a hill.

Back at the NCIS office, McGee is worried over some unauthorized purchases made under his name, and he wonders if his identity has been stolen. Ziva walks in late because she took the wrong bus, which does not please Gibbs. In the elevator, Gibbs sternly tells Ziva that she answers to him, not the director.

At the scene, McGee and DiNozzo cautiously make their way down the hill to Smith's crashed car. Jimmy Palmer is not so cautious and tumbles down the hill, spraining his ankle. Ziva is assigned to interview Smith's wife, Wendy, even though Ziva says she is not good with women. Wendy is upset that the last thing she did was call her husband a bastard, which she cannot take back. She cries on Ziva's shoulder, and Ziva awkwardly pats her on the back.

Gibbs visits Smith's workplace and speaks with his commanding officer, Commander Robert Morris. Morris says that Smith cannot possibly be dead because he is currently there at work. The team first thinks that the man who died in the crash must have been an imposter, but after checking fingerprints, they find that the dead officer is indeed P.O. Jerry Smith, and the man working with Morris is P.O. John Kirby, some of whose past assignments coincided with Smith's.

Upon questioning, Kirby admits that he and Smith switched places because Smith slept with a high-ranked officer's wife. This would not have been a problem, but Smith's upcoming assignment was under that officer, who happens to be Commander Morris. While this seems like motive for murder, Morris says that he was at work at the time of Smith's shooting, and security video confirms his alibi.

Meanwhile, Abby finds strange emails in Kirby's account. Ziva recognizes the simple messages of a location and time as being indicative of a drop of some sort. McGee disguises himself as Kirby and goes to the meeting spot specified for that day's drop. A woman approaches him with a suitcase and further instructions, but when the real Kirby shows up, Kirby and the woman take off running. The woman gets away, but Kirby is arrested, and McGee is able to hold onto the suitcase. Kirby says that he does not know what is in the suitcases - he just does this delivery job for the money and has been told to never open the suitcases. The team considers the possibility that Smith's murder is connected to Kirby's shady delivery job.

However, it is discovered that Wendy Smith was not actually in her home when she was talking to her husband over the phone during the shooting - her home calls had been transferred to her cell phone. When she is confronted with this information, she confesses and says angrily that her husband even cheated on her on their wedding day.

Back at Abby's lab, the bomb squad has destroyed Kirby's suitcase in an explosion. Gibbs tells Abby to put it back together and find out what was inside it. Abby is frustrated by the idea of this task, which could take months, but Ziva volunteers to help, trying to initiate a friendship with Abby. However, the mystery of the suitcase is never resolved.

Arthur Caldwell), Bradley White (Bart Powell), Nat Faxon (Carter Finch), Brittney Powell (Jamie Carr), Michael Bellisario (Charles Sterling)
Production Code: 03006
Summary: The NCIS team takes upon a strange case - a Marine's wife was murdered live on the Internet. The investigation reveals that two housewives were running a live Internet sex site and now they are both missing. While looking for them, the team will try to track down the webmaster and solve the alleged murder case.

Opening up in typical NCIS fashion, we get our first glimpse of the crime. A masked woman is kneeling on her bed doing a little striptease for a webcam audience. A viewer asks her, via his keyboard, to "take it all off", but she tells him to be patient and goes back to her little tease. The viewer then sees a black figure in the doorway to the bedroom, behind the woman. He tells her to turn around and look behind her, and when she does, the figure attacks her, slits her throat, and turns the webcam to show her body.

Tony, on the phone trying to get a table at an exclusive restaurant for his date's birthday, has just come to realize that McGee has been tricked by Ziva into giving her personal information on Tony. Tony then receives the obligatory smack to the back of the head by Gibbs and the team is off to their new case: A Sergeant's wife, Leanne Roberts, is missing and the police think that she's been abducted. No one has seen her in three weeks and the back door of her house had been kicked in.

Ziva is sent to survey the neighbors, McGee to get the equipment, and Tony and Gibbs begin to look around the Roberts' home; the victim's husband, Sergeant Jake Roberts, is in Iraq. Gibbs finds a clean spot on the carpet in the bedroom and tells McGee to "break out the luminal".

Ziva looks through a yard sale next door as she asks questions of the neighbor, Bart Powell, a "domesticated house husband" whose wife is also in Iraq.

Ziva walks into the crime scene where the rest of the team are looking for clues and sniffs the air. She announces that she smells Havier Christian #5, a $2000 an ounce perfume, a little on the high side for a housewife. McGee enters and reports that he found blood drops out back under bags of mulch when he abruptly stops and looks around the room as if trying to remember something. He realizes that he's seen the room before, says his girlfriend emailed him a video clip with this room. The clip showed a woman supposedly being murdered live on the internet. McGee assumed it was a hoax or a badly filmed snuff film.

Cut to Abby's lab where they have the video playing. Abby says that she can find no signs of tampering or special effects. This video came from victim's computer where they also find out that she's been running a sex site from her bedroom. Anyone logged onto the site during the murder could have emailed out the video clip, which could be any of hundreds or thousands of members who paid to access the site. There was another housewife featured on the site, Jamie Carr, a neighbor of the Roberts'. The team goes to her house to question her.

McGee beats himself up about not reporting the video, whether or not he believed it was real. No one home at the Carr's residence and it seems to have been empty for a while. The team hears a crashing and a low wail come from the house, so they force their way into the house to see a cat jumping around the living room and growling low. Upon further inspection of the house they find it is empty otherwise, but they do find blood on a broken glass table.

2 crime scenes, 1 website, 50,000 hits a day to the Naughty, Naughty Neighbors site. Gibbs wants the names of all members of the website, where the money collected from the site is, and sends Tony and Ziva to interview the webmaster, Carter Finch.

Ducky and Parmer are in the autopsy room using video stills of the murder to "autopsy" the victim. Ducky concludes that the murderer was an amateur, and cut too shallow which would cause the victim to die slowly and painfully.

Tony and Ziva find Carter Finch in his basement room of his mother's house. They both find that fact very amusing as Finch is in his late 20's or early 30's; that and his extensive Star Wars collection and his deep attachment to it. Finch says that he knew nothing about the murder or the video, and hadn't heard from either Leanne Roberts or Jamie Carr in a month as the website "practically runs itself".

Abby with her PhD in porn learns that she is not nearly as flexible as she should be and the date and time that the video was recorded. Abby reports to Gibbs that Leanne Roberts was murdered 8 days ago. Gibbs leaves and as Abby goes back to watching videos, a man quietly enters and startles her. It seems that rather than give her a raise for doing the work of 10 people, NCIS has assigned Abby a new assistant, "Charles Sterling reporting for duty". Abby excuses herself to call Gibbs to complain. Gibbs asks Director Shepard to get rid of him; she says to "give it a month".

McGee is getting frustrated because he cannot trace the money made from the website. The team is interrupted with the news that they found the body of Jamie Carr. Off they go.

The body was found in the trunk of a car in a junkyard. No idea on time of death yet, though cause of death was a compound fracture of the skull and her throat was cut AFTER she was dead. McGee gets stuck with the search effort to find Leanne Roberts' body, possibly somewhere else in the junkyard.

Abby's still watching porn videos, Ziva's freaking out about her computer. McGee comes in with a knife he found at the junkyard, possibly the murder weapon.

Gibbs gets a videoconference with Sergeant Roberts' Captain. He says that Roberts requested emergency leave and was planning to kill Bart Powell whom he thinks initiated the site. Roberts has already reached the States.

The team gets to Powell's house and Roberts is beating and threatening to kill him on his front lawn. Gibbs takes Powell in to NCIS.

Gibbs shows Powell a video of him in the Roberts' house. He admits that he had an affair with Leanne Roberts. Gibbs says that it's more like blackmail. Sgt. Roberts had received a letter in Iraq from his wife saying that Powell found out about the website and threatened to tell her husband if she didn't sleep with him. Powell denies it all including the murders. Powell, it turns out, has an airtight alibi. Back to square one.

McGee finds the money, finally. Turns out the money was going into an account that belonged to Carter Finch's retirement home-bound grandmother. He had emptied the account and walked away with close to a half of a million dollars.

Abby and Sterling watch the video looking at the murder weapon; it doesn't match the knife found in the junkyard or anything else that she knows.

The team tracks Finch to a hotel using an online auction site that he was using to sell some of his Star Wars memorabilia but had closed the auction early, as he "no longer needed the money". That is still the case as the team finds him dead in the hotel bathtub. Tony recognizes the scent, though, as the same perfume that they smelled in the Roberts' bedroom. They also find red hair dye residue in the drain. They find Leanne in the parking lot, a redhead, and handcuff her just as Abby calls and tells Gibbs that the knife is fake, something that you can buy at a magic store. Leanne had staged her own death, but Gibbs already knew that.

Summary:	When a 6-year-old boy informs the NCIS team that his father was kidnapped, the team discovers that the missing father is actually a Lt. Commander working on a secret project named Honor, and that he is the only one who has the code that can open the project. While Gibbs gets closer with the boy, the rest of the team discovers that the project has been hacked in and the information inside has been deleted. Is the missing man innocent or is he actually the guilty one?

The episode opens with a little boy heading for the carousel in a fun park, his father trailing behind with balloon, backpack and fairy floss (sugar candy). The boy asserts that balloons are for babies but that his Dad should mind the other things during his ride. When on the carousel, he keeps looking at his father so he sees two suited men approach his father and take his father away. When the carousel stops, he races over to where his father was standing, but only the fairy

In the squad room, Gibbs gives the alert for the team to move, because a Navy Commander is missing. Ziva questions the speedy response and is told that the 6 year old son of the commander called NCIS and is waiting, alone, in the fun park.

DiNozzo gets to the boy first and begins to reassure him, making statements to the boy. He gets no response. Gibbs arrives and DiNozzo tells Gibbs that the boy is in shock. Indignant, the boy replies No I'm not and points out that he was waiting for DiNozzo to actually ask a question. Gibbs suppresses a smile, sits beside the kid and asks what questions was he waiting for. The child points out that what did you see? would be a good start. The child gives a comprehensive description, from a child point of view, including noting that the baddies were wearing Ipod earphones but only in one ear. Gibbs and Tony confer, as it sounds like feds but Gibbs points out that not even the CIA would leave a child alone in a park. McGee arrives and reports to Gibbs on getting security tapes. Gibbs tells him to contact the child's mother. Transpires that she died in a car accident. Gibbs says then next of kin. McGee reports that there is no one else. They take the child to NCIS HQ.

At the squad room, Gibbs gets reports. The missing man was working on a secret project, details not given over unsecured line. Ziva brings in the picture done by sketch artist, noting that the child has remarkable powers of observation. She tells Gibbs that social security have arrived for the child: Gibbs tells her the difference between social services and social security. Gibbs goes to the child, Zach, to tell him that he has to go. The child has already spotted the social workers and guessed who they are and why they are there. Zach points out that he can look after himself, and Gibbs smilingly says that he doesn't doubt that (and clearly doesn't. This is a smart and unsentimental kid). Gibbs cajoles Zach into going with the social workers but kneels to give Zach a business card, telling him to call Gibbs at any time.

The team visit the commander's place of work which is in chaos, with power failures and a computer hacking crisis. Their top secret project, Honour which is about encryption and computer security, has been hacked. The harried bosses reassure the team that there is no problem as the last line of defence is that the Commander has the code keys memorised. The team break the news that the Commander is missing, presumed kidnapped.

Tony phones the news to Gibbs, who is in his car on his way to drop off Zach's Ipod to social services, because he had left it on Gibbs' desk. Gibbs then gets a second phone call, this time from Zach. Gibbs assumes that the child is phoning about the Ipod but Zach urgently tells him that the villains are outside social services and that Gibbs must come quick because these men know where his father is. Gibbs tells Zach to wait but Zach yells that they are getting away and races after them. By the time Gibbs gets there, they are about to nab Zach and kidnap him, but the child delivers an elbow to a vulnerable spot on his kidnapper and scuttles away to Gibbs, who starts shooting at the villains' car, shattering the back window.

Gibbs takes the child back to NCIS HQ and puts him in protective custody. Jen manages to keep control of the case with NCIS, although every federal agency wants to claim it as the Honour project breach of security threatens the security of all computer networks in all agencies. The security on the project is so tight that it is assumed it must be an inside job, and the papertrail starts to show that the Commander moved his assets prior to his kidnap.

The team start to confront the question as to whether the commander disappeared by prior arrangement and is a traitor, or whether he truly was kidnapped under threat of harm to his child (hence his willingness to leave with the villains). Gibbs' gut says that the Commander must be innocent and a victim. He points out to Jen that all you have to do is look at the son.

The main interest is the relationship between Gibbs and Zach, which is instantly strong. Zach so resembles Gibbs in manner, reserve, cold logic and disdain for childish behaviour that everyone notices, including Gibbs. Abby says to Gibbs that Zach is a mini-Gibbs, to which Gibbs responds by saying are you calling him a mini-me?, astounding Abby with his pop culture reference to Austin Powers films.

Tony, fondly imagining that he is good with kids, proceeds to patronise Zach who suffers it with patient disdain. Ziva finds this hilarious. Zach manages to remember enough of the villains' number plate for the team to be able to track down the vehicle. When they raid it in a parking lot, they discover one of the villains dead inside, executed by the other villain after having been injured in the shootout with Gibbs earlier.

The staff take turns looking after Zach, but it is Gibbs who takes him home, and shows him how to work on the boat. Zach asks the question as to how Gibbs will get the boat out of the basement. Gibbs says he has never really thought about it, but he could tear down a wall and build a ramp. Zach is reluctant to work on the boat because he doesn't want to get it wrong, so Gibbs gets behind him and guides his hands as to how to see the grain in the wood and work with the grain. Gibbs exhibits the same patience that he always shows to Abby.

Jen visits to try to persuade Gibbs to recognise that the prime suspect in the Honour code breach is, in fact, the commander. Zach, having been sent upstairs to get a soda so that Jen could talk to Gibbs privately in the basement, has crept back to the top of the stairs and listened in. When Jen denounces his father, Zach emphatically speaks up for his dad, tearfully declaring that he knows that his father is innocent. Gibbs points out to Zach that there is evidence against his father, but Zach says he knows his father is innocent because he can feel it in his stomach. Gibbs knows better than to dispute gut feeling.

Back at HQ, Ziva eventually gets some intel from her Mossad connections that reveal that the villains were mercenaries in Bosnia who specialised in torture and that the commander has been kidnapped and framed. Therefore, they assume that the Commander is being tortured for his code key. The race is on to find him after Ziva educates McGee about how no one can withstand true torture-based interrogation, and says how she can get information from suspects in a matter of mere hours.

Abby and McGee and DiNozzo collectively have a breakthrough when a secretary (who caught Tony's eye) from project Honour is spotted on CCTV as having purchased phones used in the kidnap arrangements. Ziva, McGee and Gibbs go to her workplace where she is interrogated with a view to speed of finding the Commander. This means that Gibbs takes McGee out for coffee and lets Ziva question the woman alone. When McGee asks Gibbs what Ziva is doing, Gibbs' look tells McGee that, really, he doesn't want to know. The woman, who had been defiant, is a nervous wreck by the time Gibbs and McGee return from coffee, pleading not to be killed. Gibbs is sanguine about this, whilst McGee looks disturbed. Like the viewer, they are wondering just what Ziva did to get such a result so fast. The woman gives the location of the torture chamber and the team arrive there in the nick of time, killing a villain (who inexplicably started shooting through a closed door, indicating his position, and then opened the door, giving a perfect shot to Gibbs, the sniper). The injured, exhausted commander says he has revealed the secrets, because the villains had brought him proof that they had his son. The proof was the Ipod, which is now in the torture chamber. Gibbs realises that the only person who could have obtained it is the best friend of the Commander, who had visited Zach at NCIS HQ, giving Zach a game player to distract him from the Ipod. Next scene, they nab the best friend who is a traitor on all levels.

Finale is Zach and Gibbs, standing side by side looking out the big window in the NCIS squad room, with Gibbs drinking coffee from big cup, and Zach drinking milk, both passing time. Zach is downhearted that he was duped by his father's friend and ponders how he could have let the friend deceive him. Gibbs kneels, wipes away Zach's milk moustache and points out that sometimes bad people can be very convincing. When asked whether he has ever been duped, Gibbs replies ruefully that it has happened more than once. Zach declares that when he grows up he will get the people who did this to his father and Gibbs gives a wry grin and says that he believes Zach will. At this point, Zach's dad arrives and the serious 6 year old suddenly becomes a jubilant little kid and flies into his (injured) father's arms, declaring that he knew his Dad would come back and saying I love you, Daddy. Gibbs is left, alone, watching from the sidelines and we see a flashback of him working on the boat with Zach and then another, older flashback of a younger Gibbs working on the boat with a little girl.

Summary:	When bodies of two hired assassins are delivered to the NCIS team, Ziva & Tony go undercover assuming the victim's identities in order to find the person who hired the assassins for their mission. While working on the case, Ziva & Tony spend some quality time in a luxury hotel and the attraction between them arises. Gibbs discovers that his team is not the only one working on the case.

This episode begins with Ziva and Tony, in a hotel room, dressed to impress, and all alone. We are shocked to see Tony and Ziva head to the bed for some serious 'under cover' work as sexy, husband and wife assassins. (For those hoping for a Tony/Ziva relationship this is the closest episode to date where some serious lip locking actually occurs).

However, the opening as per the title suggests, is actually an undercover assignment. Tony and Ziva have to pretend to be an assassin hubby/wife team, because the real assassins are dead. They died in a car accident, using fake passports when Marine CID found them and heading for the annual Marine Corp Birthday. (This is how and why NCIS got the case) The team has no idea what to do, and need Ducky to give some Intel on the assassin's lives. As Gibbs puts it, 'they're (Tony & Ziva) working blind'. Back at the hotel, Ziva is massaging Tony, when we see that they are under surveillance. (We later find out this is the FBI)

Tony and Ziva are contacted by their 'client' to meet downstairs – with the NCIS team placing hidden cameras and listening devices in the room and in Tony's glasses. Downstairs at dinner, Tony is forced to eat left-handed (because the real Jean-Paul (assassin) was a lefty) – As they are eating dinner, photos of each person in the restaurant are sent back to Abby for background checks. Ziva gets a call from the 'client' and Abby is able to track the call back to the actual hotel, specifically the lobby. Unfortunately, the 'client' escapes.

Back at HQ, Director Shepherd wants to send in back-up for Tony and Ziva, but trusts Gibbs so decides not to. There are many Tony/ Ziva shots (of them making 'love') and of the FBI watching them. Ziva gets McGee to bring up her 'spy glasses', which senses the infrared light watching them. McGee and Gibbs are able to locate the room and bust in, showing the FBI agents.

Back at NCIS, Ducky tries to determine how the Raniers lived their lives. The wife had a broken wrist; the hubby had an appendix moved but nothing really helpful for the case. The only thing 'interesting' Ducky found was the tattoos on their marriage fingers – the sign for 'eternity'.

Gibbs calls T&Z, telling them what they know, and when McGee compliments Ziva's intellect for getting 'spy glasses, Abby vents her anger. Abby doesn't realize Ziva can hear her, because they didn't hang up!

After Gibbs and McGee crash the FBI's operation, Fornell enters, and starts yelling at Gibb's for 'straying into their jurisdiction' – they both go into Gibb's conference room aka the elevator, and we see that they are actually really good friends. They decide to work together to please both their bosses and to just get the job done.

At the hotel, Tony and Ziva are called by the 'client' to meet in the lobby to go to the destination. With the FBI on their side now, NCIS are able to get more men to cover exits, room's etc. to make the bust when they come out. However, Tony and Ziva never leave the hotel. In the elevator, the waiter (who is a baddie) jams their listening devices, when the real 'client' aka Marcos Siazon shows up. We find out he is also a contract assassin, with Abby asking 'Why would a killer hire other killers to do a hit for him?' The viewers realize that Sophie and Jean-Paul Ranier (aka Tony and Ziva) ARE the hits!

The Ranier's wanted to leave the assassin business, because she was pregnant. They had a disk, which had names of all their hits and clients. The disk was wanted by Siazon because in the wrong hands (esp the feds) it could be very dangerous. The disk is later found embedded in Sophie's eye socket by Ducky. At the hotel, FBI and NCIS arrest the 'baddie waiter', Marcos Siazon and co, with Tony saying that he wants a divorce from Ziva.

Back at HQ, Tony still has a headache (from the beating he took by Siazon's guards) and Ziva offers to drive him home. Director Shepherd, together with Ducky attends the Marine Corp B-day. Gibbs does not attend, opting to drink at his desk with the flask from his dead wife and daughter. Abby wishes him Happy B-day!

Summary: Tony is accused of murdering a woman whose body was found at Quantico, and the team must prove his innocence. All the possible evidence proves that Tony is guilty, and the team will give their best to set their agent and a friend free.

Female legs are discovered on Navy property and all scientific evidence points to Tony DiNozzo as having been physically in contact with the legs, including leaving a bite mark. The FBI, led by Fornell, has to investigate. Abby, the forensic technician processing the evidence, is distraught that her work would lead to Tony's conviction if the case went immediately to trial and she suffers doubt when her beloved forensics is obviously leading to a miscarriage of justice. Abby is aided in her work by Chip, her much despised assistant. Tony's interrogation by FBI Agent Slacks is a study in nonchalance and grim humour.

Slacks becomes fed up with Tony's irresponsible answers to questions and leaves in disgust. Tony, alone in the interrogation room with nothing to do, entertains himself by playing an imaginary set of drums. The drumming provides the soundtrack to a film sequence showing the gathering of evidence against Tony, the tension ratcheting up. When it ends, we see Fornell telling Gibbs that the evidence is overwhelming and that he would be remiss if he did not take Tony into custody, as it would look like a cover-up. Tony is taken to gaol where he is visited by Gibbs, bearing pizza.

This leads to a much-watched scene where Tony converses with a silent Gibbs who acts as Tony's sounding board. At the end, Gibbs reassures Tony by beckoning him to the bars of the cell and providing him with a headslap, which comforts Tony. Gibbs has not spoken throughout the entire scene but we know what he thinks. The intensity of the scene is increased because Tony engages in a mock self-interrogation which reveals much about Tony's background and dysfunctional family life. It is a notable piece of acting by Harmon and Weatherly. Whilst the FBI continue to gather evidence against Tony, his team-mates continue to try to work out which, of many possible enemies, has framed Tony. Forensic science eventually redeems itself, revealing the accomplice to the frame-up.

The ultimate revelation of the real villain as Abby's horrid assistant leads to a stampede to her lab, because they realize that Abby is in peril, yet again. The team races in, guns ready, only to find that the evil Chip has been trussed up with duck tape by a disheveled Abby, who merely pleads, in an "I-told-you-so" tone of voice, to be allowed to revert to working alone.

Summary:	While on duty, McGee kills a man who is later discovered to be an undercover police officer. When Jenny decides to approve the investigation on McGee, the NCIS team is forced to prove that McGee is not guilty, pushing Gibbs' relationship with Jen to the limit. Meanwhile, Tony is troubled by his past.

The team are on protection detail for an important member of the Navy who is trying to leave a building. Whilst making sure everything is secure McGee goes to the exit and sees a man arguing with someone in a car. He identifies himself and the man turns to him. McGee sees what he thinks is a gun and hears a shot fired and shot the man dead. When the team get to him he is crouching next to the dead man's body and the car has driven off. An investigation is started and the team find no gun and no bullet that the dead man had supposedly shot at McGee. Then they find out that he was an off duty cop and Metro Police come in to talk and they want to interrogate McGee. Gibbs won't allow it. The investigation continues and the Metro Police also start an investigation. The next day McGee goes to the Police station to be questioned and while there he confesses that there was no gun in the man's hands. Gibbs tells McGee that he had let him down and that it was his fault. Tony and Ziva go back to the alley and find the bullet. They also find links to a Drug Lord. This leads them to the dead man's partner and McGee and Gibbs go to talk to him. The partner punches Gibbs and takes his gun out. McGee hesitates and Gibbs shoots the partner. He then tells McGee that if he ever hesitates again he will have his badge.

Summary: While filming a reality show on a Marine base, a supermodel dies and the NCIS team must discover who is the model's murderer. They discover a love triangle between the model and three other men, all suspects. Meanwhile, Jenny is disturbed by Gibbs when he doesn't want to attend an award ceremony in his honor.

Two women are asleep in their beds in a dorm room. Two men are watching them through a surveillance camera. They turn the camera towards a third bed, which is empty. One of the men presses a button and reveille blares out of a speaker system. Both women jump up out of bed and one screams "I can't take much more of this! You're driving us crazy." The other woman scans the room and asks where the third woman is. "Maybe she got lucky and escaped" the first woman says. We hear pounding on the door and the first room jumps and says "They're coming." Both woman rush around throwing on clothes and opening the blinds on the window. The door slams open and a drill instructor strides into the room, followed by a film crew. To say he is unhappy with the women would be an understatement. As he screams at one of them, the other stands looking out the window. The DI asks where the third woman is. The camera goes to one of the women staring out the window. "Oh. My. God." she says, looking out at the third woman hanging upside down from the fence, dead.

The scene opens on a room full of NCIS people applauding as Jenny presents an award to someone. Cynthia announces the next award, the Meritorious Civilian Service medal, and Jenny calls for Leroy Jethro Gibbs. The room fills with applause and the camera moves in to Ziva who comments on Jenny's new haircut, calling it the elf look. Tony corrects Ziva saying it is called a pixie. Ducky thinks she looks "terrific." Ziva wonders where Gibbs is and Ducky informs her he's never come to an awards ceremony. "Even if he's the one receiving?" Ziva asks. "Especially if he's the one receiving," Ducky assures her. Cynthia calls for Gibbs and Abby informs McGee that she knew he wouldn't show and tells him to pay up. McGee takes out a $20 and asks if she has change. "No" Abby tells him as the bill disappears up her sleeve. Meanwhile, Tony is working his way up to the podium. "Nice haircut" he whispers to Jenny as he tries to take the medal. Jenny questions Tony as to Gibbs' whereabouts and is given a vague answer of working as Tony takes the medal from her and gestures at Cynthia who announces that Tony will accept the award for Gibbs. Tony tries to make a speech that starts out referencing the TV show The Streets of San Francisco, but Jenny cuts him off and the awards ceremony is over. The room begins to empty even as Tony waves a paper around telling them that he has a whole speech. Abby goes up on stage and gives Tony a hug.

Jenny is calling Gibbs on her cell as she walks into her office, demanding to know where he is. Her office door opens and Gibbs walks in talking on his cell, telling her he is right behind her. Jenny is not amused by this and informs him that Tony has his award. Gibbs doesn't care. "Somethings never change do they Jethro?" Jenny asks him as she plays with her hair. Gibbs does not pick up on the hint. He informs her he is working on a case, a high profile one that he need to inform her of before it hits the news. There is a dead super model, Taylor Shane, at Quantico. Jenny nudges him again about being at the awards ceremony and Gibbs again ignores her. Jenny then reminds Gibbs that the media will be all over this case and Jethro is to behave himself. Gibbs leaves the office and Jenny is left playing with her hair.

At Quantico, the team is unpacking the van. Tony and Ziva are discussing the reality TV show Boot Camp Babes. They differ on what is the most important thing they are learning. Ziva thinks it is how to defend your country. Tony assures her it is how to fire a machine gun in a bikini. McGee sides with Ziva on this one. Tony and McGee try to explain to Ziva that the models are not really joining the Marines, that it is a stunt like The Simple Life. Ziva has never heard of it and hearing that it starred Paris Hilton reminds Ziva that she has stayed there a few times. Tony remarks that he wouldn't mind spending the night there and Ziva sighs romantically saying that she often dreams about it. Tony and McGee exchange leering looks and Ziva wants to know what that's about. Tony tells her he's trying to picture her and Paris together and Ziva assures him that she is not attracted to blondes. The banter is stopped by the sight of a mob of reporters at the gate to Quantico and Gibbs, out in front of the team, striding towards them, coffee cup in hand.

Gibbs tries to get through the crowd of reporters without commenting, but they gather around him, shoving their microphones in his face, and shouting questions at him. Gibbs only repeats that he just got there until a reporter jostles him and makes him drop his coffee cup. Gibbs stands and looks at his coffee in a pool on the ground and informs the reporters that the interview is over. The reporter apologizes and says it was an accident but Gibbs doesn't care. He ducks under the crime scene tape and tells the Marine guards to secure the area. The reporters continue to scream questions at him, but they are completely blocked by a wall of Marine guards as Gibbs strides away from them.

Gibbs comes upon Ducky and Mr. Palmer examining the body of Taylor Shane. Ducky informs Gibbs that she's been dead for about 5 hours, but Gibbs is more interested in the how than the how long. Ducky points out several lacerations, none of which appear fatal. Mr. Palmer says "we'll know more when we get her back" and Ducky looks up from the body at him. Mr. Palmer quickly decides to go and get the gurney. Gibbs asks the Marine standing by who moved the body and he replies that he did. He is the liaison for the show and felt it wasn't in the best public relations interest to all the media to take pictures of Taylor hanging on the wire. The liaison has been trying to get a hold of the producer of the show, without success. Gibbs wants to know what Taylor was doing on the wire. The liaison says it was as if she was trying to climb over the fence, but that makes no sense because if Taylor really wanted off the show, all she had to do was say so.

Gibbs starts handing out assignments. McGee is to take photos and Ziva is to interview the models. Tony interrupts Gibbs to volunteer to interview the models and Ziva is more than happy to oblige. Gibbs, on the other hand, takes the camera away from McGee and tells McGee to help Ziva interview the models and hands the camera to Tony. Gibbs and the liaison officer go off to watch the taped footage. Ziva asks Tony if he would like her to get the models' autographs. Tony laughs, but drags a copy of GSM out and asks McGee to see if he can get them to sign it to "The Big D."

The two models are in their barracks trying to figure out what Taylor was doing outside.

Hannah thinks she was trying to get a bigger storyline by making a break for it. McGee and Ziva come in to interview them. Ziva asks the camera crew to leave and they do. The other women last saw Taylor at lights out. Hannah believes that Taylor would have done anything for more camera time, Natalie is offended by this. Hannah reminds Natalie that the cameras are off, so she can stop pretending she cares. Ziva is surprised that they didn't get along, as is McGee. The models remind him that they shoot the show 24 hours a day, he only sees 23 minutes of that.

Tony has finished up taking pictures and wants to go check on the models, but Gibbs insists that he ride back with the bodies. It is his job to make sure that the reporters don't follow the body. Tony isn't quite sure how to do that, but Gibbs tells him to improvise. Tony walks up to Mr. Palmer and asks for the keys, but Ducky has them, flipping them through the air to Tony who catches them.

Back in the barracks, the models have signed Tony's GSM to "The Big D" and are wondering if they can do anything else for McGee, like give his girlfriend some hair tips, looking at Ziva. McGee quickly assures them that they have all they need for now. McGee gives them his business card and asks them to contact them if they think of anything else that might be helpful. Ziva exits, telling them "it's called a business card. Maybe you can have one of the Marines read it to you."

Down in autopsy, Ducky is going over everything that didn't kill Taylor. No bones broken, no major arteries severed, her death was not caused by the razor wire. The tox screen shows angel dust in her system. "An overdose of PCP drove that poor girl flailing into that fence; she had a seizure, fell into a coma and died." Gibbs wonders if the overdose was accidental. "I doubt it," Ducky replies. "She had enough PCP in her system to kill a small water buffalo." "Water buffalo?" Gibbs wonders. "I tire of saying a small horse," Ducky responds. It might have been suicide. Gibbs reminds Ducky that they don't investigate suicides. Mr. Palmer is surprised to hear that. Ducky explains that "technically, no, but even the most obvious suicide is investigated by NCIS as a murder." "On a marine base, surrounded by cameras?" Mr. Palmer asks. "Yes. The stuff good mysteries are made of Mr. Palmer," Ducky chuckles as he resumes his examination of the body.

Jenny and Gibbs are watching the ZNN report on Taylor's death up in Jenny's office. Jenny fast forwards to the "good" part which shows Gibbs turning his back and walking away from the cameras, saying "I don't care" in response to a reporter stating that the public has a right to know. Gibbs insists that he was not asked that question. Jenny doesn't care, he shouldn't have given them anything they could manipulate. Gibbs also doesn't care, as PR is not his area. Jenny continues to lay into him about his attitude so Gibbs tells her he'll make it right if Jenny gets him that reporter's number. Will he apologize? No, he'll ask her out to dinner and with that Gibbs leaves Jenny's office. Jenny is not amused.

In the squad room, Tony and Ziva are also watching the ZNN report. Tony is providing commentary as Ducky arrives on the scene, saying he looks good, then here comes the autopsy gremlin and then a flash which Tony insists is his jacket. Ziva laughs and tells him it's McGee's jacket, giving Tony a light flick on the ear. Tony is not in any of the footage. McGee wishes he could say the same since the camera adds 10 pounds. Tony assures McGee that the weight was added by his refrigerator. Tony wonders if Gibbs watched the coverage. Ziva doesn't know about that but is sure the director did since Gibbs has been up in her office for the last half hour. Tony then wonders if anyone else thinks they (Gibbs and Jenny) were more than just partners back in the day. By the expressions on Ziva's and McGee's faces Tony realizes Gibbs is right behind him and covers by explaining they were talking about Cagney and Lacey. Not fooled at all, Gibbs slaps the back of Tony's head and asks for a report from the team.

Taylor Shane did a couple of stints in rehab. Her friends blame the boyfriend who has a record from drug busts. McGee is looking for him. Gibbs sends Tony and Ziva to interview the producer of the reality show. Gibbs wants to know how Taylor got a fistful of PCP during this reality show. Having seen the picture of the boyfriend, Tony wonders how he got a supermodel for a girlfriend. "They're shallow, he's wealthy, a perfect match," is Ziva's take on the situation. Then she remembers that Tony's from a wealthy family. That's different Tony explains since his dad cut him off when he was 12. "I had to earn all my dates the old fashioned way," he tells Ziva. "Begging?" she assumes.

Down in Abby's lab she's testing all sorts of snack foods. The testing is mostly done by lab equipment, but some is done by eating. Gibbs strides in carrying a Caf-Pow and good news. Her new lab assistant is starting on Monday. Abby protests vehemently that she will not have another lab assistant until she realizes that Gibbs is just pulling her leg. Abby did not find it funny. Gibbs says it was to him, kind of, and gives her the Caf-Pow. Abby has figured out why no one heard Taylor scream. There were a couple of very long trains going by at the same time Taylor died.

Gibbs asks about Abby's new diet, and Abby explains that she's trying to figure out how the drugs got into Taylor's system. Ducky said there were no signs of IV usage and no traces of PCP in the lungs, so Taylor had to have taken the drugs orally. There were no traces of anything that would indicate the drugs were in pills, but there were traces of PCP in her stomach. There were also traces of the components of the snack cakes that Abby has been testing. Abby is trying to determine just which snack cake it was and tells Gibbs it's a lot of fun and reminds her of Bill Nye the Science Guy. This reference is lost on Gibbs who instead remembers Mr. Wizard. Abby has no idea who Mr. Wizard is. Pulling her back to the case, Abby tells Gibbs she found out two things. One, Abby likes cream filling. And, two, she knows which pastry had the PCP in it. As Abby takes a big bite of the pastry in question, she tells Gibbs they're looking at death by Klowny Kake. "That's good work, Abs," Gibbs says. Abby polishes off the Klowny Kake as she watches Gibbs leave.

Staff Sergeant McMannis is talking with Hannah, telling her that Taylor got along with everyone except for her. Hannah doesn't see the point of this inquiry. McMannis wants to know why Taylor committed suicide and thinks Hannah knows why. Hannah maintains she doesn't. McMannis presses and Hannah details what happened the night before. Hannah went to bed, Natalie snuck into the bathroom to puke three or four times, and Taylor decided to commit suicide. As far as Hannah is concerned, that's it. McMannis is not appreciative of Hannah's wit and gets right in her face. They are interrupted by the arrival of Tony and Ziva.

Hannah is sent out to the pull-up bars while Tony and Ziva speak to McMannis. They want to speak with the producer, Tom Crawley. McMannis tells him Crawley is not to be disturbed. Ziva doesn't care about that, she wants to discuss the OD of one of the stars of his show. McMannis is shocked to hear that Taylor OD'd. McMannis tells them that he knows Taylor had problems in the past, but she was definitely anti-drug now. She didn't even take aspirin. McMannis directs Tony and Ziva to Crawley's office.

Crawley is sitting in his office, staring at a picture of Taylor with tears on his face, when Tony and Ziva enter. Crawley calls Taylor his daughter, he became her legal guardian when she was 15 and they went through a lot together. Crawley insists that Taylor has been clean and sober for 2 years, there is no way she OD'd on PCP. Tony and Ziva remind Crawley that most addicts relapse and their relapses are brought on by stress so perhaps Boot Camp Babes was a bad career choice for a recovering addict. Crawley insists that the show was Taylor's idea and that she loved it.

The scene shifts to the pull-up bars as the camera crew tapes Hannah and Natalie working in skimpy outfits that certainly don't look like regulation Marine boot camp outfits. The models simply quit working and remind their DI and the camera crew that Taylor was the only one who took this seriously. Just then Crawley walks up asking if "he" was here. Hannah does not answer and Crawley grabs her arm. The DI intervenes saying Crawley is hurting her. Crawley doesn't care but Tony breaks in and tells them all to calm down. Ziva wants to know who "he" is. "He" is Noah Keller, Taylor's ex-boyfriend. Keller was there but neither Crawley nor McMannis knew about it. Tony asks McMannis to take Crawley for a walk so he and Ziva can speak to the models alone.

Hannah notices Ziva's drink and offers her $100 for it. They haven't had anything but Marine food since the series started. Ziva tells her it is not for sale, but Tony takes it from Ziva's hand and gives it to Hannah, telling her it is free, just like love. Tony then starts spouting a bunch of stuff about how great the models are and how he loves their show. "Thanks, cutie" is the response. Ziva laughs at Tony and then asks why they didn't tell them about Keller's visit. Because Taylor asked them not to is the response. The models insist that Taylor was not taking drugs and that Noah just came to talk because they were having "relationship" problems. Taylor thought Noah was using again. Ziva informs them that someone gave Taylor enough PCP to kill all three of them.

Back at the squad room, McGee is trying to track down Noah Keller. Gibbs comes in and tells McGee to hang up the phone. McGee tries to explain what he's doing, but Gibbs takes the phone from his hand and hangs it up. Gibbs then tells McGee exactly where Keller is located. McGee wonders how Gibbs knew that and Gibbs glibly responds that he got an urgent call from the President. Actually, his AmEx records were in the fax machine. Gibbs and McGee gear up and walk out of the squad room as McGee mumbles that he specifically told her to e-mail him those records.

Gibbs and McGee arrive at the Cranston Motel just outside of Quantico. It is not a 5-star hotel and McGee comments on that fact, since Keller is worth millions of dollars and has a super model girlfriend. Keller's car is there and that, at least, lives up to his reputation. As they walk up to his motel room, Tony calls to let Gibbs know that Keller was at Quantico the day before Taylor died. Peering in the motel room window, Gibbs tells Tony that he can see Keller as McGee knocks on the door. Gibbs tells McGee not to bother as the camera zooms in and we see that Keller is lying on the bed, most likely dead.

McGee is taking pictures at the crime scene while Ducky is talking about how tragic it is having to deal with two young people's deaths in 24 hours, both self-inflicted. Gibbs has no sympathy since Hannah died a much more violent death. McGee doesn't understand how they could have everything and still end up like this. "Well, wealth and fame have often gone hand-in-hand with fatal addiction. Edgar Allen Poe. Keith Moon." Ducky explains. "Kurt Cobain," Mr. Palmer throws in. "The list goes on and on," Ducky continues and then tells Jethro that Keller has been dead about 24 hours, meaning he OD'd shortly after Taylor did. Ducky points out the various body indicators of heroin OD instead of PCP and Gibbs finds a small packet of heroin confirming Ducky's preliminary diagnosis. McGee has found a letter, but it is not a suicide note.

In Jenny's office, she is reading the note that McGee found. It is a Dear John letter from Taylor to Keller, postmarked 6 days ago at the Quantico PO. The letter is in Taylor's handwriting. Jenny compares it to Romeo and Juliet, Gibbs differs a bit on the details. Jenny thinks the letter was hard for Taylor to write, again Gibbs disagrees, thinking it was harder for Keller to receive. "No one likes getting dumped by Postal Express." "Maybe he didn't listen. Relationships change. Some people don't know when to let go," Jenny responds. Gibbs just looks away. Jenny has to brief the CG of Quantico in the morning and she wants Gibbs there. Gibbs declines, saying they don't even have enough evidence, yet, to link the two deaths together. Jenny says she can't tell the General they have nothing. "You can always write him a letter" Gibbs says as he leaves her office.

Tony walks into Abby's lab where the music is blaring. He calls out to Abby several times, getting louder each time to be heard above the music. Abby leaps out from behind her computer monitors saying "TA DA" and holding a bouquet of black roses. They're for Tony who finds them quite, uh, black. Abby thinks that's cool. The card says get well soon because they didn't have a "sorry I almost sent you to prison" card. Tony reminds her that it wasn't almost, she did send him to prison. "Not for good," she says. Tony is at a loss for words but all Abby wants is reassurance that Tony doesn't hate her. "I could never hate you. I don't think anyone could ever hate you," Tony assures her. Abby tells him that she doesn't know Billy Bob and then we are treated to a long, tangled explanation of one of Abby's previous boyfriends, reminding us all that Abby really doesn't have the best taste in men. Abby presents Tony with the vase and reminds him to water them so they don't die. "I thought they all ready were dead" Tony responds.

"Laugh Now, Cry Later" Mr. Palmer reads off of Keller's tattoo. "It's an interesting concept, Mr. Palmer," Ducky says. "Unfortunately for our guest here the laughter has ended." "My friend who went to NYU said this guy was the club king of New York. He was almost legendary," Mr. Palmer explains. "Well, if he wasn't before he most certainly is now," Ducky chuckles. "Apparently he only hung out with models and A-list celebrities. This guy got the VIP treatment everywhere he went," Mr. Palmer continues as he looks at the body on the autopsy table. Gibbs comes in at this and wonders if Palmer is writing a gossip column. Mr. Palmer tries to explain what he was talking about to Gibbs, but simply ends up stammering and then moves away.

"Talk to me, Duck," Gibbs asks. "Our initial assumptions were far from correct. When I examined him just now I found fresh bruises on his upper back, the left shoulder. The x-rays indicated a severe fracture of the left scapula. And the clavicle was almost completely crushed." Gibbs asks if he was in a fight but Ducky doesn't immediately answer. He tells Gibbs with injuries of that type, Keller's left arm would have been completely useless. Someone else had to have shot him up. Ducky tells Gibbs that Abby determined that Keller's blood alcohol level was 0.34. With that level, Keller's heart was pumping so slowly that most of the heroin was not metabolized. Keller was unconscious when the drug was administered.

Up in the squad room, Ziva is watching footage of the models assembling weapons and laughing at them. Tony comes in bearing his vase of black roses and asks Ziva why she is watching

Boot Camp Babes. "It's called research, Tony" Ziva responds. Ziva is looking for a lead. "This is only the beginning," Tony continues. "Before you know it you'll be sitting at home eating a large box of chocolates, watching the Food Network on your 50-inch plasma." Ziva denies it and holds up McGee as an example of someone who was raised in America, yet watches very little TV. McGee agrees that he watches 20 minutes here and there. Tony is unimpressed, telling McGee to tell Ziva what he does with the rest of his time. McGee protests that that isn't watching TV. "He pretends to be a fairy in an online computer game," Tony tells Ziva. "It's an Elf Lord," McGee protests. Making a hand gesture, Tony says "whatever."

Gibbs strides into the squad room telling them that Keller didn't commit suicide, he was murdered. The team look at Gibbs as he sits at his desk. Gibbs half-stands and asks Tony and Ziva what they are doing still there. They are to find out why. McGee comes over to Gibbs desk to tell him he may have something. Gibbs looks up and says "Are you waiting for me to guess, Elf Lord?" Tony stifles his laughter. McGee tells Gibbs that the night before he was murdered, Keller received two calls from his business manager and a third call, from Hannah.

McGee and Tony are in the barracks interviewing Hannah. Hannah tells them she's known Keller since high school, they used to sneak into clubs together. McGee recognizes the name of the club she mentions, having to admit that he heard about it on "Wild On." Hannah tells them that Noah was always popular and, despite Tony's assumptions, it had nothing to do with his dad's money. Noah was charismatic and interesting. "Most men who come from money are womanizers who life revolves around their car," Hannah continues. Tony stares straight ahead while McGee pointedly looks at him during this exchange. Hannah admits to dating Noah off and on, but it ended when Noah hooked up with Taylor. As for the drugs, it wasn't one or the other, they started doing them together. Hannah says she didn't speak to him while he was at the camp; he was very drunk and upset, but she called him just to make sure he was okay. Hannah cannot imagine why anyone would want to hurt Noah.

Jenny is sitting at Gibbs' desk leaving him a message when Gibbs walks up and wonders what she is doing. Gibbs asks if she is playing agent again. Gibbs and Jenny spar about how well-informed he is keeping her and how involved in his case she is getting. Gibbs finally says "Trust is a 2-way street" and Jenny asks him if he is saying that he doesn't trust her. We see a flashback where Gibbs is being arrested by French police and Jenny sees him but just keeps walking. "Of course I trust you," Gibbs responds and then wonders if they're through. "For now" Jenny tells him and walks away. Gibbs turns away and reaches for what Jenny left at his desk, revealing a reel of tape.

Ziva walks into the squad room, telling Gibbs that it is a copy of a ZNN piece with a retraction of the story and a public apology "to one Leroy Jethro Gibbs." Ziva gets up from her desk and leans in to Gibbs face asking him if the director has friends in high places. "Something I can do for you, Officer David," Gibbs asks. Ziva tells Gibbs that Abby wants to see him.

Abby has been watching Boot Camp Babes footage from the night Taylor died and that Taylor was nowhere to be seen. Ziva remarks that Taylor knew where the cameras were and how to avoid them. Abby, of course, has found the one camera that captured Taylor, a Quantico security camera on top of the mess hall. Gibbs asks Abby if she can clear up the image, and Abby is happy to break out her brand-new video enhancer program. As it works its magic on the image, we slowly see that Taylor is walking around Quantico at 1am with Staff Sergeant McMannis.

McMannis is waiting in the interrogation room while Ziva waits impatiently in the observation room. Tony explains one of Gibbs techniques to Ziva, calling it "Rock the Baby." Ziva scoffs and asks if it works. Tony tells her to just wait and see, Gibbs will be bursting into interrogation in a few moments and that big bad Marine will jump like a little girl. At that moment, the door to observation bursts open and Tony jumps like a little girl as Gibbs walks in. Gibbs isn't going to be interrogating McMannis, and neither is Tony. Ziva is. Ziva reminds Gibbs that she has never interrogated anyone without inflicting some form of pain. Gibbs just looks at her, holding out the file. Ziva takes it and goes into the interrogation room.

Ziva is showing McMannis the footage of him and Taylor walking around at Quantico. Ziva walks over to the table and takes her chair and pushes it way over to the wall. Tony wonders about this interrogation technique, but Gibbs knows Ziva wants to remove herself from the temptation of touching McMannis. McMannis pulls out a tin and asks Ziva if it is okay for him to dip. He explains that he is trying to quit, but both he and Taylor were addicted to nicotine. Ziva finds the thought of a model that spits tobacco amusing. McMannis says, no, she smoked, but it was against the rules of boot camp. Ziva asks if he supplied her with his snuff. He admits that. "And junk food?" Ziva continues. He admits that as well. "And midnight walks?" That too. McMannis says that he only did this for Taylor. They were in love, but they were keeping it a secret until the show ended.

In observation, Tony finds this the worst defense imaginable. The idea of a super model falling in love with a guy like that. Gibbs wonders why that's so hard to believe. Tony explains that super models date guys like George Clooney, or guys with bank accounts like George Clooney's, or the actual George Clooney, but they do not date guys like this one. "Meaning Marines, DiNozzo?" Gibbs asks. Tony backpedals quickly. Fortunately, Gibbs' phone rings just then. It is Abby and she has something for him.

In interrogation, McMannis is insisting that Taylor was like a regular girl. That he knows it sounds weird, but they just fell in love. Taylor was going to quit modeling and they were going to get married. Taylor was sick of that lifestyle. Ziva wonders why he did not mention this when they started the investigation. McMannis tells her that no one would have believed him. Ziva tells him that she believes him. McMannis wonders if he's free to go then. Ziva says no, she thinks they'll charge him with murder. McMannis doesn't understand this. He would never hurt Taylor. But what about the man who supplied her with the drugs that killed her, Ziva wonders. All through this McMannis is getting more and more agitated, getting extremely red in the face until he finally tells Ziva he's not feeling that well.

Abby is displaying Taylor's final wardrobe for McGee. McGee cannot think of a worse way to go than hanging on barbed wire. Abby, of course, can. Her top three are falling in a wood chipper, drowning in lava, and being eaten by a shark. Obviously Abby has given this some thought. McGee tells her she's more likely to be hit by lightning than eaten by a shark. "Not if you're a seal," is Abby's comeback. At that Gibbs walks in and wants to know what Abby's got for him. Abby has traced back all of the stains on Taylor's clothes. One of them is not blood, mud, rust, or sweat. It is PCP with formaldehyde, sodium, and nicotine. In other words, tobacco. The PCP was not in the Klowny Kake, it was in the snuff.

Back in interrogation, McMannis is having difficulty breathing. Ziva offers him water, but McMannis can no longer contain himself. He gets up and Ziva tells him to sit back down. McMannis turns over the table and Tony appears in interrogation to support Ziva. McMannis picks up his chair and threatens them both, throwing his chair at Tony and then smashing him into the wall. He comes at Ziva.

Gibbs is running down the hall toward interrogation. We can hear McMannis screaming as Gibbs flings the door open, drawing his weapon. Ziva and Tony have McMannis pinned to the floor. Gibbs tells them that McMannis is OD'ing on PCP and orders Tony to get a medical team. Tony leaves as Gibbs assumes his spot holding McMannis down. Gibbs demands to know where McMannis got his chew from. He got it from the show. Gibbs explains that McMannis has been drugged as he handcuffs him. Ziva leans in and tells McMannis he'll be okay and pats him gently on the back as Gibbs strokes the back of his head.

Back in Abby's lab, Abby is telling Gibbs that the snuff was laced with 400 milligrams of PCP. A typical hit of PCP would be between 7 and 10 milligrams. Ziva wonders what McMannis' chances of survival are. Given how much McMannis used, all they can do is hope. McGee comes into Abby's lab and gives them the report that McMannis is in stable but critical condition. Gibbs wonders if Abby found any prints on the snuff can. There were two. One is McMannis' and the other has no match yet, although it does match a print lifted from Noah Keller's syringe.

Back at Quantico, Tony and Gibbs are fingerprinting Hannah and Natalie. They explain that whoever killed Taylor also killed Noah and tried to kill McMannis. Cranshaw accuses Hannah, saying that she was always jealous of Taylor. Hannah dismisses this. Natalie does not know why they suspect them. Ziva tells them that Taylor was in love with McMannis. Hannah does not believe this, but Ziva assures her it is true. Hannah wants to be fingerprinted. She has nothing to hide. Gibbs tells her they've all ready cleared her. Her fingerprints were in her arrest record, from when she beat up her assistant with her cell phone. It wasn't Natalie either as they have her prints from when she drove her SUV through the front of a nightclub.

The team turns and looks at Cranshaw who protests that he loved Taylor. Gibbs holds him while Tony takes a hand and fingerprints him. Cranshaw demands his lawyer, but Gibbs tells him they don't need anyone's permission to take his prints, they're arresting him for the murders. Ziva explains that he didn't want Taylor to give up her career to marry a Marine, but he couldn't stop her. He knew about her addiction to nicotine. Natalie is astounded that he would kill his own daughter. Cranshaw insists that it was an accident. "What was I supposed to do? She was going to throw her life away. Be some, some jarhead's housewife," Cranshaw protests as he is hauled away in cuffs. "Thanks, Tom" is Hannah's response as she smiles. Ziva cannot take it and asks Hannah what is so funny. "The ratings on this one will be through the roof," Hannah tells her and grins. Ziva leans in, but Tony grabs Ziva by the back of her jacket and pulls her away, leading her out the door. "You really find her attractive?" Ziva asks Tony. "Oh yeah!" Tony tells her. "Well, I want to shoot her."

Back at the squad room, Tony and McGee are squabbling. McGee doesn't understand how he can be wrong when it is his opinion. Tony assures him he's wrong because he has the wrong opinion. Ziva is exasperated and wants them to agree to disagree, but McGee will not agree to that. Tony asks Gibbs for an opinion on the director's new haircut. "She cut her hair?" Gibbs asks. "Never mind," Tony says as he leans back in his desk chair. McGee glares at him as he leaves for the day. Ziva shrugs her shoulders and also leaves for the day.

Gibbs turns off his desk lamp as he starts to leave as well. Tony pulls a box out and asks "I don't suppose you want this" showing Gibbs the medal from the awards ceremony at the start of the show. Gibbs looks at the medal and then away without answering. "I'll get rid of it" Tony assures him and snaps the box shut. Gibbs tells Tony to go home and Tony assures him he's just finishing up a couple of things. Gibbs looks at the black roses and tells Tony his flowers are dead. Tony turns and looks at them himself and then unlocks his desk, pausing to admire the medal before he puts it in a locked box in his bottom drawer. We see a glimpse of the locked box which has several of the same medal boxes in it. Tony leans in to admire his flowers, takes a deep sniff, and then sneezes.

Guest Stars: Daniel Roebuck (Port Security Chief Matthew Lake), James Martin Kelly (Mookie Perkins), Morocco Omari (NCIS Special Agent Thomas Survoy), Tony Armatrading (William N'Diaye)
Summary: While on investigation at a shipyard, looking for smuggled weapons, Tony and Ziva disappear and it's up to NCIS to find them. Abby tries to track them down by tracking down their GPS chips, but they seem to be out of reach. Meanwhile, Tony and Ziva, hiding in a container, find evidence which could help them solve the case.

The episode's cold opening sees Tony and Ziva walking between shipping containers on the docks. Up ahead they see one open: they realize that containers are not unloaded at the dock and pull out their guns and run to inspect the container. Finding nothing inside, they put away their guns. All of a sudden, a fire-fight breaks out so Tony and Ziva take cover inside the container where they get locked in. The episode becomes the story of Tony and Ziva trying to escape from the container, which is eventually freighted on a truck with them stuck inside. Meanwhile, the rest of the team get worried and have to try to find them.

When Ziva and Tony discover counterfeit money hidden in a false wall of the container, they start dropping it from the container, leaving a Hansel-and-Gretel trail of money for someone to find and follow them and which is picked up by a drunk. Gibbs and the team have recruited the aid of the dock controller to track down the container, little knowing that the dock controller is in on the corruption.

When eventually released, the ending is a humorous dig at Ziva, who walks with her legs firmly wedged together, looking for a loo after 12 hours stuck in the container with no bathroom facilities.

Summary: When a Commander in charge of a shipment of fuel rods for nuclear power stations disappears, the NCIS team is called in. The team must solve the case in time, before the person who kidnapped the Commander finds out the secret location of the fuel rods or harms the Lt. Commander.

NCIS receives a call on a Sunday morning from a woman claiming to be Lt. Comdr. Amanda Wilkerson stating she's been abducted & needs help. The rest of the team is called in but McGee is unreachable. (breaks Gibb's Rule #3), Tony & Ziva are sent to her house to investigate, Abbey is given the call tape to analyse & Gibbs finds the Lt. Comdr.'s job involves the transportation of nuclear material & is one of 3 people who know the route it will take. Abbey finds the team has a short time to find the Lt. as she is in a car trunk with limited oxygen. Ducky shortens the time by hours after finding the Lt. has been treated for a lung condition. McGee triangulates her cell phone when it is used again & the team rush to the location to save her, but find 2 teenagers have the phone. McGee interrogates them using his experiences as a teenage geek & one tells where they found the phone. The team is surprised to find a pervert approaching the car as they arrive.

Light Sleeper

Season 3

Episode Number: 60

Season Episode: 14

Originally aired: Tuesday January 24, 2006 on CBS
Writer: Christopher Silber
Director: Colin Bucksey
Show Stars: David McCallum (Dr. Ducky Mallard), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), Lauren Holly (NCIS Director Jenny Shepard)
Recurring Role: Brian Dietzen (Jimmy Palmer)
Guest Stars: Tim Griffin (Marine Sgt. Malcolm Porter), Karl Makinen (Marine Staff Sgt. James Dawson), Keone Young (Yoon Dawson), Esther K. Chae (Yoon Dawson), Ruth Rudnick (Gina Goodwin)
Production Code: 03014
Summary: The NCIS team investigates a murder of two Marine's wives, and must find the murderers before they attack their next target, a another woman.

This is the one where the North Korean spy kills off her co-spies and prevents a bombing. She is the only one of the 3 spies in a 'sleeper cell' who has fallen in love with her husband, had a family and adopted the US way of life. They each met a marine when the marines were stationed in South Korea and passed themselves off as South Korean, to marry and emigrate to USA. Our "good villain" kills the other baddies, knowing that it will reveal that she herself is an enemy of the state, so far as the law is concerned, even if she is doing it to protect the US from harm. And the husband, the father of her baby, is put in a position where he has to decide whether to believe in her no matter what, or to react to the fact that she has been a spy (and thus deceiving him at some level) from the start. When you are undercover, is everything tainted by the central lie?

There is a small red herring storyline concerning domestic violence in the home of one of the murdered Korean wives...but it wasn't the husband who was the violent one. In interrogation, Gibbs has to move from his antipathy towards men who hit women to realising that sometimes the man can be the victim. This is a growth point for Gibbs.

Ziva, who is completely unsentimental, makes all her analysis of the case on the basis of what a good spy would do, and predicts what she thinks their murderer will do. Gibbs makes his analysis based on the reasoning that the woman is no longer just a sleeper spy, but now a mother and that her loyalties have shifted. Ziva distrusts this sentimentalism...until the final scene, where the husband gets to meet up with his wife who, despite defusing the bomb and saving the team (and others) is now in custody and being escorted from interrogation in NCIS to wherever the CIA are taking her. Gibbs gets the guards to stop so that husband and wife can have a minute together, in the squadroom. Watched by all the team, the wife tearfully says how sorry she is and that she truly meant everything about how she loves him and their baby. And, equally distressed, clutching their baby in his arms, he says he will be waiting for her and they will face everything together.

And Ziva learns another lesson about families that her own could never teach her.

This is one where the guest stars turn in a truly powerful performance with emotional tension that is gripping, right to the end.

Production Code: 03015
Summary: While discovering an illegal automotive chop shop, the NCIS team stumbles upon a severed head of a Marine, hidden in one of the cars from the shop. When they find possible suspects, the team will have to find the rest of the body and find the murderer.

Two Petty Officers are in a garage taking apart cars, bragging about the money they are going to get for each part. The garage door opens and a third Petty Officer drives in with another car to strip. He gets out and brags about the car, pops the trunk and finds a medium sized cooler. As the garage door starts to go down, the NCIS team rushes in and busts them. Tony and McGee handcuff the three soldiers while Ziva checks out the trunk. She opens the small cooler, then calls for Gibbs. When Gibbs looks in, they show a severed head on ice.

As the team is processing the scene, Ziva stands staring down at the head. Tony thinks it's Ziva's first "severed head" crime scene but she tells him it's not easy when you know the person. She tells him of a friend of her's who was undercover in a Mossad Cell and his head was overnighted to them in a cooler. She said after that she vowed never to be captured alive.

Ducky and Palmer enter the scene and Ducky thanks Gibbs for calling him in. Ducky said it was WWE Smackdown night in the Mallard residence and he was happy to leave. He said his mother loved wrestling and he didn't have the heart to tell her it wasn't real. Palmer said he loved WWE as well as he started to bring the stretcher out of the ME Van. Tony told Palmer he wouldn't need the stretcher as there weren't enough body parts.

Back at the lab, Abby came in as Ducky was telling the history of the guillotine and how it came about. He said that the Nazi's killed over 20,000 people between 1942 - 1943 by decapitation. He then examines the head and realized the head was cut over post-mortem - the man had been dead before his head was removed. Abby asks for tissue samples to test to see if she could find a match in the system. She said "Lay some tissue samples on me Duckman."

Ziva was looking over Tony's shoulder, reading an email from a woman and referenced Tony's nickname, "Honey buns". Gibbs came in and said that nickname was only for him and another person and asked for an update. Tony and Ziva did a background check on the car and found it had just been purchased two weeks prior to being stolen. Tony said the registration wasn't in DMV's system yet but McGee had hacked into the system and uncovered that the car was registered to Epsilon Corporation. Bummed that McGee showed them up, Tony and Ziva busted on McGee about hacking DMV and the penalty. Gibbs said it was better than checking personal email on his time "Honey buns." McGee gave them a name and address and Tony and Ziva went to check it out. After they left, Gibbs told McGee he'd done a good job, however, Tony was right that it was a penalty to hack into the DMV system.

One of the three Petty Officers was brought into interrogation by McGee. Gibbs interrogated the P.O., who claimed he had no knowledge of the head. Gibbs indicated he'd already interrogated the other two P.O.'s and they rolled over on the third one. He asked McGee to explain how long the P.O.'s jail time would be and as McGee rattled it off, Gibbs took out the pictures of the severed head. McGee said for murder, the P.O. would be looking at life. Rattled the Petty Officer said he had just stolen the car from a parking lot at a strip club, he had no idea about the cooler or its contents when he'd boosted the car.

Abby got a hit on the tissue samples for the head. They belonged to a Navy Captain Parker Wayne and it was discovered he had died four months earlier due to a heart attack. Ducky contacted the ME, Commander Ross, who had done the autopsy on Wayne and met with him. Ross brought his x-rays from Wayne's case and assured Gibbs and Ducky that Wayne had died on the operating table of a heart attack. Ross said he'd done the autopsy two days later, then released the body to Vernon Family Mortuary in Andover, VA.

McGee and Tony went to the Mortuary and interviewed the owner. He was clearing out some ashes and clapped his gloves in Tony and McGee's faces, getting ashes on them, much to their horror. He researched the file on Captain Wayne and said the body had been picked up and the cremation was done by his assistant, Martin Roussad. When they asked to speak with Roussad, Vernon admitted Roussad hadn't shown up for work that day. When Tony asked for an address, Vernon said Roussad lived on the grounds and gave them access to Roussad's place. When they entered, they discovered a room with skeletal remains set up like a ritual but no Roussad.

Gibbs went to Captain Wayne's home and spoke with his widow and daughter. Gibbs indicated that there was a paper mix-up and he needed Wayne's remains to straighten things out. Jocelyn Wayne wondered why an NCIS agent would be doing something so tedious as to following up on paperwork. Gibbs said it was punishment from the new director. Jocelyn was reluctant at first but Gibbs assured he she could trust that he would take the utmost care of her husband. She requested to have the remains back in 8 days as it was her husband's wish that the next time his ship sailed, his ashes be scattered at sea by his former shipmates. Gibbs assured her he would have them back to her in time.

Tony and Ziva went to the attorney, Sean Olivier, for Epsilon Corporation. Tony and Sean did a little flirting and Ziva asked for the women's help but Sean refused without a warrant. They returned 24 hours later with a warrant and Sean had all the files ready and processed. When Ziva and McGee were going through the files, they realized Sean had had time to cleanse them before she got them ready for NCIS. They came up with another address for storage for Epsilon and McGee, Tony and Ziva went to investigate. When they knocked, nobody answered and Ziva picked the lock, much to McGee's dismay. They walked through and saw it was sparse, but there were machines in there and the team wondered what they were used for. They opened up a freezer in the back and discovered it was full of human body parts.

Jocelyn Wayne showed up at the NCIS offices. Jenny Shepard went to meet with her and during their conversation, Jocelyn mentioned that Gibbs had told her it was his punishment from the new director. Jenny played dumb and asked for more information as Gibbs walked in. Jenny called Gibbs on his lie and said she thought the new director was easy to get along with. Jocelyn informed Gibbs that the ship's departure had been moved up and she needed to have the remains sooner rather than later. Jenny said they would have them back to her in time and Gibbs agreed. When Jenny walked away, Jocelyn realized Jenny was the "new" director.

Gibbs had Sean Olivier brought in for questioning and she showed up with her attorney. She claimed she had no knowledge of any of the goings on. Meanwhile Abby discovered that one of the sets of remains found in the storage freezer belonged to the missing Martin Roussad. Gibbs went back to talk with Sean Olivier and told her the truth so she admitted that Roussad had supplied the body parts.

Ducky called Commander Ross to help him autopsy the body parts they discovered. Ross admitted he was honored Ducky had called him. Ducky got Ross to state how much body parts were with and a full body. He then had Palmer go work on another exam table, while he worked together with Ross on the upper torso of one of the remains. Ducky had Ross make the first cut and then backed off and asked Ross if it was worth it. Ross denied knowing what Ducky was talking about. Gibbs entered along with Ziva and Sean Olivier and McGee and Tony entered through the back door to block Ross' exit. Ross and Sean got into a shouting match over who did what and who had killed Roussad. Gibbs told them to shut up as he didn't care who did what, they both were under arrest. Ziva, Tony and McGee lead the two out of autopsy. Ducky pointed to a nearly put together body, which was the remains of Captain Parker Wayne. He asked Gibbs if he planned on having the remains to the widow on time as it was part of evidence. Upon Gibbs' look, Ducky said he'd accompany Gibbs and the body to the mortuary to oversee the cremation.

Gibbs returned the ashes to the widow. Wayne's little girl was happy to have her father "back." Jocelyn asked Gibbs if indeed, those were her husbands remains and Gibbs said they were. He offered to accompany Jocelyn and her daughter to the ship but she declined as the Navy was sending a car. She thanked Gibbs and gave him a kiss on the cheek.

Summary: When an ambulance explodes while carrying the remains of a Marine's body that was killed in a car crash, the NCIS team is called in to investigate what actually happened. The investigation leads them to some sudden discoveries – the DNA of the victim found in the ambulance doesn't match the Marine's DNA; the ambulance was set up to explode; and the family of the dead Marine is hiding a very important secret.

Two paramedics are transporting a dead body from the morgue of a D.C. area hospital to the Bethesda National Naval Medical Center (NNMC). The remains they are carrying are those of a Marine who was killed in a car crash. Shortly after their ambulance departs, the driver smells something unusual. His mate confirms that it must be gas. As soon as they stop, the vehicle suddenly ignites. The two men have barely sufficient time to run away before the explosion of the truck. - At NCIS HQ, Tony who is using McGee's computer is chatting with the very cute NCIS Special Agent Tina Larsen who is there TDY for a couple of days. Tina believes she is online with Tim and talking about his coworker Tony who has been trying to flirt with her earlier. Ziva is amused by what's going on but warns Tony that he will be in serious trouble if Gibbs catches him playing on McGee's PC. When Gibbs walks in unexpectedly almost at the same time as McGee, Tony and Ziva start improvising a phoney and funny celebration of Tim's birthday. As they are leaving the room, following Gibbs to go investigate the explosion of a medical transport, Tina is just inviting the one who she believes is McGee for a drink. . . - On the terrain, Tony and Tim persist in their trifle discussion about McGee's unanticipated date while Ziva is trying to make them focus on their work. Tony who must be feeling somewhat guilty becomes sarcastic about Ziva's expertise. Ziva brings her two dissipated colleagues back to reality when she replies that, being Israeli, "this is not her first exploding ambulance. . ." At the same time, the two paramedics explain Gibbs that they haven't left the van unattended for more than 4 or 5 minutes. One of them thinks that somebody must be trying to kill them. When Gibbs asks "Who was trying to kill you?" the co-driver replies: "Who knows, there are a lot of weirdos out there!" And Giggs to carry on: "Tell me about it". - Ducky tells Gibbs that the remains that burned with the ambulance are those of Lance Corporal William Danforth Junior who survived IED (Improvised Explosive Device) in Iraq and RPG (Rocket Propelled Grenade) in Afghanistan. . . but unfortunately passed away in a car accident trying to avoid a deer at 60 miles an hour. Ducky says this could have been an accident, lucky for the two escorts to get out. . . Gibbs: "Lucky in a way I don't like. . ." - The next day, in the office, Gibbs surprises Tony who is cheekily browsing photos inside McGee's private iPod that the poor Tim imprudently left on his "public" desk. . . They both receive Gibbs traditional "clap" on the head: Tony because of his bad behaviour and Ziva for alerting him of Gibbs' arrival. More seriously, Ziva doesn't think that the drivers were the target. - A few minutes later, Abby is explaining what she has discovered with regard to the ambulance fire. This was most likely not an accident. Moreover, McGee presents evidence of what could have been the trigger of the explosion of the Oxygen canisters. It also seems that the person who triggered the explosion waited long enough for the two drivers to be able to escape. Gibbs also questions if the DNA of the Marine was confirmed? Abby answers him that she has been very busy so far but that Ducky is taking care of that. In autopsy, Ducky is puzzled by a mystery. He explains Gibbs that the death certificate of the Marine indicates that he died from "blunt force thoracic trauma" which is typical in motor vehicle accidents but that he has only been able to partially verify that. Very professionally, Ducky has attempted to identify himself what is left of the body but the young man's teeth are in such a bad state that it would take a very long time to make identification from dental records. Also, his DNA has been extremely degraded by the fire but, nevertheless, Ducky has found a piece of tissue viable enough to run a test against Danforth's DNA at the Armed Forces repository. The DNA is from someone else: that is the mystery! - Gibbs goes back in the office and informs Ziva and Tony that the fire may have been caused purposely to hide the real identity of the victim. For this reason, Gibbs sends Ziva and McGee to the hospital to interview the doctor who pronounced the Marine dead and find out who identified him. He is then told by Tony that the Director needs to see him in her office ASAP. Gibbs enters Director's Sheppard office abruptly and unannounced in a form of retaliation for the term "ASAP" but realises he somehow goofed because she is not alone. - The Director introduces him to Mr. William "Bill" Danforth, the father of the dead Marine. Danforth is himself a former member of the Corps and a friend of the SECNAV. He admits that he is using his personal relation to be kept posted about of the progress of the investigation. He wants to know how it comes that the body of his son was incinerated. Gibbs informs him and Director Sheppard of "the mystery". The body found in the ambulance's fire is not the one of his son. Since Bill was a fellow Marine Gibbs promises to keep him in the loop. Before letting him go, Gibbs asks Bill if he identified his son's body. The latter denies. When the father asks in turn if it is possible that his son could still be alive, Gibbs answers that the only thing he knows for sure is that the hospital transported the wrong body. . . - At the hospital, McGee and Ziva are speaking to the doctor who pronounced Danforth dead. He says that when the victim arrived he was in a very bad state and hard to recognize. When Ziva asks who identified his body, the physician says that they took his driver's license from his wallet but also that a friend confirmed his identity. When asked who this friend is, he points them to a young man reading a book loud for a young lady lying in bed badly injured; she is Rebecca, Danforth's girlfriend. Corporal Kenneth Merrill confirms he helped identifying the body. His buddy was in his own car with Rebecca. Before, the three of them had been in a bar "celebrating" the end of Billy's second tour in Iraq. Merrill didn't drink but Billy was pretty drunk and Rebecca was asked to drive him back home. Merrill also explains, he and Danforth were very close friends since they were children. He had discovered the accident when he in turn went back home some 30 minutes after the couple had left. - Gibbs went to interview Danforth's CO while DiNozzo was sent to discuss with Billy's platoon. In the camp Gibbs and Tony are crosschecking their results. It appears that Danforth was a top Marine but the word is that he only signed in because his father was a Marine before him. William was inseparable from a certain Corporal Kenneth Merrill, an IED specialist, who is known in his platoon as the "Forrest Gump" of explosives. Tony asks Gibbs if he is wondering if Merrill helped Danforth fake his own death to get out of the Corps. Jethro answers: No. I'm wondering who they got to play the part of the dead body! - Taking advantage of a momentary absence of Gibbs, Director Sheppard, who wants to keep the SECNAV happy, comes down from her office to "discuss" with Gibbs' team members fishing for some information. She learns that they have two opposed theories. Tim and Ziva think that Corporal Merrill may have killed his friend because they had a strong fight in the bar that Kenneth conveniently forgot to mention and since Merrill passed by the accident scene he had the possibility to "finish Danforth off". They believe that there could have been a third person in the car. Merrill went to hide Danforth's body. When coming back, the cops were already there. So he had to go to the hospital to confirm Danforth's ID but later had to burn the ambulance to avoid the real identity of the body to be discovered during the autopsy. Tony has a different theory that includes a motive. He says that when driving drunk instead of Rebecca, he did not hit a deer but a human being. To avoid admitting the accidental killing he swaps "his" body with the one of the John Doe, then escapes and hides himself. He has his friend Merrill confirmed the ID and later blows the ambulance. When Gibbs returns he is pissed off that the Director has spoken directly to his team without him being there. - Gibbs and Ziva go back to the unit to confront Corporal Merrill. They try to make him elaborate about the fight in the bar. Merrill is really sorry he was unable to take his friend's car keys away. He is also sorry he did not drive him back himself and says that Billy died because of him. He seems very amazed when told that the burned body is not Corporal Danforth. Tony and Tim go back to the accident scene where they find a prescription bottle belonging to Corporal Merrill. There is blood on it. - The next morning Tony explains to Ziva that this discovery proves that his bodies swap theory is the good one. He is interrupted by an excited Gibbs who says that Abby found Danforth's blood all over the windshield and the hood. Ziva insists saying that Merrill was the only person with enough experience and means to blow up the ambulance. Gibbs says she is right. - Abby and McGee have discovered that the fire of the ambulance was triggered by a disposable cell phone. There is no chance to read the call log of what remains of that phone but McGee pulled the list of calls placed in the hospital cell zone at the moment of the explosion. One came from the cell phone of Corporal Merrill. - Gibbs meets William Danforth Senior at the hospital and explains him that the fire was not an accident. He asks Bill if he knows Merrill. Merrill could have killed his friend because of Rebecca. They had a fight at the bar. Bill admits his son was sometimes drinking too much this could have been the reason for the fight. Finally when Gibbs mentions that Merrill's cell phone could have triggered the fire, Danforth's father gives him an airtight alibi by saying he was with him at the time it happened. To make things even more complicated Tony phones his boss saying that Merrill has disappeared since Gibbs last visit. . . - Gibbs goes in his "old partner" office, i.e. Director Sheppard, to summarise the case around a bottle of wine and a "steak au poivre". Gibbs doesn't understand what happened. He believes that Merrill's alibi is a lie but he is also convinced that's Danforth's grief is real. There is no evidence that Danforth's son is really dead since the DNA doesn't match. Jenny's conclusion is that, however it happened, Jethro has to find Merrill. That way he would find Danforth's Junior and so finally understand everything. - Ducky tells Gibbs that it may take weeks to identify the remains using the teeth method. Abby has found Danforth's prints on Merrill's prescription bottle and the content was not the one expected. It was not a tranquilizer but an anti-rejection drug. Danforth could have had a transplant and the DNA test could have been made against the one of the donor of the organ. . . - Gibbs meets Danforth's Senior again. The latter admits that his son had a kidney transplanted. The donor was his best friend Kenneth Merrill. This information was kept secret by the family because Marines are not authorised to remain in their Corps if they have had a transplant. Revealing this information could have cost both young men their careers: receiver and donor. After the passing of his son in the car accident, Danforth's father realised that Merrill's future with the Marine could be compromised if it was found that he had donated one of his kidneys. The DNA test during the autopsy could have revealed it. The father confessed that he paid the morgue to swap the body of his son with the one of an unclaimed John Doe and that was the only person responsible for blowing up the ambulance. - Understanding the whole case now, Gibbs even goes as far as helping his family "The Marine Corps" by rearranging "a little bit" the evidences so to keep everybody happy: the father, the SECNAV and even his own Director. But nonetheless he himself deserved his traditional "clap" on the head for doing that!

Summary: When Marine dog tags are found in a national forest by a group of teens, the NCIS team is called in to investigate. While searching for the campsite of the Marine, the team finds out that there was another person, possibly a woman, with him. The investigation takes them to an even more higher discovery – there could be a serial killer killing women in the national forest.

A park ranger is leading a group through the woods when they come upon a pile of bear scat. She asks if anyone wants to investigate further, find out what he has been eating. A young man steps forward, pokes around with a stick and pulls up a set of dog tags.

Tony has dragged Ziva down to autopsy to see what he calls every newbie's worst nightmare. She would rather be taking a shower, they have apparently just come from the gym. Ducky is conducting an autopsy, all new agents are required to observe one. Gibbs interrupts, just after a newbie pukes, saying a body was found in Shenandoah park.

At the park the team investigates the sailor's campsite and what remains of his mauled body. Tony assigns McGee the job of bagging and tagging the bear poo, since he was a boy scout and all. The rangers explain that the area was restricted to campers because a hunter, Jason Edom, had been caught bear baiting there last month. Tony attempts to impress the cute female ranger, by suggesting he is a nature fan. He screws up however, when he says he will have to try bear baiting next time. Meanwhile, Gibbs has noticed that the victim was not alone, there are two sets of footprints and a pair of women's panties. The rangers and locals set up a search party to find the missing woman. While Tony, Ziva and McGee head to the local general store Jackrabbit Slims, where park visitors often park, in search of the victim's car. Inside the store Ziva and Jason Edom, who works there, have a small verbal confrontation. The owner, Wes, apologizes for Edom's behavior. Gibbs had returned to DC with Ducky. Ducky discovers no defensive wounds on the victim's body to indicate a bear attack but rather a cut made by a flat blade into the heart. He was not killed by the bear.

In the bullpen Tony and McGee are discussing the case, the sailor had been on leave the last 6 days, when Ziva comes in with a box of black roses. She had almost forgotten it was Abby's birthday. She heads down to the lab, where she finds Abby has already received 2 bouquets of black roses. Abby confides in Ziva that she is distressed because Gibbs didn't take her out last night for their traditional birthday dinner. Ziva's explanation of "he probably just forgot" doesn't seem to console her. Ziva realizes her mistake and tries to fix it, offering to remind him but Abby doesn't want that. Abby, rather sadly, returns to work; finding a name to go with the birth control patch they found. At the elevator Ziva bumps into Ducky, a bouquet of black roses and goth teddy bear in hand. He complains he had to go to 4 flower shops to find them, apparently they are sold out all over the city.

Tony has a theory. Since no one saw the girlfriend, perhaps she did not want to be seen. Perhaps she is a black widow. Ziva doesn't buy it. Gibbs returns, having spent the night tracking the missing woman. He wants McGee to put the film dooeywhacker (digital camera's memory card) up on the plasma. He shows them that there was no sign of her walking out of the campsite, she was carried. The only obvious part of the trail was the back edge of a military issue boot and a rhinestone. Gibbs sends Ziva and Tony back to the park, they see it as an opportunity to hit on their respective park rangers again. At Jackrabbit Slims they both warm up to the rangers.

Abby is a little cold and curt towards Gibbs when he comes to the lab. She has matched hair samples from the campsite and the car, the girlfriend drove out there with him. Abby seeks some comfort from Bert after he leaves. Upstairs Tony is gloating that he and his ranger are going out next weekend. Ziva counters with the fact that her ranger asked her out tonight. She said no, didn't want to seem 'sleazy' (instead of easy). Tony and Ziva compete to tell Gibbs about the accidental deaths in the park over the last few years, all female. McGee who had been hard at work interrupts, he found something. He pulled the driver license photos of the supposed accident victims. They could be sisters, doesn't seem so coincidental or accidental anymore. They have a killer using park accidents to cover up murder.

Abby and McGee have a slight miscommunication in the lab. He thinks they are having a conversation about the serial killer while she is actually talking about Gibbs forgetting her birthday. Abby is very touched that McGee feels his actions are unforgivable and no excuse could excuse it. McGee gets a hug, and plays along. Gibbs arrives at this point and threatens to send McGee to a weather station in the Antarctic. Abby tells him she has found out who the missing woman is. The birth control patch was new, and the company had to keep records of who was using them. Abby then narrowed it down and found the only one who did not show up to work, Jessica Fagan. She is physically similar to the other women.

The rangers arrive to help and when Abby calls to say she found something Ziva and her ranger, James Landis, go down with Gibbs. Tony is left getting a photo of Fagan for his ranger. Things remain flirty, until Tony notices her underarm hair and unshaven legs. In an attempt to extricate himself from the impending date. He breaks down telling her his wife died in pottery accident and he isn't ready to move on. Cut to a shot of Edom receiving the photo by fax at the store and throwing it away. Back at the lab Abby lets them know that the victim was sprayed down with a hunting lure, specifically Uncle Bebo's Bear Attractant. Meanwhile, McGee has found Edom's prints on a number of things at the campsite.

Edom is brought in for questioning. From the observation room Ziva is watching him. Gibbs comes in and wants to know if she could interrogate him without breaking any bones. "Truthfully? No." He assigns his defense to her and goes in to interrogate Edom himself. He claims not to have been inside the park, and that he didn't know Fagan or any of the other women. Back upstairs Tony wants to know if Ziva shaves. He then wants to know how she is doing with Edom's defense. She is still convinced of his guilt but at Tony's prodding, theorizes that all the items with Edom's prints could have been purchased by the victim at Jackrabbit Slim's. She then discovers that the night of the killing Edom was at his daughter's dance recital. He didn't do it. Gibbs still wants Ziva to interrogate him, Gibbs thinks Edom knows who did kill the petty officer.

Its Ziva's turn to interrogate Edom, in an effort establish a rapport with him she tells him her father never came to her dance recitals. She plays on his love for his daughter, telling him that each of the victims was someone's princess. He tells her that Fagan was the store owner's former girlfriend. Fagan had filled a restraining order against him, she had since changed her name. They theorize he took his anger out on woman who resembled her. Before they leave Abby calls Gibbs down, she has discovered the rhinestones are a trail, and wants to tell him its OK he forgot her birthday. He says he didn't forget, tells her to check her desk and there is her Pulp Fiction present. Gibbs is trying to leave when Ducky catches up with him. His review of the other cases showed him the killer kept them alive for maybe 10 days.

There are two possible cabins in the park where the killer could have taken her. Gibbs, Tony and McGee head out. Ziva is told to stay behind, they want to take him alive. Gibbs is on the trail but it is more evident this time and whoever it is appears to be tracking someone else. Gibbs decides its too obvious, maybe an ambush, they separate for better cover. Back at the base, in Ranger Landis' cabin, Ziva notices a rhinestone on the floor. Cut back to the woods. A shot is fired and the team converge to find Landis has shot Wes, the store owner, he says he was trying to find Jessica...Ziva has followed the trail to a locked room and a tied up Fagan.

Landis, Gibbs, McGee, Tony and unconscious Wes are heading back to base camp when they hear the radio report that Jessica was found in Landis' root cellar. Landis turns his shotgun on them. Gibbs remains calm and asks how many, to which Landis replies 26. Suddenly Gibbs throws his rifle at Landis and launches himself at him. McGee and Tony who are holding an unconscious Wes debate whether or not Gibbs needs any help. As soon as Landis gets the better of Gibbs and runs off they drop the body. But Gibbs has already raised his rifle and shot him in the..well.. lets just go with behind.

Summary: The NCIS team must stop a teenage student from detonating a bomb attached to his body, while he's taking the other students hostage at a Quantico base high school. Gibbs tries to stop him when he enters the classroom, only to realize that there may be someone else controlling the teenage student from the outside. Meanwhile, while Gibbs is in the classroom, Tony is left in charge.

A high school student locks himself into a high school classroom. The NCIS team are called in to diffuse the situation, when it's discovered that the abductor is the son (Cody) of a Naval officer.

When the hostages are first detained, an abductee is noisily sobbing. Cody tells her to calm down. When it appears she cannot, a fellow student explains she is asthmatic and is in the midst of having an asthma attack, and needs her inhaler which is still in her locker. (As an asthma-matic I have to say it was the most unconvincing asthma attack I have ever seen.)

This gives Gibbs an opportunity to enter the classroom as a hostage, leaving DiNozzo in charge on the outside.

Abby and McGee are able to hack into one of the 3 computers in the classroom that have web-cams and are wired to the Internet. They gain control of both what the web-cam is seeing and can flash messages to Gibbs.

Cody makes his demand: he wants to see his mother, which after attempts to find her, the team discovers she's deceased.

Ziva, with her bomb expertise, identifies the bomb strapped to Cody will not be detonated if he is taken out via snipers.

They have an opportunity to take out Cody via snipers on an adjacent building. DiNozzo tells them to stand down. Ziva questions him but he responds by saying that he can't shoot a 15-year old boy. "It's a Gibbs' thing. My gut."

Back in the classroom Gibbs notices an earpiece in Cody's ear. With Cody at the front of the classroom, and Gibbs' back to him, he signs to Abby. At first, she's unable to make out what Gibbs is saying. But then she deciphers "PUPPET". She sends this message to Gibbs via the computer, and he nods once.

Abby and McGee frantically discuss and deduce that Cody must be controlled via earwig. They flash another message to Gibbs and he nods. But this time Cody catches him, and demands to know why he's nodding. Gibbs denies that he's communicating to anyone outside the room.

Summary: While working on just a regular murder case with the rest of the NCIS team, Abby is almost killed by an evidence from the case and soon it becomes clear that the murder was staged, and that someone wants Abby dead. The team discovers some enemies from Abby's past, and they must find out who is the person, before the person kills Abby.

Body parts are found in a Naval motel. The team investigates and initially calls it as a drug deal gone bad, until the body parts turn out to be medical waste and the evidence is found to be planted. Abby is in the lab with McGee, testing the drugs, which a preliminary drugs test at the scene indicated was cocaine. However, the chemicals in Abby's kit react with cyanide which was in the cocaine giving cyanide gas. The air in the room quickly becomes toxic. McGee saves Abby by dragging her from the lab and she then secures it from the outside.

Abby is grilled by the rest of the team about a restraining order she had taken out against her ex-boyfriend, Mikel. She tells them that he couldn't take the hint that it was over and was now stalking her. Gibbs asks why Abby did not go to him and she answers that she wanted him restrained but not worked over with a baseball bat. Gibbs, Tony and McGee go to see her ex, a crime scene cleaner, to make sure he does not try anything like this again. He has an alibi and they are confounded because he spent the attack time working alongside police on crime cleanups.

Gibbs orders Abby into McGee's protective custody at McGee's house. When McGee leaves Abby in order to fetch her toothbrush from the car, Mikel invades McGee's flat. Abby fights him off. Mikel escapes as McGee returns. Next day in the NCIS squadroom, Gibbs punishes McGee by denying him the use of his deskchair, so McGee works at his computer whilst kneeling. When McGee discovers a way to track the villain's computer surveillance of Abby, Gibbs rewards him with the return of his chair and tells him to get Abby to help him with the work. McGee points out that first someone will have to persuade Abby to leave the elevator. Gibbs goes to the elevator which opens to reveal Abby sitting in the corner, holding a taser gun from Ziva, pepper spray from Cynthia and brass knuckles from the Director. She explains that only 5 of the 2.2million deaths each year occur in elevators. Gibbs, having sat on the floor next to her, simply says no one is going to harm you, Abby. Abby declares that Gibbs is only saying that to make her feel better but, admitting that it did make her feel better, asks him to say it again. He does, and puts his arm around her so that she can rest her head on his shoulder, at which point the elevator doors open again to reveal Jimmy Palmer, suitably stunned at the sight of Abby/Gibbs nonchalantly floorbound.

Abby eventually moves out of the elevator and takes up residence in her lab. This proves unwise as Mikel manages to hack the Navy Yard security system and gain entry. He phones Abby whilst watching her through her basement lab's window. She realises that he is outside as the rest of the team realise that he is on the Navyard. The team scare him off and Gibbs takes Abby to his own home as protective custody. Abby, unable to sleep, drinks in Gibbs' basement and works on his boat. Gibbs arrives and tells Abby she needs to sleep. She responds with an explanation of how she keeps seeing Mikel and, now drunk, will have to face court tomorrow with a hangover. She debates whether she has been the architect of her own problems with Mikel and arrives at the conclusion that she has not, which pleases her. Meanwhile, Gibbs has removed a series of tools from her hands that she has been drunkenly waving around, putting him in danger. When she damages his boat, she becomes contrite and scared, at which point Gibbs reveals that Mikel has been caught crossing the Anacostia River.

The team relax, with Mikel in interrogation, and Abby goes to court. However, the real court escort phones in to say his tires were slashed, and the team realise that Abby is in peril. Yet again. Tony and Gibbs set off in pursuit. When they locate her, Gibbs is amused to find that Abby has used all of the self-defence weapons given her by her female colleagues and that they have worked. They come upon Abby at the point where her assassin is on the ground, being tasered, and ordered not to look up Abby's skirt.

The final reveal is that the true villain is the defendant in the court case that Abby was to give evidence in. The villain paid the assassin to get rid of Abby. Mikel merely enabled the assassin to go unnoticed, even though Mikel had repeatedly, truthfully, declared that someone else was following Abby. Mikel was also revealed, however, to have prepared a suicide note for Abby.

Summary: While working on an assignment, Gibbs is seriously injured in an explosion, and taken to a hospital, where he recalls his painful past, which he has always hidden from others. The rest of the team must proceed with the investigation and put their feelings towards Gibbs's injury aside. Tony is left in charge, which may cause a bit of trouble.

NCIS Special Agent Anthony DiNozzo, Special Agent Timothy McGee and Officer Ziva David wait in a car as their boss, Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs, contacts an undercover government agent on a suspicious foreign ship. They witness an explosion from the ship which killed the agent and placed Gibbs in a coma. In his comatose state, Gibbs has flashbacks of the murder of his wife and daughter, and his wounding in Desert Storm.

Tony becomes the temporary head of the investigation team as the group attempts to track down Pinpin Pula, a missing crew member of the ship, suspected to be an Abu Sayaaf member. The team confirms the identity of the dead agent to be NCIS Special Agent Abog Galib, with whom Gibbs was supposed to be meeting. Meanwhile, Abby Sciuto is disturbed by Ziva's seeming nonchalance regarding Gibbs's serious injuries, causing a fight between the two.

Gibbs awakens from his coma but has no memory of his friend and colleague, Ducky Mallard.

Production Code:	03024
Summary:	The NCIS team must work on an assignment against a terrorist group without Gibbs, who is still recovering from the explosion. Gibbs has to fight with memory loss, while he's visited by his mentor and his former boss. His help is needed, especially when the team discovers that Gibbs is the only person who has information about the terrorists' plans, so he needs to retrieve his memory before the terrorists attack.

The episode starts in hospital. Doctor and Ducky are talking about Gibbs who just woke up. They soon find out that Gibbs remembers the explosion, but the one that happened 15 years ago.

Director Shepard tells the NCIS team that Gibbs will be OK. But, she also has bad news for them. Gibbs lost his memory and doesn't remember anything that happened to him for the last 15 years. And now the team has to solve the problem on their own. Tony follows Director and asks her to let him run this investigation.

Director Shepard tells him that she intended to do that, but she was wondering if Tony will ask her that... she wanted to know if Tony has as much guts as Gibbs. She goes to her office and leaves Tony wondering about what she said.

Gibbs and the doctor are sitting in a room and the doctor asks him what is the last thing he remembers. Gibbs doesn't say anything, we just see some of his memories.

Ducky and Jenny are talking about Gibbs. Jenny asks him if he knew about Gibbs's daughter. Ducky says that's impossible because he knew all of his three wives. Jenny shows him that Gibbs and his first wife had 8-year old daughter Kelly; they were both murdered.

Tony and rest of the team are trying to find out what happened to Gibbs. Tony already starts acting like the team boss and starts giving orders to them.

New scene opens, and we see Pin Pin Pula in boat getting paper in which he is described as a suspect. He leaves the room and goes outside where somebody greets him.

The doctor and Jenny are talking on the phone about Gibbs. Gibbs is watching TV. Doctor says he is trying to catch up on what happened in last 15 years, but Jenny says he hates television. She says that she should contact the retired agent Michael Franks who worked on Shannon's and Kelly's case years ago.

In the next scene, we see two Mexican people talking. Jenny contacts that man who turns out to be Michael Franks. She explains to him that she is now the director of NCIS, and Mike starts laughing at that. She asks him for help. He refuses and then Jenny says "Leroy Jethro Gibbs," and that's where the scene ends.

McGee and Abby find out some interesting facts about the explosion... including the one that Gibbs knew all about the explosion. They continue investigating this case as the new scene opens in hospital where Jenny and Gibbs are talking. She shows him a picture of Pin Pin Pula and asks if he recognizes him. Gibbs becomes nervous and the scene closes showing Gibbs saying that he wants Shannon and Kelly.

Next morning, Mike visits Gibbs and they start talking about the time when Gibbs was a Probie. A nurse comes in saying that smoking is not allowed. Mike says it's just another reason for living in Mexico.

Ducky and Palmer discover something interesting and call the team to look at it. A nurse goes to Gibbs's room saying that he cannot have stake if he doesn't finish his jelly.

But Gibbs is actually outside talking to Mike and eating stake. They're talking about Mike's life, his house in Mexico and some frightening facts that made Gibbs throw up the food he ate. Gibbs says that the nurse was right...he wasn't ready for a stake.

Pin Pin Pula is working on the boat and somebody invites him for a poker game, but he says he's busy. Ziva pays Gibbs a visit. She forces him to remember some of the stuff. She takes his hand, slaps herself with his hand, causing Gibbs to remember Kate's and Ari's death.

Gibbs returns to NCIS, making it clear to everyone that he got his memory back. He interrupts the discussion between Jenny and Dean Welsh. He explains that Pin Pin Pula will blow up Cape Fear, but Welsh doesn't believe him. Gibbs yells at him and leaves the room leaving us to watch a boat exploding.

In the new scene, Gibbs is talking to Jenny about him being wrong. He was angry at Mike and he didn't understand how he could quit... until now. The whole team is waiting for him. He goes to his table and tells Tony that the team is now his. He says to McGee that he is a good agent, and he shouldn't let Tony tell him otherwise. He kisses Abby in the cheek and tells Ziva that he owes her.

He asks Ducky to give him a ride and leaves NCIS building.

After that, we see Mike smiling on the beach as he recognizes Gibbs walking towards him.

Season Episode: 1

Originally aired: Tuesday September 19, 2006 on CBS
Writer: Donald P. Bellisario, John Kelley
Director: William Webb
Recurring Role: Muse Watson (Mike Franks), Liza Lapira (NCIS Special Agent Michelle Lee), Brian Dietzen (Jimmy Palmer)
Guest Stars: Sheila Frazier (ZNN Reporter Debra Green), Saba Homayoon (Faatin Amal), Paul Lacovara (Mossad Security Officer), Eyal Podell (Namir Eschel), Susan Santiago (Camila Charo), Eli Danker (Mossad Officer Michael Bashan), Don Franklin (FBI Agent Ron Sacks)
Production Code: 04001
Summary: When Ziva accidentally witnesses a political assassination, she must surrender to the FBI and deal with the consequences without Gibbs's help, who is now enjoying his retirement. She learns that the FBI is looking for her and escapes, while the NCIS team, led by Tony, must prove that Ziva is innocent. However, when things get more complicated, Ziva seeks help from the one person that always trusted her, Gibbs.

On her way to work, Ziva sees two motorcyclists, whose faces remain hidden beside her. This reminds her of her old Mossad- assassination days, which shows the viewer a flashback to a similar scenario. She follows them, weaving through the streets. Just as they pass a cafe, an explosion goes off, which causes Ziva to swerve onto the curb. She jumps out of the car and notices a few ppl dead on the ground (we later find out one is wanted by the Israeli government, and 2 FBI agents who were with him for protection).

One of the attackers walks away, Ziva stops him, and realizes it was her old partner from her Paris-Mossad days. She lets him walk away (One could argue that she is in shock because she didn't expect it to be her old partner, or that her father was behind it).

Ziva immediately goes to the Israeli embassy to try and sort out what happened, claiming they were 'sloppy'. Michal (the guy in charge) claims that Mossad had nothing to do with the attack, Ziva disagrees and that it is for this reason she no longer talks to her father. Michal swears they had no idea, but Ziva says it was her old partner that she let go. Michal further denies this by saying that her and her father attended his funeral. She tries to leave, but is prevented, she isn't even allowed to call NCIS.

Back at NCIS, Abby is nervous and chatty, usually when something is bothering her. We find out she is anxious for the return of new team leader, Tony, who has gone on holiday. She walks to McGee's new desk (Tony's old one) and checks out Tony's flight schedule because he isn't at work at the time he said he would. Soon after she checks Tony's flight details, speak of the devil, Tony walks through the elevator doors; Abby smothers him in her usual Abby-hugs. Tony gathers the team around for gift giving: McGee gets a David Hasselhoff CD, Abby, a gorgeous cross necklace, Ziva, a Swedish girl outfit. He realizes that he hasn't bought anything for Agent Lee (who has joined Tony's team), so he makeshifts a gift, a smuggled in stapler from Germany, but is really from his own desk.

Cut to beautiful Mexico, Gibbs is all 'dirtied' up, with beard and all, fixing Frank's leaking roof. Gibbs is given the phone, and realizes it is Ziva. She believes he is the only one who can save her and as we remember from Hiatus 2, this is her collecting her due.

Back at NCIS, Lee brings up the issue of Ziva being late, Tony dismisses that anything is amiss, but after a while realizes something is up. Director Shepherd tells Tony that they will deal with the FBI, who have come looking for Ziva. (We learn that she is wanted for espionage and murder.) Because of her link with Ari and Mossad, the FBI believe her to have used NCIS as a way to 'get in' in order for her to attack the 2 dead FBI agents. Both Director and Tony don't buy it, but Tony is forced to cooperate with Agent Sacks (Slacks according to Tony).

Downstairs in autopsy, Tony, Ducky, McGee, Abby and Palmer (BlackLung) form a secret alliance to find Ziva w/out Director or FBI finding out. Abby cuts in, saying she has spoken to Ziva already. Tony calls her, Ziva says she'll kill Abby. Tony says hes going to try to help but needs to get in contact with Gibbs; Ziva hands the phone to him, and Gibbs tells Tony he has 10 secs to tell him the details b4 he hangs up.

Ziva and Gibbs go to one of Ari's old safe houses to look for clues. One of the motorcyclists is found sitting on the couch, bullet to the head. They search the house, and find nothing. A mobile starts to ring, Gibbs answers. It is Ziva's old partner, who can see them from a secret camera in the vent. Ziva realizes the call is to keep them there longer so that he can blow it up - they find the camera in time and are able to escape unharmed.

With the evidence, Gibbs is 'temporarily reassigned' and the team are with Abby sorting through what they can work with, while Ziva is in a safe place: Gibbs basement. They find a trace back on the camera to an apartment. Gibbs calls Ziva to tell her what they've found and for her to stay put. She hangs up because she wants to leave to catch the people behind all this. All the while, the Director, FBI and Israeli govt know that this is bad for both countries involved and will ruin all relations.

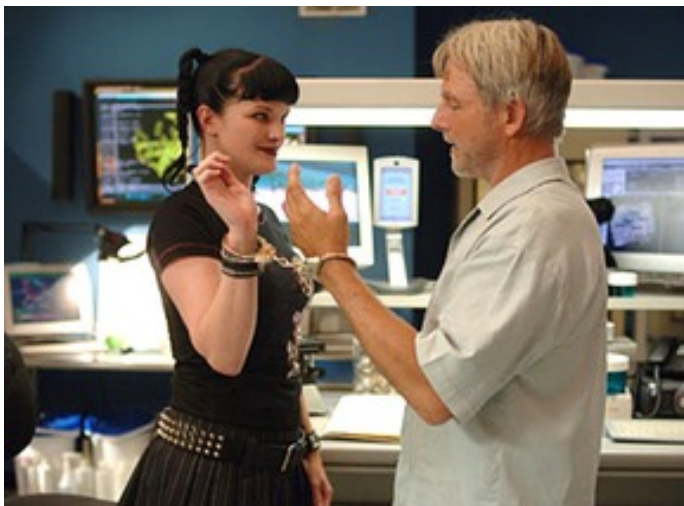

At the apartment, we find the agents but it is Ziva's old partner and a female. He puts on her necklace and she shoots him, then smothers him, saying that she cant let 'them know that her govt was behind this'.

Ziva enters the room, and the 2 women fight. Ziva is obviously faking that she cant fight, so that she can get some kind of testimony from the agent. Finally Ziva get the confession needed, that she works for the Iranian govt prompting Ziva to kick butt like usual. She ends it by knocking her out. Gibbs, Tony and McGee enter, thinking Ziva has killed both agents when she reveals that she is 'no longer a trained killer, but an investigator' showing the recorder taped to her stomach!

Production Code: 04002
Summary: Gibbs is forced to come back out of his retirement to help Fornell, who is being threatened by a convict that escaped from prison. The convict threatens both Fornell and his daughter Emily. Gibbs and the NCIS team re-open the convict's old robbery case, and question a retired sailor who is the only one who contacted the convict after he was sent to prison. The investigation will lead the NCIS team to a surprising discovery.

Opening scene sees FBI Agent Tobias Fornell, in suit and tie, sitting in a children's beauty parlor reading a magazine, whilst around him the salon is busy and buzzing with little girls attending the "My First Makeover" grand opening, a girl group blaring on the sound system, everything vivid and colorful and cheerful. Fornell looks across the room at his own daughter who is waiting her turn and busy with a coloring in book. His pink and white blond daughter, about 8 years old, smiles back. We see a man's hand pass a crayon to Fornell's daughter and Fornell stands, calling his daughter to him. She is unperturbed and merely says its not her turn yet. The men speak and we learn that this is an escaped convict whom Gibbs and Fornell put in jail for life. The convict tells Fornell to re-open the case because the wrong man was convicted. The convict knows that Fornell can either pursue him or reach for his cell phone, and that Fornell will not endanger his own child by pursuing the convict and leaving her behind for any accomplice. Convict leaves. The closing snapshot is of Fornell standing in the salon, looking worried, putting his cell phone to his ear. Opening credits. We see a 3 store wooden house with picket fence and a for-sale sign. Cut to interior shot in Gibbs' basement. Gibbs is taking boxes from shelves and emptying them into a trash can. In the process, a metallic box falls to the floor, catching his attention. It is a child's lunch pail. He picks it up and sits, opening it and smiling as he takes out an absurd, cheery little 'strawberry shortcake' doll with a mob cap. But beneath the doll he finds some photos and, with an audible intake of breath which he releases as a sigh, Gibbs starts looking at the photos of his daughter (whom we know was murdered alongside his wife just before he joined NCIS 15 years ago). But before he can finish looking at the photos, Gibbs' real estate agent can be heard upstairs, getting closer, describing the potential of the basement as a wine cellar to a potential buyer, who turns out to be Fornell. The realtor leaves Fornell to have a look. Fornell enters, explains the situation with the convict to Gibbs and Gibbs preempts him by saying he is retired and that Fornell doesn't need him. Fornell erupts, saying it goes beyond need. A convicted murderer touched his child. It is no longer Fornell the FBI agent but Fornell the father. Fornell forces himself calm, remarks Nice tan to Gibbs and departs. At the NCIS headquarters, we have Ziva and Agent Lee reassuring McGee that his over bleached teeth are not as bad as he thinks, but that he should not let DiNozzo see them. DiNozzo arrives and wants to see them. In the midst of a standoff between a close-mouthed McGee and a demanding DiNozzo, Gibbs arrives and, without greeting, storms upstairs to Director Shephard's office. The Director is on the phone, but politely tells Todd that she will call him back (and we presume Todd is the same Dr Todd Gelfand who treated Gibbs in the Hiatus episodes, and that this indicates some romance between the Director and the Doctor). Gibbs demands to be allowed to handle the Paulsen (escaped convict) case. Jenny demurs on grounds that he cannot treat working for NCIS like gym membership to be dropped and restarted at will. She says she filed his retirement package. Gibbs says Un-file it. They bicker until, as Gibbs is heading out the door in disgust, Jenny offers to sign Gibbs' parking voucher and, on opening her desk drawer, feigns surprise that she finds Gibbs' retirement paperwork. She tells him that she must have accidentally put him down for annual leave instead and that he is still an NCIS agent for the next 6 days until leave runs out. We see DiNozzo speaking into his speaker phone saying Don't tell me you don't eavesdrop, Cynthia. Every Director's assistant eavesdrops.. until Ziva hisses that Gibbs is coming. Gibbs marches back down the staircase into the squad room, saying nothing. DiNozzo, Ziva and McGee huddle to discuss whether Gibbs has forgotten he retired but note that he has not taken back his old desk. He has gone to a chair at the very end of the row. Gibbs in the squad room speaks to Fornell by phone, telling him that he should have been here half an hour ago. We see Fornell outside his mother's house, telling Gibbs that he is dropping off his daughter as a form of protective custody. We hear his daughter bright and happy as she greets her grandparents. Gibbs asks whether he wants an agent there and Fornell indicates his anxiety by asking How many can you spare? In a series of quick cuts, we follow Gibbs' conversation where Fornell is worried about Paulsen and what he is after, and DiNozzo is worried about Gibbs and what is happening. Jenny swings past saying that Agent Gibbs is back on temporary assignment to help with the Paulsen case. DiNozzo is tells the others what that case is. Fornell tells Gibbs that all the files on Paulsen are being sent to NCIS so that NCIS can try to spot something that the FBI techs might have missed. In Abby's lab, we see Abby sitting at her bench surrounded by computer screens with Gibbs' face as her screensaver. She is sucking on a skull lollipop, concentrating on something she was reading from the Paulsen file boxes. A voice asks Anything good? and she absentmindedly describes how interesting the case is until she realizes that it's Gibbs' voice and he is here beside her. She excitedly greets him, stabbing at each computer to take his photo off as she doesn't need it now that he is back. He explains that it is temporary. She is unimpressed and her excitement deflates. Gibbs tells Abby to process the contents of Paulsen's cell, to find out what he was up to before he escaped, but then looks up at the CCTV camera and says unless the three of you have any other suggestions? and DiNozzo has to answer, caught red-handed, saying We were eavesdropping like little girls but we do have some ideas.... They report that the only person visiting Paulsen in jail was his friend Mickey. Gibbs tells them to get on with seeing Mickey, but tells McGee to ..stay here and help Abby... at the same time DiNozzo says the same thing (so who is the boss, now?). Gibbs also picks up the Caf-Pow cola and tells McGee to drink some ...before we all go snow-blind showing that he still observes everything. The team rushes off to interview Mickey. Arriving at Mickey's, the team is told that Paulsen had been waiting for them for an hour. Team rushes in to arrest him but cannot find him. Gibbs gets a phone call from Paulsen saying he already has what he wants and that he is surprised to catch Gibbs as he heard that Gibbs had quit. Gibbs says retired but Paulsen laughs and says at Gibbs' age, it's quitting. DiNozzo asks what did Paulsen want? Gibbs looks out the front of the house and says Our car, which is now gone. They then interview Mickey. Fornell arrives (and is told to take off his shoes in house-proud Mickey's house). Mickey tells Gibbs and Fornell that they got the wrong guy. Gibbs and Fornell tell Mickey that he wasted his life's savings defending the wrong guy. DiNozzo suggests using Mickey as bait for Paulsen. Both Fornell and Gibbs turn and stare at DiNozzo and Gibbs says You're the boss. Phone call to DiNozzo - the car is found (the laptop with the case files is the only thing missing). They then ask if Mickey had any weapons and they find his pistol is missing from its case. They conclude that Paulsen is now armed. Agent Lee is helping Abby in the lab. Lee, the lawyer, notes that Paulsen filed more appeals than she has ever seen and that Paulsen is probably going after witnesses in the case. Lee thinks letting convicted felons use the legal system that way is an abuse of process. Abby says that we are all entitled to our day in court. Lee says Not according to Agent Gibbs. I've been going over his case files and he seems to prefer a more biblical approach to things. If you ask me, the Agency's better off without him. Abby slams down files and tells Lee that the Agency is lucky to have Gibbs and reminds Lee that she can kill without leaving any evidence behind. She finished by saying Done, settled, Gibbs is staying. He has to, right Gibbs? alerting Lee that Gibbs has arrived silently. Gibbs just stares at them, coffee in one hand, Caf-Pow in the other, silent and sombre. Abby, reading this as dissent about staying, grumpily turns back to her computers and restores Gibbs' photos as if he is already gone. They discuss the evidence that Lee and Abby have been sorting and note that Nash is the only accomplice that Paulsen didn't kill. They discuss what Paulsen is looking for and wonder about looking for the bank robbery money and Gibbs says ...or maybe Paulsen is looking for something a little more...biblical. Agent Lee, who is at least 12 inches(32cm)shorter than Gibbs, looks up into Gibbs face as he glares down at her. She realizes that he heard everything negative thing she said about him. She looks horrified and scared. New scene, we see DiNozzo hiding near the staircase listening to his mobile phone, and he is hearing the conversation that is going on between Ziva and McGee. Gibbs walks up behind him and asks Taking a little break, DiNozzo? Tony says Oh I think you know exactly what I am doing, Agent Gibbs. They then walk into the squad room, where Ziva and McGee rush to hide their own gossiping about McGee's over-bright teeth (he is on his fourth Caf-Pow to diminish the shine but Ziva suggests he changes to blue-berry as it's not working). They were also complaining about being tired of Tony's campfire team meetings. As Tony and Gibbs walk in, asking for a report, Tony finishes off their first sentence and Gibbs finishes off their second sentence. Tony is impressed at Gibbs' prescience and says I have much to learn, master. as he switches off the speaker-phone button on his desk, cutting off the call to his own mobile phone. Tony holds a campfire (team discussion around his desk) and they all work out that they have to track down Nash, the accomplice to Paulsen. Next scene is Ducky and Palmer in autopsy, sitting and examing for Ducky's viva exam for his Master's degree in Forensic Psychology. Palmer asks what is the difference between the ethical and the moral man. Ducky replies with a twinkle in his eye Well, the ethical man knows that it is wrong to cheat on his wife whereas the moral man actually would not. Gibbs arrives and asks Going back to school?. Ducky becomes brusque and explains about the forensic qualification to add the "why" answers to his arsenal of forensic "how" answers because ...What motivates us can be a very tricky thing. Ducky says he was wondering when Gibbs would finally come and visit him. Gibbs says he has been busy but Ducky pins him down by saying ..or avoiding me? I wonder why that could be? Gibbs says he is not staying. Ducky answers that he never thought Gibbs would. I am aware that when Leroy Jethro Gibbs makes up his mind, his mind's made up. Gibbs (and the viewer) is in no doubt that the reunion and friendship is strained. Gibbs then discusses the Paulsen case with Ducky and Ducky asks whether Gibbs has one of his famous gut feelings. Gibbs already had that when he decided the man was guilty the first time around. Ducky, noting that Gibbs never changes his mind, points out that that is too bad for Paulsen if Paulsen is innocent. Gibbs takes Ducky's snarky comments silently but with a grim stillness. His phone rings. DiNozzo reports that they have had a call on the FBI public tip hotline, from Paulsen. He plays the recording to Gibbs over the phone. Paulsen thanks Gibbs for the car and says he left his own token of appreciation, which he is sure Gibbs will find soon. McGee traced the phone call to a place in the city and Gibbs correctly preempts McGee by saying 4242 Adams Boulevard, where two of the accomplices were murdered in the past. (Viewers can ponder whether an in-joke is intended in the address because Douglas Adams wrote the "Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy," where the answer to everything is 42). Fornell meets Gibbs at the address. Lee points out that they have no warrant yet. They are wondering what is Paulsen's token of appreciation. They storm the apartment and find photographs from when it was a crime scene previously and Ziva remarks that it shows the discrepancies in the evidence. Ziva says that their job is not to reopen Paulsen's case but Gibbs and Fornell point out that Paulsen has done that by making the old crime scene part of the new crime of escape. Paulsen is clever. Gibbs brings in Paulsen's elderly, flirty friend Mickey to work with Abby to process the old files as they are running out of time. Abby collects Mickey from the squad room. Mickey admires Abby's outfit and says My dog had a collar just like that... Gibbs walks back towards the squad room which is having a campfire discussion at Tony's desk, with Tony recording it on his dictaphone as usual. Tony invites Gibbs to join the team. He keeps walking and leaves. Team DiNozzo ponder where he is going. Tony predicts his basement to drink bourbon with Fornell. Jenny says not tonight. Gibbs' house has termites, is being sprayed and that Gibbs is staying with Fornell. Fornell's house. Fornell is showing Gibbs into a little girl's bedroom, remarking that Emily was excited about Gibbs staying and that he use her room and is allowed to sleep with her Raspberry Rumtart doll (which gives Gibbs flashbacks to his own daughter and her strawberry shortcake doll). They have a discussion about Gibbs having had a family and sharing Fornell's situation. Fornell says hell, I was even married to your second wife! to which Gibbs gave his usual reply of having warned Fornell. They discuss that they screwed up on Paulsen and that they can make it right. They drink Emily's fruit juice which Fornell notes is Not our usual stuff Fornell says that as a kid, all he dreamed of doing was being an FBI agent. Now not a day goes by I don't think about being a kid. The way I figure it, anyone who doesn't want to quit this job isn't doing it right Next day in Abby's lab, Abby puts a henna tattoo on Michelle's arm and wants to photograph it. Michelle stands stiffly but Abby wants natural movement. Mickey starts dancing with Michelle and it gets out of hand. Abby keeps taking photos. Gibbs walks in. Lee bashes into him whilst dancing. She is horrified. She splutters an explanation. Abby explains that she is checking whether Paulsen's tattoo was copied in order to frame him: it was the only identifying mark that labeled him as the murderer. But they need Paulsen to let them photograph the real tattoo to be able to compare it. They have tracked down who did the tattoo on Paulsen, though. Gibbs leaves, still having said nothing to Agent Lee. Lee is awed by just how much Gibbs hates her and says so to Abby. DiNozzo goes to interview the tattoo artist who is working as a signboard man on the pavement, twilling an advertising sign continuously during the conversation. Ziva and Gibbs watch from the car, with Ziva dropping hints about how easy it is to get bored without an interesting occupation. Gibbs preempts the discussion and asserts that he is not staying. DiNozzo gives up interviewing, gets back to the car and waits for the tattoo man to phone Nash, the surviving accomplice. They track the call destination and race to the location. They find Nash dead on the ground, having fallen from the top floor. Too late, yet again. In autopsy, Ducky says Nash was beaten before being shot and then he fell. Abby comes on the video phone to say that the bullets are same gun as before. It looks like it was Paulsen and that Gibbs' new gut instinct (that Paulsen is innocent) is wrong. Tony says we are missing something. Gibbs sourly remarks that the only thing he is missing is happy hour in the cantina in Mexico. He stalks out of autopsy. Gibbs enters the lift to leave the building, looking severe. He puts his hands behind his head and stares at the ceiling, then hits the emergency stop. In the darkened lift, he looks down. Makes a decision. Hits the lift button and reverses the lift to go down to Abby's lab. As he walks in, we hear we hear her instructing the security men not to let Gibbs leave the building, but as Gibbs arrives, she mutters that it's a false alarm and slams down the phone. She embraces Gibbs excitedly, talking fast, saying she was worried that he was a flight risk and we see that her hug was really a means to handcuff him to herself. When he tells her that she has to clear Paulsen, she embraces him (causing pain as the handcuff forces his arm behind his head as she puts her arms around his neck to hug him). Gibbs' question for Abby is how does Paulsen know everything the team knows, as soon as they know it? In the squad room, team Tony are discussing the case and Tony is sour. Ziva asks is anything wrong, and Tony lists everything concluding with how Paulsen seems to know everything they think or say as soon as they say it. Gibbs marches in and asks if Tony is only just now realizing that. He grabs Tony's dictaphone on which he records all campfire discussions, breaks it open to show a bug, planted when Paulsen stole the car and left everything behind but the laptop. They have found the token of appreciation that Paulsen mentioned when he left a message on the tip line. In the lab, Abby shows that the bug has the maker's signature. They pull in the bug maker to interrogation, wanting him to hand over the cipher. With Ziva, the angry man refuses to co-operate, asserting all his legal rights. So Gibbs goes in. DiNozzo in the observation room, finally twiggs that this is like The Fugitive film, and Gibbs is Tommy Lee Jones (Ziva whispers to McGee What happened? We have been avoiding mentioning the Fugitive for days and McGee murmurs back He figured it out for himself.) In the interrogation room, the man is still defiant so Gibbs pauses, leans forward and says, softly and un-threateningly. I got this little girl. Wants to go home to her dad. And thats not gonna happen without your help. (Pause.) So....please? In the observation room, the Gibblets look shocked and amazed at Gibbs saying please. The defiant man shifts in his chair, deflates his antagonism and asks what Gibbs wanted to know. Cut to team outside a house at night, in flak jackets. They are monitoring what's going on inside. Ziva says I heard Paulsen's voice and they see a gun and Mickey's profile. They storm into Mickey's house, yelling at Paulsen to hold it as Paulsen points a gun at Gibbs. DiNozzo tells Paulsen not to do it as we will shoot you. Gibbs explains that they know Paulsen is innocent and tells the others to put down their guns, then lowers his own and says that Mickey, however, is not innocent and DiNozzo starts arresting Mickey. Ziva explains that the guy who sold the bug pointed out Mickey as the buyer, not Paulsen - much to the team's surprise. Mickey scoffs and says if he did it, where is the money? McGee says it has been right here all the time. The furniture in Mickey's house is not just old, it is valuable antique furniture. McGee gives the prices for civil war era furniture, a longcase clock and a first edition of Huckleberry Finn. Paulsen raises his gun at Mickey but Gibbs talks him out of it, predicting that Paulsen would rather see Mickey sent to jail. As Mickey is led away, Ziva raises her eyebrows at McGee who confesses that he watches the Antiques Roadshow. In Gibbs' cleared-out basement (which only has the boat left but no tools), we see Gibbs sitting doing nothing, in the dim yellow light of a lamp. Jenny arrives to announce that Paulsen is cleared of all charges. Jenny: You saved that boy's life. Gibbs: He did most of the work. J: Don't sell yourself short. Or is it too late for that? G: (wryly) This supposed to be some sort of pep talk to get me to stay, Jen? J: (silently snorts). G: (with dawning realization) You don't want me back! J: No I don't. G: (sneers) Afraid you wont be able to handle me, Dir-rect-tor? J: (quietly serious) No Jethro, I am afraid you won't be able to handle yourself. You have already been in two comas - you might not come out of a third. But the fact is you're good. The best. When you're as good at something as you are and you can make a difference, you just don't quit. (Jenny turns and walks out leaving Gibbs sitting with nothing to do but think about her words.) Next day, Team Tony are arriving at work, exiting the lift together, with Ziva saying to McGee that he used to be a nice person. Z: I think sitting at Tony's desk has affected your personality. T: for the better! He picked up a girlfriend all by himself. Z: Yeah, at a funeral! T: You didn't tell me that. M: Well, you were right - because when women are vulnerable, get right in there... His speech dwindles to a halt as the team stops and stares into the squad room. Gibbs is at his old desk, still wearing a mustache but with his beard shaved off. The camera pans around the desks. Each agent's belongings have been packed and dumped on their old desks. Then we see Agent Lee, at the far end, standing holding her possessions, clearly evicted from the team space and with nowhere to go and looking shell-shocked. The looks on the team's faces are consternation, except for McGee whose super-white, super-broad grin becomes the end snapshot. End credits roll.

Guest Stars: Heather Avery Clyde (Lt. Anne Sullivan (uncredited)), Mieko Hillman (Jennifer Murphy), Mike Beaver (Larry West), Claire Coffee (Nikki Crawshaw), Daniel Hagen (Calvin Hopper), Misha Collins (Justin Farris), Seamus Dever (Graham Thomas)
Production Code: 04003
Summary: An abandoned car is found full of blood, registered to a missing Navy lieutenant. The NCIS team learns that the missing lieutenant was profiling men, trying to find a perfect man for herself. When they find out that the woman intended to go to a seminar at a local hotel, Ziva goes undercover to find more information. Ducky is busy going through the profiles of the men. Jenny makes a secret offer to Tony.

The episode begins with two young women driving alongside an SUV and the driver flirting with one of them. When she is about to give him her number, they see a woman in his trunk, blood on her face, screaming for help.

Back at NCIS Director Shepard offers Tony a position as leader for an own team. He is reluctant to accept and asks for time to think about it. Leaving the director's office, he gets a call which he redirects to Gibbs (because he is not team leader anymore). Gibbs takes the call and they leave for the SUV, which has been left on a parking lot. While Tony and Ziva are off to inspect the missing woman's apartment, Gibbs and McGee find traces that she has been dragged to another car. Meanwhile Tony and Ziva find the missing woman's flat searched and find out that she has been profiling targets.

Back at NCIS the team identifies the missing woman as Lt. Anne Sullivan, a computer geek working for the Navy. They also identify the driver as Justin Farris, a notorious car thief. Abby finds two prints, one of the victim and one of the "bad guy" and the victim's PC. Meanwhile Farris turns himself in because he claims to be innocent. He says he stole the SUV but did not know of the woman in the back. He tells Gibbs that he was tailed by a silver Honda.

Without a body to talk to, Ducky uses his newly acquired skills as a profiler to do a profile of the victim. Abby calls and tells Gibbs that the other print is not Ferris' and there was another man there. Meanwhile McGee and Abby are trying to crack the victim's data to find the reason for her profiles. Ducky suggests some passwords based on the victim's personal life, one of which proves to be correct. The team is amazed to find out that she used her military knowledge to find a husband. Abby also finds out that the victim was attending a "speed dating" event and probably met the kidnapper there. They figure that the kidnapper will show up again to avoid detection and Ziva is chosen to dress up like a geek to attract him. Unfortunately none of the fingerprints she takes match the one in the SUV but they find someone whose silver Honda has been stolen.

The team finds out the address of a warehouse via a payphone which the possible kidnapper called. They discover that a heist on a coin convention is planned and that one of the thieves is among those who dated her as well as working for the hotel. He kidnapped her because she profiled him and he panicked. The team manages to thwart their scheme and is able to stop him from killing the Lieutenant at the last minute. The episode ends in the director's office where DiNozzo tells her that he does not want the promotion, which she has already figured out.

Summary: After police pull over a driver and arrest him for a concealed weapon, a car crashes into their patrol car with a dead man behind the wheel. The arrested man turns out to be Russian and Homeland Security claim he was working for them. The Russian is linked to an old case that Mike Franks worked on. Mike comes out of retirement to put the Russian behind bars.

The episode begins with a Russian-speaking man driving and talking on his mobile phone who is stopped by the police. When they see a colt in his car, they arrest him. Shortly afterwards a car crashes into the police man's car. The driver is dead and has written "NCIS" with his blood before dying.

This calls NCIS on the scene who set out to investigate. They find the body and think it to be an easy case. While Ziva tries to interrogate the suspect, Abby shows Gibbs what she found out, about the dead Marines call to 911 and the name of the suspect, who is also wanted by Homeland Security. Ducky meanwhile explains that the bullet fired is not in the body nor there is an exit wound. Without a bullet, NCIS can't match it to the gun.

DiNozzo matches the suspect to a case in 1991, called "Operation Sunburst", whose files were taken by the CIA. He also finds out that the agent working on the case back then was Mike Franks, Gibbs' former teamleader. Gibbs calls him in Mexico to enquire about the operation. Mike tells him that there was another Russian involved back then. Ducky, at the same time with help from Abby, gets an idea where the bullet could be.

The suspect in custody has to be transferred to Homeland Security because NCIS cannot charge him with anything without a bullet. However, with Franks' help, Gibbs manages to keep him in custody for now. Ducky afterwards tells him where the bullet went...into the stomach. Since the victim lived a few minutes after being shot he most likely vomited it. The marine was on foot when he was shot and the bullet therefore has to be around the place he was shot. Ziva and McGee are dispatched to find it while Tony's job is to protect Mike from the suspect's friend. Ziva and McGee, after some hard work, manage to find the bullet, while Tony fails to protect Mike and is knocked unconscious. When he re-awakes he does not remember what happened. Shortly thereafter, Mike is seen talking to the suspect's friend to strike a deal with him, offering to exchange incriminating evidence for $500,000. NCIS finds out where the deal is to be struck and rushes in, with Gibbs killing a brute who was about to shoot at Mike. Mike, it turns out, struck the deal only to lure the suspect out. He then shoots him in cold-blood. As Mike returns to Mexico, the episode ends with Gibbs listening to the evidence tape that Franks was using as such a bargaining chip. It turns out to be just a music recording.

Summary: When a missing Lance Corporal is found dead in a vacant house, the NCIS team discovers that he was buried in the backyard and then exhumed. They learn about his identity and that he was to be deployed to Iraq, but he never showed up for duty. The investigation leads them to a new clue—he had two fiancées. Abby runs the DNA samples from the two women to find out if the DNA is a match to the soil found on the dead man's body.

This episode opens with a real estate agent getting the shock of her life while doing a "showing" of a house to hopeful would-be home owners, as she discovers a months old dead body settled into a chair in front of the fireplace - in a house she'd shown only the previous day.

The team is called in to investigate the death of and belated discovery of the unfortunate Lance Corporal. Quickly determining the body had been buried, then dug up and placed inside the house the team divides up, McGee going to find the place of burial, and Ziva questioning the real estate agent, who also turns out to be part owner of the house in question. It isn't until after the team returns to NCIS that things really take a turn for confusing when not one, but TWO fiancées of the dead Lance Corporal arrive in response to a news bulletin about the body's discovery. Apparently the dead Lance Corporal not only borrowed a large sum of money from each fiancée, he had been sending them letters from his post overseas for months after he died.

Things begin to come together in the case with the discovery of a "pal" who accepted $200 dollars to regularly send letters to the girls from the dead Lance Corporal; and McGee and Ziva's discovery of a bag with $78,000 in gold coins in the Corporal's rented storage locker. Meanwhile Abby discovers two matches for female dna found in the underwear the corpse was wearing - one of the fiancée's and, surprise!, one of the real estate agent who is part owner of the house.

While Gibbs is questioning the lady, Ducky first interrupts the interrogation to declare "she didn't do it", and then, with McGee and Abby's help, gets a confession - from the lady's husband.

The husband had jealously watched the meeting between his wife and the Lance Corporal, and, when an accident left the Corporal lying face-first in floor insulation with a severe blow to the head, had acted to protect his wife's future $2 million dollar inheritance by burying the body. With the recent death of his wife's father, and the inheritance being secured, the husband had decided the "resurfacing" of the body might just leave him holding all the money, and his unfaithful wife in prison for the murder. Only after the husband confesses to "merely" burying the body of the man his wife had killed does Ducky reveals the Lance Corporal had still been alive when he was buried, leading to a furiously upset wife and somewhat stunned husband being led away.

The case isn't quite over though as an anxious Ziva reveals she left the bag of gold coins unattended on her desk and they are now missing. She's very relieved when Gibbs hands her a completed evidence check-in form, and then surprised to discover the amount is listed at only $18,000 - Gibbs having saved the court some paperwork and returning the "borrowed" money to the Lance Corporal Fiancée's. Only one problem...McGee then introduces Gibbs to a just arrived THIRD fiancée.

Summary: It's Halloween and the NCIS team is busy investigating a ransom case. A Marine's daughter has been kidnapped after the kidnapper attacked a Marine in his home. The investigation leads them to a fact that the couple has been separated. They decide to focus on the wife's ex-boyfriend, after learning that the woman is the one who destroyed their marriage. Meanwhile, McGee and Tony are stunned by Abby's Halloween costume.

It is Halloween and the team is working at NCIS when a call comes in that a Marine has been shot and his daughter been kidnapped. The team sets out to investigate, spoiling McGee's Halloween date with an attractive cheerleader. They arrive at the house to find a dead man dressed as a skeleton - the Marine was able to make it to his neighbor's house and has been taken to hospital. During investigation the Marine's wife returns and is shocked to find out her daughter has been kidnapped. At NCIS Ducky examines the body and Abby, dressed as Marilyn Monroe to the guys' delight, is working on identifying the dead John Doe. With the help of a partial license plate, left by the fleeing car in a smashed pumpkin, they manage to identify the car used for the kidnapping, a "Kuruma" as a witness described it (which is a car name used in Grand Theft Auto III - the real car is a Chrysler Sebring). Unfortunately the car was reported stolen 3 days earlier. The kidnappers call in the mean time and demand $100,000 from the shocked mother.

DiNozzo and McGee manage to identify the ex-boyfriend of the wife, a suspect for he tried to have a paternal test for the daughter, claiming he was the real father. They set out with Gibbs to question him, finding the stolen car parked before his apartment. But the suspect was at a party all the day (and thus at the time of the kidnapping) which makes NCIS think that he was to be framed. Abby meanwhile identifies the John Doe as an ex-Airforce-member who works at the same law firm as the Marine's wife as a security guard, which leads NCIS to question the motives for the kidnapping. They race to the law firm to find out that the kidnapper's only goal was to have $3,000,000 transferred from the law firm's accounts. This plan is spoiled when the team arrives in time to take out the kidnapper and to rescue the little girl.

Summary: When a Marine Colonel dies in an explosion at a military golf course, the NCIS team must investigate a suspected terrorist attack with the help from the Army Criminal Investigative Division (CID). The CIA gives them a lead to an abandoned warehouse, but it turns out to be a trap—the warehouse is set to explode. McGee uses his computer skills to break into the secret government files to uncover the terrorist cell.

When a Marine Colonel is killed by an explosion on a military only golf course, Gibbs and his team set out to investigate. He is not too happy to be assisted by Army Lt. Col. Hollis Mann, who forces him to share jurisdiction on this case but he is unable to stop her. He reluctantly agrees to work with her, as it turns out she is more than a match for Gibbs, being comparable in stubbornness and character.

The CIA is able to give the team a lead to an abandoned warehouse but it turns out the place is rigged with explosives. Ziva decides that they can't wait for the disposal team and manages to disarm the bomb herself, preventing the clues in the warehouse from being destroyed. The CIA refuses to tell the team who their tip giver was, so McGee traces him to a convenience store run by a Mamoun Sharif. He helps the team and gives them a video tape of the alleged terrorist who he claims talked about the explosion in his store.

Later it turns out that Sharif was the bad guy all along and the team is informed that a homeless guy was given a backpack by Sharif, not knowing it was a bomb and was asked to meet him at a promenade. Gibbs and his team reach him in time, where Gibbs dresses as a civilian not to catch Sharif or the homeless guy's attention and Ziva is able to disable the bomb before it explodes. Sharif on the other hand, who was watching from the crowd, manages to escape (he makes his next appearance in Sharif Returns).

Meanwhile the dead Colonel's son takes his father's death in a terrorist attack very hard and decides to drop out of college to join the Marines. Tony, who tries to bond with him, convinces him to finish college after all, stating that with his college education he can help the cause much better.

Guest Stars: Ned Schmidtke (Congressman Frank Getz), Laura P. Vega (Maria), Michael Gilden (Marty Pearson), Ming Lo (Davey Chen), Jonathan M. Woodward (Andy Nelson), Francesco Quinn (Luis Romero)
Production Code: 04008
Summary: When an honored Marine veteran is found dead in a hotel, the NCIS team must find out what happened to him. Soon they realize that the Marine didn't commit suicide and that he was a homeless man. After going through his stuff, they find compromising evidence against him, and Gibbs is determined to prove the man's innocence.

When suspicious activity surrounds the death of a decorated marine, NCIS tries to clear his name.

A decorated marine falls from the 6th floor of a hotel onto a conference held below, narrowly missing Director Shepard. The initial assumption is that of a suicide, especially when a note inscribed with "Help Me" is found on his body and it is revealed that Sergeant Wright was troubled young man and on medical leave. A Congressman's aide delivering documents to a defence contractor gives evidence that he had been attacked by Wright, shortly before the incident.

Wright managed to gain access to the hotel (which was under lock-down) through a former fellow marine, Luis Romero, now a supervisor at the hotel. Romero had allowed Wright to stay in rooms down for maintenance. While interviewing Romero and searching Wright's room, another body is discovered by maids in the hotel, that belonging to a 14-year-old Chinese girl. The team is fearful that Wright may have been responsible for her rape and death, especially when his master card, granting access to all rooms is found in the girl's room and Wright's saliva is found on the girl's face.

One strand of hair is found on the girl's body but it cannot be matched conclusively to Wright's DNA as Abby's microscopes are not strong enough to see down to the nanoscopic level. Abby manages to temporarily use such a microscope at a forensic exhibition and discovers that the owner of the hair strand had previously been vaccinated against anthrax. Wright never received the vaccine and McGee theorises that the 'help me' note was not actually written by Wright but by the girl and Wright had picked up the note when he had taken the half-eaten plates left outside the room for himself to eat. Wright had, upon discovering the note, returned to the room and tried to revive the girl using CPR.

The team suspects that the Congressman's aide previously interviewed was vaccinated against anthrax and is connected to the Chinese girl. He subsequently confesses to paying a Chinese man to sleep with her and the cuts and bruises on his face were received not from Wright but from the girl. The team must discover where Davey Chen, who is running the sex-trade ring, has kept the other young girls and sends Special Agent Lee undercover as the dead girl's sister to find more information. Unfortunately Chen uncovers the ruse and the team rush in to the warehouse to find her in time. They corner the men at the base of their operations and discover the van of girls.

Summary: McGee breaks the rules, risking his NCIS job, to help his sister Sara, who shows up disoriented and bloodied. While he works on figuring out what happened to his sister, the NCIS team is investigating a case of a Navy sailor, who is somehow connected to McGee's sister. Both Tony and Abby are busy with love problems, while McGee turns out to have another secret.

When Agent McGee's sister Sarah arrives at his house at around 2:00 in the morning disoriented, with bloodied hands and claiming that she killed someone, its up to him to figure out the truth. Upon further investigation McGee suspects that Sarah might have been drugged due to the fact the she barely recalled the incident. Against regulations McGee keeps Sarah in his apartment and away from NCIS. Meanwhile, Gibbs and the team are investigating the death of a seaman at a college, which is the same college that Sarah goes to. A cell phone found at the crime scene revealed that the phone in fact was Sarah's and that the blood on her hands was the seaman's. After learning this, Sarah runs away from McGee's apartment, and he is forced to reveal everything to Gibbs. Despite the evidence, McGee is convinced that Sarah is innocent, and must find the evidence needed before Sarah is charged with murder.

Summary: When a burnt and mummified body of a missing and wanted person is found on a Marine base, in a furnace, NCIS must work with FBI. The burnt man turns out to be a serial killer. The both teams visit the man's family and discover something shocking. Also, the NCIS team must deal with the book McGee wrote about them, using "fictional" characters.

A literally smoked body is found at a school in Quantico and the FBI believes it to be a serial killer they hunted for years. Fornell is confident, as he was on the team that "caught Bundy" (the legendary serial killer), but he reluctantly sets out with Agent Gibbs after finding out the man was murdered on base. Upon inspection of the wife's home, skeletons are found in shallow graves behind the home. It is later determined that the time TOD for all the bodies were after her husband went missing. McGee must also deal with fallout from his co-workers' discovery of his book, which is a parody of their lives.

Production Code: 082
Summary: When a robotic vehicle named "Otto," a part of a high level project of the Department of Defense, causes a death of a Navy Lieutenant, and then later almost kills Abby, the NCIS team must find out who sabotaged the vehicle and murdered the Navy Lieutenant. Meanwhile, Ziva realizes that Tony keeps on visiting the hospital. What is he doing there?

A female Navy lieutenant Roni Seabrook was testing out the system of a 2nd generation artificial intelligence driven vehicle in the morning and is killed by carbon monoxide poisoning. In the same time the NCIS team except Ducky are stuck in a seminar about sexual harassment in the workplace until Gibbs receives a phone call that allows them to escape it and turn their attention towards the aforementioned dead Navy lieutenant.

The team learns that the prototype is constructed for a contest of AI driven vehicles held by the US Navy thus the company working with it ("Azeon") are very reluctant to offer any help for they fear the prototype might get damaged. The team meanwhile speculates why the Navy lieutenant might be killed. They consider sabotage by a competitor when they stumble upon security footage which shows the chief mechanic Jamie Jones sexually harassing the lieutenant the night before. All videos of the time of her death though have been erased which leads them to conclude that she was definitely murdered.

Ducky meanwhile is performing an autopsy on the dead body, confirming Palmer's assumptions that she has been murdered with carbon monoxide poisoning. Additionally he confirms traces of male genetics on the body, strengthening the assumption that Jamie Jones is responsible. The team splits up, McGee and Abby are to find out how the vehicle was used to kill the lieutenant and Tony and Ziva are to check the lieutenant's apartment (on the way to it Tony visits his girlfriend in the hospital she is working in). Gibbs in the same time revisits the company's garage and talks to the owner. Tony and Ziva are surprised to find Jamie Jones in the lieutenant's bedroom tied to her bed. Down in the NCIS lab, Abby gets trapped the same way the lieutenant did and is rescued at the last second by Gibbs who returned to check on them.

McGee is tasked to find out how the car was reprogrammed to act the way it did while Gibbs and the others confront Jones who is surprised about the lieutenant's death and claims to have dated her with all the harassment scenes being role playing in the relationship. When Jones is completely freaked out by her death Gibbs understands that maybe they got the wrong suspect. McGee meanwhile figured out how the car was used to kill the lieutenant: The killer used a SD-card to flash a program into the car's computer to be executed when the conditions where met (i.e. when the victim tries to unbuckle the seat belt). Tony is called to the director and gets an unrelated task surveying three suspects NCIS is tracking for some time). Back in the lab McGee and Abby find the SD-card and Jones helps them to reassemble the car.

The Azeon team arrives at NCIS to assist and they are shocked when they find out the car drove off on itself (someone accessed it to send it away). The team (with Jones' help) traces the car back and finds it empty, the SD-card missing. Abby finds out that the command was sent from inside Azeon. The team arrests Engler (one of the technicians) when they find out that his computer was used to send the command to steer Otto but they trick Dr. Pike, Azeon's owner, to reveal himself as the real killer.

Guest Stars: Corey Stoll (Martin Quinn), Assaf Cohen (Eli "Goliath" Lisack), Jim Parrack (Nick Hurley), Fred Tate (Charles Harrow), David Batiste (Max Phillips), Sandra Hess (Regine Smidt)
Production Code: 083
Summary: After catching an international arms dealer, the NCIS team learns that Navy's highly classified weapons system will be sold to "La Grenouille," an important arms dealer. To stop the transaction, the team will send Ducky undercover. Meanwhile, another government agency appears to be working on the same case, with different plans.

NCIS agents Ziva and DiNozzo kidnap an Israeli arms dealer (nicknamed "Goliath") who has been selling his merchandise to terrorists. They inject him with a knock-out serum. He wakes up in a jet, with Gibbs, DiNozzo, and Ziva telling him that he is going to be turned over to the President of Zaire for selling his military malfunctioning weapons. He tells them that he knows who is selling the US government's secret cruise missile targeting system, named "Ares", after the Greek God of War. He will tell them who it is in exchange for returning to Washington DC.

Off-camera, he has apparently told them the seller's name, but he discovers that they never left DC. During a search of Goliath's e-mails from his computer, of which he gave NCIS the user ID and password, DiNozzo discovers a photo of a man he had photographed during an undercover operation for the NCIS Director, Jennifer Shepard, eight weeks ago. Since DiNozzo is under orders not to reveal the details of that operation to anyone, including Gibbs and the rest of the NCIS team, he feigns ignorance to Gibbs, and goes to the Director to report the photograph to her. Ziva and McGee tail the seller of the Ares system, Charles Harrow. After spotting them, he tries to run away, but has a heart attack and dies. Later, after entering Harrow's home, the two find it filled with sophisticated computer equipment. After bringing Harrow's equipment to NCIS in Abby's lab, she and McGee find the Ares microchips stuffed into condom packets, while the main hardware is disguised as a twenty year old computer that has been retrofitted to modern standards. Needing to find out who the winning bidder of the Ares system is, McGee realizes that Harrow used an internet cafe where he and Ziva had spotted him, earlier. Using an apparently illegal technique, McGee uses the NCIS computers to track the e-mail Harrow had sent from the cafe to the winning bidder, who turns out to be "La Grenouille" (French for "The Frog"), a man the Director has been after for over a decade. Since Harrow is dead, NCIS needs to find an agent with a British accent who can go undercover as Harrow. Dr Mallard fits the bill perfectly. The e-mail that McGee found indicates that the exchange is to take place in Quebec in five hours. The Director calls in a favor, apparently to Quebec authorities. Later, in Quebec, Ziva and Dinozzo are set as snipers to protect Dr Mallard and to kill "La Grenouille", who they believe is the man in the photograph from Harrow's e-mail. After Dr Mallard passes a check by one of the "La Grenouille's" henchmen, he is directed to a jet where the scruffy-looking man from the photograph appears. Via a tiny transceiver in his ear, Dr Mallard listens to instructions from the NCIS team, who are well hidden nearby. They tell him to give the Ares hardware to the man's female assistant for testing. When it proves to be genuine, the man makes an elaborate sweeping motion using his cellphone light. It is a signal, from which a well-dressed man appears from the shadows. It turns out to be "La Grenouille", who used the other man as a decoy, in case something went wrong. Convinced that Dr Mallard is Harrow, he offers Mallard a drink of 200 year old Cognac. Afterwards, they exit the car, with "La Grenouille" about to board the jet. The NCIS Director is about to order Ziva and Dinozzo to shoot him, when she receives a phone call on her cell phone, at which point she quickly orders them to stand down. The scruffy man comes out of the jet and hands Dr Mallard a bag of diamonds as payment, but then suddenly pulls the NCIS transceiver from Dr Mallard's ear and, speaking into it, asks if NCIS got the message. The NCIS Director acknowledges that they did, so the man returns to the jet. It turns out that he is a CIA operative. The episode ends with the NCIS Director pouring the diamonds onto her desk as Gibbs enters her office. She tells him that Ares had been rendered useless by a computer virus.

Production Code: 085
Summary: When a dead body of a sailor is found in an abandoned part of the town, all the evidence seem to point that the person died from unintentional drug overdose, but when the team uncovers more evidence, it turns out to be a murder. Meanwhile, Tony bonds with a local detective while working on the case.

A couple sneak into an abandoned, dilapidated restaurant where the man intends to propose marriage, recreating their original date 10 years ago. They banter about how long they have been friends and how much time has been wasted before his proposal. He kneels to propose and stumbles over the words. She tries to encourage him, thinking he has cold feet over asking will you marry me? but we soon realize that it's because his eyes have strayed past the woman to a maggot infested corpse. She sees it too.

She screams. Opening credits In the basement of the NCIS building, Ziva is running a training session for the other agents on knife throwing. She demonstrates with a perfect shot on the paper target. DiNozzo and McGee are skeptical as to whether Gibbs approves of knives. Tony then has a go and is surprisingly good. He attributes it to years of summer camp. McGee is useless. Tony asks maths camp? McGee chess camp Agent Lee has a go and almost kills Gibbs as he arrives to announce the roll out to the murder of a sailor. At the crime scene, Ducky estimates 4 or 5 days dead. Gibbs finds a pink ticket on the body. McGee is ordered to collect the maggots and offers 100 bucks to Ziva to do it for him. Back at the office, they identify the dead sailor as PO Davidson, last seen in a bar in Georgetown, who left with a girl before closing time. McGee has disappeared from the office. Gibbs sends Ziva to find him so she goes into the mens room, shocking McGee as he obsessively washes his hands after handling the maggots. Ziva offers to help McGee get over his maggoty fears and, when McGee refuses her help, asks why. McGee responds Much like the concept of the men's room, it's personal. In autopsy, Ducky and Palmer discuss cause of death with Gibbs. Alcohol and drugs bender, seemingly self-inflicted death via drug abuse. Abby's lab, where Abby is talking to her mass spectrometer as if it is a medieval knight I hereby accept your challenge. We meet on the field at dawn. Weapons: caffiene-fueled intellect versus cold silica-based intelligence. Until then, I bid you a good day, Sir. She turns from the machine to realize that she has been caught by Ziva and McGee. She explains that the machine spat out a chemical composition that she didn't recognize and she starts to run it through her computer. McGee asks what he can tell Gibbs about the pink card found on the victim, which he thinks is more urgent. Abby complains about being only one person to do all the tests and then advises McGee that he should Tell him you love him, McGee, it works for me. Gibbs enters, remarking Not all the time. as he hands Abby a Caf-Pow. Abby reports that the sailor was given the poison that comes from the Oleander bush. Conclusion: murder. Cut to scene in swanky bar, Jeanne on a phone talking intensely to ex-boyfriend accusing him of being a stalker. She is trying to keep Tony from overhearing her. Tony orders martinis for two and watches her across the bar. She finishes the call, returns and accepts martini but gulps it before he can offer a toast. Her stress is evident. She reads his eyes and face. Without prompting from Tony, she reads his mind, asserting that she can handle the problem and doesnt need him to do it. So he thinks of something else and asks her to read him mind now. She says they are not to skip dinner as she is hungry for food. He concedes he wanted to skip dinner and just go home to bed. He orders oysters as an appetiser aphrodisiac whilst they wait for their table. They sit. He compliments her. Quietly intense. She proffers a valentines gift (the show aired near valentines day in USA). He admits he hasnt bought a gift. She is pleased that he is honest about it. He opens her gift: a platinum wrist tag for hospital patients, reminding him of the real one she put on him previously to keep him focused on her. The inscription on this new one reads Tony, love Jeanne. Mental Ward He says I've never had a gift this unique,nor a woman As they kiss, her phone rings. The ex-boyfriend stalker. Tony wants to intervene and she resists. She wins. The oysters arrive. She decides they can skip dinner after all. Next day in the office, Ziva demonstrates her dancing skills to an oblivious Tony. Nothing distracts him from searching the internet for a holiday trip. Then civilian police arrive with a junkie who saw something at the crimescene. One of the cops, John, seems the equivalent of DiNozzo. John notices and recognises Ziva's accent as Israeli and uses it to start to flirt with Ziva. Turns out that the junkie holds one of the deceased sailor's credit cards. Gibbs interrogates the witness who says he saw sailor in the alley outside a club. Sailor was already drugged. Junkie robbed him, leaving him to die. Gibbs is unimpressed. Abby is in her lab, mystified by the laminated card that was recovered from the sailor's body. It is too clean and she suspects the murderer wanted the card to be found. She and McGee spot a spot that is puzzling. Is it a message from the murderer? Office scene. Local cops explain that the owner of the private club where the death ocured is untouchable and unraidable. Smart owner protects his rich clients from police drugs raids. You have to be rich to get in, not a mere sailor. Gibbs comments or have something they want Gibbs takes everyone to hear the report from Abby. Abby and McGee explain that the pink laminated card left on the body is an intentional clue. She also demonstates that the sailor's boot has a hollow heel with drugs in it. The spot on the card is a bloodstain, intentionally left to be found. Abby gives everyone coloured glasses so that they can see that the luminol on the card reveals expect more written in blood. Tony declares it creepy. Gibbs Ya think, DiNozzo? Ducky in autopsy tells Gibbs that the sailor ingested the poison as a liquid, so bitter that booze would have to disguise it. The note found on the body said expect more and a few cases of the spiked booze could be used to wipe out a club. Ducky ponders could the poisoner be a woman, as they prefer poison? Gibbs comments That would explain why my last ex-wife spent so much time in the kitchen. As Ducky and Gibbs leave, Agent Lee and Palmer emerge from a tryst on the lower shelf of an autopsy table. Lee runs away. Palmer lays back and smiles. Office discussion with local cops about the club. They have no basis for a search warrant as no one can place the sailor inside the club. Metro police insist on a warrant, doing it by the rulebook. Gibbs storms into Director Shepards office with Agent Lee trailing behind. Gibbs laments This legal person, meaning Agent Lee, not getting him a warrant. Gibbs rants about knuckling under to the Metro cops but Lee stands her ground that a witness is needed to allow a warrant and a warrant is needed to go into the club. Gibbs is disgusted. He leaves. Door slams again. Director reassures Lee, but Lee says that Gibbs is right. Director He usually is, that's what makes him so damn irritating. Tony at the hospital visits Dr Jeanne, who is opening an envelope with tickets to Bermuda. Delighted, she thanks him. What could be a more perfect Valentine?

Dinozzo, ruefully and unhappily waving his own tickets says A weekend in the Bahamas? Jeanne realises the Bermuda tickets are from her ex, and tears them up. Tony challenges her as to how similar he must be to the ex since they bought nearly identical gifts for her. Tony gets quite mean in his tone and is clearly upset about the ex-boyfriend not giving up. She refutes the similarity and insists that she must handle the problem as it is hers. Dinozzo whispers exactly wrong. This is our problem, Jeanne and hands her the tickets and leaves. In the office, local cop says We need to talk, Gibbs and Gibbs halts, hesitates, taps his coffee, and then beckons him into the lift. Ziva and John observe them exit. John queries We should call the paramedics? Ziva answers No need. If they fight, it will be to the death. In the lift, the local cop is told Talk. Local cop declares that he was once like Gibbs. Gibbs sneers You were never like me. So local cop tells of a bust gone wrong where the bad guy walked because the cops lacked a warrant and thus bad guy was free to rape and kill a child. Cop declares he is not making that mistake again. Gibbs queries, in an intense whisper, whether the mistake was not getting a warrant? Or not killing the bastard? Our impression, and the cop's, is that the cop really is nothing like as tough as Gibbs. DiNozzo arrives in office, noting that, with the boss using the lift as an office again, he had to use the stairs. He shows what he found: a marine's description of the sailor's last date, who in turn was identified by the parking attendants. He has a good sketch which allowed him to get a name. Gibbs is impressed. But they can't find her immediately. Gibbs announces a stakeout to find her entering or leaving the club where she plys her trade. Tony and John, the friendly cop, are in the surveillance van, settling in for stakeout. They discuss their girlie magazines. Tony reveals I shouldn't be looking at it at all, I'm trying to wrap my head around the idea of a monogamous relationship. John That takes serious retraining. Tony Tell me about it. John awwgh, you're not in love are you? Tony Could be. John Could be, my friend, isn't love. They trade stories. John describes getting engaged and screwing it up by sleeping with the fiancée's best friend. He clearly mourns the loss and Tony sympathises. But they both open the girlie magazines. John gives Tony a look. Tony replies Baby steps. Abby's lab. Ziva is confused by the Valentines decor in Abs lab, with the implication that it seems closer to Halloween decor. Gibbs enters and asks for progress, handing over a Caf-Pow complete with decorated straw, featuring a furry, red heart that says I love you. Abby receives it with a smile and we ponder the friends and lovers title of this episode. She reports that the blood on the card is a woman's blood. Ziva assumes the woman is the killer but Abby reveals that she was murdered 2 months ago, on Christmas Eve. Gibbs Abby Ziva and McGee in office to hear report on the dead girl from the local cop. Cop reads out toxicology analysis and Abby says it means an overdose on oleander poison. Gibbs sarcastically points out to local cop that it would have been useful information to have two days ago. The woman's file reveals a picture of one footprint in blood at the murder scene, which the local cop says was the killer's only mistake. They all look at the boot print. Gibbs declares It wasn't a mistake. Jeanne on phone to Tony, who is in the van with John. Jeanne confesses that perhaps Tony was right and she hadn't truly split with her ex. She says that she has now told the ex about Tony. They tell each other I love you. The sotto voce discussion is overheard by John, who reads Tony's face and body language, as cold feet after asking her to marry him. Tony says he didn't ask her. John you gonna? Tony I can't live a lie. John what does that mean? Tony I don't want to end up like you John confesses that all he has to do is not drink, for the mess would not have happened if John had been sober. He states that he has now quit drinking because of his lost love. The discussion of John's drinking distracts the viewer from Tony's obscure statement that he cannot live a lie so he has not asked Jeanne to marry him. This must mean that Tony's romance with Jeanne is not as it appears. Given Jeanne's French name and Tony's undercover work for Director Shepard to find La Grenouille, the French arms dealer, and Tony's inner turmoil despite finding Jeanne so perfect, the viewer is entitled to suspect a much deeper subplot than a mere romance. Meanwhile, in the office, Gibbs prints out a picture of the boot footprint and asks whether the team has ever read Mad Magazine. McGee says only until his mother burned his copies. Abby catches onto Gibbs' point. She sees that the print is like the back cover in the Mad magazine. Turn it into a three-fold concertina, and you get a different image emerge. This one reads Dead Whore The shoe print is a message from a serial killer. But, local cop queries, shouldn't that mean that the dead sailor is a whore? In the surveillance van, the cops and Tony watch the rich and beautiful arrive at the club. The cops lament that they never managed to infiltrate the club, assuming a bent cop tipped them off. Gibbs arrives and says he has someone who can get into the club without a warrant. It's the famous novelist, Thom E Gemcity. The cops ask who? Tony says Don't ask,

John. I'd vomit explaining. McGee arrives in a limo with Abby, Ziva and Lee as his girls, dressed to the nines. As they walk towards the bouncers/doormen, Gibbs issues instructions to find the missing woman and get her outside. McGee asks how? Gibbs exasperatedly points out Well, she's a hooker Tim. Use your imagination. Agent Lee is having difficulty walking as her piece (gun) is hidden in such an uncomfortable place because her skirt is so short. McGee's fame gains them all entrance to the club as the doorman is a fan of McGee's novel, Deep Six, written as Thom E Gemcity. But the cops in the surveillance van spot the woman they are after in the back alley. The club owner emerges to talk to the woman. The cops start to move. Cut to woman as she asks owner for money. He accuses her of letting in the sailor. They discuss how the sailor was trying to kill the woman, using poison. Owner says that killing the sailor saved the woman. They argue. He snaps her neck. Cops and Tony arrive. Shootout. Owner dead. John, the cop, asks did we hit her? Tony says it looks like owner broke her neck. John collapses. He has been shot in the chest. He knows he is dying despite Tony's encouraging words. Gibbs arrives. Checks the dead people for pulses. John dies. Tony, who had been trying to staunch the bleeding with his hands, takes a deep breath, stands, looks across at Gibbs, who eyes Tony's reaction, a pinched look on his face. No words needed. Abby's lab. Abby is full of self-recrimination for missing the clue on the sole of the boot. McGee notes that the story would make a good plot for a book. Ziva laughs. In Jeanne's apartment, Jeanne is looking at email. Finds 3 from her ex-boyfriend. She steals a look at Tony, checking that he remains asleep on her couch. Tony sleeps in the pose of an exhausted child, on his side, hand tucked under his head, knees curled, bathed in the glow of soft lamplight. Jeanne opens the latest email. The message reads I get it now Jeanne. Wont bug you again. Goodbye love She opens the attached photo. It is a beautiful portrait of a happy Jeanne and John, the local cop. She does not react with mourning or shock, so we assume she remains unaware that Tony has been working with John and that John has been shot. She hits the delete command. It checks Are you sure you want to delete the file permanently? She clicks yes and the face of Tony's new friend, her ex-lover, disintegrates to a black screen. end credits roll

Guest Stars:	Marc Vann (Mark Sadowski), Scott Klace (Dr. Timothy Hass), Kate Norby (Diane Russo), Erin Torpey (Holly Stegman), Diane Delano (Dee Dee Chesney), Matthew Mardsen (Navy Lt. Roy Sanders)
Summary:	When a Navy Lieutenant becomes the victim of radiation poisoning, the NCIS team must find the person who's behind the crime. The Lieutenant, who is working for the IAEA (International Atomic Energy Agency), claims that only his two colleagues knew about his assignment, and whoever it was, the person tried to stop the Lieutenant's next investigation.

Tony and Ziva speculate on how much McGee's new leather jacket must have cost him ($2000, another reference that his writing earns him good money) when he enters, escorting a man who looks very sick. The man identifies himself as Lt. Sanders working for the IAEA and asks Gibbs to investigate a murder, his own. Apparently he has been poisoned by radiation poisoning, which Ducky is trying to find out while Ziva tries to place him, being sure she met him before. McGee in the same time has his clothes checked because Sanders coughed on him, even his new expensive Armani jacket which he fears Abby will stain. Ducky in the same time finds out that Sanders is poisoned with alpha emissions, as it turns out Thallium. Ziva escorts Sanders to the Navy hospital and Gibbs and Tony talk to his co-workers and check his work-place.

In the hospital, Sanders is treated with "Prussian blue" and Ziva finds out where she knows him from: he usually runs in the morning and their paths cross every day. As Ziva learns more about him, she falls in love with him and is getting angry that she can't do anything to save him. She even expressed jealousy when one of his female co-workers who visited him touched him. The doctor then tells her that he is becoming sicker, not better, most likely because someone is still poisoning him. The team first think it's one of his co-workers and they bring him in for questioning, but this proves to be a dead end when the coworker becomes sick as well and security footage shows him being near Sanders when the latter smoked cigars who were filled with Thallium. The team then focuses on the other co-workers and about the changed plans for the next week. When they find out that a nuclear plant in Uzbekistan, scheduled for inspection, is apparently re-assembling engines for the manufacturing of nuclear weapons, it becomes clear that someone tries to keep the IAEA from inspecting it. The team checks with Sanders on who knew about the inspection and they are able to arrest the co-worker who is responsible.

When the episode ends, Ziva and Sanders are in the hospital garden, holding hands. The viewer is left wondering whether or not Sanders survives. Later episodes reveal that Sanders did not survive.

Production Code: 087
Summary: When an explosion at a military cemetery mausoleum reveals a crypt full of a mixture of body parts, the NCIS team must inform the families of the victims, hoping to find a connection between the dismembered victims, and narrow down the suspects to find out who is behind the hideous crime. Meanwhile, Abby is dealing with a personal problem, and the only person she can talk to about it is Gibbs.

Episode opens with an outdoor military funeral drawing to a close with a gun salute whilst attendants at the mausoleum struggle to open the vault in which the young marine is to be interred with his grandfather. They finally release the screws on the vault panel which then explodes outwards, covering them in goo. Amongst the goo is a skull.

Abby is confronting McGee in the main office, demanding he exchange a dollar with her for the candy machine. Abby has mistakenly taken a candy bar containing nougat which she doesn't like and now the machine won't take her dollar. A discussion about the contents of candy bars ensues until Abby explodes with frustration. McGee only has large notes. Tony offers a note. She takes it and storms off, without handing over her dollar to Tony. Ziva is mystified as to what is nougat. Gibbs enters with an explanation. It's a cream with sugar, honey and nuts McGee, disturbed by this abnormal Abby behavior, asks did anyone see what just happened there? Tony replies Yeah, she stole my dollar Gibbs tell them to roll to the explosion at a Marine's funeral.

Team arrives at the mausoleum as the bomb squad exit, reporting that there was no explosive and that the area is safe but that you might want to cover your shoes, as he looks down at his own goo-covered shoes. The team enters and discovers the floor covered with a substance that McGee calls porridge but which Ducky tells him is human remains, called effluvium. Ducky explains how bodies can liquify and release gases, causing an explosion as if the bodies were in a pressure cooker. Scene: autopsy room. Ducky and Jimmy discuss that they have another meat puzzle. They quickly learn that there are more than two bodies when they find they have 3 right hands. They look at each other and say in unison We're going to need another table Back in the main office: Tony is doing a campfire in Gibb's absence regarding the case. When challenged What do you think McGee? McGee replies She definitely seemed un-Abby Ziva: who? McGee Abby Ziva: Abby's unhappy? Tony No, Abby's un-Abby Tony then instructs them both to focus and says he will talk to Abby later, because he has experience of talking to angry women and there is one clearcut ironclad reason why he should talk to Abby... because she owes him a dollar. He turns and is surprised by silent-walker Gibbs. Tony reports that they have found the victim's relatives who had failed to report her missing. Ducky phones and calls them to autopsy for a report.

Ducky reports that the bodies were dismembered, - butchered at the joints- and that they are missing pieces for two main bodies and that they have spare parts. Ducky opines that they are looking for a mass murderer. Gibbs walks into Abby's outer lab. She is sitting at her computer in her inner office, doing computer messaging. Her computer name is Abbsolute with USer471. She types Cant we talk about this :-) USer471 replies There's no point... with a grimacing emoticon. Gibbs asks for a report. She quickly changes her screen content. When Gibbs preempts what she is going to say about her DNA results, she snaps at him. But she reports in full, tersely pointing out that photos of the crypts in the mausoleum show that two more vaults have recent marks indicating tampering (the rust has come off the screws). Gibbs leaves and Tony stays to talk to her, revealing that the team has been talking about her behind her back and Tony just keeps putting his foot in it throughout the conversation. Abby is not impressed and stalks off in disgust. McGee and Ziva are talking to a victim's relatives. The niece becomes upset and Ziva empathizes, handing over tissues, saying Here. I know how difficult it is to lose a person you care about They escort the relatives to the lifts. McGee observes They were really cut up and then realizes how inappropriate that remark is in a butchered body case. He then advises Ziva to pace herself as there are five more next of kin to go. Ziva bristles at the implication that she can't handle it. Tony returns, escorting in Miss Dalton whose grandfather occupies a tomb that has been tampered with. He sends her upstairs whilst he collects gear from his desk. McGee grabs the chance to get the latest info on Abby. Tony tells him that it is probably something McGee did that is the problem. McGee is confused.

Tony interviews the pretty Miss Dalton, but fails to win her co-operation over opening of the tomb and he has to resort to getting a federal warrant (which brings the case to the attention of other agencies). Back at the mausoleum, Gibbs arrives and Tony announces to him that they have company. Lt Col Mann emerges from the mausoleum to greet an uneasy-looking Gibbs, saying that she ..got a call that your case might be venturing into CID territory. Gibbs, quietly unassertive That call would be premature. Mann (leaning back on her heels and looking skeptical) Really? And here I was thinking it was 4 weeks overdue. Gibbs looks very uncomfortable and goes very silent. He cannot meet her gaze. Tony and Ziva are fascinated with the encounter. The Colonel continues to discuss the case. Gibbs, in avoiding Mann's eye contact, slews his eyes to check reactions from Tony and Ziva, who immediately pretend not to be paying attention. Mann invites Gibbs to fill her in on the details. He keeps his eyes downcast, saying nothing then glancing at up at her. Mann says You wouldn't want to make a bad situation worse, would you? Gibbs bends and looks down. Mann: Don't look so nervous Jethro Gibbs Do I look nervous? Mann (picking invisible lint off his shoulder and clearly beginning to be amused by Gibbs' squirming reaction to meeting her) You actually..um..look pretty good. Gibbs turns to escort Mann inside and barks an instruction to Tony and Ziva to guard the perimeter. McGee arrives and Tony barks at him to stay. McGee asks What did I miss? (a lot, McGee, a lot)

Gibbs and Mann work in the mausoleum, looking for the tampered vaults. Their conversation starts off with double meanings Not like you to leave something unfinished...the crime scene Gibbs It is best not to have expectations Mann What are we hoping for? Gibbs You throw that 'we' word around pretty casually...last time someone tried to remove one of these, it blew up in his face...you might wanna step back a little bit Their verbal sparring continues as a dual discussion of the job at hand and their personal situation.

The Gibblets, waiting on the mausoleum porch, discuss what is going on between Gibbs and Mann. Mann is not a redhead. Could Gibbs have changed? The discussion quickly turns to Tony's reformed behavior, now that he doesn't flirt anymore due to his girlfriend. Tony deflects that attack by saying that he doesn't gossip. McGee Tony you like to talk about everyone's private lives Tony Talk, yes, but I don't write entire books about them do I? A member of the public arrives, clutching lilies and asks whether he is able to go inside today. He is sent away.

Back inside the mausoleum, Mann stands in front of the next vault that Gibbs is to check for the missing body parts. Mann is barring Gibbs' access. He fronts up to her. G:Are you going to let me in? M:I think we should be clear on the implications first. G:You're interfering with my investigation. M:Is that what I am doing? G:Honestly, I'm not sure. M: If there is evidence in here, then I am going to be obligated to see this right through to the end. G: And if there's not? M:Then I don't see why my involvement shouldn't end right here. (She moves out of the way.) G:If you wanted to see me, you didn't have to manufacture a reason. (She protests that she is following army orders.) M:You could have called. G:So could you. M:I distinctly remember the last thing you said as you slinked out the door...(G (talking over her) I don't slink!)... was I'll call you. G: For the record, I didn't think the last time we saw each other was going to be the last time we saw each other. M:Neither did I. G:Well, here we are. M:Lucky for us. G:Call it fate. M:You really just going to let fate decide whether we go our separate ways? G:Five bodies in total and we only recovered portions. You're hoping the rest are in here. Aren't you? M:To be honest I am not really sure. (Gibbs opens the vault to reveal a mass of bones and bits). G:That the answer you're looking for? Camera freezes on the jumble of bones and body bits revealed in the vault.

Cut to Ducky's lab. He reveals that the five were shot, stabbed, strangled, bludgeoned and poor Miss undetermined Torrance. The bodies were moved after being suspended and drained and butchered. Paradoxical behavior: unrestrained murder and meticulous dissection. Jimmy answers the phone and says to Gibbs that the Director wants to see you. He starts to leave and Jimmy clarifies Both of you Gibbs and Mann look at each other, surprised, and depart together. In the main office, the Gibblets are having a campfire discussing the case, listing the details of the victims and discussing the mystery visitor who tried to visit the mausoleum who turns out to be a relative of the first victim. James Brady. Was he visiting his trophies, since he officially had no relative buried at the mausoleum? In Director Shepherd's office, we learn that the Army has agreed to lend Mann to the investigation. It is clear that Mann and Gibbs are being territorial and staking their authority. Jenny tells them that they have worked together successfully in the past. Nothing has happened to change that relationship, has it? Everyone looks uneasy and says nothing. Gibbs pushes to be allowed to leave and get on with the investigation. Jenny agrees but asks Mann to stay I'd like a private word with you. Gibbs gives an uneasy look as he leaves the Director's office. In Abby's lab, Ziva arrives to find Abby attacking her platform boot. Abby laments why she wears 3 inch platforms when she is already 5feet10inches tall (about 1.8m tall). Abby looks at Ziva's shoes Flat, sensible, functional...not very sexy Ziva struggles both to stand while Abby has grabbed her foot and then to follow Abby's thinking. Abby views her platforms saying they're wrong, wrong... Ziva asks wrong for who? Abby abruptly switches to a discussion of the forensics of the tissue samples. The torrance tissue has abnormal levels of chlorine. Gibbs returns to the team who report that the visitor to the mausoleum was Brady. It is clear he had connections to the victims and he worked as a pool cleaner (heated indoor chlorinated pools). They decide to bring him in. Ziva and McGee depart. Tony hovers, looks at Gibbs, glances up to the balcony outside Jenny's office where Lt. Col. Mann has yet to emerge, then back at a p-faced Gibbs. Tony smiles a little smile and scoots. Jenny and Mann are having a conversation. We learn that Jenny wrote a commendation for Mann after her last work with Gibbs. Jenny is making overtures to Mann, whose contract with the army is finishing soon. She offers Mann a drink. Bourbon. A drink that you acquire a taste for if you work with Gibbs. Jenny subtly makes it clear that she learned to drink with Gibbs a long time ago and hasn't drunk with him lately. But you never lose the taste. Mann takes the implicit message that Jenny is trying to recruit Mann and is not competition for Gibbs but fully understands the Gibbs phenomenon. Gibbs and Tony are on stakeout in the car outside Brady's house. Tony tries to engage Gibbs in discussion about what he thinks Jenny and Mann are talking about. Gibbs instructs him that they will wait. Silently. Tony shuts up. Spots the suspect and pursues him. They catch him. Now we see the team entering Brady's house. It is a mess. They find that he is a jack of all trades, many of which have blades. Tony says we will give them to Abby. Ziva says it's not what she wants as she was almost crying over her shoes. McGee queries the almost crying and concludes that it wasn't over shoes. They keep searching and find a pork chop. Back in the office, Mann and Gibbs walk the corridors to the interrogation room. Mann is smiling and Gibbs gives her a searching look. M: What? G: Nothin' M: Seems like you were thinking something. G: It's been known to happen. M: Something about me. G: I thought I recognized your perfume. M: I don't wear perfume. G: It must have been something else.(he was close enough to smell the bourbon on her). Gibbs enters the interrogation room where Brady waits with Ziva. Mann enters the observation room. Brady is accused of murdering his mother and is uneasy but then the rest of the victims' photos are laid out and he relaxes. Mann realizes that something is not right, because Brady looks relieved. Brady is honest when he says that he didn't do the chopping up of all the bodies. Gibbs leaves. Brady asks Ziva What now? You want me to take a lie detector test or something? Ziva responds with a smile You just did. Back in the team room, Gibbs and Mann arrive to campfire with the Gibblets. It is Mann who believes that Brady is not acting alone. She leads on the quick fire discussion with the Gibblets. Mann points out that Brady got to the Mausoleum as quick as Mann did...how did he know. Mann issues the instructions as to what each of the team should do. Gibbs is silent and, when the Gibblets look to him for confirmation of Mann's orders, simply says Go. McGee then says Boss.. and it is Mann who responds, and then realizes that McGee meant Gibbs. She leaves for forensics. McGee tells Gibbs that, if he is going to visit Abby, McGee thinks he should know that she seems to be going through something. Gibbs cuts him off with a simple I'm not going empty-handed, McGee. Cut to Abby's reaction as Gibbs enters the lab (delight) and then she sees Mann following him (Abby deflates). A very un-bubbly, unhappy, businesslike Abby reports.She tosses down the pork chop found at Brady's place. The pork chop has the same cutting signature as the bodies. Mann realizes that Brady's girlfriend is a butcher and is excited by the evidence, and then realizes how unnaturally still Abby has become now her report is completed. Gibbs gives Mann and look and Mann takes the hint and departs. Gibbs stands, looking at the profile of the silent, hollow-eyed Abby, who is keeping her eyes trained on her computer, to avoid eye contact. Abby asks Dont you have work to do? (Gibbs remains silent)...Look, its not something you can fix in the classic Gibbs hit- and-run style, ok? Gibbs, very quietly, very seriously, says I got time, Abs and just looks at her with complete concentration. Abby opens up. It's stupid. It's just...a guy. I am not going to start spilling my guts just because you keep standing here.(She lasts a few seconds of the silence and then spills her guts). She starts walking to her office (followed by Gibbs,clutching the Caf- Pow) She confesses that she has fallen for a guy who thinks she is too much for him...can you imagine that? Me? And its not what you think...its not all this (goth attire). He likes...(sighs, looks sideways at Gibbs and away again)..small women. I got dumped because I am too..too big for him. And don't even bother with the it's his problem because he's too small and he cant accept you for who you are. He just doesn't think that we could make it work and I have done everything I can to try to convince him that he's wrong..(she stares at the guy's picture on her computer)...so I guess I am just going to have to accept it...(she deletes his picture from her screen-saver, pursing her lips)...and let it go(she relaxes her face into a semblance of acceptance). Abby finally looks up from the computer at Gibbs, then stands and hugs him and says Thanks Gibbs You always know what to say. (Gibbs, of course, has said nothing but has stared long and hard at the picture and at Abby. He reflects her bleakness. And we, the audience, recognize her beloved as the very short but talented forensic scientist whom Abby met at a trade fair and whose lab Abby borrowed in previous episodes.) Back in the office, Mann is leading the discussion with the Gibblets, while Gibbs looks on from his desk and Jenny watches from her mezzanine balcony. When they work out that they should check the only boutique butcher shop in the area, Gibbs nods his agreement and issues the command Let's roll Surprise: the boutique butcher shop is run by Miss Dalton, who refused to sign the release for her grandfather's vault to be opened. She is Brady's girlfriend and she had told Brady that NCIS was at the mausoleum, which he then visited. Gibblets search and find bloodstains in a deep freeze. Miss Dalton runs away, and we hear her choking and vomiting in reaction to the blood.

Cut to interrogation room: Miss Dalton recounts how she met Brady who was a customer, trying to get a few moments respite from looking after his mother. He always wanted to try new things so she taught him her butcher's trade. She laments how she could not have seen. He is watching from the observation room. Mann asks him whether Miss Dalton is the monster that he had spoken of during his own interrogation. He says no and claims that he was the sole butcher. He attacks the glass and yells, thumps, revealing his presence to Miss Dalton. Gibbs speeds into the obs room and starts flash-carding the pictures of the victims, demanding to know what happened to each. Brady knows. Tony realizes that Brady has already killed another victim. Brady is taken away. Gibbs issues the instruction to let the girlfriend go. Ziva visits Abby in the lab, and is pleased to note that Abby has her music back on. Abby declares that she doesn't feel good yet but better than before. She says how guys tie you in knots and you can't get the knots out, but it really helped to talk with Gibbs and un-knot the knots. Abby then offers that if Ziva ever wants to talk about Lt Sanders (who died in "Dead Man Talking"), Abby will listen. Ziva says I liked him and he died and what else is there to say? Abby gives Ziva a bear hug. Ziva doesn't know how to respond but afterwards appears shaken. Asserting control she says Hmm. Well, I'm glad you feel better. She pats Abby on the arm, at arm's length and leaves. Mann and Gibbs are in the car, driving to Brady's missing van that has been located. They are discussing Dalton and Brady. Mann With the right partner, you can make the proverbial monster Gibbs grins and drawls Oh yeah, give me a little of that ol'time romance They laugh. Mann says Someone's got skeletons of his own and says that if she was ever in that situation where she had a body that she needed to get rid of, she thinks that she would tell him. Yeah? he asks. What makes her think that he wouldn't turn her in? Mann remarks that he is good at keeping secrets. She comments that he made the right call letting the girl go. Seems he always makes the right call when it involves a case. By this time they have reached the Brady's van. They draw their weapons, aim and open the back doors of the van... ...to reveal Miss Dalton, covered in blood, butchering her latest victim. The body is already only a torso, the severed limbs are around. Mann draws in a breath and says Son of a... We finish on a freeze-frame snapshot of Gibbs' stoic, unreadable face as he sights along his weapon.

Season Episode: 18

Originally aired: Tuesday March 20, 2007 on CBS
Writer: Shane Brennan
Director: Thomas J. Wright
Show Stars: David McCallum (Dr. Ducky Mallard), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), Lauren Holly (NCIS Director Jenny Shepard), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David)
Recurring Role: Muse Watson (Mike Franks), Scottie Thompson (Jeanne Benoit)
Guest Stars: Jeremy Roberts (Marine Cpl. Liam O'Neill), Steven Elder (Nick Taylor), Stephanie Venditto (Dr. Jane Leisten), Navid Negahban (Jimmy Shaloub)
Production Code: 088
Summary: When a supposedly frozen to death Marine turns out alive on Ducky's autopsy table, the NCIS team has to find out about the victim's movements last few days to uncover what happened to him and who left him for dead. As the investigation progresses, the team learns about the victim's trip to Baghdad via a private cargo plane and discovers a link to Gibbs' past.

Ducky chats to the corpse in the body bag in his autopsy room, as he sets about making his early morning cup of tea on a winter's morning. When he opens the bag, the kettle's whistle emits its piercing noise. The body wakes up and the man sits up, eyes wide open. After the opening credits, we learn that the man is a marine found with a body temperature 20deg below normal (presumably 20deg Fahrenheit, not Celsius?). The familiar dictum that the body is not dead until it is warm and dead is repeated by Ducky to Gibbs. Gibbs knows that this is a marine called O'Neill with no next of kin, but he is called to the hospital as a relative has turned up. To Gibbs' surprise, the relative is his old boss/mentor, Mike Franks. O'Neill is his long, lost son who only traced Franks 2 years ago. They met, spoke, and then the son deployed to Iraq. Franks explains that his boy looks like the mother, whom Franks only knew for 6 months and whom he left, not even knowing she was pregnant. If the boy didn't have his marine cut, his blond hair would fall over his face just like the mother's. The mother died a few years ago. Back to the investigation proper: it transpires that O'Neill went back to Iraq on a private visit for just a few days, using FastFlight freight transporters. The man running the freight company is ex-RAF and says he gave a marine a lift. We later learn that he was actually people-smuggling. We also learn that O'Neill went to a loan shark and was turned down for a loan of $25k. So O'Neill is looking less innocent. A green powder substance is found on O'Neill, which Abby has to analyse (it turns out to be henna). Mike Franks' fingerprint turns up in O'Neill's abandoned car, showing that he was in contact with O'Neill before O'Neill was bashed on the head and had his face held down in the snow (which was the cause of his coma).

Meanwhile, DiNozzo arranges to go on a date with Jeanne. It turns out to be at a climbing wall. Jeanne challenges Tony to a race: first to the top has to say I love you to the other one. Tony is first up but asks for sex instead of saying I love you. Subsequently, Tony takes some teasing or nagging from Ziva about his inability to get Jeanne to take his calls. Eventually Tony goes to visit Jeanne who tearfully tells Tony that the challenge to say "I love you" was actually a test of the relationship. Tony appears to be in a quandary (and they both seem to have forgotten that he said it on the phone in the episode Friends and Lovers...oh, well it's the writers who appear to have amnesia). Now Tony cannot say the three magic words because they are too late.

McGee, Abby and Ziva track down various pieces of information, that tend to make O'Neill appear to have been very shady and which show that Franks has been complicit in it. Throughout the episode, Abby believes that Gibbs is psychic and tries to "test" this theory. She believes this because Gibbs turns up in her lab whenever she has results for him, without her paging him. One time he turns up whilst she is still waiting for the mass spectrometer to finish testing the green powder found in the marine's car. The results spit out of the machine whilst Gibbs is there. Abby finds this startling evidence of Gibbs' ability to foresee the future. Gibbs insists he is not psychic. Each time Abby shuts her eyes and asks Gibbs to tell her what she is thinking, Gibbs disappears. Wisely. The news from the hospital is bad and Franks asks Gibbs to go and needs a witness. Gibbs attends the hospital, waits outside O'Neill's room whilst Franks goes in and gives the nod for the ventilator to be removed. Franks gets the staff to leave the heart monitor's audible signal on, so we hear his son's heartbeat slow and disappear until he flatlines. We see Gibbs listening from the nurses' station to the sound of life slipping away. When Gibbs goes in after it is over, Franks has already disappeared out another door. The role of Shaloub, the loan shark visited by O'Neill, becomes clearer when it turns out that he flies with FastFreight. On further questioning, it seems he is the silent partner/investor in the ailing business. A raid on the premises by Gibbs' team reveals a bunch of dead people, shot and left. These include the ex-RAF owner of the business. There is a Koran (Qu'ran) on the floor. Gibbs picks it up. The people-smuggler and the smuggled people have been shot. Franks has disappeared. His rental car is found and the murder weapon is inside. Abby's tests reveal that it has glass dust on it. There is a glass factory next to the airfreight company. Shaloub is interrogated and the soles of his shoes checked for glass dust residue. They find it. Shaloub had killed the ex-RAF owner of FastFreight for illegally people-smuggling (which, if detected, would bring other official attention on Shaloub). When asked why he killed the others, he shrugs. Gibbs tracks down Franks to his real car, just as he is about to leave for Mexico. Franks informs him that he witnessed Shaloub dumping the gun at the crime scene, in a dumpster next to the glass factory. Franks took the gun and put it in his car, so that Gibbs would find it and work out the connection to Shaloub. Franks is heading for Mexico. Gibbs looks in the car and finds an Iraqi woman in head scarf. Franks explains that she is his son's wife who is discarded by her family for bringing dishonour. His son had needed the money to pay for her to be smuggled into the USA. Franks had gone to the FastFreight company to collect her. Franks points out that it has nothing to do with the murder investigation. Gibbs agrees. He walks to the car, smiles at the woman and hands her her copy of the Koran. As Gibbs walks away, he hears a baby cry. He looks back and sees the woman put a blond-haired baby to her shoulder. Gibbs smiles at the sight of Franks' grandson whom he is about to take back to a new life in Mexico. Final few seconds: new scene. We see a desk, with a long-lens camera next to a computer screen and a female hand working the mouse, clicking across a series of digital photographs. The images are of Tony and Jeanne at the climbing wall. We see a 1/8 profile of the person's face: long hair is obscuring the face. We do see a nose. We know not who is spying on Jeanne and Tony. It seems that it is a woman. The final photo closeup is of Jeanne and Tony kissing at the top of the climbing wall. The photo snaps into the closing black and white shot. End credits roll.

Summary: When a weekend call to the NCIS tip line from an unknown source about possible terrorist activity results in the death of two agents sent into a trap, the NCIS team will have to find out who were the people responsible with the help from Agent Paula Cassidy, who holds herself responsible for the tragedy.

Cassidy's team waits, bored, for a tip line contact to appear. The team asks Cassidy, who is in her car watching them as they sit outside a cafe, why they have had to do tip line duty two weekends in a row. She doesn't know. She gets a call from the tipster. He goes into a shop, her team follow, the building blows up, just as Cassidy parks the car outside. CREDITS ROLL

Gibbs and Mann are at a baseball practice range, with Gibbs demonstrating the art of batting. He hits hard and far. He asks if she wants a go, and she says she has just been made captain of the softball team so she needs to know. She takes up the bat, Gibbs cuddles in behind her and demonstrates how to swing, planting a kiss on her neck as he takes her through the demonstration. She chuckles and asks if he uses that technique to teach everyone. They are clearly very close and very mellow. Gibbs leaves her to have a go by herself, setting the pitching machine to fast. She lets the first balls go by without swinging at them. Gibbs tells her she has to swing to hit it. She retorts that she knew she was doing something wrong, and then proceeds to hit all the rest of the balls out of the park. Gibbs looks on, slackjawed. He has been had. He gets a phone call from McGee. He becomes all speed and anxiety, and tells Mann he's gotta go. Mann asks what about their weekend, and he says he just lost two agents.

At the crime scene, the team are looking for bits and realise that they had a suicide bomber whose head has lodged somewhere in the ceiling space, as no one can find it on the ground. Cassidy's agents are dead. McGee arrives to report on who owned the store, with Cassidy in tow.

She reacts badly to the scene and Gibbs takes her to the NCIS van, where he sits her down and gives her tissues. She pre-empts Gibbs' expected rebuke saying she really can't take it right now and she should have been with her agents. Gibbs points out that she would have been dead too. He asks her whether she wants to grieve now or catch the organisers first. She calms down.

Two people who belong to the shop turn up, and explain that the place was for a middle east peace group and there was meant to be an international meeting brokered on the following Friday. The two employees of the peace group were at lunch during the bombing. They are taken to NCIS HQ for questioning. They dispute that the dead man, whose head has been found, could have been the bomber as he was the main peace activist.

Ducky does an autopsy on the bomber and finds that, on examination of the intact head and brain, that the man was dead long before the bomb went off. But Abby analyses the tip line tape of the bomber luring the NCIS agents to the bombsite and shows that the voice is that of the peace activist who was blown up with the bomb. How can he have talked to Cassidy immediately before the bomb yet have been already dead? Ducky and Abby each stand by their findings, with Ducky staking his career on being right.

The tip line tapes led to a firm that makes aids for disabled people. The owner co-operated and the team takes voice samples from all employees and a training video made by the dead man, which is how Abby could prove his voice matched the tape.

Cassidy is troubled because she knew she was meant to be in the shop with her team when it blew. She knew she was meant to die with them. Tony and McGee are disturbed to think that the tip line duty was meant to be their turn. Gibbs is sanguine about their near miss.

The debate about the pre-dead suicide bomber continues in the squad room. Ziva taunts Cassidy as to whether she really knows what she saw. Ziva is horrible to Cassidy and Cassidy gets annoyed. Tony tries to lighten the mood with inane patter, which makes Gibbs headslap him when he arrives and ask DiNozzo, what the hell do you think you're doing? He sends Tony and Cassidy off to the bombsite. He then asks Ziva Are you going soft on me, Officer David? indicating that he knows that Ziva is trying to give Cassidy something to focus on, other than the deaths, by giving her Ziva to hate. Ziva says she is just trying to help, but Gibbs points out that the drawback is that the person usually hates you for life. Ziva says she can live with that.

Tony and Cassidy return to the shop to look for hidden doors that could explain the dead/live bomber puzzle. Cassidy is bemoaning how horrible Ziva is and how she would like to hit her. Tony advises against it, on grounds that Ziva is a Mossad assassin, and not someone to take on physically. They talk whilst investigating the shop. Cassidy reacts badly to the place and Tony shows sympathy instead of ridicule that she would have expected. She asks why he has changed or who changed him. He confesses about Jeanne and his failure to say I love you (and we have seen that she has called a halt to the relationship until he can decide whether he truly means it if he says it - she has warned him against saying the three little words just to placate her). Cassidy points out that life is too short to not say the big things. Tony uses a cigar and a trick from an old movie: he blows cigar smoke at the wall and the air pressure differential sucks the smoke through an invisible break in the wall. The wall has a trick door, which can only be opened from one side (the neighbouring shop). Tony discovers that the two shops used to be a magic store.

In Abby's lab, everyone assembles to try to resolve the conundrum of the voice on tape. Gibbs is dismissive of Tony's discovery of the magic door and Cassidy speaks up for him.

The team works out who they are looking for at the computer company, and return, but Cassidy recognises the man and he spots her. Shootout. He dies. No witness for finding the conspirators. His computer reveals the dead suicide bomber's voice had been replicated perfectly and that the villain had been imitating the dead man's voice. Abby demonstrates how it was done, back in her lab, and shows that she was wrong about the man being alive at the time of the bomb. Ducky was right.

Having solved the case, the team proceed to provide protection for the peace delegation who arrive for the Friday peace conference, but who go to the bomb site for a memorial service to the dead peace activist and the dead agents. Cassidy attends to honour her agents, Gibbs' team are the protection detail for the visitors. They assemble in the shop. Meanwhile, McGee and Abby have been working on the computer, trying to find the accomplices, and realise that one of the two peace activists were involved. They phone Gibbs, who arrests the one nearest him and asks where the other one is.

As soon as he yells a warning, the other one opens the magic door between the shops and reveals himself as a suicide bomber. Cassidy throws herself on him, the door slams, the bomb goes off, the visitors are safe but team Gibbs (and especially DiNozzo) are stunned because they know Cassidy is dead.

Finale: Tony turns up at Jeanne's apartment and knocks on the door. We see he is wearing the platinum hospital wristband that she gave him for Valentines. She opens the door. Her face is ravaged by tears, and her stereo is blaring "Everybody Hurts" by REM. They stare at each other, while the music plays. Tony is clearly in extremis, emotionally. Eventually he blurts out I love you, Jeanne and she falls into his arms. They cling and cry on each other's shoulders while the music plays on.

Summary: McGee is under high pressure during the murder investigation of a Petty Officer based on the character for his latest book, with very little information to go on.

A fire truck pulls up and the firefighters break into a house with smoke billowing out of the window. When the firefighters get inside, they see that the smoke was caused by a turkey burning in the oven ? but soon spot signs of a struggle and a large pool of blood in the living room.

In a coffee shop, McGee is staring at a blank page, suffering from writer's block, unsure how to write chapter 7 of his new book. He's called away from the shop to the house, where he and DiNozzo are going through the house, filled with signs of a big party and movie posters. Gibbs and Ziva are also in the house, leased to Petty Officer Darren Cove. Gibbs eventually finds a note on the floor, "One down, two to go."

Back at base, the team is reviewing the file of Darren Cove ? he's been arrested twice since enlisting for small crimes ? when they find out that his pickup truck has been found abandoned on a highway. The inside of the pickup is filled with more blood, with an indication that there might have been more than one body. As McGee is reviewing the contents of the truck, he's struck by a sense of déjà vu.

In Abby's lab, she confirms that there was someone else's blood and fingerprints on the glass of a drink at Cove's house. Abby (who has an uncle who ran a bar on Canal Street in New Orleans), has been trying to figure out what the drink is. McGee, however, knows the drink ? it's called a "Hairy Hangover", a drink he invented for a character for the new book he's writing.

McGee confirms that the character he was writing is based on Cove ? someone he saw at his coffee shop. He also tells Gibbs that he sent a copy of his chapters to his publisher, which is the only link between his pages and the drink found. McGee's publisher, Lyndi Crawshaw, tells Gibbs and DiNozzo that McGee has three "stalkers" who sent letters to the publisher. Ducky reviews the three letters, and concludes that the person who wrote the letters is the same person, who is now dangerously obsessed with McGee and his book.

The team then goes to the various places where McGee's character goes, including a park where the character goes to think. The team find not only Officer Cove, stabbed through the chest, but also another man, Adrian Corbett, whom McGee used as another character in his new book, similarly stabbed. Based on the type of wound, the team figures out that a javelin was used to kill them, as that was the murder weapon in the new book. McGee, looking over the bodies in Ducky's morgue, is feeling guilty about the deaths he feels he inadvertently caused.

Abby tells the team (after trying to get more details about McGee's new book) that Cove's hand had a second blood type – that of the likely killer. She also was able to get a fingerprint off the stamp used to mail the letters to McGee's publisher, coming up with a match of Todd Ryder, who was arrested once for possession of marijuana. Gibbs and DiNozzo spot Todd working as a security guard. They chase Todd, who seems more scared than hardened. When they stop him, Todd tells them that McGee's publisher told him to mail the letters she wrote back to the agency. She tells Gibbs that she used the letters as a means to get more publicity for McGee's new book. Abby then confirms that she wasn't the killer.

McGee and DiNozzo are sitting in McGee's apartment, trying to figure out how the killer managed to get the story, when the only copies are either locked up or shredded. McGee eventually figures out that the killer got the story by reviewing the typewriter ribbon he uses when writing his books, which get thrown out with the trash. When the team reviews the story, they eventually figure out that Abby is the third victim. McGee had written some extra pages, where he detailed that two people – the characters based on Cove and Corbett – wanted McGee's character dead. When reviewing the book, they find that Abby's character is in love with McGee's character, but that she tells her aunt that McGee has "to go" – to McGee, that means the character leaves the agency, but to the killer, it means Abby's character is threatening him.

Abby is staying at a convent, since her apartment is flooded. She's woken up by the killer, Landon – the guy from McGee's coffee shop who talked to McGee earlier in the day. Landon calls Abby "Amy", and talks about how "she" was planning on killing "special agent McGregor" – McGee. The team gets to Abby just in time, with McGee defusing the situation by telling Landon that he and "Amy" are supposed to get married at the end of the book. After the team disarms Landon and takes him away, Abby and McGee talk, where Abby is under the impression that what McGee said would be the actual ending of the book.

The people present for this final scene are Abby, Gibbs and McGee. Gibbs has turned his back, to give an illusion of privacy to the young couple but he winces as Abby, instead of listening to McGee's contrition over her narrow escape, is more concerned to insist that McGee must not marry off Amy to Agent McGregor because 'they are all wrong for each other.' Tim frowns with puzzlement but Gibbs sees that Abby may be talking about Amy/McGregor but is actually thinking of Abby/McGee.

Brothers In Arms

Recurring Role: Joe Spano (FBI Agent T.C. Fornell), Scottie Thompson (Jeanne Benoit), David Dayan Fisher (Trent Kort)
Guest Stars: J.C. MacKenzie (Mitchell Reese), Mo Gallini (Andre Jones), Patrick Robert Smith (Tim Gerber), Peter Birkenhead (Elroy Webster), Sara Botsford (Dr. Helen Berkley)
Production Code: 091
Summary: Director Shepard makes a huge mistake by meeting a man alone to inform her about Le Grenouille, as their meeting turns into a murder of the informant. Now the NCIS team must gather all the existing info and try to finally hunt down their enemy.

Director Shepard meets with Elroy Webster, an informant, who claims he has information on La Grenouille's (the arms dealer she is trying to capture since the beginning of the season) next shipment to the USA. Unfortunately for her, a black van drives up on them and Webster is shot by a gunman in that van, killing him before he could tell her anything.

Gibbs' team arrives on the scene afterwards, with Gibbs furious that Shepard did not tell him about this meeting and asking for his help. Jenny defends herself and does not want to discuss it any further. She gives the team instructions to investigate the incident and report directly to her, ignoring Gibbs' authority. Ducky finds out that Webster had a tumor in his brain, which had decreased his life span to mere six weeks but for some reason his medical records do not show it. Gibbs thought his short life expectancy might have led Webster to contact Shepard but this theory is not working anymore given the new information. Abby discovers a lead to the driver of the van, allowing the team to find him. When they arrive at his apartment though, he is already dead.

With the driver dead, Shepard contacts the CIA to reveal an undercover agent to her, because they "owe us a favor" (she did not order the capture of La Grenouille in Blowback when they had a chance to do so because of an CIA operation at the same time). The CIA send over FBI agent T. C. Fornell, who worked with Gibbs and NCIS before as the FBI contact. Working as an operative for Homeland Security, Fornell manages to arrange a meeting with Trent Kort, an agent working within La Grenouille's organization. Kort, as well as Ducky before him (when he told Shepard about his psychological profile of La Grenouille), tells Shepard, that a hit on a traitor is not La Grenouille's style but Shepard dismisses these objections as wrong and Kort reveals the name of La Grenouille's American arms trader, Andre Jones, who is the only one the arms dealer would have sent.

The team tries to capture Jones, but he grabs hold of a gun and is killed in the ensuing gunfight. Back at NCIS, Abby figures out that the next shipment will arrive shortly and the team manages to find out about the whereabouts of the shipment by questioning a forger working for La Grenouille. When they arrive on the docks and open up the containers, they only find squirt guns and a bottle of Cognac, along with a letter from La Grenouille, wishing Webster well. Shepard realizes she has been tricked all along and her anger is increased by this failure.

In the side story line, Tony takes his relationship with Jeanne Benoit to a new level by meeting with her and her mother for dinner, something he has never done before with previous relationships.

In the Dark

Season 4

Episode Number: 92

Season Episode: 22

Originally aired: Tuesday May 1, 2007 on CBS
Writer: Steven D. Binder
Director: Thomas J. Wright
Show Stars: Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), Lauren Holly (NCIS Director Jenny Shepard), David McCallum (Dr. Ducky Mallard)

Guest Stars: Terry Bozeman (Navy Cmdr. Doug Jakobsen), Katie Lowes (Bryn Landers), John Billingsley (Jackson Scott)
Production Code: 092
Summary: When a blind photographer shoots the body of a Petty Officer on film, the NCIS team uses his special insight to investigate the crime. Meanwhile, both Gibbs and Tony are having commitment issues in their relationships.

An assistant to a blind photographer sees a dead Petty Officer in one of his pictures and they call NCIS to investigate. The team arrives but with no body, they are without a trace. Luckily, the photographer is able to recall where he was when he made the photo and they find a dead Petty Officer, who was working for the DLA. The DLA office tells Tony and Ziva that there was an investigation regarding this sailor and alleged connections to competitors and treason.

Meanwhile the team finds out about one of the dead sailor's colleagues, David Wong, was with him before his death and they think he is connected to the murder. They set out to find him, just to find him dead in an abandoned DLA warehouse, apparently having hung himself.

Gibbs does not believe that Wong killed himself and Tony notices that he signed his death letter, in which he claims responsibility for the Marine's death, with the middle initial "B." while his middle name was "George". On closer inspection the "B" turns out to be a "I3", the designation of both men's department. The team, with a clue from Abby, turns to the photographer's assistant though because she is barely visible in one of the photos despite having claimed to be at the office at that time. It turns out that she was following him, not because of the murder, but because she is in love with him. The team thus turns back to the "I3"-clue and they finally find out that the whole thing was planned by an officer with the Inspector General. The main clue involves the blind photographer's sense of smell, leading to the identification of the killer.

In the side story lines, both Gibbs and Tony experience relationship issues. Hollis Mann is retiring from the Army and wants a definite answer from Gibbs, whether he is ready for a serious relationship with her. Jeanne Benoit is losing her apartment and Tony offers that they move in together but he is having second thoughts about it. Both issues are left mostly unanswered in the end of the episode, though Gibbs appears to be ready to embrace his relationship, demonstrating his commitment to Mann by embarking on a lengthy plumbing project in her bathroom. Jimmy Palmer, on the other hand, finds that his liaisons with Special Agent Lee are coming close to home when Ducky finds Lee's bra in a cabinet in the autopsy room. Jimmy realises that the matching panties are still missing, which sends him on a panty-hunt throughout NCIS HQ.

Summary:	When Jenny has to attend an overseas conference, Gibbs is made acting director, but he prefers to ignore his duties and lead the investigation of the murder of a man, who was found dead in a taxi headed to the NCIS headquarters.

Gibbs is made acting-director of NCIS when Jenny is on a Interpol-conference in Paris but he is fed up with all the paperwork and is glad to hear about a new case: A dead man has been found in a cab outside the Naval Yard. According to the driver, he was on his way to NCIS and he did not realize he was dead until the Marines tried to check his ID. Gibbs returns to lead this case and does not care that Cynthia is constantly reminding him about the work he has to do.

Ducky examines the body but is not able to find any reason for its demise and thus Abby has to run its blood through her equipment which does take some time. In the meantime, the team finds out the dead man's identity, proving him to be a gardener at an embassy who only holds a tourist visa, albeit for an indefinite period. The attaché of the embassy reveals that he in fact was not a gardener but a student who was just given the job to be able to stay in the country and study. Being reminded of an old case, Gibbs thinks that the dead man might be involved in some kind of terrorist activity.

While the team investigates and follows up on clues about people whose names are on a list found on the dead man in the taxi, Abby rechecks evidence on an older case which is soon to go to trial. The lawyers of an accused murderer claimed that Abby's ballistic tests might have been flawed and, as Abby does not want to be proven wrong, she double-checks on the tests.

Meanwhile in the basement where evidence is stored, a man sneaks out from within a hollow front seat in the taxi. The man breaks into the evidence locker area to switch the weapon involved in the aforementioned case, so that the test will indeed show that Abby's test was wrong. When she goes down to the basement to retrieve the weapon to retest it, she finds a bit of foam on the floor inside the evidence locker. Puzzled, she picks it up and takes it to her lab to test it as well, only to prove it to be identical to the foam found in the taxi, but by the time she gets the test results processed, the cabbie already is on his way out of the NCIS Navyard compound. Gibbs, independent from Abby, has already figured out that the list of names was a decoy to distract the agents' attention. When Abby reports to Gibbs about the foam, he alerts the sentries at the main gate of the Navy Yard and they stop the cab at the gate and arrest both men. The cabbie offends Ziva by comparing her to his wife and his mother-in-law. Ziva asks Gibbs for permission to shoot the cabbie, for whom she had previously felt sympathy when she thought him an innocent bystander.

In the side story line, Jenny, in France, meets with Trent Kort, the CIA man in La Grenouille's organization, who tells her about a Russian general who might help her. The general, in hospital dying from lung cancer, tells her about her father, that both he and the general had fraudulently signed weapons inspection certificates to allow La Grenouille to do illegal arms trading, and can ask her father to confirm it. Jenny calls the accusation a lie, and says her father died 12 years ago. The general says her father is quite alive and had visited the him 3 weeks ago. Jenny is shocked at the accusation and at the news that her father is alive.

The episode ends with "To be continued in two weeks".

Summary:	When Jenny returns from her European trip, the entire NCIS team will be forced to take a Homeland Security polygraph test, and the deepest secrets of each agent are about to be revealed. Plus, an unarmed Tony and Jeanne are held hostage by a ruthless drug dealer.

Jenn arrives home from her trip in Europe where Cynthia awaits to bring the Director home. They talk about Gibbs and how he handled the workload while she was gone and if he survived, Cynthia tells Jenn he barely survived and they take off from the airport. Devin arrives after he gets through customs and he is writing his sister Bernie, when a little girl stares at him and then he steps out and gets hit by a car. The Director arrives home to find Noemi had made her something to eat and offers to take a little bit. Jenn tells Noemi she will eat in her study, then makes arrangements with her driver

Melvin to pick her up at 0530 for an early start. Jenn enters her study and sees a bottle of Scotch on her desk and asks Noemi if anyone had been in her study during her hiatus. Noemi says " no one, Seniora, you no do that. " and if she had done that when she was away. Jenn said she does not do that. Jenn then asks if Noemi cleaned in her study while she was away. Noemi replays " Si Seniora, but sorry I no see. " and Jenn told Noemi not to worry and it was nothing. In the lab Abby is preparing McGee for his polygraph by making one herself. She asks him his name and he tells her to scratch his nose and she does and tells him to stop being a baby. " Tell me your name... Timothy McGee, no middle initial. Have you ever used an alias? and he asks her if his pen name counts and she says yes. Thom E. Gemcity. Do you have any other names. No..."

The detector goes off and Abby says "No!". Tony and Ziva enter the lab and asks McGee what he is doing and he replies "Maintaining his Special Agent Status." Ziva points out the lie and says McGee lied about his name. Then he said he has no other names. Probie, yeah boss? and elflord. Gibbs says to him and then during a conversation McGee mentions Homeland Security is issuing tests for all NCIS and tells them to check their emails. Tony and Ziva find theirs and Gibbs leaves. Devin arrives at the hospital after Carly asks Dr. Benoit about the Angel of Death. Whom Carly says looked like Miss Puerto Rico when her Uncle Louis died. Jeanne asks the nurse why he was still hyped up and then tells Devin he is hypertensive and tachnicardic which is not good. She orders him to tell her if he had any drugs and they are not the police. He tells her he wants to phone is sister. She dismisses him and leaves telling Carly to look out for Miss Puerto Rico. Gibbs shows up at Diane's where Fornell is picking up Emily. Gibbs asks Fornell if the FBI is being polygraphed. He says no and Diane comes out and glares at Gibbs and asks if Fornell still dreams about O.J.-ing Diane. He says no and tells Gibbs that Homeland Security is after their boss. Gibbs shows up at the Directors and asks her why Homeland Security is doing polygraphs on the team. She ignores it and Gibbs goes to touch the scotch and she say not to. He asks Jenn what she did in Paris and she says what they used to do ever so well and he mentions her right eye twitches when she lies and walks out. At the bar Abby, Lee, McGee and Ziva are discussing how to get McGee out of the test. Ziva then tells Abby she can beat a polygraph and Abby does not believe her so Ziva starts to tell her that she can do it by the following and then Lee says if it is unethical she can not hear it. Ziva says not to listen then, Lee playfully covers her ears and tells Ziva to tell Abby. Palmer and Ducky arrive and order drinks and McGee tells him they have to take polygraphs and then Ducky tells them not to worry unless they were spys and Ziva asks why he is looking at her and he replies to spread humor and he toasts to them and soon they all have to leave. Then he is left with Ziva who then says... May a mouse never leave you gurdle with a tear drop in his e... and Ducky corrects her it was Gurnle, an Oatbin and tells her what it means and if it was empty a mouse would cry, then she toasts to dried eyed mice. In the elevator at the hospital Nick and Bernie await to go up when Tony comes in.. she asks him why he did not push the button and he says it was lit. Tony tells Nick to get her help bobby.. and they argue and Nick gets out with Bernie and asks the doctor where Devin is and they chat with Dr. Benoit and leave and he attacks Devin leaving Bernie worried. Jeanne then asks Tony if he wants to take a 10min break wth her he says yes and Jeanne tells Carly to clock those 10mins. They go to the cafe and talk about the house and then after a while she gets a code blue call. Jeanne rushes up where Devin is in cardiac arrest and he dies and Carly sees the Angel of Death again. Nick asks Dr. Benoit where they can pick up the body and she replies the city morgue and she need an autopsy and he says he doesn't but she does and she walks away. Abby arrives in her lab and wakes up her machines and tells them to get ready and she puts on her music and the Director enters and gives her the bottles and glasses and asks her to check for prints.. she says chain of evidence is not important. Abby agrees and the Director says she will be in her office. McGee is with Gibbs who says they need to hack the CIA... and he tries and runs into a bot-agent. Gibbs tells him to search for Jenn Shepard, McGee does so. Jeanne is informed that the couple might be in morgue and she runs to the elevator where Tony is waiting for it to close and he follows Jeanne to the morgue where they are held at gun point. Ziva is with Ducky and she tries to call him and she complains about the voice mail whenever he is with her... and Ducky asks why she monitors Tony and she says she doesn't then he says she does like mother with an infant. She agrees and he says it is Friday night and you are worried so what does that tell you. Ziva says that Tony is her partner and he said he would be there and he is not. She says she has a bad feeling. Tony and Jeanne are being searched and Nick tells her to call off Security and she doesn't and he hits Tony over the head and then he tells her again to call. Jeanne calls and tells them to call it off and leave her hospital id 766. She is stopped from helping Tony and he holds her and says to do the autopsy on Devin and she says no and she will do it after she helps Tony. McGee and Gibbs find information on Jasper Shepard and Gibbs asks about him and McGee tells him everything. Abby is sleeping and her prints ding showing it was Jasper Shepard who had the glasses. Jeanne finishes the autopsy after stalling and cuts the bag and then Nick charges at her and she stabs him, dropping his gun Tony shoot at him but does not hit him and tells him the next one is in his ear. Tony asks Jeanne if she is okay and she says not really. Jeanne takes Tony outside and gets into a limo saying it is her secret and Tony sees La Grenouille and she calls him papa. Then La Grenouille says welcome to the family professor and Tony just stares nervously.

Summary: The NCIS team uncovers a huge secret, as their mission to capture La Grenouille comes to an explosive and deadly conclusion.

A recap from last season reveals the depth of Tony and Jeanne's relationship, as well as the fact that La Grenouille had Kort spying on them. Tony and Jenny discuss their involvement in a top-secret operation involving La Grenouille. Gibbs learns that NCIS is being investigated because of Jenny's personal vendetta. Jeanne notes how well Tony shot the gun at the man who held them hostage in the hospital morgue. McGhee discovers a secret CIA operation called "Lodestone" that involved La Grenouille and Colonel Shepherd, who committed suicide 12 years ago. However, Jenny heard from an old friend that her father is really alive. She discovers a bottle of Scotch and a tumbler in her study, then brings it to NCIS for Abby to check the prints. Opening the door to a limo, Jeanne surprises Tony with an introduction to her father, who happens to be La Grenouille, and he greets Tony by calling him Professor DiNardo.

In her office, Jenny is having a dream about her father preparing to kill himself. She is running to find him, and then he is shot by La Grenouille.

In the limo, Tony, Jeanne and her father head to breakfast. La Grenouille looks suspiciously at Tony and says he has many questions. Tony is clearly uncomfortable. Jeanne confronts Tony about shooting the man in the morgue. Tony gets Jeanne to tell her father about it while he discreetly tries to make a phone call. Jeanne's beeper goes off saying she is needed back at the hospital for a signature.

At NCIS, the elevator doors open, and McGhee and Ziva run into one another. Both ask, "What are you doing here?" Ziva quickly says, "I asked first." McGhee believes that it was too close to call but since he was raised to be a gentleman and Ziva was raised to be a killer, he responds, "I was de-fragging my computers." Ziva doesn't believe him. She sees food on McGhee's desk and notes he has been here all night. She admits she's worried about Tony, as she still can't get a hold of him. He's been MIA since last night. Ziva then notices food on Gibbs's desk and wants to know what they're keeping from her. Gibbs enters, and Ziva declares that teams aren't supposed to keep secrets.

Back at the hospital, Tony wants to go in with Jeanne, but she insists he stay with her father. They walk to get some coffee nearby.

Jenny enters Abby's lab to find Abby asleep on the floor and the computer beeping that it has a match on the prints—Colonel Shepherd. She quickly cancels the search, which wakes up Abby. Stuttering, Abby apologizes for falling asleep. Jenny's phone rings, and she realizes that it's a call from DiNardo that is quickly dropped. She tells Abby she can go, and Abby asks if they got a match. Jen lies and says no, then leaves. Abby turns to her computer, and a message pops up asking, "Do you want to delete search results?" Confused, Abby clicks no, and Jenny's father's picture and profile pop back up. Stunned, Abby mutters, "This is not good."

In the squad room, Ziva is asking why the CIA is after the director. Gibbs says, "You tell me," and Ziva realizes aloud that the CIA is protecting their asset—La Grenouille. Ziva then asks if the director knows as the Jenny walks up and says, "Know what?" Thinking fast, McGhee says, "That it's Saturday, and we're all here on our day off because we love our jobs." Ziva adds, "Except for Tony who is missing." Jenny then asks McGhee to triangulate a cell number. Gibbs asks if Tony is in trouble. Jenny replies by informing them that Tony's girlfriend is La Grenouille's daughter. Shocked, McGhee asks, "He's been on assignment?" Gibbs is upset that Jenny kept it from him and wants to know what's going on. Jenny says that Tony contacted her using his alias's cell, which was a preplanned signal that his cover might be blown. Jenny wants the position sent to MTAC along with satellite coverage.

Meanwhile, Tony and La Grenouille are having coffee as they wait for Jeanne. La Grenouille, or Rene, wants to know what Jeanne told Tony about her father. They both talk about loving Jeanne, and Rene wants to know if Tony will break her heart. Tony replies that he doesn't plan on it. Jeanne comes out of the hospital saying that they need to leave before she gets called back again. Tony realizes his must move his car. Rene says to stay close so they don't lose him. Tony gets into the car.

At MTAC, the team is tracking Tony through the traffic cameras. They are having no luck calling his cell phones. Gibbs asks how deep his cover goes, and Jenny replies that it's deep enough to protect him from the kind of scrutiny La Grenouille would implement. Gibbs threatens, "You'd better hope so." They observe that Tony doesn't appear to have anyone tailing him, and Gibbs suggests that maybe Tony is doing the tailing. As they watch Tony's car turn the corner, they watch it explode. Horrified, Jenny exclaims, "Oh my god!" Ziva whispers, "Tony!"

The team arrives at the scene of the explosion and grimly approach. Car rubble litters the street. With a pained expression, Gibbs stares at the body behind the wheel. Gibbs calls McGhee over to start taking photos. Jenny stares at the wreckage, then notices a timer device. Ducky says, thankfully, the shockwave would have killed him before the fire. Jenny asks Ducky about identification, and Ducky says that they height, weight and general build are a match, but they'll have to get his dental records since fingerprints are out of the question. Ducky asks Jenny, "Is there any chance it's not Tony?" Jenny replies, "None that I can think of," and walks away. Ziva recovers Tony's ID and shield from the car.

Back at Abby's lab, Abby has the remains Tony's personal effects spread out before her. She's rambling on to Gibbs that regardless of what the evidence says, Tony's not dead until Ducky says it's him. As Gibbs goes to leave Abby to her work, he sees the bottle of Scotch and the tumbler that Jenny brought to Abby for prints. He confronts Abby about it, and Abby says that the Director brought it in and swore her to secrecy. Upset, Gibbs asks, "Any other secrets you can't tell me?" Abby says no since the Director didn't ask Abby to keep secret the fact that Jenny lied when she said there was no match when there really was. Gibbs asks, "Who was the match?" "Her father," replies Abby. Gibbs says that's impossible since her father is dead. Abby argues that the print is a 10-point match, meaning that it's a new print, so he can't be dead.

In Jenny's office, Jenny tells Gibbs that someone is trying to convince her that her father is still alive. Gibbs tells her about the polygraph scheduled for Monday is because the CIA is targeting her. Jenny isn't worried. Gibbs asks, "If they ask about your father?" to which Jenny replies, "He's dead." Gibbs then asks her if she knows about Lodestone, a CIA black op focused on arms control and weapons proliferation. Jenny admits that her father's job at the Pentagon was in weapons control, and he was under investigation for accepting a bribe when he was killed. Gibbs counters, "Coroner said he took his own life," to which Jenny responds, "He was murdered." Gibbs wants to know if she has any proof, and Jenny says no, but she knows who killed him. Upset, Gibbs demands, "The same guy you sent one of my agents after?" Angrily, Jenny retorts, "One of MY agents." As Gibbs turns to leave, Jenny tells him that he's wrong if he thinks she's obsessed with La Grenouille because of her father. Gibbs comments that she should skip the polygraph on Monday.

McGhee keeps watching the explosion, realizing that Tony wouldn't have carried his ID and gun on him since he was undercover; he would have stashed them in his car. The presence of these items does not mean that Tony was in the car. McGhee remembers that Gibbs wondered if Tony was tailing someone. Ziva and McGhee spot a limousine that Tony appears to be following.

In autopsy, Ducky is removing shrapnel from lung tissue. Palmer reads that the blood test results match Tony's type—A+. Ducky comments that 34% of Americans have that same blood type. He dictates notes to Palmer on the condition of the lungs, noting that they have minimal scarring. Pausing, he realizes that these lungs could have never had Y. pestis, the pneumonic plague. He exclaims to Palmer, "He never had the plague!" Smiling, Palmer repeats, "He has never had the plague!" As he leaves autopsy, Ducky turns and repeats, "He's never had the damn plague!"

Ziva has connected the limo to La Grenouille and realizes that Tony may have been following him. Ducky enters and says no; it wasn't Tony. Tony had contracted the plague and almost died from pneumonia, which severely scarred his lungs, unlike the lungs of the body in autopsy. Jenny asks, "If it's not Tony, who is it?" Gibbs adds, "And where is DiNozzo?" Kort walks in and wants to know where Tony is. Jenny wants to know why he's looking. Kort admits that La Grenouille flew into D.C. that morning, and now they can't find him. He wants a private briefing in Jenny's office, but Jenny refuses saying she'll decide what briefing he gets. Kort says she's jeopardizing the most long-term operation of the CIA. Gibbs interjects, "Operation Lodestone." Kort insists, "You weren't read in for Lodestone," and Jenny replies "So read us in." Leaving, Kort threatens, "This won't end well for you." The elevator door opens, and Tony grins at Kort and asks, "Hey my car blew up this morning. Did you do that?" Kort grabs Tony and shoves him against the elevator, asking where he went with La Grenouille. Tony looks over Kort's shoulder and clears his throat. Kort looks, and sees Gibbs, Ziva and McGhee with their guns drawn and pointed at him. He lets Tony go, and Tony taunts, "Happy frog-hunting! You might want to take the stairs. I had a little upset tummy this morning. Phew!" The elevator doors close, and Tony turns to the team and grins, "What, no balloons?"

In Jenny's office, Tony is bringing Gibbs and Jenny up to speed. He tells them that La Grenouille was waiting for them when they left the hospital. "It was her surprise, I guess. Meet the parents, part 2. I hate sequels." Tony surmises that Kort blew his cover to La Grenouille. He tried to get away by getting in to move his car, but Rene convinced him to stay with them by calling him Agent DiNozzo. One of Rene's bodyguards, Henri, took Tony's car and cell phones and Tony watched his car blow up from the limo. Rene assumed he was the target, but Tony figured it was himself for pissing off the agency lately. He says the bomb blew away a lot of things. Jenny asks if he thought that things would end any other way with Jeanne. "You mean, other than badly?" Jenny reminds Tony that he wasn't supposed to fall in love. Sarcastically, Tony retorts, "Thank you so much for that, Director. I'm going to keep that in mind for next time. Wait a second! There's not gonna be a next time!" Jenny wants to know what Jeanne said. "Nothing I'm going to tell you." Jenny presses him, but Tony insists, "Nothing you need to know, Director." Gibbs looks proudly at Tony for standing up to the Director. Tony says that Rene dropped him off at the front gate and drove west, very fast. Rene doesn't think he has a future, and he wants out, which explains why Kort is desperate to find him. The CIA is about to lose their most prized asset. Tony says Rene will be calling to set up a meeting because NCIS is the only agency he trusts.

Back in the squad room, Tony slaps McGhee on the head. Puzzled, McGhee asks, "What was that for?" "Believing I was dead!" Tony replies. McGhee insists that he never believed Tony was dead, but Ziva did. Ziva asks if everything is cool with the director and Gibbs. Tony replies, "Beyond cool. Almost icy." Tony is dialing his phone while asking if anyone called for him. Ziva says no and that Jeanne isn't at the hospital. She told the ER she was leaving for a few days and didn't say where she was going. Ziva asks Tony if Jeanne knows, and Tony says, "She knows." Abby runs in and hugs Tony, exclaiming that she never believed he was dead despite everyone else giving up on him, even Ziva. Tony then realizes that Ziva has his letter opener. He asks about his American Pie coffee mug. Abby tells him Palmer has it. "Mighty mouse stapler?" "Ducky." Ducky pops over the divider behind Tony's desk and returns his stapler, saying that he never really believed Tony was dead. Abby then tells Gibbs that she knows who made the bomb, not really who, but why. The bomb-maker was the same one who set off bombs all over the world to kill other arms dealers. They realize the bomb was meant for Jeanne, the daughter of an arms dealer since Tony would pick her up every morning. Tony and Ziva leave to look for Jeanne.

Jenny walks into her house and answers her cell phone—it's La Grenouille. He wants to meet her. She says tell me where and when. He appears before her and says, "Now, in your study." Rene compliments Jenny on her pursuit of him; he really liked Tony. Jenny asks him what he wants, and he replies that he wants sanctuary, asylum, whatever you call it, in return for information on the arms trade. Gibbs appears and asks if he's wanting protection from the people who tried to kill his daughter. Rene says yes, but she's safe for now. Gibbs wants to know what this has to do with Lodestone. Rene says the CIA wants to make him the biggest arms dealer. Gibbs realizes that Rene will control the illegal arms trade, and the CIA will control him. Rene says that was the idea until NCIS came along, and someone else found out. Now he can no longer trust Kort and the CIA. Jenny interjects, "This isn't the first time you were in this study." Rene agrees and says he used to meet her father and that her father was a good man with a conscience that got the better of him. Jenny asks, "Do you believe the story about the bribe?" Rene replies, "It's not a story. I paid him." Angrily, Jenny exclaims, "No, you killed him," as she pulls out her gun, "because he wouldn't take it!" Gibbs tells Jenny that the gun isn't loaded because Rene beat her to it. Rene insists that he needs protection. Jenny shoves the gun at him and tells him to protect himself. Rene tells her she is signing his death warrant, and Jenny says, "Twelve year overdue." Rene leaves. Gibbs tells Jenny that she just let her personal obsession get in the way of her duty. Jenny replies that that's crap, and he knows it. They had no warrant. Angrily, Gibbs tells Jen to get a warrant, and she fires back for him to get it. Gibbs asks Jenny if the gun wasn't loaded and he hadn't been there, would she have pulled the trigger. Jenny replies, "I guess we'll never know." Gibbs pulls the clip out of his pocket, lays it on the table and leaves.

At Jeanne's apartment, Tony reads a note that Jeanne left him. Trying to cover his emotions, he asks Ziva if she's ever lied to someone she loves. Ziva admits that she has, but that person never found. Tony tells her how he told Jeanne after the car blew up because Jeanne realized he was someone else. Ziva says she'll put out a BOLO, and they will find her. Tony says that she doesn't want to be found. As Ziva leaves, Tony sits on the floor.

The next day, Ziva is trying to get a hold of Tony, saying that if he was taking time off he would have told them. Gibbs enters and says Tony is taking time off. McGhee has discovered a yacht that was rented by La Grenouille, and he also learns that someone has been staying on it recently. They all leave, with a warrant this time. Upon arriving at the boat, the search it but come up empty. However, Gibbs does find La Grenouille's trenchcoat, so they know he was there. As they leave the boat, McGhee says they'll catch up with him eventually, to which Ziva adds, "Or someone will." "One day," adds Gibbs.

The camera zooms out from the boat to the water to show La Grenouille with a bullet in his head, sinking.

Guest Stars: Nick Searcy (Joseph Barnes), Owen Beckman (Nicholas Barnes), Rick Otto (Adrian Nelson), Margaret Easley (Sara Nelson), Schuyler Yancey (P.O. Christopher Munoz)
Production Code: 096
Summary: During an autopsy, Ducky makes a startling discovery that turns a murder of a Petty Officer into a search for a missing infant. Meanwhile, Tony has to deal with his feelings for Jeanne.

After a Petty Officer is killed, the NCIS is called to the scene to investigate. Special Agent Gibbs and his team arrive at the scene, where they quickly determine that the Marine had been shot with a shot-gun at short range and was not the driver of the crashed car. Further down the hill, they find a dead woman, a former con artist by the name of Heidi Campisano, sustaining injuries that indicated she was the driver.

Back at his laboratory, Ducky discovers that Heidi was in fact beaten to death, while her injuries from the car crash were post-mortem. He also finds out that she had bore a child shortly before she died. This initiates a search for the baby as Gibbs' team continues to look for the killer by looking through her ties with the men she had conned. They find Nicholas Barnes, a young mechanic, who she apparently lied to in order to get his car and money. His father tells Gibbs that Nicholas had been at their mechanic shop all morning, during which the accident took place.

When McGee finds deposits made by a man named Adrian Nelson to Heidi's bank accounts, the team pays him a visit. Both Nelson and his wife tell Gibbs that they don't know Heidi. While in front of his wife, Nelson claims to never have slept with Heidi but he later admits to Gibbs that he did know her and that she was stealing his money. Abby analyzes Nelson's DNA and confirms that he is the father of Heidi's baby. However, she further informs the team that Heidi was not the mother of the baby but was merely acting as a surrogate mother. Nelson's wife was actually the mother of the baby. The team realizes the Nelsons had lied to them. When tracking them down via the dust found in the Marine's car, Gibbs and his team arrive at an abandoned paper mill, only to learn that the baby had been kidnapped and they had spoiled the ransom transfer.

In the meantime, they find out that the brakes in Heidi's car were recently replaced but the mechanic had put the old brakes, which were due to fail, back in. This leads them back to Nicholas Barnes and his father. It turns out that the father was behind the kidnapping and the murder of Heidi, whilst forcing Nicholas to lie to the NCIS. The team finds Nicholas at the Nelsons' home, where he is arrested and the baby is handed to the Nelsons.

In a side storyline, Ziva and McGee notice Tony's change of behavior after Jeanne's departure. Concerned for her partner, Ziva attempts to help him by trying to get him to talk to her. A hurt and angry Tony snaps at Ziva, reminding her that she had fallen in love with the "dead man walking." Later on in the episode, Tony apologizes and the two make up. In the aftermath of the case, Tony puts Jeanne's note, which she left for him in "Bury Your Dead", in the fire and decides to let her go after she asked him to choose between her and NCIS.

Summary:	Lt. Colonel Mann joins Gibbs in an investigation of the murder of a Marine Captain who had access to highly classified information. Things get very personal for Gibbs when one of the witnesses in the case turns out to be one of his ex-wives.

Jill Reynolds and Stephanie Flynn arrive home to find Jill's husband, Marine Captain Trent Reynolds' sitting at his computer dead with a spear through his chest.

Abby uses her tax refund to buy all members of team Gibbs a 160 GB ipod. McGee listens to self help lectures, Tony sings and listens to Sinatra, and Ziva listens to Israeli rap. Gibbs receives a call about the dead marine so the team heads off to investigate.

The marine was killed on an army base so Mann and Gibbs run a joint investigation with Mann in the lead. The team wonders if the two are still dating.

Marine Captain Reynolds' worked for the defense intelligence agency taskforce. Ducky conclude the time of death between 7-9 pm the day before. Mann sends Tony to review witness statements, Ziva to check phone and bank records, and McGee to pull prints off the back door.

At a meeting in the Directors office we are introduced to Major Eric Sweigart who insists that one of their cyber guys over sees Abby work on Reynolds' laptop because there is sensitive material on the computer.

In the elevator Tony and Ziva discuss Mann and Gibbs' relationship. Tony hints that underneath Ziva is a girl, but he doesn't finish the sentence. Instead, Fred Rinnert, the cyber guy from the DIA finishes his thought for him.

McGee takes Fred to the lab where Abby insists that McGee make Fred go away. McGee suggests that she try to block him out. When she closes her eyes McGee disappears and leaves Abby with Fred.

Mann and Gibbs talk to the Major and find out that he knows how to use a spear gun – the murder weapon. Stephanie Flynn, his girlfriend is his alibi. Flynn is also one of Gibbs' ex-wives.

Mann and Gibbs tell the Director about the witness's connection to Gibbs. Mann interrogates her about Gibbs and the Major. Meanwhile, Abby and Fred discover that the Captain was a hacker. He hacked into Sweigart's computer. Abby bonds with Fred and McGee is jealous. They discover the last thing sent to him on his computer was the element song.

In autopsy Ducky tells Mann about Gibbs being married four times, and that his first wife and daughter were killed. Ziva finds out Sweigart and Jill have been in communication via telephone.

The team theorizes that they could have a love triangle or a possible spy ring. Abby listens to the element song in her lab and decides it must have a file inside itself. Fred continues to flatter Abby.

In the elevator Mann confronts Gibbs about neglecting to tell her he was married four times.

In the bullpen McGee tries to convince Gibbs that Abby and Fred could use his help in the lab but McGee backs down after being given the Gibbs stare.

Ziva and Tony pick up Jill and find her cleaning while McGee brings Abby a caf-pow, but she already has one. McGee and Fred stare each other down.

In the Director's office Stephanie tries to convince Jenny to take Gibbs off the case, but fails. She asks Jenny if Gibbs and her were ever involved. Jenny lies and says no.

Jill is questioned, and her affair with the Major is revealed. McGee finds a time stamped tape to alibi her. Abby runs a plug-in from the laptop through the element song. The plug-in highlights pieces of the song. Abby takes the elements listed and finds their corresponding numbers. Fred tells Abby Gibbs wants to see her.

Abby finds out Gibbs didn't call her and Fred is a potential match for the finger prints found at the scene. McGee finds an offshore bank account using Abby's code to reveal Fred was selling secrets, and killed Reynolds so he could have all the money for himself. Abby hits Fred, and McGee is pleased.

Stephanie drops off Gibbs's dog tags, and Gibbs walks her to her car. Mann finds a tape in Gibbs basement and plays it. The tape is of Kelly and Shannon.

Guest Stars: Dorian Brown (FBI Special Agent Courtney Krieger), Torri Higginson (Dr. Jordan Hampton), Nikita Ager (Shannon O'Hara), Joe Egender (Robert Graves), Emerson Brooks (Navy Lt. Carl Greer)
Production Code: 098
Summary: When Ducky realizes that one of his cadavers used for research is actually a victim of murder, the NCIS team identifies him as a criminal genius who is capable of deleting the past.

Ducky is performing an autopsy on a cadaver marked as "John Doe" in front of a class of Navy students, when a student discovers a gray liquid coming from the dead man's brain. It is soon discovered to be mercury and thus Ducky concludes that this man actually was murdered. He and Gibbs go to talk to the M.D. who allowed the body to be donated to science, Dr. Jordan Hampton, who turns out to be a woman and overworked, which makes Ducky forget his anger.

The team now tries to identify the body but as all searches in databases have no results, they go to the place where it was found. When asking in a nearby café, a woman acts suspiciously and when she tries to leave in a hurry, the team stops her. It turns out that she is actually a FBI agent called Courtney Krieger, who was charged with watching the dead man, now identified as Marvin Hinton, who was an ex-inmate with a changed identity.

Back at NCIS, Krieger explains to the team that Hinton was the bait for a gangster called "The Eraser", who's prime field of work is giving people new identities and erasing their old ones, something he did for a group of terrorists. Abby in the mean time ponders about the meaning of a tattoo found on Hinton, but can't make heads or tails out of it. The team in the same time raids Hinton's flat to find out that this is where he was killed, finding more mercury and the traces of at least six different women he was with.

Ziva is growing jealous of Krieger and thinks that she might have killed Hinton for some reason while Gibbs is visiting Fornell to update him on the case (which he didn't know about because the email from Krieger was spam-filtered). back in MTAC, FBI and NCIS are tracking

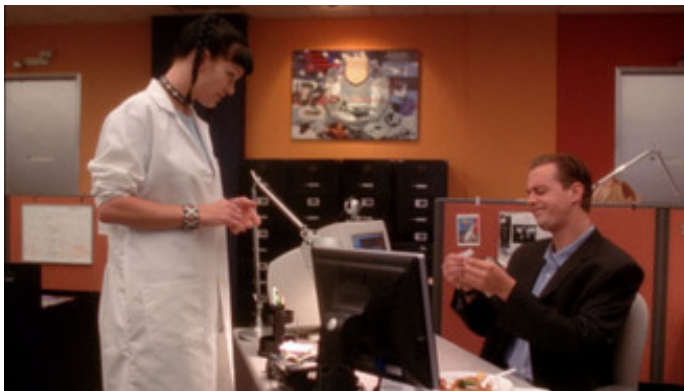

"The Eraser", named Kamal Konkani to a punjabi restaurant in Maryland. Tony and Krieger are going into the restaurant undercover and discover a delivery to a Frederick LeClaire, which was one of Hinton's aliases. They follow the delivery boy to a house and enter it to find Konkani's lair but not himself. The delivery boy identifies Hinton as Konkani, thus the team thinks one of his clients killed him.

They bring in a waitress from the café they checked out earlier for questioning because they suspect she killed her husband three years earlier with mercury and might have done the same this time. But when Abby, with the help of Ducky and Dr. Hampton, discovers the real image on Hinton's tattoo and find out that Konkani was in London while the tattoo was made on Hinton, they conclude that the delivery boy has set them up and that he is Konkani, albeit only his successor. Krieger and Ziva, who were on their way to drop him off, manage to take him into custody again and Gibbs and Fornell manage to break him. He tells them where the old Konkani is and the FBI manages to capture him, but the terrorists he provided with fake IDs are already gone and most likely on their way to the US.

Frank Thompson), Kimberly Atkinson (NCIS Special Agent Roberta Wells), Alaina Kalanj (Dana Arnett)
Production Code: 099
Summary: The NCIS team is called in to stop a naval officer from committing suicide by jumping off a rooftop, but when the suicide attempt turns into a murder, the NCIS team will have to find out who did it.

The NCIS team is called to a suicide situation, when it turns out that the man threatening to jump down from a building is a member of the US Navy. Unfortunately for Gibbs, who is trying to stop him, they know little else about him. McGee suggests to take a photo and let Abby run it against the Naval Academy's records but he is afraid of heights and thus Gibbs has to do it himself. They manage to identify him as Lt. Michael Arnett, a Navy operative working in the Middle East. Just as Gibbs manages to convince him to trust him, Arnett is hit by a bullet and falls to his death.

Now that the case has turned into a murder investigation, the team tries to get information from Arnett's CO, Cpt. Walsh, about the projects he was working on but it takes some time before they are able to reach him and when they do, he is not really cooperative, citing national security reasons. In his desk they do however find antidepressants which lead them to a private shrink, Dr. Fleming who is unwilling to say more than that Lt. Arnett was indeed depressive.

Abby in the mean time is unable to get any results with the bullet that killed Arnett nor with his laptop but manages to extract the last number he was called from from his mobile phone. It turns out that someone from NCIS called him, a young intel analyst called Nikki Jardine. Director Shepard assigns her to Gibbs' team and she tells them that they suspect a mole in the Navy and that she was working with Arnett in identifying it. Abby and Ducky discover that someone was manipulating Arnett's contact lenses' cleaning solution, causing him to become increasingly depressive and thus suicidal.

After learning that one of Arnett's contacts was killed, Nikki thinks, as Arnett was the only one knowing the identities of his contacts and the only one to have all the intel, that he was the mole. The team has different theories on the identity of the killer: Tony suspects Dana Arnett, Lt. Arnett's widow, who lived separated from him and now, after his death still married to her, will inherit a large sum of money because Lt. Arnett's family is quite rich. McGee suspects Dr. Fleming, who has anti-government leanings and prescribed the anti-depressants while Ziva suspects Arnett's CO, Capt. Welsh, who had access to all his intel. It turns out that Tony was right albeit for the wrong reasons. When Abby checked Dana Arnett's DNA against the INTERPOL database, it turns out that her real name is Najida Mahmoud and she is a Syrian Al Qaeda operative, who was smuggled into the US and given a new identity (most likely by "The Eraser" as seen in Identity Crisis).

The team now knows that Dana was the mole and heads to her hotel's park garage. When she notices them she drives away, causing Tony to fall over the railing and barely managing to grab it. McGee overcomes his fear of heights to rescue him while Ziva and Gibbs manage to stop Dana Arnett. The episode ends with Gibbs' calling Arnett's sister and having to tell her of her brother's death.

Cmdr. Satoshi Takada)
Production Code: 100
Summary: While investigating a mysterious death on a top-secret naval research ship at sea, the NCIS team comes upon an abandoned ship which contains a deadly secret that may cost them their lives.

Gibbs' team is sent to investigate a death aboard USNS Chimera, a top-secret naval research ship sailing in the middle of the ocean. However, they suspect that they are not alone. Their investigation is further complicated by the Navy's reluctance to share information regarding the research which took place on Chimera.

Upon reaching the naval vessel, the entire ship appears to be empty. The crew and lifeboats were missing and evidence showed that they left in a hurry, as seen from a working iPod. They discover a lab filled with various equipment and rat cages indicating non-humanitarian research.

Searching the ship, they discover the body of the dead marine in the freezer and Ducky's preliminary diagnosis was that he asphyxiated on his own vomit, although later it was discovered to be due to a viral hemorrhagic fever which threatens the lives of the team by possible exposure to the virus.

Back at NCIS headquarters, the director and commander argue over the classified information which results in the director winning the argument and the commander reading her in to the operation.

Being short staffed, DiNozzo has to help Ducky with the various lab analysis with the help of Abby. However, when putting a drop of diseased blood onto a microscopic slide, he foolishly sniffs it and spends the rest of the episode believing he may have contracted the virus until told that the virus was injected into Tekata, the dead naval scientist.

As DiNozzo, Ziva and McGee search the ship, they come across the ship's cook who had been ordered to stay behind of possible risk of exposure to the same disease that killed Tekata.

According to the cook, there was someone else on board who knocked him out and the person was still on board. His words were confirmed by the flashing of lights on the side of the ship as a signal to someone.

The someone else turned out to be the radio operator officer, Ferris. He was signalling a Russian black ops team who boarded the ship. With the Russian team on board, the team silently sneak out and steals the Russian ship while the Russians are distracted by a "dead" Ferris, who is merely knocked out and fake blood has been placed on him.

As the team leaves, we discover what the naval vessel had been holding, Russian nuclear weapons. The entire episode is neatly summed up by McGee:

So pirates, who weren't really pirates, were actually Russian sailors, who were on a covert mission to steal a navy research ship, that wasn't actually a navy research ship, in order to get back nuclear weapons that we thought they didn't think we had retrieved?

The US navy however, sends a missile to demolish the ship to wipe out any evidence of its existence although the team had never informed headquarters that they had left the ship.

Shepperd (Mailman), Cameron Goodman (Maddie Tyler), Anne-Marie Johnson (Marine Col. Stacey Radcliffe), Mark Totty (Army Major Max Bourdais – Ret), Nick Spano (Marine Sgt. Rudi Haas)
Production Code: 101
Summary: Gibbs finds himself emotionally challenged when he agrees to investigate a crime connected to a friend of his daughter, who was killed years ago, and the investigation leads to a shocking conclusion.

The episode, unlike almost all others, begins with a scene from later of the same episode. It depicts Tony jumping into the sea to save the passengers of a car, which turn out to be Gibbs and a young woman. He manages to drag both of them out of the car and onto the docks and starts to perform CPR but it does not seem to work and the viewer is left uncertain what happens next.

The episode then goes back to 24 hours before the first scene, with Gibbs entering the office. McGee tells him, that there is a young woman waiting to talk to him and that she did not want to tell him, what it was about. While the others start to speculate about her, Gibbs goes to meet her. It turns out that she was his dead daughter Kelly's best friend Maddie and that she needs his help about a Marine, Sgt. Haas, who began stalking her upon his return from Iraq. Gibbs decides to go home with her and meets the Marine on her doorsteps and tells him rather violently (by grabbing his arm and holding it behind his back) to stop it upon which the Marine leaves and Gibbs goes into Maddie's house with her and they talk about their memories of Kelly and she gives him a photo of both girls at the age of 8. She tells him that the girls did bury a time capsule in her garden when they were young and so Gibbs, when he comes home, decides to search for it and finds it. He unburies it and brings in to his cellar but does not open it because in that moment he receives a phone call from Maddie, screaming that the stalker is back. Gibbs hurries to her apartment but only sees someone stuffing her into Sgt. Haas' car and driving away.

Back at NCIS, the team has begun researching about Sgt. Haas and they found out that he was head of supplies in Iraq and was about to be discharged in 60 days, having refused to re-enlist. They also find out about a retired Major Bourdais, who runs a private security agency and who offered Haas a contract, citing he would be a valuable asset, but Haas did turn him down as well. The team finds an abandoned warehouse where they think Haas has lived since his return but they also find Haas, dead for at least 12 hours, thus making it impossible for him to have been the kidnapper. In his car they find a GPS-tracking device which leads them back to Bourdais. He tells the NCIS that he was working for the Pentagon and was trying to track down 8 billion Dollars in cash which went missing in Iraq. Two of his employees were rumored to be involved in stealing 4 millions dollars and that they found out that Haas shipped it from Iraq two weeks ago. Gibbs goes on to search for them himself, trying to save Maddie without his badge and ID. Meanwhile, the team figures out that Sgt. Haas was stalking Maddie only because he needed a street address to send himself a letter to. Gibbs finds out himself and intercepts it, finding in it a receiving slip which allows him to retrieve 2 bags with the money.

He heads to the docks while Ziva and McGee still track his traces. Tony, being informed by the director, heads there directly. Gibbs enters a warehouse where the two ex-soldiers are holding Maddie. After trying to make them leave by giving them one of the bags and his car keys for the other one, he tosses the keys and in the ensuing chaos manages to knock them away and to run to their car with Maddie. He accelerates backwards and drops into the ocean. Tony, who watched it from near the docks, runs and saves them as seen in the first scene. Now it is also shown that they both survived.

Back in his basement, Gibbs looks over the photograph of his daughter and Maddie as kids and her photograph as an adult, which is how Gibbs imagined Kelly to be as well and then decides to re-bury the time capsule rather than opening it.

Guest Stars: Xolile Tshavalala (Sayda Zuri), Basil Wallace (Delphin Abaka), Jonathan Adams (Thomas Zuri), Stephen Lee (Chuck Bayliss), Anthony Starke (Derrick Choyce), Demetrius Grosse (Atif Nukudna), Matt Riedy (Navy Rear Adm. Kenneth Kirkland), Dierdre Holder (Woman)
Production Code: 102
Summary: A murder investigation of a Navy Admiral takes a shocking turn when a woman, a political refugee, returns home to search for her husband.

The episode starts out with a black taxi driver and his passenger, an admiral, being shot and killed by a man on a motorcycle. Ducky later finds out that the rider of the motorcycle also took the taxi driver's tooth. The deceased man's widow comes in to claim her husband's body. Ziva questions her about herself, her husband, and her past, leading to a mention of soulmates. When showed the corpse, the wife says that the dead body was not her husband Thomas. It is explained that Thomas is a political asset, smuggled to America illegally. NCIS then interrogates the man who smuggled him.

We are told that Thomas is paranoid, moving and switching addresses constantly. Following Thomas's trail, NCIS finds him being attacked by two men (one of which, a professor, Tony and Ziva had talked to before). The two men are stopped. We find out when Thomas's wife and Thomas are reunited, that Thomas, believing that his wife was dead, had remarried and had a child.

Recurring Role: Brian Dietzen (Jimmy Palmer)
Guest Stars: Dominic Scott Kay (Carson Taylor), Chris William Martin (Brian Matthews/Taylor), Karis Campbell (Navy Lt. Elaine Taylor), J.R. Bourne (Det. Marshall Collins), Candice Coke (Det. Danielle Hamilton), Jeff Marlow (Survivalist Trainee #1), David Raibon (Survivalist Trainee #2)
Production Code: 103
Summary: The NCIS team has to babysit a 9-year-old son of a missing man, a survivalist who is somehow connected to a cold case murder. The investigation leads the team into the wilderness, where they discover a shocking truth about the man's past.

McGee visits the NCIS building with a group of young boy scouts and Abby shows them around in her lab. When demonstrating AFIS with the fingerprint of Carson, one of the boys, the system unexpectedly shows a hit: Carson was reported to be abducted in 1998.

Abby and McGee decide to wait for Gibbs to decide what to do next and he decides that Carson has to stay with NCIS for now. They then visit his step-mother, Lt. Elaine Taylor, who is shocked to hear this but does not succeed in getting Carson back because she never legally adopted him, thus they have to find his father, who is a survival trainer and is currently teaching a class in the woods. They collect his personal items and Abby matches a fingerprint from his laptop to a nine-year-old cold case involving the murder of a shop clerk during a robbery by a Brian Matthews, thus they conclude Brian Taylor, Carson's father, to have been running from it (including changing his identity). Re-opening the cold case gets the Metro Police involved, which sends Detectives Collins and Hamilton to assist (and/or keep an eye on them).

McGee manages to find a clue on Brian's laptop that his wife, despite claiming not to, knew about his past but never confronted him. Tony and Ziva are sent out to search the forest for Brian while Jenny takes Carson home with her so he has not to stay with Child Services. Tony and Ziva manage to find a group of survival trainees but Taylor is missing because, as it is revealed, Carson managed to warn him that NCIS is looking for him. The team searches the woods with dogs and search teams but they only manage to locate his satellite phone and return back to NCIS empty-handed. They manage to track a single phone call to a man called Keane but when they arrive at his house, he is dead, killed by a single knife thrust to the chest. The phone is off the hook and 911 is still on the phone asking for the reason he called. Abby manages to match the prints on the phone to Brian instead to Kean when Brian calls. He specifically asks for Gibbs and tells him to come to talk to him and McGee manages to track him so the team sets out to find him.

Abby in the mean time finds a hair containing a chemical in the evidence of the cold case which can only be found in hair spray sold after 2002. As the robbery took place in 1998, she concludes that the evidence was rigged. Only the two Metro Police detectives working the case had access to it and the scene changes to Collins stopping Brian at gun-point. He admits setting him up and plans to kill him but the NCIS team manages to arrive in time and arrest him. It is revealed that Brian had been found by Gibbs first and he gave him his bulletproof vest and a recorder thus setting Collins up. The episode ends with Tony failing to beat Carson's movie trivia high score which (among many other things) proves to everyone but Tony that Carson is very much like Tony.

Guest Stars: Paul Telfer (Marine Corporal Damon Worth), Jose Zuniga (Navy Capt. Dr. Adrian De La Casa), Amy Carlson (Karen Sutherland), Patrick Fabian (Ray Vincent), Marcius W. Harris (Chris Jenkins), John Siciliano (Marine PFC Nathan Stone)
Production Code: 104
Summary: While trying to track down a delusional and violent Marine who thinks he's still in Iraq, the NCIS team will learn that the man has been the subject of a secret experiment - and it comes with a high price to pay.

The episode begins with Navy Dr. Adrian De La Casa trying to get into his car when his window is smashed and a man forces himself into the car and then forces him to drive him. Gibbs and his team are called to the Bethesda Navy Hospital because the man in the car was a Marine called Corporal Worth who was being treated for PTSD after having returned from Iraq two weeks earlier. They learn from the male nurse that Worth was not talking much or responding to the treatments. A man called Ray Vincent, who is working for a Senator, urges Gibbs and his team to find Worth as soon as possible because the Senator wants to use the ceremony in which Worth is to be given a Silver Star as a PR-stunt.

They manage to track De La Casa's mobile phone and find him locked in his car's trunk but no sign of Worth. However, they find out about three other patients who were saved by Worth in Iraq. With only one of them in the USA, they go to a rehabilitation center where PFC Stone trains with a new leg prosthesis together with Dr. Karen Sutherland, who works for a private contractor. And they were right because Worth appears on scene shortly afterwards, still believing to be in Iraq and having to rescue Stone. Stone manages to convince Worth that Gibbs is one of the good guys and he lowers his gun but when McGee tries to handcuff him, he feels attacked again and defends himself. He manages to hurt McGee, Tony and Ziva before they can bring him down together. They transfer him to NCIS but not without consequences. McGee has a dislodged shoulder, Tony a broken nose. Ziva, who fought him as an equal, only has a swelling on her forehead. McGee and Tony think that Ziva has feelings for Worth because he is as powerful as she is.

Gibbs interrogates Worth as a Marine, i.e. by shouting and feeling for him and manages to get a blood and urine sample from him for Abby to examine. She manages, encouraged by Ducky, to find traces of anabolic and high levels of testosterone, thus concluding that he might have been subject to a super-soldier experiment, which leads them back to Dr. Sutherland. They find out that she was indeed using company technology outside the government's control but only to help children in Africa. She supplies information about the companies super-soldier plans but none of their chemicals used match those in Worth's blood.

Worth has been transferred back the Bethesda in the mean time, on order of the SECNAV. They go to visit him despite Vincent's attempts to stop them. De La Casa shows them into his room and Ziva asks him who gave him the steroids but he has a shock and attacks them and breaks down when he has Ziva locked at the door. De La Casa explains that someone changed the dosage on the machines from the amount he prescribed. He also explains that he does not fulfill the orders himself and so they suspect Jenkins, the nurse. He admits that he sometimes stole medicaments but says he never did manipulate Worth. It turns out that Worth administered the steroids to himself to be able to join the Marines. Thus he does not receive a silver star but Gibbs takes his Silver Star that he received (and never wanted) and places it at Worth's bed.

Guest Stars: Shaun Toub (Khalid Mohammed Bakr), Jonathan LaPaglia (FBI Special Agent Brent Langer), David Haydn-Jones (Marine Capt. Jim Mills), James Parks (Brian Sikes), Jennifer Hetrick (Dr. Donna Dunlap), Walid Amini (Marine Lance Corp. Abdul Bakr), Fred Toma (Sunni Man)
Production Code: 105
Summary: After a young Muslim Marine is murdered near his Mosque, Ducky refuses to perform autopsy due to his religious beliefs, so the NCIS team tries to talk to the father of the deceased, and they send McGee to plant a bug in the Mosque, only to discover that the FBI already planted their bug.

Scene opens with a mosque and an evangelical Muslim preaching the need to save non-believers (infidels — for Muslims, this what a non-believer is) and connect with them. Outside, a young man staggers along the street, pursued by a madman wearing a hoodie (thus faceless). Staggering man has a gun but cannot fire it. Collapses. Hoodie takes gun and shoots him.

Ziva is watching a classic film and Tony is amazed. She indicates she is taking film studies to learn vernacular American English. They get the call to go to the dead marine (staggering man). Turns out that, when they show his photo at the local mosque, the iman is the dead man's dad.

When Ducky is about to do the autopsy, he reports that there are no surface indications of any struggle. Gibbs cannot fathom why a marine who has fought in war would not protect himself. Ducky is about to cut open the body when Ziva brings the Marine's dad to the door and he pleads for the autopsy not to be done. Ducky decides not to do it. Gibbs is a bit surprised, you might say.

They have to gather evidence by other means. Turns out the FBI has been bugging the mosque, but they are not cooperating...until the FBI-man realises that Gibbs is on the case. The FBI man used to work with Gibbs. They have a relationship where, every time the FBI guy used a 3-dollar word, he had to pay Gibbs 3 dollars. Jenny does not get this male bonding; the pointlessness of it bamboozles her (and most of the female audience, we suspect). It shows that Gibbs and his protege can pick up where they left off. They like each other whilst insulting each other cheerfully.

Ziva, when approached by the FBI-man who is looking for Gibbs, stands and preens herself in front of him. He offers his card, and Tony snatches it, trying to assert his authority. Tony says "what an ass" (meaning donkey) and Ziva, gazing at the guy's arse, agrees. Tony is discombobulated.

Ducky works out that non-invasive imaging would allow a virtual autopsy but, in the time frame he needs it done, they have to do it on the sly, so he takes the body to a hospital and slips in the backway. The magnetic resonance imaging uses magnets, which pulls a bit of metal from the body and thus Abby has the chance to work on some evidence. The metal is the broken off hypodermic needle, that still has toxin in it. The toxin is from the (Australian) blue-ringed octopus (it is an octopus that is small, has pretty blue rings and has the most neurotoxic venom known, so don't put one in your fishtank, ok?) Because the needle broke when inserted in our victim marine, the toxin was not delivered efficiently and thus the man was able to stagger down the road, but hard to tell whether the bullet or toxin actually did him in. The needle is old and thus of a metal that is magnetic, unlike modern needles. Abby, when telling this to Gibbs, is gobsmacked at something so old...from the 1970s. Gibbs just looks at her. She realises that he remembers the 70s. She tries to backtrack from her 'old' statement and gets tangled in her words. Gibbs just looks at her. As he leaves, he tells her to "lose the bubble wrap", which is the bubbled packaging material that she laid on the floor at her door, so she would know when Gibbs enters as he usually enters silently. She looks disappointed that he doesn't like her cunning plan.

FBI man delivers unto Gibbs the recordings of all the bugging they did in the mosque.

Gibbs wondered if there was a pattern involved in the killing of this Muslim marine. McGee did a search and found out that 2 other Muslim marines died within the last few weeks of "natural causes". All three marines who died had the same marine personnel officer. The marine denies having any part in the deaths until Gibbs tells him he's going to be sent to Gitmo in Cuba.

Then the marine cuts a deal to get civilian trial and NOT be prosecuted as a terrorist and in return gives the name of the baddy. When team gets to the baddy, he is already dead and holding the dead marine's prayer beads. Ziva recognises the prayer beads (and is about to say the iman took revenge on his son's death) but Gibbs asks her whether she truly knows they are the same beads...she pauses, looks deep into Gibbs eyes, reads the silent message that "we don't want to recognise this clue" and agrees that she does not recognise them after all...and the ep ends.

Production Code: 106
Summary: The NCIS team goes on a stakeout in a warehouse to catch a suspected thief of a high-tech naval radar, but they accidentally end up witnessing a murder. Meanwhile, Ducky hides a secret from the rest of the team.

McGee and DiNozzo are on a stakeout, watching a warehouse to find a stolen navy radar system. McGee, walking back after picking up breakfast for the two of them, sees what he assumes to be a drug deal going on. He tells Tony over his headset that as a federal agent he thinks it's his duty to stop the deal from happening. Tony reminds McGee that doing so would blow their stakeout cover and that he would slap McGee silly if he did that. Via his headset, McGee says to Tony, "Oh you're gonna slap me?" as a hooker walks out, overhears him and says "If that's what you want honey." Watching in binoculars, Tony says, "Go for it McFreaky, Goldilocks is just your type." McGee replies with "Bite me" and Goldilocks tells him that will be extra. McGee steps into the road and just misses getting hit by a car. Tony watches and laughs.

We see the computer screen being used to watch the radar system begin to fritz. Tony smacks the computer and the screen goes back to normal. When McGee shows up in the room and brings Tony breakfast, Tony proudly tells him that the computer began to fritz and he fixed it. Tony sees the breakfast and complains he wanted scrambled eggs, not sunny-side up so McGee walks over, grabs the container and shakes it. When he puts it down he says they are scrambled and goes back to the window to watch the warehouse. Tony throws McGee's burrito at his head and frustrated, McGee goes for Tony.

Ziva and Gibbs are doing surveillance and Ziva wants to know if prostitutes get bored doing the same thing every day. Gibbs tells her to watch the warehouse. Gibbs contacts Abby inquiring about whether or not she was able to get information about who rented the storage locker. As Abby is filling him in, Ziva notices a van pulling into the warehouse but it turns out to be nothing. Tony shows up and uses the binoculars. Gibbs comes out of the bathroom and asks where McGee is. Tony turns around and Gibbs notices he has two black rings under his eyes. He looks at Ziva, who looks away innocently (she pranked him by putting paint or marker on the binoculars so it would rub off on his face). Tony whines about working with McGee but Gibbs just gives him a look to silence him.

McGee arrives and fills Gibbs in on his inability to track down the anonymous source of the tip. They realize that whoever tipped them off about the warehouse is going to great lengths to remain anonymous. McGee mentions to Gibbs that the same BMW has been around dealing with the same buyer. Gibbs tells him to record it and turn it over to the local police while he and Ziva leave. Tony hands the binoculars over to McGee while he mans the computer and the webcam brings his profile up on screen. He notices the "raccoon" look on his face and blames McGee. McGee tells him it was Ziva then notices an argument going on outside with the drug dealer and buyer. The dealer and buyer walk down an alley, out of sight as McGee turns the video camera and captures the face of the dealer as well as the BMW's license plate.

Episode 5.12 Stakeout Gibbs and Ziva are leaving the building when someone comes running out of the alley calling for help. Gibbs and Ziva find the BMW driver dead in the alley. The local police are called and the dead man is identified as Scott Matthew Roe. Gibbs tells Detective Sparr that NCIS has video of Rowe going into the alley with a Caucasian male. She starts to ask why NCIS is there and he tells her he'll send her the video. Tony walks up and crosses the police line. Detective Sparr tries to stop him and realizes he is with Gibbs. Tony turns on the charm as he introduces himself but when she nods her head for him to move, he goes back to the other side of the police tape. He remarks about the crime scene and gets Sparr's take on it. She asks what he thinks and he says that a man driving a $90,000 car in a bad neighborhood wouldn't turn off the car, let alone leave it. As Gibbs walks away, Tony says he worked Baltimore PD Narcotics for 2 years and Sparr says she had 3 years before transferring to Homicide. He remarks that the pipe used for a murder weapon is an odd choice for a drug dealer. He walks away but not before checking out Sparr's butt as she walks away.

Abby is in Ducky's lab, spinning around on a chair. When Ducky asks what she's doing, she says she is trying to change her spacial orientation to get a new perspective. He asks how it's working but of course when she gets up, she's dizzy. He tells her when she regains her equilibrium, he has a John Doe and wants her to run a "CBC with Platelets, a complete chem screen and CK." As she's leaving, Abby notices the John Doe doesn't have a case number. Ducky says he's working on it and will give it to her later so she leaves.

Jonathan Chow, Captain Pullman and Gibbs are meeting. Chow is unhappy that NCIS hasn't recovered the radar yet as he was supposed to be installing it into a "Zemel Class Destroyer" (stealth destroyer). He claims his company had spent 10 years working on it and demanded it to be released to him immediately. Gibbs wanted the radar system to be left in the storage locker so they could figure out who had stolen it. Captain Pullman tells Gibbs the destroyer is due to have sea trials the following month. Gibbs is aware if it gets delayed, he'll be in trouble with SecNav.

Ducky is doing research in his lab when Tony comes in and startles him. After some small chit-chat about his stakeout assignments, Tony asks Ducky how well he knows the local police department's ME. Ducky admits he sees the guy on Tuesday nights to play bridge. Tony asks Ducky to get him the autopsy report on Rowe. When Ducky asks why he's not going through normal channels, Tony admits he and Starr didn't see "eye to eye." Ducky asks if Gibbs knows Tony wants the report and Tony shakes his heads no.

Gibbs and Ziva are on surveillance duty at the warehouse again. Ziva is crawling around on the floor looking for any booby-traps Tony might have set. McGee walks in and Gibbs sends him to the warehouse to replace the batteries in the camera. McGee goes over the storage locker and when he walks in, he hesitates. He asks Gibbs what he's seeing and Gibbs replies that they see the radar system. When McGee asks if they see him, Gibbs says no. The camera pans into the storage locker, which is empty, as McGee tells Gibbs they have a problem.

The NCIS team is processing the storage locker when McGee says the camera is fine and working properly. Gibbs slams a ladder and tells McGee to figure it out. Ziva tells Tony they are a team and puts out her hands and says "no more practical jokes". After a brief hesitation, Tony shakes her hand and they agree. Ziva mentions they need warrants to search the other storage lockers so Tony leaves to put some pressure on the Warehouse manager to allow them in.

Gibbs waits at MTAC to communicate with Captain Pullman. Pullman finally arrives on screen and says that SecNav isn't happy and they want to speak with Director Shepard but she's out of the country. Gibbs says this is true when questioned. Pullman explains SecNav is concerned that the radar system is in the wrong hands and Chow is unhappy as it'll take his company 9 months to remanufacture the radar system. Gibbs asks if the sea trials have been postponed and Pullman says they haven't because SecNav isn't ready to go public yet, especially if the radar system has been compromised.

Ducky brings Tony the autopsy report on Rowe and admits he had to agree to be the ME's bridge partner at an upcoming weekend tournament. In a nutshell Ducky says the man died of blunt force trauma; he'd had a quadruple bypass before the age of 40 and ate all the wrong foods. There was no trace of drugs in Roe's system. Tony thanks Ducky and says he owes him. Ducky said, "Don't worry dear boy, one day I shall collect." Tony heads out and asks Ziva to cover for him.

Episode 5.12 Stakeout Gibbs comes down from MTAC so Ducky "exits stage left." Gibbs asks where Tony is and Ziva hems and haws and finally says he had an errand to run. Gibbs smirks and tells Ziva to never cover for him. McGee says he was finally able to trace the anonymous tip they got about the radar system to a cell phone. He admits he got the serial number and was waiting for the service provider to get back to him with who it belonged to.

Tony tracks down Sparr at the murder scene. After they exchange some barbs about her butt (see quotes below), he tells her about the autopsy report. She is upset with him at first, but he asks her to trust him as he has a gut feeling about the murder. Tony says he feels responsible as he could've stopped Rowe from getting murdered, but thought it was just a drug deal. Sparr agrees as long as Tony doesn't do anything without telling her first. She tells him there were no prints on the murder weapon but NCIS' video gave them a good print of the dealer's face. They were able to ID the dealer as Dennis Moran; multiple drug arrests, twice convicted. Rowe was a stockbroker, lost his license and had several shady deals with a history of financial ups and downs. Tony's phone rings so he answers it and walks away from Sparr to talk. As he's chatting on the phone, she checks out his butt.

Gibbs walks into the observation room off interrogation and McGee says the anonymous tip came from Jordyn Wright's cell phone. Gibbs assumes McGee is talking about the mother but McGee says Jordyn is the young girl. Jordyn denies sending a message to NCIS and asks them to return her phone. Gibbs asks her if she was at Dupont Circle the previous Thursday at 7:30pm. The mother, Joanne insists Jordyn was home but Jordyn admits she was at a local Java joint and admits she let some guy use her phone for $10 as he couldn't get a signal. Gibbs asks if she would recognize him if she saw him again and she says "I guess."

Tony and Ziva are staring at Rowe's driver's license on the big screen in the office. Ziva asks Tony about whether or not the local P.D. knows what he's up to and Tony says he and Sparr have an arrangement. Ziva says Sparr must be hot and Tony replies she is, but not at the moment as he's working. Gibbs, McGee, Jordyn and Joanne walk through the office area while McGee tells Jordyn she's going to love Abby (who will be doing a computer generated drawing of the man Jordyn saw). Jordyn asks Gibbs if it's some kind of tests, then points to the big screen (Rowe's picture) and says he is the man who gave her $10 to use her cell phone.

Ziva is checking under her desk when McGee crawls under with her. She admits Tony hasn't gotten her back yet for the binoculars. She gets to her feet and tells him Sparr is on her way up with Tony. Gibbs walks in, sees McGee on his knees and says, "say one for me while your down there McGee." Gibbs and Tony bring Sparr up to speed as far as the case goes, but they leave as much as possible "classified" about the stolen radar system. Ziva introduces herself to Sparr and puts her hand out, but Sparr ignores her. They all watch as Nikki Jardine walks down the stairs wearing a hospital mask because four people in her department have come down with the flu. Sparr asks Ziva what her name was again but Ziva ignores her.

Gibbs and Jardin meet with Captain Pullman and Jonathan Chow again. Gibbs lets them know that Rowe was the individual behind the anonymous email but doesn't let them know anything further than Rowe is dead. Chow stresses out about the time it will take to remanufacture the radar system and the possibility of the company losing the contract. Pullman remains calm and asks Jardin if she was able to pull up Intel. Gibbs tells him he'll let him know while Chow leaves the room.

Abby joins McGee in the basement. He shows her the model of the warehouse and says he made it to show Gibbs so his eyes won't glaze over while explaining technology. Abby makes a comment about Gibbs then panics when she thinks he's there. They turn around but don't see anyone. McGee does a run through of how the theft of the radar system occurred when the thieves tapped into their camera signal using a scanner. The thieves provided a "loop" of the feed so the team remained unaware of the radar system leaving the locker. Abby said it was so simple even Gibbs would understand it. Gibbs responds from the open elevator that he did, but McGee is still not off the hook until the radar system is found.

Ducky is reviewing some x-rays when Palmer returns. He immediately removes them and puts them in an envelope. Palmer inquires what he was working on and Ducky says it was an old case. Palmer offers to file the x-rays but Ducky says he'll take care of it. As Palmer observes, Ducky puts the x-rays in his middle desk drawer and locks it.

Jardine approaches Gibbs at his desk and tells him the silence on the "channels" suggest that the missing radar was more than likely a "domestic" job. Gibbs receives a call and leave the room. Jardine approaches Ziva and tells her that she saw Tony putting something under her car earlier in the day. Ziva goes flying out to check as Jardine admits to McGee that Tony put her up to it.

Abby shows Gibbs and Sparr that a partial print she lifted off the storage rental agreement belonged to Rowe. Sparr gets a call and announces the Dennis Moran was spotted so they all head out to find him. When they arrive "Goldilocks" asks if there is a reward and Tony says "yeah him" and points to McGee. They are able to corner Dennis as he is coming down the fire escape but he pulls a gun. He says he didn't kill Rowe but ran because he didn't want to go back to prison. As Tony tries to talk him down, Dennis lifts his gun and Gibbs grabs him from behind, causing Dennis to drop the gun.

Gibbs interrogates Dennis while Sparr and Tony watch from observation. Dennis admits some man paid him a couple bills to watch the warehouse and call him when the feds arrived. He is unable or unwilling to tell Gibbs what the man looked like. Gibbs walks into the observation room and Sparr wants to take Dennis to Metro P.D. to charge him but Gibbs won't allow her to.

Ziva walks in and grabs a bag with lunch from McGee's desk (he's eating his burger). She opens her burger but before she bites it, she asks who she owes and McGee says "Tony." Ziva tossed the burger in the trash and Jardine asks if Tony would really do something to her food. Gibbs walks in and says "Oh yeah." McGee tells Gibbs about Rowe's stock market reports and bank statements which showed that Rowe had sold 50,000 shares of Jonathan Chow's company. Pullman walks in so Gibbs heads up to MTAC with him for a conference. McGee remarks that anyone could have pulled off the theft, including Pullman.

In autopsy, Palmer and Ducky begin going over requisitions. Abby comes in with the blood test results from the John Doe. She tells Ducky that the white blood cells were normal but there was a high enzyme level of creatine kinase. Ducky looks upset, thanks Abby, grabs his coat and hat and leaves. Abby and Palmer talk after Ducky leaves and Palmer says they don't have any John Doe's in autopsy.

Ziva asks Tony if he slept through his alarm as he walks in late with Sparr. He and Sparr admit they did background check on Rowe and discovered information about the sale of Chow's company stock from the stockbroker. McGee did a check on Rowe's credit cards and discovered a bill from a bar, 5 weeks prior on his statement. He cross referenced them against Chow's and found a similar bill from the same bar, same date/time and both were waited on by the same server. Gibbs has them bring Moran in.

Chow shows up at a bar and goes up to Moran. Chow asks if Moran is the guy who called him. Moran says that he saw Chow hit Rowe with a pipe and he'd better sit done because Chow probably doesn't want him talking to loudly. Chow first claims he doesn't know what Moran is talking about but then asks what he wants. Moran says he wants $50,000 and Chow wants to know how he can be sure Moran won't double cross him like Rowe did. Chow says it'll take him time to come up with the money and Moran gives him until the next day. Chow goes to leave but gets surrounded by the NCIS team and Sparr. Gibbs says "you got a lot of 'splainin to do" while McGee holds up a video camera and says Chow couldn't block that transmission. Starr takes Chow into custody and reads him his rights. Moran asks Gibbs if it'll help him with the judge and Gibbs tells Moran he did great.

In MTAC, Gibbs and the team brief Pullman on what went down. McGee explains the radar system didn't work as there was a glitch which would have taken months to fix. They found the system in the back of truck in long-term parking at Reagan International Airport. As they head back down to their desks, McGee says that Rowe would have made more money off the sale of the stock than what Chow was paying him. Ziva says "if I never go on a stakeout again, it'll be too soon." She sits down at her chair and falls over. Tony and McGee both pretend they are busy as Ziva peeks over her desk to see who pranked her.

Palmer and Ducky are in autopsy when Gibbs comes down. Gibbs sends Palmer on the pretense that Abby is looking for him. Palmer says he just left her but after Gibbs gives him a look, Palmer leaves. Ducky asks what is wrong and Gibbs says he didn't think they kept secrets from each other. Ducky realizes Abby went to Gibbs with the blood tests results. Gibbs says Abby cares and she's worried. Ducky says he is in excellent health and if Abby had looked further, she would have seen it wasn't Ducky's blood type. Gibbs asks who as Ducky goes to leave. Ducky replies that Gibbs is putting him into a very difficult position. Gibbs said "I can't think of anybody you'd stick your neck out like that for except Director Shepard." When Ducky remains silent, Gibbs asks if it's Jenny.

Summary: When a dog owner is found murdered, the NCIS team must determine if his dog committed the murder or not, and Abby decides to fight for the dog's life by trusting her instinct about the dog's innocence. Meanwhile, Gibbs learns about Jenny's secret.

The team pulls up in 2 cars, with a warrant to search a Petty Officer's house and bring him in for interrogation on drug trafficking charges. Ziva, Tony and Gibbs enter through the front door and Gibbs sends McGee through the back door. Tony kicks the front door in and enters. and as McGee is about to head into the back sliding doors, a german shepard leaps out and attacks him.

Gibbs, Ziva and Tony find the house clear, but the dead body of Petty Officer Hanson on the living room floor. Tony says, "we gotta stop serving warrants after lunch. $10 says McGee spills it on this one." Ziva asks where McGee is and a shot goes off. All three run out to the back yard and find McGee getting off the ground, injured and bleeding and the german shepard whining and bleeding on the ground from a gunshot.

Dog Tags Palmer is checking out the dog and determine it was a "through-and-through" shot. Tony jokes it's good McGee wasn't a better shot. Ducky is wrapping McGee's hand and asks when he had his last tetanus shot and McGee replied the last time he and Dicky Newsom had fought over the galactic wand of Obie Wan Kanobie. Tony said "So last year sometime." Ducky goes to give the dog a shot to alleviate pain and Palmer gives him advice on where the shot should best be given. Palmer replies he'd spent two years working as a veterinary assistant during college and offered to patch the dog up. Ducky left him to it as he went inside to process Hanson's body. Gibbs called Ziva and Tony back inside to help process the crime scene and sent McGee back to the lab with the dog "Butch." (Later renamed Jethro by Abby.)

The deceased is revealed to be Petty Officer Kyle Hanson, dog handler working with the Drug Enforcement Unit. Ducky finds bite marks, torn flesh and says Hanson died from being mauled by a dog. Tony makes a sarcastic remark about Ducky solving the case and Ziva asks if he woke up in the wrong bed. Tony said, "if your question is did I wake up on the wrong side of the bed the answer is no. But my mood did sour some when I walked in and found out our chief suspect was dead." Ducky determined Hanson had been dead for 36 hours. They remarked how had they gotten to him sooner, they would have gotten information on the drug trafficking. Tony said "Thanks to Semper Fido, he's (Hanson) never going to roll over." Gibbs glares at him and Tony apologizes and Gibbs puts his index finger up in front of Tony and says "Play dead."

Ziva calls Gibbs into the bedroom. Tony walks in ahead of him, sees Ziva bent over looking under the bed and says "Room with a view" as he takes a picture of Ziva's backside. Gibbs comes in behind him, says "hey" and head slaps Tony. Ziva pulls a packet of ripped cocaine underneath the bed and Tony finds a bundle of money in one of the drawers.

Dog Tags McGee pulls into the garage and Abby ask what happened. McGee tells her a vicious dog attacked him and he was shot. Abby runs to the back of the car and finds "Butch" with his legs bound and a muzzle on. She removes the muzzle and clips the binding off his legs. McGee tells her the dog is vicious and that Ducky and Jimmy sedated him. Abby asks who shot the cute little dog and then turns on McGee for shooting an innocent animal. Abby said "dogs don't kill people, people kill people." Abby takes McGee's jacket and covers the dog and McGee asks if she's aware she's compromising the evidence with his $500 jacket. Abby says, "If you think I can't distinguish the fibers on your stupid jacket with the evidence on the dog, you don't know me McGee. And right now, I don't want to know you." She pets the dog and says "good dog" then points to McGee and says "bad McGee."

Back at the office, Jenny came down and approaches Gibbs and says she had just gotten a call from Pax River Base Commander talking like the case was closed. Gibbs said what they found was a dead end, the case was still open. Jenny says the commander claimed the had gotten their man but Gibbs says they got one link and still had five suspects. Jenny said from the commander's point of view, they got their man so the problem is solved. Gibbs asks if that is her point of view. She says she can sympathize with his patience and Gibbs said she could sympathize, he would continue to investigate. Jenny said she couldn't afford to waste resources if the trail had gone cold. Gibbs said "Director the only thing that has gone cold is the body in autopsy." Jenny said the clock would be ticking and she would inform the base commander that Gibbs would be prudent in his disruption of the commander's operations.. She walked away as Gibbs watched her. Jenny turned around and quietly asked if there was something else but Gibbs remained silent, then turned and walked away.

Abby's Rockin Car McGee walked into the office and Tony asked if they checked him for rabies. McGee said they hadn't and Tony kept looking at him so he asked "what". Tony called him Cujo and explained the movie plot line to him (dog got rabies, started biting people in the town - their brains began swelling up and they were foaming at the mouth). McGee took out a CD and checked his mouth in the image. Ziva said he didn't have rabies and told Tony to stop getting him all worked up for nothing. Tony said "she's right McGruff, but you might want to worry about our dead Petty Officer's blood as it was on the dog and he might have had transmittable diseases like herpes or hepatitis or malaria." Gibbs came in and started asking for information and updates. Ziva explains that a Pax River C130 goes to Cuba every week like clock work. McGee pulled up the flight records and crew on the flight and they came up with 5 suspects. Tony says he has no leads, Ziva's flirted with every Petty Officer on the base and McGee's watched 100 hours of Petty Officer Junction" and McGee says "150 actually." Gibbs tells them to go back to the base and talk to the other dog handlers and Tony said "to see if one of them barks, I know." Ziva and Tony pack up to head out and Gibbs quietly asks McGee if he's okay, to which McGee replies he is.

In her lab, Abby is swabbing the dogs mouth and says "that's a good Jethro" and Gibbs walks in and said "I'm a good Jethro." Abby smiled and said "don't be mad be flattered. He's so strong handsome and quiet so that's why I named him Jethro." (The dogs name was originally Butch but Abby said she renamed him because "Butch" was just too butch.) She tells Gibbs she got all the evidence but has no results yet. Gibbs keeps saying "Abbs" and she tells him she knows she shouldn't get attached to the dog because of what they think he's done and Gibbs says he's glad he doesn't have to tell her. Abby is hugging the dog and Gibbs tells her the dog belongs in a kennel but Abby claims he's innocent but at Gibbs' stare, Abby puts the dog in the kennel. Abby tells him she swabbed the dog's mouth and the victim's wound and she's going to prove the dog's innocence. Gibbs leaves and Abby bends down to let the dog out as Gibbs yells from the hallway "the dog stays in the kennel Abbs." So she locks the kennel door again.

Ziva is questioning a Petty Officer, showing him pictures and the PO said he doesn't know everyone or everything. Ziva remarks that his shoulders work much better than his mouth because each time she asks him a question, he just shrugs. He says he works with dogs, not people. She asked him about Hanson and the PO shrugged again. She got upset and said "You don't like us being here do you. Is it because we're cops interviewing cops or is it because you guys could not sniff out who was smuggling drugs and we have to do your job for you. The PO puts his head down and apologizes, saying he didn't know Hanson all that well. The PO finally says that Hanson was a showboat, liked to flaunt the cash and told Ziva to draw her own conclusions.

Tony questioned PO Erica Perelli and she said she didn't like to speak ill of the dead but Hanson couldn't keep complete control of his dog. Tony asked what would happen if the dog got a taste of cocaine and she said it would be bad. Tony said "it must be a pretty ruff job. I don't wanna dog ya with more questions but if I need to sniff around some more is there a number I can call." She squashed him said the folks inside keep track of her pretty well, he could check with them and walked away.

In autopsy, Ducky and Palmer are checking out the wounds on Hanson's body. McGee walks in and Ducky asks if he's gotten his shots. McGee said he felt like a dart board but guessed it was better than being a chew toy. Ducky said if McGee was looking for his findings, he'd have them in a minute. McGee said he just wanted to know what the symptoms of rabies were and Ducky said Palmer would explain why McGee didn't have rabies. Gibbs walked in and asked if Ducky had the results; Ducky said he had enough. He went to hand the results to Gibbs but Gibbs said "oh no, we're going to do this one together." He put his arm around Ducky and led him out the door, up to Abby's lab.

Abby was dancing with Jethro, playing Nellie McKay's "The Dog Song." Abby greeted them and asked Ducky if he'd met Jethro. Ducky said "quite a number of years ago" and Abby laughed and said not him, the dog. Gibbs told Abby that Ducky had his findings. Ducky said that Petty Officer Hanson had been mauled and had a neck wound that severed his carotid artery that made him bleed to death. Gibbs asked if Abby understood what Ducky was saying and Abby said yes, that Hanson was killed by a dog but Jethro was innocent. Abby said she found pieces of Hanson's flesh in Jethro's teeth. Gibbs said that sounds innocent. Abby and Ducky compare notes and Abby believes that Jethro was trying to drag and save Hanson, not kill him. Ducky argues that Hanson was trying to protect himself from a dog that was trying to kill him. Abby said she still had a lot of evidence to process and hadn't gotten the DNA results on the saliva yet. As she said it, the results came on her screen as a positive match to those of "Butch" aka Jethro. When Ducky said "Butch", Gibbs handed him the dog's collar with the name Butch engraved in it.

Up in the pit, Ziva, McGee and Tony are reviewing surveillance footage from the airplane and crew they know are behind the drug trafficking. They see a hand-off and realize it's a bag of funyons. Gibbs walks up and asks what they got and Tony said "a sudden urge to hit the vending machines." McGee says "besides eye strain not much boss." Tony announces that the group "Pax River Panama" will be shipping out in 36 hours. They ask Gibbs if they should bring the crew in but Gibbs said they would go to them instead, catch them off-guard. Gibbs calls for Ziva and Tony to go with him as his cell rings (it's Abby telling him she's got something) and he tells them to meet him in the car. McGee says "Boss" but Gibbs walks away without responding.

Gibbs shows up in the lab and Abby has him look into a microscope. He says "it's a bug" and she said it wasn't just any bug but a flea. Ducky found a flea on Hanson's body but when Abby checked Jethro, she didn't find any. Gibbs said the flea could have jumped off the dog onto Hanson and Abby said it would never hold up in court. Abby holds up Ducky's report and Gibbs asks if she read the rest of it. Abby said that sometimes Ducky is wrong, not often, maybe one time." Gibbs puts his coffee down, puts his hands on Abby's arms and says "Abbs, we have to give the dog back." Abby says he knows what it means and he tells her she can't keep the dog. Abby looks like she's about to cry and argue back but looks away and agrees. Gibbs pats her arm, grabs his coffee and starts to head out. Abby says she'll give Jethro back after she's done collecting evidence off him. Gibbs turns back and asks her how much more evidence she needs; they got the dog's saliva on Hanson, blood in the dog's teeth and the dog attacked McGee. Abby opens the kennel and tells Gibbs to look and asks him if Jethro looks like a killer. Gibbs said Abby is just making this harder on herself. As Gibbs gets off the elevator, he stops when he sees Ducky approach Jenny with a file. Jenny notices Gibbs watching and puts her arm on Ducky and steers him up the stairs to privacy.

While McGee is reviewing more surveillance footage, Petty Officer Erica Perelli shows up to collect Jethro. She notices McGee's wounds and asks if he was the one who shot the dog and remarks that the bites look like they were pretty bad. McGee stutters as he says that he's been bitten worse but he loves dogs and owns one. She asks him if he does and he says no, not yet but soon very soon if the right girl comes along. Then covers his mistake and says "girl dog, I want a girl dog. I like boys but.." Gibbs walks in and says "don't ask don't tell McGee." McGee introduces Perelli to Gibbs and tells him why she's there. Gibbs remains silent as Perelli says the dog has to be put down due to navy policy in fatal dog maulings. McGee offers to bring her down and Gibbs just stares at him and then leaves. McGee and Perelli agree to go by first names and McGee says that Abby has grown quite attached to the dog. Perelli worries about how attached when they walk into the lab to discover both Abby and Jethro missing.

Gibbs pulls up to the hanger, gets out of the car and takes out his badge, announcing NCIS. Tony says "gather round boys we're gonna have a chat." The commander says they are going on a training mission and Gibbs says they aren't. Each of them take one of the crew members and interrogates them. One of the Petty Officer's tells Tony it's bullcrap and Tony said if by bullcrap you mean this is your worst freaking nightmare then your right, this is bullcrap. All three of them interrogate the crew and come up with very little information. When they are leaving, Tony asks if Gibbs think they are all involved and Gibbs replies no. Ziva asks if he thinks they rattled them and Gibbs replies "we'll see."

Abby pulls up to the base in a rather classic (ZZ Top type) car, bright red with her music jamming and Jethro in the passenger seat. When the base guard asks if he can help her, she pulls out her NCIS badge and says she's looking for fleas. The guard says yes ma'am and lets her through. Her license plate reads "4NS CHIK." Abby pulls up in front of Hanson's house and let's Jethro out. Jethro has other ideas and bolts across the street towards a wooded area. Abby chases after him calling "Jethro" and two seamen running by stop and one of them says "I'm Jethro." Abby catches up with Jethro who is digging in the dirt. She puts the leash on him as her cell phone rings. She greets McGee who asks her where she took the dog. Abby admits she went to Hanson's house but tells McGee that he'd better get everyone down there as she thinks they have another body. She is starrng at the ground Jethro just dug up and sees skeletal remains.

The team has shown up and Ducky and Palmer are unburying the bones. Palmer is standing over Ducky, brushing dirt off some remains and the dirt lands on Ducky. Ducky says "be careful Mr. Palmer, we're trying to unbury bones, not buy mine." Jethro barks and McGee says the dog should have a muzzle on it. Abby tells McGee he should have one on as it's not like Jethro shot him. Gibbs gives Abby a look and she acknowledges she shouldn't have taken him out without permission but points out that Jethro might have found another important clue. McGee remarks that it could also be another of his victims and Gibbs says "or maybe it's his lunch." Ducky replied "Only if he's a cannibal Jethro, the remains are canine."

Back in the pit, Tony comes out with what he believes is a clue on one of the crewman, Warfield. It appears Warfield had a cousin who had been busted for drugs a few months prior and was currently MIA. Gibbs tells him to keep digging and Ziva hands him more information on Warfield. Gibbs reads it then hands the file back to Ziva and says "Fetch." As Ziva and Tony are walking out, Petty Office Perelli walks by. Tony says hi to her and she calls out "Hi Timothy" and he responds "Hi Erica". Tony makes a remark and Ziva replied "maybe she prefers McGee's scent."

Perelli and McGee go down to Abby's lab so Perelli can take Jethro back. When they arrive, Abby has locked herself and Jethro in her office and won't come out. She turns up her music to ignore McGee's knocking and voice. She tells him she won't open the door until Jethro is proven innocent. McGee tells her to not make a scene and she says she is in "full scene mode." McGee says she can't stay in there forever and she tells him she is stocked with Caf-Pow (she has a big thermos full of it!) and kibble (big bag) so she's good for a few days. She goes back to sit down and Jethro starts barking so McGee hides behind Perelli.

In Interrogation, Ziva questions Warfield. When she brings up his cousin, he asks if it's all about his loser cousin who he is not even close to. Ziva says "close enough to give him some of the blow you smuggled in" and Warfield denies smuggling anything. Ziva says they are aware that his plane brought the drugs in every 3 weeks over the last 3 months like clockwork. Warfield said that 2 months prior he didn't fly the plane back, he remained behind in sick bay in Panama. Ziva pulls his file which shows he was admitted for a respiratory infection but signed himself out for a 3 hour period for 2 consecutive days. Warfield finally admitted that he was involved with a woman who had a child who needed the medication. So he faked his illness to get medication for the child. Ziva listed the charges that could be brought against him and said she smelled a dishonorable discharge in his future. She told him she'd forget everything he told her if he'd confess what he knew about the drug smuggling and Warfield said he knew nothing. When Ziva joined Gibbs in observation, they agree that Warfield wasn't involved.

Gibbs leaves interrogation and gets on the elevator. Jenny ends up getting on as well and says "your investigation." Gibbs replies it's moving along and turns and stares at her. Jenny hits the emergency button and stops the elevator; she turns and says "you've been looking at me all week like you want to ask me something." He asks her if she has any health issues, she says she's fine. He asks if she's sick and she restarts the elevator and says her health is fine but his could take a turn for the worse if he doesn't wrap up his investigation.

Jenny shows up at Abby's lab and asks if there is a problem. Abby says there is no problem so Jenny tells her to open the door, which she does. Jenny comments that the dog doesn't look so good and Abby pouts that it's because he knows he's on death row. Jenny bends down and pets him. Abby argued that she had to fight for what she believed in and she wouldn't give up the dog until he was proven innocent. Jenny said "sometimes things aren't so simple Abby. Sometimes you can't control the outcome. Sometimes you have to look at the reality in front of you and accept it." Abby said "I can't, I won't." She bent down to pet the dog and realized he truly didn't look well.

McGee entered the pit and sat down to review the surveillance tapes on the big screen. When he hit play, he jumped out of his seat as dogs began barking. Tony replaced the surveillance CD with the movie "When Dogs Attack." Gibbs walked in and Tony noticed he'd gotten an email from Abby. The cocaine they found in Hanson's house had traces of hydraulic fluid on the wrapping. They realized they needed to question Petty Officer Bidwell further. As they grabbed their badges and weapons to leave, McGee called "boss" and Gibbs told him to "come on." (which put a big smile on McGee's face again!)

The team showed up at the hanger and began searching the plane Bidwell was working on. Ziva walked into the cargo area and found a pool of blood. She climbed over 2 large pallets only to discover Bidwell had been murdered. The team began to process the crime scene, and when Gibbs exited the plane, Tony handed the finger print to McGee and told him to dust for fingerprints "only on the surfaces he could find a print" and then said "the whole plane."

Abby rushed an ill Jethro into autopsy and asked for Ducky's help. Jethro had gotten ill and coughed up blood. Palmer brought over the x-ray machine and they took an x-ray of Jethro's stomach, which revealed there was a triangular shaped object in his stomach that didn't belong there. Palmer sedated Jethro and he and Ducky did the surgery and removed the object. Gibbs called in to have Ducky come to the base to get Bidwell's body and Ducky told him they'd found the tip of a knife in Jethro's stomach. Hanson had a mark on his neck that didn't fit with the dog's mauling and the blade Ducky found in Jethro's stomach was a perfect match. Upon further investigation, the knife blade fit perfectly into the wound they found on the remains of the dog they'd uncovered the day before. Ducky said the two crimes were related.

Gibbs went back to the plane and called for McGee. Tony said it was a big plane and processing it for finger prints would take all night. Gibbs said "I hope you brought a warm coat DiNozzo." McGee took pleasure in returning the finger printing case to Tony and told him the same thing Tony had said to him about dusting only on the flat surfaces where he could find a print.

Back in the pit, Abby went to McGee to get him to donate money for flowers for Jethro. McGee inquired why he would want to donate for flowers for a dog that mauled him. Abby said that "dog is a man's best friend or maybe because I'm a forensic scientist and I could boil you up from the inside out and not leave a trace." McGee stuffed money into Abby's jar as Gibbs walked in. When they reviewed the surveillance tape, the killer had parked their vehicle just right so they weren't caught on film. McGee got a match to the knife tip and it was a navy issue tactical boot knife. They did a search for anyone requesting a replacement knife since Hanson's death and came up with one name they recognized. Gibbs sent McGee to the evidence locker to get evidence log 421.

Back on base, Gibbs and Ziva confronted Petty Officer Erica Perelli. Ziva asked if she'd received her replacement knife and Perelli asked how she had known about it and then said "not yet." Tony asked what happened the knife she'd been issued 3 years prior and she said she lost it; Gibbs said "in Hanson's body." The team revealed that Perelli and Bidwell had framed Hanson when they learned of the investigation into the drug trafficking and made it look like Hanson had been killed by his own dog. Perelli planted the evidence in Hanson's house to make it look like he was behind the drug smuggling. They said she'd killed Bidwell because she didn't believe he'd hold up under interrogation. Perelli said she wasn't a lawyer but did they really believe their case, which was based on her requisitioning a new boot knife, would hold up in court and Gibbs said "nah". She smugly said I didn't think so. She asked if they had a warrant as she started to put her dog in the car and McGee said it was in his coat pocket. Another Petty Officer walked by and said "seek" and his dog started barking at McGee. Tony joked that McGee still had that magic as McGee removed the evidence item from his pocket which was cocaine from the crime scene at Hanson's house. Gibbs held the cocaine in front of the dog and he didn't react and he said "your dog don't hunt." Perelli put the dog in the front seat and Tony said she'd killed her dog and replaced him with an attack dog because she needed one who wouldn't react to cocaine. Ziva walked up and told Perelli she was under arrest for the murders of Petty Officer's Bidwell and Hanson. As she went to slap the cuffs on Perelli the dog started barking and went to attack but Ziva pulled Perelli out of the way as McGee shut the door before the dog attacked. Tony said "you just seem to attract all the sick puppies Timothy."

McGee walked into Abby's lab and she was sad. Abby said that Gibbs had gotten permission for her to keep Jethro but her landlord said no. She wanted to find him a new home and then worked on McGee to take the dog home. She introduced them to one another and told them to shake. When neither moved, Abby told Jethro he'd have to be the bigger man so Jethro lifted his paw and McGee shook it.

Summary: The dead body of La Grenouille finally surfaces and the entire NCIS is put under the investigation by the FBI, with Jenny as the prime suspect for his murder.

Tony comes in to work with a cup of coffee (no lid) and laughing about something on his cell. He gets startled when Ziva slams the hole puncher on some papers, and she tells him its housekeeping day. Upon hearing Tony has hot coffee, McGee warns Tony to stay away from the servers near his desk because he is backing up 3 years worth of investigations from all their computers and the machines are very sensitive. Tony then shows up near McGee with cup in hand and starts to hover over the machines. McGee looks on anxiously and warns him again about the sensitivity of the servers. Tony replies

"Well so am I McZero. Do you think I'm a complete klutz?" Tony then pretends to balance his coffee cup and McGee grabs it from him. In the process they both end up spilling the contents of the cup which is nothing but paper disks from the hole punch. Tony said, "Curly McNeil, they worked." Gibbs comes in and asks if the phones work because he's been calling. Ziva tries her phone with no luck. Gibbs tries his with no luck either as the screens all start to scramble and power down. McGee panics as his back-up servers shut down while the elevator doors open announcing the arrival of Fornell and his team. Tony said "It's not my fault, I didn't do this" while McGee is banging on the servers with a clipboard. Fornell walks up and said, "There's no need for that" and Gibbs asks Fornell what's going on. Fornell said "It's a shutdown Gibbs. A few months ago they pulled a body out of the bay. The local PD had him on ice while they were tracking down a DNA match." Jenny is coming down the stairs as she listens in. Fornell said "The body has been identified as Rene' Benoit." Jenny asks if La Grenouille's dead and Fornell tells her he was murdered. He announces for all to hear that the entire unit is under investigation.

Abby slams her hands down on the table in front of Ducky and said "This is ridiculous. We're prisoners in our own evidence lock-up." Ziva replied that they weren't prisoners while Tony looked at the FBI Agent watching them and said "We're evidence, so we're locked up." Abby said "Well why are we being guarded then? I mean we are being guarded right?" (Points to the FBI Agent) "You are being very guarded about whether or not we're being guarded." Ziva smiles and McGee tells Abby to relax as he's sure she's not a suspect. Abby wants to know who their suspect is and Ducky replies that the FBI wasn't ready to walk anyone out in handcuffs yet. Ziva said "They are trying to keep it quiet" and Tony said the FBI didn't even know what they were looking for. Abby asked if they were supposed to hand the FBI their first clue and Ducky said "Not us, Gibbs."

Gibbs and Fornell are walking down the hallway to interrogation and Gibbs asked how Fornell landed the job of investigating them. Fornell replied "Intimate knowledge of the case history made me the obvious choice." Gibbs asked if Fornell would have a problem with his personal relationships with the people involved and Tobias said it wouldn't be a problem as evidence led to someone in the building. As they walked into the interrogation room, Gibbs sat down and asked "What evidence?" Fornell stood there and said "the other side" so Gibbs got up to move to the "suspect" side of the table so Fornell could interrogate him. Gibbs smirked as he moved and eyed the two-way mirror. On the other side, they showed the eyes of a man, nothing more, watching the interrogation. An FBI Agent poked his head in and said "Coffee sir?" and the man replied "I don't drink coffee" then put a toothpick in his mouth to bite on when the agent left.

Fornell hands Gibbs a picture of La Grenouille and commented that Gibbs didn't seem surprised. He said that he had evidence that Gibbs' team had significant contact with La Grenouille on the day he died. Fornell talked about the car bomb that exploded in Episode 5.01 when the team thought Tony was killed. Gibbs said the bomb was meant for the daughter, not La Grenouille. Fornell said "Somebody was taking things personally. You ever figure out who that was?" Gibbs replied "Nope." Fornell said the time of death coincided with Ziva, McGee and Gibbs' raid on La Grenouille yacht's. Gibbs said they'd just missed him and the three of them had been in the office all night securing the warrant. Fornell said the reports should verify that. Gibbs asked if it was his alibi Fornell was after then admitted that he was at Jenny's house prior to them getting a warrant. Fornell said they had a copy of Shepard's phone records indicated she'd spoken with La Grenouille earlier in the evening. He asked Gibbs if he was part of the conversation that went on in the house. Gibbs flashed back to that night and told Fornell that La Grenouille wanted protection. Fornell said "Maybe you should've provided it." Fornell asked if Gibbs was providing protection for anyone else. Gibbs flashed back to a conversation with Jenny in MTAC where she said she'd been after La Grenouille for a decade. Gibbs realized it wasn't his alibi that Fornell wanted but Jenny's. Gibbs told Fornell if he was going to accuse the Director of NCIS of murder, the evidence had better be good. Fornell said he wouldn't be there if it wasn't and Jenny's always been after La Grenouille and had made a mess of things. Gibbs told Fornell that when the investigation was done and Shepard was cleared, he wanted to see the file. Fornell said "When it's done and IF she's cleared, I just might let you." Fornell closed the file, walked out the door and told another agent to take Gibbs back down with the others. Gibbs sat staring at the two way mirror as the man on the other side stared back (without seeing one another). The man left the observation room.

In Jenny's office, she sat at her desk being "watched" by a female FBI Agent. The man from interrogation walked in and she said "Long way from San Diego, Leon." He replied, "SecNav felt this warranted a plane ticket." She asked if he was interrogating her staff or if he already had a suspect." He just smirked and Jenny smirked back and said "Well, Assistant Director Vance, you gonna ask for them?" When he said nothing, she opened her drawer, took out her gun and badge and laid them on the desk. When she stood, Vance relieved her of her duties then suspended her.

Gibbs walks out of interrogation and runs into a smiling Vance, who hands Gibbs $2.42 for a cheese danish. Gibbs commented that it was 8 years prior, Vance corrects him and says 9. Gibbs asks if Vance is responsible for the fishing expedition. Still smiling and biting down on his toothpick, Vance replies "The Bureau is driving the boat." Gibbs nods his head and as he walks by Vance said "Keep it off the rocks." As Gibbs walked down the hallway, he passed McGee. McGee asked what he should say and Gibbs told him the truth as he hadn't done anything wrong.

In interrogation, McGee flashed back to a time when he hacked into the CIA. Fornell snaps his fingers and asks why McGee is nervous and where his head is at. He said "I know that you've hacked into everything from the corner store to the CIA, McGee and I don't care." As McGee is on egg shells, Fornell asks McGee if Shepard ever asked him to investigate the details of her father's suicide. From the other side, Vance watches the interrogation. Fornell said McGee didn't come up with the idea on his own and McGee said "Gibbs. The Director was particularly aggressive in her pursuit of the arms dealer La Grenouille. Agent Gibbs was curious as to her motivation." Fornell said "Gibbs doesn't get curious, he gets suspicious. What did he suspect?" McGee said that Jenny had believed that La Grenouille was responsible for her father's death, as he swallowed hard. Fornell asked "Is that why she put Agent DiNozzo under cover?" and McGee replied he couldn't speak to the nature of DiNozzo's assignment. Fornell asked if McGee and Tony had a professional relationship as McGee flashed back to numerous times that Tony called him nicknames or threw stuff at him. McGee said his relationship with Tony was very professional. Fornell pumped him for more information about Tony's assignment and said "it's not the time for you to be covering for your friends." McGee replied "I was not privy to any of his actions because of the aforementioned undercover operation." Fornell pulls out a piece of paper and said McGee had been privy to it at one point in Canada.

They switch to Fornell interrogating Ziva on the same undercover mission in Canada where the Director tried to nail La Grenouille but was forced to let him get away. Fornell mentions how Ziva is Israeli and was "trained" to do what it is she does by Mossad. Ziva said she would hate to be misunderstood. Fornell asked it happened often and Ziva replied "Once in a blue lagoon." Fornell said "I think I'll be able to translate. I repeat, what was the purpose of the mission to Canada." Ziva said they'd received intelligence that the subject would be in the vicinity. He asked if they were attempting to apprehend the subject, who was now deceased. Ziva flashed back to Canada with her weapon trained on La Grenouille and replied "No." He asked what her role was and when she didn't respond, he got in her face and said "You were there to kill him because that's what you do." She said she was just there to ensure mission safety and was never given a fire order. He replied it's because she was called off at the last moment by a deep undercover agent named Trent Kort. Fornell said Shepard had manufactured the entire mission to put a bullet in La Grenouille's head as he shows her the photo of a dead La Grenouille.

Ducky is now in interrogation picking up the photo. Ducky said "We'd met only once, I was rather taken by the man." Fornell gives him the details of how they found La Grenouille. Ducky complimented the ME who autopsied the body and then asked to see it which Fornell denied. "Four eyes are better than two" Ducky said. Fornell said the cause of death had already been established as a gunshot wound to the head. Ducky shrugged his shoulders and asked what Fornell wanted from him. Fornell asked Ducky if he'd been asked by the Director for a profile of La Grenouille and wanted Ducky's opinion of that encounter. Ducky flashed back to giving his opinion to Gibbs, telling him Jenny was consumed by her mission to get La Grenouille and she would go as far as it took. Ducky said Jenny did manifest obsessive behavior. Back downstairs, Ducky talked with Gibbs about his interrogation and asked Gibbs if he felt Jenny had done it. Gibbs walked away towards the elevator and the agent got in his way and told him he couldn't leave. Gibbs patted his jacket, reached inside it and said "You know what, you're gonna have to stop me" as the elevator chimed and Vance got off. He asked if there was a problem and Gibbs replied "If you want it to be." Vance said "I know it's always been lost on you Gibbs, but they write the rules for a reason." Gibbs said he had rules too and then asked if there was any reason for them to be kept there.

Vance said "I'm well aware of your relationship with Director Shepard. I've never been comfortable with intimacy between management and staff myself" to which Gibbs replied "Me either." Vance announced to the team if they had been interviewed by Fornell, they were free to go. Tony smacked his head in response. Vance told them to not investigate the case and left. Gibbs pointed to Ducky as Abby vented her frustration over Vance. Gibbs waved at McGee and Ziva and said "Come on let's go, we got work to do." They both replied that they couldn't investigate the case and Gibbs replied "We investigate the FBI."

Gibbs is digging under his workbench as McGee and Ducky come down the stairs. McGee announces that Ziva is shaking the FBI tail and Gibbs said when she arrives she can help McGee hack into Fornell's computer. McGee explains his computers are under "quarantine by the FBI and wants to know what he can use. Gibbs blows dust off his laptop and says "Here, you can use mine." McGee looks puzzled and said it didn't have wireless so Gibbs slapped a cord on top of it and McGee said he'd figure it out. Gibbs asked Ducky to get in touch with the ME's office to get the autopsy report and Ducky said "I'll have to be charming." Gibbs smiled and told him "Don't strain yourself." Gibbs tells him to go out the back-way through the hedge. Ducky remarks that it's like playing a cat and mouse game and turns back down the stairway to share one of his infamous stories but the look on Gibbs face has him say "Remind me to share it with you later" and he leaves.

McGee shares that he may be able to get a signal and make it work but he needs an FBI Identification to get access to their mainframe. Gibbs holds out the ID he lifted from the Agent's pocket when he slipped his hand inside his jacket. When McGee just stares at him, Gibbs said "Questions?" McGee asked "Yeah, how do you get the boat out?" Gibbs replied "You just break the bottle" and went upstairs.

Back in the evidence lock-up, the Agent searches his jacket for his missing ID. Tony smiles and walks towards Abby who is digging through an evidence box and said "You wouldn't be breaking the chain of evidence now, would you, Abby?" She commented she doubted it as the guy had died in prison 2 years earlier. He tells her if she finds anything to eat, he's starving so she tosses him some "Clowny cakes". She pulls out a pack of Tarot Cards and tells him to concentrate. Fornell walks in and Tony stands at attention. Fornell tells him not yet and points to Abby. Abby looks to Tony who told her "Gibbs gave you a mission and everyone's counting on you. Now do what you do best." Abby's response is "Dance?" and he said "Talk." Abby left with Fornell while Tony flipped over "The Hanged Man" Tarot card.

In interrogation, Fornell says her name and Abby puts up a finger to tell him to hold on as she sucks down some Caf-Pow. He says he had gone over her in regards to the at question and she tells him "There's a problem with your theory of the crime. A big hole, I could drive a truck through it. Maybe not a truck because I was never that good with a double clutch but a truck driver could just..." as she makes a hand gesture to indicate he could drive straight through it. Poor Fornell just listens to her babble and asks if she cares to share. She said "It's obvious. You think there's a murder here right underneath Gibbs' nose and whatever took place took place without Gibbs knowing." He said, "And that could never happen?" She tells him she's going to share a secret with him, a theory she's been working on off the books, as she scans the room to make sure nobody is listening. She tells him "The man is magic, like dark magic. He has eyes and ears everywhere. He appears like a mist. Whenever I get a clue he just materializes." Fornell leans forward and said "Maybe he just bugged your lab." Abby smiles and replies, "No, I checked." He said, "What's that like, it sounds aggravating" to which she replies, "No." Fornell asks if Gibbs ever gets angry. Abby has flashbacks of Gibbs doing his infamous headslap and said, "Never. He only uses his powers for good." Fornell tells her she sounds like a fan. Abby tells him a crime like that would never take place under Gibbs' nose as he wouldn't allow it. Fornell looks really frustrated during this interrogation. He tells her he understands and tries to get her back on track but she tells him he doesn't understand and begins to tell him a story.

McGee has Ziva holding his cell phone across the room, towards the ceiling (he's using it to get a signal for the computer). When Gibbs asked if he got in, McGee remarks that the computer is so ancient it doesn't even have the things modern day protocols defend against. McGee has a totally geek moment discussing playing a game and Gibbs just stares at him so McGee gets back on track. McGee comes across something; Ziva shifts to see and both Gibbs and McGee yell at her to not move. McGee is able to find a hotel address of an eye witness who saw the murder take place. Ziva complains her arms are killing her so Gibbs calls her over. She places the cell phone on a beam and walks to Gibbs. Gibbs whips out a switchblade and said "The FBI car out front." Ziva says she's got it and smiles and starts to head up the stairs. Gibbs yells out, "Ziva. Their tires, not their throats." She just smiles and keeps going. McGee told Gibbs if he had a printer he'd be able to convert some of the crime scene sketches to dot matrix. Gibbs smirks as he digs out what is probably the first printer ever made and McGee's facial expression is priceless with a "what do you expect me to do what that" look.

Abby is alone in interrogation using her hand to try and "see" through the observation mirror. Fornell and Vance are in the observation room watching. Vance said the interrogation was going nowhere and Fornell said "I'm not entirely sure she's all there." Abby tells them she remembered something and Vance turns on the intercom and asks if it's relevant. Abby tells them about running fingerprints on the liquor bottle that had been left in the Director's study and tells them the fingerprints came from the Director's father. She said "I think it must've come from the CIA or something. I think they might be trying to frame her." Vance poked his toothpick in his mouth and told Fornell Abby was much smarter than he gave her credit for. They continue to watch and Fornell rolls his eyes as Abby presses her entire face and hands against the mirror and moves her eyes back and forth.

Gibbs walks into the hotel, sees a woman leaving and follows her as she heads to and gets into a cab. Gibbs pulls out his badge and identifies himself, then addresses the woman and said, "Buy you a cup of coffee, Miss Benoit." La Grenouille's daughter, Jeanne is sitting in the backseat and looks stunned to see Gibbs standing there.

In Gibbs' basement, Ducky laid out photos of La Grenouille's body (like a puzzle). He talked to La Grenouille like he was there. He noticed the powder burns on the forehead, indicating contact with the weapon at close range with no defensive wounds. Ducky wonders why La Grenouille allowed an armed assailant to get that close to him unless it was self-inflicted. Reading the autopsy report, the ME reported that the wound was consistent with a left-handed suicide. McGee pokes his head down and asked if Ducky said anything. Ducky just looked at him so McGee left. Ducky wondered why the FBI was saying La Grenouille was murdered when they were told it was an apparent suicide. Ducky picks up the photo of his right hand, noticing a mark that was overlooked.

Gibbs and Jeanne are having coffee and Jeanne said she was expected at Gibbs office. Gibbs said the questions weren't his and Jeanne asked if the questions were about Tony. Gibbs said "No. Questions about your father."

Tony finally gets his moment in interrogation. He walks in and said "Well, we've been here before haven't we Toby. You were saying some pretty bad stuff about me back then. I hope you've learned a few things since then; I know I have." Acting all arrogant and cocky, Tony sits down, eating chips and looks in the two-way mirror fixing his hair. Fornell said that Tony must've done something right as the Director had picked him for a prime undercover assignment. Fornell asked how Tony got so close to Jeanne. Tony said "I know where your going with this. You'd like to learn a few pick up tricks. It's kind of a family secret and I took an oath so, sorry." Tony continues acting arrogant as Fornell interrogates him until Fornell asked if the Director ordered him to sleep with Jeanne. Tony said he wouldn't call it an order. Fornell asked how Tony developed feelings for Jeanne and he replied "Gradually" and had flashbacks of his and Jeanne's relationship. Fornell asked if the Director told Tony to break the girl's heart and Tony said "This feels more like a therapy session than an interrogation. Why are you so interested in my feelings?" Fornell replied "Because you had them" and smirked.

Jeanne told Gibbs she'd volunteered for a fellowship in Africa and her commute consisted of avoiding hippos. Gibbs asked her if it helped and she said "No, I couldn't get what happened out of my head." Gibbs tells her the FBI thinks her father was murdered and Jeanne said "I thought you knew." She told him she saw what happened that night so Gibbs asked her what she saw. Jeanne gets up to leave and Gibbs asked what she saw. She tells him she saw her father get killed. He pushes her for more information and chases her towards the taxi. She finally blurts out that Tony killed her father.

McGee is printing out the crime scene sketches as Ziva is taping the floor to match the "Yacht" image of the crime scene. She calls out "Duck" and Ducky replied "I only let Jethro call me that Ziva." McGee tells him she meant "duck" and points to the wires near his head. She puts a metal object in the "Yacht" and said a single shell casing had been found on the yacht and no blood spatter. Ducky said La Grenouille would've had to be standing near the railing so McGee reenacts the scene as a suicide with La Grenouille going overboard with the gun and the shell casing falling on the deck. Ziva puts a different spin on it indicating that someone walked up with a concealed weapon. McGee asks the question they all are trying to figure out "Why would La Grenouille let someone get that close to him with a loaded weapon?" Ducky asks Ziva about the mark on La Grenouille's right hand. She takes McGee's hands and said it was a pressure point and in Mossad they call it a thumb tap. Putting pressure on McGee's hand, she pretends she's aiming a gun at his head to reenact what really happened.

Fornell tells Tony that Jeanne must be going through hell and Tony said he didn't meant to hurt her. Fornell said, "What other option was there, she was in love with you too right? Come on Tony you're a better liar than that." Tony snaps out of his flashbacks of Jeanne and tells Fornell, "You're right. Everything I did with her was a lie. Just for recalling those lies, I believe that I am lying now." He looks into the mirror and yells "Are you getting all this? Cuz it's good stuff." Vance just blinks and continues to watch. Tony looks at Fornell with a serious look and tells him "Yeah, she was in love with me. We were in love. What else do you want to know?" Fornell asks him how it was supposed to end because there was never going to be a happily ever after. Fornell mentions how Jeanne had nearly been killed twice the day her father died; once by a drug dealer and then the explosion in Tony's car. He said nobody knew better than Tony that the way to get to La Grenouille was through Jeanne. Fornell said Ziva told them she left him alone in Jeanne's apartment and wasn't able to reach him later on his phone. Tony said he'd gone for a ride to clear his head, he'd used a company car. Fornell continues to hammer away at Tony and then says "You killed La Grenouille."

McGee, Ziva, Ducky and Gibbs talk about Tony being set-up. Ziva mentions Tony had no alibi. Ducky remarks how no two suicides can be that identical and he's seen the mark before. Both he and Gibbs admit they'd seen it on the Director's father, Jasper Shepard. Gibbs dialed a number on his cell and said "Somebody's missing from this party."

Jenny walked into her office and told Vance not to get comfortable as he'd already scratched her settee'. She asked what the agents were looking for that were tearing apart her house. Fornell told her that La Grenouille was killed with a 9mm Glock and they can't find her's. She tells them they could've asked her, she gave it to La Grenouille and Gibbs witnessed it. Fornell said it works for him because DiNozzo could have taken it from La Grenouille. Jenny is puzzled by his statement and Vance tells her they have Tony in custody as an eyewitness saw him. She is livid when she finds out the witness is Jeanne Benoit and demands to talk to her. Fornell refuses but Vance agrees to it.

Jenny walked into interrogation and introduced herself to Jeanne. She apologizes to her and tells Jeanne she is responsible for her pain because she gave Tony the assignment. Jenny walks Jeanne through the last day her father was alive. Jeanne went home, packed a bag and wrote a note for Tony. On the way to the airport, she felt she needed to see 'him' one last time. As Fornell and Vance wonder if it's Tony or her father, Jenny gets Jeanne to say she went to the marina. Jenny tells her she's lying because the stars didn't align so she could pull in at the right moment to see Tony shoot her father. Jeanne says she killed her father but Jenny tells her it just feels that way. Jeanne admits she was supposed to go to the marina to see him but went to the airport instead and when he didn't find her, she knew he was dead. Jenny tells Jeanne that she keeps reliving it over in her head wishing she could relive that last moment and do things differently but assures Jeanne that her father loved her. Jenny got up, looked at the two-way mirror then left the interrogation room.

Vance asked Fornell who he wanted to talk to next then Gibbs opened the door and asked "How's the case?" Fornell replied it was falling apart and Gibbs said he was there to solve their problems and let Trent Kort in. In a round about way, Cort indicates he killed La Grenouille. Vance asks him for his get out of jail free card so Cort pulls it out and hands him some paperwork and tells him "Eyes only." Cort said "La Grenouille wanted to retire, he's retired." Vance said they were done asking questions and left the room. Gibbs put the pressure point on Cort's hand and asked who killed Jenny's father and Cort replied "Jasper Shepard." Gibbs lets him go and walks down the hall with Fornell. Fornell doesn't believe it and feels that Cort would say anything to keep a long term operation running and shut things down before too many questions were asked. He turns and asks Gibbs about the night at Jenny's when she gave La Grenouille the gun. Fornell asked "She gave him the gun" and Gibbs replies "She did". Fornell says that would explain how it got on the yacht and Gibbs simply replied "It would." Fornell said "Cort used that gun to kill La Grenouille." Gibbs didn't respond and Fornell said "Your right, she didn't do it." Gibbs asked for the file and Fornell said maybe.

Trent rounded the corner into the squad room and Tony punched him, sending Trent flying into the filing cabinets. Tony said "Hey Trent, he wasn't just an operative, he was somebody's father." Ziva stood behind Tony and Trent shoved Tony back then left, wiping blood from his mouth. Jeanne walked by with an FBI Agent and looked at Tony but he wouldn't look at her. Ziva told him to be a man, but Tony was angry that she had accused him of murder. Ziva told him "Who is the bad guy. Be a man. Go tell her what she needs to hear." You could see Ziva was struggling to tell Tony this. Tony stared at her for a moment and then walked over to stop Jeanne before she got on the elevator. Tony apologized to Jeanne that she got caught in all of it and she asked him if any of it was real. After a moment's hesitation, Tony told her no. She got on the elevator with tears in her eyes and told him she wished she'd never met him. Tony continued to stare straight ahead and not at Jeanne as the doors closed.

Jenny walks into her office and tells Vance she hopes he's not rushing out on her account. He said, "SecNav tells me your going to be taking two weeks of personal time." She puts her gun and badge back in her drawer and says "Yes. It was never my intention to burden you with this responsibility." He tells her he doesn't mind but his wife isn't so forgiving. She points to his toothpick on her desk and asks if it's his. He tells her to keep it and she brushes it on the floor. Gibbs walks in and Vance comments he owes the Bureau for 2 sets of all-wheel radials. Gibbs said "Yeah, bill me" and shut the door behind Vance. Gibbs asked Jenny "Fairytale ending" and she replied "The Frog is dead and the Jesters have been kicked out of the kingdom." He replies, "And the queen is back on her throne." She said, "If your expecting some sort of knighthood I'm sorry to say I've misplaced my sword." He replied, "Maybe it's with your gun" and she simply said, "Maybe." Gibbs remarked how ironic it was that the Frog was an arms dealer yet never carried a gun. Jenny said "Except that night." She remembered giving him the gun and asked him if he remembered it differently. He flashed back to The Frog putting the gun back on Jenny's desk. Gibbs said "Long live the Queen." Jenny just stared at him.

Summary: Two members of the NCIS team are sent to Baghdad to investigate a mortar attack that turned into murder.

Several marines are playing basketball in the "zone" in Baghdad. Suddenly, they are under a mortar attack and everyone hits the deck. When the attack is over several of the men stand up to assess the situation. They realize Captain John Rankin is still lying on the ground so they go over to check him. One of the soldiers turns over Rankin and they discover he has a fatal wound to the abdomen.

In the NCIS squadroom, Ziva and McGee are looking at a picture on his computer. Tony walks in and asks what's up and Ziva tells him it's private. She then posts a picture of McGee and Jethro

(the dog from "Dog Tags") on the big screen. McGee takes a bit of ribbing from Tony and Ziva. Gibbs walks in and gets called down to autopsy.

Ducky shows Gibbs Rankin's body. Ducky tells him the wife pulled strings to get Rankin's body delivered to Ducky for the autopsy. After examining the body, Ducky tells Gibbs that Rankin wasn't killed by shrapnel from the attack but by a gunshot wound. They realize the mortar attack was a stage for murder.

Tony walks back into the pit and teases McGee about not having photos up of him and his "girlfriend." McGee informs Tony that the dog's name is Jethro and it's a male. Tony said "Hey whatever your preference." Tony went to his desk and began to type and with each key, a sound of a dog barking came from his computer. He demanded McGee fix it immediately and McGee replied "You're barking up the wrong tree." Tony figured he'd be funny so he sat on the keyboard releasing non-stop barking noises until Gibbs walked in. Tony and Ziva bragged about how they'd been to Baghdad and McGee hoped that he'd be able to go.

Gibbs had the team give him a quick rundown on Rankin. They pulled up his information on the screen and realized Rankin was a millionaire by the time he was 30. Tony made a comment about Rankin's trophy wife when a woman walked up behind him and said Rankin was a reservist who had been called to active duty. When Tony asked who she was, the woman replied "The trophy wife."

Gibbs interrogated Dina Rankin. He asked if there were any enemies and his wife said one, Kelvin Ridgeway. She explained there was a deal with a piece of property called "Gloverfield" and her husband had the papers to buy the land. At the last minute, he refused to sign them going with a gut feeling he had. Gibbs went into MTAC with A.D. Leon Vance. They spoke with Marine Major Ike Varnai who said he liked Rankin and they informed him Rankin had been murdered, not a victim from the mortar attack. After they disconnect the teleconference, Vance asks Gibbs who he should send to Baghdad.

Nikki Jardine is in the bathroom washing her hands. Ziva walks in and notices Nikki has a paper with "5 reasons why I should go to Baghdad" lying on the counter. Ziva grosses Nikki out by asking her why she would want to go with all those germs there. She continues to taunt her about getting sores on her face and stuff oozing out of it. Nikki is adamant she wants to go. Ziva tells her that she hopes she can handle the competition.

Gibbs and Ziva pay a visit to Kelvin Ridgeway. The man is quite obnoxious, making sexual references to Ziva. They ask him about the deal and Ridgeway claims he didn't know why Rankin refused to sign. Ridgeway tosses a ball at Ziva and said to Gibbs "Wonder what you tell the wife about this one" (referring to Ziva). Gibbs smirks and gets up and Ridgeway inquires about it and Gibbs tells him he wouldn't mess with Ziva and leaves. Ziva tosses the ball back at Ridgeway and leaves. Ridgeway looks down to see that Ziva crushed the ball with her bare hands.

McGee visits Abby's lab. He is excited and wants the opportunity to go to Baghdad to prove himself. He was aware Tony and Ziva had been already so he wanted the chance. McGee explained that Tony had discouraged him from "volunteering." McGee was talking with Abby about what he should do (basically he talked in circles!). He ended up not going to Vance to volunteer as he didn't want to seem overeager and he figured that's what Tony assumed he would do.

Vance walks into the pit as Ziva and Gibbs return from their interrogation of Ridgeway. Ziva sees Nikki heading into the pit and they "race" to get in front of Vance. They both argue their point on why they should be sent to Baghdad (Ziva said she had contacts there and Nikki said she did to and hers were still alive.). Vance looked at McGee and said he was surprised McGee didn't volunteer as it was a great opportunity for an agent. McGee said Tony didn't volunteer either and Vance said Tony had spoken with him earlier. Vance assigned Tony to go to Baghdad with Nikki as his partner.

McGee and Ziva were disappointed they weren't able to go to Baghdad. Ziva looked up world clocks on the Internet, specifically Baghdad and McGee told her that Nikki and Tony had been there for 45 minutes already. Ziva said they were probably checking into their hotel.

A convoy pulled up outside a hangar in Baghdad. Varnai got out and showed Tony and Nikki their "hotel" while they were there. Varnai led them into the hangar, full of cots and told them it was overflow for visiting military. Nikki was upset that she didn't have any privacy. She grabbed her towel to shower when Tony showed her that the water coming out of the faucet was brown. She whipped out a box of towelettes and washed her hands and face. Varnai returned to take them out to the crime scene. Tony asked Nikki why she wanted to be in Baghdad and she joked it was good for her resume.

Varnai wasn't overly friendly while dealing with Tony and Nikki. He first brought them to the basketball court to interview two witnesses. A civilian contractor, Allan Hayes, claimed he didn't really know Rankin well and a Sgt. who claimed Rankin was a great soldier and an overall great guy. They dismissed the two men and checked out the scene. Tony realized the shot had come from behind Rankin and had Varnai bring him up to what was a family residence. When Tony turned to call Nikki, she was on the phone, speaking Arabic. He went up without her and realized the shot had come from the residence. He looked on the floor and pointed out a shell casing to Varnai. Tony called Nikki up to translated questions and answers with the Iraqi woman. The woman said a man named Ali MacMoud had been in that room and she hadn't seen him since the mortar attack. She provided them with his address. When Varnai, a team of soldiers, Tony and Nikki arrived at MacMoud's home, they found a hysterical woman. The woman claimed Ali had been taken the previous night by hooded men and she believed they planned to execute him.

Gibbs interrogated George Stenner. Rankin had contacted Stenner the day before his death. Rankin had Stenner do a confidential soil test on the Gloverfield property before he would sign the papers. Stenner acted nervous and kept asking to go to the bathroom. Gibbs refused the first time and Stenner told Gibbs he'd provided Rankin a soil testing on the property. The soil test revealed that the property was contaminated and full of heavy metals (lead). Stenner said he'd only sent out one copy of the report, to Rankin but he'd email Gibbs a copy. Stenner asked to go to the bathroom again and Gibbs told him "no," then laughed and let him leave.

At "hotel" Baghdad, the camera panned to Tony and Nikki's clothes strewn about the floor. You could hear them making noises which implied they were being intimate. Finally, we see Nikki and Tony are excited that they got "three bars" on the computer signal so they could teleconference with the rest of the team. While awaiting their video feed, Tony told Nikki that "for someone who hates germs so much, you're a slob." The feed came through and Abby told Tony how much she missed him and asked him about the nut Nikki. Tony showed Abby Nikki was there. While Abby kept fumbling over her apology, Ziva was hissing in her ear that Tony and Nikki couldn't be sharing a room! Tony tried to get Abby to find the missing Ali as Varnai walked into their hangar. Tony disconnected when Varnai got testy about their reasons for being there and not being able to find Ali. Nikki made a phone call and got help on finding Ali but Varnai refused to bring them into that zone after dark.

The next morning, Varnai, a team of soldiers, Tony and Nikki went out looking for Nikki's source. When they stopped Varnai talked about attacks made on troops when they were stopped. Suddenly Nikki bolted out of the vehicle and walked ahead. Varnai wasn't happy and got the team to surround and check out the area. A young Iraqi boy walked out and one of the soldiers drew his weapon on him. It turned out this was Nikki's source, Jameel. Tony blasted Nikki for endangering everyone's lives and asked her to tell him the truth about why she wanted to be in Baghdad. Nikki admitted her brother had been shot in that very spot and she wanted to be where it had happened.

Jameel, went with them and lead them to the group, part of Al Shemar, holding Ali. The group leader was hostile and according to Nikki made reference to knowing Tony's mother very well and very intimately. They got permission to see and talk to Ali and Tony entered the building where Ali was being held.

Gibbs and McGee interrogated Ridgeway again when they discovered Ridgeway had called Steiner six times. When they brought up the soil report, Ridgeway basically didn't care and claimed he didn't know what they were talking about. Gibbs asked him if he didn't mind waiting while the rest of the team located the man who killed Rankin so they could talk to him. After a few minutes, Gibbs phone rang and Tony informed him that Ali was dead, his tongue had been cut out.

They questioned the guard on Ali's door and he said he'd brought Ali dinner the night before and hadn't seen him since. He had heard Ali making noises but ignored him. Tony began to check time of death with Ducky instructing him over the phone when Varnai walked in, trying to get them to leave. Tony followed Varnai out while Nikki continued the process. Tony gave Varnai a hard time and tried to pin down about killing Ali. Nikki walked out and informed Tony Varnai couldn't have done it as Ali had died four hours earlier and Varnai had been with them the entire time. Tony apologized to Varnai and said he was just doing his job.

Nikki complained about the smell in the room Ali had been held. When Tony asked, she said it was turpentine and it was giving her a headache. He asked her if she'd felt like that any other time during their trip. Nikki told him she had while questioning the Civilian and Sergeant upon their arrival. Tony realized Allan Hayes was a civilian contractor who had access to turpentine so he called McGee who did a background check on Hayes. Gibbs and McGee uncovered that Hayes had a criminal background and was under investigation for bribes while in Baghdad. They were going to have Tony question him until they discovered Hayes was on his way back to the US. Gibbs ordered Nikki and Tony back to NCIS.

Gibbs handed Ziva a copy of Stenner's report and McGee, the report found with Rankin's belongings. The two reports differed. McGee realized Rankin had done his own check, discovering a ceramics plant had been on Gloverfield years before. This plant left the land contaminated. They also discovered the contract to purchase the land was missing from Rankin's belongings.

Before Nikki and Tony left, Nikki explained that her brother had been shot. He had been dying in the street and a man came out to help him until help came. When other Marines arrived, they assumed the man was an Insurgent so he was killed. The man was Jameel's father; he had saved Nikki's brother Eric's life. Nikki delivered the laptop computer to Jameel and his sister, Tabina before they left Baghdad.

Gibbs and McGee showed up at the airport. They saw Hayes arrive and McGee assumed Ridgeway would be meeting him. Gibbs asked McGee why he was certain Ridgeway knew about the deal when they saw a man approach Hayes. They walked up to them and Gibbs greeted George Stenner. Stenner had doctored the report he gave to Rankin saying the land was fine. Rankin had a gut feeling it was wrong and did his own check and discovered Gloverfield had had a ceramics factory on it years prior. He knew Stenner had lied to him and refused to sign the papers. Stenner provided Gibbs with the correct report to cover his own hide. Hayes had hired Ali to shoot and kill Rankin when they realized Rankin knew the truth. When Hayes realized NCIS was there, he learned where Ali was being held so he snuck in and killed him. Hayes then boarded a plane to return to the US. Stenner admitted he had only done it for the money.

Nikki arrived at a hospital to visit her brother. Turns out her brother was in a coma. She told him she'd seen Jameel and his sister. She then put in a CD of music they used to listen to with their parents when they went on vacation. She asked him if he remembered.....

Summary: While on an undercover mission, Ziva's life is put in grave danger when the serial killer she's been tracking becomes suspicious of her.

Andrew Hoffman is washing blood off in the bathroom sink when he receives a cell phone call by someone waiting outside to pick him up. He walks by a dead female body, lying on the floor with a large jagged cut across the torso, as he exits the home. The body, clad in bra and panty only, lies on a sheet of plastic with shoes, clothing, and a bloody pocketknife next to her body.

Hoffman enters the awaiting car and gives the driver, Ziva, a passionate kiss. As Ziva drives away from the house, Gibbs tells Tony, dressed in coveralls sitting in a service van across from the home, to enter the home. Gibbs and McGee are in a separate vehicle tracking Ziva via GPS. Hoffman is taking Ziva, who he refers to as Gina, on a mystery date. Apparently, this is an undercover sting operation. Tony enters the house to hide surveillance bugs, but finds the dead body instead. He phones this fact to Gibbs, referring to her as victim number five. The victim's ring finger has been severed; a signature of the serial killer they are investigating. Gibbs decides to apprehend the suspect immediately; tells McGee to phone Ziva with the distress code word, "Bernard." Ziva tells the caller he has the wrong number and hangs up. Suspicious of her, Hoffman takes her phone to see the call ID lists "Gibbs." She passes it off as a wrong number, but he sees it as number 2 on her speed dial. Keeping her calm she says it was an ex-boyfriend. Hoffman pulls out and points a snub-nosed revolver at Ziva, forcing her to drive to an abandoned warehouse. Gibbs and McGee track down the vehicle to find it empty with no evidence indicating where they went.

Inside the warehouse Hoffman admits to killing the women for sleeping around on their husbands who were away fighting for their country. He forces her to the back of the warehouse where he intends to kill her. Ziva, gun pointing to the back of her head, hears the hammer of the gun being cocked and turns out of the bullet's path enough to avoid the full impact, but it grazes her right temple. Hoffman loses the gun during the struggle. As Ziva reaches for it, he pulls out a knife to stab her. Ziva fires five shots into him as he stands over her, causing him to fall onto her. Gibbs and McGee hear the shots and rush in to aid a visibly shaken Ziva. Gibbs gives her the rest of the day off to seek medical attention, but she hangs around, insisting she is fine. Detective Steve Rosetti arrives at the warehouse crime scene, annoyed about being removed from the case to allow NCIS to investigate and take credit for the takedown. Later, back at the office, Tony tries to make Ziva smile by tussling her hair in a playful manner. However, she grabs his arm and twists it; clearly not in the mood for Tony's antics.

The identity of the fifth victim is still unknown; Tony and Ziva return to the Oyster Lounge, where previous victims were known to frequent, which was how they initially found Hoffman using Ziva as bait. She is familiar to many of the bar's patrons including Michael Locke, a longtime patron looking for his girlfriend, Devin, who disappeared three weeks prior. Ziva tells him the truth about her undercover status as Gina. She confirms to him that she is responsible for shooting Hoffman as reported by the news. Michael recognizes the fifth victim as Julie and is worried his girlfriend may have fallen victim of the serial killer.

A day later Navy Petty Officer Kevin Massey comes into NCIS headquarters to thank Ziva for killing the suspect; his wife was victim number four. Ziva has a flashback of Hoffman's killing. Gibbs visits Ducky in autopsy, where Ducky has found an inconsistency in one of the murders. Victim number four's finger was cut off immediately after death, while the other four were dead for several hours before the amputation. Abby come in on rollerblades, justifying it by the amount of time she saves getting around the building quicker. She tells Gibbs she found a bloody partial print that does not match Hoffman's or the victims'; she theorizes that Hoffman has an accomplice.

Tony, in his usual juvenile way of showing concern for Ziva, continues to nag her. He offers to take her out for drinks, but she declines. He apologizes for the nagging saying he was trying to snap her out of the funk she is in. Ziva goes to the Oyster Lounge to relax on her own. Michael is there, still lamenting the loss of his girlfriend. Ziva decides to help find her.

Ziva arrives at work the next day despite being told by Gibbs not to come in. McGee finds evidence of a possible accomplice while reviewing the Oyster Lounge's surveillance footage of victim number three with Hoffman. Ziva thinks it may be a coincidence. Rosetti arrives at NCIS headquarters wanting to know why the investigation continues. Gibbs demands all of the evidence from Rosetti's case files despite his opposition to keeping the case open.

Ziva runs into Michael at the bar again. After some not so subtle flirting, they end up in his bed. As she sleeps, she mistakes his reaching over her to grab his glasses (on the nightstand next to her gun); she grabs the gun and points it at him. He pushes it away with his hand. She admits to being a former Israeli Mossad agent, which he takes to mean assassin. They patch up the misunderstanding and get back lovemaking. Abby analyzes blood from inside the handle of the knife that indicates a blood type different than all the known victims or Hoffman. She and McGee deduce the potential of an unidentified sixth victim. Tony uses this information and finds out the unmatched, rare B positive blood type is the same as Michael's girlfriend, Devin. Arguing over Michael's possible involvement, Tony realizes she has slept with him.

Among the many boxes of evidence Rosetti brings, McGee find a page is missing from victim number three's address book where the R's would be. Abby determines from video analysis that the accomplice is about 6' 1" and 180 pounds. In a private conversation Ziva admits to Tony these measurements are similar to Michael's. She accuses Tony of jealousy for pursuing him as a suspect. Later, with the entire team present, Tony likens the situation to the movie Sea of Love, where Al Pacino, a cop, sleeps with Ellen Barkin, a serial killer suspect. He say the zany twist is Ziva is Pacino and Michael is Barkin. Both Ziva and Gibbs is angered by the reference.

Meanwhile, McGee compares victim number three's phone records to calls placed to persons with last names beginning with the letter R; Det. Rosetti's name is on the list multiple times. During interrogation Rosetti admits to tampering with the evidence to cover-up his extramarital affair with Monica Bishop, victim number three who he meet at the same bar frequented by Hoffman. Gibbs riles him up by accusing him of being Hoffman's accomplice. Rosetti claims to have hidden his relationship to keep from being thrown off the case and losing his shot to take down the killer. Gibbs believes him.

Ziva goes to autopsy to view Hoffman body; she has yet another flashback. Gibbs enters, encouraging her to move on from whatever is holding her back. She confesses she almost died because of her bad judgment with Hoffman in the warehouse. Gibbs tells her to trust her judgment, because the moment she doesn't, it won't be "almost."

Back at their desks, Tony lays out the circumstantial evidence against Michael Locke to Gibbs. Ziva steps forward with her gun, indicating Michael's fingerprints are on the barrel. Tony asks her what she is doing and she responds, "Trusting my judgment." Tony brings the gun to Abby, in the garage combing through Hoffman's car, for fingerprint comparison to the print on the knife. She finds a container in the trunk's spare tire wheel well, with four severed fingers which she and Ducky confirm are from victims one, two, three, and five.

Ziva brings Michael to the warehouse and recalls to him the circumstances around Hoffman death, again suffering a flashback. Back at Abby's lab the rest of the team determine that it was a copy cat, not an accomplice, with access to the knife who killed victim number 4, Patricia Massey. The copy cat could not have known to wait before severing the finger nor where to store it with the others. Also, Michael's print does not match the knife's bloody print, eliminating him as a suspect, leaving Patricia's husband, Kevin Massey, as the prime suspect. Gibbs says to always suspect the spouse; Ducky asks if that is from personal experience. Tony calls Ziva to confirm Michael is no longer a suspect. Michael overhears and takes offense; Ziva alleviates his concern that she was only interested in him as a suspect. He leaves unconvinced she is being honest with him.

Gibbs, McGee and Tony confront Kevin Massey at his workplace on a military base. They accuse him of hanging out at the bar connected to the first two victims, and following Hoffman home with victim number three. While Hoffman was away from his home, they say he broke in, stole the killer's knife, and used it to kill his wife in the same manner as Hoffman. Massey is taken into custody.

Ziva enters the Oyster Lounge to find Michael drinking his sorrow away. Ziva hands him a note with Devin's number, says Devin wants to talk to him. Michael thanks Ziva as she leaves. She looks back and smiles as Michael calls Devin on his cell phone.

Summary: Palmer is put in grave danger when he becomes the target of an anonymous murderer, whom only he can recognize.

A navy building is being retrofitted. Two male construction workers use the elevator (lift) to get to the upper floor. The two men are chatting about the female office worker when one of them gets a call from him. The second man needs to head to the office and sign his time card. The guy smiles and teases his buddy as they exchange banter over who saw her first. As the elevator lowers, the first man's face drops and he stops the elevator. He sees a dead body on the roof of the elevator.

At the NCIS pit, Tony gets off the elevator finishing a phone call on his cell. He sees Ziva and McGee playing a game of scrabble. McGee informs him it's a lesson to help Ziva with her English. McGee points out he is beating her by 50 points and then says she'll have a hard time using the letter "Q" to make a word. Ziva accuses him of cheating. McGee claims he didn't cheat, he simply counted the tiles on the board and came up with it through process of elimination. Ziva outsmarts him and makes the word "Qi" twice on the board, scoring 62 points and beating McGee. McGee challenges her win when Gibbs rounds the corner. McGee hurriedly shoves the game and tiles in Ziva's desk drawer. He tries to say he wasn't playing but teaching Ziva and they all tease him about losing.

The NCIS team shows up to process the crime scene. Gibbs chats with the foreman and one of the construction workers. He is told the dead man is not part of the construction crew. Upon the third floor, McGee's fear of heights is pretty obvious as he holds on tightly when he has to go near the edge. Tony teases McGee about it and jokingly gooses McGee with one of the crime scene numbers (#3 to be exact). Ziva removes the dead man's wallet to reveal his name (last name is Baxter). They finish taking photos, processing the scene and Ducky announces that the time of death was 4AM. McGee, Tony and Ziva head back down to the ground while Ducky and Palmer remain with the body.

Ducky heads down to fetch the gurney, leaving Palmer to remove the body from the roof of the elevator. When he does, a passport falls out of the man's back pocket. Palmer retrieves the passport and looks at it. He realizes the photo is of the dead man but the name is different. The name on the passport is Milo Suskavcevic. Ducky calls out to Palmer from below. Palmer drops the passport next to the body and goes to the edge to see what Ducky wants. Ducky teases Palmer about parking so close to the building so Ducky can't get the gurney out. When Palmer returns to the body, the passport is gone. He hears a noise and sees a figure moving to his right. He calls out thinking it's McGee. He follows the figure and calls out for Ziva but nobody answers. Palmer hears Ducky call the elevator down but rather than return to the body, keeps looking for the person he saw. The figure moves runs out from behind some pallets and Palmer yells and chases him. The man jumps over the side and as Palmer goes to follow, the man pulls out a gun and shoots at Palmer. Ducky hears the shots and runs towards them. He finds Palmer face down on the ground.

Back at NCIS, Palmer is uninjured but frightened. Gibbs and Vance chat and Vance heads in to interview Palmer. Palmer is flustered and cannot recall anything. When Vance asks him to describe the man, Palmer says the man had beady eyes and look "reptilian." Vance sighs and says "So we're looking for a beady eyed reptile with a big gun?" Vance asks Palmer how many feet they were from each other but Palmer is unable to answer. Palmer begins to draw it out to "triangulate" the crime scene to determine the footage. Vance stops him and sends him home, but orders him to see Abby in the morning.

Tony and Ziva head out to Baxter's address, which is a trailer park. Upon arrival, Tony jokes that they must have missed the twister. The camera pans to an empty lot because someone drove the camper away after Baxter was found dead.

Palmer tries to work with Abby on a computer generated sketch. Abby calls the final sketch "Dr. Jekyll." She erases it and attempts to try again. He feels frustrated with his inability to recall anything and the fact that he didn't stop the guy. Abby tells him he is baby Gibbs, which pleases Palmer.

Gibbs gets updates from the team. They are able to determine that someone made a phone call from the man's phone 4 minutes after Baxter's time of death. Initial reports don't reveal much other than Baxter has no criminal record, hadn't filed tax returns in 10 years. Gibbs points out a 5 foot gallon of a chemical that does not belong on a construction site. He tells Tony to get on it.

Gibbs heads down to autopsy and Ducky reveals the man did not die from the blow to his head. Baxter had been hit in the head and fell on top of the elevator. He lay there and died from the injuries and blood in his lungs. Gibbs realizes the man was alive long enough to have made the last phone call from his cell phone himself. Ducky detected a white substance that Baster had been breathing in. He tells Gibbs he sent the substance up to Abby to analyze.

McGee prints out a lot of color copies of different passports. Once again, Palmer is unable to provide much in the way of details. All he can tell McGee is that it was blue. Palmer feels frustrated and asks McGee if Palmer should have been able to stop the gunman before he got away. McGee politely tells Palmer that he is an experienced NCIS agent so he's the wrong person to ask. This seems to make Palmer feel a little bit better. Palmer wants to try anything to remember so McGee brings him to Abby's lab. Here, Abby tries hypnosis. She gets Palmer to go under and starts to ask him about the passport. Palmer smiles and says he sees brown leather and describes the brand and shoe size. Abby yells at him and tells him to put Ziva's boot down. She tries again and says her name to Palmer. Palmer smiles and describes Abby's boots, brand and shoe size (10). Abby yells at him to pull him out of it. Frustrated, McGee goes to leave as Abby blows out the candles she lit to help Palmer relax. Palmer begs them to try again. The second go round looks to be helpful as Palmer describes a man's face in great detail. Abby and McGee are excited as they come up with a composite sketch. Abby brings Palmer around and shows him the sketch. Palmer says "two shots." When McGee and Abby look at him, he informs them he described the man who makes his coffee in the mornings.

When Abby runs a test on the white substance Ducky sent her, they realize it was something that was in the building. Gibbs realizes the only way Baxter could have inhaled it was by drilling. The team heads to the construction site to see where Baxter had drilled. They discover Baxter had been drilling in the structure beams. They use some high-tech equipment to look through the concrete and discover skeletal remains in one of the support beams.

Abby does more research and calls Gibbs down. She shows him that she was able to match the marks on Baxter's head wound to one of the construction tools. She shows Gibbs an animated demonstration. She also tells him she found traces of copper on the man. Gibbs is pleased and kisses her cheek on the way out.

The team brings back the construction foreman that they had initially interviewed. The man confesses that he was selling the copper for $4 a pound. He had gone back in the wee hours of the morning to get some copper. He was spotted by Baxter, who came after him. He hit him in the head with his cutting tool in self-defense and Baxter fell onto the top of the elevator. The foreman left the scene but not before washing off his tool. As he didn't use bleach, they find traces of Baxter's blood on it. When Palmer goes into the observation room, he informs them that while the man may have killed Baxter, it's not the same man who shot at him.

Palmer is struggling with not remembering the details. He is sitting at a laptop with an email started to his mother telling her "It has been a rough week." Gibbs walks up behind him and startles him. Palmer asks Gibbs how he works through the fear. Gibbs said you don't, it's just what you do with it. Gibbs suggests Palmer hold off on sending the email until later, Gibbs figures Palmer will have something to share then. Gibbs leaves as Palmer discards the email and shuts down his laptop.

Palmer heads up to the office and only Ziva is there. He asks her how someone like him should have handled the situation with the shooter. Ziva demonstrates to him. She hands Palmer a stapler and tells him to pretend to be the shooter. When Palmer aims the "stapler", Ziva pins his head down to her desk and disarms him. When they do it again, Ziva pins him yet again. Ziva jokes and says he should not have chased the man. Palmer notices the scrabble letters in Ziva's open desk drawer. He sees the letters "M" and "I" together and realizes he knows the name on the passport. He brings the scrabble letters to Gibbs and with Ziva's help, they determine the man's name was Milo Suskavcevic.

Gibbs walks into Abby's lab. She is sitting drinking a Caf-Pow with a bowl of popcorn. She is watching a scan for a match on a face. Gibbs pulls up a chair and grabs the bowl of popcorn and watches with her. Abby explains that she was able to take the concrete mold of the skeletal remains and come up with a sketch of what he really looked like. While she's chatting away, she gets a hit on her search. The man is identified by an injury claim, 12 years earlier. The skeletal remains belong to the real Baxter.

Gibbs has the team dig up more information on Baxter. It turns out 12 years earlier Baxter had been injured in a construction accident, sued and was awarded $2.1 million to be paid out over 20 years. Milo had come to the United States, killed Baxter and assumed his identity. He had buried Baxter in one of the support beams of the building as it was being constructed 10 years earlier. With the building undergoing retrofitting, Milo was afraid he'd be found out so he had gone to find the body and pour acid into the beam. This chemical, as we learned, would remove all DNA traces of the victim, allowing Milo to continue his charade. Upon further search, McGee turned up that Milo had come to the US with his brother. He did a search and found the brother was living in yet another trailer park. He pulls the address up on the screen while Gibbs, Ziva and Tony grab their weapons. They begin to head out to find the brother and Palmer tries to follow. Gibbs tells him to stay put, Palmer can see the man when they bring him in.

Gibbs, Ziva, McGee and Tony storm the trailer. They find they'd just missed Milo's brother. A small black car pulls up and idles nearby. In the car sits Palmer, watching the team search the trailer. He is startled when Gibbs pounds on his window, demanding to know what Palmer is doing there. Gibbs orders Palmer to remain in the car and returns to the trailer. A few moments pass when a truck pulls up and stops on the other side. Palmer turns and realizes it's the man who shot at him. The man is watching his trailer and sees Ziva inside searching. The man starts his truck back up and begins to take off. Palmer realizes the man is going to get away so he puts his car and gear and speeds towards the truck. Palmer ends up crashing into the truck to head the man off. As Palmer looks up from the crash, the man looks out his truck window and recognizes Palmer. He reaches for his gun and aims it at Palmer when Gibbs yells for him to put his gun down. Ziva and Tony disarm the man, get him out of the truck and cuff him. Gibbs walks over to Palmer's car and yells at him, demanding to know what he thought he was doing. Palmer simply states that he did not get out of the car. With a slight grin, Gibbs hands Palmer a tissue for his bloody nose and tells him "Now you have something to write home about." Palmer puts the tissue to his nose and grins.

Summary: When a former NCIS agent is found dead, the entire team is put in danger as they hunt after the killer.

Two young boys are playing with a BB Gun. One young boy has the "hots" for the young mail-woman. As she delivers the mail and closes the mailbox, the young boy fires a shot off and hits the back of the mailbox. The door to the mailbox pops open, startling the mail-woman. The two young boys run away and come across a man with sunglasses on a float in his pool. The shoot the float to deflate it and the man sinks to the bottom because he's already dead.

Ziva and Tony go with Director Shepard to attend the funeral of former NCIS Agent William Decker. Decker's death was ruled natural causes; he died of a heart attack. As Jenny is signing the guest book, she hears a man ask for Mr. Oshemyda (?). Jenny stops, takes out her compact and views the man from her mirror. As the man leaves, she follows him taking pictures of him from her camera phone. She is only able to get back and side views of him. Jenny returns to Tony and Ziva and dismisses them, giving them the rest of the trip off. She tells them she's just going to do paperwork. Jenny takes the car and as Tony turns to ditch Ziva, she's already walked away so he runs to catch up.

McGee steps off the elevator in the squad room and has a puzzled look on his face. He walks towards his desk and sees Abby sitting at Ziva's desk. He looks and Ducky is sitting at Tony's desk. He sits down and Abby flicks open a knife, acting like Ziva. Ducky pretends he's Tony. As they pick on McGee, Palmer rounds the corner and heads to Gibbs' desk with a cup of coffee in his hands. They finally admit there is a bug sweep going on and they had to leave. Gibbs walks in as Ducky is making a Tony-type crack about him. McGee hands Gibbs a big envelope that Fornell had left for him. Gibbs takes the envelope and leaves. Ducky heads back to autopsy thanking "probie" for sharing the space.

Jenny pulls into a cheesy motel parking lot and gets out of the car. She is met by former NCIS Agent Mike Franks. After much reluctance, she tells him she thinks Decker was murdered and she believes she's next. She tells him about a special op she and Decker had been on with another agent 10 years prior. They were there to infiltrate a Russian spy ring. She tells him that there was one word the three of them knew if their identities were compromised. She tells him she heard that word at the funeral and tells him about the man asking for Mr. Oshemyda. Oshemyda was the code they used if anything went bad. Franks asks Jenny who the third agent was, who she is protecting. Jenny says "Gibbs." Franks asks where to sign on.

Gibbs walks down to his basement with the envelope from Fornell in hand. He puts the envelope down and opens it to reveal the contents are from The Frog investigation. He goes through the contents of the file.

Tony shows up in his funky Hawaiian shirt and takes photos of the ladies. He sees Ziva lying there in her bikini and takes pictures of her. She is reading book, catching some sun. He teases her about not leaving the hotel when they have time off. She worries that they are supposed to be on security detail and feels guilty so she wants to remain at the hotel. Tony references the movie "Against All Odds" and wants to go cruising. Ziva says he doesn't have a car and he tells her he does. Out front they hop into a nice red mustang with white racing stripes. They head out cruising in L.A.

Jenny and Franks break into Decker's house looking for a clue. Jenny knows he left a clue behind to help her. As she discovers his laptop, they hear a noise coming from a closet. They advance and open the closet door, revealing Decker's 22 year old girlfriend, Sasha, crouching on the floor crying. They assure her they are not there to harm her and that they believe Decker didn't die of natural causes. Jenny realizes Sasha knows this as well. Sasha tells them that Decker told her if anything happened to her, she was to give something to someone. Jenny offers to pass along the message. Sasha takes down a book and removes a bookmark with Jenny's name on it. Not revealing that that's her, Jenny assures Sasha they'll make sure the Director gets it. On the back of the bookmark is the name, address and a key to a diner. Sasha reveals Decker had bought it was going to fix it up the following month. She says Decker left an insurance policy there for Jenny. Jenny encourages Sasha to go and be with family ASAP and gives Sasha the keys to her rental car. Sasha takes the keys and leaves. Jenny says she didn't reveal who she was so Sasha would be safe as the less she knew the better. Franks starts to ask Jenny how it's going to go down and she replies, "Just the way you like it, no paperwork."

Abby has been sent the photos from Jenny. She is working on them but because she has no "front" view of either of the two people Jenny caught photos of (the driver and the man from the funeral), she's at a loss. She turns and begins talking to "Tony" and "Ziva." She has taken janitor buckets with mops, turned the mops upside down and pasted Tony and Ziva's faces on each mop. She says it's to fill the void because they aren't there in person. She explains this to McGee when he walks in and sees her talking to the "mops." McGee brings Abby a Caf-Pow but starts to retreat with it when she won't tell him what she's working on. Abby finally gives in and gets her caffeine fix. When he realizes they can't find out who the two identified people are from the photo, McGee comes up with an idea. He takes the time the photos were taken and pings cell phone calls made from that area as the mystery man was in the process of making a call when Jenny took his photo. Just as they figure out who it is, Jenny calls. Abby tells her the man's name is Viggo Drantsev and they realize that his name is a burn alias. The man didn't exist prior to 3 days before and stopped existing that morning. The Director orders Abby to erase the file and the search. Abby complies as she looks at McGee.

Stuck in traffic, Tony and Ziva bicker. He turns up the radio, she turns it down. She has a funny feeling about leaving the Director and can't shake it. Tony is all about orders and hands Ziva his phone and tells her to call Jenny. She dials the Director's number and puts it on speaker phone. When Jenny answers, Ziva shoves the phone in front of Tony's face, forcing him to talk. Jenny reveals nothing of what's going on and chastises them for bugging her and not enjoying the time off. Before she hangs up, they hear Franks in the background revealing information to the Director. As Tony closes his phone, he says it's probably a roll in the hay. Ziva believes something is going on. Tony teases that she doesn't know about sex so she wouldn't understand. Ziva laughs and says she could tell him stories. He begs her to share and she agrees but only if he calls the L.A.P.D. and asks them to run a trace on the GPS on the Director's rental. Tony agrees.

Gibbs walks into autopsy and stops. Palmer is on the ground performing CPR on a blow-up doll. Gibbs asks him "New girlfriend?" He gives Ducky a look so Ducky excuses Palmer. Gibbs inquires about La Grenouille's autopsy and they both agree it was clear cut, he died from the gun shot wound. Gibbs leaves as Ducky yells out that some things are better left alone. Gibbs goes up to Abby's lab and hands her a photo from the bullet pulled out of La Grenouille's body. She pulls it up on her screen and after some geek chat, she shows him a flaw in the bullet. There are two lines in it that she tells him are from a flaw in the gun that fired it. Gibbs grabs the photo and leaves.

Jenny and Mike Franks show up at the diner. Of course, it's a bit run down in the middle of nowhere. They go in and look around for evidence or the "insurance policy" but have no luck. Franks asks what he's supposed to be looking for and Jenny mentions numbers, photos, etc. Franks points to the wall and tells her there are plenty of photos around. Jenny looks closely at them and realizes the dates on them are wrong. She remembers back to their operation and they had used a code with numbers on photos for messages. She pulls down the photos and writes down the numbers. Franks gets ready to go and Jenny tells him she's not leaving, it's going to end there. He pulls out a gun and tells her she'll need an unregistered gun as he hands it to her. He sits down to wait with her.

Tony and Ziva get the location of the Director's car. They drive to the Santa Monica pier and find nobody in the car and no sign of the Director. As Tony begins to pull out he stops and backs up as they see police cruisers. They exit the car and go down to the crime scene. There they discover a very dead Sasha. After a debate, Ziva calls Jenny back up. She informs Jenny that Sasha is dead, that she had been thrown off the pier at the beach. Jenny claims she's okay and still reveals nothing. Ziva and Tony head to the car and argue about what to do. They finally call McGee to see what he says. McGee teases them but finally agrees to look up the last location of Jenny's cell phone and gives it to them. They head out without telling Gibbs what is going on.

In his basement, Gibbs sits down with the files on La Grenouille's death. He pours himself a drink as he looks at the photo of the bullet. He remembers the scene where he handed Jenny her gun and then the clip. He remembers Jenny handing him back the clip with bullets later in the squad room. After a quick swallow of his drink, he looks down at the clip and removes a bullet from it. He picks up a magnifying glass and discovers the same two identical marks on the bullet as the one that killed La Grenouille. He picks up the phone to call Jenny.

Tony and Ziva pull into a gas station, bickering, as a black SUV pulls out. The mustang was on empty and Ziva thought they would make it. Tony knew they wouldn't so they stopped for gas. She jokes about holding his nozzle when he tells her to make herself useful. She goes in to get a map, directions, donuts and a blue Gatorade for Tony. Once back on the road, Tony thinks they are lost, stops the car, gets out and screams. He gets back in and they head towards the diner.

At the Diner, Jenny and Franks have a heart-to-heart talk about love life regrets. Jenny admits her regret was Gibbs. She admits she is the one who pushed Gibbs away after the Paris operation because he didn't fit into her five year plan. Franks makes a remark about it not being too late and with tears in her eyes, Jenny subtly reveals she's in love with Gibbs without saying it. Franks finally asks if Gibbs knows she's sick. She tells him it's nothing bad but he reveals he searched her car, purse and cell phone so he knows the truth. She finally admits Gibbs doesn't know.

Jenny walks around and finds some very dusty tea and offers to make some. Franks says he has to go to the 'head' so he'll go out and gets some fresh water. While he's out back, the black SUV pulls up in front of the Diner. Four heavily armed men step out and head towards the diner. One goes in the back, one in the side and two in the front. Shots are fired over and over, no screams or shouts are heard as everything goes quiet.

Tony and Ziva pull up to the diner and see the black SUV and remember it from the gas station. As they head towards the diner, they see bullet holes in the door and broken glass. Ziva asks if he still thinks the Director is off having a quickie. They draw their weapons and quietly enter the diner. They immediately spot several of the dead gunmen with bullet wounds to their heads. As Ziva walks around the diner, she sees the Director's reflection in a pool of blood. She calls Tony over and they both look at the Director's blood covered arm. Tony leans down and checks her pulse and finds nothing. The Director's cell phone rings and Tony picks it up; it's Gibbs calling. Tony answers it.

Gibbs is hauling down the highway in a sedan. Over the phone, he tells Tony to stay put until he arrives. A few minutes later he arrives at the crime scene. Tony and Ziva are hauling boxes out of the diner. They both see Gibbs and sadly stare at him. Gibbs starts to yell at them for not staying put when Vance walks out of the diner. Vance says it's his crime scene. Gibbs walks inside and Vance tells him the bodies were removed the day before. Gibbs walks around and stops at the tag labeled "Shepard" and stares at the pool of blood around it. Vance walks up alongside him and apologizes. Vance reenacts the scene to Gibbs, telling him Jenny was standing in the middle of the room. He tells him she got all four of them but took numerous bullet shots before she fell. He tells Gibbs that Ducky will be overseeing the autopsies on all five victims. He says he is heading back to oversee "his" investigation and tells Gibbs, Tony and Ziva to remain behind to follow up on the fifth shooter. They discovered another vehicle had been there along with another shooter. Vance leaves and Gibbs orders Tony and Ziva to investigate Vance's investigation.

Gibbs drives down the road and pulls over at a gas station. Someone pulls up on the other side and Gibbs says, "You're late." Mike Franks says he got there as fast as he could. They go inside the diner and chat. Franks fills Gibbs in on how he got involved and what Jenny knew. Gibbs wants to know where Franks was when Jenny was gunned down. Franks tells him he was out back filling up a pitcher when they arrived. Franks shot the man entering the back of the building and polished off two more with gunshot wounds to the head. Jenny had shot them but Franks wanted to make sure they were dead. Franks told Gibbs about the insurance policy Decker had. He then tells Gibbs that Jenny died protecting him. Franks gives Gibbs the numbers he and Jenny got off the photographs. He also mentions the code name, which tipped Jenny off. When Franks pushes him about loose ends, Gibbs says there were none from the Paris operation. Gibbs admits there were three members for three kills. Gibbs and Decker killed their targets and believed that Jenny killed hers.

Summary: When one of their own is killed, the team must find the killer before they get to another member of the team, Gibbs. In an emotional investigation, the team tries to stay together, against the wishes of Assistant Director Vance.

Tony calls McGee and then sends him photos of the tire marks left by the vehicle that left the crime scene. Tony tells him nothing else. Abby stands in front of him pacing worrying that something is wrong. McGee assures her all is fine when Ducky walks in. Ducky tells her everything is fine as well just when his cell phone rings. Ducky sees it's Gibbs. He answers it and Gibbs tells him Jenny is dead and the bodies are on their way to Ducky. Ducky hangs up and breaks the news to a devastated Abby and a shocked McGee.

In her lab, Abby can't focus. McGee is trying to get her to focus so they can track down the tire marks, the car, etc. Abby wants to know why Tony and Ziva weren't protecting the Director. McGee wonders the same thing when Tony calls. Tony puts pressure on McGee and is short with him. After he hangs up, Tony paces as Ziva looks at him. She tells him it's not McGee's fault. Tony is wracked with guilt over leaving the Director without security.

At his desk, McGee has tracked down the make, model and identity of the vehicle. He has called the rental company and they were emailing him the identification of the man who rented the car. Gibbs calls him just as Mike Franks photo shows up on the screen. Gibbs tells him to erase the file, so McGee does. Gibbs gives McGee the numbers that Jenny found and asks McGee to see if he can find out what they mean. As he hangs up, Vance pokes his head over McGee's shoulder. McGee lies to him and tells him he didn't have a hit yet on the vehicle. Vance tells him to search for another hour and then go home. When Vance walks away, McGee releases a heavy sigh.

While doing a search on the numbers Gibbs gave him, McGee downloads the photos Tony sent him to go through. He's also going through security tapes from LAX Airport to find Viggo's arrival, etc. McGee looks at the photos and sees the ones of Ziva in her bikini and comments on them aloud. Vance walks up behind him. McGee quickly switches screens, shares a little information with Vance before Vance leaves.

Gibbs arrives and heads to autopsy. Ducky and Palmer have just begun to process the five bodies. Ducky stands alongside the Director's body when Gibbs walks in. Gibbs puts his hand on where the Director's face is. Ducky says some kind words but then informs Gibbs Jenny was dying. Ducky says Jenny's death was quick and painless and probably the better way to go rather than how she would have. Gibbs reaches for the zipper and begins to pull it down. He changes his mind, rezips it and leaves before looking.

Tony and Ziva return to the squad room looking down and beaten. McGee makes a remark about them soaking up the sun. Tony takes the offensive and walks towards McGee, taunting him. He takes off his jacket and tosses it on the floor. Ziva walks up and stands beside Tony. McGee says it wasn't their fault and Ziva thanks him. His phone rings and it's Gibbs asking them to come down to Abby's lab.

Abby has gotten the clothing, cell phones, weapons, etc. from the crime scene. Barely able to hold it together, she starts taking the bloody clothing out of the bag. She sees the Director's shirt and loses it. She walks into Gibbs' embrace as he comforts her. Abby says the Director was a great dresser and she never got to tell her. She starts to compliment Gibbs on his clothing style, which gets her a smile. McGee, Tony and Ziva walk in and she compliments them. Just as they start to have a round table discussion, Vance walks in. He leaves with Gibbs hot on his heels. Vance wants to know what Gibbs knows but Gibbs isn't sharing. Vance remarks that they just lost one team member, they could lose more.

Back in the squad room, McGee gets a hit on Viggo in the LAX Security tapes. After some scrutiny, they discover a blonde haired woman entering the same cab as Viggo. McGee puts the woman's photo up on the screen. When Vance asks if anyone knows her, they all say no. He turns to Gibbs, but finds Gibbs has disappeared. Vance orders McGee to call Gibbs so McGee does. Gibbs cell phone is sitting on his desk ringing. Vance then becomes agitated and orders McGee to find out what the series of numbers mean and Tony and Ziva to work on facial recognition for the blonde woman.

Tony and Ziva head to Abby's lab, where Tony is very short with the already sensitive Abby. She looks confused when Tony storms out but Ziva tells her to just work on the facial recognition. Scene shifts to Ziva walking into a dark autopsy room when Tony turns on a light in the corner and says "Surprised it took you so long". He is drinking Ducky's scotch and pulls a second glass out of a desk drawer for Ziva, handing her the bottle. Z: "You're crying over spilled...milk" T: "It's not milk I spilled" T: "She died alone" Z: "We are all alone" T: "I just mean that she never got married, never had any children, never even heard her talk about it...Paris...that's when it must have happened" Z: "The two of them alone, in another world" T: "Putting their lives in each other's hands, every day" Z: "Not to mention the long nights" T: "It was inevitable" Z: "Nothing is inevitable".

They are able to track down the woman's identity. She is Natasha Lencov and up until 1999, she didn't exist. In 1999 she surfaced on the grid and is successful in the import/export business. Vance goes to Abby's lab and they discover Viggo's phone is missing. Vance knows Natasha will call Gibbs as opposed to Gibbs finding her.

McGee gets a hit on the numbers Gibbs gave him. They belong to an old case file of Decker's. When Vance asks him to pull up the records, McGee informs him that that particular year, 1985 wasn't yet put on computer. They head across the street to the archives to get the files. Once there, the man hands over the file box and Vance finds a phone book in it. Turns out Franks had been there an hour before and removed the information with the "insurance policy" Decker had left. However, back in the squad room, they discover her true identity of Natasha is a woman named Svetlana who has ties to a Russian operative/spy. The man had been killed 9 or 10 years prior.

Gibbs enters Jenny's townhouse. He sits at her desk and rifles through the papers on it. He finds a letter addressed to him but it only says "Dear Jethro." He puts Viggo's bloody cell phone on the desk. As he sits there pouring himself a drink, the phone rings and the caller ID is blocked. He answers it and it's Vance. Vance reads him the riot act and as they are talking Gibbs gets another call and it's Natasha. Gibbs answers the phone in Russian. He cuts to the chase and tells Natasha he has what she wants.

Vance has McGee do a trace on Viggo's cell phone and they realize Gibbs is at Jenny's townhouse. Vance orders McGee to erase the file and tells the rest of the team to stay put as he runs out. Ziva, Tony and McGee wonder what they should be doing.

Gibbs puts his gun on the desk and walks over to the bookcase. Without turning around, he says, "Hello Natasha. or should I say Svetlana." It is revealed the Jenny had been sent to kill Svetlana during the Paris operation and never did. It had taken Svetlana years to find out who had killed her beloved and it pointed her to Gibbs. Gibbs admits he had indeed killed the man she'd been involved with. He asks her if Jenny couldn't pull the trigger to kill her, would she be able to kill him. Just as she cocks the hammer on her revolver back, a shot rings out and she falls to the floor. Mike Franks is standing in the doorway with a weapon in hand. When he comes into the room, he nudges towards Gibbs' gun and asks if he'd planned on going for it. Franks says Gibbs will have a lot of explaining to do when Svetlana's body is found. Gibbs says they won't find it.

Gibbs and Franks are walking down a street when fire trucks zoom by. Gibbs watches them head around a corner towards the fire. Just then, a car door opens and Vance steps out. He approaches and confronts Gibbs and Franks. He asks Franks where the file is and Franks says he'll give it to him, in his will. He laughs and walks off. As Franks stands down the road lighting a cigarette, Gibbs watches the television screen through a shop window. Back in the office, Ziva, McGee and Tony watch the same newflash. They are showing the fire at the home of Director Jenny Shepard.

Back in the squad room, the team steps off the elevator all dressed up in black. They just came from Jenny's funeral. They look to the television screen as the reporter claims Jenny died in her home due to an explosion from a gas leak. The reporter announces that Vance was named the new Director of NCIS. Gibbs looks up and sees Vance heading towards his office.

Vance pulls out a file on himself and removes a sheet of paper and shreds it. He puts the file back and locks the cabinet. He then takes the Director's photo of her father off the desk and puts it away. He asks Cynthia to call up McGee, DiNozzo, David and Gibbs. All four walk into his office and only Gibbs will look him in the eye. Vance has tossed three files on his desk. Vance informs Ziva that the agreement with the Mossad office for the liaison has been terminated - she is to return home immediately. He tells McGee that he is being transferred to the Cyber Crimes unit. Then informs DiNozzo that he is being transferred to the USS Ronald Reagan and leaves the next morning. He hands the three file folders to Gibbs and says "Meet your new team."

Production Code: 114
Summary: When a petty officer is found murdered, Gibbs learns about the mysterious connection between the disbanding of his team and the case.

Gibbs new teams settles in. Keating, Langer and Lee. Gibbs is clearly not happy with his new team and missing his old one. The team gets the call to go out as a very bad smelling, rotting corpse has been found in a trailer. Gibbs tells the "B" team (as Ducky calls them later) "get your gear." They all look at him and he has to tell them they are going out in the field. They slowly get their stuff together as Gibbs gives his famous stare up at Vance who is watching from the top of the stairs. Just as Gibbs reaches the elevator, the doors shut. Lee hits the button to reopen the door and all three apologize, with Langer making excuses for Lee saying she kept hitting the wrong button. Gibbs gets in the elevator and faces the door, rolling his eyes as the doors close.

Ziva is seen in a small cantina in Morocco in a revealing dress singing "Temptations" switching easily from English to French mid song. She starts noticing that several people have gotten up and left so she quickly scans the room. She then spots and abandoned briefcase under a table and before she can do anything it explodes.

At the crime scene, Lee is taking photos and Palmer gets in the way. They exchange a longing glance until Keating calls Lee over to the victim's truck. They find a briefcase with approximately $5,000 in cash and other items which leads them to believe that the victim was running. Inside the trailer, Ducky is looking at the victim's body and tells Gibbs that the man died of a single gunshot wound to the head. The victim had been sleeping and the killer used a pillow to silence the gunshot. Everyone wonders why nobody smelled the body as the victim had been dead for approximately four months.

Back in the squadroom, Gibbs is watching CNN raw newfeed about the death of sailor Brian Roberts. As he is watching someone gasps and he watches closely and sees a familiar face on a stretcher. He freeze frames the picture. Agent Lee says "Isn't that Ziva?"

Agent Afloat

Season 6
Episode Number: 115
Season Episode: 2

Originally aired: Tuesday September 30, 2008
Writer: Dan E. Fesman, David North

Guest Stars: Marc Jablon (Navy Lieutenant Jonah Kaplan), Anthony Brandon Wong (Navy Captain Doctor Russell Nguyen), William Marquez (Doctor Javier Delgado), Rene L. Moreno (Hector Cruz), Kate Lacey (Navy Ensign Christina Solomon), Roberto Sanchez (Jose), Austin Priester (Navy Lieutenant Bryce Armstrong), Julie Dickens (Console Operator), Ward Roberts (Pilot), James Martinez (Navy Lieutenant Eduardo Almeida), Eric Nenninger (Navy Corpsman Taylor Henley), Chris Mulkey (Navy Captain Richard Owens), Ariel Mirabal-Ramos (Ensign)
Production Code: 115
Summary: While investigating a mysterious suicide of a Navy Lieutenant aboard an aircraft carrier, DiNozzo learns that the suicide may actually be a part of a much deadlier scheme.

Cold opening shot is of the USS Seahawk steaming across the briny sea on a clear blue sky day, big white wash marking its path. It is an aircraft carrier, so its deck is a runway. Interior shot is of our intrepid Agent Afloat, DiNozzo, racing through the ship, up stairs, yelling "coming through" and "make a hole" as he runs. On the tannoy (sound speakers) we hear the order 'Agent Afloat to the fantail. Agent Afloat to the fantail' repeatedly. Tony arrives at the fantail (the part of the runway/deck that is cantilevered over the water), where he finds the folded uniform and ID badge of an officer. Tony asks did anyone see him jump? No.

In the squadroom, we have a very bored Tim and Ziva who are staring forlornly at the empty desk of DiNozzo. Gibbs turns up and says that he has heard from Tony. Tee and Zee are deployed to see the wife of the missing sailor. They go to her house: she fails to answer the door. So they look through the window and espy a dead woman on the floor.

Ducky arrives at the crime scene and notes that there is 'snot' in the victim's hair. The body is very beaten, much blood and the room awry. Tim diagnoses a violent altercation. Ziva and Gibbs are sceptical: Gibbs asks whether there is broken glass under the body? Tim says no, and Ziva points out that the scene is staged to look like a fight. Tim is reminded that his investigative skills atrophied during his sojourn in the sub-basement cyber crimes unit. Tim is somewhat dejected. However, he redeems himself when Ducky starts to observe that the bruising is not as it should be on someone who was beaten to death and Tim cuts in that it means that the blows were delivered post-mortem (after death) and he looks at Gibbs and asks "Right?". Gibbs smiles and does that little bounce on the balls of his feet that indicates that he is particularly pleased.

Back in the bullpen, Abby has a prognostication moment, predicting that Tony is coming back which is why she is unpacking his office stuff onto his desk, including his MIGHTY MOUSE STAPLER (which deserves recurring role status in the credits). Gibbs takes the hint and visits Vance. Vance offers Gibbs a choice of two other officers to replace DiNozzo who is deployed at sea for another 3 months and it was time that he did a stint afloat after 7 years. Gibbs is unimpressed but leaves with the two files in hand. Vance is being a boss (he is not a Jenny and, happily, he does not flirt with Gibbs to get his will. But he does play games).

Back on board the USS Seahawk, we find Tony going through Lt Evans (the wet sailor) stuff and pondering why he failed to unpack (not even his toothbrush. This turns out to be a CLUE). His bunkmates never met him because they are on different watches. Having met one bunkmate, Tony goes looking for the other, Caplan. He finds Caplan in a poker game and Tony gives them three seconds to clear the money off the table (gambling for money must be against Navy rules, but playing cards is not). Caplan says that the missing man was supposed to be on duty one night but left, ill, after one hour. Said the man was a nutjob with a thousand yard stare (he looks through you). While talking, a sailor brings a message to DiNozzo from Washington, DC (telling him that the wife has been found dead, and she died before Lt Evans left Washington DC). Tony rushes off to the sick bay to visit the medics.

In the sickbay we learn that the doctor has been investigated by DiNozzo for overprescribing painkillers and so there is no love lost between them. Tony just takes the file of Lt Evans.

In the bullpen, Tim has been trying to pull up files to the plasma screen for Gibbs but is struggling because Keating changed his macro functions on his computer. Gibbs resorts to just looking over Tim's shoulder to see the files that show that Lt Evans was spending lots of money and was going on exotic holidays (This is a CLUE). Tim keeps trying to work out what Keating has done to his computer (and gets overexcited when he finally pulls up the files to the plasma...but Gibbs has already gone.)

On the way to MTAC, Abby overhears that Gibbs is going to talk to Tony and gets very excited. She starts telling Gibbs news that he needs to tell Tony ("Can you tell him that Sister Rosita pulled a 260 last month, and I finally saw.." "It's not a social call, Abby"). Gibbs leaves Abby behind but Ziva dogs his steps too. He stops, turns, glares and she realises that she also is not allowed to get to see Tony on the MTAC system.

In MTAC, DiNozzo tells Gibbs what his report says (the one he emailed to Gibbs, which Gibbs of course failed to read it because he doesn't bother with his e-mails (smart man)). We know that Lt Evans was spending money down in Colombia after he supposedly joined the ship, so the question is who is in Mexico spending the sailor's money?

Gibbs visits Vance's office to make the case for Tony going to Colombia, given that he was in port doing threat assessments for two weeks before the USS Seahawk sailed again. Vance is sceptical and sees it as a ruse to get Tony off the ship, but he concedes that Tony can go to land for one day to investigate.

Colombia, in a bar, we see that Tony is on good terms with the bar owner, but we soon realise that Tony is not fooled by the barman: he puts on pressure to get the answers as to who used Lt Evan's credit card. A bad man in the corner is fingered. Tony looks. Bad man runs. Tony, informed by the intrepid bar owner, takes a shortcut and, very Gibbsly, manages to arrest the man without having to do any running himself. The man confesses that he stole the card when he found it on the ground nearby.

Nearby, on empty waste land, Tony and the bad man approach. Tony handcuffs the bad man to a convenient fence and goes looking in the dirt. He finds a shoelace, lifts it, bringing up a shoe, attached to a foot, attached to a leg. The leg is dead, as is its owner whose face is uncovered almost 2m north of the boot. It is our missing Lt Evans. This begs the question "Who sailed on the USS Seahawk?" and, worse, "what dastardly thing is the imposter doing on a US naval ship?" This is the tenor of the phone conversation between Tony and Gibbs.

In MTAC, Gibbs and Vance talk to the Seahawk's captain, alerting him that someone came on board impersonating Lt Evans and faked his suicide...the guy is still on the ship. Lt Evans job was to do checks on ship security. They tell the captain to let Tony continue his investigation when he's back aboard...they don't want to alert people on board. They suggest he starts verifying the ship personnel. Vance turns to Gibbs and tells him to pack a bag...he's going to the Seahawk to help Tony.

In the squadroom McGee is still dealing with the emnants of Keating...his old computer talks to him saying "Good Morning, Agent Keating!" Gibbs' phone is ringing, so McGee answers...it's Tony from Cartagena. Tony starts complaining to McGee about his new job...McGee tries to interrupt to tell him Gibbs & Ziva are on their way to Cartagena, but Tony continues to ramble and complain. Vance enters the bullpen, suspects Tony is on the phone and puts the speakerphone on, while Tony rants about Vance putting him on the ship. DOH! Vance reminds Tony they need the autopsy report from the Cartagena M.E., but Tony says the M.E. doesn't like Americans or, maybe, just him. They finally tell him Gibbs and Ziva flew out last night. Tony asks when are they arriving and Gibbs answers...Tony turns around and there they are! (BIG Tony smile).

Down in Abby's lab, McGee is having trouble accessing the Lt's laptop. Meanwhile, Abby's test says that the stuff in the wife's hair really is snot which has a rare spore in the mucous and provides a moment for fun puns on "It's snot!" "It's not what?" "It's snot.". McGee finally gets into the laptop, saying he got new skills in the cyber lab, emphasising that he spent a long time down there. Abby looks forlornly at the photo of Tony on the wall and the number 132...the number of days he's been gone. (It was 126 in the previous episode, by the way.)

In Cartagena, Gibbs, Tony and Ziva head into the ME's office, with Tony trying to get them to admit they missed him. While Gibbs is on the phone, Ziva says Tony looks older. She asks if he still feels guilty about Jenny - yes but not as much as before. Still drinking? - yes but not as much as before. Gibbs says the COB is on his way from the ship. Tony suggests Ziva handle the ME and, proving Tony's instincts correct, the ME proves to be smitten with Ziva who flirts with him in Spanish. Gibbs and Tony observe the body and note that both the Lt and the wife were killed the same way. Abby and McGee call Gibbs about a coded emails they found on the Lt's laptop...he had an ongoing correspondence with someone in Singapore. Someone posing as Lt Evans sent another email a few hours ago: it contained references to the USS Seahawk and the medicine that combats anthrax. (Uh oh!)

Back on the Seahawk, Gibbs, Ziva and Tony arrive and speak to the Captain...they're still trying to verify the ship's personnel. They're concerned about the air and water supply. The imposter is probably taking the anthrax med to protect himself. Gibbs sends Tony to talk to the comms room worker about Evans. Ziva goes with him, but as she is about to leave Tony's working space, she sees three pictures of her in her bikini from LA (including one that is solely of her hip and thigh in a bikini) and one of Abby: these are posted on Tony's office wall next to the door (prominent position). She asks why he has them posted and he says he doesn't know. The Seahawk captain has posted extra personnel in the vulnerable areas, but tells Gibbs he'll only give him 12 hours before he takes over the investigation on his ship. Lt Kaplan is not in the comms room: the person there says he worked at a highly restricted computer that required a key card and passcode and to which none of the others had authority to access.

Ziva and Tony on their way to the comm room, Ziva says McGee was supposed to destroy the bikini photos. Tony defends McGee, saying he had it particularly hard, how much he missed everyone, etc. (Seems like Tony is actually talking about himself)

Gibbs is questioning the officer of the deck and she's sure she verified Lt Evans i.d. with his face. She explains how long she has worked as officer of the deck and how many thousand people she has seen onto the ship: she is certain that there's no way she let a civilian on board, because she knows how a sailor walks, talks and even how they carry their bag.

In MTAC, McGee slips in to talk to Vance, who is seated in the raked theatre seats. McGee sits behind him, talking very quietly into Vance's ear, and tells him he can get into a copy of the restricted Seahawk database. Vance points out the illegality of this and the risk involved but McGee says the risk is minimal because all he has been doing lately is cracking codes and firewalls and, simply put, he won't get caught. Vance very carefully does NOT say ok. He says nothing. (and that means that he did not issue an order not to do it, so McGee, who now has better instincts than when he was a probie, rightly interprets it as permission so long as he does not get caught).

On the Seahawk in Tony's office, Gibbs says the ship's crew has been verified. Gibbs suspects Lt Kaplan as either being in on the murders or being the killer, himself: he could have checked in as himself, then again as Evans. Evans' restricted clearance would give Kaplan access to vulnerable areas and he tells Tony to find Kaplan. Tony, without being smug, turns on the TV to show a shipwide broadcast asking anyone who has info on Kaplan (shows photo) to call him. Gibbs asks if Tony has a Plan B. Tony stutters (ha ha ha, busted!) Someone calls. Tony takes the call and happily reports that Plan B is not necessary because Plan A has worked: Lt Kaplan is in the infirmary, he was found collapsed by his bunkmates. The Doctor comes out of the intensive care cubicle, and tells Gibbs and Tony that they had to induce a coma due to brain swelling but they don't know what's wrong. Could it be anthrax? The Doctor is coughing. (hmmm!) Kaplan is going to be evacuated off the ship via a med-evac plane. Ziva is reading Kaplan's medical chart and tells the others that Kaplan's not the murderer because he left DC 2 days before Evans' wife was killed.

On the Seahawk, Tony and Ziva are going through Lt Kaplan's bunk. They find morphine. Did he OverDose (O.D.)? Tony starts pining for DC: Ziva tells him to stop whining. He says she's back in DC like she wanted but, surprisingly, she says she's just following orders. Tony is perplexed at her apparent lack of enthusiasm at being back in NCIS. He thinks something happened in Israel, but she won't talk about it: he is wondering what/who (and we probably think it is unresolved things to do with her dear old deadly dad, but are we right?). Gibbs enters, says the doctor says it's not anthrax. Tony shows the vial of morphine, perhaps someone is trying to clean up loose ends, killing Kaplan. Abby calls Gibbs: the spore in the snot is a strain of the flu, particular to the American Samoan region of the South Pacific. Gibbs wants to access the ship's medical records. Tony says McGee isn't there. Gibbs points to him and says, "You!" (Tony looks uncertain and unconfident).

Back in DC in the cyber basement, McGee is working, when Abby comes in ranting that Vance reassigned him again and that it is not logical. McGee has a eureka moment at the word "logical". He and Abby breakthrough by using a "logic bomb" to access the restricted records.

Back on the Seahawk, poor Tony is trying to access the medical records and to his and our relief, he finally gets in. No one reported the flu. They search on those from American Samoa: of the 6 sailors who have been there, 3 boarded in Cartagena and 1 from DC. They head to sickbay. Abby and McGee call and found a breach in the system: someone ordered a ton of cipro (antibiotic), but only half made it to the ship and they figure the rest is on the way to Singapore for the black market. The security break on board ship and the deaths of the Evans couple is not about terrorism, it is to make money. (which is somehow more comforting, even though it remains dastardly).

In sickbay, they discover Henley (medical tech) called in sick and Kaplan is being medivaced off the ship. The doctor is sick with the flu, now. Gibbs sees fluids leaking from under a door and finds Kaplan inside: he's still alive. Gibbs rushes out to the medevac launch area: Tony and Ziva follow. Henley is in the medevac flight, but the pilot holds back from taking off, on receiving orders via Tony's phone call. Dastardly Henley is holding a gun to the pilot's head, so the medivac plane keeps taxiing while the back door shuts, but not before Gibbs jumps inside! (GO GIBBS) Henley is holding a gun on the pilot telling him to launch now. Gibbs jumps out and tells Henley to drop his weapon. Gibbs tells Henley he knows he and Evans were in on the drug deal together, until the wife found out about it. Henley killed her after Evans deployed, then he tried to talk to Evans about it, but he wouldn't go for it. Henley won't drop the gun and says the plane HAS to take off. Gibbs threatens him asking if he really wants to fly? Gibbs tells the pilot to ask for clearance to take off on his order. In the ship at the communications, Tony overrides the other officers' reluctance to let an armed man get away: the plane is cleared for launch. Those of us who have seen early episodes where Kate learned about short-runaway takeoff and landings are able to understand what is afoot, as Gibbs grabs onto some rigging inside the plane: it whips into launch, but Henley isn't prepared and goes flying backwards through the body of the plane from the force of the launch. (LOL!) Gibbs cuffs him where he lands.

Walking through the ship, Tony and Ziva head to sickbay, where Henley is being treated for scrapes and bruises. Gibbs tells Tony to grab his gear because he's riding with the prisoner back home. Tony's eyes widen, he is perfectly still, then he is so excited, he bolts through the ship (just as he did in the opening scenes) but this time it is to pack. (Ahhh, lovely Gibbs smile...he's amused. He got the reaction he hoped for.)

Back in DC, in the director's office Gibbs asks Vance whether Tony is permanently reassigned. Vance seems minded to make Tony go back to the ship. Vance says the reassignment was never a punishment. Down in the squadroom, Gibbs enters and Tony asks if he talked to Vance, but Abby interrupts, excited that Tony is there. She asks Tony if he's back permanently and Tony confirms it, saying that Dir. Vance just told him. Gibbs looks at him, then turns his head and looks up at the mezzanine balcony. Uh oh...Gibbs seems a bit miffed that Vance was letting him think Tony had to go back to the Seahawk for the rest of his temp assignment. Gibbs looks hard at Vance who merely wryly smiles, nods and walks away. (Has Gibbs met his match in the inscrutable stakes?).

Recurring Role: Sheila Frazier (ZNN Reporter Debra Green)
Guest Stars: Jeff Barnett (David), Sara Sanderson (Tiffany), Bill Sage (Reed Talbot), William Bumiller (Admiral Charles Graves), Marcus Chait (Cole Erickson), Susan Floyd (Lynn Tripp Kiley), Tim DeKay (Senator Patrick Kiley)
Production Code: 116
Summary: When Senator Patrick Kiley seeks Gibbs' help to solve the murder of a young Naval officer, the NCIS team find themselves pushed inside the world of Washington politics.

In Park: A couple race each other on bikes over hills and jumps. They stop and the man challenges the woman to a race back to the car. During the race, the man's bike hits a fallen tree, which sends him off his bike and into a nearby river or small creek. As the woman looks out at the man in the water, she notices a dead body in a military uniform floating near the man. The man then turns around and also notices the body of the dead female.

In the Squadroom: Ziva presents Abby with a cupcake, and thanks her for letting her sleep at her house the previous night. Tony gets a little jumpy and asks for further details on their night together. He asks McGee who tells him to stay out of it. Gibbs then comes in and says that a female naval Lieutenant Commander was found dead in the park. The team then grab their gear and head out to the park.

At the Park: Ducky realizes that the victim was shot in the back and bled out on a solid surface, he says that he will know more when he gets her back to autopsy when it begins to show signs of a storm coming soon. As Ducky races to beat the storm, Gibbs gets a phone call and races away from the scene, leaving Tony and Ziva to wonder what he's up to.

Along The River: Senator Kiley talks to Gibbs about his connection to the dead Lt. Cmdr. and admits that he was having an affair with her. He says he's coming forward because he realizes that the evidence would point to him and he believed that someone was trying to frame him. He asks Gibbs to leave his name out of the case so that a bill he is working on can be passed, but Gibbs says he'll see what he can do.

In The Victim's House: Tony and Ziva find evidence that she was having an affair with a married man, and become suspicious when they notice that he does not sign his name or have pictures anywhere in the house. They notice a birthday card in which the man signed "you know who" instead of his name. Gibbs then walks in and they brief him on what they found.

Gibbs' connection to the Senator means that he behaves oddly in the eyes of the A-Team. A visit to the Senator's house let's us meet his chief of staff who is as loyal as a St Bernard to the Senator. The Senator's wife comes to see Jethro at his house: she knows the doorbell never works, that the door is unlocked and that he will be in the basement and she knows to ask for hard liquor. The conversation reveals that she and the Senator (who was once the rookie Lieutenant that Gunny looked after, and whose Dad was known to Gibbs) were "there for Gibbs" when Shannon died (We all find this very hard to believe: they are not Gibbs' type of people, but it gives a reason for her to visit the basement and speak 'off the record').

She swears to Gibbs that her husband is not the sort of man who could shoot someone in the back. Gibbs sends her home to her hubby whom she has been avoiding. She knew about the affair all along.

All evidence is pointing to the Senator, including faked voicemails to the Director's voicemail box, which McGee is asked to analyse: he discovers it is an automated voice. (You type in the words on the computer and it reads them out).

The gun had been found by McGee and DiNozzo, in the wastewater ditch near the scene of the crime (McGee fell in and on top of the gun. He found it with his posterior.) The voicemails allude to the gun and ask why the Senator has not been arrested: it looks like a frameup.

Meanwhile, back in the mysterious world of Sciuto, our Princess of the Dark Side has been using her forensic skills to gather evidence as to who stole her cupcake. She collects crumbs off Gibbs coat (he is astonished), she creates a crime-scene (complete with tape) in her lab (the cake was in her fridge). She creates a photo wall of suspects (which Gibbs is astonished to see includes not only Gibbs but also the night janitor...which Abby says is on the grounds that he has put on weight lately (but there hasn't been a night yet for the guy to come to work, find the cake and steal it.). This sub-plot continues throughout the episode. Abby collects mouth swabs from all the Giblets, including Ziva who gave her the cake in the first place. She also dusts for fingerprints. She cunningly works out whodunit...revealed later.

Back to the main story: as you suspected, there is a twist: the Senator's chief of staff is found dead, with a plastic bag over his head, diazepam in his system, a suicide note and the appropriate stuff to have made the fake calls.

The Senator happens by the crime-scene and talks to Gibbs. Director Vance tells Gibbs that the Senator is going to make a press statement in 2 hours. Vance gets the feeling that Gibbs is unconvinced by the murder then suicide picture that they have been given. Gibbs says 2 hours is a lot of time to solve a case and pursues it.

Finally we see Gibbs attend the press conference at the Senator's house with Vance, but instead of supporting, he tells the Senator that he wants to arrest him. The Senator confesses but Gibbs isn't buying it. He challenges the wife and points out that she knew the lover was shot in the back, which is a detail not revealed publicly. She could only know if she did it. She confesses that it was a moment of madness. Gibbs points out that staging the suicide of the Chief of Staff was coldblooded murder. Gibbs is not minded to spare the couple the walk of shame to the police cars. The arrest is captured on TV.

Meanwhile, Abby has solved her case and confronts...McGEE! Who vehemently denies wrongdoing by pointing out that he would never leave a fingerprint at the crime scene because he knows that Abby would be able to check it. And she agrees: there was no fingerprint in the fridge but there was only one fingerprint on the new box of latex gloves other than Abby's own print. McGee used the new box of gloves to cover his hands in order to steal the cake. He gets head-slapped by Tony and Ziva but Abby asks "How was it?" and he makes her drool. She is then mad but Gibbs walks in and says 'get over it'.

Final scene: Director Vance and Gibbs watch that walk of shame on the evening news, in the Director's office. Gibbs is looking mighty depressed (he dislikes breach of trust and acts of disloyalty). Director notes this and when Gibbs says that loyalty is crucial, Vance asks how does Gibbs see their own trust and loyalty? Gibbs just stares.

Guest Stars: Ralph Waite (Jackson Gibbs)
Production Code: 117
Summary: Secrets from Gibbs' past are revealed when the NCIS team has to travel back to his hometown to resolve a murder investigation.

Two marines are attacked outside a nightclub, out of the blue, unprovoked. Their senior marine finds them: one alive, one dead.

Team at the crime scene: Ducky arrives in blacktie as if going to the opera, and he is very happy, singing to himself. It is daytime. There is banter about "A night at the opera", an allusion to the Marx Bros film with Tony. Then Ducky goes into ME mode (Without Mr Palmer. Again.). There was one fatal lucky blow to the sternum but the other person, who suffered more blows, is alive. So difficult to fathom luck. Gibbs and Ducky work out, back in autopsy, that the intended victim was Ethan (the survivor) and the dead guy just had bad luck. Abby receives the evidence in the lab, including personal effects. There is a ring from Stillwater High. Tony is ecstatic. He knows that that is Gibbs' hometown because he hacked into the records for Gibbs (and cannot believe that the others never did). Gibbs does indeed plan to take the team to Stillwater: but having realised how intensely curious Tony is, he leaves him behind. Tony is dejected, unbelieving and hang-dog. He has to chase down leads with Abby. In Stillwater, the Sherriff turns up and we just know that Gibbs had a hard time when he was a kid in this town.

They drive on to the aunt's house. Gibbs and McGee go up to the house but leave Ziva on the pavement to check in with Tony by phone. G&McG meet the aunt who is sanguine about her nephew: he died. McGee apologises that they didn't mean to give that impression: he is in hospital.

Aunt is ecstatic: she thought he had died in the forces 4 years ago. He's alive? She cannot wait to go and see him. The whole town thought he was dead! Off she goes.

Meanwhile on the pavement, Ziva is approached by a whitehaired old man (played by Ralph Waite) who tells her that she is unlikely to get reception in this part of town on her mobile phone. He butters her up (he coats her with lard and bastes her in oil, frankly). She succumbs to his charm. She is curious. He knows about NCIS. He introduces himself as Jackson.

Out come Gibbs and McGee from the house, up the driveway to the street. Gibbs walking in his usual deliberate, cautious style: looking hard at the visitor.

Word travels fast.

That it does, when people open their mouths and speak with each other. You don't call. You don't write. Were you going to come by and say "Hi"?

Hi Jack.

Hi Leroy.

Ziva. McGee: Jackson Gibbs. My father. (you should see Ziva's eyes zoom from Jackson to Gibbs: eyes wide. Pfunf on Gibbs' stoic face)

McGee in the family store: "Pretty nice setup you've got here Mr Gibbs". "You have to stay up to date otherwise you conceded to time, inch by inch."

Ziva admires his Nepal mountaineering trips. "I always make it a point to return home after each of my trips. Unlike some people I know.

Jackson To McGee: "Does he ever talk about me, my boy?"

"I think I once heard him refer to you as dead"

"you must have been mistaken McGee"

"Er...yes, I think he probably said "Dad""

McGee asks "Hey what is the story on that picture there? Looks interesting.

" Grand opening of the store. LJ and I opened it after too many close calls in the store.

LJ?

Leroy Jethro.

Gibbs enters the store (the bells rings).

Can I get you something to eat Leroy?

Can't. Case.

I can help you with that.

The banter continues with tales of LJ working in the garage on a car he spent all his money on: He'd spend all of his time out in the garage working on some project. We didn't even have electricity out there McGee, sotto voce to Ziva: "I can picture it"

Gibbs and Dad decide to go interview the owner of the local mine, whose daughter dated Ethan. They drive off in a car, waved off by Giblets. As soon as car has gone, they turn and race into the general store: Ziva to phone Tony, McGee to E-mail Abby. We see A and T in the lab. T gets stillwater phone call. A gets McG on the screen: so Z and McG announce that they have news:

"Gibbs has a father!"

Reply in unison: "Tell me everything"

Tony and Abby head to Stillwater.

They take DNA from all the people who are connected to the coalmine owner and it turns out that the injured marine was actually the son of the owner, so that is the reason he kept his daughter and the injured marine. Ethan, from dating (well folks, it is a small town...).

Alas, the son-in-law (daughter's husband) always doubted he was the father of the child, so he turns out to have signed off to coalminers on a day that they were not at work (gave them an alibi by signing their time sheets): he paid them to kill our injured marine. BUT in a sad twist, the DNA shows he should have believed his wife when she said the kid was his. He attacked Ethan for no good reason and committed conspiracy to murder.

Gibbs and Giblets are heading back to town. Tony is in a cardigan that zips up (and thanks Jackson for the cardy).

Tony wants to ask some questions and Gibbs says he can have two. Tony says "Where do I start?" and Gibbs says you have one left. Tony tries to argue that the first questions does not count. He gives up and asks his question.

"The rules, did her learn them from you, I mean did you teach him all the rules?"

Jackson says "I'm sorry son, I didn't teach him much of anything".

Gibbs takes car keys from Tony and says "he taught me how to drive" and Tony complains about having to sit on the hump in the middle of the back seat, because, you know, he's got that "thing" he told Gibbs about...) But Jackson intervenes and hands car keys to Gibbs. It is the keys to the car that Gibbs started working on when he was a teen. And now it works, and it is Gibbs' to drive. Not much use it sitting in the garage. And Gibbs takes the keys (in the leather case just like my dad used to use for his keyring).

Then Jackson says he knows Gibbs only likes few words, so tells Gibbs to phone sometimes. Gibbs says "It's the least I can do".

And Jackson says "Goodbye son" and looks anguished at saying goodbye.

And Gibbs gives him a half-nelson type hug (elbow in the air over Dad's shoulder, forearm pulling dad's head towards Gibbs' shoulder) so Gibbs can lean in and whisper in Dad's ear "Bye Dad".

And next we see Gibbs in yellow sporty car with the big black decal on the hood, and he pulls up near the railway station, looks at the empty platform seat, and pictures a young himself and a young lady with long red hair. And they speak, awkwardly, and his young self says that they can sit together on the train. And she says it's against her rules to sit with lumberjacks. But he is a very young marine in uniform, so she makes an exception. Asks his name: Leroy Jethro Gibbs. She says I will call you Gibbs. And she says her name is...

Shannon.

(Pfunf on a Gibbs still staring into the middle distance at the empty seat on that platform, red white and blue bunting fluttering in the smalltown breeze of times past).

Summary:	While on the hunt after a marine's brutal murderer, the NCIS team and Gibbs find themselves working against FBI Agent Fornell yet again.

Scene opens with a woman jogging then returning home to find her car tire flattened. She opens her car hatch to find the jack missing as well. After knocking on the neighbor's door and no answer, she lets herself into his garage and grabs onto a couple of different tools and immediately putting each down and wiping some 'slime' off onto her jogging suit. Groping around she finds and turns on a drop light. First she is sickened to find blood all over the tools she had just touched, but then lets out a horrified series of screams when she discovered her neighbor hanging by his hands, sliced multiple times and obviously dead.

The team do their forensics on the crime scene. They detect extra fingerprints on the bloody toolbox. They realise that the man was tortured for information.

Fingerprints lead to the marine's sergeant: he is Kale. Gone off the radar for last three weeks.

Team traces him to a house. Storm it and find...Fornell there, protecting Kale as a key witness in a case that goes to trial very soon. Gibbs interviews Kale but he was being guarded at the time of the murder.

Gibbs knows Kale is telling lies but how can that be?

Fornell wont give details of the case on which Kale is the witness. McGee hacks the FBI database and finds out it is a mafia case and the bad guy has escaped justice everytime that Fornell has tried to get him in the past. There is long history with Fornell and he is not going to give up his witness for a mere marine murder. Gibbs does not like this. Abby finds mould on the rope used in the torture. The mould is having sex (honest: it is breeding!). Gibbs is a bit put off by Abby's interest in the joys of mouldy sex.

McGee is much more interested.

Ziva is planning a trip to Israel. Tony is consumed with curiosity.

Kale escapes. Gibbs and Fornell track him down using GPS in mobile phone.

Kale runs.

They catch him.

Kale says "I didnt do it"

Gibbs and Fornell detect a rat: they go back to the place where Kale ran from: there is another tortured dead marine who was buddy to Kale. Gibbs is suspicious. Ducky says "dont be: the body has been dead longer than the time since Kale escaped. Kale could not have done it". Gibbs is still suspicious but concedes that someone else killed this marine.

The bad mafia guy is approached by Gibbs. He establishes how bad the bad guy is. Horribly well dressed bad.

Gibbs orders Giblets to reexamine the original murder for which the bad guy mafioso is on trial: and Giblets with Abby discover that Kale could not have witnessed the event, as the street lamp was blown and there was no light by which to see. Therefore in interrogation, Gibbs and Fornell find out that kale merely said he had seen it, but really it was the two dead marines who had seen it. The dead marines were buying drugs when the mafia guy killed the dealer. Kale was protecting his men. Fornell points out that this was not a successful strategy as they are both dead and the guy who killed them will now walk free! Good point, Fornell.

Gibbs tells Fornell to not give up. Fornell is clearly depressed by the turn of events.

Kale escapes again. G and F race to the court because they know that K is now going to assassinate Mafioso. He does. F does not stop it. G arrests K. Kale says he had to do it. Gibbs says he knows why he did it: but Gibbs is sad as he knows the marine will go to jail. (but we also know he could put in a plea that the drugs made him do it...he has a medical condition and his drugs affect his brain).

Ziva goes off on holidays. Tony is intrigued and kinda sombre about it. She is flying first class. It is the first that Tony begins to realise that either Ziva or the boyfriend (whose photo Tony has found hidden in Ziva's desk mess) is very wealthy.

End scene: Fornell in a waiting area in a federal building. Gibbs enters. It is evening. Fornell is waiting to see his Director. Gibbs has come to show support. Gibbs notes that Fornell would do the same. Fornell observes "She said you would be here" "Who?" "Our ex-wife". Gibbs just looks.

A pretty woman comes to summon Fornell to see the Director.

The TV in the waiting room continues playing the news of yesterday's outrageous murder in broad daylight. It notes that, overnight, there were murders of others in the mafia, as new boss tries to emerge. The main contender is the henchman of the dead guy: we already know him! He was mean to Gibbs when Gibbs confronted the mafioso in the street. The final punf is on this guy and so we expect to see more of his dastardly ways in future eps.

Summary: The NCIS team is forced to investigate a crime during Halloween where a psychotic murderer leaves clues of its next victim's identity on the net.

A female marine arrives home and hears sound. We see flashes of someone watching her. Suspecting someone is there she kicks in the bedroom door. Only to find her husband trying to surprise her. She heads into the bathroom to shower while hubby prepares the bedroom for a love-fest. Alice (female marine) screams... there's blood red water pouring from the shower head.

Tony intercepts McGee coming out of the elevator, telling him to run. McGee finds this strange warning suspicious. Ziva yells for McGee to get into the bull pen. She is sitting at McGee's desk pointing to his computer screen asking why he didn't erase the bikini photos of her after she told him twice. She gives him a chance to explain and promises she'll only remove ONE of his eyes. He tries to explain his way out of it, but blaming it on the computer...doesn't work. Gibbs arrives and tells them to gear up. When Tony asks what they've got, even Gibbs can't describe it!

At the crime scene, they're taking photos and samples from the bloody bathtub. Tony is imitating Norman Bates from "Psycho"... "my mother isn't quite herself today." Ziva says she's going to get back at McGee, wondering what he's been doing with the photos of her. Tony says she's being uptight about the photo thing. Gibbs arrives and they explain it's human blood, though watered down...they called in Ducky. Tony continues his Norman Bates imitation. Both Gibbs and Ziva feel he is the one being psycho.

Outside, there are people searching with flashlights for evidence. McGee explains where the water source is on the marine base, local aquifers distribute to local nodes that pump to the houses. Ducky arrives and they open one of the nodes. The water inside is all bloody and a body pops to the surface. Palmer is less than calm. The tank is drained and the body removed. Ducky estimates the man hasn't been in the tank for more than 24 hours. The slashes on the body are post mortem. There is blunt force trauma to the head, but he doubts that was the cause of death. He also didn't drown, no froth near the nose and mouth. They open his mouth and find a metal capsule with a paper note inside listing a website.

The website redirects to a cyber video link, where people post their own videos. To demonstrate how this works Abby and McGee show him a sample Gibbs interrupts with a glare. They are now looking at a night vision video of the dead guy walking up to his truck and getting in, the videographer/killer is in the back seat The video shows the guy being beaten and is interspersed with short odd clips of pictures/videos. Everyone is stunned.

Gibbs asks for an id on the victim, but there is nothing yet. The video link was created at a cyber cafe in Richmond. McGee heads out to check it out. Tony and Ziva will talk to security at Quantico to see who didn't show up for work. Abby tells Gibbs that the website name "Primitus-Victor" is Latin for "first victim," he says he knows.

In autopsy, Palmer is excitedly cutting open the victim's head. Gibbs arrives and he tells him the victim is missing his brain. Ducky chastises Palmer about his perky attitude. Ducky explains to Gibbs that it was probably removed with a crochet hook like tool through the nose, as the Egyptians. Most of his brain was removed when he was still alive, fortunately he was unconscious. After the brain was removed, he was frozen, so hard to determine the time of death. Gibbs thinks the murderer is playing some kind of game.

In the bull pen, they find out the victim was a civilian Billy Cole that worked at a local car wash. Tony and Ziva arrive and interrupt McGee's report to Gibbs. Tony makes Gibbs pick his "favorite" to continue reporting. Gibbs looks back and forth between Tony and McGee, then calls on Ziva. Quantico security says no one got past them, unless they used the river, but how would someone drag a body through the river? Gibbs answers...he was frozen. Tony says he was going to guess using one of the James Bond submersible sleds from "Thunderball." They review the "clues" in the video (the short interspersed photos/videos)... a clock face showing 11:45, a baseball player hitting a ball and a wooden bear statue. Gibbs and Tony take off for the victim's house. As he goes Tony reminds Ziva about the screen saver Tim has of her in the bikini.

At Cole's house, Gibbs and Tony hear a scream inside. It's a band practicing. The screaming lead singer is a pretty young blond. The drummer (Tommy Doyle) and singer (Rose) knew the victim, he was a roommate. They say he'd been missing about a week. He owed a few months rent, so they figured he was just skipping out on the debt. The female singer is flirting with Gibbs, says he has an interesting name. Tony gets a little competitive about this. Tony and Gibbs go into the garage where Cole's bedroom was. The girl was the last one to see him. Tony spies a photo of the band with the statue of the wooden bear in it. They head to where the statue is.

At the bear statue, they find another dead body. It's tied around the body and leaning against the statue, there's a bloody baseball bat nearby and the victim's watch is broken at the time of death. The details match the clues in the video clip. Looking inside the mouth they find another metal cylinder with another note inside and another website "Secundus Victor", meaning second victim. On the back of this note it says "Hello, Agent Gibbs"!!!

In the lab, they're watching the online video of the killing of the second victim. There are more clue clips inserted in the video. Vance wants to know how the killer knew Gibbs was assigned to the case. They notice on ZNN is already reporting the second murder and video. Vance mentions that Sec Nav is breathing down his neck on this one. He tells Gibbs he'll handle Sec Nav while Gibbs handles the investigation. Warns Gibbs to watch his back.

In the bull pen, the team analyze the video, the clues to the next victim, time, location and method of murder. Tony critiques the videographer to Wes Craven, etc. They try to decipher the clues...a nuclear blast, a ship's anchor and a nun/Madonna crying bloody tears. They guess on the method of murder. Ziva says, radiation poisoning...Tony says drowning...McGee says killer nun. Next they guess on the location...bombing range...Anchor-age, Alaska ...convent. Tony asks if that's where they keep the killer nuns!

Gibbs arrives and asks if they found anything other than agitated nuns. They've IDd the victim, Bob Sims, as now homeless a former Navy chief. There is no connection to the first victim, but he also had his brain extracted through his nose. They were unable to trace the 2nd video. However, the female singer, Rose, comes into the bullpen saying she thinks she can help. She thinks she knows who made the videos.

In a conference room, Rose gives Gibbs and Ziva a music video they hired someone to make to help promote the band, it was Cole's idea. Ziva can tell Rose is smitten with Gibbs. The video has the same kinds of intercut photos and video clips as the killer's videos. Sam Loomis is the producer, Loominosity Pictures. Gibbs sends Ziva with Tony to check it out. Rose asks if Gibbs if NCIS is hiring. If not she'd still like to hang out, it feels safe. Gibbs says he can assign her an agent to her, she asks if it could be him. Gibbs says no, but gives her his card., says to call him if she's got a problem...but ONLY if she's got a problem.

At Loomis' house, Tony says Rose is nice, but not his type, Ziva jokes that she was breathing. Tony zings back that he has standards, otherwise he'd be dating her. Loomis opens the door with a video camera rolling. He lets them in and continues to tape. They show him a photo of Cole. Loomis says it was his first...music video, that is. He knows Cole is dead and they suspect him because his videos are similar to the murder's.

In the bullpen Tony is on conference call with Gibbs and McGee. Loomis used a "build your own music video" website which randomly pulls in pictures from the person's photo file and inserts them into the video. Then Gibbs gets a cell call from number "666." He has McGee try to trace the call. The voice on the phone has been altered. The caller says they won't be able to trace the call and seems to know all about Gibbs. The caller says he has something very special planned for Gibbs. Unfortunately the call is bouncing all over the world...untraceable.

Abby calls from her lab up to the bullpen...there's a new video on the website...it just popped up. Abby suddenly recognizes things in the video. The poster just outside her lab. McGee realizes it's not a video, it's a live stream...the person is down by Abby's lab.

Abby talks to Gibbs on his cell as he and McGee race downstairs. She can see the person's shadow on the wall. McGee is locking down the building on his cell as Gibbs tells Abby they're almost there. She has hidden under a table, but set up a trap as well. Gibbs and McGee bust out of the stairwell to find...Harry the janitor. A remote video machine was hidden in his lunch box on his supply cart. McGee heads to the lab calling to Abby that everything is safe...he falls SPLAT on his face. Abby put crazy glue on the floor and McGee's shoes stuck to it. She says he's lucky it wasn't her second choice, hydrochloric acid.

In the lab, McGee, Tony and Ziva check out the "Janny-cam." Abby says she's never been so scared in her life....well except for the time her ex tried to kill her...and when her assistant had her at knifepoint...and when McGee's crazy fan had a gun to her head! Gibbs returns telling Harry is innocent, he had an alibi for both murders. They wonder how and when the camera got into the lunch box and how the killer knew that Gibbs would be assigned to the case? Vance enters and says the murderer has been targeting Gibbs from the beginning, someone Gibbs really pissed off. Tony says it's not a short list and gets the Gibbs glare. They decide it can't be Loomis, he was with Tony and Ziva when Gibbs got the call. Vance leaves, saying someone needs to get McGee a new pair of shoes. Abby asks why the latest video was different and if she can stay with Gibbs.

In autopsy, Ducky is replaying the call from 666...says the person has a narcissistic personality disorder. The killer sees himself as the hero and Gibbs as the villain. He wants to be famous and the more he kills, the more famous he'll be. Ducky suddenly recalls where he's seen one of the new clues...a doomsday clock that shows 5 minutes to midnight. They have less than 3 hours to find the location of the next murder.

In the bull pen, Ziva takes the crying nun clue, sending alerts to all churches in the area. Tony takes the anchor clue, contacts shipyards, harbor and navy yard. McGee says Tony and Ziva took the "easy ones", so he doesn't know what to do. Gibbs has him look into the phone call. Gibbs is agitated, saying the killer is playing with them and they're doing exactly what he wants them to do.

In Vance's office, Gibbs tells the director to evacuate the Navy yard. If no one is there, no one can be killed. He thinks the Janny-cam was a recon video for the killer. Vance agrees to initiate an early security lock down, but Gibbs gets a call from McGee first. He has determined the killer wasn't actually on the line with Gibbs, it was a recording with prerecorded generalized responses. Meanwhile, Abby got a print off the Janny-cam, Loomis!

They have Loomis in interrogation, his alibi didn't check out. Gibbs starts to interrogate him and he's sweating, agitated....he starts to freak out, then collapses....his eyes are bleeding like the nun in the video clue and the time is 5 to midnight.

In autopsy, Ducky says he was poisoned through an arthritis patch on his skin. It caused a spike in his blood pressure causing a heart attack and his eyes to bleed from an increase in vascular pressure. The trans-dermal patch can administer the meds very precisely. Gibbs is upset because Loomis was murdered in his custody. Ducky says the killer is pushing Gibbs towards something...but what? Tony calls Gibbs with more bad news a 4th video is up. The new video is Gibbs interrogating Loomis in the interrogation room. Video clues are intercut again. Gibbs wants to know how he got the video footage from interrogation. Abby says it was her fault.

In the lab, Abby says she wanted to find out how the killer was broadcasting a live feed from the Janny-cam, so she uploaded the firmware and got herpes. McGee translates, she got a computer virus. She's disabled it now, but it was broadcasting from NCIS for the past 24 hours. Abby freaks saying Gibbs could be the next victim... he could be poisoned there could be a bomb in his cell phone! She rips his cell apart handing Gibbs back the bits. McGee suggests they turn on both the Janny-cam and the Trojan virus to triangulate the source. They find the video is being broadcast by a DSL account registered to Rose, the singer.

In the bullpen, Tony reports that the local cops says Rose just left and they found blood in Doyle's room. Rose's registered "cybervid killer" trademark recently. Tony ponders how much Manson would have made if he trademarked "Helter Skelter." Also, Rose's father was an Egyptologist, explaining the "nosepick from hell." They review the new video clues again....snowglobes of Sears Tower in Chicago, Moscow and Rio de Janeiro. Gibbs says the clues aren't the cities, it's the snow. This sparks something with McGee and he says Gibbs is a God among men (Abby had called McGee that earlier) McGee races to MTAC, saying his CPU is too small...Tony says he'll let that one slide.

In MTAC, McGee says this was the only video with flash frames. That there's video imbedded in the snow shown between the clips. It's a video of Doyle tied up and struggling. They head to Loomis' studio, but first try to get Gibbs to stay at NCIS and then in the car. Gibbs tells Tony to shut up or he'll shoot him. They bust down the garage door and find Rose standing in front of Doyle with a shotgun pointed at him. He's tied to a chair, but manages to get the gag off and tells them all to shoot Rose, that she's crazy. The entire team has their sigs pointed at Rose, telling her to drop the shot gun, but she keeps pleading with them to just leave. While Doyle keeps screaming for them to shoot her. Gibbs notices the video camera recording the scene and suddenly shifts his gun to point at Doyle, everyone else is confused. Doyle is still screaming to shoot Rose, but Gibbs says the only one he's going to shoot is him. Doyle starts laughing, then holds up a deadman's switch, he has C4 wired to Rose and threatens to kill them all if they shoot him. Gibbs walks up to him, with the gun still pointed at his head, saying Doyle doesn't want to die, he wants to be famous. He gives up the dead man switch and they remove the explosives from Rose. Ziva asks how Gibbs knew Doyle was the killer. He points to the video camera which always recorded the victim's death, it was pointed at Rose...he was the murder weapon. Doyle says he doesn't care, he'll still be famous. Gibbs was just a set piece...no one ever remembers who caught the serial killers, they just remember the killers.

At NCIS, the team is in a big conference room an awards ceremony is going on. McGee is watching a ZNN broadcast saying the CyberVid killer was caught, but because he may have ties to terrorism, so they won't reveal his name. He WON'T be famous. Vance announces another award for Gibbs, who, of course isn't there, so Tony saunters up to accept for him.

Summary: Gibbs is put in a tough spot when he has to handle an assistant rookie assigned to his team by Vance to investigate a bank robbery case.

When a child runs into a bank guard and smears icecream on his shirt, the guard goes to the bathroom to clean up. On returning to the banking chamber, he finds everyone face-down on the floor and masked men doing a hold-up. He is shot at near point blank range and the villains escape.

In the bullpen, Tony is hitting on a rookie agent, to Ziva and McGee's disgust. The rookies are gathered and are on a placement, soon to go back to FLETC for more training. The team ponders why their own team has not been assigned a rookie. Gibbs arrives and says they have a crime scene at Quantico (which is a marine base surrounding the FBI compound).

At the crime scene, they get conflicting information from witnesses (but the accurate witness is a marine). The team ponders who would rob a bank in FBI territory. The getaway car is found near a gate, burning. Video of crime scene is digitally destroyed. The villains were professional.

The team investigate the bank robbery, and regard the death of the bank guard as collateral damage. Director Vance requires Gibbs to accept a rookie on his team: Dwayne Wilson. He is required to assess Dwayne's suitability for NCIS. Gibbs tries to transfer the assessment task to Ducky as psych specialist, but Ducky is surprised that Gibbs doesn't just trust his gut instinct.

The rookie is keen, honest and has joined because his dad was cleared of a crime by a persistent NIS officer. Rookie wants to make a difference. Tony, who was grilling rookie on motives whilst they searched FBI records, is impressed. Claims that Tony's own motive for joining NCIS was for the guns and babes.

The team beavers away at discovering clues but are puzzled by the modus operandi and that they only stole 27k. If they waited three days, they would have hit the bank on a big money day (marines were getting holidays and would want cash). Therefore the holdup was a smokescreen for the real crime. The real crime was the killing of the guard. But it could not look like murder, even though it was clearly a hit. Ziva ponders why they didn't just go up to his front door and shoot him when he opened it, which is the easy way to do it. McGee looks at her as if she is an assassin. (oh yeah, she is). Gibbs is just mildly amused at how serious Ziva is and how unaware she is of how she sounds to others.

Vance is on Gibbs' case about assessing the rookies. He also calls in Agent Lee for legal advice about what it takes to offload Director Shepard's Rookies in favour of his own. Lee is bemused. And uncomfortable. Gibbs stares at her.

Tony has trouble opening a drawer: it is jammed with Agent Langer's old ID card from his FBI days, which prompts flashbacks in Gibbs and makes him ponder whether he was right to think that he was previously wrong about Langer (contorted but this is Gibbs' mind and that is the way it works).

Abby spots a clue. She notices the tatt on someone on the floor in the bank. She realises it is the same tatt as she has seen elsewhere. She realises that the tattooed man is a baddie. She realises that he is a hit man. They find his cronies. They find that cronies did time in prison with the bank guard's son. They realise the son will go to funeral. They realise that the son was in a diamond heist. They realise that the son is the next target of the villains who want their diamonds back.

Meanwhile, Tony has interrogated the man who set up the security system at the bank, which conveniently failed just when it needed to for the benefit of the villains. Security system man is in debt. Tony grills him in his own offbeat style (which involves itchy ears...yeah, it is weird but amusing and effective). But the guy has a financial plan to survive the credit crunch: he is going to marry a rich but ugly heiress (honest to goodness, they made her look ugly, right down to the big glasses and the frizzball hairdo). Hmmm. Tony realises that the man must be serious about getting money from the woman because no one would marry her voluntarily (which is really really shallow, Tony!).

So back to the villains.... they will know where the son is when the funeral is on, because it is Italian family and they always go to funerals. And they have crowds. When is the funeral, Ziva? Now Gibbs! Ok, let's go. So they go. And rookie Dwayne tags along.

Tony makes Dwayne stay with the car, as he has no gun. Dwayne is disappointed. Team goes trawling amongst the black-clad guest of the funeral where all the men look like mafiosi, we guess. They spot someone being dragged into a big black SUV (are all SUV drivers villains? Ecological ones perhaps, but these are gun-toting ones). The SUV is pulling away. But a car pulls up blocking the exit. The frustrated man in black says move! But the man (our rookie hero, Dwayne) goes over to help his grandma into the car. (the poor woman in lavender who was quietly laying flowers at a tombstone nearby is puzzled indeed). Dwayne distracts the villains with his ruse which enables a firefight. Rookie bravely shields old lady from the firefight that he has instigated. So the rest of the villains emerge from SUV and lay on the ground, and the old lady looks up and says "you are not my grandson", to which Dwayne has no reply.

Back at HQ, the team are giving Dwayne a fond farewell at the candy machine, where Tony has stolen a candy bar for him. (oh, the moral turpitude!). So Dwayne leaves as someone they like and respect. (well done, son). Gibbs goes to Vance's office and proffers Dwayne's file: nothing written in there. Gibbs tells Vance to write "recommended". Gibbs now trusts his gut (but only after Ducky gave him a talking to... and pointing out that after Langer, Gibbs feels vulnerable but he should trust his gut). Gibbs passes Dwayne on the stairs and says "good luck" which is a high honour and Dwayne realises it. Gibbs spots Lee and he STARES. (A really really hard Gibbs stare. Hard enough that it taps Lee on the shoulder and makes her look around, then follows her into the lift and makes her flashback and we see her kill Langer. Pow. Thud. Bad girl).

Gibbs on his own enters a bar, orders bourbon. When barman observes that Gibbs is "alone tonight", Gibbs says "no" and goes over to the wall of honor for the fallen NCIS agents (and we see Cassidy!) and puts up Langer's FBI ID picture. Gibbs now trusts his gut.

Summary: A shocking secret surfaces when the team is pushed into a war game, and one team member will face serious consequences.

A cargo delivery truck (similar to UPS) drives up to a military facility. A female driver gets out and the two guards make her unload the box she's delivering. They check it with a scanner to see if there's anything radioactive or bomb-associated inside, then open it to find the body of a man, encased in dry ice. NCIS is called in.

Tony is at his desk, staring at his phone, waiting for a call. When it comes in, it turns out to be McGee playing around with him; Tony glares at McGee. Gibbs arrives. "Gear up!" and off they go to the Dry Ice Man.

Tony is taking pictures and being Typical Tony, is annoying one of the army guys at the same time. He also discretely takes a photo of the security access password for the building. Ducky and Palmer arrive on the scene (late as usual) and when they open Dry Ice Man's box Ducky and Gibbs reminisce about a past case before leaving. McGee arrives in a black van but instead of parking next to the NCIS truck and Ducky's ME van at the entrance to the facility...he pulls up unnoticed and parks around the corner. As McGee moves from the driver's seat to the back of the van, we see it's filled with surveillance equipment. Gibbs shows up a few seconds later and McGee uses the pictures Tony took of the password to hack into the facility's computers.

Later that night, outside the facility, Ziva and Tony emerge from the shadows and using the stolen password break into the building. Directed where to go by McGee who now has a map and video footage of the building - it's classic Mission Impossible, NCIS-style, complete with looping security tape showing all is well. Unfortunately, the looping tape eventually sets off an alarm. Ziva and DiNozzo make a run for it but guards appear from everywhere; they're trapped.

Scene change: Three Days Earlier.

Gibbs is pacing around as Palmer and Ducky talk shop, typical ME-speak. Palmer excuses himself "Ducky wanted privacy". He's then called up to Director Vance's office where he is told that the Secretary of the Navy wants to beef up security so they don't have anymore breaches, "like Agent Langer".

Scene change: Abby's lab.

Abby is busy working away when someone walks into her door. From the other side we hear McGee exclaim "Abby!" Abby quickly shuts down almost all of her computers while claiming that she's in the shower. She opens the door for McGee who is there to collect two boxes of evidence. McGee is curious as to what she's working on but Abby denies working on anything, however, she is quickly shutting down yet another computer when someone else walks into her door. We hear Tony call out: "Abby!" as he, too, walks into the locked door. He and McGee then proceed to the evidence garage with Abby closing the door behind them.

In the evidence garage are three chairs, a table and a whiteboard; McGee claims to have college flashbacks. Gibbs walks in and hands each of them identical files before writing "domino" on the board, then underlining it.

McGee starts to explain that it's a Navy thing but stumbles over his description, and Ziva finishes our lesson on "domino" (which is the US plan in response to an attack on Israel). Gibbs tells McGee to study up on it, then tells the team that SecNav wants them to break into the highly guarded building we saw in the first chapter. He claims it's for a security test and adds that even the guards who are guarding the building don't know their security is about to be tested.

Scene change: The Bullpen.

Ziva, McGee and Tony are crowded around Tony's desk, eating a pizza, and discussing what would be the best way to break into the building. As they're discussing options Agent Lee comes up and tries to take a slice of pizza. Tony will only let her have a slice if she can come up with a way for them to "hypothetically" break into a top security facility. Agent Lee mentions "Ziva's brother", and Ziva is quick to correct her with "half-brother". The team remembers Ari's body bag strategy, and with it being a good idea Agent Lee is allowed a slice of pizza. As she reaches into the box, Tony tells her "small piece".

Back at the evidence garage, the team is telling Gibbs of their plan, with their emergency exit being a sewer line. They ask Gibbs if they should ask Ducky for a body, but Gibbs tells them to just take it. (Gibbs Rule #18: It's better to seek forgiveness than ask permission.) McGee suggests using a fire alarm because the doors would automatically open but Gibbs says it has to be discrete. He also tells them that nobody gets hurt in this "test".

Scene (& Time) Change: Present Time.

The alarm has gone off and Tony and Ziva are running. McGee's security feed fills with "snow", then the computers freeze and shut down. Tony and Ziva are ambushed by soldiers but instead of giving in quietly per Gibbs' orders Ziva fights back. Seeing this Tony backs up his team mate and the two go down fighting. As one of the guards hits Tony with the butt of his rifle, Ziva kicks a female soldier into a door, but there's too many guards and as they overwhelm her, the female soldier she kicked comes back and punches her in the face.

Ziva wakes up with a bloody nose. She's being interrogated (threatened?) by a stranger holding a cigar cutter (remind anyone of Darkman's opening scene between Durant and Black?). When Ziva demands to see Tony, the man tells her that she and Agent DiNozzo will soon be reunited again, and sure enough, Tony appears with quite the beat up face. Typical Tony is trying to make light of the situation, talking about playing poker and drinking, but Ziva cuts him off and asks who the man was. DiNozzo hands her a coin that says "75th Secretary of the Navy" on it. Oops.

Our brave heroes are soon freed and we next see Gibbs, Director Vance and the now identified Secretary of the Navy speaking in Vance's office. They talk and talk and talk some more, and finally conclude that while Tony and Ziva didn't set off an alarm, they still got caught, meaning there's still a security breach in NCIS.

Finally (once more for laughs) it's Palmer's turn to walk into Abby's door. "ABBY!!!" Palmer is trying to hide from Ducky who is after him because he lost the dead body which turned up at the crime scene (dry ice man). Ducky is not happy from being kept out of the loop and neither is DiNozzo. While Ducky sulks in front of Gibbs, DiNozzo goes one level up and starts badmouthing whoever formulated the whole plot of manipulating them, thinking that it was Director Vance. Gibbs surprises both of them by saying it was his idea from the beginning. Gibbs once again goes to Vance and this time they openly discuss about Agent Lee being the bad guy or gal, and how they can catch her along with her handler. Back at the bullpen, Agent Lee is once more trying to overhear information as the team discuss her involvement in the killing of Langer.

Director Vance then runs a security check on every operative in every department, including Abby, who was still hiding behind her locked door. Using a device to allegedly detect high levels of a substance that would have rubbed off on anyone associated with the Domino case, surprisingly it is Abby who comes under suspicion.

Abby is taken to the interrogation room, accompanied by McGee, who is extremely worried and concerned about her. McGee cannot understand how Abby could have been the traitor, considering it would mean losing her lab and losing Gibbs' trust - and she loves both more than that. Director Vance comes in before they have finalized as to who will interrogate her. Abby stops the play acting and reveals to McGee that she is not the traitor, far from it. In fact she has been working on the case from the very beginning (another example of Abby being truly Gibbs favourite?) McGee does not care...he's just overjoyed that Abby is not the traitor and jumps in to kiss her on the cheek.

Their plan works and the real traitor, Agent Lee, is suitably deceived. Director Vance tricks Lee into believing that she is above suspicion and despite the security lockdown, allows Lee to leave the building in search of a legal operative. Once she is outside, Lee goes to a designated paper stack (newspaper box in America) and makes a secret signal, all the while being watched by Vance through binoculars, who gives the green signal to Gibbs and the team; Agent Lee is picked up and brought back in to NCIS.

Lee claims that she is being blackmailed and forced to carry out her traitorous actions. She says her daughter has been kidnapped by them and shows Gibbs a picture of her daughter. Vance comes in and advises Gibbs that there is no mention of a daughter in her file, but there is mention of a sister.

The team is discussing how much trouble Lee is in, who despite being a traitor is now walking towards the elevator. All is revealed when Lee gets into her car and we see Gibbs hiding in the backseat.

Summary: After a surprising reveal, the NCIS team is forced to prevent the heist of government secrets by using information from questionable sources.

A man chases a girl through the woods in the dark. He captures her and carries her away.

Tony and McGee are at a coffee shop for a stakeout. Tony says he has to use the bathroom from drinking too much coffee. McGee says he learned to only pretend to drink coffee to avoid that situation. From his car outside, Gibbs sees Lee enter the coffee shop. She sits down and folds a newspaper in threes, then slips a device inside and leaves. A man in disguise then walks up and takes the newspaper. The agents chase the men, but Lee is waiting outside and she spills her coffee on them to try to stop them. The agents lose the man and Gibbs steps up and takes Lee away.

Back at the headquarters, Tony yells at Lee for letting the man get away. She says that she couldn't risk losing her daughter by letting the man get caught. Vance calls Gibbs into his office and asks if he is watching Lee and Gibbs says yes. Meanwhile, Tony, Lee and McGee look over satellite images to try to find out where Lee's daughter is. They see an image of a man in the woods carrying a girl who Lee recognizes as Amanda.

Ziva tells Tony that Lee was telling the truth about her daughter, but Tony thinks it's just part of her plan. Tony and Ziva head out to find the girl. Lee wants to go with, but Gibbs won't let her. McGee examines the images of the man with Amanda and notices that he is not the same man from the coffee shop. Gibbs tells Vance that they are looking for three different people. Vance wants Gibbs to have the coffee shop man picked up at the next meeting. Gibbs thinks it's a bad idea that could jeopardize the whole mission.

Lee asks McGee if he can find the man who has her daughter and McGee says no. Lee then asks McGee about his sister who he helped save from a criminal charge. She points out that what he did for his sister is similar to what she is doing for her daughter. Lee tells McGee not to judge her without thinking about who she was scared for.

Tony and Ziva head out to the woods. Ziva tells Tony that she understands how someone would want to keep their personal and professional lives separate, but Tony thinks Lee is just a liar. Ziva then finds the kidnapper's trail and she and Tony walk into the woods.

Lee thanks Abby for finding the satellite images of her daughter and asks how she did it. Abby is mad at Lee, but tells her that she was able to find her daughter by tracking the nutrients in her hair which are almost as unique as fingerprints. Abby explains that they can pinpoint the location of her daughter by the drinking water she consumed. Lee leaves the room. Abby takes Gibbs aside and tells him that she doesn't know for sure that the girl's hair belongs to Lee's daughter.

Tony calls McGee and asks if they are close to anything. McGee tells him that there is a building nearby. Tony and Ziva arrive at the building and Ziva notices that someone has been going there regularly. The agents enter the building and find it empty. Ziva notices that the room is smaller than it should be. Ziva finds a hidden door. She and Tony enter and find furniture and belongings for a little girl. They think the girl must have been moved. They then look down and see a dead man on the floor.

Tony and Ziva send images of the dead kidnapper back to the headquarters and say that he was executed with a gunshot to the head. Gibbs tells Tony that they are not coming to the crime scene because the men could come back. Gibbs instructs Tony and Ziva to exit the building. Ziva then finds markings on the bed and figure that Amanda was counting the days that she had been held there.

Donald tells Gibbs the kidnapper is patient. Gibbs points out that he's had the girl for eight months. Donald says that the kidnapper is generally slow and methodical, but he acted fast when he killed the man and took the girl. Donald thinks that the kidnapper will no longer see the girl as a victim, but rather a witness that needs to be disposed of.

Tony takes over the watch on Lee. She asks if they found her daughter and he says no, but they know she was moved which means she is probably alive. Tony tells Lee that he's had enough of her lies. Lee tells him that she had no choice because they had her daughter. Tony tells Lee that at the next pick up, they are going to apprehend the man she exchanges information with. Lee objects, but Tony holds firm.

Tony and McGee watch Lee at the coffee shop. McGee says that after spending some time with Lee, he understands her. Tony sees that Lee is putting on lipstick and thinks it could be a signal. Lee then turns her cup so her lipstick mark faces out. The man then walks into the coffee shop.

Back at the headquarters, Abby tells Vance that she matched 6 points on the dead man's fingerprints, but he has no history. Vance figures his identity has been deleted. Abby then gets test results for the girl's hair. Abby says she found one strand that didn't belong to a little girl, but a grown woman. Abby then gets the DNA results from the little girl's hair and says that the news is bad.

Vance calls Gibbs and says that the DNA of the little girl's hair shows that it is not Lee's daughter. Gibbs sees and stops the man at the coffee shop and Lee walks up. The man tells them that they are screwing everything up and that she'll be killed. Lee asks if he's talking about her daughter and he says he's talking about his wife.

Gibbs sits with Lee and says that the girl is not her daughter. Lee admits that she is actually her sister, but she has taken care of her like a daughter. Gibbs asks if she said it was her daughter because she thought that he would care more. Gibbs tells her that she should have come to him as soon as she knew she was in trouble and shouldn't have killed those two men.

Vance meets with the coffee shop man, Ted Blankston, and asks if he stole information from the government. Ted admits that he was NSA and was fired for stealing information. Vance asks if he has the girl and he says no. Ted says that they have his wife. Vance asks how he knows they have his wife and he says that they send him her hair as proof. He says that they've had his wife for a little over a year and he is only exchanging information to get his wife back. Ted says that the man he talks to refers to himself as the Weatherman. Vance asks why he wants access to Domino. Ted says money. He says that he can buy and sell stocks based on knowing what is going to happen in the government tomorrow.

McGee tells Gibbs that Ted's story checks out. Abby then tells Gibbs that the woman's hair she found with Amanda's belongs to Ted's wife. Abby then says that there is a protein component in the hair which is missing which means Ted's wife is already dead.

Gibbs meets with Vance to figure out their next move. Gibbs says that he will need the real Domino in order to exchange it for the girl. Vance says that he will not risk the military's playbook and that Gibbs is only authorized to use a decoy.

Ted is upset because he hasn't been contacted about his wife. He then gets contacted and Gibbs tells him to tell the man that Lee has Domino. The man agrees to exchange the girl for Domino in one hour.

Lee and Ted are outfitted with ear pieces. Ziva asks Lee to tell her more about what happened. Lee asks Ziva if she will ever see her daughter again and Ziva says probably not. Gibbs gives Lee Domino and Lee is surprised they let her have the real thing.

Vance gets a call that somebody hacked into the computer and downloaded the real Domino. Vance tells McGee that it was traced back to his computer and the he and Gibbs have committed treason.

Ted and Lee enter a bar while Gibbs watches from the back of the room. Vance calls Gibbs and tells him to shut down the operation. Gibbs says he's busy and will call him back. Ted places the Domino in the menu. Abby then calls Gibbs and says that she's figured out the kidnapper's identity as Paul Wintiff, a witness in a FBI case who lives in a safehouse a few blocks away. Gibbs sends Ziva to the safehouse and Tony goes with her.

Vance sees that Tony is on the move and calls to find out what's happening. Tony and Ziva arrive at the safehouse and find it full of computers. Tony snaps pictures, then calls McGee. Vance takes McGee's phone and angrily tells Tony that the room looks like an internet hub. Ziva finds the little girl in a room on a bed. She is still breathing, but Tony finds sleeping pills nearby. They pull back the blankets and see that the bed is rigged to a pressure plate that is hooked into the computer grid. Tony remembers Raiders of the Lost Ark and they use water to displace the weight, then pull the girl off the bed. The room then fills with shooting sparks.

At the bar, an alarm goes off. Gibbs searches the menu and finds the Domino is missing. Gibbs realizes that Ted set him up. Ted then grabs Lee and shoots at Gibbs. Ted and Lee run out of the building and get on to a bus. Gibbs shoots the tires out on the bus, then boards. Ted shoots Gibbs in the finger. Lee then gets Ted's arm and while wrestling with it, she discharges the gun. Gibbs shoots Lee in the chest three times and both she and Ted drop to the ground.

Gibbs meets with Vance and learns that Ted killed his wife 12 months ago. Vance says that the whole plan was set up by Ted months ago. Vance tells Gibbs that Lee was headed for a life sentence or worse and would never see her sister again. Vance then asks for Domino back. Gibbs tells him that it never left the office, but he needed everyone to think the Domino was real, even him. Vance asks if he's going to tell Amanda that Lee was a hero or a villain. Gibbs says both. Gibbs then meets with Amanda and gives her Lee's badge.

Summary: While investigating the death of a petty officer in a car crash, the NCIS team learns of his violent secret life; underground street fighting.

A group of kids drink and party in the woods. A man crashes their party, collapses on one of the kids, then dies.

The next day, Tony takes a webcam snapshot of himself and posts it on a website featuring people competing in various categories including air guitar. Ziva tells Tony that what he is into is stupid and asks McGee to back her up. She looks over to McGee and sees that he also wants to participate in the website.

Gibbs arrives and tells the team that they have to investigate the death of a petty officer named Greg Collins.

The team goes to the woods where Greg died. Ziva finds a blood trail that leads back to the road. Ducky sees that the man has wounds consistent to being in a car accident. He finds that he has multiple old wounds that have been bandaged up.

Ziva and Tony find Greg's car and see that it was shot at. The kids state that they didn't hear any gunshots. They see that the clock in the car stopped an hour before the party started. They find a foot print on the ground next to the car.

Ducky takes the body back to the lab and finds that the victim was beaten, but he fought back and scratched his attacker. He finds that Greg Collins' body has a DNA sample underneath his fingernails that matches the DNA found on the bandages. They suspect that the person that beat him, also tended to his wounds.

Ziva finds that there are two sets of tires. They determine that a bullet went through the the back window. Gibbs believes that the person who ran Greg off the road might have known him. They discover that the security alarm at Greg's house is going off. The team goes to Greg's house and sees that no one is there. In the backyard, they find a towel with dried blood and a tooth. A group of neighbors, including a man named Parker, arrive and say that they heard the alarm going off for 45 minutes. The team tells the neighbors that Greg was murdered. Parker tells the team that Greg was always loud and recently had a group of brawling men in the backyard.

Abby finds that the shoe print is probably from a custom made pair. They find that the DNA found under Greg's nails and on his bandages matches a man named Sam Bennett. They learn that Sam works as part of a salvage crew on a ship.

Tony and McGee go to the ship that Sam was working on. They speak to the foreman and he says that Sam left early. Tony tells the foreman that Sam is wanted in connection to a murder. The foreman says that Sam took off after learning that the authorities were on their way. The team returns to headquarters and begin to search for Sam. Later, Sam shows up at the headquarters.

Sam is brought to the interrogation room. He tells Gibbs that Greg turned his life around and help him out. Gibbs asks about the fighting. Sam says that he is not supposed to talk about what they did. Gibbs says that he knows that they had backyard brawls. Sam says that they fight for money. Sam says that he was randomly chosen to fight Greg. He says that after the fight, he fixed Greg up then killed him. Gibbs tells Sam that he doesn't think that he killed him. Sam says that he told Greg that it wasn't safe to drive after the fight. Gibbs tells Sam that someone shot at his car, causing him to lose control of his car then crash. Sam is surprised at the news and asks who shot at him.

Abby and McGee talk about who they would like to see fight. Abby says that she would like to see Gibbs get into a fight with a group of Terminators. McGee arrives and overhears their conversation.

Abby tells Gibbs that they found auto paint scraped into Greg's car. Abby creates a computer recreation of the crash. She says that the paint on the car is rare and should be traceable. McGee says that the paint matches a Maserati belonging to a woman named Tabitha Summers.

Later, Tabitha arrives in the office with her lawyer. Tony thinks that Tabitha is attractive and tells McGee that Tabitha is like a cougar, always on the hunt. McGee tells Tony that he thought that cougars were only into young guys.

Gibbs speaks to Tabitha and her lawyer. Tabitha says that she has been married four times. She says that she is currently married to her lawyer, Dale. They say that the car is being brought to their vacation home.

Gibbs brings Abby fingerprint samples obtained from the water glasses in the conference room. They discover that Dale's fingerprints match the partial prints found on the car. They locate his cell phone signal and find that it is in front of the building. Tabitha returns to the office and tells the team that Dale took off without her.

McGee sees a traffic camera showing Dale running a red light just before Greg was killed. Tony tells Ziva that he moved into second place in the website air guitar competition. Ziva tells him that she is more into reading books.

Abby finds that Dale had chat messages making plans to have a date with a girl named Jody. Gibbs and Tony go to Jody's apartment. Gibbs and Tony hear a woman who tells them to let themselves in. They find that there is a camera watching the apartment. They go to the bathroom and see that there is a dummy in the shower. They find that the voice is pre-recorded and activates with motion sensors. Gibbs breaks into the office in the apartment and finds a room full of computers recording the apartment.

Abby and McGee figure that Jody was blackmailing men with recordings of them entering the apartment thinking that they were going to have an affair with a woman. Abby says that the image linked to the chat room matches a stock photo of a model from the Ukraine. They find that the profile was set up by an ip address registered to Greg's house.

The team goes to Greg's house and finds Dale's car parked in front with the engine still warm. Inside the house, they find Dale's dead body.

Ducky finds that the man was beaten to death. He thinks that he might have been struck with a board of wood. Parker, the neighbor arrives at the scene and tells Gibbs that he spotted a man at the house matching Sam's description.

The team arrives at the boat to look for Sam. The lights cut out and they figure that Sam knows that they are there. Tony finds a makeshift bedroom and figures that Sam has slept there. They find Sam and tell him to give himself up, but instead he runs. Gibbs tries to call McGee, but he doesn't respond. They hear a scream and find McGee placing Sam in handcuffs. The team is surprised that McGee is able to take down a backyard brawler. McGee says that Sam fell over and hit his head.

They bring Sam to the headquarters and he says that he didn't kill Dale. Ziva tells Sam that they have a witness that spotted him at the house. They bring Parker to the office. Parker says that Sam is the one that he saw at the house. Sam sees Parker and tells the team that he is the one that killed Dale. McGee tells Parker that he knows that he hacked and sent emails to Dale using Greg's internet network.

Sam tells Tony that he stayed at Greg's house from time to time. He says that he hid in Greg's house when Parker arrived and make a phone call. Sam tells the team that he hid and overheard Parker tell a man to pay up or else. Sam watched as Parker beat Dale to death. Sam says that he didn't stop Parker beat Dale because he wanted him dead too for killing Greg.

Tony invites Ziva to go to the movies. She says that she doesn't want to go out tonight. After Tony leaves, Ziva records herself air guitaring.

Summary: An elderly couple found killed while decorating for Christmas leads the team to find a war veteran long thought dead.

A man delivers a wreath to a house. He knocks on the door, looks inside and sees a dead elderly couple. From inside the house, another man looks outside the window.

McGee tells the team that a Metro police officer named Kemp is on the way to fill them in on the case. Tony says that he used to date Kemp's wife for four months before she got married. McGee says that Kemp is investigating a double homicide. Kemp walks in and tells Gibbs that the fingerprints found at the scene match a marine named Ned Quinn. Their records shows that Quinn is already dead. Kemp says that the wreath delivery man gave the police a description that matches Quinn photo.

Gibbs meets with Ducky at the lab. Gibbs says that the suspect of a double homicide has a death certificate signed by Ducky.

McGee says that Quinn was a decorated Vietnam vet. He says that he came back from the war with PTSD, used drugs, then ended up separating from his wife and daughter. He later became homeless. Quinn was thought to be found burned in a fire along with other transients.

Ducky finds an old audio tape of the autopsy in which he identified Quinn as one of the bodies found in the fire. He says that the victim that was identified as Quinn had meth mouth, which made dental record matching impossible. He says that DNA sampling techniques were not used during that time. They made an educated guess since the body was found with Quinn's things. Ducky says that after the war, Ned was treated for PTSD at the Bethesda medical center.

McGee and Ziva meet with Connie Fox, Quinn's ex-wife, and her daughter, Melissa, at her home. Connie says that her husband has been dead for years and before that he was never part of their lives after the divorce. Melissa says that after Ned came back from the war, he became a drug addict.

Ducky meets with Ned's doctor, Dr. Pryor. Abby walks in and sees that Pryor is dressed like Santa. Pryor says that Ned blames himself for his squadmates' death. Pryor says that he doesn't remember if Ned had a record of violent tendencies. Pryor gives Ducky all of his psychiatric files. Ducky reviews the files and sees that Ned didn't have any signs of violent behavior.

Ducky finds that Ned visits the Vietnam Memorial to look at the name of his squadmate, Roger Grant every year. Ducky figures that the team might be able to find Ned when he visits Grant's grave at the anniversary of his death, which is the next day.

The next day, which is Christmas Eve, Ziva and Tony wait for Ned in their car at the Memorial. Ziva asks Tony if he ever thinks about not having a family during the holidays. Tony ignores her question and leaves the car to investigate someone approaching.

Melissa meets Gibbs at the office. Melissa says that her mother doesn't speak for her. She says that she has childhood memories of Ned. She says she hopes to connect with her biological father and wants to see him. Gibbs gets a call from Tony who tells him that Ned is at the Memorial. Gibbs tells Tony to hold on before nabbing him.

Gibbs meets Ned at the Vietnam Memorial. Gibbs tells Ned that he knows who he is. Ned is brought back to the office. Ducky says that Ned is in good hygiene, clean and sober. Gibbs meets with Ned in the interrogation room. He asks about his prints found at the crime scene. Ned says that the couple brought him to their house to help them decorate for the holidays. Quinn says that the couple had a tradition of helping someone less fortunate. He says that he was in the garage, came back, and found the husband dead and the wife barely alive. Ned says that he tried to save the wife by giving her CPR.

McGee and Tony go to Quinn's apartment. The landlord lets them in and says that Quinn lived there for more than 12 years. Tony finds drawings of people in his apartment.

Ned says that another man was in his room the night that they thought he died in the fire. He says that he left the building, then came back to find his room in flames. Ned says that he figured if he was thought to be dead, his family would receive his military benefits.

Abby tells Ziva that they should tell Melissa that they have her father. Later, Ducky says that the wife was restrained by handcuffs and the man was killed by blunt force trauma to the head. Ducky says that Ned was telling the truth when he said that he tried to save the wife's life. He says that the evidence shows that the wife had CPR performed on her.

Gibbs gets a call and learns that the Metro police will arrive and wants custody of Ned. Gibbs meets with Vance in his office. Gibbs says that he doesn't think that Quinn killed the couple.

Vance tells Kemp that he will not hand over Quinn to him and the Metro police. Kemp says that he has to go home to assemble Christmas toys for his family. Kemp says that he will be back with a court order the next day, then leaves. Vance says that the team only has a day to find the couple's real killer.

McGee finds that before the husband died, he filed a patent claim against Paradyne Industries. Tony says that he knows that Kemp is the son in law of the owner of the Paradyne Industries.

Ned asks Ziva when the police will show up to pick him up. Ziva says that because it is a holiday, the police are taking their time. Ned asks for a pencil and paper so he can draw.

Tony, Ziva and Gibbs go to the dead couple's home. They see that there is an electronic keypad for a security system. Tony bets Ziva that he can figure out what the keycode is. He enters the number and the alarm is deactivated. Tony says that he saw which numbers were worn down and looked into the anniversary and birthdays of the couple. They enter the house and Gibbs says that they might find something that the police missed.

Abby meets with McGee and says that Melissa is in the lobby. Abby says that he called and told Melissa that they have her father in custody. Abby says that Ned and Melissa's situation is like a fairy tale. Abby says that what makes the story complete is that they reunite during Christmas. Abby begs McGee to let Melissa see Ned. McGee tells Ned that Melissa is there. Ned says that he doesn't want to see her and to tell her that she was better off to think that he was dead.

Back at the couple's home, Gibbs finds that a chair has been moved. Tony finds that the chair was moved into the closet to access a safe. They find that the safe is empty. A security guard named Harvey arrives and says that the alarm was triggered. They say that they are double checking the scene. Tony finds a hammer and a bloody towel in the home. Vance calls Gibbs and says that he knows that they went into the crime scene and contaminated the scene. Vance tells Gibbs to get Ned ready to be transferred to the Metro police. Later, Abby tells Gibbs that she found fingerprints on the hammer that matches Ned.

Gibbs tells Ned that they found his prints on the murder weapon. Gibbs says that they found the hammer in the garage. Gibbs says that Metro police is in the building to pick him up.

Kemp tells Tony that he has been waiting too long. Kemp says that he wants to get back to his family, who are at his vacation home. Gibbs says that the victim was in the process of suing his father in law and that he has a conflict of interest by investigating the case. Kemp says that his father in law doesn't share his affairs with him. Gibbs hands over Ned to the Metro police.

Abby tells Gibbs that she found a fabric print of a glove on the safe. She says that if Gibbs brings her a glove, she can see if it matches the print.

McGee says that he accessed the security company's records and found that the alarm at the couple's house was deactivated before they arrived.

Gibbs and the team meets with Kemp at the crime scene. Gibbs says that they found a print on the safe. He says that someone deactivated the alarm and planted the murder weapon in garage. Harvey, the security officer, arrives. Ziva tells Harvey that they found a button from his uniform in the couple's couch. They take his gloves then say that they can prove that it matches the print that was found on the safe. Harvey takes a taser gun and threatens the team. Ziva says that the gun only has one shot and there are five of them. Harvey fires the gun and shocks McGee. Ziva knocks Harvey down to the ground then arrests him. Later at the station, McGee says that Harvey admitted to killing the couple and stole the items from the safe.

Later, Gibbs brings Ned to Melissa's house. Ned says that he ruins people's lives. Gibbs says that Melissa wants to reunite with him. Gibbs says that if he had one wish, he would hug his daughter. Gibbs says that will never happen, but Ned has a chance to hug his daughter. Ned gets out of the car and gives Gibbs a drawing of Gibbs and the team. Ned knocks on the door and enters Melissa's house. Gibbs watches as Ned hugs his daughter and grandson. In the car, Gibbs calls his dad and wishes him a Merry Christmas.

Summary: The NCIS team must reveal the truth behind the murder of a jail guard which resulted in a prison riot and McGee being held captive by the inmates.

A group of people are making a horror movie where a cheerleader frantically runs through the woods. The director yells cut and tells the cheerleader she doesn't know how to scream. Rhiannon, the cheerleader, then falls in a pit and finds a skeleton. She lets out a scream and the director tells her it's much better.

Ziva and Tony arrive to work together and she tells him that the woman he is interested in has asked her out twice before. McGee is upset about his car which is in the shop for repairs. Tony and Ziva tease McGee for not being able to stand up to his mechanic. Gibbs walks in and tells the team that they have a case to investigate.

Ducky examines the skeleton and says that he was stabbed multiple times and is missing a middle finger. Ziva says that the bones belong to a Lt. Palletto. Gibbs says that he knows the person the bones belong to and who killed him. The team examines the files of Celia Roberts, a hooker who was sentenced for killing two other men. She was suspected of killing Lt. Palletto, but since his body was never found, she was never convicted for that crime. Ziva announces that she will get her to confess because she is a woman and women open up to other women. Gibbs instructs McGee to get the confession, surprising Tony and Ziva. Tony asks McGee when the last time he was able to convince a woman to do anything. Ziva says that McGee convinced her to give him her last ten dollars. McGee thanks Ziva for her confidence and leaves. Ziva then whispers to Tony that McGee doesn't have a chance.

McGee visits Celia Roberts in prison. As McGee goes to the visiting room, he runs into his old friend Brenda, a prison guard. McGee awkwardly asks Brenda out, then meets with Celia. McGee shows Celia pictures of Palletto before and after his murder. McGee says that the Pallettos would like closure and since she killed two other men in the same manner, he believes she killed him too. McGee says that Palletto's body was found in Virginia and if she confesses, he won't send her to Virginia to face the death penalty. A loud commotion then breaks out and an officer gets slammed into the door.

Abby returns a video game she borrowed from McGee. Ziva tells her that McGee is at the prison getting a confession. Gibbs then gets a call and tells the team they have to go to the prison. Abby asks if McGee is okay and Gibbs tells her he will call her.

The women at the prison are yelling at each other. There is a guard bleeding on the floor and other guards handcuffed to the wall. McGee asks what happened and guards say they don't know. The women then find out that McGee is also a cop and tell him that he will be the first to go if there is a raid. They handcuff McGee to the wall. McGee asks a guard what the women are in for and he tells him.

The team arrives and meets with the warden. He describes the plan to retrieve his guards and McGee. Gibbs asks if he has had any experience and the warden walks away. The warden then tells Gibbs that the women are using confiscated radios to communicate and says that they are sending someone out to negotiate. Gibbs and the warden meet with McGee who was released as the negotiator. The warden asks what the situation is and McGee says he is only authorized to talk to Gibbs. McGee tells Gibbs about the handcuffed guards and Trimble who was stabbed. He says that the women are asking that only the woman responsible for Trimble's death is punished. He says they want NCIS to determine who killed Trimble and will allow them in to examine the body.

The warden clears out the prison and has everyone but the prisoners loaded onto buses. McGee takes control of the room of women and says that he needs to frisk everyone to find the murder weapon.

Tony and Ziva wonder how they are going to solve a murder when they aren't allowed into the crime scene. The warden tells Gibbs he has seven hours to solve the case before he sends in a team. Gibbs asks if Trimble had any enemies and the warden says maybe. Gibbs and Ducky are sent into the room and Celia searches them for weapons.

Ducky sees that Trimble bled to death slowly. McGee says that he couldn't find the murder weapon and the crime scene has been contaminated. They follow the blood trail to the bathroom and see that Trimble's head was slammed into the wall. Gibbs tells McGee that they only have a few hours. McGee says Trimble was supposed to notify the other guards when he used the bathroom, but this time he didn't. He thinks Trimble was doing something that he wasn't supposed to.

Tony and Ziva bring evidence to Abby and tell her that they only have until sundown to solve the case. Abby is upset because she worries about them every time they leave the office. She asks if McGee is going to be okay and Tony assures her he will be fine.

Gibbs calls Abby and tells her that McGee will be fine. Abby says that she found traces of antifreeze in Trimble's system. Abby says that someone was poisoning him and even if he wasn't stabbed to death, he would have been dead anyways.

Tony and Ziva update Gibbs on their findings. Tony says that no one saw Trimble get stabbed. Tony then replays the video of when Trimble was stabbed and says that the section of the tape where he was killed was erased. They say that a fellow guard named Brenda had been called the dead guard 150 times. Tony says that Brenda seems crazy.

Ziva brings Brenda in and asks her about her relationship with Trimble. Brenda admits that she called him a lot, but says that he told her that he loved her. Ziva asks if Brenda knew he was being poisoned and was under investigation for drugs. Brenda says that she didn't know. She then says that she is friends with the woman in charge of drug screening and she told her that the warden missed the last screening and faked the one before that.

McGee calls a woman into a room for questioning. McGee says that it looks like she is going through withdrawal and Trimble's death seems to be drug related. She pulls out a can of mace and sprays McGee's eyes, saying she doesn't like his tone. The warden then tells Gibbs to shut down the investigation. Gibbs tells the warden that he knows about the faked drug test. The warden says he has two hours.

McGee turns out the lights and tells the women he's done. He says that if they want to figure out who killed Trimble, they have to figure it out themselves. McGee demands the name of their drug supplier and they all shout out Lambro.

Gibbs and Tony bring the dealer in for questioning. They ask if Trimble was on to him and he killed him to protect himself. The dealer says that Trimble wasn't trying to shut down the drug operation, he was the head of it.

Ziva tells Gibbs that Trimble's brother was with the DEA. Gibbs then gets a call from Abby. Abby says that she wanted to see if there was a connection between the antifreeze and Trimble's work schedule. She says that there was no way anyone from the prison poisoned him. She then adds that Sharon Bellow's, one of the prison inmates, relative's DNA was found on his bed sheets.

McGee taps into Trimble's email account to look for answers. He then finds a picture of Trimble with a young woman. The woman turns out to be Zoe Bellows, Sharon's daughter. Gibbs questions Zoe and she tells him that Trimble threatened to hurt her mom if she didn't sleep with him. Zoe says that she didn't tell her mom. Gibbs asks if she spiked his drinks with antifreeze. Zoe says she killed him. Gibbs says she didn't.

McGee questions Sharon and asks how she knew about Trimble and Zoe. McGee says that Trimble was emailing the photo to the other guards. Sharon says she only has one year left and she wants to be a mother again. One of the women announces that the food is about to be delivered on carts. McGee tells the women that if the dinner is delivered, they will all be punished.

Gibbs tells the warden to stop the food delivery. Gibbs then calls McGee and says they don't have much time. McGee then finds Sharon and Celia locked in a room together. Celia walks out of the room and says that the warden can have Trimble's killer.

The team waits outside as McGee is released. Ziva and Tony ask if McGee is okay and he says he's fine. McGee tells the warden that the killer will be out soon. Celia then walks out and drops the murder weapon. She says that she killed Trimble. McGee is surprised. Celia tells the warden that Trimble was raping Zoe. Celia then tells McGee that she killed Palletto too and will give him a signed confession.

The team returns to headquarters. Abby gives McGee a hug. McGee then gets a call from his mechanic. McGee lays down the law and tells the mechanic that he wants things done his way, leaving Tony and Ziva in shock. Abby tells McGee she likes the new him.

Summary:	A man is stabbed in the street and the team is called in to investigate, but the investigation leads to an attack against one of their own.

A couple kiss each other goodbye. Another woman then walks up to the man and tells him that he stabbed her in the back. The man then looks down, pulls a knife from his stomach and falls down in the street.

Tony and Ziva wonder what is inside a box addressed to McGee. Ziva is about to open the box, then McGee walks in. He opens the box and shows them his old computers. Tony and Ziva are unimpressed. Gibbs then walks in and tells the team they have to investigate the death of Petty Officer Kevin Lim.

The detectives interview Kevin's girlfriend. She says that she thinks his ex-fiance Cheryl killed him. Witnesses say they saw a woman with blood on her hands exit the scene. Ducky arrives and argues with Jimmy Palmer about city street layouts. Ziva asks why there is no J street, then gets a call. Jimmy apologizes to Ducky for failing his class, then says he will make it up to him. Jimmy then tells Ducky that Kevin bled to death from a stab wound.

Ziva, Tony and Gibbs find the woman who stabbed Kevin hiding in an alley. The detectives arrest Cheryl and pat themselves on the back for solving the case so quickly. Suddenly, another woman wearing a scarf over her face walks into the crime scene and grabs the murder weapon. She tries to stab Ducky and he fights her off. Tony chases after the woman and Ziva sees her scarf in the street. Ducky tells Gibbs he'll be okay, then reveals that the knife has been stabbed through his hand.

Abby asks Jimmy how Ducky is and he tells her in scientific terms that Ducky will be okay. Abby tells him that she is tired of hearing about how her teammates keep getting hurt in the field.

Gibbs goes to Ducky who has been given morphine. Ducky tells the team that they need to call in a substitute. He tells them that the number for a woman named Dr. Jordan Hampton is on his desk. Abby asks Gibbs how she is supposed to log the knife since it is the weapon in two separate cases.

Tony, Ziva, and McGee watch video footage of the attack on Ducky. The detectives try to figure out what language the woman is shouting in and decide to call in an expert.

Jimmy examines Kevin's body and Jordan, Ducky's substitute walks in. Jimmy tells her about the case. She asks why she is filling in and he says that she is filling in for Ducky because he was stabbed while on duty. Jordan is quiet.

Ziva goes to Abby and she tells Ziva that she was able to retrieve several prints from the knife. Abby says she was also able to find hair samples from the scarf. Ziva then gets a call and learns that the linguist has a translation of the woman's shouting. Gibbs goes to Ducky and tells him that the woman shouted 'Bringer of Death, you killed my brother' to him. Gibbs asks why she said that and Ducky says probably because he killed her brother.

Ziva tells Gibbs that they think the woman who attacked Ducky is named Mosuma Daoub. Gibbs tells them to bring her in, but the detectives can't find her. They can find her husband, though, and Gibbs tells them to bring him in for questioning. Ziva asks Mr. Daoub where his wife is and he says he doesn't know. Ziva shows him the scarf and he acknowledges that it is his wife's.

McGee shows Tony Mosuma's phone records. They learn that she has called the Afghanistan Embassy. Meanwhile, Gibbs examines Ducky's records. Gibbs then meets with Trent Kort and asks him for help. Kort tells Gibbs he doesn't like him and Gibbs says he doesn't like him either. Gibbs then asks Kort to look into a refugee camp on the Afghanistan-Pakistan border. Kort agrees, but tells Gibbs he will owe him one.

Tony and Ziva go to the Afghanistan Embassy and ask about Mosuma Daoub. The ambassador admits that she is in the building, but won't turn her over until they can investigate the accusations that she has made against Ducky. He tells them that she told him that Ducky violated article 4 of the Geneva convention. Ziva and Tony are shocked to hear Ducky is being accused of committing war crimes.

Ziva and Tony tell McGee what they've learned. Ziva says that the charges pertain to an incident from a refugee camp over 30 years ago. Ziva says that the woman must have been planning the attack, but can't figure out how she knew where to find Ducky. Tony puts a plan of attack together to canvas the streets to find out how the woman knew Ducky would be at the scene. Ziva and McGee tease Tony for his sudden ambition.

Trent and Gibbs go into the archives. Trent hands over Ducky's file. He then asks Gibbs why he is going around his boss to obtain the information. He then hands Gibbs a file on Vance and tells him it's on the house. Gibbs opens Ducky's file, then goes to Ducky's house. Ducky tells Gibbs that a bird flew into his house and that is an omen that someone is going to die. Ducky says his dog accidentally killed the bird so he thinks the omen may have pertained to the bird itself. Gibbs sets up a film projector. Ducky tells Gibbs that when he was at the refugee camp, he thought he could save lives. Gibbs then shows Ducky the footage he retrieved from his file. Ducky tells Gibbs he'll know Mosuma's brother when he sees him. The two watch footage of torture. Ducky says he was never in the room when people were being tortured. Ducky then sees Mosuma's brother and says that he was in charge of sewing him up after he was put through a session of torture. Gibbs gets mad at Ducky and asks what really happened. Gibbs asks if he is protecting the torturer and Ducky says no. Gibbs then leaves. Ducky walks out and opens the box with the dead bird inside. The bird flies away and Ducky is relieved that it was only stunned. Gibbs tells Jordan to keep an eye on Ducky.

Tony and McGee learn that everyone who knew Mosuma said she was a calm and professional person, and when she saw Ducky, she snapped. Gibbs arrives at the headquarters and the detectives tell him they found nothing. Gibbs tells them that Ducky won't tell him what the connection is between him and Mosuma. Gibbs then gets a call from Jordan who says Ducky is missing.

Gibbs finds Ducky at the Afghanistan Embassy. Gibbs tells the ambassador that he can't arrest Ducky because he is under his jurisdiction. The ambassador says that they need to investigate the charges against Ducky. Gibbs points out that the embassy is harboring Mosuma. Ducky then stands up and tells the ambassador that he doesn't need counsel and he is pleading guilty.

McGee tells Abby about what a dork he was when he was younger. She tells him that she likes his geeky parts, but can't believe he was a Mac guy. McGee then finds out who the torturer was in the video. Tony tells McGee his head is shaped like an egg.

Ziva and Gibbs wait at the embassy. Ziva tells Gibbs that they have seven hours until the offices open in Kabul. She tells Gibbs to use the time to get Ducky to open up. They then tell the ambassador that there is someone that is asking to speak with Ducky. They bring in the torturer from the refugee camp to talk to Ducky and the detectives, the ambassador, and Mosuma listen in on the conversation. The torturer and Ducky talk about what happened. Ducky says he was there to save lives. The torturer asks how many lives Ducky lost because of morphine. Ducky is mad that the man takes so much joy in causing pain. He says that he was able to save many by hurting only a few. Ducky says that he was with Mosuma's brother when he died. The torturer says that he ignored Mosuma's brother's infection. Ducky argues that he was in agonizing pain and he made the decision to give him morphine for the pain. The torturer then tells Ducky that he was using the boy to torture Ducky to get him to break, but Ducky would never give in to condoning torture. Ducky walks out and sees Mosuma. The ambassador then tells Ducky he is free to go and the charges against him will not be pursued. Gibbs tells Ducky he is forgiven, but Ducky says there is no forgiveness for his acts.

Jimmy is excited to have Ducky back. Jordan tells him that Ducky is not a man who wants a big show of affection. Ducky then walks in and Jimmy tells him about his studies. Ducky tells Jimmy to take the day off and smell a rose or two. Jimmy tells Ducky that there is no J Street because a capital J looks too much like a capital I and the designers were just trying to keep people from getting lost. Jimmy then leaves. Jordan walks up to Ducky as he begins to cry.

Guest Stars: Michael Toland (Navy Captain Thomas Jennings), James Urbaniak (Dr. Rod Daniels), Eva Tamargo (Adrianna Lopez), Christine Woods (Rebecca Jennings), Danneel Harris (Jessica Shore), Chris Carmack (Kevin Nelson), David Pease (Sheriff Lee Chandler)
Production Code: 127
Summary: The NCIS team investigates a bizarre murder of a sergeant whose suspicious private life might be the reason why he got killed.

A navy Captain gets into his car, but can't find his keys. He gets out of his car and checks his cell phone, but he has no reception. He calls out into the darkness to see if anyone is there.

The team is on the phone with tech support because their computers have all crashed. McGee arrives in a good mood and quickly fixes the computers. He tells Tony and Ziva that he is in a good mood because he went on an online date with a lady who is just like him. Tony reminds McGee that he hasn't met the woman yet, but McGee is optimistic. Gibbs walks in and tells the team they need to investigate a missing person.

Kevin Nelson, his ex-fiance, and Becky Jennings walk in and give the team information about the disappearance of Becky's father. She says they got into a fight and she thinks he is just trying to prove a point to her. Kevin thinks the disappearance is more serious than Becky. Tony knocks on the door and whispers to Gibbs that a body has been discovered in the woods.

Tony and Gibbs go to the woods and see Navy Captain Thomas Jennings's body in a shack with his intestines ripped from his body. Ziva and Ducky arrive and examine the scene. Tony teases McGee about his hesitation to look at the body. McGee says he's in too good of a mood to spoil it with blood. McGee then says Tony is just jealous because he hasn't had a date in a while.

Ducky says the abdominal wound was done post mortem. Ducky says there is a lack of defensive wounds and Ziva notices the blood is unusually red. Ducky explains that the color signifies carbon monoxide poisoning. Ducky then reveals a pentagram carved into the man's back.

Tony and Ziva look through Jennings's house. Tony tells Ziva not to be afraid of the pentagram carved in Jennings's back. Tony then confesses that he is actually the girl McGee is dating. Ziva tells Tony to end the relationship. Tony says he has an idea based on Fatal Attraction. Jennings's housekeeper then walks in the room and the detectives break the news of his death to her. Tony sees a door and asks where it goes. She says Jennings never let anyone down there. Tony and Ziva walk down to the basement and see a teddy bear. McGee recognizes the bear as one that was sold out when he was a kid. He says he made his own using a voice recorder. McGee then tells Gibbs he checked Jennings's voicemail and heard a message from his daughter left two days ago. He plays the message and the team hears her complain about her father's long trips. Tony then finds out that Jennings worked at the counter espionage labs 16 hours spread 7 days a week.

Abby gets to work on the bear from Jennings's basement. She says the bear is the unattainable bear from 1989. She says the factory seals were broken which means someone has been inside. She then tells Gibbs about the pentagram. She says because it is symmetric, it's not a Satanic pentagram.

Ducky looks at Jennings's body and sees head trauma, disembowelment, a pentagram, and a green substance inside his body. Ducky says at first he thought the cause of death was the head injury, but the tox report says the carbon monoxide would have killed him first. Ducky says the pentagram was carved after he was killed. Ducky says he doesn't think the carving is Satanic, but thinks the killer was looking for something inside Jennings.

McGee plays with the bear which upsets Tony. McGee then programs the voice to sound like Gibbs. The team laughs as Gibbs walks in. Tony says the technology inside the bear could be used to send secret communications. Ziva wonders why Jennings used a child's toy to communicate. Ziva says she found encrypted emails that she can't read, but sees that they would stop everytime he went overseas.

Tony asks McGee about his girlfriend. McGee says she's a little clingy, but he'll give her another shot. Ziva tells Tony to tell McGee the truth.

Abby tells Gibbs that the car that left the tire tracks at the scene was a 1972 Skylark. She pulls up an image and shows Gibbs that the wheels on the car had had pentagrams. Abby says Jennings must have died from carbon monoxide poisoning because he was in the trunk of the car. The pentagram was probably etched into his back from the spare tire. He was then taken to the shed and carved up.

Tony and Ziva go to Jennings's lab. They talk to Captain Jennings's co-workers who tell them Jennings was honorable, but they had a security breach recently. He show the detectives that they developed a device disguised as a toothpaste tube to get through customs. The team wonders if Jennings swallowed the device and the killers cut into him to retrieve it. They then get a hit on a location of a 72 Buick Skylark.

The detectives arrive at the storage unit holding the car. A man then drops to his death from the roof in front of them. They take pictures of the scene and learn the man was just a petty thief named Brandon. They wonder if he jumped or was pushed. Ducky says he sees defensive wounds on the man's hands which seems like he was pushed. They figure he was killed by someone cleaning up their loose ends.

Kevin goes to the team and says he and Becky are back together. He says she is not up to confronting her father's murder. Gibbs tells Kevin that Becky doesn't have a choice. Gibbs then shows Kevin pictures of Brandon. Kevin says he doesn't recognize him. He tells Gibbs to give Becky some time and she'll talk.

The team investigates Becky and see she has no criminal record. Gibbs thinks she knows something and tells the team to talk to her friends. McGee is upset that he has to cancel his date. Tony tells McGee to keep his date and he and Ziva will cover for him.

Gibbs talks to Becky at a bar. She asks if she is a suspect. Gibbs says it's his job to investigate her. He shows her a picture of Brandon, but she doesn't recognize him. Becky is angry that Gibbs has no idea who killed her father or why. Gibbs asks why Becky left a message complaining about her father's long trips. She says she was devastated when her mom died, but she was okay because her dad was there. She says she doesn't think she's going to be okay now because she has no one. Gibbs asks about Kevin and Becky says she gave him a second chance. Gibbs then gets a call from McGee telling him he partially decrypted the emails. He says they came from a laptop that is in use right now at Jennings's house.

Tony and Ziva bring Jennings's maid in for questioning. Gibbs asks why Jennings paid an outside maid service with a credit card every week. Gibbs says she never worked for Jennings and only got her green card a few weeks ago. He asks where and when she meet Jennings. She says six months ago. Gibbs asks if she taught Jennings to steal. She says no and says she loved him. She explains that they had each just lost their spouses and they connected. She says that they lied about the relationship for Becky's sake. She says Jennings would visit her overseas until she got her green card and could come to the states. Ziva thinks she is lying. McGee then says they found the device at the lab. He explains that Jennings never took it, he only used it to get the green card for his girlfriend.

The detectives now realize they lost the motive for Jennings's murder. They think if they can find Brandon's associates, they might find someone with a motive. Tony asks McGee if he was stood up, then suggests he dump her. McGee is not convinced that he should dump her and thinks she may be the one. They then walk into Brandon's apartment and see it is trashed.

Abby looks over the trash from the apartment. She says the dinner plates were smashed with a hammer, which means the things were broken out of anger. Abby says she found a print that belongs to Jessica Shore. They bring Jessica in and she admits she trashed Brandon's apartment. She says he gave her a fake ring when he proposed which turned her finger green. Abby recognizes the green color from what Ducky found in Jennings's body. Abby says the ring had been intestinalized and was in Jennings's stomach, before it was cut out.

Ducky says Jennings was rushed to the ER when he was 5 after swallowing his mother's engagement ring. Ducky says the doctors couldn't operate and just waited to have the ring make it's way out. He says the ring never came out and the story became a family legend. McGee then walks in and shows Gibbs a photo.

Gibbs and Tony find Becky and Kevin cleaning out her father's house. Becky asks why her father was murdered. Gibbs pulls out the ring and Becky recognizes it as her grandma's engagement ring. They ask if Kevin told his buddy about the ring. They then say that the ring was fake and he probably never heard that part of the family story. Tony asks if his friend tried to blackmail him and he killed him to keep him quiet. The detectives then show them several pictures of Kevin and Brandon together. Becky realizes Kevin had her father killed so that she would take him back. Kevin is then arrested.

Back at the headquarters, Tony asks McGee about his girlfriend. McGee says she sent him an email saying she's getting back together with her ex-boyfriend. McGee then says he doesn't care and he is still going to pursue her. Tony then nervously gets up and hands McGee the $40 he owed him. Tony walks off and Ziva says she didn't tell McGee the truth so he could torture Tony. McGee then splits the money with Ziva.

Summary: The NCIS team finds themselves involved in a city gang while investigating the death of a Marine, and Gibbs must face his past once again when he finds a message at the scene of the crime.

In an empty building filled with gang signs, a man shows a young man a set of three different guns. The buyer tests the guns. The buyer is shown a TEC 9 and he fires it into the skylight. After the glass shatters, they see a man with his hands tied behind his back fall through the opening.

McGee gives Tony a message that a woman named Melinda has postponed.

Tony asks how the woman sounded. Ziva says that the woman sounded delighted. Tony gets upset at McGee for not taking a good message. Tony is not sure which woman called him. Gibbs walks in and says that they have a case.

The team finds a dead body of Emilio Salazar, a man who joined the Marines three months ago and was supposed to be sent to Iraq. They see that the Emilio laser removed his tattoo. They see that the tattoo matches the graffiti on the wall. The team sees that there are two set of footprints. On the roof they find a pair of handcuffs and a phone number written in blood. Gibbs realizes that the number is his Marine service number.

Later, Vance asks where Gibbs is. A man calls for Gibbs and Tony asks the caller if he can take a detailed message. McGee tells Tony that he gets the point. They see that Emilio had a criminal record with a gang known as the P.C. Later, Ziva and Tony visit Emilio's commanding officer, Staff Sergeant Medina, at the firing range. Ziva tells Medina that a man in his unit was shot several times. Tony tells Medina that Emilio was killed in an area where he grew up. They ask Medina if Emilio talked about gangs. Ziva asks Medina if he can borrow his Berretta. She takes a shot and tells Medina that she prefers the Sig. She says that his sight is a few millimeters off. Tony brings back the target and they see that Ziva hit just left of the target's head.

Ducky tells Gibbs that Emilio was shot multiple times after he died. He says that a 9 mm is the bullet that killed Emilio. He says that Abby has the bullet. Vance arrives and tells Gibbs that he knows that he is avoiding him. Later in his office, Vance calls to request information regarding Gibbs when he worked in black ops.

Gibbs meets with his old NCIS partner Mike. Gibbs tells the man that the only person who knew about the woman from Colombia is him. Mike admits that he brought the woman to the United States 17 years ago after their mission in Colombia. Gibbs asks Mike where he dropped her off. They go to a Latin neighborhood and ask a woman for Rose Tamayo. The woman tells Gibbs and Mike that Rose died ten years ago.

Mike and Gibbs meet with Vance in the office. Ziva says that she canvassed the area where Emilio was shot and learned that there is a turf war between the P.C.'s and the Verta Psychos. Ziva says that the main suspect that shot Emilio is a man named Victor Carmado who is a member of the P.C.s

Ziva tells Mike and Gibbs that the blood doesn't belong to Emilio. She says that the blood belongs to a man named Tomas Tomayo. Mike tells Gibbs that Rose had a one year old son when he brought Rose to the States. Meanwhile, Ziva and Tony visit Victor at his house. Two men approach Ziva and Tony as they get close to Victor. Victor tells Tony and Ziva that the neighborhood is dangerous and that they should leave. Tony says that he knows that it is dangerous and that is why he brought Ziva. Victor tries to run around the corner, but Tony catches him. Ziva beats up Victor's friends and returns to Tony.

Abby tells McGee that she heard something about Gibbs, Rose, Colombia and a kid that she had before he joined NCIS. Abby tells McGee to try to find more information.

Mike and Gibbs goes to Tomas's house and ask a woman named Maggie about him. Maggie says that she is the guardian of Tomas and many other kids. Maggie says that Rose got sick with cancer and asked her to take care of Tomas. Tomas walks up and gives Maggie a hug. Tomas asks the woman what is going on.

Gibbs and Mike bring Tomas into the office. They tell Tomas that they found his blood that blood was used to write Gibb's service number on the rooftop where Emilio was shot. Tony and Ziva hear Victor yelling in his interrogation room. They enter the room and tell him that the slug that killed Emilio matches a gun that he used. Victor says that they need a confession. In the other room, Mike tells Tomas that they found his blood, urine and sweat on the rooftop. Tomas says that he didn't kill Emilio. In the other room, Victor admits that he shot Emilio in the head, JFK style. Back in the room with Tomas, Gibbs tells him that Emilio died slowly after he was shot in the chest. Tomas says that he was not there.

Mike says that gangbangers don't kidnap people, they shoot people in the street. McGee sees that Staff Sergeant Medina recently called many P.C. members within the last six months. They learn that Medina was once part of the P.C. Vance calls Gibbs in and tells him that he has his Marine file. Gibbs tells him to read the last part of his file.

The team brings Medina in the office and ask him if he killed Emilio. They say that they know that he was once a gang member. Medina says that was a long time ago. Medina says that he was at home when Emilio was shot. Medina says that he saw how gangs destroyed his friends so he joined the Marines. He says that he wanted to recruit his friends into the Marines to get them out of their situation. Gibbs tells Medina that they have a surveillance photo of him outside of his house. Medina admits that he went out to see his kid from a woman who is not his wife.

Gibbs tells Mike that he let Tomas go. Mike and Gibbs head out to follow him. Mike tells Gibbs that Rose didn't want him to know about her kid. McGee tells Gibbs that Tomas is at Quantico. At headquarters, Tony wonders what Gibbs was doing in Colombia. McGee tells Vance that Tomas is heading back to his neighborhood. Vance calls Gibbs and tells him that four crates of rifles were missing at the armory. Gibbs sees Tomas haul four crates into an empty building, then receive a call. Tomas tells the caller that he did what he wanted. Gibbs tells McGee to record a camera that is pointed at the building. They see two men enter the the building. Ziva realizes that the men were at Victor's. Medina arrives and tells the men to freeze. The men pull out there guns and a battle ensues. Mike and Gibbs join the battle and shoot the men. Medina admits that he ordered Tomas to bring the guns to the building. Tomas says that his old friends ordered him to hand over guns and killed Emilio in front of him. Gibbs says that there is someone who is the mastermind.

Tomas is brought to the office. Gibbs tells Maggie that Tomas admitted to the crimes. Maggie says that Emilio was not supposed to get shot. Maggie says that there are kids that are dying everyday. Maggie says that she wanted the guns as a deterrant for violence. Gibbs arrests Maggie.

McGee tells Tony that the mystery caller was Melinda from the dentist office and they rescheduled his appointment. Later, Tomas tells Gibbs that his mother made him memorize his service number and told him to use it if he needs help. Tomas says that he is the reason why he became a Marine. Gibbs tells Tomas that when his mother saved his life, she was already pregnant with Tomas. Vance tells Gibbs that he read his file about the mission when he killed a drug cartel leader. Vance asks Gibbs if he told Tomas that the man that he killed was his father.

Summary:	When one of Tony's old cases ends up re-opened, he switches roles with Gibbs to finally solve the crime.

Ducky tells Tony that Justin was found with Valley Fever. He says that Justin had a fever when he died, which changes the time of death. Tony realizes that Justin died when Renny was having dinner.

Later, Gibbs releases Renny. Tony tells Renny that he is sorry for putting him in prison. Tony tells him that he will write him a letter for his appeal. Tony asks Renny who he thinks set him up. Renny says that he can't believe that he expects him to help. Tony gets a call from McGee and says that there is a man in his office related to the case. An officer named Mitch tells Tony that he was right when he told him that someone framed Renny. Mitch asks Tony how Ziva is. Mitch says that he is a friend of Ziva on her Facebook page. Renny says that he has seen Ziva's knife collection. Mitch says that it looks like Renny found out how the real embezzler took the money.

Tony goes to Abby's lab and finds that she has digitized the partial print from the hotel room. Abby says that she can link it to a person only if they have a list of suspects. Tony tells Abby that he sent her a list of fingerprints of Renny's former co-workers via email. Abby loads the file and gets a match. Tony meets with the team and tells them that they have a suspect. They go to the home of a man named Carl Davis. After they arrive at the house, Tony tells Gibbs that he would like to take over the driving. They knock on Davis's door and Carl's wife tells them that Davis is out of town. They enter the house and find that Davis is tied up to the bed, gagged next to a small blood stain on the pillow. Carl's wife tries to explain that he was playing with her husband. The team see that the woman was about to burn Carl alive with lighter fluid. McGee finds an envelope filled with photos of Carl having an affair with another woman. Carl is surprised when Gibbs tells him that Justin was found killed. Davis says that he was having an affair with a woman when Justin was killed.

Abby apologizes to Tony for leading the team to Carl. Abby says that she found trace elements of smoke on the soap dispenser found with Carl's fingerprint. Abby says that the room is a non-smoking room. Abby tells him that the soap dispenser was stolen from Carl's home and planted in the hotel room. McGee says that there is evidence of a third embezzler in Renny's case. Tony tells McGee to try to track the third embezzler. Palmer secretly meets with Tony. Tony tells Palmer that they can't find the third embezzler. Palmer says that it is common for embezzlers to sit on the money for years. Palmer says that Renny might know the case better than anyone. Palmer tells him that he should ask Renny for his help.

Tony goes to Renny's house and finds smoke coming from under the door. He breaks in and hears the smoke alarm. Tony sees that the house looks like there was a struggle. He calls if there is anyone in the house, but no one answers. Later, the team arrives at the scene to investigate. They see that there was prime rib burning in Renny's oven. Ziva finds a knife with blood on it. Tony suspects that someone kidnapped Renny and that he might be already dead. Back at the office, Tony tells the team to find Renny. Gibbs sees that Tony is getting upset and pulls him aside. Tony tells Gibbs that he feels bad for putting an innocent man in jail. Gibbs tells him that he is doing a great job leading the team. Gibbs tells him to get his head on right and trust his gut. Tony says that he rather trust Gibbs's gut. Gibbs tells him to hand over his phone if he wants to give up. Abby arrives and asks Gibbs and Tony if she is interrupting anything. Tony asks her what she has for him. Abby says that the blood found on the knife does not match Renny. Abby says that the knife was used to kill Justin. She says that Mitch left DNA evidence on the weapon.

Tony brings Mitch into the office and tells him that he thinks that he tried to get rid of Justin and Carl because they were his accomplices in the embezzlement. Mitch says that Carl attacked him when he arrived at the hotel. Mitch says that he left the knife at the hotel. Tony leaves the interrogation room and McGee tells him that Justin was just indicted for mail fraud. Ziva arrives and tells the team that the photos of Carl having an affair were fake. They figure that Renny set up the embezzlers to turn on each other. Tony finds Renny at the airport carrying a bag. Tony tells him that he thinks he has the money that the men embezzled. Renny opens his bag and shows him a bundle of clothes. Tony sees that Renny has a ticket to a Caribbean island. Tony leaves the airport and tells Gibbs that Renny is gone.

Summary: When a fellow agent is murdered, the NCIS teams heads into the desert to locate a woman who might hold the answer to the mystery murder.

An NCIS agent slips a package in the mailbox. A SUV chases him down. The driver pulls out a gun and shoots the agent dead.

Later, the force place black bands in memorial for Special Agent Patterson. Tony sees that he has a message. He listens and hears that a law firm in London wants him to call. The team investigates the scene where Patterson was killed. Gibbs asks the team why they were late and Tony takes responsibility for being stuck in traffic. Ziva says that a witness reported a black SUV leaving the scene. The team figures that Patterson was killed by a professional killer. Ducky finds a business card of a Homeland Security Agent named Lemming in Patterson's hand. Gibbs tells Tony to call the number on the back of the card. Abby arrives and tells Gibbs that Patterson was going to see her before he died.

Abby tells Gibbs that she had a professional relationship with Patterson but never met him. Abby says that Patterson wanted to show her something. Abby says that Patterson wanted to meet her last night, but she told him to meet in the morning.

Tony calls the London law firm. Tony tells McGee that his great uncle died and that he thinks that he is in the will. Tony says that his uncle was rich and that he spent some time with him. Gibbs arrives and tells Tony to go back to work. Ziva brings the man that owned the business card, Lemming, into the office. Lemming tells Gibbs that he worked cases with Patterson. He says that Patterson wanted to show him something. Gibbs tells Lemming that Patterson was shot.

Abby goes to the morgue and apologizes to Patterson's dead body. She tells Patterson that she thought that he wanted to go on a date when he called. Ducky arrives and tells Abby that they have work to do.

Gibbs and McGee go to the ship that Patterson was assigned to. McGee finds photos that Patterson looked at before he died. They see that Patterson photographed a room on the ship. Gibbs, Tony and McGee go to the room and see that it is full of boxes. Gibbs tells them to go through the boxes. Later, Abby is given a package that Patterson sent to her. Ziva and Abby learn that Patterson dropped off the package near where he was murdered. Abby opens the package and sees that it contains a water color picture of a Western scene.

Gibbs looks at the picture and sees a girl reading a book. Abby tells Gibbs that the bullet found in Patterson matches a bullet used in an unsolved murder of a man in Scottsdale, Arizona. On the ship, McGee finds a package in a airduct of a room. In the package, they find drugs. Tony tells McGee that Patterson was investigating a sailor named Zell. Later, Tony and McGee paint the interior of the ship. McGee criticizes Tony's technique, but Tony says that they are just pretending to paint. Zell arrives and enters the room. He looks for the package and is approached by McGee and Tony. Zell hits Tony, but is restrained by McGee.

Gibbs discovers that the picture was made by an artist named Dina Risi. Ziva tells Gibbs that the man that died in Scottsdale is a man named Hamilton Cougar. Abby tells Gibbs that she discovered that the package that Patterson used was originally sent to Patterson by Dina Risi.

Tony brings Zell to the station. Ziva tells Gibbs that Zell was on a frigate when the man in Scottsdale was killed. Zell tells Tony that he didn't know Patterson. McGee tells Gibbs that Zell was at an ATM a hundred of miles away from Patterson when he was murdered.

McGee tells Gibbs that Patterson wrote an email saying that Zell's commander Weiland obstructed his investigation. Tony tells Gibbs that Dina was recently found missing. McGee says that there is a location that matches the picture that Dina painted. Later, Ziva says that the man that died in Scottsdale was worth several million dollars. She says that the man was killed in a similar way that Patterson was killed. McGee loads up a satellite image that shows that there is someone in the cabin that Dina painted. Gibbs tells the team that they are going to Arizona.

In Arizona, Tony and Gibbs meet with Sheriff Boyd. Boyd says that Dina was a protester. Boyd looks at Tony's extravagant shoes and asks if he is going to a dance. Boyd tells him that the only way to Dina's cabin is by horse. While getting ready to leave, Tony tells Boyd that the last time he rode a horse was during a birthday party when he was young.

A man arrives at the headquarters and says that he is Lemming. McGee calls Gibbs and tells him that the man that they were working with is an impostor. Gibbs tells Tony that he can't believe he briefed an impostor on their case. Boyd helps Tony saddle up.

At the station, the team finds that Dina mixes her paint with the indigenous soil. Abby finds that the soil that Dina used is a radioactive substance used to make nuclear weapons. McGee tells Gibbs that they lifted a print from the fake Lemming and that he doesn't have a record. It starts to get dark and Boyd tells Gibbs and Tony that they should set up camp. At night, Gibbs gets a call from headquarters. Ziva and McGee tell Gibbs that if the fake Lemming is a hitman and he is probably heading there to silence Dina. Boyd tells Gibbs that Dina was fighting a company called Sunset Mining. In the morning, the team arrives at the cabin and are shot at by Dina. Dina says that she was supposed to meet with Patterson. Gibbs says that Patterson is dead. Dina says that she started to get sick after using the soil to paint. She says that there is a local mine that might contain billions of dollars worth of uranium. Gibbs tells the team that it is not safe at the cabin and that they should head back. McGee calls Gibbs and tells him that there is a helicopter heading their way. The fake Lemming flies over and shoots at Gibbs and the group with a semiautomatic rifle. The fake Lemming hits Boyd in the leg. Gibbs gets off his horse and shoots the pilot. The helicopter crashes into the mountain and explodes.

Back in the office, Tony looks at the car that he plans on buying after he receives his inheritance. McGee says that the man's real name is Jerome Sax. McGee says that Jerome is linked to four other unsolved murders. Tony gets a call and is told that his great uncle left all of his money to his cousin. Tony says that he owed his uncle money and that his cousin is calling to collect.

Summary: The death of a boxer leads Vance to borrow the NCIS team and start investigating his death, while Gibbs digs into Vance's past.

A woman brings a man back to her place. She goes into the bathroom and the man sees a note that says 'Bend over and read this note.' The man bends over, is stabbed in the back and dragged away by a group of men. The woman opens the door and sees Vance. He tells her that she can go with him voluntarily, or he will carry her out.

Ducky tells Gibbs about Tyler, the man who was killed in the hotel room. Ducky says the body was found in Lake Michigan with multiple gunshot and stab wounds. Ducky tells Gibbs that Vance requested they solve the case.

Tony calls out to McGee and Ziva, then realizes that they are in Chicago working on the case. Tony then turns to the rest of the staff and asks if they found his wallet. Gibbs walks in and asks Tony if he heard from Tony or Ziva. Tony says McGee has set up a video conference for him and Vance.

Vance tells Tony that he wants him to question a woman named Tera that could have information about the case. He says that her safety may be compromised if it is known she is talking to the police. Vance then tells Gibbs that Tyler was his friend and he vanished over a week ago. Vance tells Gibbs that Tyler was a former Marine. He tells Gibbs he is going to work the case himself and asks Gibbs to sit this one out.

Vance, McGee and Ziva go to the hotel. Meanwhile, Gibbs tries to get information about the case from Abby. She tells him that she can't tell him about the five bullets that were removed from Tyler's body. She then says he was weighed down by weights and they should know how long he was in the lake. Gibbs comments that the murder wasn't a result of a mugging and Abby says she can't talk to him about it. She tells Gibbs to find something to do to take her mind off of things. Abby then closes herself in a soundproof room. He uses sign language to talk to her, then leaves.

Vance, Ziva and McGee go to a boxing gym and learn Tyler was revered by everyone there. Ziva notices some of the dumbbells are missing. Vance then gets into the ring and challenges a man to a fight. Vance tells a kid named Spit that he used to carry the buckets like he did. Vance asks Ziva if she wants to fight, but Ziva declines. Vance then talks to Ike, an old friend and the owner of the gym. The two reminisce, then talk about Tyler. Ike says he doesn't think Tyler threw himself in the lake. Ike says he hadn't seen Tyler in a long time until he showed up a few weeks ago. Ike says he thinks one of the fighters named Banks got sick of Tyler being top dog. Vance tells Ike that he plans on luring Banks to him.

Tony picks up Tara and he asks if she had a relationship with their new director. He then realizes she might have heard him say nude director. She tells him that Tyler was her brother. She then asks if he lost something. They arrive at the headquarters and Tara says she saw Tyler a week ago at an exhibition game. She says she went with a man named Joe Banks. She says she works for Banks and does anything he asks. Tara then tells Tony she can help him. She says she sees a man in need, then Ziva walks in and tells Tony she is there to relieve him.

Ducky and Palmer examine the body. Gibbs walk in and Ducky tells him the time of death was more than four days ago. Gibbs tells them about Tyler's boxing record. Gibbs thinks something is missing and Ducky realizes Tyler has no military record. Ducky thinks Vance may have overstepped his authority.

Vance goes to Ducky and looks at Tyler's body. Ducky tells him that Tyler went down fighting. He says the powder burns on his hands indicate he was holding the barrel of the gun when it was fired at him. Ducky tells him about the following shots which killed him rapidly. Vance realizes the killer was untrained. Ducky asks about his relationship with Tyler. Vance asks what Gibbs's issue was and Ducky tells him that there is little evidence that Tyler was a marine. Vance tells Ducky not to believe everything he hears.

Vance visits Abby and Palmer and they tell him that Tyler was killed 11 days ago. Vance realizes that was fight night at the gym and that was the last night Ike saw Banks. Abby says she got organic material from Tyler's hands. She says it was a bird feather and it could have gotten lodged there when he was in the water. Vance asks if Abby has anything else to tell her and Abby says no.

Vance goes to Tara and she tells him that he doesn't have to protect her. Tara realizes he is using her as bait to lure Banks there. She then tells Vance that he abandoned her and Tyler. She asks if he would have even seen her again if the murder hadn't happened. Tara then tells Vance that she knows Banks had nothing to do with Tyler's death. Vance then says if she really knew Banks, she would have quit him years ago. Vance then asks Ziva to escort Tara to a safehouse.

Vance returns home and is greeted by his children. Vance gives his kids chocolates and boxing gloves. Vance kisses his wife and she asks why he didn't tell her that he had a friend coming over. Vance then sees Gibbs and scolds him for interfering with the case. Gibbs tells Vance that it is dangerous to use his position for a personal agenda. Vance asks Gibbs if he really has that big of an axe to grind. Gibbs demands to know who Tyler was to him. Vance's wife interrupts and tells Gibbs that he is staying for dinner. They sit down and Vance's wife tells Gibbs how she and Vance met. She then tells him about one of Vance's fights where they met. She says Vance detached his retina while training for a boxing match.

The team drives Tara to the safehouse. Tony finds his wallet and shows Tara that he is no longer in need. Tara notices a ring shape in his wallet and Tony grabs it back. Ziva notices a town car and tells Tara to get behind her.

Gibbs tells Vance he has a nice home and family. Vance tells him that his kids want to rescue a pitbull. Gibbs says they can be good dogs if you treat them right and don't lie to them. Vance tells Gibbs that Tyler was a Marine.

Tony and McGee watch as Banks walks into their office. Gibbs walks out and McGee escorts Banks into an interrogation room. Gibbs smacks Tony for talking nonsense. Tony enjoys the physical contact.

Vance walks into the interrogation room and introduces himself. Banks hears the name and tells Vance he could have been a big time fighter. Banks tells Vance he tried to retire, but he still holds his belt. Vance shows Banks a picture of Tyler and Banks says he heard about the tragedy. Vance then runs down a list of murders that Banks was accused of, but found not guilty. Vance tells Banks he represented everything that Tyler hated. Banks says Tara will never speak out against him. Vance then realizes Tara and Banks were married.

Vance yells at Tara for marrying Banks. She tells him that he changed. Vance asks what happened to Tyler and Tara says she doesn't know. She says Tyler was family and Banks wouldn't have killed him. She says Tyler lost his drive. Vance thinks someone must have been behind him waiting to take over.

McGee, Tony, and Ziva look at what they think was Tyler's crime scene. Meanwhile, Gibbs tells Ducky about having dinner with Vance. Gibbs then asks Ducky to re-examine Tyler's body and look for evidence of surgery. Gibbs then goes to Vance and Vance tells him he owes Tyler his life. Gibbs tells Vance that the reason for Tyler's murder may not have been as complicated as he thinks. Vance then realizes that the feathers on the body were from a coat.

Vance walks into Abby's office and she freaks out. He asks if the feathers were from a coat and she says yes. Vance calls Ike and Ike sees Spit's dead body in his gym. Vance realizes that Spit was the murderer. He tells Gibbs that Spit was bragging about how he took down the champ. Vance tells Gibbs he is going back to Chicago for Tyler's funeral.

Tony asks how Tara can see through his disguise. She asks how long it has been since he's had a date. Tony admits it has been a long time. He says he's had a lot of dates, but he scares them all off. She tells him to open up and cry on someone's shoulder. She tells him the solution to his problem is easy and he just needs to pick the right woman. Ziva then asks if everything is okay and Tony tells her it's fine.

Vance speaks at Tyler's funeral service. Meanwhile, Ducky tells Gibbs that there was evidence that Tyler had surgery for a detached retina. Gibbs pulls out his file on Vance. He starts to open it, then decides not to break the seal.

Summary: When a kid discovers a weapon that someone was killed with, the entire family ends up under investigation, as the NCIS team has to find out who was the last one that used the weapon and who got shot with it.

A soldier named Mike talks to his family over an internet connection. When his wife sits down for her turn, the connection gets lost. She goes to her son Noah and finds him playing video games. She then notices that he is hiding something. She looks in his drawer and finds adult magazines. She keeps digging and then finds a gun.

Tony asks why glue doesn't stick to the inside of the bottle, but the team refuses to play his game. Tony then looks at what McGee is working on and sees that he is looking at a set of clubs to replace the one's of Ducky's that he destroyed. McGee places a bet, but loses. Abby walks in and tells the team that a gun was found on base housing. The team refuses to listen to her because she is not Gibbs. Abby tells them that it belongs to a kid and was recently fired, but the team is still uninterested. Gibbs walks in and tells the team to investigate. He adds that brain matter was found on the barrel of the gun.

The team goes to Noah's house and he tells them that he found the gun at the playground. His mom says Noah is obsessed with guns. Noah says he took the gun because he thought it was cool. Gibbs tells Noah that the gun was used to kill somebody. Tony and McGee look through Noah's room and find his magazines. Gibbs walks in and tells them it's time to leave. They then take Noah to the playground and he shows them where he found the gun. He points in the direction that the barrel was pointing when he found it. Noah's mom tells Gibbs that Noah has had to grow up fast since his dad is in Iraq. Gibbs then sees a couple of kids watching them. Noah's mom tells him that the kids are Noah's friends Travis and Zane. Gibbs sits with Zane and he tells him that Travis found the gun. McGee and Ziva talk to Travis, but he refuses to answer their questions. Tony tells Noah that the sediment in the gun doesn't match the residue of the park. Noah suggests that someone moved it. Zane finally admits to Gibbs that Travis found the gun next to a dead body.

Ziva and Tony walk through the park and Ziva tells him it reminds her of being a child. The boys take the detectives to a location that they believed was the place that they found the gun. McGee asks them to remember the position of the sun and landmarks. They then remember the exact location of the body. Abby calls Gibbs and he and Ziva leave Tony and McGee with the boys. Once the boys's mothers arrive, the group heads out to the location of the body.

Gibbs and Ziva return to headquarters and Abby tells them that she found out who fired the weapon. She pulls up a newspaper article about a postal worker getting shot. She says the gun was admitted as evidence in a trial four years ago. She says it was an NCIS case and they were the ones holding on to the gun.

McGee tells the kids scouting tips as they walk through the woods. They then find a pile of vomit and Travis remembers that it is where they threw up after they found the body. The boys run to the spot where they found the body and find that it is missing. McGee looks closer and finds a piece of an ear along with some maggots. Tony tells Gibbs about the ear and requests cadaver dogs. McGee looks closely at the scene to try to find tracks.

Ziva tells Gibbs that the gun was owned by a man named Peter and after the trial, they returned it to him. Peter said he didn't want to hold a murder weapon, so he pawned it. The pawn shop told her that they sold the gun. Abby tells Ziva to find out who bought the gun and Gibbs agrees.

McGee and Tony follow a trail. McGee looks up and sees birds circling. They keep walking and Tony finds a dead raccoon. McGee tells Tony to call for the dogs, but then Tony sees the dead body at the bottom of the hill. The body is then taken to Ducky. Gibbs walks in and says the victim is a man named Dylan. Ducky finds that Dylan had several self inflicted health problems as a result of drinking and drugs. He also says that Dylan took his own life. Ducky says the time of death was two or three weeks ago. He says he will be able to narrow the time down when the maggots turn into flies.

Gibbs goes to Abby and she is excited to be studying the maggots. Gibbs asks if she tested the bullet slug, but she says she hasn't because the gun is evil. Abby then loads and tests the gun. Meanwhile, McGee and Tony try to find a match to the tire tracks at the scene. Ziva walks in and announces that the gun was sold to a man named Fast Eddie. Tony says he is a character from a movie and they realize he used a false identity. They look through some photos and find Eddie's real name is Ronnie and he used the guns to rob some convenience stores.

Tony and Ziva question Ronnie about the gun. They show him a picture of Dylan and he says he knew him. He says Dylan stole his car and his girlfriend, but he wouldn't waste a bullet on him. He admits that he used the gun to rob some convenience stores, but he says he didn't kill Dylan. He says he ditched the gun a month ago in a dumpster. The detectives look at security footage and confirm that Dylan threw away the gun. They then see a fast food employee retrieve the gun from the dumpster.

Gibbs returns to Abby and finds her nurturing the maggots with classical music. Abby then tells Gibbs that the slug matches the gun, but the brain matter does not match Dylan. Gibbs realizes that there is another victim and Abby says the gun is bad news.

Gibbs tells the team that there is another victim. Tony says the employee was named Joey and he hasn't shown up for work in a couple of weeks. McGee looks up Joey's record and find that he and Dylan robbed some stores together. McGee finally finds a match, but only Abby is around for him to show that they match a red flyer wagon. McGee brings in all the wagons from base and they search them for blood. McGee finds one with blood and he sees that it belongs to Noah. Gibbs brings Noah into the station and interviews him while his mom watches. Gibbs asks Noah if he knows what forensics are and Noah says sort of. Gibbs tells Noah that his fingerprints were found on his wagon. Gibbs then says that they also found Dylan's blood and he knows he lied to him. Noah begins to cry and Gibbs asks who he is trying to protect. Noah finally admits that he killed Dylan because he picked on him and his friends. Noah says he found the gun, but he doesn't remember where. Gibbs asks what Dylan said right before he shot him. Noah says he doesn't remember. Gibbs tells him that he doesn't believe he killed Dylan. Gibbs tells Noah that he can tell he loves the person he is trying to protect. Noah then says he is protecting his dad and his dad was the one who killed Dylan.

Abby and Ducky watch as the maggot turns into a fly. Meanwhile, Tony and Gibbs talk to Noah's father over the internet. Tony says Noah said he killed Dylan. Mike admits he threatened Dylan because Dylan harassed his son. Mike says Dylan had it coming, but he didn't do it. They ask why he asked for an earlier deployment. Mike says he did it for the money. Gibbs is then handed a note and walks out. Gibbs meets with Ducky and learns that Dylan was shot fifteen days ago, which was after Mike was deployed to Iraq.

The team tries to look for Joey, but they are unable to find him. McGee says he was unable to find a missing persons case to find out where the missing brain matter came from. McGee then finds that there were outgoing calls made from Joey's mother's house, but she is supposed to be deployed overseas. The team heads out to investigate. Tony and Ziva go to Joey's mother's house while Gibbs and McGee go to Noah's house. His mother says Noah is out, but they say they want to talk to her daughter Rebecca. Tony and Ziva look through the house and find Joey dead from a gunshot wound to his head. They call Gibbs and tell him that Joey is dead. Gibbs says he thinks it was suicide. Gibbs then asks Rebecca about Joey. Noah overhears that Joey is dead. Rebecca starts to cry and says that Joey was her best friend. She says Dylan convinced him to do drugs and commit the robberies. She says she tried to talk to Joey, but he couldn't see any other way out. She pulls out a note that Joey wrote. Gibbs asks if she blames Dylan for Joey's death. Rebecca says she does and she took the gun to him to show him what Joey used to kill himself. She says Dylan grabbed it and it just went off.

The team goes back to headquarters and Ziva comments that when two people fight over a gun one of them always ends up dead. Tony then announces that he bought a replacement set of clubs. He offers to sell them to McGee for a $100 finder's fee. Gibbs points out that Tony just bought left handed clubs and he says Ducky is right handed. Ducky then walks in and tells McGee that they are even. He explains that he just destroyed a rare autographed album that belonged to McGee.

Summary: Gibbs has to put his personal feelings aside and work with Trent Kort who returns in order to track down a dangerous criminal.

Kort shoots and kills two men at a construction site. He places the gun in one of the man's hand then calls Gibbs. Later, Gibbs goes to the scene and meets with Kort. Kort tells Gibbs that the men shot each other. He says that the men belong to a criminal organization run by a man named Siravo. Gibbs tells Kort that he is lucky that the men shot each other. He looks at the man's gun and sees that he is carrying a .45, Kort's weapon of choice. Kort says that he now carries a 9mm.

At headquarters, the team wonders where Gibbs is. McGee finds that Gibbs' cell phone signal is close by. Gibbs calls Tony and tells him to go to the construction site. At the scene, Kort tells the team that the men killed each other. Tony tells Kort that his story sounds phony. Tony tells Ziva that he doesn't trust Kort because he tried to blow up his car. Later, they see a sedan pull into the construction site. They surprise the man with their guns drawn. Kort wonders who the man is.

At the headquarters, the team learns that Siravo is engaged in criminal activities all over the world. They see that Siravo had a ship named the Borealis. Perry, the man from the construction site, is brought to the interrogation room. Vance is suspicious of Kort arriving at the end of the gun battle at the construction site.

Gibbs meets with Perry in the room. The man tells Gibbs that he is an accountant, that he got lost and entered the construction site to ask for directions. Gibbs asks Perry about Siravo and he admits that he is his accountant. Gibbs asks about the Borealis and Perry says that Siravo doesn't own it. Perry says that he moves Siravo's criminally obtained money into clean businesses. He asks Gibbs for immunity in exchange for his testimony. Vance tells Gibbs that he is going to contact the U.S. Attorney.

Abby tells Ducky that she found shell casings from a caliber that is different than the ones that were used to kill the men at the construction site. She tells Gibbs that she thinks that there was a third shooter. In the office, Tony tells Kort that he thinks that he is lying to the team. Gibbs and Tony enter the briefing room. Vance shows Tony and Gibbs video showing the Borealis being blown up by a bomb planted onboard.

Gibbs returns to the interrogation room and sees that Perry is taking drugs for his reflux disorder. Gibbs shows Perry the photos of the men that were killed at the construction site. Perry figures that Siravo was closing up shop and wanted him dead. Perry says that he knows how to get a hold of Victor Flores, Siravo's number two. Perry asks Gibbs if he knows Captains of Industry 3. McGee and Abby learn that Captains of Industry 3 is an online game that barely anyone plays. They figure that Perry used the game to communicate with other criminals.

Tony asks Kort why he thinks the men killed each other. Kort says that he thinks that the men had a secret lover suicide pact. Tony asks Kort why he dug up information on Vance. Kort tells him that he didn't have to read Vance's file. Tony, Perry and Ziva go to the safe house. Perry looks around and says that he doesn't like his surroundings. Perry says that he is hungry and tells Tony that he is on a macrobiotic diet.

McGee and Abby create avatars and play Captains of Industry 3. They figure that Perry and Flores use codes to communicate. They receive a message from Flores and learn that he wants to meet Perry at the park. Gibbs and Kort leave to meet Flores.

Back at the safe house, Ziva tells Perry that she can't believe that he never had a girlfriend. Perry says that he thought that making lots of money would help him meet women. Tony returns to the safe house with food. Perry tells Tony that he is out of pills and that he needs to take one with every meal.

Gibbs and Kort find Flores's car at the park. They discover Flores's dead body and another man who was also shot and killed. Later, the team goes to the scene to investigate. Ducky and Jimmy say that the men were killed less than two hours ago. Gibbs and Kort figure that the men killed each other. McGee tells Gibbs that both men worked for Siravo.

Later, Gibbs updates Vance about the case. Vance tells Gibbs that Kort was suspended by the CIA. Vance tells Gibbs that he knows that Kort gave him his file. Vance tells Gibbs to find out what Kort wants in exchange for helping him.

Back at the safe house, Tony tells Perry that he will get his immunity as soon as he talks to the U.S. Attorney and passes a polygraph. Tony tells Perry that he is going to spend the rest of his life moving from safe house to safe house.

Ducky and Jimmy talk about barbershop music. Jimmy says that he used to be a tenor in college. Ducky says that the unique characteristic about barbershop music is the fifth note, the sound that is made when the voices combine. Ducky says that they are missing the fifth note from the quartet of dead bodies that they found. Gibbs walks in and tells Ducky that he found horse manure on all of the dead men. Ducky tells Gibbs that he thinks that Siravo is staying at a place where there is horse manure.

Ziva walks down the street and sees two men walk toward Perry's safe house. Ziva calls Tony and tells him about the ambush. Ziva enters the safe house and shoots both men as they break into the apartment. Later, U.S. Marshalls arrive and take custody of Perry.

Abby tells McGee that she thinks that there is a leak. Gibbs arrives at the lab and show Abby and McGee the GPS log from Flores's car. Gibbs sees that the car stopped at a horse ranch. They figure that the ranch is Siravo's hideout. They go to the ranch and discover that Siravo is comatose under a nurse's care.

Back at headquarters, Tony and Ziva figure that someone created a criminal empire using Siravo's name. McGee discovers that Siravo became comatose after he got into a motorcycle accident. McGee sees that Siravo's money is being drained from his accounts. They figure that the money is being seized by the CIA. Abby calls Gibbs and tells him that she thinks that she aided in a murder. Abby says that the online game communication was sent through an open forum and that she accidentally ordered someone to kill Flores. Gibbs calls Kort and tells him that he knows that he drained Siravo's money. Gibbs and Tony head over to Kort at the U.S. Marshall office. Kort approaches one of the U.S. Marshalls and tells him that he wants to take custody of Perry. Perry takes a gun and shoots the Marshalls. He then shoots Kort in the shoulder. Perry tells Kort to give him his money back. Gibbs and Tony arrive, surround Perry and force him to surrender.

Back at the headquarters, the team figures that Perry used his power of attorney to run a criminal operation. Kort tells Vance and Gibbs that he wanted to capture Perry so he can get back into the CIA.

Summary: Abby has to take over a top secret government mission when their scientist goes missing, but soon realizes things may not be as they seem to be, while the rest of the team worries about Abby's safety.

Episode begins with a couple singing their baby to sleep. As soon as they close the baby's room door, they argue which gets louder and wakes the baby. They hear it cry through the baby monitor and then hear a scratchy man's voice say "Help me, please."

In the bullpen, Tony is spring cleaning and finds a back scratcher, which he immediately begins to use. Abby enters and is upset about having a cavity and is on the way to her dentist. Gibbs enters and they take off for the crime scene. The victim is PFC Marco Riggs. His cell scanner is what the baby monitor picked up when he was trying to call 911 with it.

Ducky and Palmer arrive. They explain the traditional reasons for being unshod (Riggs is barefoot). The time of death appears to be 2 hours ago. They reveal two puncture marks on his neck. Palmer declares that Abby is going to love this. Abby comes out of the dentist office very happy and is met by the FBI. She is requested to come with them but can't tell her where.

At the bullpen we learn that Riggs was accused of stealing military equipment and selling it on the black market. He disappeared before he could be charged. He's been missing a week. Fornell has advised Gibbs that Abby has been picked up by FBI. He calls her while she is in the car. She advises there is a step-by-step guide for her lab. The punctures marks are from a stun gun and not a vampire bite. He suffered a stroke and took off his shoes because his feet felt like they were burning. Abby's replacement does not arrive until Monday. Tony and Tim get the job of handling the evidence in Abby's lab, while Ziva assists Gibbs in the field.

Abby is told she was "asked" to be there at the request of Dr. Philip Heller at Tarburst. Dr. Heller was working on a project that cannot be talked about, but Dr. Heller is no longer with the program. The lab is state-of-the-art. She is told by Dr. Jones that they do not know what he was working on. A patient, Robert King, walks into the lab and starts chatting Abby up. Nurse Dunstan hauls him off.

Tony tries to break into the only locked drawer in Abby's lab. Palmer, McGee and DiNozzo make a mess of Abby's lab in attempting to run identify the DNA found under Riggs' fingernails. Abby calls in that she needs a background run and warns Tony that screwdrivers leave marks on locked drawers.

Ziva and Tony are back at the crime scene. Ziva babbles on about how much she enjoys the silence without Tony's incessant babbling. They find cement, rope and other items in the trunk of Riggs' car. It appears Riggs was the intended criminal rather than the intended victim. Abby tells Dr. Jones that she is done. Dr. Heller was attempting to hijack DNA's pathways in order to target a specific strand of a person's DNA. She is irritated that Jones already knew that. She threatens to storm out but he tells her that all the patients are going to die if she does not help.

McGee gets the results of the background check on Dr. Heller that Abby requested. They realize he has disappeared because someone was trying to kill him. And Abby has just taken his place. Dr. Jones pisses off Gibbs, who is concerned for Abby. About a year ago, the company became involved in the medical study of Afghanistan veterans. They discovered a number were suffering from a fatigue and got a contact to research the Afghanistan War Syndrome. They don't know where Dr. Heller is. Gibbs wants Abby returned for her own safety, but Abby refuses to leave. King returns to Abby's lab. He and Abby play a game of chess. Abby and he save the research bunnies.

The team continues their search for Dr. Heller. The FBI have had a BOLO out on him for a week. He is a biologist, not an MD. He had a gambling addiction but does not spend more than he earns. Gibbs and DiNozzo go to check out Dr. Heller's wife. She is having a garage sale and is hostile about him. He said he was going out for a walk and never came back. She is pissed. They trace flowers bought on Dr. Heller's credit card and Dr. Heller ran when they tried to get inside. He was carrying a stun gun.

Under Gibbs' interrogation, Heller says he was accosted by Riggs when he was talking a walk. Riggs stuck a gun in Heller's face, so Heller stunned him. He thought it was a simple mugging, so he did not call the police. Gibbs states he is not telling the truth and he did not go home because Heller knew it was not a mugging but a hit, and they knew where he lived. Heller admits they are trying to kill him because he discovered the truth: the tests were compartmentalized, so it took him a while to figure out that he was building a weapon, not working on a cure for the sick people.

Abby shows up at King's room ready to play chess, only to find an intern on his cell phone ("I don't know where they all came from, but suddenly there were about a dozen rabbits in the hall.") It appears King is dead. She tells his room that she did it - she isolated the "never mind. You would find that so boring. It's not a cure but maybe some day...." And then you hear Tony yell "Found her!" Ziva and Dr. Heller arrive to state the lab is secure.

Back at NCIS, Abby is outraged (Abby's Rule # 1: Do not lie to Abby). Someone has already downloaded all of Abby's research. Jones is gone; an aide said he left in a hurry. They put out a BOLO and coordinate with local LEOs (law enforcement officers). Abby explains that she created an enzyme to target the G cells of the sick soldier. He had Dr. Heller create an immunogen to kill off foreign matter. Together they can be used to target only the intended victim. "Heller made the bullet and I made the gun." He didn't build it to kill someone, he built it to sell it.

Abby's lab is a mess still, but she works away at her computer hacking into Nurse Dunstan's file as a hunch. She emails the file to Tony to send out a BOLO. She tells Gibbs she cannot find any sign that there ever was an Afghanistan War Syndrome. Someone in the lab was swapping out their diseased blood with health samples. Doctors had sick patients but normal test results, so they thought they had a war syndrome on their hands. Jones tricked the army into financial the project and Nurse Dunstan was on call every time there was a blood test.

Ziva calls that they found Nurse Dunstan's body. Down in autopsy we discover she was strangled. McGee advises Abby picked up a data fetch from Jones' smart phone; she got an airline and a flight number. Abby is outraged that Jones is left to sit: "Sit!?! He gets a chair!?!". Gibbs enters the interrogation room and Jones offers to make a deal to cooperate. He is surprised when Gibbs mentions a killing. He is not selling the research, he's running because he was embezzling the funds. Abby's success would mean a GOA audit and he would be found out. Abby bursts in and accuses him of falsifying medical records, like King's. He does not know King and he knows every patient in that hospital. Gibbs only response is "Find him."

We see King at a laptop typing a message that says "I have the package. Auction starts at noon." Gibbs and Abby confront him with Tony and Tim as backup. In response to his question "What did I do wrong?" he learns he was playing with the wrong forensic scientist: fingerprints and unencrypted emails got him.

McGee gets off the elevator and Tony is puzzled looking at Abby but not approaching her or her lab. They both had gotten an email from Gibbs to meet them down in the lab. It is not until they step into the lab and the door shuts and locks behind them that they realize Gibbs doesn't use email. Palmer greets them cheerfully from the floor, which he has been scrubbing clean. They each have cleaning buckets with supplies and their names on them. Abby just smiles at them and waves.

Callen), Barrett Foa (Tech Operator Eric Beal), Merik Tadros (Michael Rivkin), Brian Avers (Mattie Ray), Brian Burnett (Benji Kass), Peter Cambor (Operational Psychologist Nate Getz), Daniela Ruah (Special Agent Kensi Blye), LL Cool J (Special Agent Sam Hanna), Louise Lombard (Special Agent Lara Macy)
Production Code: 135
Summary: The team heads to LA to work with the team there to solve a murder investigation, which soon turns into something bigger. Meanwhile, Tony begins snooping into Ziva's private life.

In L.A. NCIS agents Sam and Kensi follow a man carrying a briefcase full of cash walking down the street. The man is shot at and Kensi is almost hit by a car. The man drops the case and escapes. Tony answers Ziva's phone and hears a man with a deep voice. Ziva takes the phone and talks to the man in Hebrew. Gibbs tells the team that they have to investigate the death of a Marine. They go to a construction site and find a dead man suspended in the air by ropes tied to all of his limbs. They see that the Marine is named Nick Chandler. They see that Chandler arrived from Los Angeles that morning. They also see that Chandler's left shoe is missing. Ducky arrives and sees the Chandler was subjected to electrocution torture before he died.

At headquarters, Ziva finds that Chandler rented a car, but didn't pick it up. They figure that someone picked up Chandler at the airport. McGee sees that another NCIS team put out a BOLO for Chandler.

Vance shows Gibbs the tape of when Chandler was shot at in L.A. He tells Gibbs that Chandler was on the way to make a cash drop to a group of weapons dealers. He says that Chandler panicked and went to D.C. to see his mother. Gibbs tells Vance that the government organization in charge of Chandler's case is the Office of Special Projects led by Lara Macy. Gibbs says that Macy might have a problem working with him. Gibbs tells McGee to fly with him to L.A. Tony asks McGee what he is going to talk to Gibbs about during the 5 hour plane ride. He suggests that he shouldn't mention divorce or marriage. Gibbs goes to the Abby's lab. She tells Gibbs that Macy wants her to send all of her findings about Chandler. Abby sees that Gibbs knows Macy. Abby tells Gibbs that she is worried because the last time the team went to L.A., they lost a member.

Tony calls Ziva and she tells him that she is following a lead and can't talk. Meanwhile, Ziva has lunch with a man named Michael (the same man we saw was in the Morocco bar when it exploded - 6.0 Last Man Standing). He grabs Ziva's hand and tells her that her father sends her his love. McGee and Gibbs arrive at a warehouse holding the offices of the OSP.

Agent Kensi shows them into the office. Gibbs says that he slept during the entire flight. Gibbs tells Kensi that he has been at the office before. Gibbs enters the office and sees that Macy is holding a conference with Vance on a big screen. Macy asks Gibbs if he still drinks coffee. She gives Gibbs the file on Chandler. Gibbs tells Macy that he thinks her team was spotted by the men that Chandler was supposed to meet. Macy says that Chandler was supposed to meet with a suspected arms dealer named Liam. Macy tells Gibbs to let her do the job. Nate, the OSP's operational psychologist tells Macy that Gibbs doesn't trust her. Macy tells Nate to find Callen.

Gibbs calls Tony and asks if he spotted anyone picking up Chandler at the airport. Tony says that Chandler got lost in the crowd. Gibbs tells McGee to stay at OSP HQ while he visits a friend. Later, Gibbs meets with Agent Callen. Callen asks him if he is done building his boat. He asks Gibbs if he saw Macy and he says that he did. Callen sees a Russian girl approach and pretends that he is a Russian mobster. He tells Gibbs that he is putting up the act because she is his neighbor and he wants her to be scared of him so she doesn't look into his life.

Macy calls Callen and tells him that they have him on camera and microphone. Callen enters a cafe and meets with a man named Talia.

Callen pretends that he is a weapons dealer. Talia says that he has a client that wants to purchase big toys. Callen asks Talia if he is wired. Talia asks the same question. Callen asks him when he wants to meet. Talia says the next day, but Callen says that he can't do it.

Talia gets a message from a man sitting across the cafe that says that Callen is a cop. Talia tells Callen to buzz off. At the OSP headquarters, Mike the technician tells the team that they intercepted the call that Talia made in the cafe. They listen to the call and hear that he is speaking to a man named Liam. They figure that Talia is connected to Chandler's case.

Macy tells Sam to give Gibbs and McGee a full brief on the case. Callen asks Macy what happened between her and Gibbs. She says that she doesn't want to talk about it. Callen says that he will just ask Gibbs about them.

Tony goes to Ducky's lab. He sees that Tony wants to talk about personal things. Tony says that he is concerned about Ziva and asks him if he knows about her work in Israel. Ducky says that Ziva was on a mission and almost died. He says that he saw a news story of a bombing with Ziva. Ducky says that Abby found skin cells on the rope. He says that Chandler's murderer probably has a bad rope burn. Tony looks at the tape and sees the man that Ziva has a picture of. Tony has Abby run facial recognition software on the man and learns that the man is named Michael.

Sam, Gibbs, and McGee look over the tape of the shooting. They pull up an ATM video and find the image of the man that shot at Chandler in L.A. Sam sends the photo of the man to Abby. Ziva does research and learns about a case with a similar method of murder as Chandler. They go to a construction site and examine a truck. Two men, the Kass brothers, ask them what they want. Ziva sees Chandler's missing shoe and the brothers realize that they have been caught. One of the brothers run up a scaffolding, slips and grabs on a pole. Tony sees that the man has a rope burn. The man tells Tony that he killed Chandler as a favor for a man named Liam.

The OSP sees that Talia is on the phone. He asks the man how he knew Callen was a cop. The man asks Talia how he got his number. Talia says that he got it from the waitress after he gave it to her. Talia asks Matty, the man on the phone, if he wants to run guns for him. He tells him to meet him downtown. The OSP stakes out a parking garage and see Talia and Matty. They see an SUV pull up that they recognize as belonging to Liam. They see that Liam has a gun. The team surround the men and kill the dealers in the SUV. Gibbs learns that Matty is actually an undercover OSP agent. They arrest Talia. They find that the men are staying at a hotel. They go to the building and see that the room is full of weapons and cash. They return to the base and learn that Liam was a weapons dealer. Nate says that Liam built up his reputation without anyone knowing his true identity (the full fake life and history that can stand up to scrutiny is a "legend", a name coined in Germany during the cold war). They instruct Callen to pose as Liam.

Abby tells Tony that Michael Rivkin is connected with the head of the Mossad, Ziva's dad. Tony tells Abby to never tell Ziva what they now know. Later, Tony meets up with Ziva and learns that Michael has left Washington, D.C. It is a very uncomfortable elevator ride for Ziva, during which she lies by insinuating that Micheal is not (and has not been) in DC.

Meanwhile, Callen gets a knock on his door when he is posing as Liam. Michael enters the room, thinks that Callen is Liam and tells him that he is glad to finally be able to meet him. To Be Continued is displayed.

Summary: In Los Angeles, Gibbs and McGee continue working with the NCIS division in order to track a terrorist cell. Agent Callen goes undercover, while a psychologist uncovers the truth about the relationship between Gibbs and Agent Macy. Meanwhile, Tony fears that Ziva may not be loyal to NCIS.

Continue from the previous episode. Callen confirms he has the passports and everything Michael wants right here. LA NCIS does a face search on Michael, but before they get the results Michael pulls a gun on Callen, demanding "who are you?" Macy panics and sends in the support agents. Callen is frustrated because he knows Michael was not going to shoot, which Michael confirms. Gibbs just smiles (like he knew Macy would screw up). The on-site psych, Nate, confirms Michael was "probably" not going to shoot. McGee is surprised when the ID of Michael pops up in 6 seconds. Michael is cocky and announces he is Mossad. Shoulders and faces fall all around in the OSP bullpen. Michael states Ziva David can verify him. (Episode credits play)

Tony enters the DC bullpen and is told by Ziva that Gibbs wants them in MTAC. Ziva identifies Michael as Mossad but denies having any other information on him. Michael's cover is as an Israeli banker. He supposedly arrived 3 days ago to track down a terrorist cell. Michael is posing as Nick Quaderi, who is in bed - killed by Michael before he said any more than the weapons are here. One of the others is named Haziq, address unknown. Macy reminds Michael that foreign intel agencies are not authorized to act within US borders - go home! With a GPS tracker on his rental, Michael is sent on his way - with agent Renko (spelling?) tailing.

Gibbs tells Macy he trusts Ziva with his life. She tells Gibbs not to judge on 18 years ago. He asks her quietly "what'd you find?" She looks him straight on but does not answer. He walks away and we see Nate watching the interaction. Before Nate can follow her, McGee stops him to summarize: Mossad gets a lead in Yemen about a cell in LA, sends Michael to eliminate, kills Quaderi after he learns he is meeting with an arms dealer named Liam - the only problem is that we are hunting the same terrorist cell. Nate advises that terrorist cells are like families: close knit, always checking on each other. If they lose contact with one of their own, it may trigger them to step up the attack. Next move is to find Haziq - before he panics. Nate thinks Michael knows the IDs of the rest of the cell. (We don't.)

Nate follows Macy, who tells him no one knows him but he knows everyone. "Not Gibbs" is his reply. "So you go back 18 years?" he asks. She turns and looks at him, to which he replies, "I wasn't listening." Pause. "Odd word, occasional phrase." She almost smiles, then begins: Gibbs was a gunnery sergeant. She was a green, Lt MP working a JAG man murder investigation. She was lead investigator. Gibbs was the suspect.

Search finds apartment (apt) rental agreement for Quaderi, no photo, no ID. Gibbs reads McGee as having a concern ("You got something else?"), but McGee says no. He returns to the Michael database hit and finds that Abby did the last search. Gibbs meets up at the marina with Renko, watching Michael having coffee on a restaurant terrace. Gibbs tells Renko to sand with the grain of the wood. Sam and Callen are approaching Nick Quaderi's apt. Sure 'nuf he's dead in bed. Stabbed. Sam downloads from Quaderi's laptop. He steps into the bedroom and closes the door when they hear keys in the door. Callen immediately acts like he is on his cell phone with someone. Quaderi's girlfriend ("sort of"), Shakira, enters and demands to know who Callen is. He introduces himself as Liam, a friend of Nick who gave him a key and is supposed to meet him here. Sam calls Callen's cell. Callen pretends it's Nick. She tells him they are to meet him at Haziq's. She knows where it is and will drive. Sam let's Macy know Callen is back in the game.

At Haziq's autobody shop, Haziq is suspicious but lets them in. Sam has followed and calls for backup. Cameron busts her front headlight so she can plant a camera at the shop. Callen hands over his gun and cell, which Haziq tosses aside (it just happens to land face out). Haziq asks where Rafi is, but Shakira does not know. Meanwhile at OSP McGee handles the high-tech display like a pro: "sweet", he declares. OSP activates the cell and has instant camera and audio (with Sam interpreting what Haziq is saying on his cell phone conversation. McKenzie shows up and plants the camera just inside the door.

McGee traces Haziq's call. It is from Nasim Boutros at the marina hotel Michael is staking out. Nasim is on his way home, where Michael awaits him. Alert Gibbs, who is watching Michael spot someone and get up from his table. Macy tells Gibbs Vance has cleared a Visa warrant against Michael - get him. They get upstairs too late. Michael is gone and Nasim is shot dead.

Back at the shop, the boys are panicking. Callen is on the couch talking with Shakira, who knows nothing. Haziq demands delivery in 1 hour and gives Callen his cell. He tells Sam to bring the suitcases in 1 hour. Nothing on finding Michael again yet.

McGee calls Abby, who panics that he will know she is at his desk and what she has done. (She has overly decorated his desk with "miss you" items, since she can't do Gibbs' desk?) Tony assures her, "McGenious is smart, but he doesn't know everything." Abby gives herself away immediately, but he gets down to business immediately. She gives the phone to Tony, who updates Tony about Rifkin. He cuts Tim off about probing Ziva, but clearly intends to do so himself. Deep contemplation moment with Tony.

Macy sums it up: Nick Quaderi dead, killed by Rifkin; only know he has a girlfriend, Shakira, who has a brother Rafi Zayd (no photo or info). Nasim Boutros, stabbed by Rifkin. Jumah, who works at the body shop. And Haziq Khaleel, who owns the body shop. men born outside the US, no criminal records, on no watch lists. "A classic sleeper cell", pipes Nate, "Rifkin's making sure none of them wake up." Gibbs adds, "5 people. 4 passports. 4 suitcases. Something's missing." "No. 5 is the handler" opines Macy. We're missing something or someone.

Ziva enters the bullpen she and Tony exchange terse conversation. She is made at him for not believing she would tell the truth. "Maybe you should have told them more? Like how well you know him?" he asks. He lets her know she saw him 3 days ago in DC and wonders why she did not tell that. He denies being jealous and gets angry while explaining Rifkin's interference with NCIS doing their job. She defends Rifkin. She denies knowing where to find him, admits she would not tell Tony, but would tell Gibbs.

Back on the couch, Shakira indicates that Rafi dragged Nick into it. She shows a cell phone picture of Rafi - that is who they thought was Nick, dead in bed. She shows the only photo she has of Nick, who is Michael. Callen tries to convince Shaqira to call Nick at an alternative number. She declares she is leaving but Haziq slaps her back to the couch. She gives Callen "Nick's" alternate cell number. Callen yells the info to Haziq so OSP gets the info. They immediately trace the cell to find Michael is almost at the shop. Macy, nervous, orders Sam in with his team. She wants Haziq alive, so even though Sam is shot at by Haziq, Sam only shoots Haziq arm and leg. Rifkin is met in the alley by Gibbs, who tells him to leave. Gibbs states that Ziva works for him, to which Michael only says "Shalom."

Back at the OSP bullpen everyone is saying their good-bys to Gibbs and McGee. Macy is watching from above. Callen passes McGee a Sniper Monthly magazine indicating "it always works for me." Macy walks back into her office. Nate follows them down in the elevator and asks to speak privately with Gibbs. He tells Gibbs "a story: about a young Lt 18 years ago, who investigated a murder. A marine gunnery Sgt had taken out a Mexican drug dealer had killed the Sgt's family. The Lt did not hold back; stated he just wanted closure for his wife and daughter to rest in peace. She got all the evidence together and buried it. Decided it was a just killing. Nate guesses that the guy never knew she had been protecting him all of these years. (Part of this story is told in 6.15 Deliverance. Now we know the "why" of Columbia.) Gibbs says nothing, but pauses at the car, nods at the camera, smiles and look away, knowing Macy is watching him. Macy is pleased.

Sam and Callen are in a car. Callen is contemplative. He feels like someone is watching him. He gets out of the car, exchanges looks with the Russian girl, who looks up the street. A van pulls through the corner and guns Callen down as he and the girl are smiling at each other. She just turns and walks away while Sam runs to him. Callen is sll alive, barely.

At the DC bullpen, Abby tells Tony that Rifkin flew out of LA today, unescorted. Destination: Tel Aviv, with a stopover in DC. Cut to him sleeping in bed next to Ziva, who is wide awake and worrying.

Show Stars: Pauley Perrette (Forensics Specialist Abby Sciuto), Michael Weatherly (Special Agent Tony DiNozzo), Mark Harmon (Special Agent Leroy Jethro Gibbs), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), David McCallum (Chief Medical Examiner Ducky Mallard), Cote de Pablo (Mossad Agent Ziva David), Rocky Carroll (Director Leon Vance)
Recurring Role: Joe Spano (Senior FBI Agent T.C. Fornell)
Guest Stars: John Wickersham (ICE Agent Thomas Sherman), Merik Tadros (Michael Rivkin), Steven M. Gagnon (CIA Director Roger Kirkwood), Tom Kemp (Assistant Secretary of ICE Len Gregory), William Allen Young (FBI Director Barry Hutchins), Jaime Murray (ICE Agent Julia Foster-Yates), Jude Ciccolella (Secretary of the Navy Phillip Davenport)
Production Code: 137
Summary: When an ICE agent is murdered after a security breach at the SecNav's residence, the NCIS team is forced to work with the FBI and the ICE in order to solve the murder. Meanwhile, Tony faces Rivkin.

In the morning, Tony, McGee, and Ziva meet outside. The dead agent is ICE – Immigration-Customs Enforcement. FBI has jurisdiction in the death of a federal agent. Tony compares the arrival of FBI with clowns and starts a comparison of the situation with a three-ring circus, and then upon Ducky's arrival goes into junior ringmaster mode. (riding a motorcycle looks cool and all, but nobody messes with the man driving an elephant). Ziva mentions the poker game, and McGee says he would like to have been a fly on the wall during the poker game in order to eavesdrop.

Gibbs sees Ducky and tells SecNav, who assigns the investigation to NCIS, supported by FBI and ICE. He sends CIA home, saying "my house, my rules." Fornell introduces Agent Julia Foster-Yates to Gibbs. She says that she was assigned the protection detail for the poker game.

Outside, Tony discovers the bitten off tongue of Agent Sherman. Jules arrives and says that he was flailing. Ducky discovers a bruise on the side of his neck, showing that he was attacked. Jules doubts this to be true since the security web was her design and was "air tight."

Inside, McGee informs Gibbs and Fornell that the surveillance cameras showed the patio was a blind spot. Fornell says the heads of these agencies get together a couple of times a year. They rotate responsibilities. Gibbs is bothered by the fact that NCIS was not represented.

Outside, Ducky discovers a bug that had been planted on the window and dislodged by Agent Sherman. Ziva reports to Gibbs that the bug was damaged. Jules takes the bug and steps on it, saying, "It's best not to take any chances."

Act Two Abby complains to McGee about "the bug stomp" since she will have to put it together before she can track it. McGee tells her that Jules stomped it. Abby hopes to have a word with "Jules." McGee would like to be there for that. Abby looks at the poker hands and chips in evidence and recognizes that they weren't really playing well.

In Vance's office, Vance, Fornell and Gibbs talk about the poker game and the fact that Vance was not there. Vance says he "cleaned the all out" last month. Ducky is working on the autopsy. Ziva and Tony are following up on the protection detail and scouring the grounds with Agent Foster-Yates.

At SecNav's home, Ziva leads Tony and Jules as she follows a trail of heavy footfalls. Tony and Jules chat about team dynamics. Meanwhile, Ziva climbs a tree where branches have been cleared out. She speculates that when the protection detail went in toward the house, the killer went up and over the fence and out the gate. Ziva's phone rings. McGee calls to tell them that Gibbs wants them to return to the office. Tony questions why McGee didn't call him first. When he checks his cell phone, he discovers he doesn't have a signal. Only Ziva, in the tree, has a signal on her phone.

In Autopsy, Ducky demonstrates to/on Fornell how the choke hold on Sherman would have caused him to blackout. However, in the autopsy, Ducky found that Sherman had a stroke and that the choke hold was not meant to be fatal. Fornell gives Ducky a wide birth when he departs.

In the elevator, Jules flirts with Tony. Ziva questions Jules about why an NCIS agent wasn't tasked with his protection. She reaches for the elevator switch and together Tony and Ziva confront Jules. She says she was instructed not to reveal any details. This was an intelligence summit and she didn't know the subject, but whatever it was, someone was willing to kill to find out.

Act Three Gibbs and Fornell arrive in the squadroom to talk to Jules. Gibbs orders her to tell what she knows about the op. When her perimeter design is questioned, McGee offers to take the surveillance footage and the position reports to create an animated model. Jules and McGee are assigned the task. Ziva and Tony are assigned background of the agents and investigating known operatives in the area. The knowing look between Ziva and Tony implies that Ziva's friend, Michael Rivkin, is on Tony's short list.

Gibbs and Fornell enter Vance's office to find SecNav there with Vance. SecNav briefs them. Reminding them of what happened 8 years before, at the start of a new president's administration, SecNav says that 9-11 happened because agencies didn't work together. Once again, they've let too many foreign nationals through the borders. Mossad's Rivkin is one mentioned specifically. The poker game has two purposes: to decrease the chatter leading up to the game, and to make it easier for the agency heads to talk. Gibbs points out that NCIS wasn't represented. Too quickly, SecNav replies, "I was there." Gibbs asks about the survivor from the cell in California, Haziq Khaleel. (See 6.22-6.23 Legend)Vance says that he gave up his handler, Abin Tabal. (This is new name to us.) No word on Callen's shooter. Gibbs reports that Callen is still critical. Fornell says that he has an Abin Tabal on the FBI watch list in DC. SecNav says to find him.

Tony and Ziva report to Fornell what they have discovered about Tabal. Ziva gets a phone call from Rivkin. Fornell says that Tabal must run between the African camps and the sleeper cells, then orders Tony to "find the guy." Tony isn't happy taking orders from someone who believed when he (Tony) was framed for murder. Ziva leaves to meet Rivkin, without telling she was doing so - in fact, she is speaking in Hebrew to hide it. Tony looks up on the internet a translation of what Ziva said in Hebrew on the phone.

In Abby's lab, McGee and Jules work on the animation of the perimeter. They look at the surveillance camera on the access road footage. Jules puts her hand on McGee's and thanks him for coming to her rescue. Abby is not happy about the flirting and confronts Jules about the bug. When Jules finds out that Abby can reconstruct the bug, she boldly says, "What's the problem?" Abby asks about her training in martial arts. Jules loves Muay Thai. Abby realizes that she's beaten, turns to McGee and says, "And in my own lab." Jules and McGee discover that a car had been circling the SecNavs house that night. After running the plates, McGee and Jules leave to report to Gibbs. Gibbs confronts Vance with the fact that he was the one circling SecNav's house. Gibbs tells him that he's tired of having information withheld. Vance agrees. He says that Dir. Hutchins (FBI) had let word of the game slip before he found out that Vance wasn't invited. He wasn't invited because they were meeting to talk about him.

Ziva and Rivkin meet at an open-air cafe. Rivkin is drinking. Tony calls Ziva and lies that he has found Tabal. She leaves the cafe. Tony arrives at the table with Rivkin's drink.

Act Four Tony and Rivkin toss insults at each other. Tony orders Rivkin out of town. Rivkin says that Tony is like a brother to Ziva and that Tony can't question Ziva's feeling for Rivkin. Tony once again repeats his order for Rivkin to get out of town.

Ziva arrives at NCIS headquarters to find McGee and Jules going over the perimeter. It's a sophisticated pattern, but there is a hole in the net. Jules's explanation is that it was an error. Fornell tries to comfort Jules by saying, "Nobody's perfect." Gibbs asks Ziva about the backgrounds. She gives him what she has so far. Jules needs to check in with her boss. McGee gets a call from Abby. She needs his help with the bug. Gibbs asks Fornell if he will vouch for "the ICE princess." Fornell answers that she's cold on the outside, "but when she opens up she's full of beans, molten cheese, like a microwave burrito."

At Tony's desk, Ziva finds a note in Tony's trash, it's the translation of what she said on the phone—the location of the cafe where she met Rivkin. In Abby's lab, Abby tells McGee that when the bug is working properly, it emits a signal that can piggy-back on any available internet connection and then upload the audio to a live stream on a private website. McGee recognizes that Abby didn't really need his help, and asks her if she's feeling neglected. She says she's not feeling neglected, but didn't like watching him flirt with Jules. But, when he says that she's out of his league anyway, Abby says, "No, she's not."

Tony arrives back at NCIS and Ziva confronts him in his lie. Tony says that Rivkin was in LA on business just like he is in DC on business. Ziva said she would have introduced him if he'd have asked. Tony replies that he was just doing his job. Gibbs has told him to leave, he's told him to leave. Maybe Ziva should ask him to leave. Ziva defends Rivkin. Jules walks up and asks for the location of the conference room. Tony escorts her. In the conference room, Jules reports to Gibbs and Fornell on the status of the search for Tabal. Fornell and Gibbs have been looking over the results of the interviews with her team on the op. Sherman had more experience and had a problem taking orders from a women with less seniority. Fornell asked about her feelings about Sherman. Gibbs points out that he was a thorn in her side. Jules stops them before they go any further and explains that she'd been covering for Sherman. He was out of position. He wasn't supposed to be on the patio. He's dead for the same reason that he didn't get the promotion. He didn't operate as part of the team. Gibbs gets a call. They have a lead on Tabal. At Tabal's apartment, they find schematics of SecNav's house and the body of Abin Tabal.

Act Five In autopsy, Ducky has determined that Tabal bit down on a suicide capsule. Ducky says that if Tabal had decided that he's a threat to the cause, it fits the psychology to kill himself. Tabal has wiped his computer, but Abby is sifting through it. She's already connected the laptop to the electronics in the bug. "Smoking Gun. Case Closed. Write it up."

In the squadroom, Jules tells the team that it's been good working with them. McGee offers to walk her out. When McGee asks what Gibbs and Fornell had to say, she tells McGee that they were apologizing to her for implying that she might have killed Sherman. McGee is shocked that they would apologize. He says it would take a while to explain the significance. She responds that he can explain it to her because she has no plans. Ziva says good night to Tony and leaves. Gibbs reminds Tony of rule number 11: when the job is done, walk away. Tony's not happy with the way the case closed. When Gibbs asks what is on his mind, Tony tells him that Rivkin is in town, with Ziva. Both are bothered that Rivkin is in town. Gibbs tells Tony to stay on him.

Later, in Gibbs's basement, SecNav comes to talk, bearing the bottle of bourbon that Gibbs gave him. SecNav talks about his brother, that he preferred psychological warfare. He asks why he's been digging dirt on Vance, if it was to get closer to him. Gibbs hands SecNav Vance's unopened CIA file, and says that he never asked for it. SecNav opens it. He finds a copy of the same reference that Vance shredded in "Judgement Day." He wonders how it keeps coming out in the open and that it's not even real.

In Abby's lab, Abby and Tony look at Tabal's laptop. While the rest of the laptop has been wiped, he didn't erase the network connections, so they can still see where he was connected to the internet. One of the addresses is Ziva's apartment.

Ziva, in her car, tries to call Hadar.

In Gibbs's basement, SecNav tries to assure Gibbs that he trusts Vance and that he knows his background. Gibbs says that at the poker game they were discussing how to use Vance. SecNav assures Gibbs that he's not the only one looking after the integrity of NCIS. He proceeds to tell Gibbs that Vance will be heading up a major operation against Mossad. Part of the problem is that the daughter of the Director of Mossad is part of NCIS. SecNav tells Gibbs that he and Vance have to play nice. He doesn't have to trust him, just follow him. Tony arrives at Ziva's apartment to find Rivkin. Rivkin thinks Tony might have come to comfort Ziva after Rivkin's departure. Tony tells him he's there on a case. That Tabal's laptop was connected to Ziva's home account. Rivkin asks if he was there to question Ziva about this connection. Tony replies that he was until Rivkin opened the door. Tony goes to arrest Rivkin in the deaths of Abin Tabal and Agent Sherman. Rivkin attacks him. They struggle. Rivkin lands on a glass table and is impaled by a shard of glass. Tony crawls to his gun. Rivkin takes out the glass shard and moves to attack Tony. Tony fires. Ziva enters the apartment.

Guest Stars:	Inger Tudor (Doctor Sandra Holdren), Omid Abtahi (Salim), Merik Tadros (Michael Rivkin), Arnold Vosloo (Mossad Officer Amit Hadar), Michael Nouri (Mossad Director Eli David)
Production Code:	138
Summary:	After Tony's confrontation with Rivkin, the NCIS team flies to Israel for a final showdown, where they aren't exactly welcome by Ziva's father, the head of Mossad. Gibbs has to make a tough choice as the situation gets even more complicated.

We see Ziva driving to her apartment, calling someone and asking for extraction . When she arrives at her apartment, she sees Tony's car and 2 shims fighting in her apartment (Tony & Rivkin). When she enters her apartment, she hears 3 shots and sees Tony lying on the floor, holding a gun, with a dying Rivkin in the background. Ziva tries to reanimate Rivkin, and screams to Tony that he should call an ambulance, now! Tony glares back.

Opening credits

The hospital; Ziva waits in the corridor; Tony is there too but he is not with her. Gibbs arrives and Tony justifies himself to Gibbs, who tells him to write it up. Ziva reports Rivkin is dead and she will be submitting an IA report.

McGee is talking to Gibbs on the way to the apartment and saying he can't believe he is going to see Ziva's new apartment; he tells Gibbs he has seen Tony rummaging in Ziva's desk. As they are talking about possible Mossad reprisals, on the way from the car, Ziva's apartment blows up.

It's doubly a crime scene now, and Gibbs and McGee are going through it McGee finds a hidden laptop, but it is fire-damaged. Gibbs finds cuts in the gas pipes, but no-one smelled gas; they find what might be the trigger.

Ziva is in autopsy, saying farewell to Rivkin. Ducky enters and asks about what Jewish rituals might be appropriate, but Ziva brushes it off. Rituals only work for those that need them.

Gibbs asks McGee for a retrospective trace on a cellphone, Ziva's....

Now Gibbs and Ziva have a conversation; Gibbs tells Ziva about her apartment; Ziva is defensive. In a fatherly way, Gibbs tells her that this is her home, but she denies it.

Vance is interviewing Tony; Tony says he wanted to talk to Ziva because he wanted to protect her (Rivkin being the bad guy, not Ziva the traitor.)

Gibbs is down in autopsy, where Ducky confirms Tony's view of events; both here and in the Vance-Tony interview, everyone is puzzled how Tony won. But then Gibbs come up; the autopsy shows that Rivkin was drunk; that's how he lost.

Vance tells Tony off for breach of procedure and says he has to take one for the team.

Ziva appears saying she has seen McGee's crime scene photos and realises the trigger for the bomb (which conceals the odour of gas) is a Mossad technique (though not exclusively so).

At this point Vance says he will grant the favour the Israelis have asked; to send the team for a visit to Israel.

In Israel, the team (Vance, Gibbs, Tony, Ziva only) is welcomed by Mossad Officer Hadar, who asks Tony to go with him; Ziva assures Gibbs Tony is in no danger; only two people have the authority to hurt him - her father and Ziva herself.

We see a cold greeting between Ziva and her father, and a wary one between her father and Gibbs; though Director David does say Ziva speaks of him, Gibbs, very highly.

Tony is waiting in the interrogation room, or, as Director David corrects him, a meeting room. Tony carries on with what Vance calls his smart-ass attitude; Gibbs says Tony knows what he is doing.

Director David tells Tony he knows all about him; then he asks about Rivkin; he suggests Tony was ignorant about Rivkin and had gone to Ziva's apartment to confront him because he was jealous of him.

Tony responds that Director David had a history of sending out of control agents, even his own son Ari; David is taken aback - I'll be damned, says Vance to Gibbs.

Gibbs speaks to Abby and McGee; they are optimistic they can get something out of Rivkin's laptop; and also Ziva did speak to Hadar (as Gibbs guesses) 6 hours before the blast in her apartment on an encrypted line

Cut immediately to Ziva with Hadar in a headlock asking him to talk and suggesting he completely went against her request to get Rivkin out safely. Hadar says Rivkin was "in chaos" (having killed an American agent) and Ziva did not tell her father. Hadar says Ziva called him too late and was herself responsible for Rivkin's death.

Ziva tells Gibbs Mossad set the fire and she feels betrayed by everyone except (so far) Gibbs.

Director David is now in conference with Vance; Vance resents Mossad's feeling that the US is too lax about domestic threats, he says they have to be patient and that is why one agent on each side is dead. After all, in this case Rivkin was following Mossad orders.

David says the mission is that Mossad is looking for a terrorist training camp in N Africa, and had sent Rivkin to the US to locate it through one of its offshoot sleeper cells in LA, for the intel but killing the cell along the way. Vance understands but David says not everyone in the US does and Rivkin was spying on the 'softer' side when he killed the US agent by accident.

Vance says the location of the camp was never found; David says it is about the head of the camp (presumably the hunt for him will occupy some of Season 7)

Now Ziva and Tony are arguing; Tony says he has no choice but Ziva is still angry. Tony suggests she might wish Rivkin were alive and he, Tony, dead. Ziva says Tony took advantage of Rivkin's drunk condition; Tony says Ziva's account is all wrong; Tony suggests Ziva hit him, and she does; we see she feels guilty she was not there in the apartment.

Back in NCIS McGee and Abby have resurrected the information on Rivkin's laptop. But it's not Rivkin's, it's Abin Tabal's, the dead handler of the sleeper cell. All the info about N Africa is there; Rivkin used the laptop for e-mail (seems as if he swapped it over with his own after killing the handler) but there is correspondence with Ziva, so she had been withholding information.

Now Ziva is confronting her father; she did not know Rivkin's mission- she asks why she was not told? And her father says that it is because he does not know whether he can trust her any more or whether her loyalties are actually to NCIS. If she wants to show her loyalty, let her perform her Aliyah by completing Rivkin's mission.

The team is getting on the plane back; Tony is jolly, pleased to be going. Vance gives Director David the information off the laptop, and David sends thanks to Abby.

Now Ziva speaks to Gibbs; she says she is speaking from the heart (which is not of course the case, we know from the previous scene.) She says she is still not sure Tony is telling the truth and she thinks one of them should be transferred as they cannot work together. Of course she thereby makes Gibbs choose Tony. Gibbs kisses Ziva on the cheek in parting and wishes her well. One short? Tony asks; he does not seem entirely surprised. Ziva is left misty-eyed on the tarmac.

Abby gives the team a comically happy welcome; the mood of course plummets when Tony explains Ziva is not coming back, and that it was Gibbs' decision.

In the next scene, we see Ducky visiting Gibbs in Gibbs' house. Gibbs explains it wasn't his decision, it was Ziva's own. Ducky can see there is a special bond between Ziva and Gibbs and that it happened much more quickly than with any other agent. Of course we see a flashback to Ziva killing Ari in Gibbs' basement. And of course Gibbs denies the bond, saying that Ziva had proved herself; whatever she did, says Ducky, it wasn't so significant.... or was it?

A freighter; soldiers, Ziva in combat gear pasting the photo of herself and Ari, saved from the fire, on the wall; her father's office with the same photo framed. Gibbs telling Vance that there are good replacements, but Vance knows he hopes Ziva is coming back. The way Gibbs puts this is to say he hopes Ziva will think about it and realise who she can trust.

The conversation between Gibbs and Vance gets more heated; Vance says he feels Gibbs is always watching him, but counters that Gibbs has no idea what he is trying to discover or why he does not trust him.

Vance says Gibbs made the right decision to leave Ziva behind; at this point Gibbs is about to reveal what happened 4 years ago when Ziva killed her brother. But Vance forestalls him, in a twist that is so typical of spy stories; it was all a "plot" by Director David. Because Ari was out of control, David sent Ziva on a mission to kill him. In this sense, he played Gibbs, says Vance; Director David managed to get rid of Ari and get Gibbs to trust Ziva in one move. But Vance admits, so far Ziva has been loyal to NCIS.

Vance argues that if Gibbs is right about Ziva, she will remember and serve NCIS well in Israel; Gibbs counters that if Vance is right about Director David, we won't ever see her again. Tony is trying to call Ziva, and not succeeding - Guess she'll call when she's ready, he says. We kind of know, don't we, that the Ziva we are used to will reappear in Series / Season 7? But meanwhile.....

Last scene- subtitled Somalia, Horn of Africa. Guerrillas and a prison cell; Ziva is sitting in a chair and she has been beaten up and tortured. A soldier enters, plucks the Star of David off her neck and says: 'Tell me everything you know about NCIS.'

Production Code: 139
Summary: With the past still left unresolved, the NCIS team must find a way to put it aside and concentrate on another investigation, but while looking for Ziva's replacement, the team comes to a stunning revelation.

In a small cell in the Middle East, a terrorist asks Tony to tell him who he is and what he is doing there. Tony tells the man he isn't going to tell him anything. The man injects Tony with a truth serum. Tony tells the man he is going to be dead soon. The man says that his name is Saleem Ulman. Tony says that he is part of the NCIS and has the task of investigating cases involving the Navy. As the serum starts to work through his system, Tony tells Saleem about a case a couple of months ago where Gibbs took down a violent officer who was high on drugs. Tony says that one of his members of his team was a Mossad agent. Saleem beats Tony and asks him where the rest of his team is. Tony says he doesn't care where they are. Saleem asks Tony what he was doing in the middle of the desert. Tony says that he was looking for vengeance and admits he is there to kill him.

Saleem asks Tony why he chose him to be the target of his bloodlust. Tony says that a few months ago, he never knew he existed. The show jumps back a few months ago. At headquarters, Tony asks McGee for advice on entertainment components. Gibbs announces that there is another case. McGee tells Gibbs that they should fill in the chair that Ziva left. Gibbs gives Tony a stack of portfolios of potential female coworkers and asks him to pick. They go to the room of a Navy officer who was found dead in his bunk due to an overdose. Ducky arrives at the scene to investigate. He asks if they have heard from Ziva and they say they haven't heard from her.

Tony and McGee bring in a series of women to be interviewed to take over Ziva's position. They meet a woman named Claire who says that she ran into problems in her last job when she got into a relationship with a coworker. They tell her that they will consider her for the job. After she meets with Gibbs, she leaves his office crying. Gibbs tells Tony and McGee she is their first strike.

Back in the Middle East, Saleem tells Tony that when he was in college, his personal drug of choice was caffeine. He takes a drink from his canteen, which causes Tony, who is thirsty, to lick his lips. He asks Tony who is in control of the flow of information at NCIS. He says that the man in charge is Leon Vance. He says that some people don't trust him.

The show jumps back a few months ago. Vance tells Gibbs that he hasn't heard from Ziva. He says that it appears that Ziva is back with the Mossad. He says that Ziva's father, who is head of the Mossad, is tight lipped about his daughter. McGee interrogates the Navy officer that was high on drugs. He says that he thinks that someone slipped drugs into his orange juice. McGee asks him how he figures that and the officer says that he saw it on 90210. Watching outside, Tony tells a potential recruit that he never really liked 90210. Tony tells the woman that McGee is softening the suspect up so Gibbs can crack him. The woman says that she doesn't think the officer knows anything. Gibbs gets in contact with a soldier who reports on a female captive in the Middle East. Tony brings Gibbs a file of the new candidate, Rebecca Hastings. Tony asks Gibbs about the female captive that the soldier was talking about, but he doesn't say anything.

Later, McGee tells Tony that Gibbs approved the new girl to work with them. Tony says that it is not normal that they haven't heard from Ziva. Tony wonders if there is something preventing Ziva from contacting them. Tony says that he wants to find out what happened to Ziva. McGee tells Tony that he won't let him work alone.

Back in the Middle East, Saleem tries to wake up McGee who is unconscious on the floor. Saleem says that it is insane that Tony came halfway around the world to seek revenge because he believes that he is responsible for the Ziva's death. Saleem asks Tony how he found him.

The show jumps back several months. Tony and McGee tell Abby that they have been tracking Ziva's movements. Abby says that she is worried because Ziva hasn't contacted her. They think that Vance knows more than he is willing to say and plan to hack into his computer. Rebecca says that she doesn't want any part of what they are doing, then leaves. A potential agent arrives and asks Tony if he is ready for their interview. Gibbs meets with the Navy officer who was on drugs. The officer says that he still believes that he was drugged. Tony takes the potential recruit to the observation room. Gibbs tells the suspect that he thinks that he is a drug dealer. Tony tells the woman that they are not currently hiring.

Abby figures that Ziva was investigating a man named Saleem. Gibbs tells the team that the ship that Ziva was on was lost at sea. Tony, McGee and Ziva tell Gibbs and Vance that they can locate Saleem by following a supply of caffeine drinks that he is addicted to.

Back in the Middle East, Saleem gets angry that he was caught because of his need for caffeine. He leaves and returns with Ziva. He says that one of them will tell him where the other NCIS operatives are and the other will die. Tony asks Ziva how her summer was. Ziva says that she is surprised that he found her. Tony says that he is glad that she is alive. Ziva asks why he is there and he says that he couldn't live without her. Ziva tells Tony that he should have left her alone. Tony says that he has been drugged by a truth serum, so she can ask him anything. Ziva says that she doesn't deserve anyone to risk their life for her. Ziva says that she is ready to die. Tony says that he has an escape plan. Ziva says that Saleem's men are heavily armed.

The show jumps back a month. Tony shows Gibbs and Vance maps where he suspects Saleem is. Vance says that they can't send in a SEAL team unless they get confirmation that Saleem is in the area. Gibbs tells Tony that if he can confirm that Saleem is there, he can send in Special Forces. Tony and McGee travel to Saleem's hideout. They are surrounded and captured by several masked men.

Back in the cell, Tony tells Ziva that he got captured on purpose. Tony says that they have to stay alive until reinforcements arrive. Saleem walks in with a knife. He says that they are moving out, but they are not taking prisoners. He puts a knife to Ziva's neck. Tony distracts Saleem as McGee kicks him. Saleem pulls out a gun and is about to shoot McGee, but Tony tells him to stop. Tony tells Saleem that he only a few seconds to live. Tony says that his boss is a sniper. A bullet flies through the window and hits Saleem in the head. On a nearby hill, Gibbs orders his team to storm the compound. Tony and McGee carry Ziva to safety. Gibbs meets them and tells them it is time to go home.

They get back to NCIS headquarters where they are met with applause from Vance and the rest of the team. Abby welcomes Ziva back with a hug.

Production Code: 140
Summary: Gibbs is forced to dig into the past when a murder of a Marine and his two friends turns out to be linked to past issues. Meanwhile, Gibbs faces a tough challenge as he holds Ziva's fate in his hands.

A woman shows up at a cracked hotel room door and looks in. She sees a portable DVD player playing a video and music. She aims a gun into the room, walks in and says "Your under arrest you bad bad boys." She's a stripper posing as a cop. She sees one man lying dead on the floor in vomit, another on the bed with a backpack over his head and a third with his head in the toilet. She screams.

In the squadroom, DiNozzo walks in and says good morning to Fillmore, Ziva's replacement. He teases her about her Army Greens but tells her they investigate crimes in the Navy. "Good thing I have a strong ego or I'd think you didn't like me," DiNozzo says. Fillmore ignores him. DiNozzo walks over to McGee and asks if he's heard from Ziva, McGee says he hasn't. DiNozzo says he tried to talk to her on the plane but, then hears Fillmore stop typing. He turns around and says, "These details are classified. Thank you." McGee says they really aren't and DiNozzo says they should be. DiNozzo wants to know what's going on as someone asked him for his autograph. McGee says Janice in psych services asked him out for drinks. DiNozzo describes Janice as "man hands and pretty eyes." McGee tells him Ziva will call when she's ready. Tony replies, "Last time you said that I ended up tied to a chair in North Africa." They wonder how long it will be before Ziva's desk will be empty with McGee giving it a month. Fillmore comes over and tells them she hates to disappoint them, hands McGee a rather lengthy document and tells them it's her letter of resignation. When McGee comments on how long it is she says "I had a hard time choosing the right adjectives. I couldn't decide between childish, juvenile and just plain old annoying." She looks at McGee and says, "And you. You know better. Your just so busy playing the faithful sidekick, you go along for the ride." She tells them to make sure Gibbs gets her resignation and leaves.

Ziva walks down into Gibbs basement (no boat) and apologizes for being late. She thanks him for his help and hands him a gift. Gibbs opens it to find a chisel. Ziva tells Gibbs he's probably thinking she rigged it to explode but Gibbs replies, "No, I'm thinking this is a really nice chisel." Ziva tells him she felt betrayed when he left her in Israel but she has had time to think. She forgot who she could trust, they were a team once and she'd like that again. She came to his house for Gibbs blessing. Gibbs tells her she has to talk to the Director. His phone rings and DiNozzo calls to tell him of a triple homicide. Ziva tries to talk to Gibbs but he tells her she has to talk to Vance. As he heads up the basement stairs, he tells her Vance isn't the only one she has to talk to.

While the team is processing the crime scene, Gibbs arrives. They tell Gibbs that Jeff Ross booked the room for a bachelor party. The stripper found him and she's in the bedroom with her manager, Hector Stuckey. Gibbs and McGee go into the bedroom and Stuckey introduces himself. He hands them his business card, which McGee takes with a pair of tweezers. Stuckey tells them he's a business man and the stripper, Scorpio Sinn, works for him as an entertainer. He pulls out some cologne and sprays McGee with it. Gibbs asks the stripper her story. She tells him she was hired to come in and surprise the men for a bachelor party. She says she showed up as a surprise and when she walked into the room, she found the men dead. Scorpio tells Gibbs the man on the floor (Ross) is the one she met with except he had hair when they met. The team looks at Ross, then DiNozzo pulls the backpack off the man's head to reveal he is bald as well. Ducky pulls the third victim's head out of the toilet and they discover he is also bald. After looking at the man's head, Ducky informs Gibbs they were shaved after they were murdered.

Back in the squadroom, they ID the three men: Alan Sandrich (the groom), Naval Petty Officer, Jeff Ross and business man, Eric Jurell. Gibbs sends McGee and DiNozzo out to Jurell's business to ask questions.

McGee grabs his coat and tells Tony to come on. Tony tells him to not let the sidekick stuff go to his head. He jokes with McGee about how the sidekick is always shorter but McGee stands toe to toe with him and points out they are the same height. The elevator bells rings and Ziva steps out, telling them she finds McGee to be the more handsome. Tony asks why she is there and Vance steps forward and tells Ziva she's right on time.

In Vance's office, Ziva and Vance talk. Vance asks her what her father thinks of her wanting to return to NCIS. Vance asks Ziva how her father feels and she asks what her father's feelings have to do with it. When Vance reminds her she wasn't an NCIS Agent but a Mossad Officer, she tells him she hasn't spoken to her father in months. Vance tells her she is damaged and he has concerns. He tells her she has to pass a psych eval and battery and then they'll talk. As she goes to walk out, Vance tells her he's not making any promises.

McGee and DiNozzo go to Jurell Auctioneers, where there's a very boring lecture being given by Jay Danorth. Danorth tells them he's not surprised that Eric Jurell is dead, everyone wanted him dead. Tony asks him, "Did you wake up this morning wanting to be the prime suspect in a murder investigation?" Danorth tells them to talk to Elaina. She finishes a phone call but is crying. When DiNozzo asks her if she was involved with Jurell, she says no but there were sparks. She felt people misunderstood Jurell but that deep down he was a good man. Elaina tells them she did overhear a phone conversation and Jurell said he felt someone was following him.

In autopsy, Palmer says he's never been to a bachelor party before. Ducky is about to start on one of his stories when Gibbs walks in. Ross was killed by drinking too much; Sandrich was suffocated by putting the backpack over his head and Jurell was drowned in the toilet. Ducky finds a discrepancy in an accident report filed for Ross. The report said he was injured in a hydraulic accident but Ducky finds a gunshot wound on his arm.

In the squadroom, Tim is faux swiping the TV screen (reminiscent of his NCIS: Los Angeles trip). Gibbs walks up behind him and wants an update. Then DiNozzo walks in and tells them he met Sandrich's fiancée and she's engaged again. He makes a crack about fast engagements and Gibbs asks him how long he's going to use that line to which DiNozzo replies, "Last time Boss." McGee makes a comment about how Sandrich wasn't dead 24 hours yet and the fiancée was already engaged. Tony tells them the bachelor party was fake, the real one had taken place 5 months prior. He pops in the bachelor party tape that had taken place 5 months prior. After the fiancée saw it, she broke off the engagement. Gibbs tells DiNozzo to turn off the tape. They want to know what the 2nd bachelor party was covering up for.

DiNozzo and McGee are trying to figure out how they can find out who was tailing Jurrell. Ziva walks up behind them and tells them to track Jurrell's cell phone GPS and they can use the GPS of a repeat cell phone that followed him to find out who the tracker was. Ziva and Tony just stare at each other but say nothing. McGee realizes this and excuses himself saying he's going to get a nutter butter. Tony asks Ziva if she's taking the tour. Ziva says she is on her way for her first psych eval. Tony says he always loved them and Ziva replies, "It's because you always get to talk about yourself all the time." Tony's phone rings and he hands it to Ziva. Abby demands that Ziva get down to her lab immediately. Tony tells Ziva to be careful she doesn't get her own 21 gun salute. Ziva tells him she'll see him later and he says he'll be there.

Ziva walks into Abby's lab, where as always, there is loud music blaring. Abby sees Ziva and gives her an evil look. Abby yells, "What the hell is wrong with you. How could you have doubted Tony?" Abby reads Ziva the riot act about how Ziva wasn't thinking, telling Gibbs she couldn't trust Tony. She babbles about Michael's murder and tells Ziva that after everything Tony did for her, he even risked his life to save her. Abby ends by saying "Tony 1, Ziva zilch!" Abby walks up to Ziva and hugs her. She picks up a remote and we hear a pop and a sign comes down from the ceiling along with confetti. The sign reads "Welcome Home Ziva."

Gibbs heads up to MTAC and talks with Marine Colonel Dick Jestern. Gibbs asks him how Ross got injured as Jestern filed the report. Jestern says that Ross was injured in a hydraulic accident but when Gibbs tells him what Ducky found, Jestern fesses up. He admits he falsified the report because Ross has gone on 2 days leave. When he returned, he had a gunshot to the arm. Ross claims he was with a woman and was shot by the husband. Jestern gave him a verbal reprimand and filed the report. He will complete a corrected report and send it to Gibbs.

Vance walks into MTAC and tells Gibbs that Ziva passed her first psych eval. Vance gives Gibbs the reinstatement paperwork to sign. Gibbs asks what Eli David thinks. Vance says he has things to work out. Vance senses Gibbs hesitation and reminds Gibbs he is the one who said he wanted Ziva back and asks if that is how Gibbs still feels. Gibbs says, "We need Ziva."

Gibbs walks into the squadroom and asks Tony to look into where Ross went on his leave. Tony finds out that Ross went to an airstrip and they believe there was a package on the plane that is the key to the murders. McGee finds an unregistered cell phone number showed up several times, tailing Jurrell. They aren't able to find out who the owner is but McGee tells them he can locate him. The team ends up at a house - Tony takes the front door and Gibbs and McGee go around back. Tony enters and finds a copy there, gun drawn. He claims they got a call about a shot fired and there were two suspects. Gibbs and McGee come in, quick introductions are made. Shelley is excited to learn Tony has his back. Each man takes a room to check out. The door to the room Shelley enters closes and glass hit's the floor. The team enters the room and hears a car start up and take off, no Shelley. Gibbs picks up the framed photo that had fallen on the floor and they realize it was Shelley's house, Shelly was the man tailing Jurrell. As they poke around Shelley's house, they find what they believe to be an apology/suicide note on Shelley's computer. DiNozzo finds a photo of the 3 deceased men at an airport under Shelley's bed. Gibbs says Shelley wasn't tailing them but targeting them. DiNozzo follows up with the Baltimore PD to get information on Shelley.

McGee is at the park getting a cup of coffee. He sees Ziva sitting alone on a bench and joins her. Ziva thanks McGee. He wants to know if she came to the Navy yard to say thanks. She tells him she's getting ready for her next psych eval. McGee asks about the psychiatrist she's seeing, Ziva describes her as "man hands and pretty eyes." When she asks why, McGee says no reason. He asks how she is doing. Ziva admits the past 3 months were a challenge but it was in the past and the past is the past. He asks why she's avoiding Tony.

Back at the squadroom, McGee is surprised to walk in and see Gibbs. He asks when Gibbs got back as he took a coffee break. McGee brings Gibbs up to speed, telling him the 3 deceased men went to the same high school and they were known for bullying. The men's biggest target for bullying was Officer Shelley. DiNozzo runs in and needs to run to the head but Gibbs stops him. DiNozzo tells Gibbs what he found out from the Baltimore PD. He tells them Shelley pulled Ross over and gave him a ticket but when he realized who he was, he gave him 3 tickets. McGee shows a video on the web of Shelley being bullied by Sandrich, Jurrell and Ross in high school. They realize that each of the men died the same way in which they tormented Shelley. McGee goes off to get information while DiNozzo is doing a little dance. Gibbs tells him to "go shake it" and DiNozzo runs to the head.

Tony is in the bathroom singing and Ziva is standing there. She tells him she was there long enough to see how he was well hydrated after his time in the desert. Ziva says when he shot Michael she almost killed him where he stood. She tells him, Lying down, no backup, completely violating protocol and he reminds her he was also double-parked. Ziva says, "You had my back. You have always had my back. And I was wrong to question your motives." He wants to know why she did. She tells him, "I trusted my brother Ari, I trusted Michael. I could not afford to trust you." He responds, "I thought you weren't sure what to say." She replies, "I guess I had a long time to think about things." Tony apologizes to Ziva but she says she is the one who is sorry. She leans in and kisses him on the cheek. She tells him, "Your instincts were right. You were a cop and I should have never faulted you for thinking..." He interrupts her and says he's a cop, think like a cop. He grabs Ziva's face as he says it then heads out of the room.

DiNozzo walks into the squadroom, calling McGee "McSidekick." He reminds them that Shelley would have a second cell phone. As the first one is unregistered, McGee believes Shelley won't have a registered phone. DiNozzo tells them how sometimes the evidence from a bust ends up in cop's pockets. Turns out Shelley made a huge bust with 53 cell phones and he logged in all of their numbers. When McGee finds the second cell phone number, he notices it's in use. Just then, Gibbs phone rings. Gibbs answers his phone, putting it on speaker phone. It's Shelley and he wants to talk to DiNozzo. He tells DiNozzo he knows it looks bad, but it's not how it looks. He says he was set up, he knew a deal was going down and he wanted to steal the men's "pot of gold." He asks DiNozzo if he knows where he is yet and McGee nods yes. Shelley gives DiNozzo an address to a phone booth where he can meet him.

DiNozzo shows up at the phone booth and there is a homeless man sleeping inside the booth. He wakes the man and tells him he has a phone call to make. He looks up and sees the phone is broken, so does the homeless man so he turns to go back to sleep. Gibbs sees Shelley's car approaching, driving erratically. The SUB heads towards the phone booth so Tony grabs the homeless man and pulls him out of harm's way. The SUV crashes and Gibbs and McGee run up to it. Gibbs checks Shelley's pulse and discovers he's dead with a gunshot wound to the back.

In autopsy, Ducky tells Gibbs the shooter was at point blank range so Shelley must have known his attacker, someone who knew his past. DiNozzo and McGee walk into autopsy and McGee sneezes as he reaches the corpse. Ducky tells them the body has cologne on it. McGee and Gibbs stare at each other, then they all run out, realizing the cologne is the key.

The team brings in Scorpio's manager, Hector Stuckey, who has a black eye. Gibbs asks him how he got the shiner and Stuckey replies, "I cut myself shaving." Gibbs points out Stuckey's DNA is under Shelley's fingernails. Stuckey finally admits he had nothing to do with killing the 3 men. Shelley showed up at his doorstep that morning and they got into a fight. He says that Jurrell approached Stuckey with a deal. When Gibbs mentions the package on the plane, Stuckey says the plane WAS the package. It was a military cargo plane scheduled for decommissioning. Ross approached him to sell it and the bachelor party was a ruse. Stuckey tells them he didn't kill anyone as he has 50 people who can testify he was at the Club Pubis.

McGee and DiNozzo verify Stuckey's alibi. Abby comes running into the squadroom and tells Gibbs that a new bullet fired from a 19th Century Tower Pistol was the murder weapon. The team leaves and heads to the Auctioneer house. When they arrive, they see Danorth, standing at the trunk of a car, placing the murder weapon into a case. He claims he noticed it was missing and had been looking for it. They inform him it was used as a murder weapon. He claims he has no knowledge of that and the car doesn't belong to him. Gibbs says they know and asks where Elaine Marcus is. Danorth tells them he found the gun in her trunk and called her outside to ask about it. Just then Elaine comes outside, sees the NCIS team and attempts to run. She tells them they have no evidence but they tell her they were able to trace the fake suicide note on Shelley's computer back to hers. She had learned of the cargo plane and partnered with Shelley to get the payout but ended up setting Shelley up for murder.

Gibbs returns home and Ziva is waiting in his basement. She tells him they need to talk. She says she sensed his hesitation when she asked to come back and she still feels it. There is tension between them as Ziva tries to work things out with Gibbs. Gibbs tells her he wants the truth, she had orders to kill Ari and earn his trust. Ziva admits she did, she volunteered for the mission to protect Ari. Gibbs tells her she killed her own brother and she lied to him. Ziva replies, "I would have lied to you, he was my brother. You were nothing. You were right about Ari. He is gone. Eli is dead to me and the closest thing I have to a father is accusing me..." Gibbs says,

"Okay."

Vance is walking across the squadroom talking on his cell phone to his wife. He reaches the elevator door as it opens, DiNozzo and McGee step out. Vance hesitates then says, "I love you too." McGee and DiNozzo just stare at him, then Vance passes and enters the elevator. DiNozzo says "Okay, moving on" and they both walk into the squadroom. McGee begins to tell Tony that his date, Janice, is conducting Ziva's psych eval but then sees Ziva's stuff on her desk. Both men look up and McGee says "Ziva's back." Ziva walks into the room with a plant in her hands, puts it down on her desk and sits. McGee and DiNozzo both sit at their desks, pretending to work but staring at Ziva. All 3 go to work, smiling.

Summary: When a blogger that accused NCIS of a cover-up turns up dead, the NCIS team has to find out who killed him and take another look at the closed case.

A man blogs about the NCIS using his laptop in his car. He checks his watch, gets out of his car and watches construction workers talking below him. The workers are surprised as the man drops from above and is impaled on a rebar.

McGee makes an appointment to have another polygraph test. Tony asks McGee if he made a mistake of coming out. Tony asks Gibbs if he ever failed a polygraph test. He tells the team that they need to investigate the death of a blogger named Matt Burns. Ducky asks Gibbs to talk, but says that he can wait. Ducky learns that Ziva can not go out in the field until she receives proper clearance. Ducky tells her she knows where to find him if she wants to talk.

The team arrives at the scene. Tony flirts with a detective who is wearing a scarf while looking at a car. The detective introduces herself as Hanly. Hanly says that they found a shoe print that doesn't match the victim near the area where he fell. Gibbs meets with the detective in charge, Sportelli. Hanly says that the victim wrote a blog. Sportelli says that Matt wrote how the NCIS covered up a case. Sportelli says that he is there to make sure that NCIS doesn't cover up Matt's death.

Back at headquarters, the team watches a web video of Matt talking about Lt. Ron Arnet who was killed in a car crash that was ruled as an accident by the NCIS. Matt says he thinks that Arnet was linked to insider trading. They took a look at Matt's blog where he writes that he was going to meet someone who will blow the Arnet case wide open. They see that Matt's work discredited a judge.

Gibbs visits Ducky in his lab. He says that he wanted to check up on Ziva since she went through a lot. He asks if she spoke to him and he says no. Gibbs asks Ducky to recheck on his work on Arnet.

Tony meets with the judge. He says that Matt ruins his career that was going to send him to the Supreme Court. The judge says that Matt's charges of infidelity and plagiarism forced him to withdraw his name. Tony sees Hanly and Sportelli approach and runs away.

Gibbs meets with Arnet's CO and asks him about insider trading. He says that it doesn't make sense why he would commit a crime since Arnet had a great future and family money. Lt. Summer, Arnet's colleague says that she had no idea who Arnet's friends were.

Abby looks at the car that Arnet was in and tells McGee that she is not sure why they are retesting the car. She says that she is sure that Arnet was in an accident. McGee asks Abby why she thinks he has to retake a polygraph. Abby says that there was another agent who had to retake the polygraph then was later let go.

Ziva tells the team that Arnet called Lt. Summer often which indicates that they had a relationship. Gibbs wonders why Summers lied. Ziva says she found that Matt's credit card was being used in D.C. while he claimed that he was in Atlanta.

Gibbs meets with Summer in the interrogation room and tells her that he knows she lied. He asks her who broke it off and she says that she did after she found out that Arnet was seeing other women. The team watches and wonder what kind of tactic Gibbs is going to use. Gibbs says that he is working with the Metro police and figures that she is his Pentagon source for insider information. Summer starts to cry and says that he swore that no one would find out. She says that she went to Matt Burns after Arnet broke up with her. Summer admits that Arnet brought her champagne to celebrate his earnings from Wall Street. She figured that he used her to get inside information. The team figures that their first conclusion that Arnet's death was an accident was incorrect.

Ducky tells Gibbs that he reexamined Arnet's autopsy. He says that Arnet's death was due to a car accident. Ducky gets a call from a friend who tells him that the Metro police has ruled Matt's death as a homicide. Ducky says that he is going to do toxicology tests which takes time. He says at the time of Arnet's death, his family wanted to speed up the process so they could bury him.

Tony meets with a SEC investigator, Benjamin Franklin. He says that they found no evidence of insider trading. He says that a man named Will Sutton, an owner of a sandwich shop, made a lot of money from a defense contracting company. He says that they can't find a connection with Sutton and insider trader.

Sportelli arrives at Abby's lab and asks for all of their evidence relating to Arnet's death. Sportelli says that he has a court order. Gibbs tells Abby to hand over the evidence.

Tony visits Sutton and asks him if he met Arnet. He says no. Tony looks at the pastrami that Sutton is cutting and orders a sandwich. Sutton says that he is still in the shop because the SEC has frozen his funds. Back at headquarters, McGee tells Tony that he can't find connections between Arnet and Sutton. McGee asks Tony if he can have a bite of his sandwich, but Tony shoves the rest of it into his mouth.

Ducky and Abby open Arnet's coffin and find that his body was replaced by weights. The team wonders who would want to steal Arnet's body. Ducky says that he released the body to a funeral home.

Later, agent Grady asks Ziva where McGee is. She tells her that he missed his polygraph meeting.

Tony and McGee go to the funeral home. The director says that even though their mortician did a great job on Arnet, the family decided to have a closed casket. Tony asks if there is a security system. McGee gets a text from Ziva who informs him that he missed his polygraph appointment. Tony asks McGee to hop in the casket so they can take a photo and send to the polygraph division so they would think he was dead. The director comes back and says that she got a security alarm alert the day of Arnet's funeral. The team figures that it was enough time to steal the body.

Abby looks at the weights and tells Ducky that they were cleaned before they were placed in the casket. The team wonders if Matt stole Arnet's body in order to perpetuate the idea of a cover up. McGee says that he wants to examine Matt's car. Tony and McGee go to the Metro car impound yard and spot Matt's car. They see a camera which McGee covers up using a mayo pellet launched from a paint ball gun. McGee worries about dogs, but Tony assures him because of budget cuts, they probably don't have any. They climb the fence and break into Matt's car. Tony scares McGee by playing the sound of dogs barking on his phone. McGee downloads the GPS history just before real dogs chase after them. They run and evade the dogs by running on top of cars. A police officer catches them just before they climb over the fence. Tony and McGee are arrested.

Back at the lab, Abby tells Gibbs that Matt was parked in front of the mortuary the day of Arnet's funeral. Tony and McGee return to work. Meanwhile, Ziva looks around and sees that she is alone. She starts to compose a letter to her father, but stops when Abby arrives. She tells her that they used Matt's GPS record and found where he buried Arnet's body. Abby asks her to go out to celebrate, but Ziva says that she has something to do first. After Abby leaves, she resumes her letter.

McGee goes to polygraph room and is strapped to the machine. Agent Grady says that she came in early for him. She says that she takes a train and rides with the same people. She gets close and causes his blood pressure to rise. She proceeds to ask him questions about his record. She asks if he is in a committed relationship and he says no. McGee thinks about the case and asks Grady to reschedule their appointment.

McGee asks Abby if Arnet had a rail pass and she says yes. They learn that Arnet and Sutter rode the same train together to work. They figure that Arnet and Sutter met and became friends on the train. Tony and McGee meet with Sutter and ask him about Hitchcock's Strangers on a Train. They tell him that they know he worked with Arnet to split the insider trading earnings. They figure that after Arnet died, Sutter suspected that Matt had evidence to link him to the insider trading. The agents suspect that Sutter set Matt up to meet him to provide him with information, but instead, killed him.

Later, Sportelli is called in to headquarters to take Sutter to jail. Gibbs tells McGee that he made an impression with Agent Grady. Ziva hands Gibbs a paper and asks him to sign it so she can be a full time NCIS agent. Gibbs says that she has to resign from the Mossad. She says that she already did. Gibbs is about to sign the recommendation, but takes a moment to think about it.

Summary: The NCIS team is called in to investigate the murder of a Marine found halfway around the world, and the investigation takes a surprising turn when Ziva turns out to be connected to the deceased Marine.

Two men on a shrimp boat off the coast of Tanzania are pulling in a meager haul of just a handful of shrimp. They are grouching at the lack of shrimp, and begin to sort through the trash that came in with the net. They notice a plastic bag hung up in the net and prod at it, jokingly hoping that it is full of shrimp. The bag bursts open and, to their horror, the gooey, decomposed remains of a human being wearing dog tags falls to the deck.

In the squad room, Tony is annoying McGee by making "tick-tock" sounds. McGee, trying to finish a Report of Investigation (ROI) before a deadline, shouts to Tony to be quiet. McGee has never been late with a paper, and declares that no "PC-wiping macro virus is going to blemish my streak." Tony continues to tease, making references to Captain Hook in Peter Pan, and segues into asking McGee if he has bodies buried under his floorboards. McGee menacingly says that the day is still young. Ziva comes up silently behind Tony and asks McGee, meaningfully, if he needs any bodies buried. Very startled, Tony theatrically grabs his chest and starts moaning about calling 911. McGee and Ziva ignore him. Ziva offers to help McGee with his ROIs if he helps her find out what the status is of her application. McGee agrees, if Ziva will do Tony's paperwork, too. Tony had bet McGee that he could remove the virus, and succeeded, but McGee is sure he cheated. Neither McGee or Ziva believe Tony is capable of doing it, since, as Ziva sneers, Tony can barely work his email.

In MTAC, Vance and Gibbs is waiting for the NCIS agent in Tanzania to come on-line. After a short delay, the agent appears, and receives some kidding from Gibbs for his full beard. He tells them that the dental records confirmed the identity of a Marine staff sergeant, Daniel Cryer, whose CO praised him as sharp and good at infiltrating terrorist cells. However, Cryer is a deserter who went UA (unauthorized leave) approximately six months earlier, and they were unable to locate him, even with a tip that he had been seen in Jordan by a former Israeli security officer who does free-lance work along the Red Sea. Cryer was apparently attempting to go into business for himself selling information on connections. He was spotted boarding a small freighter bound for East Africa – the Damocles, which went down at sea and was never recovered. It was assumed he went down with the ship. Gibbs observes that it doesn't explain why he was wrapped in plastic. The Tanzanian agent signs off, and Gibbs reminds Vance that they know someone who lived through that shipwreck – Ziva – and then realizes that Vance was anticipating it. Before they talk to Ziva, Gibbs and Vance agree to play "good cop, bad cop" to interrogate Ziva – but Gibbs is unsure which one Vance is choosing to be.

In the squad room, Ziva anxiously asks McGee how his search for her application is coming. To McGee's consternation, he pulls up the application, and it has a notation in red: "Rejected." Ziva yells, "Why have I been rejected?!" as Vance and Gibbs enter the squad room.

Gibbs, in a small conference room, calls McGee to get information on Cryer. He flips on the screen, which is monitoring the large conference room as Vance and Ziva enter. He sits back to watch. Vance tells Ziva there are inconsistencies in her application. Ziva clarifies that he is talking about her psychological profiles, and Vance agrees, noting that she was held prisoner for several months, and has yet to talk to a counselor. He then goes on to note her long-standing loyalty to Mossad and her father, and how it is hard to serve two masters. She declares her father has nothing to do with it, and Vance tells her that she had better start talking: "It's the price of admission." He asks her to begin to describe the events that led her to the camp.

Meanwhile, McGee is still niggling away at how the virus got on his computer in the first place. Tony dismisses his concerns, and points out that Ziva is in with "Principal Vance", and asks McGee for an update on Cryer. McGee goes over Cryer's immaculate record – until six months ago. Discussing the Damocles, McGee notes that it went down 200 miles off the coast of Tanzania, and was about 200 miles off course. McGee wonders why Gibbs tossed them the investigation, and then disappeared. Tony observes that "it's like Alien – the Ridley Scott classic, the creepy one." After a few more Alien jokes, McGee notes somberly that Ziva hasn't been the same since they brought her home, and that something must have happened to her out there. McGee heads off to see Abby.

Abby is staring at a monitor with a large blob of red rotating around a small center circle. McGee, noting the music, calls it "soothing," and Abby vehemently disagrees, explaining that the monitor is illustrating a tropical storm. She goes on to point out that that Ziva's report says that the ship went down in a storm, but that Cryer's body was found far away from where the storm actually happened. Because of the ocean currents and the position of the body, Abby declares that the ship could not have been anywhere near the storm. McGee has the inspiration to backtrack the currents and the body to determine where the Damocles actually sank – but Abby has beat him to it, and sent the information out an hour earlier.

In Autopsy, Tony notes several crustaceans in the sample pan and quips, "What's with the sushi bar?" Ducky observes that Cryer's body was in the ocean, and had attracted a great deal of attention from the ocean carnivores. He goes on to note that the pattern of digestion by ocean life can help determine the time of death, which he sets at approximately 16 weeks – close to the time of the Damocles' sinking. Ducky tells Tony that Cryer was killed by a gunshot wound to the head. Receiving a phone call from McGee with "bad news", Tony rushes out.

In the conference room, Vance is interrogating Ziva, confirming that her father had given her a slot on the unit that had originally been filled by Michael Rivkin. He goes on to describe the mission, and Ziva tells him, firmly, that she cannot comment on Mossad operations. Vance tells her that he knows because he is the one that gave the information to Mossad in the first place. He then points out that she is no longer employed by Mossad, and Ziva declares, "That does not change anything!" – but has walked into a trap: Vance points out, "That's what concerns me." Ziva is silent, as Vance goes on to describe her itinerary on the Damocles. Vance asks her to explain a Marine, wrapped in plastic, who was dead before the ship went down. Ziva points out that sometimes, people die onboard ship, and they are wrapped in plastic and placed in a freezer. Vance drily points out that this body had a bullet-hole in it, and demands to know how he died. Ziva, staring into space, does not answer.

McGee joins Gibbs in the small conference room, where Gibbs is still observing the interrogation. He tells Gibbs that they have found the Damocles, but also found eighteen crew members locked in the hold, executed.

Ziva has been moved to the Interrogation room, and is pacing nervously. Gibbs is looking at photos of the recovered ship in the observation room, as Ducky comes in. Worriedly, he notes Ziva's agitation, and wonders why Gibbs isn't conducting the interrogation. Gibbs deflects the question and asks about the bodies found on the Damocles, and Ducky tells him they are being unloaded. Returning to Ziva's nervousness, he wonders if the interview is a kind of punishment. Gibbs smiles slightly and calls it "tough love." Vance enters and Ziva demands to know if she is being charged with a crime. Vance merely observes that one has been committed, and notes that the Damocles looks like a war zone. Ziva notes that it is Jordanian, and out of his jurisdiction, but he maintains that she is his jurisdiction – or, at least she wants to be. He then commands that the interview be recorded, and reminds her of the "crime of omission," and then tells her, "Take me to the Damocles."

Flashback: The captain of the Damocles is playing cards. The ship is in port, at Aqaba, Jordan. He is joined by someone he calls Shalev, who throws a knapsack on the card table and tells him that he has some friends that want to meet him. His friends are Ziva, and two other men. The captain offers Ziva a cup of tea, and then notes that because she is a woman, he cannot guarantee her safety on the ship. She tells him that she can take care of herself, and only wants discretion and passage to Somalia. The captain demurs, saying that the ship is headed for Muscat (Oman), not Somalia. However, he opens the knapsack, sees a large quantity of money, and agrees to go to Somalia, leaving that evening.

Later that evening, on board, Ziva's friends are preparing to join the crew for dinner. Ziva declines, and one of her friends encourages her to go. She is unsure, and he tells her, "The Americans left you, Ziva. Your family never has." She agrees reluctantly, glancing at a photo she has taped to the wall of her cabin, of her and Ari as children. In the dining room, they sit nervously watching the crew. Later, "Shalev" is walking down a corridor, and opens a door, seeing many arms lockers and boxes of explosive. He is challenged by a crew member with a gun, who demands to know what he is doing there. He shrugs and claims that he was looking for the head, but is not believed. The crew member then demands to know why he is going to Somalia, and Shalev protests that he doesn't know. Ziva walks up and confirms that he doesn't know because he works for her, and then, asks him not to shoot him, coyly declaring that she had sent him to "find them some privacy." The crew member relaxes, and she walks up to Shalev and kisses him passionately. As the crewman walks away, she chastises Shalev not to put the mission in danger.

In Interrogation, Ziva confirms that Shalev was actually Daniel Cryer. Vance questions her if she knew he was a Marine, and she admits that he didn't really fit in with the smugglers and thieves. When asked if she trusted him, she observed that "You really cannot trust a man whose loyalty has a price."

The flashback continues: Shalev/Cryer brings Ziva a morning drink, startling her into pulling a gun on him. In response to Ziva's questioning, he side-steps answering who he is, but points out that she should take off her Star of David necklace. She declares that she would rather die than remove the necklace, and then taps his Marine dogtags and says, "You should know."

In the squad room, Gibbs' phone is ringing. McGee and Tony argue over who should answer it. McGee loses, and, answering the phone, agrees to go down to escort someone up, someone named Ben-Gidon. Tony is instantly alert, and runs to tell Gibbs.

In Interrogation, Vance accuses Ziva of suborning Cryer, and Ziva declares that she has learned from Gibbs "that there is no such thing as an ex-Marine." Tony comes to pull Gibbs out of the observation room. Gibbs greets Ben-Gidon, who demands Ziva's release, "as a member of his team." Gibbs observes that he's a little late to rescue Ziva, but Ben-Gidon tells Gibbs that he has arrived in time to rescue her from Gibbs.

Gibbs and Vance are in Vance's office discussing Bin-Gidon's claim that Vance is keeping Ziva hostage. Vance is indignant. Bin-Gidon, as Ziva's commanding Mossad officer, has told them that if they force her to discuss Mossad's operation, Ziva will be in violation of Israeli law. Gibbs decides to keep Bin-Gidon talking, to see if they can gather additional information.

In the small conference room, Tony comes in and greets Bin-Gidon, telling him that he should have called him and he would have picked him up at the airport, returning the favor (from Bin-Gidon meeting them at the airport in Israel.) Tony goes on to say, insincerely, that he's sorry he hasn't stayed in touch, and hopes that he can return the same hospitality to Bin-Gidon that Tony received on his last visit to Israel (where he was interrogated rather harshly by Eli David.) Tony escorts him to Interrogation, where Bin-Gidon finds only Vance. Demanding to know where Ziva is, Vance asks, mockingly, if he thinks that NCIS has buried her in a deep, dark hole to rot, and then ends, "But that's not our style." Bin-Gidon demands Ziva's release, and Vance refuses, telling Bin-Gidon that he can't release Ziva until he finds out what happened on the Damocles. Bin-Gidon tells Vance that he was on the Damocles, too, and will tell Vance what happened in exchange for Ziva's freedom. They sit.

Flashback: Ziva and Bin-Gidon are watching the crew playing a game, and noting that they make landfall in two days. Bin-Gidon tells Ziva that he thinks that the crew suspects them, and has been in touch with the rest of the team by satellite phone. Ziva accuses Bin-Gidon of changing the plan, and Bin-Gidon, motioning meaningfully to Cryer walking away, tells Ziva that her father has said, "by any means necessary." Ziva follows Cryer, who enters the ammunition storage room and retrieves a phone from under a pallet. Ziva slips by the door, trying to hear the conversation, but Cryer is wary.

In the lab, Abby is muttering about all the wet electronics that have been retrieved from the Damocles as McGee gingerly lifts out a phone from the mess – the phone that Cryer was using. Observing that there is a lot of evidence – phones, guns, electronic equipment – he declares that a plan of attack is needed. Abby disagrees – her philosophy is to just jump in, because if you just jump in, you find something without looking for it. She comments, with disappointment, that Gibbs isn't acting as if he is on Team Ziva, but McGee stands up for Gibbs.

Tony is escorting Ziva to Autopsy, and is met at the elevator by Ducky. He asks Ziva to help him clarify something, and asks Tony if he minds if he borrows Tony. Tony, not anxious to go to Autopsy, declares he doesn't mind, but Ziva demurs, insisting that Vance wants her to have an escort at all times. Ducky agrees, and leads her into a darkened Autopsy, but slams the door in Tony's face. Tony realizes what is Ducky is up to, and only gives a token protest. Turning on the lights, Abby and Ducky survey the remains of several bodies from the Damocles. Abby hangs back reluctantly, but Ducky pulls out a stool, places it next to one of the tables, and declares, "I don't know what games they are playing upstairs, but I have had enough. First and foremost, you are our friend. I want to be a friend, Ziva." He begins to recite the names of the crew, and Ziva declares that she does not need to know their names, but Ducky accuses her of carrying the guilt for their deaths, especially Cryer, and notes that "the truth may set you free." She disagrees, but Ducky goes on to tell her that some bodies aren't supposed to stay buried, and asks, "What happened to him?"

In Interrogation, Bin-Gidon is discussing Cryer, and theorizes that it was either paranoia or cabin fever, but that the shipboard communications were being monitored. Ziva and Bin-Gidon argue, but Bin-Gidon declares that Cryer may have compromised the mission, and as a result, they are like rats in a trap. Suddenly, gunfire breaks out, and Ziva and Bin-Gidon are in a shoot-out with the crew. They race to their cabin, retrieve their submachine guns, and return to the corridor. Both Bin-Gidon and Ziva confirm that their contingency plan was to take everyone onboard ship. Further shots are exchanged, and Ziva finds herself muzzle-to-muzzle with the captain. Cryer, coming up behind the captain, kills him, saving Ziva. Remembering Cryer, Ziva woodenly warns him Ducky to keep his distance, because those who get close to her end up dead.

In Vance's office, Gibbs and Vance are reviewing the Bin-Gidon's story. Vance grimly declares that Ziva knew that Cryer was a Marine, and as a result, "she is done here." Gibbs cautions him that it might not be true, and they decide it's time for Gibbs to question Ziva.

Ziva and Bin-Gidon are put together in the Interrogation room, and Bin-Gidon warns her to say nothing, because he is handling matters. Ziva declares that she has nothing to say to him, folds her arm, and regards him coolly.

Tony, in the squad room, tells McGee that "they've just dropped Ziva into the lion's den," and they need to be able to present what they've found so far. McGee points out that there is still a lot of information to sift through, but they think they can pin down the location of the final battle. Tony is unimpressed, and says that they already know it, but McGee points out that their evidence can confirm it. Ducky joins them, stating that all he has is cause-of-death forms, multiple bodies with 9 mm gunshot wounds, an abundance with 5.78 in the chest and abdomen, and a single large-caliber gunshot wound to the head – Cryer. McGee volunteers that they have smashed 45 caliber slugs that were found in the maintenance bay, but they can't find the one that killed Cryer. Abby confirms that there are three slugs, and none of them have human organic matter on them. They realize that the leftover slugs are missed shots – and Ziva doesn't miss.

They wonder if Bin-Gidon does, and Tony notes that he might – if something was distracting him. Tony asks Abby to give him an unsmushed 45 slug. Abby returns to her lab and shoots the gun to obtain a slug. Gibbs, striding to Interrogation, meets Tony in the hall and asks him what he has, and Tony tosses him Abby's slug. He walks into Interrogation, and Tony quickly runs to Observation.

In Interrogation, Bin-Gidon begins to rise, saying he wants to leave, but Gibbs shoves him back in his chair. Bin-Gidon winces, and Gibbs asks him if there is anything wrong with his shoulder. Bin-Gidon admits that it was a broken clavicle that has been slow to heal. In Observation, Tony and Vance smirk. Gibbs invites Ziva to sit down at the table with Bin-Gidon and tells her, "He says you killed him," and Bin-Gidon sneers that of course, she will deny it. Ziva stares at Bin-Gidon stonily, and Gibbs says that he is tired of hearing stories, and now it's his turn.

Flashback: Ziva and Cryer have their guns trained on each other. Ziva tells Cryer to put the gun down because she doesn't want to kill him, and he agrees that not dying would be a good thing. Ziva asks Cryer if he betrayed them, and Cryer points out that if he had, he would have had no compunction at killing her at that moment. Suddenly, gunfire erupts from overhead, and Bin-Gidon is shooting through the floor grate, killing Cryer.

In Interrogation, Bin-Gidon is incredulous at the story. Gibbs tells Bin-Gidon that those were his misses, on the wall, and that the bullet in the specimen jar he holds in front of Bin-Gidon's face was taken from Cryer. He then asks Bin-Gidon, "Is this the way your boss operates – sends you to burn her?" Bin-Gidon protests that Ziva is on his team, but Gibbs snaps that that doesn't mean he was happy about it. Ziva asks Bin-Gidon, quietly, if he is following orders, and Bin-Gidon doesn't reply. Gibbs tells Ziva that her father "isn't a good guy . . . he's dirty." Ziva accuses Bin-Gidon of being unable to say no to her father. Gibbs then tells Bin-Gidon to get out, to run, and to tell Eli David that Ziva is off-limits. Tony opens the door to escort Bin-Gidon out, and Bin-Gidon apologizes to Ziva. Ziva tells him, "Never apologize. It is a sign of weakness." Bin-Gidon leaves. Gibbs stares meaningfully at the camera, and Vance orders it shut off and then leaves the Observation room. Gibbs sits down across from Ziva, and tells her softly that they aren't done, and she needs to finish. Eyes downward, she tells him that he knows what happened. Gibbs wants to know what happened after they scuttled the ship and made it to land. Ziva says that her father wanted the mission completed at any cost – implying that the cost included her life. Gibbs reaches out and lightly touches Ziva's hand, and, from someone with long experience in coping with traumatic events, urges her not to bury it.

Flashback: Mogadishu, Somalia. Ziva and Bin-Gidon are climbing onto a dock from a small boat. Bin-Gidon tells her that Selim must be killed, and Ziva wonders if her father knows that two of the team is dead, and one is injured. Bin-Gidon says that her father thinks this is their best chance, but Ziva is unconvinced. Even though they may have been compromised, Ziva is determined to complete the mission alone. Bin-Gidon tells her that it is suicide, but Ziva declares that "It is what it is!", tells him goodbye, and disappears into the crowd.

Ziva goes on to tell Gibbs that she killed a courier and his gunman in order to get through Selim's defenses, and then says, "I got within a fingernail of Selim before I was overpowered. I had nothing but death in my heart." Gibbs tells her that she never had a choice – Eli David raised her to be a ruthless, soul-less killer. She admits that she did not mean to live through it, and Gibbs tells her that she didn't – that part of her died out there. She stares at him, and says, "I am sorry, Gibbs." Gibbs stands and comes around the table. Leaning close, he whispers something into her ear, and gently kisses her temple. She turns away, with a hint of a smile on her lips, and begins to cry.

Vance is on the phone with Eli David, who is shouting angrily. Vance agrees that Gibbs is "an awful son of a bitch and if he's a thorn in your side, he's a pain in my ass!" Vance attempts to soothe Eli, reassuring him that he is on Eli's side, understands that Ziva is his daughter, and that he'll keep an eye on things. David hangs up angrily, and Vance smiles at Gibbs, sitting on the other side of the desk munching on an apple. Gibbs congratulates Vance: "Not bad." Vance hands Gibbs a letter on official stationary, with "APPROVED" stamped across the top. Gibbs takes it with obvious satisfaction.

In the squad room, Ziva is sitting at her desk. McGee accuses Tony of creating the virus on his computer. Tony observes that McGee can accept the fact that Tony can create a virus, but can't accept that he can get rid of one. McGee accuses Tony of bringing in a ringer, and Tony acknowledges that would have been one way to do it, and hands McGee a pile of files, with an admonishment to do his work. McGee refuses, because Tony violated the terms of the wager. Tony declares, "Well, I'm not doing it." McGee declares, equally firmly, "Well, I'm not, either!", and quickly, they leave the pile of files on Ziva's desk. She rises and begins to protest, but Gibbs walks by, throws the letter on her desk and tells her, "Get to work...Probie." She picks up the letter, and as she reads, it, a big smile appears on her face.

Summary: When a Marine known for his love of practical jokes is found dead on Halloween, the NCIS team is called in to investigate, and they soon learn that his jokes may have been the reason why someone killed him.

A group of teenagers in monkey masks are toilet-papering a house just before Halloween. They are filming themselves doing it. A light in the house goes on, and the teenagers scurry to hide across the street. While hiding, they notice the Corbys' car sitting in the driveway, with the engine running and the radio playing loudly. They laugh that Corby, a noted prankster, must be getting a big joke ready. They are inspired to play a prank on him, and creep up on the car with the film running. They notice the inside of the car is filled with smoke, and see a garden hose running from the exhaust into the car. Concerned, one of them opens the driver's door, and Corby falls out, frozen into a sitting position.

Tony enters the squad room while on the phone with a friend from his days on the Baltimore police force. He is placing his bets on the "larceny lotto", a betting pool where the police each throw in $200 and bet what the final number and types on calls on Mischief Night (the night before Halloween) and Halloween. McGee reminisces about growing up on base at Alameda and taking the base commander's bedroom suite and placing it on the runway. Gibbs calls the team to investigate a dead Marine, and tosses the car keys to "Agent David," who snatches them gleefully.

At the Corby's, McGee identifies the victim as Lance Corporal James Corby, who has just returned from a tour of Afghanistan. The team initially believes a suicide by carbon monoxide, but when Ducky arrives, he points out that the skin is not the cherry red that would be a symptom of such a poison, which puts a whole new slant on the puzzle: Corby was dead and the suicide was staged. Tony interviews the toilet-papering teens, who disclose that Corby was a well-known practical joker. The T.P. victim, a Mr. Rogers (complete with oddly combed hair and red sweater) confirms that Corby was an annoying prankster. Ducky is puzzled when the victim's liver temperature seems unusually cold, and can't determine a time of death. Tony and Ziva examine Corby's garage, and note many Halloween pranks and a possible crime scene. When Corby's body is removed from the car, the body is unusually rigid, and makes an odd crackling sound when the body is laid flat. Ducky discovers that the tissues in Corby's throat are frozen solid.

In the squad room, McGee notes that Lance Corporal Corby has a serious blemish on his Marine record, for dereliction of duty. He displays a picture of Corby's wife, Sarah, a very attractive blonde. Tony immediately theorizes that Sarah killed Corby, and McGee drily asks if they should even bother investigating, "or just go ahead and arrest her." Ziva, hanging up the phone, reports that Sarah Corby had spent the night in Virginia Beach at a spa, which Tony finds suspicious so soon after Corby's return from Afghanistan, and declares again that "the wife did it." Sarah Corby and her step-daughter arrive in the squad room, to identify her husband's body.

Tony interviews Sarah Corby, who tells him that her agreement with her husband was that he could spend Halloween concocting his elaborate practical jokes, and she would spend Halloween relaxing at a spa. Rachel, the stepdaughter spent the evening at a friend's house, and Tony discovers that Rachel is actually the daughter of Sarah's second husband.

In Autopsy, Ducky observes that "it's an interesting date for such a ghoulish demise." Palmer, attempting his own humor, pipes up, "Yeah, it's a really cool way to go!" Ducky is not amused, and Palmer is befuddled that yet another of his jokes has fallen flat. Gibbs joins them and learns that Corby died by ingesting liquid nitrogen, and Palmer gives a quick demonstration of the effect of liquid nitrogen on organic material – in this case, a hollowed-out pumpkin. Ducky reveals that Corby actually suffocated, as the nitrogen entered his lungs, and that his death was not instantaneous, and estimates the time of death between 10 pm and midnight. Palmer inadvertently drops the frozen pumpkin, which loudly shatters like glass.

McGee and Ziva are watching the teenagers' video of their toilet-papering, and McGee is admiring their technique, to Ziva's confusion. Tony, meanwhile, is trying to obtain a copy of Sarah Corby's file. Ziva asks, sarcastically, if Tony's "gut ever gives him a stomach ache." Suddenly, Gibbs appears, carrying three hot beverage cups, and begins to hand out hot cider to the astonished team, and genially exclaims, "Happy Halloween!" After the team takes an appreciative sip, Gibbs stops smiling and declares the "break" over, and they return to the video. After determining that Mr. Rogers has made several complaints, Gibbs snatches the cups from Tony and Ziva and order them to interview Mr. Rogers.

At Mr. Roger's house, Mr. Rogers is annoyed at the knock on the door, thinking it is trick-or-treaters. Reluctantly, he opens the door, and reveals that he is a Asian market commodities trader, who works at night. He has a solid alibi for his whereabouts the evening before. While he is talking to Tony, two ballerina trick-or-treaters approach the door, and Mr. Rogers sourly gives them two cans of energy drinks.

Gibbs enters Abby's lab, and is startled by all of the moaning and screaming Halloween characters, which have been moved from Corby's garage to Abby's lab. Abby tells him that many of the characters are motion-sensitive, and to move slowly. He observes that she's not wearing a costume this year, and Abby tells him that "After last year's Jonas Brothers debacle, Vance banned costumes. McGee – skinny jeans – didn't work . . ." Abby shows Gibbs an auto in the video at the time of death. It's indistinct, but she can produce a license number, which is livery number from the car pool at Quantico. She also shows that the analysis of Corby's stomach showed mysterious traces of turpentine, acetone and benzene in his flesh. She points out that while he died of liquid nitrogen the night before, he had actually been poisoned by paint thinner two months earlier.

The next morning, McGee is sorting through his leftover Halloween candy. Tony snatches some, and then smugly announces that the wife did it, because she has been married three times, all three have died, and she has collected insurance from all three. Ziva is skeptical, since the first two died in the line of duty. Gibbs asks for evidence, but Tony has none. McGee reports that the car that was checked out of Quantico is still missing. Gibbs demands to see Corby's file, but Central Files will not release it until the after-action report is declassified. Tony tells him that it's only been 72 hours, and they are waiting on the report. Gibbs tells him, "Wait faster," and then he and Ziva go to interview Corby's squad leader, Sergeant Ross Barnes.

Barnes is up for a promotion. Corby was also up for promotion, but Barnes' recommendation was unenthusiastic. They discuss Corby's penchant for practical jokes, and Barnes admits that half the squad really liked him, but he annoyed the other half. Ziva reveals that Corby was poisoned with paint thinner, and Barnes admit that he was ill for a few days, but it was dismissed as a stomach virus. Barnes' alibi for the night of the murder was that he was on base the entire time completing paperwork, and points out (after some prodding and a undertone threat from Gibbs that all promotions will be held) that Private David Singer had had a fight with Corby.

Tony and Gibbs visit Singer at Quantico. Singer is tall and very muscular. He admits that he and Corby disagreed about Corby's brand of humor, and that what was funny in the barracks wasn't so funny in battle. His alibi for the evening was that he was in Norfolk, visiting a friend. Tony implies that the friend is selling steroids, to account for Singer's physique. When Gibbs asks the name of the friend, Singer hesitates, and Tony sarcastically asks him if he heard, pointing out that "short term memory loss and shrunken testicles are signs" Singer asks Tony if he has ever been shot at, and Tony calmly replies, "Once or twice." Singer goes on to describe battle, and how Corby's pranks were inappropriate. Singer then tells Gibbs that he was with a high school buddy.

Back at the office, McGee tells Gibbs that, in lieu of the files, he talked directly to Central Command in Afghanistan via MTAC, and put together a brief history of the unit, which wasn't good – multiple transfer requests, complaints, and they were deemed to not be combat-ready two different times. Tony wonders if Corby's pranks were contributing to the decline of the unit, but McGee reports that the problems started two months ago – about the time that Corby was poisoned. McGee wonders if it's a case of lack of discipline, but Gibbs suggests that it could just as easily be too much discipline.

In Autopsy, Ducky is wrapping up the examination, but points out to Gibbs that Corby's body showed evidence of being beaten by multiple people, at least four, given the bruising on his wrists and ankles, and the broken ribs – carefully beaten to hurt, but not seriously injure. Gibbs mutters, "Code Red," implying that he received a beating from members of his squad in an attempt to impose discipline.

Tony, trailed by Ziva and McGee, is walking through the office and calls a "mobile campfire" to discuss what they know. He ducks into the men's room, with instructions to "Probies, talk louder, I can hear you in there." Ziva, calling through the door, reminds Tony that McGee has been at NCIS for six years, and she has been there for four, and that "we ARE agents, so can you PLEASE stop calling us . . . !" To Ziva's surprise, Gibbs comes out of the men's room, inquiring "Problem, Probie? You've been an agent all of one week – your Mossad liaison days are over." Gibbs calls Tony and prompts the "mobile campfire", as they go over the evidence that they have. McGee and Ziva leave to interview the members of the squad that were in the area that evening.

In Abby's lab, McGee is holding a cup of Caf-Pow hostage until Abby gives him some information. She is fascinated by Corby's phone, which documents all of his pranks (including 600 pizzas delivered to the base commander's house). She acknowledges that she can't find the murder weapon, so it was probably nearby – which is why she is having a four-block area swept by Haz-Mat. Palmer joins them, lugging the liquid nitrogen container. An analysis she is running finishes up, and she is surprised that Corby's lungs contained odd particles of chicken stock, coffee beans and cocoa – but those items weren't found in the victim's stomach. Palmer adds that the nitrogen gas probably carried the particles into the lungs, perhaps from food residue inside of the container containing the liquid nitrogen, such as a thermos. Gibbs is impressed, and gives Palmer a head slap and Abby a kiss on the cheek and her drink. Abby is smug – she is still "the favorite."

Tony visits the Corby home, and finds Sarah and Rachel clearing the garage. He asks Sarah if she knows about Corby being poisoned, and notes that "you seem to be attracted to men who have a hard time staying alive." Sarah is defensive, pointing out that she is drawn to the military, having grown up in it. Private Singer appears in the driveway, holding a large bouquet of flowers. Sarah and Tony are startled at his appearance, and Singer formally offers his condolences. Tony observes that he is the third wheel, and excuses himself.

At the office, Tony is considering what he has learned about Sarah, and admits to McGee and Ziva that he may have been wrong about her. McGee and Ziva had no luck with their interviews of the squad members. Gibbs comes in, tosses Tony the sign-out log for the company's base, and tells him to look at page 28. They see that Sergeant Barnes signed out of base at 19:18. McGee, examining the after-action reports that have finally been released, notes that Barnes also lied about his promotion – according to the reports, the promotion had already been denied three months earlier, due to "unsatisfactory leadership." Gibbs demands that he be brought in.

Ziva and Tony thread their way through an Oktoberfest celebration, complete with polka music and beer, towards where Barnes is sitting with some friends at a table. They confront him, and he resists, accidentally knocking over a waitress dressed in a German folk costume. Ziva quickly subdues Barnes by forcing him face-first into a plate of potato salad and handcuffing him. When his friends jump up to help him, Tony produces his badge, and then deftly takes Barnes' wallet, removes a bill, and hands it to the waitress to pay for the beer that Barnes knocked over.

In Interrogation, Gibbs accuses Barnes of poisoning Corby because he cost Barnes a promotion, and when that didn't work, he finished the job here in the States. He points out that Barnes lied about being on-base that night, and commands him, "Man up, Marine." Barnes admits that he was doing it for Corby's own good, and tells Gibbs a story about an accident that Corby was involved in that could have endangered the company, but everyone thought it was just one of Corby's jokes backfiring. Barnes says that he knew about the Code Red, but thought it might do Corby good to get "straightened out." He admits that he put only a drop of paint thinner in Corby's coffee, hoping that he would be sent home on medical leave before someone got hurt, but the men in the unit found out and lost respect for him. As a result, the unit fell apart. But Barnes denies killing Corby, stating that he was in a strip club that night, trying to talk to his seniors and get his promotion back on track. Gibbs observes, "That's not going to happen."

In the squad room, Gibbs is sitting down as Tony asks if there's any more cider, as he found it "de-ciderly delicious," a joke that falls flat. McGee tells Gibbs that Barnes' alibi checks out, and Tony insists that the wife is holding something back. Gibbs points out that since a Marine vehicle was at the scene, it would tend to point to a Marine being involved. McGee tells Gibbs that he has been routinely checking the financials for all the unit members, and found something odd about Singer's: Apparently, the evening of the murder, Singer was ordering champagne and caviar room service in the same hotel where Sarah Corby was staying in Virginia Beach.

Tony is interviewing Singer in Interrogation, and theorizes that Singer and Sarah Corby were enjoying each other's company, and then Singer left and stayed out all night, presumably to kill Corby. Singer doesn't respond, and Tony wonders if it's because he's innocent, guilty, or just covering up for Sarah Corby. He gets up and shoots a triumphant look at the Observation room, where Gibbs and Ziva are watching. Ziva observes, to Gibbs' amusement, that "if Tony is right about the wife, I will never live it down!" Tony enters, triumphant that Singer is about to point to Corby, and McGee joins them, showing that Sarah Corby's credit card was used to purchase a new garden hose and duct tape the week before. Ziva mutters, "I don't believe it!" as Tony looks smug.

Later, Sarah Corby is sitting in Interrogation. Tony and Gibbs walk in and tells her that they know about her affair with Singer, and suggest that she encouraged Singer to kill Corby using the hose she had purchased. She tells them that Singer didn't leave the hotel – she did. She felt guilty, and, borrowing Singer's car, returned to her home to confess to Corby, but only sat in the car in front of the house for a while before she lost her nerve and returned to the hotel to break it off with Singer. Tony is skeptical, and pulls out the handcuffs and prepares to arrest her, but Gibbs stops him, and, springing up, tells Tony to join him in the Evidence Garage.

In the squad room, Gibbs quickly tells McGee to pull up the video tape, and they see Corby's car parked in front of the house. Gibbs then joins Tony and Ziva in the garage, where they examine the driver's side of the car. He tells Gibbs to get in, but the seat is too far forward – he can't. Ziva observes that no one has moved the seat. Gibbs points out that, when the kids took the video, the car was in the street, but later, the car was in the driveway. They consider this for a moment, and then Gibbs asks for the financial records from the death of Sarah's second husband.

Rachel is leaving the house, and, hearing a car in the driveway, calls out to Sarah that she was just getting ready to go for a run. She is surprised to find not Sarah, but Gibbs and Tony standing in the driveway. Gibbs holds up a thermos wrapped in plastic – which was found in Rachel's friend's trashcan. Tony points out that there's traces of liquid nitrogen in it, and points out that everyone at the party was so drunk that they didn't see her slip out, and that she is the one that used Sarah's credit card to purchase the hose and the duct tape. Tony then goes on to describe how Rachel fixed a thermos of cocoa for her stepfather, but he was too preoccupied to notice the liquid nitrogen until it was too late. Rachel protests, but Tony and Gibbs points out that she has a trust fund left to her by her biological father that was under Sarah's control until she was 25, and that with Corby's death, she would inherit a total of $500,000. If Sarah was in jail, then Rachel would receive the money immediately. Rachel confessed, declaring how much she disliked Sarah and Corby. As she is being arrested, she asks what will happen to her money, and Gibbs tells her that she can have it in five years. Tony quips, "Yeah, it will go a long way in the prison gift shop."

The next morning, McGee enters and is greeted cheerfully by Ziva, who offers him a cup of coffee. He accepts it with surprise, and takes an appreciative sip. He sits at his computer and begins to punch keys, but they are frozen. Suddenly, foam erupts from between the keys of the keyboard, and McGee observes, with resignation, "Abby" Tony bounces in, happy that he has won the Larceny Lotto pool. When McGee wonders if Tony is going to buy lunch that day, Tony tells him, "I didn't keep the money, McNopoly!" and goes on to say that he has donated it to charity, an urban youth group. Ziva tells Tony that she has been thinking about her place as a new agent, and, offering him his own cup of coffee, goes on to add, "And your place as" Tony finishes the sentence: "As your superior in every way." Ziva takes a deep breath and agrees. "Yes. But for my sanity, can you not call me Probie?" Tony, with a completely straight face, tells her, "But I say it with love." Ziva narrows her eyes at him, and he continues, "And if I refuse?" and Ziva admits, reluctantly, "You are Senior Field Agent, and I am – entirely – at your mercy." Tony, accepting the coffee, accepts her capitulation gracefully: "As you should be," and takes an appreciative gulp of the coffee. Ziva smiles broadly, and as Tony smiles in response, we see that the "coffee" has, unbeknownst to him, stained his teeth a bright blue-green. Trick or treat!

Summary: When one of Gibbs' boats is found with two murdered soldiers, Gibbs is forced to investigate the involvement of his mentor Mike Franks, and prevent a possible international confrontation.

Near Mexico, the U.S. Navy finds a small sailboat approaching a ship. An agent named Cortez sees the ship is carrying two dead bodies.

Later, Tony and McGee see that Ziva is passed out at her desk. McGee says it is probably a trap. Ziva explains that Gibbs and Ducky left late last night to go to Mexico. Ziva says she is studying to be a U.S. citizen in order to be an agent.

Tony says he represents the American Dream. Gibbs calls McGee and tells him they will receive two dead bodies. Cortez reports to Vance that the bodies were found in a boat that was registered to Gibbs. Ducky finds pesos in the pockets of the victims. Gibbs explains the boat was given as a gift. They go to a house at the beach. Vance checks the house and tells Gibbs that Mike Franks is not there.

Gibb's boat is brought back to the lab. Abby says she wants to figure out how Gibbs got the boat out of his basement. Gibbs reports to Vance that the victims were Calvin Blanchad and Roy Keenan who were both dishonorably discharged from the military. Vance tells Gibbs that the men were looking for Mike. They wonder if Mike killed the men, loaded them on the boat, then sent them off. Vance orders Gibbs to find Mike.

Gibbs goes to the morgue and is told the men were shot multiple times by a large caliber weapon. Ducky suspects that Mike crossed the line from being a cowboy to an outlaw. He says the bodies were dragged into the boat. Ducky figures the discovery of the boat was intentional.

Gibbs asks Abby if the firefight happened on the boat. She says she found bullets that indicate the victims were executed. She also finds another bullet from a smaller caliber gun in the side. Gibbs figures the firefight started before the boat was in the water. Gibbs tells Abby to take the boat apart to find out what happened.

Tony tells Ziva that the American dream means that any idiot can become a success. Tony tells Gibbs he doesn't think the victims knew Franks at all. Later, Gibbs hears people in his house. He discovers that Amira and Leyla are there. Leyla says Mike is right behind her. Mike asks Gibbs if he is going to help him or shoot him. Gibbs asks Mike why the two men were after him. Mike says he hoped he would tell him why. Mike explains he learned from a bartender that the men were looking for him. He says he never saw the men in his whole life. He apologizes for using the boat, but says he wanted to be investigated by him. Gibbs asks him to give up being tough. Mike assures him he would never put his daughter and granddaughter in jeopardy. Gibbs tells him to leave the investigation to them.

Back in the office, the team learns that Calvin and Roy became private contractors after they left the military. Ziva reports they worked for a man named Merton Bell. Vance asks the team where Mike Franks is. Gibbs says he doesn't know where he is. Vance tells Gibbs he has the same friends as Merton. Vance explains he doesn't want Merton to think they were harboring a murderer. Gibbs admits that Mike is at his house.

Tony and Ziva arrive at the house to watch Mike's family. He tells him that McGee is going to drive him to the NCIS.

Vance meets with Merton and asks him what Calvin and Roy were doing. Merton explains the men were there to make sure a school goes up on schedule. Gibbs tells Merton he knows the men he hired have a history of violence and insubordination. Gibbs asks Merton if he knew his men were in Mexico carrying weapons. Merton says they accepted a contract. Vance asks him why they were carrying out a contract on Mike Franks, but he doesn't recognize him. Merton tells Vance that justice has to be done.

Mike arrives and asks Gibbs if Merton was the man who tried to kill him. Gibbs informs him that Leyla's family from Iraq hired the men to find her. Gibbs tells Mike to look in the mirror if he wants to see who the real bad guy is.

Vance tells Mike he doesn't look very remorseful. He explains the men didn't look like they meant him any harm. Gibbs explains that Leyla's family disowned her. Mike explains that Leyla's mother Shada is the head of a prominent Iraqi tribe. He says he doesn't think Shada is going to let Leyla live a happy life in Mexico. Vance asks what happened. He explains how he shot the men, loaded them on the boat then shot them again to make sure they were dead. Mike claims it was self defense. Vance orders Gibbs to take Mike's statement.

McGee finds Abby using a chain saw to take apart Gibb's boat. She tells him she found a secret box that is now empty. She also says she found a .22 bullet that was stuck in a .45 bullet. They call Tony and ask him if there is a hidden door in the basement. Abby and McGee finish their analysis of the bullets and find one of them came from a third shooter.

Ziva plays with Amira. Leyla tells Ziva she fell in love with Liam at first sight. She says it was difficult to leave Iraq. Leyla tells Tony their home in Mexico was simple. Tony asks her if she was inside when the firefight started. He asks her where Amira was, but she doesn't respond.

McGee tells Gibbs how Shada became an influential person in Iraq. Ducky calls Gibbs to the lab. Abby and Ducky tell Gibbs they are there for an intervention. They explain that Mike is making the investigation more difficult. Ducky informs Gibbs that Mike is lying to them. They tell Gibbs that they think someone else shot the men. Gibbs figures someone with a rifle shot and killed the men and Mike covered it up by shooting them in their wounds with his own gun.

Gibbs takes Mike's statement before he completes it. Gibbs reminds him of a story about a boy who went hunting with his father's best friend. They boy accidentally shot the friend and brought the body back to his father. The father felt like he let both of them down, then shot the man with his own gun in order to protect his son. Mike rips up the report and asks him when he figured out what happened. McGee tells Gibbs that Shada is on her way to D.C.

McGee poses as a limo driver, picks up Shada and brings her to the office. Vance asks Mike how the report is going and he admits that Gibbs found out what really happened. Gibbs explains that Mike wanted to protect his family. Vance asks Mike to meet with Shada to work things out between her and her daughter. Mike enters the room and tells her she should know who he is. She tells him she has been tracking his every move ever since his son impregnated her daughter. Shada asks why he hid her family, but he says she disowned her. Shada says things changed and Leyla and Amira are her blood. Shada says she wanted to rescue her children from him. Shada says she was assured it would not turn violent. Mike says he didn't fire the first shot. He admits he wasn't ready when the men arrived because he was playing with his granddaughter. He says they saw the men pointing guns at them when he was on the boat. He says Leyla saw the men and shot them with a rifle. Mike tells Shada the family is safer with him than with her.

Shada admits that she made a payment and Merton guaranteed he will get her family back.

Gibbs calls Ziva and informs them that Merton's men might be coming. A flash grenade is thrown in the room which knocks out Ziva and Tony. Masked men enter the house and one of them recognizes Ziva. The gunman, Damon, says he is there to rescue a daughter, but Ziva informs him he is actually going to kidnap. After an argument, Damon and Ziva knock out the rest of the men.

Later, Damon tells Merton he quits. Merton says he never broke any laws, but Gibbs says the Mexican authorities want him because bounty hunting is illegal in their country. Gibbs places him under arrest to hand him over to the Federales. Meanwhile, Shada visits Leyla, Mike and Amira at the house in Mexico.

Summary: Vance's family is once again put into danger when an assassin from his past returns to threaten their safety, and the team works on helping Vance face his troubled past.

As a group of soldiers go on a run through the woods, they notice an abandoned car. Upon closer inspection, they find keys in the ignition and several needles in the back seat. Around a bush, they find a dead body.

At the office, Tony steals a CD from McGee's desk and plays it on his computer. He explains to Ziva that they are self-help CDs called Download Your Destiny that McGee ordered. Tony giggles as they play an audio of a talking man. Gibbs tells the team they have a case about a man who was shot. At a cafe, McGee gets a large order of coffee and pastries. A woman named Amanda offers to help and introduces herself. After McGee gets a call, McGee asks Amanda to grab his phone which is in his pocket. He asks her if she would like to meet with him later and she leaves her number on his phone.

The team learns the victim was Doctor Elan Cirreux. They see Elan practiced in D.C. and Paris. Tony tells McGee he knows he met someone and asks what her name was. Ziva reports she found surgical thread at the scene and wonders why Elan operated outside of the hospital. Vance arrives and says he thinks the person who was operated on didn't want to be noticed. Ducky reports the doctor was shot twice and died painfully. Vance informs the team he thinks the killer is Lee Wuan Kai who was wounded in Los Angeles. He figures Kai carjacked Cirreux and forced him to operate on her before she killed him. Vance says in some ways he knows Kai better than he knows himself. Vance orders the team to find Kai and use deadly force.

They team learns about Kai's record of killing several targets. Tony says he thinks Kai is attractive. Tony asks McGee if the person he met is a redhead. McGee says he knows he took his motivational CDs. They learn that Cirreux had a sexual assault lawsuit filed against him by a Linda Demarco. They see that Linda wanted Cirreux dead.

Vance tells Gibbs that he met Kai several years ago. He says he shot Kai, but she got up and shot him and killed his partner. Vance says Kai put the gun to his head, but didn't kill him. Vance says the Serbians call Kai, Utvara, which means the Phantom.

McGee and Tony go to Linda's house. Tony gives McGee pointers on what he should do during his dates. After they knock on the door, they hear a shotgun pump. Linda shoots through the door just after the team jumps out of the way. Tony and McGee identify themselves as Federal agents and arrest her. Back at the station, Gibbs says he doesn't think Linda killed Cirreux since her alibi checks out.

At the lab, Ducky reports he found a hair on Cirreux that was tied into a bow. Gibbs wonders if it is a message. Ducky says it is a perfect DNA sample. Abby says she found the hair belongs to Kai.

At home, Vance tells his wife Jackie he is not hungry. He asks her where she sent the kids and she says they went to a friend's place for movie night. After Jackie figures Vance is working on the Kai case, she says she is going to take dinner off. Vance gets a call from Kai. She says Washington is beautiful. Vance says he has people looking for her. Vance texts Gibbs and informs him he has Kai on the line. Gibbs orders the team to mobilize. Vance offers to get her some help for her wounds. Kai says she has something she has to take care of. McGee locates Kai's phone in front of Vance's house and texts Vance. Vance grabs his gun to confront Kai, but Jackie is standing between them. Kai speeds off in her car.

The team assembles at Vance's house. Gibbs suggests Ziva stay the night. Vance says there is no point in running because he can't hide. Jackie says she is not going anywhere without him. Jackie says she always felt safe until now. Jackie informs Vance she is his partner now. Vance orders Gibbs to assign agents to his house.

At the office, Tony reports the car that Kai was driving was stolen from an airport. McGee tells Gibbs that he saw an article about a pilot who was reported missing. Gibbs instructs Abby to dust the plane for Kai's prints.

Later, McGee meets with Amanda and tells her he has to run back to work after fifteen minutes. McGee suggests they go for a walk. Amanda suggests they grab dessert later since she is working on a paper.

The next day, Tony realizes that McGee is becoming more manly. He tells McGee that he is proud of him.

CIA Agent Dunham arrives at the office. Dunham says he was working at the Korean border when he first heard of Kai. He explains Kim Jong Ill hired Kai to work for him. They figure that Kai was part of a government program where they turned orphans into assassins. Tony reports that the North Korean government has become impatient with Kai recently. Dunham says Kai is in town at the same time as Pak Su Ji who ran the program and now works at the UN.

Tony goes to the woman's bathroom to meet with Ziva. She says although she is attracted to Dunham, she wants to settle down.

Abby tells McGee that the bullets that Kai used were different than the ones they found in Los Angeles. She suspects that Kai used the smaller caliber on the doctor to inflict the maximum amount of pain. Abby tells McGee that she is happy that he found someone.

Gibbs shares his theory about Kai looking to kill Pak. Vance asks what Kai really wants. Ziva tells Vance to turn on the TV. They see a report of a sniper attack on Pak. The reporter states Pak was wounded and on his way to the hospital. They wonder if Pak is off her game. They wonder who Kai is working for now. Vance informs the team there is a message from the State Department. They learn the North Koreans have disavowed Kai and she is acting on her own.

Tony wonders if Kai is teasing Vance. He asks the team if they think Kai is trying to impress Vance. They see Amanda enter the office. Tony admits he called security and allowed her to come up. McGee introduces Amanda to the team. Tony suggests he give Amanda a tour of the office. McGee and Amanda get on an elevator where they kiss. Amanda asks McGee to meet her the next day for coffee.

In Vance's car, he notices an envelope. He sees a picture of Kai with a gun when she was young with the words, 'Why?' written on it. Vance gets a call and learns Pak passed away.

At the lab, Abby tells Gibbs she found both Cirreux and Pak had hand, foot and mouth disease contracted late in life. She says Pak died from a poison. She explains all the bullets found in the victim were laced with a drug called atropa belladonna. Abby says she thinks Pak had a back up plan if the bullets didn't kill her targets.

In the morning, McGee tells Amanda something didn't seem right last night. He asks her how she knew where he worked. Amanda asks where Kai is as she pulls out a gun. Amanda is shot in the chest. McGee looks up and sees Kai with a scoped handgun just before she disappears.

Back at the office, the team learns that Amanda was really Juliet Tippon who was hired by the North Koreans to find Kai. They wonder why Kai saved McGee's life. Gibbs orders McGee to connect Pak to Cirreux. Tony says both victims didn't have kids and they both had hand, foot and mouth disease. Gibbs has Abby load up the old photos of Kai when she was being trained to be an assassin. They notice that Pak and Cirreux were both at the training camp. Vance figures Kai is murdering the people who turned her into a killer.

Ducky explains that Cirreux made the girls into killers. He suspects since Kai never had any real relationships, she formed a strange one with Vance. Ducky compares Vance's hunt for Kai as a kind of courtship. Ducky figures that Vance has been Kai's partner the whole time. Vance returns home and finds Jackie is being held at gunpoint. He sees the agents who were watching them are down. Kai appears and admits she waited for his kids to leave then tranquilized the agents. Vance says he knows what the doctor and Pak did to her. Kai pushes Jackie aside and tells Vance she is counting on him to finish her. Vance tells Kai he can help her. Kai says he already has helped her by hunting her. Jackie grabs a gun and shoots Kai in the back. The NCIS team arrives and takes Kai's body away.

Summary: The team needs to use other resources when an attempted robbery leads to the death of a Lieutenant and the entire city suffers a major blackout.

A thirty-something gaming nerd is playing an on-line, and suddenly loses his internet connection.irate, he complains loudly to his mother and smacks the internet connection box, from an internet company called Swiftcast, in frustration. The scene segues to Swiftcast headquarters, where a gun battle is taking place between security guards and masked gunmen. A security guard is struck, falls and pulled to safety. The two security guards wonder what the gunmen are after, as one of the masked gunmen holds a hand-held radio device. As the device is triggered, the power goes out surrounding the building . . . and then throughout Washington, D.C.

In the squad room, Tony is sitting at his desk, fruitlessly attempting to turn on his computer, use his phone, or even turn on his desk lamp, with no success. He pulls out his cell phone, and begins to play a game. Jimmy stops by and tells him that all the cell towers are down, too, but Tony retorts that he's just playing Bing Ball, since that seems to be the only thing that works. Jimmy is excited that he is being sent to a sit-rep – his first. Tony is unimpressed, and observes that with the complete power outage, the back-up generators are only powering MTAC, and basic lights and communications. "And autopsy freezers," adds Jimmy helpfully. Tony makes a face, and wonders when Gibbs, McGee and Ziva will arrive. Jimmy tells him that McGee and Ziva never left the previous night – they were on the elevator when the power went out, and have spent the entire night in the elevator.

In the elevator, McGee is furious – they have been trapped for nine hours and twenty-one minutes. His pacing and fretting is wearing on Ziva, and she snatches his watch and throws it against the elevator wall, smashing it. "Why did you do that?" he exclaims, and she tells him, "It was either you or the watch!" She tells him it could be a lot worse – they could be stuck in the elevator with Tony. However, Tony overhears them, thanks to a plastic safety cone he has pressed against the elevator to listen through the door. He begins to make suggestive observations, and Ziva tells McGee to ignore him: "He's just like an annoying bug – he'll go away." Tony offers to sing them a song, but McGee asks for an update, instead. A technician is working to open the door manually, as Tony tells them that there was an explosion at a Potomac Electric substation that caused a cascade failure that knocked out power in half the district and they hope to have the power back on soon. Ziva observes that Gibbs is probably feeling right at home, since he doesn't need power to drink bourbon and use hand tools. After a moment of silence, McGee guesses, "He's right behind you, isn't he?" Tony admits that he is. Gibbs tells Tony to grab his gear – there is a dead Navy lieutenant at an internet provider. Tony is momentarily surprised that Gibbs is planning to work, but quickly gets with the program. McGee and Ziva spring from the elevator as the door is opened, but is greeted by Gibbs tossing him them their gear and commenting, "You're late, McGee."

At Swiftcast, Tony is kneeling by the dead lieutenant, Lt. Emma Paxton, as he is joined by Ducky and Jimmy, who got lost, as usual. She was identified by a credit card tucked in her boot. McGee, Tony and Ducky wonder why a naval officer was involved in the assault. Gibbs interviews the injured security guard, Colin Stone, who tells them there were three people, and that he was able to stop the woman and cuff her, but that her friends must have shot her. "So she could not talk," surmises Ziva. The guards describe how the gunmen entered "the farm", an extremely high security area where all the internet servers are kept. McGee wanders around the server towers, taking photographs, and rejoins Gibbs. He notes that there are probably millions of proprietary trade secrets stored in the servers, but they won't know what's missing until an inventory is done. Gibbs and McGee then study the retinal scanner that controls the magnetic locks, and McGee realizes that the power failure was the only way to spring the locks. As McGee continues to take pictures, his digital camera dies, to his frustration. Gibbs reaches into his gear bag, silently withdraws an old Polaroid SX-70 instant camera from the early 1970s and hands it to McGee, who is bemused by the antique. McGee asks Gibbs if he has any food in his bag, too, and Gibbs withdraws a tin of food, but McGee decides against it. Tony and Ziva report that they have found tire tracks and an eyewitness, and Ziva tells Gibbs that she's alerted Potomac Electric as to the possible connection between the break-in and the power outage. As Ziva is detailing the extensive power failure, Gibbs silently hands McGee a film pack for the camera. They begin to realize that, if they don't have power for days, they can't run fingerprints through IAFIS, run facial-recognition software, or even access their photos from digital equipment. Gibbs reaches further into his bag, and pulls out an old Polaroid One Step and tosses it to Ziva, and hands Tony yet a different camera. They examine the cameras, perplexed – most of the cameras are older than they are.

In the squad room, McGee is organizing the information that they have on Emma Paxton. He tacks a photo up on the wall, as well as a photocopy of her service record. As he is detailing his findings, Tony points and clicks the remote that they would normally use on the screen at McGee, to "move" him on to each point, to McGee's annoyance. Apparently, Paxton is a model officer who works for AFE – Armed Forces Entertainment. Abby has been given the cast of the tire prints that were found, and they now have a sketch of one of the other gunmen. They quickly move to put out a BOLO, call the husband, and review her banking records – but then suddenly realize that, without power, they can't.

In her lab, Abby is irate – her delicate machinery wasn't allowed to power down property, and will need extensive diagnostics before they can be brought back on-line when the power returns. Plus, she has no Caff-Pow, and is attempting to make her own. ("I'm trying to make my own, here, but I'm missing, like, 400 ingredients!") She is irate that Autopsy has power and she doesn't: "What does Autopsy have that I don't have?" "Corpses," responds Gibbs. "OK, I'll get corpses!" she retorts. She then goes on to tell Gibbs that she will have to run the tire i.d. by hand, and it is going to take much longer than he is used to. As Gibbs leaves, the batteries in her boom box die, much to her dismay.

In the squad room, Tony, McGee and Ziva are examining an old mimeograph machine, unsure how it works. Ziva touches it, but jumps back, startled, when one of the levers snaps forward. Gibbs grins, and as McGee comments, "We found this down in storage – now we just have to find a brontosaurus that knows how to use it," Gibbs steps forward, expertly snaps in the drawing, flips a few levers, rotates the drum, and out pops a copy of the picture. The team is impressed.

Gibbs interviews Paxton's husband, and shows him the copy of the photo, asking him if he knows who it is. Paxton is distraught, and insists that his wife was a victim and not "with" the other men. "But I don't expect you to understand," he adds, bitterly. He catches the look in Gibbs' face, and then realizes, "But you do, don't you?" He begins to sob, quietly, as Gibbs looks away. Paxton declares that his wife was a proud American, third-generation Navy, and he just wants to be able to bury her with full military honors. McGee interrupts the interview to tell Gibbs that the inventory at Swiftcast is complete, and, to everyone's surprise, nothing appears to be missing.

Tony comes dashing into the squad room, gleefully carrying a large mounted map and declaring that every cop show has a map on their cork board. "Haven't you ever seen Dragnet? Baretta? Kojak? He is astonished that no one knows what he's talking about, and pulls out a lollipop, a la Kojak: "Who loves you, baby?" he mimics, but stops at Gibbs' stare. The team reviews what they know – which is very little at this point – and Gibbs tells them to interview Lt. Paxton's CO. As Tony begins to leave, McGee protests, and, pointing to two boxes full of files, asks who is going to review her bank statements. Tony tells McGee that that's his job, and McGee sniffs and declares that "he doesn't do hardcopy." Tony offers to flip for it, but when McGee turns to get a coin, Tony darts out, quickly followed by an apologetic Ziva.

In Autopsy, Ducky describes Paxton as being shot in the heart twice, and shows Gibbs the bruising around her wrists from the handcuffs. From the extent of the bruising, Ducky thinks that the gunmen tried to free her before they left, and then shot her as a last resort. Ducky's narration is interrupted by staffers who come into Autopsy to retrieve food that Ducky is allowing them to keep in one of the refrigerated vaults. Gibbs is taken aback, but Ducky continues, noting that he cannot explain the extreme swelling in her extremities. He tells Gibbs that he's sent the blood work up to Abby, but Abby can't do much with it, right now. He also noted that she appeared to have suffered several traumatic injuries, which didn't really coincide with her service record of no combat.

Ziva and Tony interview Sarah Resnik, who worked with Paxton and last spoke to her three days previously. Ziva wonders if it was before she was supposed to leave for Baghdad, but Resnik tells her that Paxton wasn't due to go to Baghdad. Paxton called in sick, but Resnik saw her an hour later walking down the street with a man who wasn't her husband.

In the squad room, McGee is shifting through piles of paper, and muttering "How did people survive before search engines?" He gets another paper cut, and Gibbs throws him a box of Band-Aids. Tony and Ziva drag in very tired, because they had to walk to talk to several leads. Tony complains that his feet hurt, and the lead was a dead end. McGee declares there's nothing in the bank records. Gibbs, exasperated, exclaims, "So, basically, we've got nothing?" Abby joins them, having successfully identified the tire tracks as belonging to a Chevy Impala. McGee suddenly remembers hearing about an abandoned Impala as he was listening to the police band all day.

They find an abandoned car with bullet holes in the back window, and a blood trail leading to a large container. Cautiously entering the container, they find a cache of guns, a bed, a desk, and a computer. McGee exclaims, "Wow – this is like the TARDIS!" He then goes on to explain that the TARDIS was a time-traveling machine featured in the T.V. show Doctor Who. Tony is surprised: "Doctor Who? Who watches that?" Tony thinks it's more like Lord of War, considering the large number of guns in the container. McGee finds multiple passports with different identities, all with Paxton's picture.

As Ziva and McGee peruse the container's contents, Ziva comments that Mossad called hide-outs like this "sanctuaries," a place that each operative maintains in order to prepare for an op – which begs the question of what kind of operation Paxton was running. McGee finds a power switch and gleefully turns on a generator, but the generator fails just as the computer is booting up, to his disappointment. Tony and Gibbs finds additional tire tracks outside, which leads them to believe that the gunmen used another car to escape. Gibbs bags an electronic device he finds in the Impala, and Ziva and McGee discover blueprints to the Swiftcast building, and the power company substation where the power was cut. Tony observes that Mr. Paxton isn't going to like finding out he was "married to Mata Hari," but the team also finds a fake passport for Mr. Paxton, too.

In Interrogation, Gibbs withdraws an old-fashioned tape recorder and hits "record" – Mr. Paxton is surprised, and Gibbs tells him that they record all interrogations. Paxton is concerned, because "interrogation" sounds more serious than "a few questions." Gibbs shows him the fake passport with his picture, and tells him that Lt. Paxton had a container off of Route 50 as he shows him pictures of the guns and other equipment in the container. Paxton is stunned, but insists that his wife was the victim. He then confesses that he had sensed that some things weren't adding up, but staunchly maintains that his wife is a good person. He admits that he had thought that perhaps she was cheating on him, and hired a private investigator, but no evidence was found. He offers Gibbs the tapes to review.

McGee is in MTAC, happily reviewing Paxton's investigator's tapes – the computer is working, his remote is working – all is right with the world. Tony joins him, asking if he needs help, to which McGee replies, "No, I do not!" Tony, drawn by the opportunity to engage in some technology, offers to be McGee's "techno-wing-man", but McGee points the remote at Tony and clicks it several times – just as Tony did to him earlier – and tells him that he's got it covered. "And I want you to go and do . . . whatever it was that you were doing. What exactly are you doing, again?" Tony admits that he was hand-filing evidence custody documents, showing his own set of paper cuts. McGee grins and dismisses him: "Yeah, have fun with that." Tony leaves reluctantly, declaring that he hopes that McGee blows a fuse. As Tony leaves, muttering vague threats, McGee smiles in satisfaction, turns, and is startled by Gibbs standing in front of him, who has obviously overheard the slightly juvenile exchange. "Hi, boss – I was just . . ." "Just what, rubbing it in – because he left you with the paperwork earlier?" asks Gibbs. McGee winces: "Yeah." Gibbs gazes at McGee and then gives him a half-smile and a tacit "Huh!" of approval. McGee relaxes, and shows Gibbs what he's found on the tapes. As the tape plays, Gibbs notices the same man appears several times in the tape, a man that appears to be following Lt. Paxton. Gibbs notices that the mystery man leaves his fingerprints on a wall, and sends McGee out to recover the prints.

In Abby's lab, McGee has the prints, Tony has hundreds of fingerprint cards from the police that match the mystery man's description, and Ziva dashes in carrying a bag full of lemons. Abby uses the lemons to rig a voltaic battery, which in turn powers up her boom box. She dumps the fingerprint cards onto the floor (despite Tony's careful alphabetizing) and divides the team into fingerprint characteristics: whorls, arches and loops, as she takes composites. For eight hours through the night, the team sits on the floor of the lab, sorting through cards and trying to find a card that matches the fingerprints McGee obtained. At 6:15 a.m., they are tired and punchy, but Abby finally finds a card that matches the prints, for a Jonathan Graham, and they further match the photo on the card with the artist's drawing of the gunman. The team applauds in relief.

Arriving at Graham's home, they find him and another man dead on the floor from an apparent shoot-out. They are surprised and aim at the kitchen when Commander Sarah Resnik steps from the kitchen and coolly informs them that the other gunman was Graham's roommate, Leo Harper. Her entire demeanor has changed – she is assured and confident, and even Tony asks if she's had a makeover. Gibbs asks for clarification, and when Tony introduces her as Lt. Paxton's commanding officer at AFE, she corrects him: "Not quite," and produces her real identification, with the National Security Agency, telling the team that she and Paxton were colleagues on a highly classified project, and that AFE was just their cover. "And this is much bigger than you think," she warns them.

As the group returns to NCIS with Resnick, she explains that NSA has an agreement with retinal scan manufacturers to program a "back door" into all scanners. Paxton and Resnick are the only two people in the world whose irises were hard-coded into all the devices – as she demonstrates on the NCIS retinal scan elevator lock. McGee is impressed as she goes on to explain that their eyes can open any lock with any retinal scanner, and with AFE as their cover, they can assist agencies around the world with covert activities without suspicion. She doesn't know why Paxton was involved with the Swiftcast incident, but is concerned that their mission has been compromised. Gibbs wonders about her Mr. Paxton's fake passport, but Resnick dismisses it, telling Gibbs that Lt. Paxton probably had it made in case they had to go undercover quickly. However, no one has a good grasp on why Paxton was involved. Resnick points out that D.C. is very vulnerable to attack with all communications and power interrupted, and tells Gibbs that his team is making more progress in solving the case than the NSA is, and offers to work together.

In Autopsy, Ducky has completed his exam of the murdered gunmen, and tells Gibbs that the murder scene was staged – the men were killed elsewhere and then brought to the house and arranged to look like victims of a shootout. Ducky notes that before one gunman died, he was probably digging, due to the large amount of dirt under his nails.

After supervising a dig at Graham's house, Tony and Ziva return with a package they had found buried under a shed in the backyard. In the squad room, they open it to find a server from the server farm at Swiftcast – which is puzzling, since no servers were reported missing.

They realize that a server was switched out, and a "bugged" copy was put in its place. McGee realizes that was why the power was cut – it was the only way to do the switch without it being noticed. Ziva says that perhaps the power outage isn't a prelude to a terrorist attack, but McGee notes that the server connects to the "internet backbone", and that every government agency that flows through internet – which would put the country's entire electronic infrastructure at risk. They realize that Lt. Paxton spent a lot of time overseas and probably encountered people who would pay well for that information. However, Abby interrupts and tells them that she doesn't think it was Lt. Paxton who was trying to sell the information. Abby has rigged up an elaborate distillation analysis for the blood samples that she had to work with, and discovered that Lt. Paxton's blood contained large amounts of a vasodilator that is normally prescribed for high blood pressure, which explains the large amount of swelling Ducky observed. Gibbs wonders if it was a form of a "suicide pill" but Abby points out that the drug is non-lethal. Abby tells Gibbs that she believes that Lt. Paxton was using the vasodilator to try to alter the pattern of the blood vessels in her eye just enough so that the retinal scanner would not work. "She wasn't part of the break-in!" declares Abby, and Gibbs agrees: "She was trying to stop it." Abby goes on to say that the only place in Graham's house where Lt. Paxton's fingerprints could be found were in the bathroom, which leads her to think that Lt. Paxton had been kidnapped and held, but fought back the only way she could, with what she found in the medicine cabinet. "It didn't work – but A+ for the MacGyver!" Abby goes on to tell Gibbs that, even though the label has been pulled off, she knows who the high blood pressure medicine belongs to, because of blood samples taken at the Swiftcast. At Swiftcast, Ziva shows the Mr. Paxton's fake passport to Stone, the injured security guard. Stone identifies Mr. Paxton as one of the gunmen: "I remember those eyes," and when they tell him that it was Lt. Paxton's husband, he quips, "A real-life Bonnie & Clyde, eh?" Ziva comments that they have enough evidence for an arrest, and as they walk away, the power comes back on, to everyone's delight.

In the server farm, the power comes back on, and Stone walks purposefully towards one of the servers, unlocks it, and flips a switch. A screen message announces "Rerouting Signal", and Stone smiles in satisfaction and relocks the case. Suddenly, we hear Tony's voice in his best Dragnet imitation: "Ladies and gentlemen, the story you are about to hear is true, only the names have been changed to protect the innocent . . ." Stone is startled, as Tony comes around the corner of the server, and finishes with ". . . which you're not. You got a buyer, yet, for all those zeros and ones?" Stone begins to bolt, but is cut off by Ziva's appearance at the other end of the hall. She tells him that getting himself shot during the break-in "was a nice touch," but because of that, they obtained the blood work that subsequently identified him. Ziva tells him, mockingly, "You really should watch your blood pressure," and Tony adds, "The next time you kidnap someone, keep them away from your medicine cabinet." Gibbs smiles, and tells Tony, "Book him, Dan-ozzo." Tony compliments Gibbs: "Nice Hawaii 5-0 reference, Boss!" and Gibbs tilts his head in acknowledgement with a small smile. Gibbs uses his walkie-talkie to call McGee, standing by a large portable generator with Resnick. McGee asks, "Red-handed?" Gibbs allows as how they don't come much redder. McGee and Resnick then turn off the generator, plunging the building back into darkness.

Stone is waiting in Interrogation, and is being observed by McGee, Mr. Paxton and Gibbs. They tell Paxton that Stone is actually Russian, and worked for Russian counter-intelligence until two years ago, who decided to freelance, and head about Lt. Paxton's unique status when she was on an op in Kiev. McGee explains, "With the national security data she gave him access to, he could name his price to our enemies. Your wife tried to stop him." Gibbs continues: "And when she couldn't, she cuffed herself during the break-in. She knew we'd find her body – she knew we'd dig deeper." Paxton admits that while there was a lot he didn't know about Emma, she was a fighter – "stubborn as hell." Gibbs offers a small bit of comfort: "Yep. Been there." Paxton, near tears, asks, "She had to do it, right? She didn't have a choice?" but Gibbs corrects him: "No, she had a choice. That's what makes her a hero."

In the squad room, everyone is at their desks – the power is still out, but Tony is triumphant: "High tech case – low tech ass- kicking!" and McGee admits that it's kind of ironic. The team reflects that not having power has given them a chance to slow down, being unplugged – no emails, no calls, etc. – it was nice. Suddenly, the power comes back on, and the team attacks their computers hungrily, with a gleam in their eyes like someone coming out of withdrawal. Gibbs sits down at his desk, puts away his bag of "antiques", and then gazes at each member of his team as they are intent on their computers. He reaches forward and hits the "off" switch on his computer screen, and then leans back in his chair with a smile of satisfaction on his face.

Summary: When a death of a Marine leads the NCIS team to a government think-tank filled with child prodigies, the team has to protect a 12- year-old child who may be the next target of the killer.

Two little boys are chasing each other through a corn field. They are playing tag. One boy runs into a scarecrow and falls backwards. The other boy laughs and tags him. The dark haired boy on the ground wants to know what "that is," pointing to blood dripping from the scarecrow. He uses a stick to remove the mask from the scarecrow and reveals a dead Marine. Both boys scream and take off running.

McGee walks into the squadroom, passing Ziva who is coming out of the elevator. She ask him if he's not using the elevator and he tells her it's all about the cardio these days. "You have been looking increasingly Kate Mossish there McTim. What are you down 2-3 lbs.?" Tony asks. McGee says he's down 15 pounds and thanks Tony for noticing. "That's what I do, eagle-eyed special agent," Tony says. Tony thinks McGee lost weight because of a girl but McGee says he usually gains a few pounds over the holidays so he was countering it. Ducky walks in and hands out invitations to Thanksgiving dinner to each team member. Ziva thinks Ducky misspelled "fixins" on the invitation. Palmer has already left town for the holiday. McGee is having Thanksgiving dinner with his sister and Ziva accepted an invitation with her neighbor. Tony says he also has plans. "Are you letting some blonde bombshell baste your bird?" Ziva asks Tony. Tony says he's going to a poker tournament with an all you can eat crab buffet. "Pilgrims and Indians gambling together, that warms the heart," McGee says. Ziva asks about Ducky's mother. He says she's doing well, the staff take good care of her but she barely recognizes him when he visits. "That leaves me with a 20 lb. bird and all the fixings to feed Cox's army," Ducky says. Gibbs walks in and says "Marines, got a dead one in a cornfield." Gibbs walks to his desk and asks if Ducky is waiting for an invitation when he doesn't move. Ducky hands Gibbs an invitation to Thanksgiving dinner. Gibbs hands him one back, the address to the cornfield.

The team shows up at the cornfield and Ziva and Tony have a slight argument over the name of corn and Indians. Gibbs tells DiNozzo to process the scene. Ziva points out the footprints and says some of them are very small. Tony points out larger footprints and drag marks from behind the dead marine. He says from the drag marks, the Marine was already dead. "Ah fresh corn, that gives me an idea. Why don't we have corn chowder as the first course," Ducky says. Each team member responds with one word each: "Poker," says Tony. "Sisters," says McGee. "Neighbors," says Ziva. "Later," Gibbs adds. Ducky begins to process the body and says the victim wasn't killed on site. The victim's name is Marine Lance Corporal Trevor Lazatta, stationed out of Quantico. Ducky discovers the victim is missing a hand, which was removed after he died, otherwise the blood pool would be greater than it was. Tony jokes around that maybe the crows carried off the hand and makes crow noises. Ziva uses a crow feather and pokes Tony's ear, startling him. Gibbs just looks at Tony and Ziva says "Sorry, I had to do it." Tony apologizes. Ducky says the time of death was approximately 8-10 hours ago. Tony notices a mark on the victim's arm "PC." He says that they are a local gang, big up and down the east coast. Tony wonders if it was an initiation "kill a Marine and your in." Gibbs informs them that Lazatta was part of gang before he joined the Marines. His tattoo was lasered off. Gibbs tells Ziva to get on Tony's shoulders. Tony questions Gibbs and Ziva doesn't want to do it until they both see Gibbs face. "Bend over Tony," Ziva says, which gets a chuckle out of Gibbs. Once Ziva's up, Gibbs calls a direction (North, South, East, West) and has Ziva tell him what she sees in each direction. Once she's covered all directions, they realize whoever put the body there wanted Lazatta to be found.

Back in the squadroom, McGee has Lazatta's information up on the big screen and gives Gibbs the Corporal's background information. Lazatta had a spotless service record, multiple tours, rewarded with a very desirable duty post guarding the Satler Institute for Strategic Studies and Analysis. Gibbs calls it an "R&D Government Think Tank." Lazatta had been assigned there for 6 months. Ziva and McGee are assigned to check out Lazatta and Gibbs has DiNozzo go with him to the Institute. "Satler Institute? Oh boss, shouldn't Mcsmarty-pants go to the nerd theme park. It's going to be a nerd's paradise with the World of Warcraft wallpaper and the pocket protectors and the elfan shaped beds because I probably shouldn't..." Tony says but gets cut off when Gibbs tosses him the keys.

Gibbs and DiNozzo show up at the Institute and are met by Krista Dalton, Facilities Coordinator. Tony tells her that Lazatta was killed approximately 20 miles from there. She asks how it happened. "Not very nicely Krista," DiNozzo replies. Gibbs wants to know what Lazatta guarded. Krista hands them each a visitors badge and brings them into a room full of children. "He guarded a day care center?" DiNozzo asks. Krista tells him it's not a daycare center, it's their intelligence testing center. Gibbs asks if they test the intelligence of the kids. "Nope, they test our's," Krista replies. She walks up to one child named Parker and asks how he's doing. Parker's specialty is redeployment of rapid response groups. "I thought we had people at the Pentagon who do that," Gibbs says. She says they do but they found that gifted children have a less-linear, less-bureaucratic way of approaching things. "Simpler, cleaner, purer," she adds. Tony is playing on a motorcycle game on the side of the room. He asks where the parents are. Krista says they have an arrangement with the parents and the kids visit for a week or two at a time. It helps maintain a nice balance between home and the Institute and keep the kids focused. Tony walks up to a young boy playing a game on the television and waves his hand in front of the boy's face, but gets no response. Tony believes Lazatta was basically a babysitter. "These kids are incredibly valuable to us and the military," Krista says. An older boy, Brett, walks up and asks Krista when he gets his MP3 player back. She tells him when he stops wrapping the cord around the ceiling fan. As he explains why he was doing it, Tony walks up smiling, points at Brett and says, "Val Kilmer, Real Genius." Krista tells Brett he can have his MP3 player back after Thanksgiving. Brett walks away and Krista tells them that Brett is one of their prized and oldest students. Gibbs wants to know if any of the kids were particularly attached to Lazatta. One girl, Angela Kelp, was. She had been acting distracted lately and Krista asked Lazatta to keep an eye on her. The two ended up hitting it off. DiNozzo is playing an electric guitar so Gibbs tosses a small ball at the guitar to get his attention.

Angela is playing a military video game and a man, Greg Norvell, is videotaping what she's doing. She apologizes and says she sees mistakes. She points out a better way for the troops to have gone their route and saved more lives. She connects some of her drawings on the screen and makes it a cat head. Gibbs tells Angela that her art is impressive. Angela tells Gibbs her cat's name and that her parents split when she was little. She realizes something happened to Lazatta. Gibbs asks if the two of them can go and talk privately. Greg says they can talk in her room. Gibbs, Krista and Angela head out of the room. "I had a combined SAT score of 950, is that good?" Tony asks Greg as he looks around.

In the room, Angela offers Gibbs a cupcake. He takes one, sits down, and eats it. Gibbs asks why she thinks something happened to Lazatta. Angela says it's because he's there and Lazatta's not. She believes Lazatta was killed. Gibbs notices the artwork on her wall. Angela says she drew them, Krista told her it was important to express herself. Gibbs writes down his phone number and tells her if she remembers anything, she should call him. Gibbs phone rings and McGee calls him with information. While he's on the phone with McGee, Angela walks over and takes the sticky note with his phone number off the monitor and holds it. When Gibbs hangs up, he thanks Angela for the cupcake and heads out the door.

The team has found Lazatta's car 6 miles from the crime scene. McGee didn't find anything in Lazatta's apartment but the fact that he was a member of a local gang. Gibbs finds one of the slugs they didn't find in Lazatta in the door. McGee checked the map system in the car and based on the time of death, it appears Lazatta had just left work. Ziva tells Gibbs that the fuel line was cut on the car. They think Lazatta was ambushed. Gibbs finds Lazatta's cell phone on the side of the driver's seat. When McGee looks, he sees 6 missed phone calls, all from the same number. Gibbs sends DiNozzo off to find the missing caller.

DiNozzo brings Eddy Castillo into interrogation. Eddy had made the phone calls to Lazatta and he is part of the PC gang. Eddie claims that while they had their disagreements, he and Lazatta were like brothers. Tony points out that Metro Gang Division says Eddy tried to kill Trevor a few years ago when he left the PC's. "People felt betrayed but we worked it out," Eddy says. "You worked it out. That doesn't smell so good to me," Tony replies. Eddy says that he and Trevor had some unsettled business, that Tony doesn't need to know about. Tony sits down and shows Eddy the photos of Trevor's body. He asks him why he cut his hand off and carved PC into his arm. Tony asks Eddy if he has an alibi for the night before. "Lullabye, it's a night club for rich kids," Eddy says. They handle the refreshments there. "Well we'll see about that. In the meantime I hope you like being swabbed, poked and pricked," Tony says. "We are checking you for gun shot residue, blood, and dirt from the crime scene, anything that I can think of. You know why. Because your messing with my holidays and I don't like it when people mess with my Thanksgiving," Tony says.

In the squadroom, McGee shows Gibbs and Ziva security footage from the Institute. According to security sensors, Lazatta entered the dorm room at 6:00am that morning. Dorm access requires palm access. The intruder got in using Lazatta's hand then went into Angela's room and left less than a minute later with nothing but Lazatta's hand. "Empty handed," Gibbs says.

At the Institute, Gibbs returns to Angela's room and questions her. She tells him she was asleep and didn't see anyone. Gibbs asks if anything was missing. Angela looks around and notices two of her collages are gone. He asks if there is anything special about them and she says no. Gibbs asks to borrow her video camera and picks it up with a glove, then pockets it. He tells her that her mother knows she is going with him and she will be safe. He asks again if she saw anything and she says she's positive.

Gibbs walks into Abby's lab. She lost her grandmother's recipe for cranberry sauce and is trying to duplicate it before Ducky's dinner. "I don't want to let Ducky's turkey down, ya know," Abby says. "What can I do for you Gibblet?," Abby asks. She tells him it's a seasonal play on his name. He hands her Angela's camera and has her upload the photos. Gibbs sees the 2 photos missing from Angela's wall and wants Abby to tell him what they are of. As he leaves, he tries the cranberry sauce and tells her "more sugar." Abby chuckles.

Gibbs walks into autopsy and Ducky asks him to pick up a dozen dinner rolls from the baker. Gibbs wants to know the confirmation of death. Ducky says it was a gunshot wound to the head. He doesn't know yet what damage it caused. Gibbs pulls up a file and tells Ducky he needs a psych evaluation on a 12 year old girl. Ducky asks Gibbs where he goes for Thanksgiving. For the last 9 Thanksgivings he's called Gibbs at home and he doesn't answer. He's even driven by but he's not there but he expects to see Gibbs at 16:00 for dinner the next day. Ducky says he can't go home without "him." He walks over to one of the autopsy drawers, telling Gibbs what kind of rolls to bring. He opens one of the drawers and takes out "him," the turkey. When he turns around, Gibbs has left.

In the squadroom, Ziva hands Angela a drink. She asks Mrs. D'Arcy McKenna, a Legal Youth Advocater, if she wants something. Gibbs walks by and puts a pop on the desk for her. D'Arcy is pleased Gibbs remembered. "Well your memorable Darcy," Gibbs says. He walks up the stairs to MTAC and Angela watches him. She walks over to Ziva and asks why she needs a Legal Youth Advocater. Darcy whispers, "It's the law sweetie." D'Arcy is sending her husband her grocery shopping list via her cell phone. Angela asks Ziva if she's every killed anybody. Ziva lies and says no. Ducky calls and tells Ziva he's ready for Angela. Ziva walks her to the elevator and the door opens. Gibbs is inside and he says he'll take Angela up. When the elevator doors close, Angela remarks on how Gibbs takes the stairs up but the elevator down. "Knees," Gibbs replies. Angela reaches over and shuts the elevator down. Gibbs crosses his arms and leans against the wall, telling Angela she's got his attention. She knows Gibbs thinks she's hiding something. Gibbs tells her she's safe. She says she knows, she's not in danger. Gibbs asks her who is. She hesitates for a moment, then reaches over and flips the switch on in the elevator. "Glad we talked," Gibbs says as the elevator starts back up again.

Ducky meets with Angela and Darcy in the conference room. Angela asks if it's a psych evaluation. She knows there are 3 types: general, emergency and clinical. She tells Ducky it feels clinical to her.

Ducky comes out of the conference room as Gibbs rounds the corner. He tells Gibbs that Angela got him talking about his first pet, a guinea pig called HunkerMunker. "Duck, you were supposed to find out about her past," Gibbs says. Ducky says if she's hiding anything, she's hiding it well because he didn't get anything. Angela is sensitive and may act twice her age but inside she's anything but. Angela has secrets but Ducky tells Gibbs to not push her, when she's ready she'll tell them but if she's pushed, she'll push back. Tony runs up and hands Gibbs a file, tells him Eddy Castillo is back again. Gibbs tells DiNozzo to go talk to him. Tony tries to weasel out of it because he has travel plans but Gibbs sends him anyway.

Tony runs down the hallway, then slows and walks into interrogation. He walks in and says, "Hey, miss me Eddy?" Eddy says he came in with information about why he was calling Trevor. "I'm all ears," Tony says. Eddy has a 9-year old nephew who is already getting into trouble. He called Trevor to see if he would talk to the boy about the Marines. Eddie didn't want his crew to know he was trying to get his own blood out of that life. Tony antagonizes Eddy. He tells Eddy he was jealous of Lazatta because he had the brains to get out and make something of himself and Eddy didn't. Eddy was proud of Trevor but didn't kill him. He tells Tony that Trevor called him about a girl in trouble, the girl's name was Angela. Trevor couldn't go to the cops as it would cause more problems for Angela.

Gibbs walks into Abby's lab as she's trying her cousin Tetra's lime jello with yams, marshmallows and pecans. She says some family traditions should not be upheld because they "really, really, really, suck" and throws the jello away. Angela's drawing is her own code. She used 26 different colors to correspond with the letters of the alphabet. It's a poem, dark and creepy, very detailed. It's called "The Lady in the Fountain" and it's about death. Abby brings up the second collage and tells Gibbs it's frequency jamming signals. It's every communication code for every ship, plane and helicopter in the U.S. Navy and Marine Corp. Abby doesn't know why she was hiding military secrets in her collages unless she was going to sell them. "Or someone was going to sell them for her," Gibbs says. He kisses Abby on the cheek, then calls for Angela's mother's bank records as he heads out.

Gibbs gets off the elevator in the squadroom. Ziva comes running up and tells him that Angela's mother has called 13 times, she wants to see her daughter. McGee has pulled up the mother's financial records. Over the last 13 years she's averaged around $43,000. Over the last 3 months, she's made three additional deposits totaling $60,000. Either the mother is playing the ponies or she's taking advantage of her little girl.

The team has the collages up on the big screen. Tony compares the collage to the magic eye posters. You stare at them and suddenly make out the image. He keeps looking at the image and talks about focusing. Gibbs walks up behind him, headslaps him and tells him to focus. Tony crosses his eyes, says the image is dolphins and moonlight and thanks Gibbs. McGee tells Gibbs that the jamming codes belong to a Marine maneuver called "Ballistic Winter." Copies of the signals appeared on the black market three months ago in China and it's an open NCIS investigation. Ziva doesn't believe Angela stole state secrets. "Clearly you've never seen The Bad Seed," Tony says. Gibbs wants to know if Interpol has any suspects. They have one, C-Ten Dynamics, a defense firm who does R&D in conjunction with the Satler Institute. The C-Ten sales rep is Debra Leigh Dalton, same last name as Satler's Think Tank Coordinator, Krista Dalton.

Tony confirms the two women are sisters. Ziva wonders if Debra is the one who slipped into Angela's room. Gibbs wants to talk to Debra but McGee says it's going to be tough to do. Debra flew into D.C. five days earlier and never arrived at her house. There's been no record of sale or credit card activity since she arrived. Tony begins to quote "Hannah and Her Sisters" meets "The 39 Steps." He is cut off by a look from Gibbs. Gibbs wants Krista brought in for questioning and Angela brought to a safe house. Ziva tells him the safe houses have been compromised due to a computer glitch, which should be fixed the next day. She asks about a motel. McGee wishes her luck in finding one before Thanksgiving. Gibbs hands her Ducky's invitation and says Ducky has a spare room. "Yeah boss, we've all got plans this holiday season and..." Tony says. He's cut off again when Gibbs tells him to cancel them.

Gibbs walks into the break room and Angela is playing checkers with Ray Mabus. She hustles him for $1 but Gibbs takes it. He goes and buys a cold drink instead. Gibbs sits down and asks what the buy-in is. She tells him $2. He wants to play for different stakes. If he wins, she tells him the truth about Lazatta, military secrets, everything. He tells her they found the jamming signals in her artwork. She says she wasn't hiding them, it's just how she works. Angela holds Gibbs hand and tells him he builds things, woodwork. Her father made cabinets. "Didn't you ever express yourself in the things you made?" Angela asks. Gibbs wants to know how many people at the Institute know what was in her artwork. She says she isn't sure. Ziva walks in and tells them the safe house is ready.

Gibbs goes to see Angela's mother, Darlene. She is upset that NCIS is holding her daughter. Gibbs shows her the bank statement and says she's been getting a lot of money lately. Darlene insists it's Angela's money. "You really thought Angela was getting paid all that just to play video games?" Gibbs asks. Darlene says she was told Angela's work saved soldier's lives. Angela felt good about helping and the money is going to go towards her college fund. Gibbs wants to know how the money got to her. She tells him the larger amounts came from C-Ten Dynamics. She just assumed they were projects Angela worked on. The checks were approved by Debra Dalton. Darlene only talked to Krista Dalton and the checks came in the mail. Gibbs get a call from McGee informing him that they found another body at the Institute. He gets up to leave and Darlene wants to know when she can see her daughter. "Soon," Gibbs says.

A maintenance worker found Debra Dalton's body. "That'll spoil your Thanksgiving," Tony says as he looks at the body. Gibbs points out Angela's room, then says "Lady in a Fountain."

Ducky is getting the turkey ready to put in the oven. Angela is looking for something to do. His television is on the fritz and his laptop is in the car. So she goes into the library looking for books. Ziva wants to follow her but Ducky needs her help stuffing the turkey. Ducky realizes he needs one more pair of hands so he calls for Angela. Angela doesn't answer after Ducky calls her twice so Ziva calls for her, then goes looking for her. She pulls out her gun when she finds a locked door and goes around to another door. She find the patio doors open and Angela is gone. She tells Ducky, "She's gone, call Gibbs." Ducky looks distressed at the thought.

The team is at Ducky's house doing a search for Angela. They find nothing in the house or on the grounds and got no hits on the Amber Alert or BOLO. Ziva and Ducky each try and take the blame but Gibbs tells them it's both of their faults. McGee gets a call that Krista Dalton is in interrogation. Gibbs leaves with Ziva and Tony while McGee remains behind with Ducky.

In interrogation, Krista tells Gibbs the care and safety of the kids is her only concern. Gibbs hands her a piece of paper. Ziva tells Krista they did some digging and found her overseas accounts. She tells them it's not what they are thinking. "What am I thinking? Because it sure looks like you made money selling government secrets using these kids," Gibbs asks. Krista says they sold battle scenarios for games to game designers in China. They paid a lot. Debra made contacts from her trips to Asia for her firm. They took some of the money and the rest they gave to the families. Krista says it was old, useless information. Ziva tells her what she did is treason, the information was still classified. Krista doesn't understand why they are talking to her about games and what it has to do with Lazatta's death. Gibbs pulls out a crime scene photo of her sister. Shook up, Krista flips it back over and wants answers about her sister's death. Gibbs says the two dead bodies are tied to her and the Institute. Gibbs wants answers and Krista says that Debra was seeing someone, she was afraid of him and wanted to break it off. Gibbs asks for a name but Krista says Debra wouldn't give her one because she didn't want her involved. Gibbs slaps his hand down and says, "You are involved."

Gibbs walks into the squadroom for an update. The team informs him they've gotten no hits so far, whoever has Angela is keeping her hidden. Ducky walks in and says he was going over the photos of Angela's artwork. Apart from the cat, all the photos and artwork on her wall were from the outside world, nothing of herself. She resisted showing the world what she cares about. When Ducky spoke with Angela, she never spoke of her home or the town she was from. She was guarding it. Ducky thinks deep down, Angela is just a scared little girl trying to protect her mother. Ziva tells Gibbs she's been trying the mother's home every 10 minutes and nobody answers. McGee says he just got a credit card hit, one of Ducky's credit cards. "What she took one of mine? Clever girl," Ducky says as he pulls out his wallet. Angela bought a map of her hometown at a service station. Gibbs says she's dropping bread crumbs, she wants them to come get her. If the killer is thinking the same way they are, he'll be waiting for her.

Gibbs is driving the team down the highway. Tony is in the back seat feeling ill. He thinks it's the clam chowder he ate. Abby calls Gibbs with a connection between Lazatta and Debra Dalton. She found traces of beeswax and bleached linseed oil on both Lazatta's body and a thumb impression on the back of Debra Dalton's head. Both the oil and wax are base ingredients found in oil based paints. Gibbs asks Tony about the paintings at Gregg Norvell's workstation at the Institute. Tony tells him they were oil based then complains again, he shouldn't have had the clam chowder.

Gibbs pulls up Angela's street and sees Angela standing at the end of the driveway. She waves for him to wait and goes inside. When she walks in, the phone is off the hook. She goes into the kitchen and hugs her mother. Darlene tells her to run but Norvell comes around the corner pointing a gun at them. Darlene doesn't understand what's going on. Angela wants to know why he killed Debra. Norvell says she humiliated him, it had to be done. Same thing with Lazatta, and Norvell thinks NCIS bought the whole gang retribution thing. He holds Angela at gunpoint and gets Darlene to walk outside in front of them. Ziva, Tony and Gibbs corner him. He threatens to kill Angela. Gibbs puts away his gun, kneels down and tells Angela to look at him. He asks Ziva if she's got it, and she says she does. Norvell says she doesn't have the shot, she'll miss. Gibbs asks Angela what the probability of that is. Angela tells him 97.6%. Norvell won't give in so Gibbs gives the order to shoot and Ziva takes Norvell out.

Everyone joins Ducky for Thanksgiving dinner except Gibbs. Ducky says how wonderful it is for all of them to be together, even though their togetherness wasn't their first choice. Tony whines a little about missing "Indian poker, all you can eat crab buffet, showgirls." McGee tells him to suck it up, but there's a lot of wine. As Abby pours Tony a glass, Ducky points out it's time to carve the turkey but Gibbs isn't there. Just then, the door opens and Gibbs walks in with chips and animal crackers, not rolls, because not a lot was available. Everyone laughs and Ducky wants a toast. "Toast friends and dear family all. A bountiful thanks and good things for fall," Ducky toasts. "And to all a good night," Abby adds. When everyone stares, she says, "wrong holiday." They all raise their glasses and toast.

Summary: The NCIS team is called in to investigate the death of a reverend's enlisted son, and they soon realize he may have been the victim of a hate crime. Meanwhile, Gibbs tries to figure out why his father had a sudden change of behavior when he comes to visit during the holidays.

Two kids are in the park, dragging a Christmas tree they cut down illegally. The young man teases her about her being naughty or nice and reaches to hug her. She stops because she sees a man leaning against a tree with no coat on. They walk over to investigate and find the man is dead.

At home, Gibbs is cleaning off his car when he hears his father. He turns as his dad is getting out of an airport shuttle. Gibbs didn't expect his father until that evening but Jackson caught an earlier flight. Gibbs wishes his dad had called and let him know, he would have picked him up. Jackson says he made it. Father and son have an awkward moment before they hug. "Too many years since I was here last," Jackson says. "Whose fault is that huh?" Gibbs asks. "We gonna do this again son?" Jackson replies. Gibbs smiles and tells him to come in. They make small talk about the house. Inside, Jackson looks around and says, "Wow look at this. Hope you didn't get all decked out on my account." There is no sign of Christmas decorations anywhere. Gibbs tells Jackson there are plenty of comfortable hotels nearby. Jackson says he'll be fine as long as he has a working clicker. Gibbs points to the television remote and then informs Jackson he doesn't have cable. "Color?" Jackson asks. Gibbs chuckles as Jackson says he'll manage. Gibbs moves his bicycle away from the television and brings it into another room. He points to the couch and tells Jackson that's his bed. Jackson inquires about the guest room and Gibbs informs him it's no longer a guest room. Gibbs points to the kitchen and says the cupboards aren't empty. Jackson says maybe he'll cook them something. "As long as it's not your stroganoff, knock yourself out." Jackson wants to know what's wrong with his stroganoff.

Rather than answer the question, Gibbs says he's surprised Jackson came to visit. "It's good to be with family at Christmas," Jackson replies. Gibbs has to go, so he leaves his number for Jackson by the phone. Before Gibbs leaves, Jackson tells Gibbs he's happy to be there.

Ziva, McGee and Tony arrive at the crime scene where it's frigid and snowing. McGee says its freezing. "Man up Chilly Willy. Feel that warm blood coursing through your veins. Get in touch with your inner McGrizzly Adams," Tony replies. McGee informs him he has hand warmers. Tony asks for a hand warmer but McGee refuses to give him one. Ziva says she's not cold at all. "It's because you're cold blooded David, like a lady Komodo Dragon Ice Queen," Tony says. She tells Tony she remembered to wear her thermal underwear. Tony offers her $50 for her thermals and she tells him they wouldn't fit because he's too big. Tony says they'll stretch as Gibbs walks up alongside. McGee offers Tony crime scene gloves, triple bag insulation. Tony says there has to be a better way to avoid frost bite. "There is, get to work," Gibbs says as he walks by.

The team reaches the victim, Marine First Lieutenant Thomas Ellis. Ellis is married and a decorated, 3rd Generation Marine. His father is a retired Marine Colonel, George Ellis, who is now an ordained minister. "Second career," Tony says. "Second calling," Gibbs replies as he walks around the victim. "Well his son experienced the call of the wild. Going barefoot and without gloves in this weather is ill-conceived to say the least," Ducky says as he looks over the body. Ziva found his wallet with credit cards and money, so there's no evidence of robbery. Tony found a towel and soapy water in Ellis' backpack. Ducky notices evidence of the soapy water under Ellis' fingernails. Palmer comments it's an odd place to take a bath, Ellis should have at least turned around and enjoyed the view. Ducky feels if Ellis had, it might have saved his life. McGee notices footprints in the snow, indicating which direction the attacker came from. Gibbs kneels down and blows snow off a compass, which is pointing east. Ziva wonders why a Marine wouldn't fight back. Gibbs asks Ducky to lift up the body and Ziva tells Ducky to look under his knees. McGee and Ducky tip Ellis' body over onto plastic. Ziva brushes the snow off the ground where Ellis had been kneeling and reveals an Islamic prayer rug. "He was praying when he was killed," Gibbs says.

Back in the squadroom, McGee has pulled up Ellis' military records on his computer. Ellis had officially changed his religion from Christian to Muslim 8 months prior. Ziva notes it was not just a passing interest. "Fruit of the month might be good," Tony babbles as he's sitting at his desk, feet propped looking through a gift catalogue. "Gee Tony I never pegged as a catalog shopper," McGee says. "That's because I'm not Tiny Tim but desperate times call for desperate measures. I took these from my neighbor's doorstep," Tony replies. Ziva asks if he stole them. Tony says the doorstep is a common area; he wouldn't steal mail because it's a federal offense. He picks up a lingerie catalog and flips through it, asking what to buy for the shrew that has everything. Tony picked Delores from Human Resources (H.R.) name for the secret Santa. Tony calls Delores a miserable grinchful woman. McGee says he won't argue with Tony about that because once he tried to wish Delores a Happy Valentine's Day and she claimed sexual harassment. Ziva tells them she's probably just a lonely middle-aged woman, they should have some compassion. "Must be tough living up there on Mount Crumpet, scheming to take Christmas away from poor Cindy Lou Who," Tony says. Ziva wonders why she bothers with Tony and he tells her to be careful or he'll return her present. She reminds him they agreed no gifts. Tony's phone rings and when he answers it, he jerks upright in his seat when he realizes its Gibbs. Tony has to meet Gibbs at Colonel Ellis house. Before he leaves, he looks at McGee and says, "Don't touch my catalogues."

At the Ellis house, Gibbs and Tony inform Colonel Ellis and Tom's widow of his death. Colonel Ellis wants to know if it was a hate crime and Gibbs tells him they don't know yet. Tony picks up a wedding photo and asks the widow how long they were married. She tells him 2 years but they hadn't spent much time together as Tom had just started his second tour. "Nothing tests a marriage like the Core," Colonel Ellis says. "Nature of the beast," Gibbs replies. Ellis forgot Gibbs was in the Core but Gibbs remembers the Colonel. "It's Reverend now," Ellis replies. "Why the change?" Gibbs asks. When the Reverend's wife died, he wanted to be closer to God. Tony asks Mrs. Ellis how she'd met her husband. They met in college, he was swimming and she played softball. After Tom joined the Core, things changed, Tom started studying the Muslim religion and was thinking about converting. Reverend Ellis blames himself and wonders if Tom converted to spite him. Reverend Ellis asked a Muslim Navy Chaplain to reach out to Tom. A young Marine walks in calling Merry Christmas to everyone. He is Patrick Ellis, the Reverend's younger son. Patrick asks what is wrong. Reverend Ellis walks over and tells him his brother is dead, then hugs his youngest son.

In autopsy, Ducky asks the corpse of Ellis, "Lieutenant, when you knelt to commune with your maker, did you have any idea you'd be seeing him so soon?" "I think not," Ducky adds. Palmer wonders if it's true Muslim's pray five times a day and Ducky confirms it is. "I never do anything five times a day," Palmer adds. Gibbs walks into autopsy and asks what Ducky has. Ducky is waiting for the Cleric before he begins the autopsy proper but initial findings indicate blunt force trauma to the periatal lobe and multiple lacerations to his shoulder and neck. The blow was delivered in a downward slicing motion. The weapon was cylindrical as they discovered paint and some kind of thread in the wound. Ducky shows Gibbs the lacerations on Ellis' feet. Ellis cleansed his feet a second time before returning to his prayer which means he turned his back on his attacker. This means he knew who his attacker was and trusted him/her.

In the squadroom, Jackson has arrived and is handing out homemade candy to the team. "Hey dad, stop making my team fat," Gibbs says as he walks in and sits at his desk. Ziva wants to know why Gibbs didn't tell them his father was coming. "I didn't think he'd actually show," Gibbs replies. As Tony reaches for another piece of chocolate, Gibbs says, "Go ahead, have another one bubble butt." McGee smirks from behind his computer. Tony says it's his metabolism slowing with age, nothing a good holiday cleanse won't cure. Jackson doesn't see the harm in them eating the candy. Gibbs realizes it's his father's neighbor who made the chocolate. The neighbor has been cooking for Jackson lately and Gibbs says she's been after Jackson since his mother died. "She puts together a helluva care package...when people are hurting," Gibbs says as he walks towards Tony's desk. Tony tells Gibbs that the widow did have an affair with a banker while Tom Ellis was overseas. She called it off when the husband found out. Chaplain Aaban El-Sayad walks in looking for Gibbs.

Ziva, the Chaplain and Gibbs sit down to talk in the conference room. The Chaplain points out the Marine Core and the Islam religion teach the same three things: Honor, Courage and Commitment — the same 3 philosophies that Islam teaches. "Yes ignorance and bigotry still remain a problem in the military," Ziva adds. "Well ignorance isn't unique to any one group Agent David. All we can do is try our best to educate and pray for acceptance as a whole," the Chaplain says. The Chaplain says Thomas stuck with the Muslim religion because he found something that was missing in his life. Thomas referred to his awakening as a devout epiphany. Ziva asks how the rest of the unit reacted to Elli's conversion. Some of the unit were okay with it; some weren't and found Ellis' multiple prayers during the day troublesome. Thomas asked the Chaplain to speak with a First Sergeant Louis Tibbens.

In the squadroom, Ziva tells McGee and Tony that she spoke with Ellis' C.O. (Commanding Officer) and he confirmed that Tibbens and Ellis didn't get along. Jackson is sitting in Gibbs' chair, watching and listening to the team. Tibbens is home on leave in Athens West Virginia, population 900. "Bigger than Stillwater, but it doesn't have the charm," Jackson says. "Or the perpetual smell of coal," Tony replies. "I always liked that smell," Gibbs adds as he walks in. Gibbs stops in front of his desk and stares at his father, whose sitting in his chair. Gibbs sends Ziva and Tony to find Tibbens and McGee is told to look into Ellis' Muslim life. Gibbs wants to know if two names means Ellis was living two lives. Gibbs walks over to Jackson, who wants to know how the heck Gibbs could sit like that all these years. Jackson figures Gibbs should at least have walls for privacy. Gibbs tells him it's time to go, he has a job for him.

Back home, Gibbs brings his father down to the basement. Gibbs tells him they are building toys. Jackson wants to know when Gibbs got into the spirit. "I don't know. For me it's more about the wood though having that deadline of the 24th has been good," Gibbs says. "You don't believe in Santa but you believe in hobbies. As long as you believe in something I guess," Jackson says. "Settles my mind dad, keeps my hands busy," Gibbs replies. The two men exchange a few comments and Jackson sits down. "Your trying to Tom Sawyer me into white washing the fence for you," Jackson says. "No, not for me, with me. If you feel up to it," Gibbs replies. He tells his dad they'll talk when he gets back.

Ziva and Tony find Tibbens at a local bar shooting pool. Tony is looking for a deer head mounted on the wall with holiday lights on the antlers. "Santa's looking for Rudolph, I think I know what happened," Tony tells the bartender. "Tibbens sister described this place perfectly. So this is where a red throat would hang out after being overseas for months," Ziva says. "It's not red throat it's red neck and I think we found the entire cast of 'Hee-Haw'," Tony says. Ziva points out Tibbens. "And his brother Darryl, and his other brother Darryl," Tony says. The two walk over to the pool table to talk to Tibbens.

Ziva calls Tibbens. "You can call me Tibbs," Tibbens says. Tony wants to know if they call him Mr. Tibbs. He introduces himself and Ziva, calling her his probationary sidekick. Ziva tells him that Ellis is dead. Tibbens was hunting at dawn and has a 6 pt. buck dead in the back of his pickup. Tibbens flirts with Ziva and tells her she's probably never killed anything before. Ziva smiles and says, "I'll never tell." Tony says, "Oh boy." Tony tells Tibbens he needs to come to NCIS with them and answer some questions. Tibbens has a better idea, he wants Ziva to go home with him and 'decorate' his tree. Ziva tells Tibbens "Let's go," but Tibbens reaches for her instead. Ziva grabs his hand and shoves him against the wall. She cuffs him and then tells him to sit. Tony gets attacked and fights several other bar members. He hits one guy with a stool, another with a bar tray. A third one grabs him from behind. Tony slugs the guy and is thrown down on the pool table by the man who grabbed him from behind. Ziva kicks the man in the privates and punches another one. "Red throats," she says. "Red necks," Tony corrects her. "Whatever," she replies and looks at Tibbens.

Tony chats with Tibbens in interrogation. Tony has ice on his hand while Tibbens has bruises on his face. Tibbens explains the concern they had with Ellis. Ellis would stop and pray in the middle of a mission or on the road but he didn't kill Ellis. Tibbens and some other men were approached and offered money to get Ellis to quit the Core for good. The men did it for the safety of the unit. Tony asks who offered them money. Tibbens said they found out from word of mouth. They communicated with the person who made the request via PO Box. The money was wired to them, no questions asked.

In Abby's lab, she's playing with her skeleton, who she dressed in Santa's hat, coat, and beard. She is entertaining her friend, Carol Wilson, from college. McGee comes in and she introduces the two of them. McGee makes some lame jokes, then asks what they are drinking. Abby says it's Caf-Nog, an old family recipe. Carol shows McGee a picture of her nephew, Fisher, sitting on Santa's lap. Carol took Fisher to see Santa and while all the other kids asked for toys, he just wanted to see his mother for Christmas. Fisher's mother is stationed on a destroyer in the Indian Ocean. McGee tells them that satellite feeds to the Indian Ocean are restricted. Abby calls McGee a miracle worker and has faith he'll make it happen.

Gibbs arrives back in the squadroom and is greeted by Ziva and Tony. Tony ran a financial check on the men in Ellis' unit and only two men including Tibbens accepted the bribe for $4,000 each. All the money was drawn from the same overseas account and deposited at the same time. The corporation it was drawn from is a dummy corporation. Tony tells Gibbs that Interpol is checking into it. Gibbs is doing something on his computer and tells Tony to tell Interpol to check faster. "You do it," Tony hisses. Gibbs looks up and glares at Tony. "Not you boss. You (he looks at Ziva). How many languages do you speak anyway?" Tony says. "Including the language of love, ten," Ziva says. Gibbs cell phone rings, Jackson called him. Gibbs yells into the phone, "You did what?", grabs his coat and runs for the elevator.

Gibbs arrives home as the firemen are leaving. The Firemen tells Gibbs everything is okay. Gibbs finds Jackson on the couch and kneels in front of him. He checks Jackson's pulse and asks if he's okay. Jackson tried to start a fire in the fireplace but it was clogged. Gibbs walks over to look at it and notices boxes with Christmas decorations on the floor. Jackson had his wife's decorations shipped to Gibbs' house and went out and got a tree. Jackson accuses Gibbs of patronizing him and tells Gibbs if he's unhappy with what Jackson is doing to speak up. Loudly, Gibbs says, "Dad, I'm trying to make this work." "And I'm not?" Jackson asks. Gibbs sighs in frustration, then reaches for his gun, heads over to the bookcase to lock it up in a gun safe. Jackson asks Gibbs to put the gun safe somewhere else, he doesn't want to be same room with the gun, it makes him uncomfortable. Gibbs assures his father it's safe. Jackson gets upset with Gibbs and yells, wondering if for once, Gibbs will do what he's asking him and why everything with them always has to be an argument. Gibbs agrees to put the gun safe away. Jackson wants to go out for a walk and Gibbs asks if he wants company. Jackson yells he's alright and leaves by himself. Gibbs phone rings. Tony calls to tell Gibbs Interpol got the name on the dummy corporation, it's Colonel George Ellis. "His father?" Gibbs asks.

Gibbs and Tony show up at Reverend Ellis' home. Tina and Patrick Ellis are angry at the accusations towards the Reverend in regards to hurting his own son. Patrick tells them it's a lie. "Not according to the bank. People do things for such misguided reasons," Tony replies. "Well Marines aren't just people sir," Patrick says. "Your right Pat their not but they abide by the same laws. Your father didn't," says Gibbs. Tony asks Tina for the number for the man she had an affair with. Gibbs asks for their alibis the morning of Thomas' death. Tina says she was with friends and Patrick was at school. Reverend Ellis walks in and tells Tina it's okay, NCIS has a right to know everything. Reverend Ellis admits to paying the men in the unit to get Tom to stop the Muslim nonsense. The Reverend felt if Tom realized he was putting his unit in danger he'd stop being selfish. Reverend Ellis says what he did was wrong but well-intentioned. "If it led to my son's death, then god forgive me. And Tom's gone too," Reverend Ellis says. "There one and the same Colonel," Gibbs replies and leaves.

In the squadroom, Ziva asks McGee if he feels the Colonel was involved in his son's death. McGee says the Reverend has a congregation, humiliation can do irrational things to people. Tony's phone rings and he answers it. It's Delores from H.R., she wants to meet with Tony at 6pm on Christmas Eve. McGee laughs and goes over to Ziva. He tells her to watch, it's going to be good. Tony hangs up and says, "Someone broke my cover. She knows I'm her Secret Santa. McGee, you wouldn't do that," Tony says. "Ho-ho-ho," McGee says as he and Ziva slaps hands. Tony feels she'll probably suck the Christmas joy out of him. Ziva tries to tell him she's probably just lonely. Tony wonders what he should get her as Ziva's phone rings. Gibbs wants Ziva to meet him in Abby's lab.

In Abby's lab, Abby holds up a metal pole, points to a display of other poles on the table, and tells them any of them could kill but none of them did. Ziva asks if she had any luck identifying the murder weapon. "This job isn't about luck, it's about the keen eye of science," Abby says. "Abby," Gibbs warns. Abby tells him she wouldn't call him down for just nothing, but first she has to do something. She puts on some skeleton oven mitts and pulls out gingerbread cookies decorated to look like her. With a serious look, Abby holds them in front of Gibbs and Ziva and says, "Go ahead, taste one." Laughing, Ziva says, "I'm sorry I could never eat you." Gibbs takes one to go, for his dad. He tells Abby he hopes she has more than just gingerbread cookies. Abby tells him she found minute particles of aluminum and titanium in Ellis' head wounds. Abby reenacts the murder through a computer simulation. She says it's the speed in which the blow was delivered that is impressive; whoever killed Ellis is athletic.

Ziva catches up with Tina Ellis at the park. She wants to ask Tina some more questions. Tina went to the park to see where her husband was killed. Ziva asks about Tina's affair. She then asks Tina if she still plays softball and explains the nature of the wound that killed him. Tina is offended and tells Ziva she has a military funeral to plan for a hero, and for a husband she loved deeply.

Ducky is with Jackson in Gibbs' basement. They are laughing, drinking and completing toys. Jackson is sharing old childhood stories of both his childhood and Gibbs. Gibbs comes downstairs and Ducky goes to pour another drink. Gibbs grabs the bottle and tells Ducky it's getting late. "Ah yes, there is Christmas shopping to be done and a roost to be ghosted," Ducky says standing up. Jackson laughs as Ducky corrects himself, "A goose to be roasted." Ducky shakes hands with Jackson and tells him it was a pleasure to finally meet him.

Upstairs, Ducky and Gibbs chat. Ducky tells Gibbs that his father is much more accessible than Gibbs. Ducky had come by to see if there was something wrong with Jackson. Gibbs wants to know how bad. Ducky rules out Dimensia and tells Gibbs something far more old fashioned is wrong with Jackson. Jackson is suffering an emotional trauma. "It's nothing personal Jethro, but I don't think he came here for your uplifting holiday cheer. Martha Stewart you are not," Ducky says. Gibbs wonders why Jackson came. Ducky tells Gibbs to make some phone calls to Stillwater on behalf of his father and they may prove enlightening.

At his desk, McGee is working on Fisher's Christmas wish. He tells the person on the other end that he has direct orders from Admiral Nicholas Whitebeard, who oversees the Northern Polar regions. McGee comments that he's doing charitable work for Abby and the big man. "Gibbs?" Ziva asks. "Director Vance," Tony says. "Bigger and rounder," McGee responds. Director Vance calls and talks to Tony. He provides an alibi for Reverend Ellis and his daughter-in-law, Tina. The Reverend was visiting SecNav and Tina drove him at the time of Tom Ellis' murder. Chaplain Said shows up and tells them he has a problem. He hands Ziva a letter he'd just received in the mail. It's a newsletter cut and paste note that reads "He died because of you! Bang you're dead."

Ziva walks into the conference room where Gibbs and the Chaplain are waiting. She tells them the letter was sent through the military postal service. The threat is real, it could be because the Chaplain got to close. Gibbs offers protection but the Chaplain turns it down. Ziva reminds him he has a wife and daughter. He tells them he is also a Chaplain and has a responsibility. Ziva calls him stubborn and pig-headed. The Chaplain talks about his work and mentions Tom Ellis had asked him to speak to his class. He is amazed how different Tom and Patrick are from one another.

Abby has decorated her lab for the holiday with a Christmas spider. She rambles how she can decorate her test tube Christmas tree and warm up dumplings in the incubator. "Abby," Gibbs, Ziva and Tony say at the same time. She tells them she feels like Scrooge being visited by the three grumpy ghosts. They want to see the simulation of the murder again, most importantly, the point of impact. Abby comments that whoever did it had agility, speed and power on their side. "Well, if I don't mind saying so, I have many of those qualities myself," Tony says. Ha, Ziva laughs. "Where's your generous holiday spirit Probette?" Tony asks. "Bah hum bog," Ziva says. "Ba what?" Tony asks. Gibbs watches the reenactment and mentions that Patrick Ellis played LaCrosse. Abby pulls up the specifications of a Lacrosse stick and they are made with the exact same material that was found in Thomas Ellis' head wound. "Able and Cane," Ziva says. Gibbs says that Patrick killed his own brother.

At the Ellis home, Gibbs and Tony wait for Patrick to return. Gibbs tells Patrick that he was at the park the morning his brother was killed. Patrick had gone there to confront his brother about being Muslim and killed him. Tony asks where his lacrosse stick is, most players run with their sticks, did he break it or destroy the evidence. Patrick looks to his father and tells him that he did it for the family; Tom was embarrassing them. Reverend Ellis slaps Patrick across the face. Reverend Ellis said that no matter what, Thomas was still his son. Patrick blames his brother for ruining the family's honor. Patrick felt Thomas turned their back on his family. "I don't know maybe we turned our back on him," Reverend Ellis says.

Jackson is sitting in the living room by the tree, staring at the fire. Gibbs walks in and hands his father a beer. Gibbs called Stillwater and found out what happened to bring Jackson to visit. He wants to know the details from Jackson. Jackson tells him a man came into town, into his store. The man had a gun and was going to rob him. Jackson told him to take whatever he wanted from the store. There were two young girls in the store and the robber turned to the girls. He killed the man before he could harm the girls. While it's not the first time Jackson has killed anyone, it's the first time he's seen their face. The robber was 23 and had a kid, Jackson was told. "Looks different from up there in the cockpit huh?" Gibbs says. Jackson tells him from up there, it didn't look like much of anything. You pull the trigger, feel the release and nothing. He never even thought about it. He wants to know how Gibbs has done it all these years. "This is why you came? Gibbs asks. "That and it's Christmas," Jackson says. "It's not supposed to be easy," Gibbs says.

In autopsy, Ducky and Palmer zip Thomas Ellis into a body bag. The Chaplain and Reverend Ellis salute the body as Palmer wheels by.

Upstairs, Tony goes to knock on Delores door but can't do it. He's holding a large gift wrapped box. Ziva grabs him and tells him to go back. A struggle goes on in the hallway between the two and they don't notice Delores come out of her office. Tony says, "Merry Christmas Delores. I got this for you. I looked in your personnel file, which is legal because I have that security clearance. But I saw that when you were 8 years old all the little girls in your neighborhood they all got this incredible doll the knee high cherry pie doll and you didn't get one. I guess Santa didn't make enough that year so I got this for you." He hands her the package and she opens it to find the doll she wanted. She smiles and laughs.

McGee walks into MTAC with Fisher, Abby and Carolyn. He tells Fisher it's a magic room called MTAC. McGee tells Fisher that Santa told him to bring Fisher there. He wants Fisher to make a Christmas wish and see if it comes true. He has Fisher shut his eyes and think of the one thing he wants for Christmas. McGee gives the nod and Fisher's mother comes onscreen. "Well, not bad huh. I pulled it off," McGee says. Abby kisses him on the cheek, leaving lipstick marks and tells him he'd make a great Santa. McGee says that all you have to do is believe. "I do believe," she tells him. McGee smiles and kisses her on the cheek.

Gibbs and his father lug the handmade toys up from the basement. "I'll go warm up the sleigh," Jackson says. Gibbs smiles as his dad walks out, then he follows.

Summary: While investigating a bizarre murder of a Navy pilot, the NCIS team butts heads with an attorney that has a grudge against Gibbs.

Two park rangers find a dead man who is burned on one side.

In the office, Ziva lands on a web page that is full of ads. McGee suggests she change her internet search habits. McGee sees a story that Bell was released from his Mexican prison. McGee tells Gibbs he will print him a copy. The team goes to the scene and finds the victim is a test pilot. McGee sees that the pilot is equipped with gear that is used for skydiving. They see that an explosion caused the pilot's arm to be blown off. Ducky and Jimmy arrive via ATV to examine the body. The team wonders how the pilot got there. The team finds scattered pieces of metal including a fuel tank and a joystick. McGee says he thinks the pilot's jet pack exploded.

The team learns that the dead pilot is named Brad Sayers. Ziva reports that Sayers was a test pilot who flew experimental planes. Ziva and Tony tell Gibbs that McGee is obsessed over jet packs and the evidence. In her lab, McGee bores Abby with facts about jet packs. Abby finds hydrogen peroxide and kerosene on Sayer's flight suit. McGee tells Gibbs he can't believe the Mexican government dropped their charges against Bell. McGee explains he loves jet packs since he saw one fly over him during one of the Olympics.

Ziva and Tony meet with Sayers's CO Powell. He explains that he allows the pilots to take jobs outside of the military. Powell introduces the team to Sheridan who was a friend of Sayers. After they inform him about Sayers's death from a jet pack explosion, Sheridan says they should talk to Victor Tillman who wanted Powell to fly experimental aircraft for him, but the Navy rejected him. Sheridan figures Sayer went over the Navy's heads and flew the jet pack anyways.

Ducky instructs Jimmy to take the lead in performing an autopsy on a dead squirrel found at same scene where Sayers's body was found. Jimmy explains to Gibbs that he thinks the squirrel's death is related to Sayer's death. Jimmy reports that the squirrel ate Sayer's flesh and died since Sayer was poisoned.

McGee shows Gibbs his video presentation of jet pack pilots taking flight. McGee shares his theory that there is a conspiracy against jet packs. After Tony says that Sayers was flying for Victor's company, McGee says they were going to unveil new technology. As Tony and Ziva drive to Victor's business, Ziva notices that she is being followed. Victor tells the team that he wonders where Sayers got his jet pack. Ziva sneaks outside and takes a photo of the person who was following her before he drives away. Victor shows Tony his jet packs. Tony tells Victor that the jet pack that Sayers was found with resembles his and wonders who stole his technology.

McGee informs Gibbs that Victor is hiding money since he divorced his wife Vanessa. McGee tells Victor that he thinks that he killed Sayers since Vanessa was paying him. Victor is surprised at the news. McGee shows him a patent for a jet fuel mix of kerosene and hydrogen peroxide that Victor says that his wife got during the divorce. An attorney named Hart arrives and asks McGee to either charge Victor or let him go. She states that Victor's financial records were accessed without proper authority. Gibbs tells Hart that he is wondering why Victor is hiding behind a lawyer. After Gibbs asks if he knows her, she says he doesn't but she knows him and his record of ignoring the law to get his suspects.

Jimmy tells McGee that he can't tell if poison was the cause of Sayer's death. Abby figures that a valve in Sayer's jet pack was sabotaged to cause it to explode. McGee figures if they find the maker of the valve, they can find the killer.

Vanessa says that her relationship with Victor broke down since they didn't communicate. Vanessa admits she hired Sayers to do a test flight on her prototype, but it was over a month ago. Vanessa says she didn't give him a jet pack. After Hart storms in the office, she tells Vanessa that she is entitled to legal counsel and instructs her not to speak to NCIS any longer.

Back at the office, Ziva and Tony figure that Sayers flew a jetpack that was made up of both Vanessa and Victor's designs. They wonder if there is a connection between Hart and Sayers.

Ducky notices that Gibbs has become frustrated at the case. Gibbs says Hart is preventing him from talking to the people he wants to. He believes that she is taking to him like she likes him. Ducky says he found that Sayers threw up before he died, but there was no evidence of puke on his face shield. Ducky says it is possible someone placed Sayers on the jetpack and staged his death.

McGee shows the team he found a remote detonator which was used to kill Sayers. Gibbs and McGee give Victor and a court order to their inventory to see if one of them killed Sayers. Gibbs informs Victor that Vanessa knew Sayers has been stealing from him. Hart says he knows he is trying to stir things up between Victor and Vanessa. Gibbs announces that Sayers died thirteen days ago. Vanessa says she was in the Bahamas while Victor says he was in New Hampshire.

Jimmy and Abby watch as McGee looks at the jetpack. He says flying and producing the jet pack is difficult and requires a person to know both engineering and flying. McGee figures that Sayers was the one who built the jet pack after he stole the plans from both the Tillmans and borrowed technology from the Navy. The team wonders if Sheridan killed him so he could be the one to fly the jetpack.

Gibbs surprises Hart on the street and tells her he knows she filed the patent application for the Tillmans then charge them. He says in this case, he learned she worked for the Tillman's pro-bono. Gibbs figures that Hart took the case to get to him. Hart says she isn't the one who wants to pick the fight with him, but she is glad she is in it.

The team tells Powell about their theory that Sheridan poisoned Sayers to take his job. The team finds Sheridan in the locker room and shows him the remote that was used to pilot Sayer's jet pack. The team informs Sheridan they know Sayer's needed to partner up with a person with an engineering background so he can sell the jetpack technology. They tell him they needed to use him as a distraction. Ziva reports that Powell is taking the bait and is about to leave with his prototype jetpack. McGee runs out, takes control of the jetpack with his remote and brings him down where he is arrested.

Gibbs and Tony look over photos of Hart on the internet and discover she is good friends with Colonel Bell who Gibbs put away several weeks ago. They figure that Bell sent Hart, but wonder what her ultimate goal is.

Summary: Gibbs is worried about Tony's ability to handle his job when Tony's father turns out to be linked to their newest investigation, an assassination attempt on a foreign prince.

A Navy Jet lands on an air strip. A man is waiting for the pilots to reach him. One of the pilots is criticizing the other for 'hot-dogging'. The second pilot, Prince Sayif, tells the man to get the car. The driver replies, "Yes Your Highness" then heads off to start the car. The American pilot jokes with Sayif about having someone wait on him hand and foot. Sayif tells him if the driver doesn't get his act together, he can have him. The driver heads to the car, takes out the keys and looks up as he hears a jet fly overhead. Suddenly, the car he's about to enter explodes, knocking the driver out of his shoes and sending him flying across the tarmac.

In the squadroom, Tony is on the phone arguing with someone. He tells them that his name is Anthony DiNozzo Jr and lives in Washington, D.C. and his father's name is Anthony DiNozzo, Sr. and he lives in New York city. Ziva walks in and looks at Tony curiously. "Is that so complicated? Jr. Sr. Can you follow that?," Tony yells into the phone. Ziva walks over to McGee's desk and asks what is going on. McGee tells her that Tony is trying to withdraw money from a bank in New York and apparently the bank confused his account with his father's so Tony can't get the money. Ziva smiles. Tony sarcastically says, "Let me get this straight, you want me to spell my name again? Okay. It's big D as in dimwit, little I as in idiot, little N as in nimrod, little O as in obtuse, double Z as in ZZ Top...." Ziva ask what Tony needs the money for. McGee tells her it's to go on a cruise with his fraternity buddies in the spring. Ziva wonders why Tony doesn't just call his father to straighten things out. Tony tells the caller he'll hold, the points at Ziva and tells her to mind her own business. "Ew, grouchy," Ziva says. McGee tells her that Tony left a message for his father 2 days ago and hasn't heard back. Tony is upset when the caller asks him to spell his name again, "Are you guys in India?" he asks. Gibbs walks in and tells Tony to get off the phone, they got a dead foreign national at Pax River. "Pax River, weren't we just there?" McGee asks. Tony beats his forehead with the telephone receiver as everyone grabs their gear and heads out.

At the crime scene, Ziva asks Tony where he is going on his cruise. "It's a need to know information, you don't need to know," Tony responds. "Aren't you too old for spring break?" Ziva asks. Tony tells her no, then gives Gibbs an update on the vehicle's registration. The car was leased from Beltway Auto Executive Leasing, rented to Prince Sayif Ibn Alwaan on a month-to-month basis. "Hope he got the full coverage," Tony adds. Gibbs walks around, looking at the burnt up vehicle. Ziva tells him the explosive device was placed underneath the car. He tells her to get the car to Abby and walks away. Gibbs walks over to the victim, Walid Abbas, who was in the U.S. on a Visa and worked for Prince Sayif. "You know there are over 7,000 Princes in the Royal family," Tony adds. Gibbs asks Ducky what he's got. Ducky tells Gibbs that Walid wasn't killed by the explosion, at least not initially. There were no burns or blisters on his skin or hands. Ducky believes the cause of death is blunt force trauma when Walid's head hit the tarmac. "I heard the saying he got blown out of his shoes but I never thought I'd see it," Tony says as he looks at Walid's shoes on the ground. Ducky says if the explosion had knocked his socks off, it would be impressive. McGee questions Sayif's flight instructor (who is one of many Sayif has gone through) who informs him that Prince Sayif has been in the country for three months. He's attached to the Navy Marine Core Strike Pilot Training Program. They are hoping he doesn't screw up his check run so he'll graduate in two days and won't be the Navy's problem anymore.

Gibbs walks into the hangar while Sayif is on the phone. Sayif tells Gibbs he was making arrangements to be picked up. "Cancel them," Gibbs says. Gibbs tells Prince Sayif that he doesn't want to jump to conclusions but they have to assume the bomb was meant for Sayif. Until they discover otherwise, the Prince is now under NCIS' protective custody. Prince Sayif isn't too happy and tells Gibbs assassination attempts are a part of their lives. He came to the United States for flight training and he isn't going to let what happened stop him. "I don't have influence with your country but I do with the United States and I'll have your training stopped immediately," Gibbs quietly says to Sayif. "Okay, protective custody on my terms," Sayif replies. He refuses to be sequestered in a base or a government safe house. Prince Sayif is staying at the Presidential suite at the Adams House and tells Gibbs if he'd like to protect him there, he's welcome to. Gibbs smirks as he watches Sayif walk away.

Gibbs and DiNozzo join Director Vance in MTAC. He is getting information and providing updates on the bombing. The Saudi Embassy wants their Royal Guard to be part of the protection detail. Gibbs informs them that Prince Sayif was brought back to NCIS while his room and the adjoining rooms were being cleared at the Adams House hotel. Freedom fighters are claiming to be responsible for the assassination attempt. The Saudi Ambassador assured the United States that Prince Sayif will be flown home after he graduates flight training school. McGee slips quietly into MTAC and waits until they are done their conversation. Vance wants to continue the conversation in his office. As the trio are heading out, McGee needs to speak with Tony. Smiling, he tells Tony he has a visitor. Tony wants to know who it is but McGee refuses to tell him, smiling the whole time. "What's the matter with you?" Tony asks. McGee just keeps smiling as Tony looks at him and walks out. Tony walks out and looks down, he sees his father talking to Ziva. Anthony DiNozzo Sr. flirts with Ziva, telling her how stunning she is and did she ever think of wearing her hair down. From the landing above, McGee and Tony squat at the railing while listening to Sr. chat with Ziva. Ziva is about to respond when she sees the duo overhead. Mr. DiNozzo follows Ziva's eyes and calls out "Junior" and Tony yells back, "Dad what are you doing here?" McGee is laughing and smiling behind him.

Tony Jr. and Tony Sr. are returning from getting coffee. Tony wants the bank mix-up straightened out and asks why his father's name was still on the account as a trustee. Sr. says he'll take care of it. Tony tells him he could have just done it with a phone call. Sr. says he will, it's just they haven't seen each other in a long time. "So you thought you'd just fly down and surprise me?" Tony asks. "I took the train, it's not that far," Senior responds. Tony looks concerned and asks if his father is okay. Senior tells him that everything is okay, they'll have dinner and catch up. Tony walks over and places a piece of paper on Ziva's desk. Senior asks about Ziva. "Ziva is Ziva, there's nothing to tell," Tony replies. Tony, Ziva and Prince Sayif head through the squadroom towards the elevator. McGee yells to Tony that the hotel suite has been cleared, they are heading over so Tony says he's coming. Senior notices Prince Sayif and asks about him. Tony wants to know how his father knows the Prince. Senior says that Prince Omar and he have done business together and they met in Monte Carlo years ago. He asks Tony what Sayif is doing there. Tony quietly tells Senior about the assassination attempt. McGee yells from the elevator, "Should I continue holding the door?" Tony bellows that he's coming, he'll meet them in the garage. Senior asks what happened and Tony tells him he can't talk about it. One look from Senior and Tony says, "Car bomb." Senior wants to know if Sayif's father has been notified. Tony tells him he has and is flying in but in the meantime, Tony needs to head over to the Adams House hotel, he'll get Senior a cab. Tony asks his father if he's sure he doesn't want to tell him something. "Your busy, it can wait," Senior says.

Gibbs arrives on the floor of the Presidential Suite of the Adams House Hotel. The security detail lets him inside the suite. Sayif is in the middle of a conversation so Ziva and McGee join Gibbs. Gibbs asks who the other man is with Sayif. McGee tells him it's Sayif's older brother, Prince Abdalla, he lives in D.C. and is a Deputy Minister at the Saudi Embassy. Ziva quietly tells Gibbs, "They do not know I speak Arabic." Gibbs smiles and says, "Ah good." Ziva tells Gibbs that Sayif is getting chewed out for his western ways and his Sayif's pleasures are what brought on the attack. Sayif says something to Abdalla and Ziva tells Gibbs, "That is to disgusting to translate." Sayif goes into another room while Abdalla joins the NCIS crew. Introductions are made and Abdalla discusses the bombing. He tells the NCIS team that Walid was not only Sayif's aide, but a family friend. Gibbs asks about the Freedom fighters and Abdalla thinks they may have been involved. Tony walks in and gives Gibbs an update on the security detail. Sayif comes walking out, dressing in sweat pants and a sweatshirt. Tony asks where he thinks he's going and Sayif replies, "The fitness center." Tony informs Sayif that he needs to be accompanied by an agent. "Fine, I choose her," Sayif says and indicates Ziva.

In autopsy, Ducky hears the door open and believes it's Gibbs who walked in. He says that his initial observations were correct, Walid did die from blunt force trauma to the head. "I'll be sure and tell him," Vance replies. "Oh Director Vance. It's not often I'm graced by your presence in autopsy. To what do I owe the pleasure," Ducky asks. Vance tells Ducky that the Saudi embassy would like a quick release of the body for religious reasons. Ducky says as soon as he's done, he'll make arrangements for the body to be picked up. Before he leaves, Vance asks Ducky how his mother is doing. Ducky thanks him for asking and tells him she is slipping away slowly, losing touch with reality. When Ducky visited her that morning, she insisted the clock on the wall was going backwards. "Actually I've had days like that," Vance says, then smiles and leaves. "Haven't we all," Ducky quietly adds.

Production Code: 151
Summary: While on the flight back from Paris, Tony and Ziva realize that their assignment to protect a government witness in an embezzlement case is in great danger when they learn that an assassin is located on the same flight.

Vance wonders where the team is since they need to bring a witness back to testify against a CEO named Beringer. Meanwhile, Ziva and Tony tell McGee they will head back with their witness from Paris. Tony says he understands why artists love the town. He says he slept well. Ziva hops on Tony's Vespa to ride to the plane.

Gibbs tells McGee then need to examine the body of Mark Parsons. At his condo they find Mark's body in a bathtub full of kitty litter. Ducky figures Mark died 38 to 48 hours ago. He says the litter prevented the smell from alerting the neighbors. Since there are several high priced items in plain sight, they figure the murder was not part of a robbery. They wonder how Mark could afford to live so well off.

Tony and Ziva bring the witness, Nora Williams, to the plane. They meet with the Air Marshall Art Neely. He says he checked the passengers and they are all clear.

Back at he condo, McGee breaks into the safe and finds expensive watches and newspaper clippings about the home invasion death of a rich man named Sam Thoresen. McGee sees that the police thinks the death was a professional hit. Gibbs figures Mark monitored the story since he was the hitman. They also find a dossier and Nora William's flight plan. They figure Mark planned on killing her.

McGee reports that Mark was a special operative. He says Mark was on leave when Sam was killed. They see that Mark had a lot of information about Nora. They learn that Nora had a fiance named Daniel Sturgess. Vance informs the team that Daniel is heading to the office.

Daniel tells Gibbs and Vance he tried to convince Nora not to testify against her boss, Ray Beringer. They learn that Beringer was bilking the Navy for millions by repairing ships that was never ordered. Daniel explains Nora found documents that proved Beringer was responsible, but they disappeared. Gibbs assures Daniel that his best agents are with Nora.

Back on the plane, Tony shows Nora photos of architecture. Nora tells him that the photos look soulless since they don't have any people in them. After Ziva says she stayed with Tony in the same room while in Paris, Nora says she met her fiance during a business trip. Tony and Ziva tell Nora about Gibbs's rule #12 which is never date a co-worker. Tony figures that Ziva got an urgent call from work.

Ducky explains Leroux got the idea for The Phantom of the Opera after he witnessed a counterweight of a chandelier crush an actress. He tells Gibbs that Mark was killed by a precise neck break. Abby reports that she found no prints at the condo. She says Mark received a phone call from Holly Snow, a D.C. madam.

Gibbs and McGee question Holly about a transaction she made to put out a contract on Nora. Holly explains she only connects people and she doesn't ask questions. Gibbs asks who wanted Nora dead, but she says she only knows the account number. Holly asks for a plea deal in exchange for information. She explains the hit contracts are not exclusive. They figure a hit man killed Mark in order to reap the fee of the contract.

After Ziva is updated on the case, she tells Art that they must be prepared for a hit on the plane. Ziva says there are many potential weapons on the flight and admits she once killed a man with a credit card. Art says he is suspicious of a man named Steven.

After a male flight attendant tries to hand Tony a glass of water, he insists he give him a fresh bottle. Nora figures they really believe someone is trying to kill her.

McGee tells Gibbs and Vance that Art requested and switched to be on that flight. After Ziva is told about the news, Art catches her searching his bags. Tony appears and pretends that he found the book that Ziva is looking for. He says he suggested she read the Twilight Saga since American history is boring. Ziva slips past Art and steals his cellphone. Ziva instructs Tony to have Abby check all of Art's calls. Nora tells them they make a great team, but Ziva insists they are not always this smooth.

McGee tells Gibbs that Daniel attacked Beringer. Daniel admits he lost his temper. He states he thinks Beringer is taunting him. Daniel shares his belief that Beringer hired someone to kill Nora.

Gibbs meets with Beringer and asks him about Nora. He says she is a great employee, but he likes to joke about her. He explains he thinks Daniel is upset he assigned Nora to the Paris office.

Ziva tells Tony that Art has been in the bathroom for a long time. They knock on the door, but he doesn't answer. They find that he is stabbed in the neck with a knitting needle and his gun missing. Steven arrives and asks if there is a line. They tell him the bathroom is out of order.

McGee reports that Art requested an earlier flight in order to catch his daughter's play. Vance tells Gibbs that Beringer is now suspicious that he is being investigated. He also says Holly's plea deal came through.

Back on the plane, the flight attendant announces that the front bathroom is now out of order. Ziva watches the passengers and notices a suspicious lady. Nora is shocked to hear that Art is dead. Nora asks Ziva if she slept with Tony since they seem complimentary. She explains they remind her of her relationship with Daniel.

In the bathroom, Tony uses the wi-fi to connect to Ducky via webcam. Ducky looks at Art's wound and figures his murder was quick and quiet. Tony finds a partial print on the needle. He uses his camera to photograph it, but gets upset he has to delete a photo in order to make room.

Abby receives the print and starts to match it in their database. Gibbs and Vance meets with Holly and tell her to talk since she got her deal. Holly asks Gibbs if he likes it rough. She explains she is good at reading people. Gibbs tells Holly if Nora dies, the deal goes away and they will add murder to the list of charges against her. Holly writes down the account number used during the transaction.

Back on the plane, Ziva and Tony notice that Steven, the man that Art was suspicious of, is acting strange. Ziva grabs the man by the neck, but he explains he was only looking for a battery that dropped out of his CD player. Ziva lets him go after Tony finds the battery on the ground. Nora has trouble breathing and collapses.

Tony calls Ducky and tells him about Nora's symptoms. He figures that Nora is having an allergic reaction. Steven, the suspicious man, gives them a epipen that they use to bring Nora back to normal. They figure since Nora hasn't eaten anything, she reacted to a pillow that was laced with peanuts which Nora is allergic to.

Back at the lab, Abby finds the fingerprint matches a woman Tiffany Chase, the flight attendant. She reports to Gibbs that Tiffany was in D.C. when Mark was killed. She accesses her bank records and sees that she has received large deposits recently. McGee tells Gibbs that he tracked the money to an account that only Beringer and Nora has access to.

Tony asks Tiffany where she hid the Air Marshall's gun. Tony and Tiffany get in a fight, but Ziva takes her down and places handcuffs on her.

Gibbs and McGee arrest Beringer for hiring a hitman to take out Nora. He tells them to check the logs since he never transferred the money. Gibbs figures Daniel set up the hit. They fire at Daniel as he speeds towards them. Gibbs pushes McGee out of the way and is hit by the car. Gibbs slowly gets back up and throws McGee a pair of handcuffs.

Back on the plane, Nora says she can't wait to see Daniel again. At the office, McGee explains Beringer stole from the Navy, Daniel stole from him and used some of it to hire a hitman since Nora's testimony would have exposed his theft. McGee asks Gibbs how his shoulder is, but he says it was an accident. Tony and Ziva ask each other why they lied when they said one of them took the couch when they stayed in same room. Tony tells Ziva his favorite picture was the one of her.

Summary: The NCIS team has to thwart an attempt by a group of terrorists to detonate a bomb before it's too late.

Two men walk into a bar to meet women. Alfonso has complained to his buddy about not having a girlfriend, so his buddy brought him to the bar to meet women. Alfonso practices two pick-up lines on his friend: "Is it hot in here or is it just you?" "Are you Jamaican? Cuz Jamaikin me crazy." A woman sitting at the bar in front of them chuckles as she listens. She turns around and tells Alfonso to just be himself. She introduces herself as Lynn. As they begin to talk, Alfonso's eyes are glued to the television where the media is following a live car chase. Alfonso tells his buddy that the car being chased belongs to his brother. Just then, Alfonso's cell phone rings. He answers it and asks his brother what is going on. His brother tells him it's happening now, wherever Alfonso is, he has to run now. Alfonso watches, horrified, as his brother's car explodes on the television.

In the squadroom, Ziva and Tony exit the elevator. Ziva is laughing because Tony is taking dance lessons. Tony tells her National Tap Dance day is May 25th. Tony wants to go to the National Tap Dance parties. Tony talks about all the ladies that will be at the party. Ziva tells him she went to an "International Talk Like A Pirate Day" party last year. Tony says, "You did not? Excellent. Argh, let me hear some pirate speak." "Why is McGee wearing a tuxedo jacket?" Ziva asks as she watches McGee standing at his desk, headset on. Tony and Ziva can't resist the chance to tease McGee when they realize he's attending an online wedding. McGee tells them that a gamer buddy of his from Spain set up the online live viewing for people who couldn't make it. "I would be laughing if I weren't on the verge of tears. This is sad," Tony says. Gibbs walks in and begins to tell the team to grab their gear but stops mid-sentence. Tony tells Gibbs that McGee is at a wedding. McGee tells Gibbs it's almost over. Gibbs just looks at them then says "take your time." The wedding finishes so McGee tosses confetti at his monitor, then removes his headset and thanks Gibbs. Gibbs tells everyone to grab their gear, they have a dead marine in an exploded car. McGee asks for a minute to change but Gibbs tells him no, he's had his minute.

At the crime scene the team reviews the evidence. The car was registered to a Lance Corporal Roman Vega who was stationed at Quantico and just returned from his second tour in Iraq.

They realize the bomb was in the trunk and exploded when Vega hit a pothole. Ziva reviews the evidence and believes the detonation was an accident. "We found the torso," Palmer calls out. Ducky says they will need DNA to positively ID the body as it's burnt up and there are many parts. Ducky says they are still missing major body parts. "Oh yeah, sorry forgot about that," McGee says as he holds out a bag. Palmer takes the bag, opens it and says, "That's the head." McGee found what is left of the head behind the bowling alley. "I do hope if the time comes when your head finds itself removed from your body, it is treated with more respect," Ducky tells McGee. Ducky and Palmer continue their search for the rest of the body parts. Gibbs tells McGee that they need a tow truck. McGee opens his phone but can't get a signal and comments how weird that is. "Weirder than you carrying a head around in a bag then forgetting about it?" Tony asks. McGee moves his phone and indicates he has a signal there but not when he's closer to the car. Tony mimics McGee's movements. "Yeah I got a dead spot like that in my therapists office," Tony says. McGee asks why Tony is seeing a therapist. Tony claims it's a physical therapist because he hurt his knee 'kneeling." McGee doesn't believe him. McGee heads over to his bag and pulls out a Geiger counter, he thought of something that could cause RF Local interference. He walks over to the car and does a scan. As the machine makes a static noise, Tony grabs McGee's jacket and pulls him backwards. "Radiation," McGee says.

The team is huddled by a Hazmat vehicle, dressed in white jumpsuits. "First the plague, now radiation poisoning. I'm starting to think someone really has it in for me," Tony says. Ziva and McGee remind him they were all exposed. "But don't let you stop that from thinking about yourself," McGee adds. "This isn't about me. It's about my little DiNozzo makers. They've been nuked," Tony says. "I know," McGee responds. "Do you? I mean sure Tim your kids are gonna be smart but mine had a shot at being really beautiful," Tony says. Ziva rolls her eyes and walks away. "Hopefully Gibbs will bring us some good news," Ziva adds. Abby comes running up in a yellow Hazmat suit and Tony says, "Now that doesn't look like good news." Abby jumps into Tony's arms and tells them she was worried. Gibbs tells them they are okay. Abby says they only found minute traces of radiation in the car, they can have their clothes back. "Nice work McPanic," Tony says. McGee asks Abby about the source of the radiation. She tells them that it wasn't the bomb, but the vehicle had been used to transport Cobalt 60, a byproduct of nuclear reactors, aka 'dirty bombs.' Tony asks why Lance Corporal Vega was transporting dirty bombs but Ziva says the most important question is, "Where is it now?"

The team arrives back at the squadroom. As they exit the elevator, they are all on the phone gathering information and as they each hang up, they tell the person on the other end to not talk to the press. "This just in..." is heard from the big screen in the squadroom with a featured headline "Dirty Bomb Loose in D.C." Tony reminds them Gibbs is going to want a full briefing when he's done talking to Vance and asks what they have on Vega. McGee tells Tony he did a preliminary workup on Vega while Tony was showering for the third time. Vega and his brother, Alfonso, went to live with their Aunt after their parents were killed. Ziva points out the cell records show that Roman called his brother during the police chase. Tony wants to bring Alfonso in but McGee informs him that nobody knows where he is. Tony yells at McGee to find Alfonso.

Gibbs and Vance are walking into the conference room. Gibbs tells Vance he's busy working on the case. Vance introduces Gibbs to Walter Cane, who tells Gibbs he's been following him. "What on my blog?" Gibbs asks. Walter says not exactly, he does his research but he knew they would end up meeting eventually. Walter runs a private intelligence firm and they do work for the Pentagon. The government outsources to company's like Cane's for countries they are not at war with. "Like Peru?" Gibbs asks. Walter's group is tracking a group called "New Liberty" out of Peru. They claim to be a grassroots organization, formed to protest U.S. anti-drug policies in Peru, which they say have caused civilian casualties. Cane thinks they are planning an attack to weaken the U.S.'s resolve.

Recurring Role: Joe Spano (FBI Agent T.C. Fornell)
Guest Stars: David St. Louis (Gerald Lucas), Jason Spisak (Aaron Szwed), Peter Woodward (David Devoisier), Paul Telfer (Marine Corporal Damon Werth)
Production Code: 153
Summary: After one of the drivers of a shady shipping company is found dead, the NCIS team has to go on the road to take down the illegal activities along with the FBI.

A Marine, Damon Werth wakes up in a alley, lying in a dumpster complaining about his head. He sees his fellow Marine buddy lying on the trash below him and calls for him. He tells his buddy, Heatherton, it must have been a good party. When Heatherton doesn't answer, he grabs his arm and rolls him over. He falls backwards when he sees Heatherton's throat is cut.

McGee brings Gibbs home. McGee notices that Gibbs has cleared up the stack of magazines in the living room and remarks that it it looks nice and homey but "Not homey as in your my homey" he adds. McGee offers to check the fridge for food and Gibbs says he only asked McGee to drive him home. McGee opens the fridge and only finds fish food. "You know what I could do, feed the fish and if you get hungry, you could eat the fish," McGee tells Gibbs. Gibbs relaxes on the couch and McGee offers to help him with his shoes. Gibbs pulls out his gun and lays it on the coffee table. McGee nods his head, says "alright" and starts to head out. McGee pokes his head around the corner and says, "You got a new lock on the front door." "That's to keep out unwanted guests," Gibbs replies. McGee says he'll pick Gibbs up in the morning and leaves. Gibbs picks up his gun and aims it a partially closed door. "I know my goldfish didn't eat a t-bone," Gibbs says. Werth steps from the shadows and replies, "I'll pay you back Agent Gibbs."

"Friends are welcome, your not a friend," Gibbs says as he stands up. "I need help, I didn't want anyone to see us talking," Werth replies. "Your paranoid," Gibbs says, still aiming his gun at Werth. Werth informs Gibbs he's clean, he's off the juice. Gibbs asks who is after Werth. Werth says it's a man named Aaron Szwed who owns a trucking company. A friend of Werth's from the Core had been doing work for him, questionable work. Gibbs lowers his gun and tells Werth to continue. Werth approaches Gibbs and hands him a photo of himself and Heatherton that was taken after they'd been shipped stateside. Heatherton's wife and kid left him because he had trouble readjusting to life when he returned. "Like you?" Gibbs asks. "I didn't carry him out of the desert so he could wind up dead in some alley tonight," Werth argues. Gibbs hands the photo back to Werth. Werth says Heatherton stopped by for a drink, wanted to talk about the last job he did. The two men ended up partying and Werth blacked out again. Gibbs wants to know if Werth's head is straight. "I only had a couple of beers, I swear," Werth replies. "You only had a couple you remember," Gibbs says. "He's still laying out there Gunny," Werth tells Gibbs. After a moment's hesitation, Gibbs calls McGee and tells him, "Hey McGee, day's not over."

McGee, Gibbs and Werth pull into the alley. McGee and Gibbs get out with flashes and walk down the alley. McGee tells Gibbs technically it's Metro's jurisdiction but they can take it if they find a reason. Gibbs points out they have a cooperating witness. However, Heatherton hasn't been on active duty/service since he was wounded in Iraq. They come across Heatherton's body and McGee says he'll call Metro. Gibbs replies, "Get Ziva and DiNozzo out of bed." "What?" McGee replies. "Wake them up," Gibbs says. McGee was confused, he realizes Gibbs wants him to wake them up out of their own beds, not that they were sleeping together. "Need some sleep yourself do ya McGee?" Gibbs asks as he walks back to the car. McGee says no but Gibbs shines the flashlight on his face and tells McGee he has bags under his eyes. "It's a look that I'm going for," McGee replies. As Gibbs approaches the car, Werth asks if he believes him now. Gibbs wants to know what Heatherton was doing for Szwed. Werth says he was driving a truck, doing some serious driving. Heatherton was across country and back in less than a week. Heatherton said he messed up but he had to, something about being a human first. Heatherton was recruiting Werth for his next run. Werth went to see Szwed before he showed up at Gibbs' house. Werth made a deal for 2 man job the next day and told Szwed he had someone in mind. Gibbs reminds Werth it's a murder investigation. "Szwed's bodyguard, Lucas, he carries a jack knife. I think they killed him," Werth says. Gibbs tells Werth he's a witness, he's not getting involved. Werth wants to know what he's supposed to tell Heatherton's wife and little girl. "I'll tell you, your just a witness here and not a very good one," Gibbs says. "No, I'm the guy taking a dead man's place behind the wheel. You need me Gibbs," Werth adds.

Gibbs shows up at Fornell's door. Fornell answers in his navy blue bathrobe, matching pajama bottoms and slippers, all disheveled. "What happened to your face?" Gibbs asks as Fornell is now sporting a beard. "What happened to your arm?" Fornell replies. "The job," Gibbs says. "Same," Fornell adds. Gibbs hands Fornell a cup of coffee with a smile. Fornell hesitates and looks at Gibbs before accepting it. Gibbs mentions Fornell just got home a few hours ago. "Rico case, couple of mob hits, deepcover. No sugar?" Fornell replies. Gibbs hands him a packet of sugar with a smile. "Try not to look so chipper," Fornell says. Gibbs watches, smiling and handing Fornell a stirrer, as Fornell adds the sugar, tosses the wrapper on the ground, then stirs his coffee and finally sips it. "Alright go," Fornell says. Gibbs tells Fornell he's taking his crime scene. "Let me hop in the shower," Fornell says and turns away. "Tobias, nice slippers," Gibbs says as Fornell shuts the door in Gibbs face.

McGee is sitting in the car with a sleeping Werth. McGee clears his throat loudly, waking Werth. "You were sleeping. It's kinda like being in a cave with a hibernating bear, ya know? Makes me nervous" McGee says. Werth says he'll fall right back to sleep. McGee says he can't do that, his brain keeps going, starts spinning and doesn't stop. Werth, dozing in the back seat says it would get irritating. McGee wishes his brain had an on/off switch. Werth says in the Core you learn to sleep whenever you can. McGee says, "That makes sense. You never know what's gonna happen next right?" McGee closes his eyes, then quickly opens them to find Gibbs sitting in the passengers seat. "Anytime Alice," Gibbs says with a smile. McGee says he wasn't sleeping, he and Werth were just talking. McGee looks back and Werth is sitting upright, wide-eyed in the back seat with Fornell sitting next to him. "Alright, let's go process the scene," Fornell says then looks at Gibbs, "You're already doing it aren't you?" he adds.

At the crime scene, Tony walks from the truck, stretching complaining about gaining weight this time of year and sleeping bad, waking up with knots in his back. "That's because you sleep in a chair," Ziva says. "it's not a chair," Tony says. "It's a knot chair?" Ducky asks as he checks out Heatherton's body. Tony brags about his top of the line chair, with massage features and a cup holder. "It is a massage chair that gives you knots. It is not healthy." Ziva says. "I'm gonna show you dear boy that with the passing years, the knots do not get any looser. For the sake of your health, give up the chair." Ducky tells Tony. "Coul we just not, say knot anymore? Thank you," Tony says and turns around to photograph the body. Ducky tells them Heatherton's throat was slit with what appears to be a serrated blade; death would have been quick.

In the conference room at NCIS, Fornell goes over the case file on Aaron Szwed for inter-state trafficking. It's all allegations, Fornell tells Gibbs. Szwed runs a fleet of trucks moving products over land. "It's legit," Gibbs says. Szwed's delivery rate is higher than industry average and his prices are higher as well. On average, Szwed uses two drivers and one is always armed. Szwed came across the FBI's radar a year ago when one of his drivers shot a hijacker. The firearm was registered and Szwed didn't catch any flack for it. Gerald Lucas is listed as Szwed's head of security but Fornell couldn't find any employment records for Heatherton. "He was off the books. Why don't we bring Szwed in and ask him about it?" Werth adds. "Three reasons," Gibbs responds. "What's he moving? Where's he moving it? Whose he moving it for? It's tough to run the interrogation when you don't know the who, what, where, when, why and how," Fornell asks. "We know the when," Werth adds. Gibbs phone rings and he answers it. It's Ducky so Gibbs tells him he'll be there in two minutes. Werth stands up to follow but Gibbs tells him to sit, eat and drink. Werth feels he's good but Gibbs puts down a cup in plastic and tells Werth he'll be good when the lab says he's good. Gibbs and Fornell leave a frustrated Werth behind.

Fornell and Gibbs enter the elevator. Fornell asks, "Cooperating witness Jethro? Come on, what's the real story?" Gibbs says Werth was a Marine, saved a friend's life, couple of other guys too. "Core didn't work out? Seems like a team guy," Fornell replies. "Gibbs says he broke a rule. "And you didn't lock him up?" Fornell asks. Gibbs says he gave Werth a medal, he just had one lying around. "You know, it's not like he's wearing your pin. Your not going steady with the guy," Fornell replies. Gibbs says it didn't mean anything. "I think it meant something to him," Fornell adds as the elevator bell rings that they've arrived on their floor. As Fornell steps off the elevator, Gibbs hesitates, shakes his head up at the ceiling, then steps out and follows Fornell into autopsy. Fornell talks to Gibbs as they walk in. Ducky says, "In some eastern cultures it is believed that if you save a man's life you become responsible for him. I can imagine the pain the poor boy must be experiencing at the loss." "Assuming he's part of one of those eastern cultures," Fornell adds. Ducky says a mutual saving of a life is a powerful bond, and with a chuckle and pointing to Gibbs and Fornell adds, as evidenced by the two of you. "Oh is that why we're friends?" Fornell asks Gibbs. "It's more like shared misery," Gibbs responds. "God knows, you got enough to go around," Fornell sarcastically replies. "Hey, I'm a happy guy," Gibbs says. "Since when?" Fornell asks. "You don't know what I've been doing, I haven't seen you in months," Gibbs tells Fornell. "Whose fault is that? You only call when you need something," Fornell argues. "Well apparently when I need grief," Gibbs retorts. Ducky clears his throat to get their attention. He found fractures on Heatherton's right hand. "Recently?" Fornell asks. With a smile, Ducky replies, "I just found them." Someone tried to get Heatherton to talk and crushed the bones in his hand. "I wonder what he had to say," Fornell asks.

With a lullaby playing in the background, McGee is napping at his desk while Tony and Ziva stand and watch. McGee claims he wasn't sleeping. "We didn't say anything McGee," Ziva says. McGee wipes his mouth, points at Tony and says, "But you did something didn't you? What'd you do? Did you try and put my hand in this water?" "That would be a little juvenile," Tony replies. McGee thinks Tony drew on his face so he holds up a CD and looks into the back of it to check his reflection. "No, I suggested stripping you naked, putting a tag on your toe and dragging you down in to autopsy so when you woke up you'd think you were dead but Ziva thought it was in poor taste," Tony responds. McGee thanks Ziva, who has her hand behind her back. "I did not agree. I think there would be a lot of people who would like to see you naked," Tony adds. McGee finishes looking at his reflection, convinced that his face is clean, he puts the CD down. He asks Tony if there was anything in Heatherton's apartment. "Nothing out of the ordinary sleeping beauty," Tony replies. McGee found a couple of speeding tickets on Heatherton, one in Texas and one in New Mexico. "Oh so he gets around. So whose this confidential witness that's got Gibbs so gung ho about taking this guy down?" Tony asks. "Confidential," is all McGee says. "Oh okay. So I'm not going to tell you what Ziva did while you were napping," Tony says. McGee believes Ziva didn't do anything to him while he was napping. "Whatever you say McGee," Ziva replies. Werth walks in yawning and says Ziva's name. Tony looks up as Ziva says, "Damon?" "Yeah I was just peeing in a cup," Werth replies. McGee shows Werth the way to the men's room. Gibbs and Fornell walk in and Gibbs tells them the truck rolls in six hours and wants to know what they got. Tony tells him nothing. Fornell says he doesn't like the sound of that. More enthusiastically Tony says, "Oh, we got nothing." Fornell and Ziva look at Tony, then Fornell turns and talks to Gibbs. He wants to stop Szwed and stop the truck. "Or put someone on it," Gibbs says. "Whoa whoa, are we doing about letting Johnny Rambo go all First Blood again?" Tony asks. "Gee,

I hope not," Gibbs says. "We are putting way to much trust in this guy," Tony adds. "Sounds like a big gamble Jethro," Fornell says. Looking at Ziva, Gibbs says, "Let it ride."

In her lab, Abby is listening to music on her Ipod. A beep goes off and she looks at the clock. She walks over to where McGee is sleeping, his head resting on Bart, her stuffed hippo. Abby takes out one of her earphones and puts it to McGee's ear, which startles him awake. "You told me to wake you up at 2," Abby says. After he sits up, Abby asks about his trip to Africa and if he came into contact with a fly, possibly came back with a disease. McGee says he's not sick, he's just exhausted. He had no idea how hard Gibbs works, keeping up with Gibbs schedule is going to kill him. Abby tells him it won't work as it took years for Gibbs to get used to his schedule. McGee feels he owes Gibbs for saving his life. "That's part of his job description," Abby replies. "He pushed me out of the way of a moving car," McGee says. "Pushing people is really rude, McGee," Abby replies. "He's up at the crack of dawn, if he goes to bed at all. What exactly is running through that guy's veins?" McGee asks. "Coffee, McGee," Gibbs says when he walks into the lab. "Right, boss," McGee replies. "No, get me some," Gibbs replies. McGee is on it as he gets up to get some coffee for Gibbs. Gibbs tells McGee to get everyone ready. "Your enjoying having a valet," Abby tells Gibbs. "You done?" he asks her when one of her machines beeps. She tells him that Werth was 'roofied.' "Is there anything else that you need?" she asks Gibbs. With a smile, Gibbs replies, "IF there is, McGee will do it."

In the garage, Tony is cleaning out the NCIS van. "Last one to use the van should have to clean it out," Tony whines. Ziva reminds him he was the last one to use it. Tony laughs and tells her he wasn't because it smells like falafel's, holding a plastic basket with them in it. He knows a certain probie agent who eats falafel's and asks if Ziva wants to help him. Ziva thinks about it for a second, then says sure. She walks over and kicks the wastebasket to the door of the van, then walks away. "Probie?" Werth asks. Ziva tells him she's in the process of becoming a sworn NCIS Agent. Werth points out she has to be a U.S. Citizen and a legal resident. She tells him she's in the process of becoming a U.S. Citizen and strings are being 'tied' in regards to her residency. "Pulled, you pull strings," Tony corrects her. Werth mentions pulling heart strings. "Don't confuse the girl. It's taken a lot of marionetting to get her this far," Tony tells Werth. Werth asks Tony who her puppet master is. "It's probably best if we table the conversation of qualifications in case someone asks how your qualified to be on this op," Tony tells Werth. "It's not my first rodeo," Werth responds. "I know that cowboy," Tony says. Gibbs, Fornell and McGee exit the elevator and Gibbs tells them to get ready to roll. "Yeah boss let's get this guy out of here," Tony replies. McGee goes over the initial route they will take and he has gotten the prepass tracking numbers on all of their rigs. He's also got copies of Szwed and Lucas' drivers license. Tony doesn't think that will help and McGee thinks they might get lucky. "No no, the less we leave to luck the better with a civilian on the inside," Fornell responds. He walks over to Werth and says, "We're putting a lot of faith in you, son. Observe only." "Understood," Werth answers. Gibbs informs him that one of their guys goes with him as his partner. Fornell tells him to find out what's in the truck, take it to the other end and they will be following. The team brings up Rule #27 - there are only two ways to follow: first way they never notice you and the other way is they only notice you. They will have one team on the inside and one on the outside and they'll bust them on both ends. McGee begins to head to the car when Gibbs says Fornell is with him. "Well, then where are we?" Tony asks.

Tony pulls surveillance outside the warehouse while Werth and Ziva enter. Werth tells Lucas Ziva is his partner. "What, not comment that I am a woman?" Ziva asks. Lucas asks if she's kidding, like if he had a choice he'd hang around more dudes. "That'll make patting you down more enjoyable," Lucas says. "Try not to enjoy it to much," Werth tells him. Holding out her arms Ziva replies, "Good luck with that."

McGee enters the truck, telling Tony he got the telescopic mic up; he gave Ziva and Werth the blueprints so they could find a 'sweet' spot to place it in the warehouse. Tony comments on how much coffee McGee has and he should be careful with it. McGee opens the second cup and begins pouring sugar out of it into his coffee. "That's a lot of sugar," Tony says. As McGee drinks his coffee, they hear Ziva, Werth and Lucas' voices come over the mic. "Oh, what's pretty boy mumbling about now," Tony says. McGee says, "Wow can you hold a grudge." "He broke my nose," Tony quietly says. McGee points out that Werth dislocated his shoulder. "Well you have another shoulder and I only have one nose and it's on my face. It's on my face McGee," Tony replies. McGee reminds Tony it was two years ago and he should just drop it. Tony said that's fine but Werth keeps coming back. Gibbs should tell him to just be on his way and go live his own life. McGee says Ducky thinks Gibbs feels a connection to Werth since they saved him. "Two schools of thought on the life saving/responsibility issue You got Robin Hood Prince of Thieves versus the World's Greatest Athlete," Tony says. McGee saw that one. Tony talks about actor Jan Michael Vincent, who played on Airwolf and his character's name was Stringfellow Hawke, the best character name ever according to Tony. The two men go back and forth debating about Robin Hood and the World's Greatest Athlete. McGee reminds Tony that Werth risked his life to save his country. McGee doesn't know what it is that they owe Werth but feels they do owe him. "Do me a favor, pace yourself with that stuff," Tony says as he watches McGee drink his coffee. Tony gets up and McGee leans forward, wondering what the weird sound is he is hearing coming from the mic.

Lucas has had Ziva and Werth empty their pockets. Ziva asks what he's looking for and Lucas responds, "Privacy." He tells them they can have their phones back when they are done then asks if they know how to use a CB radio. He points to their items on the table and tells them to collect their gear. Ziva puts a gun in her boot while Lucas grabs two bottles out of the fridge. He puts one on the table and hands the second one to Werth and says they probably have a lot of questions. "Just one, where's the truck?" Ziva asks.

At Gibbs' home getting ready, Fornell asks Gibbs if he hired a cleaning lady, it looks different. Gibbs says he didn't as his phone rings. Gibbs is doing a little circle dance trying to put his sling back on. "Want a hand?" Fornell asks with a smirk. Tony calls to tell Gibbs a truck is pulling in, it looks like it's almost kickoff where is he. Gibbs says they are switching vehicles, they'll be there shortly. "This is something for you isn't it? Letting me drive your car," Fornell says. "It's no biggie, you already slept with my wife," Gibbs says as he tosses Fornell the keys and heads out the door.

At the warehouse, the truck is backing in and Lucas closes the door behind it. Szwed tells Lucas to swap the plates and strip the markings. "Your partner's nice to look at. She double clutch?," Szwed asks Werth. Following, Ziva tells him she navigates. Szwed responds that men are terrible with maps anyway. Ziva wants to know where they are going and what they are taking. Szwed stops and looks at her. "Whats in the truck?" Ziva asks. The truck is full of melons. "We're moving melons?" Werth asks. Lucas tells them yes, they are moving them out of the truck, they have to empty it. "We are driving a truck full of nothing?" Ziva asks. "Not for long," Lucas says and walks away. Werth thinks it's not a trafficking job at all, it's a hijacking. "And we are the hijackers," Ziva adds.

Werth and Ziva finish unloading the melons off the truck. Lucas removes the markings from the side of it. Szweb walks up and uses trucker talk to Ziva and Werth. Werth wants to make a pitstop because they only have 3/4 of a tank of gas and he doesn't like to take chances. Szweb tells him to make it quick. Quietly Ziva asks Werth what language Szweb was using. Werth explains that Szweb says the truck is fast but to not push her, even when they are running on empty and to watch out for cops. "So the truck is a she," Ziva says. "Let's go rob someone," Werth says and shuts Ziva's door.

Tony and McGee watch as Szweb pulls out of the warehouse in a Ferrari. Tony tells McGee he had a hamster named Ferrari. They watch the truck pull out and notice the markings are stripped and the plates have been switched. McGee uses the binoculars while they wait for the signal from the truck. Tony wonders how difficult it must be to drive the truck because Werth keeps using his brakes. Ever the geek, McGee goes over the trucks specifications for Tony. McGee is tapping his fingers on the dashboard, which annoys Tony. Tony tells him to knock it off. McGee tells him he's not tapping his fingers, he's using Morse Code which is why Werth is tapping the brakes. "FU....E...L Fuel Tony they're stopping for fuel," McGee yells. Tony tells McGee he's done with the coffee but McGee wants to stop and get a refill. Tony reminds McGee they are the invisible tail, not the visible one. Tony calls Gibbs and tells him about the rendezvous spot at the gas station. Gibbs and Fornell have just driven past it. Fornell turns the car around, burning rubber as he does. They pull into the gas station, Fornell is driving fast and Gibbs is reminding Fornell, loudly, that they are on a stake. Fornell and Gibbs argue as they get out of the car. Gibbs tells Szweb he has a nice car. Gibbs yells at Fornell that he's getting a Slim Jim. "I don't want a Slim Jim," Fornell responds. "I wasn't asking ya," Gibbs yells back as he heads inside. Fornell stands there laughing. Fornell starts to ask Werth questions about the truck's engine. Ziva gets cash from Szweb to pay for the gas. Fornell mentions to Werth that it's against the rules to have his girl along and why aren't there any markings on the truck. Fornell takes a step towards the truck but Werth pushes him back and reveals his gun. Heading inside, Ziva hands off the truck gps to Gibbs as he comes out. Fornell backs off and apologizes to Werth. Lucas and Szweb keep an eye on the situation. Ziva returns and hands Szweb his change. The truck and Ferrari leave the gas station. Fornell tells Gibbs that Werth was convincing and wants to know what Werth did that was wrong. Gibbs tells him "a small bout of steroid induced psychosis." "Oh great," Fornell replies.

In the truck, Ziva opens a compact, hands Werth an ear piece and puts one in her ear. She asks if McGee can hear her. "Roger that, 10-2, you are loud and proud. Come back," McGee says rather enthusiastically. Ziva smiles and asks if McGee is okay. Rather cheerfully, McGee says he's good, Tony's driving and he's been studying up on the lingo. McGee asks where they are bringing the cargo. Ziva watches Werth, who is driving intently. She tells McGee they are picking up, not dropping off and then gives him their destination and arrival time. McGee tells her he'll run a check, he thinks it might be a cargo vehicle. He continues to chat and gets up to move into the back of the van. Tony swerves the van to knock McGee off balance but McGee just continues and then says "over" to Ziva. She thinks the conversation is over and removes her ear piece. McGee keeps calling Ziva's name.

Ziva notices how tense Werth is so she tells him quietly to relax. He does and explains that Heatherton drove the lead vehicle in their convoy, when they got hit. Ziva talks about how trauma intensifies memory, which can make it feel ever present. Werth wonders if there is a reason and Ziva replies, "Perhaps to teach you so you do not allow it to happen again." He feels he keeps getting stuck in the same pattern. Ziva reminds him that the last time she saw him, he was in control, he helped them. She tells him he can move forward, he can find the right path.

Gibbs is on his cell phone saying "slow down" over and over. Fornell thinks he's talking to him so he hits the brakes on the car. "Not you, McGee," Gibbs says. McGee has narrowed it down to a garage owned by David Devoisier. It appears the cargo is assorted machinery. "Put the pedal to the medal Tobias," Gibbs says.

Gibbs and Fornell check out Devoisier's garage. They inquire if he normally gets a lot of shipments of machinery in the middle of the night. Devoisier wonders why this particular shipment has raised a red flag. Gibbs tells him they believe it may be hijacked. Devoisier wants to know who is hijacking him and Fornell tells him it's an ongoing investigation and they can't reveal who. Fornell tells him the truck originated in San Diego. "Then it's Aaron Szwed. You can bleach a blue color but that doesn't make it white," Devoisier says. The contents of the shipment belong to Szwed. Devoisier won them and Szwed lost so he wants the contents back. "This is all about a bet?" Gibbs asks.

Szwed was in over his head, throwing away money he couldn't afford to lose and wanted to prove he could run with the faster crowd. The wagers was Szwed's best car versus Devoisier's. It was a cross country race and the winner took the pink slips. "Sure, speed limits, there really just suggestions," Fornell says. They had teams backing them up in case they needed tires or something. Devoisier overheard Szwed cursing out Heatherton when he overheated because Heatherton was a no-show. Devoisier is shocked to learn Heatherton is dead. Gibbs wants to know if Devoisier can get a hold of his driver. "Sure why? Do you want to stop my truck?" Devoisier asks.

McGee pulls up Devoisier's records. Devoisier was on a commercial flight a week ago from San Diego to Dulles. Szwed had two speeding tickets, one in Texas and one in New Mexico. Fornell wonders if there's a fender bender that they are missing. Gibbs tells McGee he's going to lose him and hangs up. McGee moves back to the front of the van and wonders what kind of cars are worth killing for. Szwed was driving a Maybach and Devoisier was driving a 1970 Plymouth Barracuda Convertible.

Lucas radios Werth and tells him to pull over, the truck will be coming through soon. Szweb tells him to use the trailer to block the road. Ziva asks McGee what their plan is. As McGee is telling her he doesn't know, the van blows a tire. Tony gets the van to the side of the road and isn't happy.

The truck carrying the cars comes down the road and Szwed orders Werth to block the road. Werth hesitates and asks Ziva what to do. She tells him to stop the truck so Werth drives his truck and blocks the path of the second truck. Werth and Ziva stand beside the truck as the other driver struggles to stop and control the truck. It finally skids to a stop right in front of the two. "And you people think I'm crazy," Werth tells Ziva. Lucas orders them to put a gun on the driver. Lucas and Szweb open the back of the truck and find Gibbs and Fornell standing there, guns drawn. "Do I even have to tell you, your under arrest?" Fornell says. Ziva walks up, astonished and looks in the back of the truck. Gibbs smiles back at her.

Devoisier is in the NCIS garage and is thanking Gibbs for returning them. "Boys and their cars. I'm a hot rod girl myself," Abby says. Ziva asks how much Devoisier paid for the car. "I paid $1.2 million," Devoisier replies. Fornell whistles and Gibbs just smiles. "Are you stupid?" Abby asks him. "Stock. Hemi. Cuda. Convertible. From 1970, only 18 made Abbs," Fornell says as he walks around the car. "wow a hemi cuda, that's like the holy grail of muscle cars huh?" Abby asks Devoisier. Abby uses a magnet on the car and turns out one of the fenders is made of bondo. NCIS retraced Devoisier's path and he had an accident while on the road. He killed an 18 year old girl who was crossing the street. Heatherton brought the girl into the hospital and saved her, until she died. Devoisier couldn't destroy the car so he killed Heatherton, his only witness. Abby taunts him about how she'll find blood and hair when she starts taking the car apart.

In the squadroom, a lullaby is playing while McGee snores at his desk. Tony, feet up, hands behind his head, watches Werth filling out some paperwork. Werth says he's not looking forward to his next conversation. "It is better to do it in person. Tell Heatherton's wife that her husband died a good man, for being a good Samaritan and Devoisier is not," Ziva replies. Werth gives Ziva a hug and kiss on the cheek and she tells him she'll see him later. Tony says that Heatherton's wife lives in Cleveland, he went to school in Columbus and has friends there. If Werth is looking for work there, Tony will make some calls. Werth shakes his hand and thanks him. Tony offers Werth a ride but he says he'll walk then leaves. Tony watches Ziva then asks if her "see you later" was meant as a goodbye or she'd see him at a later date. Ziva wonders if Tony is having problems understanding simple English. He tells her to just answer the question and she doesn't.

Summary: Gibbs is forced to revisit his painful past when his ex mother-in-law turns out to be a witness in a murder investigation.

A couple are walking their infant son at 2am down by the waterfront. The husband wants to sit as he's tired so his wife tells him to sit for 5 minutes and she'll come back for him. He wants 10 minutes and as they talk about it, they hear gunshots. The husband walks towards them as their son awakens and begins to cry. He hears a woman cry for help and sees her kneeling down, holding the head of the man shot, on the ground.

At the squadroom, the elevator opens and Tony exits. He is all excited as he's reading a message on his cell phone. Ziva thinks Tony has a date. Tony tells her that something special is happening to Special Agent Anthony DiNozzo today. "Who are you seeing?" Ziva asks. Tony tells her "Kurosawa" and Ziva thinks it's an Asian woman. "Kurasawa is a dude," Tony replies. "I did not know you were into Asian dudes," Ziva responds. Tony tells her Akira Kurosawa is an Asian filmmaker and he's in town and having a little festival of his films. Ziva holds up a book she's reading and says, "This is a work of art." "Oh yeah, you reading a new Judy Blume? I always liked Are You There God? It's Me Margaret," Tony replies. "This my friend is the Declaration of Independence. My citizenship test is coming up and I wish to pass with swimming colors," Ziva says. "Flying colors," McGee says as he walks towards his desk. "Any colors will do McGee," Ziva responds. "Ah Timmy, you look a little rough around the edges there. You up all night playing video games again?" Tony asks McGee. "Well I will admit that maintaining my state of the art status is exhausting but you are looking at a man who has his whole apartment wired to a single remote control," McGee says with a smile. Tony is amazed and wants to know if he has everything wired. McGee says he does, including his microwave. Tony says it's like the clapper, "clap on clap off" (single device attached to lamps activated by clapping your hands). "I am living the dream baby," McGee says as he gets to work. Gibbs walks in with his coffee in hand and says, "Ah no clapping yet. Norfolk, dead Navy officer." McGee wants to know if Gibbs minds if he grabs some coffee real quick. Gibbs says he does, they have no time and tosses McGee a candy telling him to suck on this. Tony watches as McGee catches the candy, opens it and pops it in his mouth. It takes McGee a second before he realizes what Gibbs said. Tony, whose walking alongside him replies, "Suck it up McGee."

The team arrives at the crime scene and exit the car. Homicide Detective Philip McCadden says, "Well look at this, the Calvary has arrived." He walks over and exchanges comments with Gibbs. McCadden lifts the crime scene tape and in a flirtatious tone says, "Good Morning Agent David." In the same tone Ziva responds, "Good Morning Detective" as she ducks under the crime scene tape. Tony watches the exchange then gives orders to McGee and Ziva. McCadden lets the crime scene tape slip and it whacks Tony in the face and catches Gibbs. "Sorry boss, if there's anything you need, I'm right here," Tony says to Gibbs as he holds the tape up for Gibbs to walk under it. McCadden tells Gibbs about the witnesses, the couple with their baby who heard the shots but didn't see the assailant. He points to the fiancée of the victim, whose sitting on a bench nearby, back to Gibbs. McCadden says she's been there all night and is rattled pretty bad. The team begins to process the scene, taking photos and collecting evidence. "Put that insidious device away Mr. Palmer. This is a crime scene not a chat room," Ducky tells Palmer. Palmer apologizes and then tells Ducky she texted him 'yes'. Ducky is excited for Palmer. Tony says, "Palmer's em-bomber said yeah huh? Little funeral home girl. Listen Palmer, girls who work down there in the Mortuaries like to do it in the dark so what you want to do is...." Gibbs interrupts and tells Tony to focus.

McGee pulls out the victim's ID. It's Navy Captain Joseph Norton who lived in Norfolk and McGee finds a lot of cash box in his wallet. There is a ring box beside him but the box is empty. Ducky points out the multiple gunshot wounds to the torso and there was significant blood loss. Ducky starts to tell him time of death but Gibbs says they have a witness so there's no need. Ducky and Palmer prepare the Captain for his 'final voyage.' Gibbs asks McCadden if he minds if he talks to the witness. McCadden looks and sees Ziva sitting with her and says, "She's yours now, just keep me in the loop."

Ziva asks the witness if she saw the assailant's face. The woman, who has her face covered with her hands, says no it all happened so fast and it was dark. Gibbs walks up and Ziva introduces him. At the mention of Gibbs' name, the woman looks up. We see flashbacks of the woman, much younger, holding a child. Both Gibbs and the witness look a bit uncomfortable. "Jethro, this is a surprise," the woman says. Ziva is surprised to find out they know each other. Gibbs introduces Joann Fielding, his mother-in-law. "Ex. mother-in-law," Joann corrects him. Gibbs says she's Shannon's mother; "Kelly's grandmother", Joann adds. "So, when was the last time you two saw each other?" Ziva asks. "The girls funeral," Joan replies.

Back in the squadroom, McGee, Ziva and Tony are huddled together. "Alright McNosy what do ya got?" Tony asks McGee. McGee says from what he can gather Gibbs and Joann Fielding are estranged. Ziva reminds them that Joanna lost her daughter and granddaughter, and now her fiance has died in her arms and her former son-in-law is investigating, Tony and McGee should show her some sympathy. "Maybe she's cursed, like a Kennedy," Tony whispers. McGee mentions a case, which Ziva refers to the shooter being in the 'suppository.' "Depository," Tony corrects her. "That's what I said," Ziva replies. Gibbs walks up quietly and says, "I'm listening." McGee tells him they checked the cameras covering the waterfront but the cameras caught nothing. Ziva tells him it means the killer is familiar with the cameras patterns and knew how to avoid them. "Which means?" Gibbs asks. Tony says the killer is familiar with the promenade so they should start questioning employees, Marina shopkeepers and residents. McGee gives a rundown on the victim. Captain Joseph Norton, Supply Corp, 63 years old, no family, 6 months away from retirement with a spotless service record and never been married. "He was about to me, what about the engagement ring?" Gibbs asks. McGee pulls up the receipt on the engagement ring (3 carats, grade E, flawless, one minor inclusion). Tony tells him they have BOLO out on the ring and McCadden is checking in with local fences (Pawn shop owners). "That's good work DiNozzo," Gibbs says. Tony and Ziva exchange looks and Tony mouths, "What?" "You heard me," Gibbs says without looking at him. Director Vance walks up and tells Gibbs his mother-in-law is waiting in the conference room and he'd like to speak with Gibbs afterwards. "You come all the way down here to tell me that Director?" Gibbs asks. He gives instructions to the team and head up to the conference room. "Uh-oh, he complimented me twice," Tony says. "Very un-Gibbs," Ziva adds. "I better keep an eye on that guy. Don't you agree Director?" Tony asks Vance. "Is that your decision Agent DiNozzo?" Vance asks. "It's not mine to make sir," Tony replies. With a smile,

Vance says, "You got that right."

Gibbs walks into the conference room and places a glass of water in front of Joann. She comments that he's drinking the same old coffee. "Keeps my engine running," Gibbs says. The two make small talk as Joann asks about Gibbs' father and he asks about her husband. She tells him they divorced two years after Shannon and Kelly's death, he was never the same after they died. "How about you? You know you didn't have to go through this, alone," Joann says. "Oh I called Joann. You'd never call me back," Gibbs replies. "That isn't exactly how I remember it," Joann answers. Gibbs opens his notepad and begins asking questions about the night before. Joe and Joann went to a retirement party for a friend of theirs. Joe wanted to go for a walk by the waterfront and it was there he proposed. Joann was looking at her ring when a young white male in his 20's came from nowhere. Joe went for his gun and Joann wanted to help. Ziva knocks and walks in with the sketch artist. Gibbs places his hand on Joann's left arm and asks if she's okay to do this. "I want to do anything to help," Joann chokes out. Gibbs gets up and Joann watches as he walks out.

Gibbs walks into Vance's office and says, "This won't take long." "I'll be the judge of that," Vance responds. Gibbs mentions Protocol is he's related to the witness so he should step aside. He tells Vance this is where he asks Gibbs to step aside. "Okay, I'm asking," Vance says. "I'm declining," Gibbs replies. Vance is worried that Joann is the victim of another terrible crime and how it must affect Gibbs. Gibbs feels it was a long time ago and he's fine. Vance tells Gibbs he knows what pushes his buttons and this could be a problem. Vance allows it when Gibbs wants to speak off the record. "I want to do this for Shannon. She would've wanted it," Gibbs says. Vance agrees but if Gibbs' judgement comes into play just once, he'll remove him from the case.

Gibbs washes his face in the men's room. He remembers years ago, packing and leaving with Shannon and Kelly for the Marines. A younger Joann accuses him of taking her girls away from her. A younger Gibbs takes Kelly from Joann, gets in the truck with her and Shannon and drives off as a crying Joann watches. Tony walks into the bathroom and interrupts Gibbs memory. He apologizes and tells Gibbs that Detective McCadden is there. Watching Gibbs wipe his face, Tony asks if he needs anything. "You to leave," Gibbs says quietly. Tony leaves the men's room.

McGee goes over the evidence with McCadden. Tony asks what they can do for McCadden. McGee hands McCadden the witness statements and tells Tony Gibbs signed off on them. "You sure about that?" Tony asks. "Play nice kiddies, there's plenty of room in the sandbox," Gibbs says as he comes in and sits at his desk. McCadden reads Joann's witness statement. She told them she was wearing the ring when they were robbed. "You look at her fingers? She has arthritis. Try getting a size 4 ring on them," McCadden tells Gibbs. He asks what size ring Ziva wears. "Five. Every girl knows her ring size, just in case," Ziva says wiggling her left fingers in the air. McCadden asks if they ran a gun shot residue on Joann's hand. McGee explains how close she was to the victim at the time of the shooting so the test results would be useless. McGee gets a copy of the sketch done from the sketch artist so Gibbs walks to his desk. "You need help with the Bolo's?" McCadden asks. "Oh no, I think we got it covered Phil. After you," Tony says rather sarcastically. McGee runs the sketch through the facial recognition system, beginning with known felons first. McCadden remarks how they are already getting hits. "Get out of here McCadden," Gibbs says. "Happy to," McCadden replies as he turns to leave. McGee hands Gibbs the sketch and Gibbs doesn't look happy.

Gibbs returns to the conference room and places the sketch down in front of Joann. He demands to know who the man is in the sketch. Joann insists the man who shot Joseph. Gibbs tells her the man in the sketch is Kyle Buckley, a man Gibbs went to school with. Joann continues to insist it's the killer. Gibbs tells her that Kyle Buckley died 3 years ago in a car accident and demands she tell him if she saw the assailant or not.

Tony pulls up in front of a home by the waterfront. He jumps out of the drivers side, then runs over and opens the passengers door. He helps Joann out of the car and offers to see her in. She tells him she's fine, she just needs a little rest. "Well, some warm milk, a hot bath, you'll be fine in no time," Tony tells her. "I can tell your a good man Agent DiNozzo. Jethro doesn't trust many people," she tells him. Tony asks what Jethro was like when he was young. She tells him doesn't think she really ever understood Jethro, she liked him a lot and was very happy when he married Shannon. She thought they made a nice family and then everything changed. She apologizes for dragging things up, then thanks Tony as he opens the gate to let her in.

In the squadroom, Gibbs walks in and McGee tells him they retrieved Captain Norton's laptop and a few cell phones from his apartment. Two of the cell phones were burn phones. Tony wonders why a career Navy Captain needs a burn phone. "Keep talking," Gibbs tells McGee. The cell phones were purchased in Arizona and used when Norton was still assigned to South American aircraft carriers, before his transfer to Norfolk. Norton was calling Nogales, Arizona half on the U.S. border, half on the Mexico border. According to the DEA, it was a major drug smuggling point for the Cartel. McGee cracked Norton's laptop and found 3 different Zurich bank accounts dating back almost 20 years and all dormant since he was transferred to Norfolk. Tony wonders why Norton bailed on the drug business. "Because he's not taking Navy trips to South American anymore; Cartel connections," Gibbs adds. McGee found 10 years worth of encrypted emails from Mexico and wonders how Norton smuggled drugs out of there when the ships never dropped anchor in Mexican ports. "Maybe somebody wanted their money back," Gibbs says and turns away.

In autopsy, Ducky stops what he's doing and begins sniffing the air. He looks at Palmer who begins sniffing as well. Palmer asks if Ducky is smelling for the scent of almonds and wonders if perhaps the bullets were laced with cyanide. "It's your cologne Mr. Palmer, it is absolutely retchid," Ducky says. Palmer tells him he's trying out different colognes and disposable contact lenses for his big date. "Change is good Mr. Palmer as long as you are the motivation for the change," Ducky tells him. Gibbs walks in, "Whoa, smells like a french  house in here." Laughing, Palmer tells Gibbs it's him. "What are you trying to do Palmer, raise the dead?" Gibbs asks. Ducky tells Palmer to take some samples up to Abby right away and then use the Hazmat shower. "Use it twice," Gibbs says as Palmer is leaving. Ducky lifts up Norton's heart in a plastic container and remarks that he hopes Palmer doesn't end up with a broken one of those. Ducky tells Gibbs the kill-shot entered the lower left ventricle. Ducky discovered Norton's entire gastro-nomic track is inflamed. It was infected by a parasite you get from sand-flies that are common in third world countries. "Like Mexico," Gibbs says.

Abby is in a target room, reenacting the crime scene and fires three shots into the male mannequin when Gibbs walks in. "Cool huh? It's like the carnival. If you hit the target, you could win a stuffed animal," Abby says enthusiastically. Gibbs puts his hand under the chin of Burt the farting hippo, who is on the table with safety glasses and headphones. "Except I don't like stuffed animals much," Gibbs says. Abby shows Gibbs the blood spatter pattern from the gun shots she fired on the second mannequin and hands him photos of Joann's jacket. The blood spatter pattern doesn't match where she claims she was standing. Joann told them in her statement she was standing behind Norton when he and the assailant struggled and the blood spatter would be on her left shoulder, but her left shoulder is clean. The blood is on the lower right of her jacket, inconsistent with her story. Abby's cell phone goes off, she's gotten some results in.

In her lab, Abby hugs her Major Mass Spectrometer machine. "If Major Maspec was a guy, I'd totally marry him and bear his little mini- mass children," Abby tells Gibbs. Gibbs puts his arms out and wants to know what he's looking at. Abby tells him it's the results from Joann's fingernail scrapings. There is evidence from a Navy airmen's jacket with chemicals from being on a flight deck on it. However, the coat wasn't a standard Navy peacoat, it was from an officer's jacket which has epaulet's in it's fiber.

Gibbs heads off to find Joann and sits with her on a bench by the waterfront. Joann comments that it's a beautiful morning. "A member of my own family has been lying to me. Your story doesn't add up," Gibbs tells her. "Well maybe your math doesn't add up. Look, the man I loved just died in my arms, what the hell do you want from me?" Joann asks. "Respect, a little honesty maybe," Gibbs replies. Joann claims she's always given Gibbs respect. He smirks and says when Shannon was alive, maybe. "In my family you have to earn it. When those girls died, you did nothing," she says bitterly. After a moment's hesitation, Gibbs asks if Joann knew that Joe Norton dealt drugs. Gibbs tells her he had millions in drug money that he got from the same man who killed Shannon. Shannon tells him to shut up, stands and walks away. Gibbs follows saying, "Shannon, Kelly, Mexico, Norton. They all have one thing in common Joann, you." Joann slaps Gibbs in the face. "You, you are the one who took my family away from me," Joann says. "I'm a Marine. I had orders, I didn't have a choice, I had to go," Gibbs says while Joann nods her head no at him. "Because of you their dead," she tells him. "I didn't kill them," Gibbs replies. "But it was still your responsibility. Why weren't you there to take care of our girls?," she asks him. "This is about the murder of Joseph Norton, Joann," he says. "Well go do your damn job Jethro. Nothing ever stopped you before, nothing's gonna stop you now," Joann tells Gibbs.

In the squadroom, Tony is watching a movie on his PC, making faces, noises and hand movements. McGee watches Tony. "You want to learn about being a real man McGee, you gotta study the Japanese Samurai. These guys are like Gibbs, with even bigger stones and less to say," Tony says. "Is that even possible?" McGee asks as Tony's phone rings. Gibbs calls and asks what Tony is doing. Tony lies and says he was tracking down Norton's deployment history. Gibbs gives an order and hangs up. Tony tells McGee to stop what he's doing, Gibbs wants them to check some phone records on Joann Fielding, financial accounts too.

Gibbs returns to the squadroom and steps off the elevator with Tony and McGee. He asks McGee about Joann's phone records. McGee says there was nothing out of the ordinary going back 5 years except there were plenty of calls to Nogales, AZ, the U.S. side. There was only one number she called and McGee pulls it up on the plasma screen. Joann called Martin Hendricks, a retired PD, registered as a locator of missing persons. Gibbs realizes Joann was looking for someone. Tony tells him based upon financial records, Joann was paying Hendricks on and off for 2 years both in the U.S. and in Mexico. McGee tells Gibbs that Hendricks claims a 98% success rate. He also tells Gibbs that she spent almost $28,000 on Hendricks. Gibbs dispatches Tony and Ziva to go Arizona to talk to Hendricks. "Arizona, do I have to?" Tony asks. McGee tells him his grandfather retired to Arizona and it's a dry heat. Tony doesn't look encouraged.

Ziva and Tony land in Arizona and drive to Hendricks' home. Tony gets out of the car, complaining about the heat. "Aren't you hot?" he asks Ziva. "I've been told that before," Ziva smugly replies. Tony tells her he was talking about the temperature. Frustrated, Ziva tells him to stop complaining because this is what winter feels like in Israel. "Well we're not in Israel, we're in the good old US of A my good little immigrant friend, where we like to embrace central air, not melanoma," Tony says. Ziva and Tony walk to the door, Tony knocks and identifies himself. Ziva notices something is broken off in the door knob and realizes something isn't right. She takes out her gun and tells Tony she's going in but Tony corrects her that they are going in. They kick in the door and come up against a wall of plastic. They rip it down and are immediately met by a horrible smell. "This guy Hendricks knows how to live," Tony says. "Or not," Ziva replies as they see a deceased Hendricks tied to a chair. Surveying the room with heating lamps on Hendricks, Tony says, "Looks like a homemade toaster oven." "Guess we found Hendricks," says Ziva. "Well done," Tony adds. "Thanks," Ziva replies. "Not you, him," Tony says as he looks at a rather 'fried' Hendricks.

Back at NCIS, Gibbs turns off the Interrogation tape video so it doesn't tape, then goes into interrogation to talk to Joann. He tosses down a file on the table, sits and asks Joann about Hendricks. Joann asks how Hendricks is. Gibbs takes out a photo of a dead Hendricks and shows it to Joann. "Oh my god, what happened?" she asks. "it's just us, there's no video. Talk to me. He's dead, you connect the dots," Gibbs tells her. Joann claims ignorance and Gibbs wants to know who she spent $28,000 looking for. Joann claims she met Norton on vacation, lost his number when she returned and hired Hendricks to find him. "You took out a bank loan to go on a second date?" Gibbs smugly asks. "Don't patronize me Jethro," Joann replies. "You see the trail you're leaving? People are dead. Dangerous drug dealers are connected and you have no idea who you're dealing with," Gibbs tells her. Joann insists she's the victim. "This situation's got your name written all over it. I don't know exactly what you did or why you did it, but because of Shannon, I'll give you a chance. Do you want my help or don't you?" Gibbs asks. Joann remains quiet, so Gibbs picks up the file, gets up and as he leaves the room, wishes Joann luck.

Back at home, Gibbs looks at old photos of him, Shannon, Kelly and Joann. There's a knock on his door and he calls out that it's open. Attorney M. Allison Hart walks in and says, "You called Mr. Gibbs?" He offers her a beer and she accepts if he has a slice of cold pizza to go with it. When he heads into the kitchen, she makes small talk about her job as she sits and leafs through Gibbs' photos. He returns with a chair, as well as beer and pizza for Allison. As she bites into her pizza, she asks what it's all about, Gibbs made it sound important over the phone. He asks if she still does pro-bono work. "The price is right," she replies getting a smile out of Gibbs. He tells her his former mother-in-law may need her help. "Your kidding?" she asks. "No, and if anybody asks, we never talked. You okay with that?" he tells her. He hands her the file, then begins to head out and tells her to turn out the lights when she leaves. Flipping through the file, she says, "This may be the worst date I've ever had." Gibbs turns back and looks into the smile and the two exchange a smile.

In autopsy, Ducky recites poetry to Hendricks' corpse. "Love is but a sweet embrace, a whispered phrase, the graceful faith," he says. When Palmer asks if it's Tennyson, Ducky says it's his, he was in a poetry competition when he was 15 and he took second place. "Very romantic," Palmer says. Ducky tells Palmer he's trying to put him in the mood, it's a pity his embomber friend can't see the body, it's very unusual. Palmer wants to know if he can bring his date to autopsy afterwards. "No. What'd he die of?" Gibbs says as he walks in. "A dry wit," Palmer jokes. When he gets a look from Gibbs, he apologizes and says that Hendricks was baked to death. After a look from Ducky, Palmer moves to the back of the room. Ducky believes the Mexican cartel made an exception in Hendricks' case because usually their executions are more public and bloody. McGee calls Gibbs to tell him that Norfolk Sanitation found Norton's cell phone in a Marina dumpster. Gibbs asks if he found anything. Two phone calls were made to Lieutenant David Shankton. According to the Firearms database, Shankton owns the same make and model firearm used to kill Norton.

Shankton is brought into interrogation with Gibbs and Tony. Shankton can't believe Norton is dead, he had just seen him at the retirement dinner. Gibbs wants to know how well Shankton knows Captain Norton. Shankton served under Norton at the supply center for the past four years and the made in the Yucotan down in Mexico over a decade ago. "You and the Captain Margarita amigos?" Gibbs asks. Shankton says it's nothing like that. Before he joined the service, he worked fishing charters, that's how they met and Captain Norton inspired him to join the Navy. "Hmm, that's a touching story. You know we compared Captain Norton's credit card statements to yours and you know what we found? You guys were both in the same town at the same time in Mexico 18 different times," Tony tells Shankton. "It's a popular place," Shankton replies. Tony reminds him the Cartels smuggle a lot of drugs out of the Yucotan. "So what's your point?" Shankton defensively replies. Gibbs asks about his 9mm and Shankton says he did own one but someone stole it out of his house a month ago. Shankton wants to know what is going on. "We think you two had a little partnership. That's what we thinks going on. Cartel gives you the drugs, you have a little rendezvous with Norton and then he brings them back to Norfolk. Except, he wasn't really sharing the wealth was he?," Tony says. A bit teary eyed, Shankton looks at Gibbs and tells him he didn't kill anyone. "You talked to him yesterday, you knew he'd be at the party, knew he was going to propose to Joann," Tony says while putting on rubber gloves. He picks up Shankton's coat and asks if he minds if he just takes a look at it. He pulls a fiber from the jacket and tells Shankton if it matches, it puts him at the murder scene. Shankton insists someone is trying to frame him. "Well if they are, they're doing a pretty good job of it," Tony says. Gibbs gets up to leave the room and tells Tony to get the sample to Abby. Tony follows Gibbs out and Gibbs tells him to get over to Joann's and to keep an eye on her. "But boss, this is our guy," Tony says. Gibbs just looks at him and Tony says, "Okay, samples to Abby, on it."

Tony pulls up to Joann's just as Attorney Hart is helping her into her car. "Well, if it isn't M. Allison Hart," Tony says. When Tony asks if they know each other, Allison tells him Joann is her client. "Oh, well you get around," Tony replies. Allison tells Tony that Joann doesn't feel safe at her home. Tony asks Joann if she's okay. Joanna tells him she'll be fine as she gets in the car. Allison shuts the door then walks up to Tony and reminds him Joann has just suffered a terrible loss and their investigation isn't helping things. Tony asks if he could speak with her client for a minute and Allison tells him no. She says goodnight, gets in the car and begins to drive off. Joann waves to Tony as they pull away.

Gibbs walks into Vance's office and find McCadden chatting with Vance. "Is this an intervention?" Gibbs asks. McCadden jokes that Vance told him there would be cocktails. Vance asks if Gibbs is holding Shankton for Norton's death. Gibbs explains the evidence he has on Shankton. McCadden says that Joann probably knew Shankton when she spent time at Nortons house. Vance points out that Joann knew both Norton and Shankton and both were linked to the cartel responsible for Shannon and Kelly's deaths and they believe Joann set up Shankton. "Really Leon? That makes her awfully cleve. My mother-in-law, the vigilante," Gibbs says. Vance reminds Gibbs if his judgement came into play on the case. Gibbs says he'll take himself off the case. "Arrest her," Vance tells him.

In autopsy, Ducky tells Gibbs with the new information that Abby found, he decided to take another look at Norton's death. Given the way the bullets entered Norton's body and the blood spatter on Joann's waistline, she was in front of Norton and facing him when he was killed. Ducky apologizes and tells Gibbs that Joann fired the shots herself, he's sure of it.

Gibbs and Allison meet in his living room. He asks to speak to Joann alone, which Allison denies. She tells him he's out of beer and to get some light beer because the crappy beer he has is doing a number on her, as she sits beside him on the couch. Gibbs says they are family, he needs to talk to Joann. Allison says she'll advise Joann against it but it's up to her. "What are you up to Mr. Gibbs?" she asks. "You have been defending guilty people for too long," he responds. "As long as we battle each other and somebody wins, I have done my job," she says. He leans in and asks, "And that's okay with you?" She gets up, gets her stuff and asks if he really wants to talk to Joann. "Yeah, I want some answers. I want the truth," Gibbs replies. "Law school 101, the truth is overrated," Allison says as she's leaving.

In his basement, Gibbs pours Joann a drink. "Is this your personal torture chamber?" Joann asks. "The only person ever tortured down here is me," he replies. He sits and hands her a drink of scotch. He sits down across from her and tells her he knows everything. She couldn't get Shannon and Kelly's real killers, so she went after Norton - guilty by association. She puts down her glass and says she's not doing this. Gibbs points for her to sit when she begins to stand. He tells her the cartel killed Hendricks when they found him snooping around, so she found Norton. She found him, charmed him and killed him. Then Joann framed Shankton, planned it all like a pro. "Really, are you that smart?" Gibbs asks. "I'm just a mother who lost everything she loved," she responds. Gibbs tells her that Norton didn't kill Shannon and Kelly but he knows who did. He remembers back to killing the man who was responsible. "How'd it feel? Satisfying?" he asks. She hugs Gibbs and tells him what happened. The night Norton died, he proposed, then hugged her. She uses her finger to show Gibbs where she shot Norton, three times. She tells Gibbs nobody needs to know, they both did what they did. Gibbs pulls Joann to her feet and arrests her. Allison comes down the stairs and tells Gibbs he arrested her illegally and unlawfully. He interrogated her without proper citation of her Miranda rights and coerced a confession. If Gibbs doesn't stop, she'll pursue legal action. "The case will never stick right?" he asks Allison. "You just made a very big mistake," she replies. "Yeah, you won," he tells Allison. "Did I?" she asks. Gibbs takes the cuffs off Joann, tells her to take care. She tells him the same and he leaves his house, leaving Allison and Joann watching him.

Back in the squadroom, the team watches Gibbs return. As he goes to his desk, Vance walks up. Gibbs tells him that Abby matched the fibers to Shankton's coat. Vance says he had the means, motive and money. "The Lieutenant's a drug dealer, he deserves to do time," Gibbs adds. "Boss, what about your mother-in-law," McGee asks. Vance tells them, without looking, Joann Fielding is no longer a suspect or person of interest in the investigation. "Great, can we go home now?" Tony asks. As McGee, Tony and Ziva go to leave, Palmer walks up with his new girlfriend, Breena, a pretty little blond. Tony takes one look at her and says life is unfair. When she correctly identifies each of them, Palmer tells them he described them accurately and Breena has a photographic memory.

At home, Gibbs looks at the file on Joann, then tosses it into the fire.

Summary: The NCIS team stumbles upon a surprising discovery as they investigate the shooting of a Marine.

A park ranger pulls up to a secluded spot in the woods, listening to the radio. He's eating a bagel and drinking coffee. A duck sound begins squawking, it's his cell phone, his wife is calling. He argues with his wife on the phone over apologizing to her mother. Suddenly, a gun shot rings out. His wife cries out asking what it is and two more shots rings out, the last one shattering his passenger side window. He gets out of his car and looks to where the shots are coming from. A man comes out of the woods holding his stomach. Phil draws his gun and tells the man to hold it. The man drops his hand and reveals he's been shot in the stomach.

In the squadroom, Tony is ringing the water out of one of his socks into his trash can. Ziva and McGee make faces while they watch him. "Jethro working you so hard you have to do the laundry at the office?" Ducky says as he walks in. Tony tells him he stepped in a puddle. "He did not watch where he was walking," Ziva says. Tony was texting Ziva. "Tony thinks that probationary agent means I'm his personal assistant. He wanted me to pick up his latte," Ziva says. Tony has his foot propped on his desk, wiping it and tells Ziva he was running late. "That is your problem," Ziva says. "I hate rain," Tony replies. "I love it. Rain is so invigorating, cleansing, it makes the air fresh and the city sparkle," Ducky tells them. Ducky walks to Gibbs desk, places a paper on it and asks where he is. The team says they haven't seen him but believe he's in the building somewhere. Ducky leaves and Tony asks if anyone has any Talc. "Hey, would you just take your foot to the locker room please," McGee asks Tony. Ziva quietly asks if any of them have noticed a change in Ducky lately. McGee says that he seems awfully chipper of late. "Ducky seems plucky. No-one loves rain in D.C.," Tony says. "No, his ties, he's been wearing tied ties, not his bow ties," Ziva tells them. McGee tells Ziva that's very observant. Gibbs walks in and McGee tells him Ducky was looking for him. Gibbs asks what he wanted and McGee tells him he left something on his desk. Gibbs grabs it, puts it in a file folder then tells the team it's time to go, Marine shot in Rock Creek Park. Tony grabs his wet socks as Gibbs tosses him a clean, dry pair that he took out of his desk. Tony thanks him then asks if they are clean and says of course they are.

At the crime scene, the team begins to process the evidence. A 9MM handgun was found at the scene by one of the Park Police Officers. As Tony is checking it out, the Officer looks down and notices Tony has one white sock and one black one on. McGee takes the opportunity to take a photo of Tony's mismatched socks. The FBI ERT removed a slug from the Park Ranger's vehicle. The footprints are too muddy so there's nothing they can lift. Tony asks him to get all the evidence to their office. The Officer tells him it's between him and the FBI, they aren't getting in the middle of it. Tony wants to know why the FBI got involved and the Officer tells him they called them in for ballistics. The only thing found on the victim is what looks like a house key, tied to his shoe laces. "Then how did you ID Lieutenant Mayne?" Tony asks. The officer pulls out a mobile fingerprint scanner and asks why they don't have them. Tony stutters and says they are coming, they just haven't been issued yet. McGee is drooling over the new technology and asks if he can try it. The officer scans McGee's fingerprint when Gibbs walks up. He tells them the victim is in surgery and the park police and FBI can clean up, he wants to get to the hospital. The officer pulls up McGee's photo and name from AFIS Mobile and shows it to McGee. "Timothy (no middle name) McGee" he says and shows him his record for breaking into a police impound yard. McGee is upset as he thought that record was supposed to be expunged. McGee pulls up Mayne's data on his PDA. He has a wife, Leah, who lives in Woodley Park. McGee thinks there is something wrong with the Officer's equipment because according to the database, Mayne went missing in Afghanistan six years ago.

Gibbs is waiting outside Mayne's room in ICU. The doctor comes out and Gibbs wants to know when he can talk to him. The doctor tells him he's not sure because one bullet grazed Mayne's forehead and the other bullet went deep inside his abdomen. Mayne has lost a lot of blood and the slug is embedded in his spine and it's far too dangerous to remove it at this time. The doctor gives the nurse some orders, signs the chart and tells Gibbs he'll let him know if there are any changes.

Tony is sitting in the hallway with Leah Mayne. She is in disbelief after she hadn't heard from her husband in 6 years. She just assumed he was dead and can't believe he's alive, been living in D.C. and has been shot. Gibbs walks up and tells her they have fingerprint identification but he'd like for her to make a visual ID. After a moment's hesitation, she agrees. Gibbs offers her his hand and helps her up. Leah walks into ICU with Gibbs and Tony. She says it looks like her husband except last time she saw him he was clean shaven and had a Marine buzz-cut. She describes a birthmark on his left shoulder. The nurse pulls back the gown and reveals the birthmark. Leah asks Gibbs where John has been for the last 6 years. Gibbs says he doesn't know but they are going to find out. He and Tony leave and give her a minute alone with her husband. In the hallway, Gibbs tells Tony to stay there and call him if Mayne regains consciousness. "You subscribed to the DiNozzo theory, always suspect the wife?" Tony asks. Gibbs smiles and walks away. Tony looks inside ICU as Leah takes out her cell phone and makes a call.

Back in the squadroom, Ziva walks by Tony's desk and notices his sock hanging from the lamp. Using her pen, she picks up the sock and deposits it in Tony's desk drawer. Gibbs walks in asking what they have got as Ziva shuts the drawer. Three years ago, Lt. Mayne was part of a 3-man deep cover recon in Afghanistan. Mayne went missing. The other 2 men were Captain Gordon Holcomb and Sergeant Matthew Gontz. McGee hangs up the phone and tells Gibbs that Holcomb is still in the military, stationed at Quantico and he's coming in the next morning. Gontz was honorably discharged 5 years prior and they still haven't found him. Gontz went through a divorce and a series of jobs. Gibbs remarks that Gontz had trouble readjusting to civilian life. McGee is going to try and track him down through Social Security Administration.

In her lab, Abby is feeding a small puppy food. Gibbs walks in and asks what the dog is doing there. Abby introduces him to Mortimer and proudly tells him she is an SVPR - Substitute Volunteer Puppy Raiser. Mortimer is going to be a seeing eye dog one day. Gibbs gives her a look so Abby puts the dog down. She tells him the 9MM gun is unregistered and only has Lt. Mayne's prints on it. There were 2 shots fired and 13 remain in the magazine. The slug the FBI pulled from the SUV is too mangled to match but it's bigger than a 9MM. Gibbs tells her that Ducky talked to the Doctor, Mayne's wounds weren't self-inflicted. Abby follows Gibbs to the elevator and asks what is going with Ducky. She says he's acting very "un-Duck-like." Ducky leaves every day for lunch and the "Duck-man" is a creature of habit, bringing his lunch in and eating it at his desk every day. Gibbs tells her he's sure Ducky is fine then tells her to not let the dog out of her sight. Abby turns when she hears the puppy bark and sees he's got her skeleton foot between his teeth. She goes running back into the lab as the elevator doors close on Gibbs. ("No Mortimer! That's not YOUR bone!")

McGee and Ziva show up at a cab company looking for Gontz. They find Gontz and ask him about the recon mission where Mayne went missing. Gontz says he's told that story a hundred times and McGee tells him they need to hear it for themselves. The 3 men were inserted into a hostile environment on a keyhole mission, defensive weapons only. The mission was to place and recover remote target sensors and everything went according to plan until they made for the exit rendezvous and Lt. Mayne broke his leg. "How did it happen?" Ziva asks. They were going over a wall outside of a small village and Mayne snagged his K-bar sheath on some barbed wire and fell. "It just wasn't his day," Gontz says. Holcomb and Gontz stashed Mayne in the basement of an abandoned building while they went to commandeer a vehicle. When they returned, Mayne was gone and they assumed he'd been captured. Ziva asks if they still went to the exist rendezvous. "We had to. We followed mission protocol. I've never forgiven myself for leaving a team member behind," Gontz replies. The Marine Corp tore the countryside up and down looking for Mayne. Gontz asks if they are done because he has to clock in. As Ziva and McGee start to leave, Gontz calls out for them to wait and asks why all of this is coming up again. McGee tells him Mayne is no longer MIA, he showed up the day before, shot.

Holcomb meets with Gibbs, Ziva and McGee in the conference room at NCIS. Holcomb can't believe Mayne is alive and tells Gibbs the last time they saw him was when he broke his leg. "It just wasn't his day," Holcomb says. At the sound of the same words Gontz used, Ziva and McGee look at one another. Gibbs phone rings so he answers it. Tony calls to tell him that Mayne is awake. Gibbs asks if Holcomb has had any contact with Gontz since the mission. Holcomb says he lost track of him after he got discharged. Holcomb wants to know if Gontz has been told Mayne's alive. "Yes he has," Gibbs replies.

At the hospital, the team waits outside Mayne's room for the doctor. Dr. Tallridge comes out and tells them he's conscious but incoherent so he shouldn't be bombarded with questions. The doctor wants to keep him sedated so Leah asks for how long. "It's to early to tell," the doctor says. A woman comes up and asks for Gibbs. She introduces herself as Rachel Wells and says she was told by police to see him. Gibbs asks what it's about. She tells him her husband went jogging the morning before. When he didn't return, she reported him missing and showed the police his photo. She hands Gibbs a photo of her and Mayne. "You're married to John Mayne?" Gibbs asks. "No his name is Christian Wells," Rachel replies. "No, his name is John and he's my husband," Leah tells her.

Outside the hospital, Gibbs and Rachel get a cup of coffee and sit down to chat. Rachel and Christian met two years ago on the track. They just nodded heads for about a month, then finally talked and went out for coffee. Shortly after they began dating. "How long have you been married?" Gibbs asks. "Just over a year," she says. They eloped over Christmas in Hawaii. Gibbs asks if she met his family. Rachel tells him he has no family, he's an only child and both of his parents are dead. Gibbs tells her Christian's real name and that he went MIA in Afghanistan. He asks if Christian has a job. She tells him he day-trades and he'd inherited a lot of money, but that's not why she married him. Gibbs asks if she's a runner, how come the two of them didn't go running together the morning he was shot? Rachel says she's been nursing a hamstring. She gets up to go back inside and Gibbs asks if she knew he was meeting someone in the park the day before. She stops, turns and says, "No." "Know he owned a gun? He had it with him," he says. After hesitating a moment, Rachel heads back inside the hospital.

In the squadroom, Ziva tells Gibbs the district does not take fingerprints when issuing a driver's license which is why Christian Wells didn't come up on the scan. Records reflect his arrival in the Virginia-Maryland area 5 years ago but nothing prior to that. Lt. Mayne has constructed a new life. McGee has found a whole bunch of brokerage and bank accounts in his name. One mutual account alone he has over $5 million in it and his total worth is over $12 million. Over the last 2 weeks, someone ran credit checks on Christians Wells. Gibbs asks if he has a name. Peter Iger of Iger Investigations. McGee called him and left a message. Gibbs tells McGee to track down the source of the money and for Ziva to track down Iger.

At the hospital, Tony watches as the doctor checks on Mayne. When the doctor comes out, Tony says Mayne looks coherent enough and want to question him. The doctor tells Tony he's not out of the woods yet and won't allow Tony to question him. "Have you informed the wife of his condition?" Tony asks. "Which one?" the doctor asks. Smiling Tony says it's quite the dilemma isn't it. Rachel Wells comes in and demands to see her husband immediately. Dr. Tallridge tells her that her husband is still in critical condition and he can't let her in the room. Leah Mayne walks up and overhears the last part and says, "No no no no. If you let that bimbo into my husband's room I will sue this hospital and you personally for everything you've got." Rachel walks away and Leah follows. "You ever been married doc?" Tony asks. "Twice, but never at the same time," he replies.

Ziva finishes a phone call and hangs up. She's heading out to see the P.I., Iger. Ducky walks in as she's leaving so she compliments him on his tie. Ducky thanks her and begins to tell her he got it at the Metropolitan museum and tells her what it's supposed to represent. Ziva looks to Gibbs while Ducky carries on. When Ducky is done, Ziva compliments him on the 'flowers' or 'whatever' on his tie then tells him she has to run. Gibbs holds up a piece of paper and asks Ducky if he needs it. Ducky thanks him and tells him he just needs a long weekend. Palmer has autopsy covered and Ducky is reachable on his cell phone. "Duck, everything okay?" Gibbs asks. "Yeah, never better why do you ask?" Ducky says. "Half my team's worried about you," Gibbs says. "Which half?...Abby and Ziva," Ducky says with a smile and walks away.

Still waiting at the hospital, Tony takes an opportunity and slips into Mayne's room. Raising Mayne's bed, Tony says, "Rise and shine sleepyhead. How ya feeling?" "I've felt better," Mayne replies. He asks who Tony is. Tony takes note that he's thinking clearly, shows his badge, introduces himself and says, "I'd like to ask you a couple questions Lt. Mayne." Tony asks who he should call him, Lt. Mayne or Christian Wells. Mayne's heart monitor begins beeping at a faster rate. Tony tells him there are 2 women claiming to be his wife out in the waiting room. He asks where Mayne went after Afghanistan. His monitors begin beeping loudly so the nurse comes in and asks what Tony is doing in there. Tony lies and says he was fluffing Mayne's pillow, he looked uncomfortable. She kicks him out so Tony ends up talking to Leah and Rachel in the waiting room. Mayne sees both women standing there talking to Tony.

Ziva shows up to meet with Iger. She walks up to a car and hears a man talking on the phone so she knocks on the window. He lets her in the car, which is trashed with papers and food. He thanks her for meeting him there because he hasn't left that spot in 3 days. "Stakeouts are brutal," Ziva says. He asks what she needs. "Why were you investigating Christian Wells? Come on, we know you ran credit checks on him," she asks. He tells her a client hired him. Ziva asks who hired him to find out about Wells. A guy who had an internet photo of a marathon runner crossing the finish line, thought it was someone he knew. Iger pulls up the photo on his laptop and tells Ziva he found out his name by running his number through the marathon registration information. It wasn't the person his client was looking for. Iger tried to do a little more by checking into Wells finances but he didn't get anywhere. "Took ten minutes, easiest $500 bucks I've ever made," Iger says. "You should have dug deeper," Ziva tells him. "Why?" he asks. She wants the name of his client but he tells her it's privileged. She tells him it's not privileged because they are investigating a shooting and it will take nothing to get a subpoena. After a minute, Iger pulls up the contract and tells Ziva the man who hired him was Gordon Holcomb. "Major Gordon Holcomb?" she asks. "Yeah, think he was a Marine?" Iger asks. "Yeah," Ziva says.

In ICU, the team is working on Mayne who has gone into cardiac arrest. Tony and Leah walk in and watch as the team tries to revive him. "We've lost him," the nurse says. Tony looks uncomfortable at this news.

At the squadroom, McGee is going over the updated evidence about Holcomb with Gibbs. "As much as I was thinking one of the wives did it, this guy's looking awfully guilty. Now that Mayne's dead, guilty of murder," Tony says. When Mayne went missing in Afghanistan he was broke, pulling in $3300 a month. Six years later his name is Wells and he's worth over $12 million. "Where did the money come from?" Gibbs asks. McGee is only able to trace the money back 5 years from a wire transfer from an off-shore account in Nevis. "Freeze all his accounts," Gibbs says. "You got it boss," McGee answers. Gibbs thinks there's a connection with what went down in Afghanistan 5 years ago. He questions McGee about Holcomb and Gontz using the same choice in words. "It's like they were reading a script," McGee says. "Check with our agents in Kabul, see what they dig up," Gibbs tells Tony. McGee's phone rings and he hangs up. He tells Gibbs that Major Holcomb is in the lobby.

Ziva escorts Iger into the interrogation area. Iger gave up on his stakeout because the client wouldn't pay for any more time. "I hope I helped, I didn't really tell you anything new," he says. Just then, McGee and Holcomb walk down the hallway. Holcomb glares at Iger as he passes by. Ziva and McGee smile at Holcomb's reaction. "You guys are really devious," Iger tells Ziva as they walk away.

In the interrogation room, Gibbs pulls out the marathon photo of Mayne. He asks Holcomb why he hired the P.I. "I was surfing the internet, came across the marathon and thought the runner in that picture looked like John Mayne," Holcomb says. "You spent $500 of your own money to hire a private investigator?" Gibbs asks. "Yeah," Holcomb replies. "You didn't mention that yesterday," Gibbs adds. "The investigator told me it wasn't him," Holcomb says. "So when you saw the photo, why didn't you call the police? Why didn't you call us?" Gibbs asks. "I never came to terms with what happened during that Op in Afghanistan. One of my men was left behind. I knew the chances of that runner in the photograph being Mayne was slim so I didn't want to dredge everything up with the Marine Corp again. Trust me, if that P.I. had told me Mayne was alive, I'd have come to you in a second," Holcomb says.

In autopsy, Ducky is reviewing Mayne's x-rays. He feels something is amiss and Lt. Mayne is even more of a mystery. The doors open and in walks Abby with Mortimer. "Ah so this is the little rascal I've heard so much about," Ducky says as he bends down and pets the puppy. Abby wants the puppy to have a playdate with Ducky's mother's dogs. "We'll see," Ducky says. Ducky asks if she matched the slug from the Lt.'s body. "No, it was a .45, the gun they found at the scene was a 9mil but there was definitely a second weapon like Gibbs' suspected," Abby says. Ducky checked Mayne's x-rays for a previously broken leg but found no evidence. Abby is staring at him and tells him she's looking at his tie. "My neckwear seems to be a source of fascination. Do you like it?" he asks. "Yeah but you're Ducky and Ducky wears bow-ties," Abby tells him. Ducky talks to her about making a change. She tells him he looks adorable with his tie. Abby tries to get Ducky to go to lunch with her but he declines. She asks about the next day but he tells her he has plans, then dismisses her so he can call Gibbs to tell him about the lack of a broken leg. "He's up to something Mortimer," Abby whispers to the dog on her way out.

Rachel Wells has shown up at NCIS. She is upset with Gibbs and refuses to believe her husband isn't who he said he was. "Before we had a fingerprint ID, now we have a positive DNA match," Gibbs tells her. Rachel sees Leah walking on the other side of the squadroom with McGee. "Oh don't tell me they're releasing Christian's body to that woman," she says. He tells her at this point, they aren't planning on releasing his remains to anyone. She's upset because she tried to get money out of the ATM that morning and was declined and the bank told her all their accounts were frozen. He tells her that Mayne lived a fraudulent life, his parents are still alive so there is no inheritance. She wants to know how she is supposed to live and if she needs to get her lawyer involved. "I don't know, you do whatever it is you need to do okay?" Gibbs says as he walks away. Gibbs asks Special Agent Sanchez to escort Rachel back down to the lobby. "I'm not going away Agent Gibbs," Rachel says on her way out.

Gibbs ask Tony what he found out. "About the time Mayne went MIA, an Afghan drug lord claimed some U.S. soldiers stole millions from him. Maybe that's how poor Mayne became rich Wells," Tony says. Gibbs points out the other 2 men were lying about Mayne's broken leg. "Okay, let's get em back in here," Tony says. Gibbs want to get to the cab driver first because he's the weakest. "He is the weakest link and I'm on it boss," Tony says.

Gontz is in interrogation when Gibbs walks in. Gibbs slams a folder down on the table, then stands across from Gontz. "They told me John Mayne died," Gontz said. Gibbs tells him he was killed and they believe it had to do with millions. "Any idea how he got it?" Gibbs asks a bit sarcastically. Gibbs walks over, pulls information out of the file and tells Gontz they think the money was stolen from an Afghan drug lord who has been a guest at Gitmo for the past 6 years. "He claims that he was robbed by Americans," Gibbs tells him. When he gets no response, Gibbs sits down and says, "Come on man, what happened on that Op?" "You help me, I'll help you," he tells Gontz. While doing their Op, on the way out of the village they took fire from the drug lord's guards, who thought they were after the money. After they took the guards out, they found 5 oil drums full of U.S. bills. They left Mayne to guard the money while they went in search of a vehicle and when they got back, Mayne was gone. They told the story about the broken leg because they couldn't tell the truth about the money. Gontz felt guilty all these years thinking Mayne was captured because they wanted the money, only to find out he was alive.

Music is playing as a Chrysler pulls up outside someone's home. Holcomb gets out, goes to the door and rings the bell. The door is opened by Leah Mayne and she greets Holcomb with hugs and they kiss. Ziva has followed Holcomb and takes photos of the two of them together.

In interrogation, Ziva confronts Leah Mayne with the photos she took. Ziva asks how long she and Holcomb have been involved. "Involved. After Gordon returned from Afghanistan and told me about John being MIA. He stopped by to check on me every 3 or 4 months and about 3 years ago, his marriage started to fall apart and that's when things started to change between us," Leah answers. Tony asks her if the phone call she made from the hospital was to Major Holcomb.

In another room, Holcomb admits Leah called him to tell him John Mayne was alive. He knew he was alive before Gibbs brought him in. "You didn't tell us you hired a private investigator. When are you going to stop lying," Gibbs yells. "I was just trying to protect my career and marriage. Now they are both over," Holcomb says.

Leah says Holcomb stayed with his wife for the kids. Tony asked if she was still collecting her husband's military salary and allowance and Leah says she was. When asked, Leah tells them she didn't know her husband was alive until they called her to the hospital. Ziva asks where she was the morning John was shot. "With Gordon," Leah says.

Holcomb tells Gibbs he lied to his wife. He told her he had to spend the night at Quantico. He and Leah spent the night at a hotel in Falls Church and didn't know until Leah was called to the hospital that John Mayne was alive.

In the squadroom, McGee pulls up footage from the hotel. The video shows Leah and Holcomb checking out of the hotel, the Major paid in cash. "Of course he did, he's married," Tony tosses in. Ziva stares at him. McGee says the video confirms they were both in Falls Church at the time of the shooting. "You are so quick to suspect the wife," Ziva tells Tony. "Still do, he's got 2 of em. And 2 lives," Tony says. "Which life got him killed?" Gibbs asks. "I'm thinking it's the little hottie. Knew about her husband's former life and stolen money. Don't ya think? I mean she said she didn't go running because of a blown hammie but she was strutting around pretty good last time I saw her" Tony adds. "Let's find out where she was," Gibbs says. Ziva wonders about Gontz because he knew about the stolen money and could have crossed paths with Mayne. Suddenly a loud clap of thunder and lightening let loose outside. Tony whines about no more rain because the weather man said it would miss them. "What do you care about it. A little rain's not going to hurt you," Ziva says. "It'll hurt my wallet. I just had my car washed," Tony says. "That is why I never wash my car in the winter," Ziva tells them. "That's a big mistake because you got to wash off the de-icing salt, otherwise it'll eat through the undercarriage," Gibbs tells her. Tony points his finger at Gibbs, agreeing with him. Suddenly, Ziva looks down, picks up a business card and goes over to McGee's desk. She asks him to track down where the cell phone on the card was on the morning Mayne was shot. She hands him the card for Peter Iger. Gibbs asks Ziva what's going on. She tells him Iger lied to her. He told her he hadn't left his stakeout for 3 days but his car was so spotless on the outside, she could see her reflection. McGee tells her the Iger's phone was off that morning. "I do not believe it. He is always on it. That man practically has a wire growing out of his ear. He would never turn it off Gibbs," Ziva says. McGee points out he would if he didn't want to leave an electronic trail. Gibbs asks if Iger's phone is on right then. McGee pulls it up and gives Gibbs the location.

Tony and McGee find Iger's vehicle, which is locked and Iger isn't in it. Tony sees a laptop on the passenger side and wants to take look at it. McGee calls Ziva and has her pull up the cell tracker and she tells him he's at a restaurant a block away. "Perfect, I'll get the slim jim," Tony says. "Hey, hey, we don't have a warrant. I have a record and besides a slim jim is very very old school," McGee says. Tony asks if he has a better idea and McGee says he does. He puts Ziva on hold and tells Tony he built an application on his phone. Punching in the vehicle's identification number, McGee is able to hack into a database and pull down the codes for the remote for the car. "I'm glad that MIT education paid off for something McGee," Tony says. "It is pretty super isn't it?" McGee says. The two go back and forth about unlocking the door. Tony grabs McGee's phone and hits the button unlocking Iger's doors. He gets in, sits in the passenger seat and checks out the laptop. McGee tells Tony they can't look at Iger's computer. "You know you're right. You could be in here in 10 seconds and then we could be out of here. Come on, I'll hold the phone," Tony says. An older Chinese couple are watching Tony and McGee from inside the restaurant. McGee hacks into the laptop, pulls up Holcomb's file and then turns the laptop back over to Tony.

Ducky walks through a cemetery, carrying a bouquet of flowers. Ducky stops at a headstone and reads the name, it belongs to his mother. He places the flowers by the headstone and begins to talk to his mother about the opera the night before. Mortimer comes up to Ducky and he realizes Abby is there. She asks when his mother died and hugs Ducky.

Tony reads Iger's files. He has photos of Mayne running and tossing a water bottle. Tony reads a letter that indicates Iger took the water bottle and sent it to a lab for verification. Iger got an email back telling him the fingerprints belonged to Lt. John Mayne, so Iger knew the truth all along. McGee tells Ziva to check the database and see if Iger has a registered .45. McGee wonders why Iger wouldn't turn the information over to Holcomb. Tony tells him he only got his meager fee if he handed it over to Holcomb. Iger blackmailed Mayne to get more money. While Ziva's running through the database to check on the .45, McGee's cell tracking system shows that Iger is moving back towards his car. Ziva gets the hit on the database she needed; Iger owns a .45 gun. Tony taunts McGee that it's too bad they won't be able to use the information because they obtained it illegally, because McGee broke into Iger's car. "Criminal," Tony calls McGee. Ziva notices on McGee's computer that Iger is on his way back to his car and warns McGee to get out of there. Iger rounds the corner and McGee and Tony are standing by his car. "Hey, NCIS right?" Iger says. Tony tells him they have to ask him a few questions. McGee asks to see his .45. Iger nervously tells them he hasn't carried it in years, he sold it at a gun show. Tony asks Iger to put the bag down but rather than listen, Iger tosses it at Tony and takes off running. Gibbs pulls up and Iger runs into the car. Gibbs asks Iger if he tried to shake Wells down. Iger says it was self-defense, Wells shot first. Iger says Mayne stole millions, he only asked for $100,000.

Ducky returns to autopsy and Gibbs is lying on one of the tables. "When were you going to tell me Duck?" Gibbs asks. Ducky says he was going to have a service but all his mother's friends predeceased her. "When were you going to tell us?" Gibbs asks. Ducky tells him he didn't want to impose. He's surrounded by death, he wanted to deal with the personal loss by himself. Ducky tells Gibbs he sold the house, it closes the following week and he got rid of his mother's wretched dogs. Gibbs asks what he's going to do. Ducky says he put an offer in on a charming brownstone and he's been working with a charming real estate agent named Sophie. "She's quite a bit younger than myself," Ducky says. Gibbs hops off the table and walks over to Ducky and says, "So I take it Sophie is the one who doesn't like the bow ties?" "Well..." Ducky says with a knowing smile.

Summary: The NCIS team is forced to work with the CGIS agency to solve a murder of a Navy diver that was found dead after trying to find sunken treasure.

A group of Marines run through the beach. A Marine breaks rank and points out a dead body in the sand. The sergeant sees that it is the badly decomposed body of a Navy diver.

At the office, Tony frantically searches his desk for the van keys. Tony remembers that he went out for pizza and threw out the box. Tony figures the keys are in the dumpster.

After Gibbs says they have a dead Navy diver, he announces that he found the keys in the elevator.

Ducky and Jimmy arrive at the scene and examine the body. Jimmy says his girlfriend Bryn has become the union rep for the local embalmers. Ducky sees that a propeller cut the Lt.'s arm post mortem. He figures he died three to five days ago. McGee reports that the victim is a master diver named Michael Jensen based out in an experimental unit. Ducky finds a puncture wound on Jensen's wet suit. He figures that Jensen's diving partner stabbed him and left him to die.

Tony and Gibbs go to Jensen's house and notice that the door is open. Inside, they find a woman who orders Tony to drop the gun. After Gibbs arrives, another man points a gun at him. The other team announces they are investigators from the Coast Guard. The woman slaps her probie's, Kyle, head and orders him to put away his weapon.

At the office, Ziva is surprised to learn that the Coast Guard has an investigative branch. Tony asks McGee if Borin, the woman in charge, reminds him of anyone. Gibbs brings Borin into his office. Gibbs says since Jensen is a Navy officer the case is his. Borin says Jensen might be her killer. She explains they found a boat captain named Martin Lime bludgeoned to death. She explains she found video showing Jensen and Lime talking to each other at the marina. She explains that since the death was off shore, she has jurisdiction.

At the lab, Ducky says he is going to test the body's DNA to confirm it is Jensen. Ducky reports that the body shows signs that he drowned to death. Ducky says Abby is testing the diving equipment, but Abby is not herself today. Gibbs finds Abby shaking Jensen's laptop out of frustration. She tells Gibbs that Jensen's tanks were full and she can't hack into the laptop since it is password protected.

Tony looks over Abigail Borin's file and sees that she is not married. Ziva wonders if Tony is obsessed with Borin if she reminds him of Gibbs or if she is attractive. Tony discovers that Borin is behind him. She asks the team what they got on the case. McGee briefs Borin about Jensen. Ziva says Jensen rented a storage space in Alexandria. Borin asks them when they have access to the storage. Since he thinks that she is very similar to Gibbs, Tony asks Borin if she has any siblings and she says no.

Borin loads up a video of an outsourced technician named Choi. She tells the team she thinks that both Jensen and Lime were killed on the boat. Borin convinces Gibbs to join forces during the investigation.

Borin says Lime's boat seems like he was going out searching for something. Tony reports that they traced a large deposit made to Jensen's bank account. McGee states that Jensen made several calls to a woman named Missy Dawkins. Gibbs and Borin step on each other toes while ordering Tony and Ziva to check out Jensen's storage space.

McGee meets with Missy who says she dated Jensen on and off. She says after she was the runner up for Miss Biloxi, she got used to a rich life style. Missy says Jensen said he was going to come up with a lot of money soon.

At the storage complex, a man in a scooter shows Ziva and Tony Jensen's unit. They open it up and notice that it smells musty. Inside, they find ocean charts and articles about treasure hunting. Tony finds that the room is full of various items recovered from the sea.

Gibbs and Borin meet with Abby at the lab. She says she was finally able to decrypt Jensen's laptop and found a hidden folder containing emails between him and Joseph Mavrey who is a surgeon in D.C. She says they were talking about a sunken ship called Calafuego.

Gibbs and Borin arrives at Mavrey's house and meets with his wife. She tells the team that he is out of the country. They ask about Jensen and inform him that he is dead. Borin explains that Mavrey contacted Jensen multiple times. Gibbs tells the wife to contact them when she gets a hold of him. Borin tells Gibbs she thinks the wife is covering for her husband. Gibbs suggests they wait.

Tony fantasizes about pirates and their adventures. McGee tells Tony that the Calafuego could have easily had $250 million worth of treasure on board when it sunk. McGee explains Mavrey had the cash to fund treasure hunting since he had multiple patents. McGee says there are several lawsuits against Mavrey. Vance reports that Mavrey never left town. McGee finds that Mavrey logged on to his own website to broadcast an operation.

Gibbs and Borin arrive at Mavrey's clinic and meet with another surgeon who is operating in his behalf. The doctor tells the team that they haven't heard from Mavrey in over a week.

Borin tells the team that Mavrey has his partner perform the online operations. After McGee reports that he thinks Mavrey's plane took him to the Marianas Islands, Borin orders Kyle to have a plane to intercept the plane.

Ducky calls Gibbs to the lab and admits that he broke up with Sophie the other night. He says Sophie tried to change him. Ducky tells Gibbs that he thinks that Jensen's teeth broke from a seizure. He says he also found a history of hemochromatosis that would have kicked him out of the diving program. In Abby's lab, she tells Gibbs that she discovered that the formula for her favorite soft drink was changed. She says it explains why she has been so agitated. Abby tells Gibbs that she is suspicious that Jensen was using deep diving nitrox even though he was in shallow water. McGee reports that the plane that flew to the Marianas was just a decoy since it was empty.

Tony meets with Mrs. Mavrey at her house. Tony asks her for help in finding her husband. She tells him she will do what ever she can to help. At the station, Tony tells Andrea Mavery that he knows that her husband is having some legal trouble. Andrea insists she doesn't know where he is. She shows Tony a text message saying that he will sort out he legal issues after he returns to the country. Tony tells her that they suspect him of killing two people. Borin tells Andrea that if she doesn't cooperate they will have to charge her with accessory to murder.

Ducky tells Gibbs that the doctor examined Jensen several times and found no indication of hemochromatosis. Gibbs figures the body they have doesn't belong to Jensen.

Gibbs orders McGee to pull up Mavrey's medical record. They see that he had seizures as a boy and blood disorder. Later, Borin tells Andrea that her husband has been there all along. She explains the dead body they recovered is actually Mavrey. Andrea says he sent her an email, but Borin says anyone could have sent it. Andrea tells them that Joe has been taking cash out of the corporate accounts and she suspects was using it for treasure hunts. She explains that her husband was desperate because of the lawsuits.

McGee tells Gibbs that he learned that Missy bought plane tickets for herself and Jensen. After the team brings in Missy for questioning, she says Jensen texted him to get packed for a trip. Missy says she figures that she was being used. Gibbs explains she was probably a decoy. Missy says Jensen talked about a rich doctor and his wife.

Abby calls Gibbs to the lab and tells him she was able to recreate the original soft drink. Abby says that Jensen's treasure in the storage locker was gold plated. They figure that Jensen was scamming Mavrey. They figure that Jensen and Andrea were working together.

At the house, Jensen and Andrea search the house to look for the money that Mavrey hid. Gibbs, Tony and Borin arrive and tell them they know they were working together. Tony says they found the money in Mavrey's work locker. They arrest the couple for the murder of Mavrey and Lime.

At the office, Gibbs and Vance thank Borin for her work. Gibbs and Borin shake hands then depart. Tony sets up a pirate movie for Ziva to watch.

Guest Stars: Dina Meyer (Holly Snow), Adam Kaufman (Homicide Detective Philip McCadden), Jason London (Dwight Kasdan), Taylor Cole (Charlotte Cook), Jillian Bach (Emily Moss), Bruce Nozick (Harvey Grossman), Hayley Chase (Kimberly), Cliff Weissman (Nicolas Everett), Kallee Brookes (Gwen), Chris Sheffield (Vince)
Production Code: 157
Summary: The death of a Navy officer leads Gibbs and the team into the world of high-priced call girls, relying on D.C. Madam Holly Snow to help them catch a killer.

A man stumbles out of the bushes and into a street. A car full of distracted teenagers barrel down the street. The driver doesn't see him til she's on top of him. He bounces off the hood and falls into the street. They see he's been stabbed repeatedly in the back.

Tony comes in to work, peeved at McGee for standing him up. He wanted McGee to introduce him to a fellow nerd at the Air and Space Museum the night before. McGee says their plans are for the next night. Tony is further peeved at McGee for picking the sprinkles off his donut and blowing repeatedly on his coffee. McGee cancels any future plans. Ziva thinks they're like a married couple, experiencing a seven year itch.

And then it's time for Gibbs to announce the body of the week: a dead sailor in Norfolk.

He's Justin Moss, who worked for the office of public affairs.

On the scene, Duckie says the victim was stabbed with a big knife. A blood trail indicates he was walking toward his house.

The street isn't the crime scene. Gibbs sends Tony and McGee to look for it.

They wander up to another crime scene, where DC police have marked the blood trail. Detective Phil McCadden meets them outside a hotel, offering "quid pro quo, Clarice." DiNozzo appreciates the Silence of the Lambs reference.

Inside, there's blood all over the walls. (Kill Bill reference follows.) There's a wine bottle and a couple glasses. Tires squeal outside and a woman runs up. She's looking for her husband, Justin. She was supposed to pick him up, he was meeting someone there. She knows who: a prostitute.

Back at NCIS, she explains her husband was a reporter for the Navy Herald, working on a story about high priced call girls in Norfolk.

McGee finds that Moss withdrew $1,000 right before his meeting, and two other times that month, times that correspond to him meeting with a source at a bar.

Ziva and McGee visit the Herald and talk to his editor. The $1,000 payments give him pause.

In the lab, Abby shows Gibbs motel security footage that shows a woman arriving and leaving an hour later. It's too far away to tell who it is. The security footage at the bar shows he's meeting with Charlotte Cook, a woman who's been busted for prostitution but had a good lawyer who sprung her quickly, before DNA was taken. Abby's excited to tell Gibbs that Charlotte used to work for Holly Snow, the former DC madam now serving community service.

DiNozzo and McCadden discuss the best movie set in San Francisco (Vertigo), and make plans for a movie man-date. Duckie shows them there are three previous similar homicides, they have a "multiple offender." DiNozzo and his new BFF high five.

Duckie tells Gibbs that Moss didn't have sex before he was killed, he was faithful to his wife.

McGee calls to say Charlotte Cook is off the grid.

Holly gives a sexual harassment seminar and Gibbs drops by. She knows him from when he busted her.

She doesn't think Charlotte would have anything to do with murder, but agrees to help Gibbs in exchange for... something she whispers in his ear. He calls it a deal breaker.

But she tells him to put her back in business, Charlotte will find her.

Vance doesn't immediately love Gibbs' plan to put Holly back in action to bust Charlotte for solicitation. That'd let them test for DNA and match it to the hairs found in the hotel.

Abby comes upstairs to stare at Holly. Ziva and McGee are taking calls for Holly, waiting for Charlotte to call. She does. Holly gives her the date info, telling her to ask for "Eddie" at the Adam's hotel.

At the hotel, McGee preps the hotel room with bugs. Tony comes out wearing a smoking jacket. Holly sets him straight, telling him to look like he's done this before and not focus on impressing her. She tells him to ask for something off the menu. Charlotte will call Holly, not be able to reach her, then deal.

Charlotte arrives. She rips open her coat revealing a sexy dress. She slaps Tony, telling him he's been a bad boy. Holly tells him to change the menu and ask for "the spicy Canton." He hands her an envelope and excuses himself to the bathroom. Charlotte reaches Holly's voice mail.

Watching the video feed, they see her take the money and put it in her purse. They arrest her.

Tony excuses himself to take a cold shower.

Back at NCIS, Charlotte's lawyer tries to say it was entrapment. Gibbs lays out the pictures of the victims. She says three of them were clients, but not the reporter. She just talked to him and thought he was nice. She wants to talk, denying she killed anyone, but her lawyer Dwight asks to talk to her in private.

Gibbs brings Holly coffee. She tells him Charlotte's not the killer. She tells him how she got into the business: she was an art history major at Wellesley when someone approached her and she learned how much she could make.

Gibbs gets a call from DiNozzo telling him there's another victim, killed while Charlotte was in their custody.

DiNozzo and McCadden drop by the crime scene, where Gibbs calls them T-Cad, like the cute new couple they are.

The victim has multiple stab wounds, they think the killer would have to be male to subdue him. He's another one of Charlotte's clients. Tony and Phil head for a bite to eat.

Back at NCIS, Charlotte and her lawyer Dwight meet with Gibbs and Holly. Holly tells Charlotte that someone is following her. She wants the name of a john who might have been rough. Dwight tries to shut her up, but Holly shuts him down.

She tells him to look for Nicholas, a 50ish man who works for the State Department, gets jealous and plays rough. Outside, Holly tells Gibbs she knows Nicolas, but he won't believe how. They watch footage from one of Holly's speeches. She remembers a clingy audience member.

Gibbs takes Holly home.

Down in the lab, Abby reassures McGee that Tony's bromance will be over soon. He pretends not to care. Gibbs comes down and she reports she found the killer's blood in the latest victim's stab wound. McGee reports that the suspect Nicolas Everett bought a hunting knife a few months ago. Abby says it matches the victim's wounds.

The killer's blood got into the victim when he cut himself with his own knife as he was stabbing; the killer will have a slice on the heel or palm of his hand.

Tony tells Gibbs that Nicolas was arrested for domestic abuse and has many complaints against him.

Walking to grab him, McCadden rubs Tony the wrong way by calling McGee a geek. They run into Nicolas coming out and grab him but see that there isn't a mark on his hands. He didn't do it.

At the office, they find Everett's alibi checks out and his knife is clean. McGee says Holly is the only other connection between the victims. They track her ankle bracelet. Tony runs McCadden off, saying they can handle it.

Gibbs and Vance head into MTAC. They lose the GPS signal. McGee gets Holly's text messages, including one from Charlotte asking for help. But Charlotte has been admitted to a hospital under a domestic violence protocol.

Gibbs visits her and finds her face is bashed in and hugely swollen. She says it was her boyfriend. Her lawyer, Dwight. She says Dwight took her phone.

McGee tracks it from MTAC and tracks him to a foreclosed office complex. Tony stays with Charlotte while Gibbs heads out.

In an empty office, Dwight tells Holly that if Charlotte won't stop seeing other men, he's going to make sure she can't see them. He's got the knife in his hand and is standing behind her ready to pounce when Gibbs busts in shooting. Dwight goes down and Gibbs frees Holly. Dead Dwight has a deep slice on his hand.

Back at the office, Tony takes a call from McCadden, telling him there won't be a next time. Tony makes peace with McGee, calling him annoying. And Tony's juvenile. Things are back to normal.

Gibbs and Holly share a quiet dinner of steak and beer. She thanks him for delivering on her "deal breaker," a quiet dinner with a friend. "We're friends?" Gibbs asks.

Her phone rings. She asks someone what time and says she'll see what she can do. She gets off the phone and says she can explain. She says she has to go. They settle on being friends and she gives him a kiss on the head as she leaves.

Guest Stars: Isabella Hofmann (Judge Evelyn Wallace), Jackie Geary (NCIS Agent Susan Grady), Mark Allen Stewart (Stefano Delman), Daniel Sauli (Gus Templeton), Steve Talley (Bill), John Wynn (Ted), Andra Fuller (Navy Petty Officer Scott Roebuck)
Production Code: 158
Summary: When a murder occurs during an NCIS polygraph specialist's night job, the NCIS team has to find out what really happened.

A seaman out for a jog hears cries for help and goes to investigate. He's greeted by a shot to the chest.

At the office, McGee brags about his video game skills and Tony is quickly distracted by Jimmy Palmer showing photos of his girlfriend to Ziva.

Gibbs comes in to announce the body of the week: a dead petty officer on the pier.

Gibbs and Ziva try to interview two stoner dudes, who manage to report there were two shots and two dudes in a black Lincoln. The victim is Scott Roebuck. He was found in the water.

But wait, there's more! A man is strung up by chains under the dock. He's dead and was beaten to a pulp. His finger print pulls up an FBI red flag and no ID. But they recognize him as mobster Stefano Delmar. The petty officer stumbled onto a hit.

Gibbs rides the elevator with FBI agent Tobias Fornell (Joe Spano). He tells Gibbs that Delmar turned state's evidence and was helping them. And he's not the only dead witness.

In the morgue, Duckie tells them Roebuck's cause of death was drowning, he went in alive. Fornell says the other two witnesses were never found.

Duckie says that it looks like Delmar had tetanus, punctures in his feet. He was in FBI custody the past few weeks, which means the FBI has a leak.

Upstairs, the team reviews the hotels and agents on the witnesses. They find all the cases involved polygraphs done by Cooper's Hawk security.

As Fornell is talking about the benefits of polygraphs, Gibbs interrupts. The punctures in Del Mar's foot were from a tack - a common trick used to beat the machines; the pain caused by stepping on one makes accurate reads difficult.

Fornell and Gibbs go to a judge for a warrant on their clients. Judge Evelyn won't give them what they want, but offers to release Delmar's full testimony, which might have names they can follow.

At the office, McGee reports he's gotten into Cooper's computer. They find Susan Grady, who is also an NCIS polygraph examiner who was semi-stalking McGee.

Fornell and Gibbs meet with Susan, who is defensive and nervous, but mostly because Gibbs freaks her out, outside Cooper's office. As she's reassuring them that her part time job with Cooper's is above board, the Cooper's office behind them explodes into smithereens.

Back at NCIS, Abby directs a platoon of forensic examiners sifting through the evidence. Gibbs sends McGee to talk to Susan, despite his protests that she practically sexually harassed him. She bursts into tears when she sees him and bear hugs him.

Gibbs and Fornell watch the video feed of McGee talking to Susan. She apologizes to him for making him retake his test to see if he had a girlfriend. She liked working at Cooper's because unlike at NCIS, no one treated her like a lie detecting leper.

She doesn't recognize a picture of Delmar and says the internet was down for a while that morning until the techs came.

As McGee is trying to extricate himself, she looks at him moonily and suggests fate brought them together.

Vance thinks the fact Susan is the only one at Cooper's who made it out alive means that she's either very lucky, or involved.

Duckie and Palmer go over the charred bodies and Abby comes for a new batch to ID. Duckie tells Tony there were 10 victims. But there should have been 11 in the building when it blew up.

Abby is suspicious of Susan, which she swears has nothing to do with her own history with McGee.

She retreats her to lab to find McGee inflating an air mattress for Susan. He suggests Susan can stay at his place if it's a problem, but Abby decides the lab is fine.

Susan tells McGee that not all of Cooper's records were destroyed - she took some of the polygraph results home to study. But they can access them remotely.

They log on and see someone is accessing the files. They turn her web cam on and see someone in a hooded sweatshirt is on her computer in her place. Before they can lock the computer, the person grabs it. Later, Ziva and Tony return from Susan's place saying they found nothing. McGee's working on the client list.

Abby IDs the missing employee: the janitor, Gus Templeton.

When McGee sees Susan waiting eagerly for him, he asks to go out with Tony to the janitor. Tony advises McGee give Susan a shot. He suspects she has a really nice butt under those blouses.

Gus Templeton answers the door for Tony and McGee holding a bucket and looking green around the gills. He's had food poisoning for two days, but he knows someone set a fire, even though it was reported as an accident.

They bring him in. Susan is impressed with Gibbs' gut lie detector and says she can't tell at all without her machines.

Gibbs shows Gus photos of the victims and mentions the $40,000 new fishing boat Gus just bought. Gus gets scared and says someone will kill him. He had gambling debts, but some guys offered to wipe the debts out in exchange for his access card. They were going to pose as computer techs.

They find prints for Peter and Arnold Rafferty in Gus' place. Susan recognizes them as the computer techs. Apparently they were mentioned a lot in Delmar's testimony.

Then it's Abby time. She says the brothers' DNA was on both Delmar and the petty officer and in the Cooper's office. They were incinerated in blast, turned to ash, so that's why they weren't among the bodies.

Based on the fire marshal's report, the blast was very small, designed only to destroy the server. But it hit a gas main. Since Delmar's testimony against them was already on the record, Gibbs wonders what the Raffertys were trying to hide.

They find the server that was downloaded held Cooper's polygraph files. Susan says it has the results, including the questions, which are standard - the same ones they ask at NCIS. Someone volunteers that Gibbs has never taken a polygraph.

They have their guinea pig. Fornell and Vance gather 'round to watch. The questions touch on espionage and theft and Gibbs is answering "no" until "have you ever committed a felony?" He flashes back to killing the man who killed his wife and child and doesn't answer. He rips off the sensors.

At both NCIS and FBI, you lose your clearance and likely your job if you fail. Cooper's was pushing for the test to be used in more areas.

Abby has a list of the past year's clients, including senate confirmation appointees. Fornell and Gibbs recognize a name.

They go back to Judge Eveyln and show her her name on the Cooper's list. She says she went to them as a "dry run" before her confirmation hearings. They ask her to take another test.

Back at NCIS, Gibbs questions her about past cases, including one where a witness went missing. She says she doesn't know what happened to them and lying alarms go off. Gibbs and Fornell throw questions at her, asking if it bothered her to see bad guys go free even if they ratted out worse guys. She rips the sensors off and stands up to leave.

They think the Rafferty brothers did her dirty work and the explosion goof wiped out any evidence of her connection. But then there was the break-in to Susan's, which they say was the first crime she committed herself. Gibbs asks her if she really thinks she's such a good criminal that she didn't leave a trace.

Later, Susan tries to figure out if Gibbs was bluffing about the hair. Tony and Ziva tell her not to bother figuring out the ways of the Gibbs.

McGee asks Susan to dinner, but she tries to read him and decides he's just asking to be polite. So she turns him down and leaves him thoroughly confused.

Obsession

Season 7

Ducky Mallard), Sean Murray (Special Agent Tim McGee), Rocky Carroll (Director Leon Vance), Cote de Pablo (Special Agent Ziva David)
Recurring Role: Brian Dietzen (Asst. M.E. Jimmy Palmer), Rena Sofer (Margaret Allison Hart)
Guest Stars: Ashley Scott (Dana Hutton), Marco Sanchez (Alejandro Rivera), Randy Evans (Ambulance Driver), Jonathan Kerrigan (Rex Carhartt), Bob McCracken (Joshua Drewe), Kerrie Keane (Maggie Reed), Bobby Hosea (Navy Captain Austin Sears)
Production Code: 159
Summary: DiNozzo becomes obsessed with finding a woman whose brother has been murdered, while the team searches for the man's killer.

An ambulance pulls up to the emergency room at the hospital. As the paramedics, doctor and a nurse are removing a heart attack victim from the back of the ambulance, an out of control car comes toward them. The doctor and nurse rush the patient out of harms way and the two paramedics dodge the oncoming car. The car crashes into a vehicle parked beside the ambulance so the two paramedics go up to check on the driver. They discover a naval officer, dead behind the wheel.

Inside the squadroom, Ziva arrives at her desk for the day. McGee peeks his head over his computer monitor and asks her if she remembers Brenda Bittner. He tells her that she befriended Brenda and she's a Barista at Gibbs' coffee shop. McGee is reading her profile online and she posted that she is in a committed relationship with Tony DiNozzo. "Our Tony DiNozzo?" Ziva asks. McGee says it sure looks like him and has Ziva pull up Brenda's home page. As Tony walks in, Ziva asks how long it's been going on. "How long has what been going on?" Tony asks as he sits at his desk. Ziva wants to know when he was going to tell them. Dumbfounded, Tony asks what she's talking about. "That you are on a committed relationship," Ziva says. Tony laughs and says, "With who?" "The ever lovely Brenda Bittner," McGee says. Tony's face drops as he looks at Ziva, who is smirking, then he asks McGee where he heard that. "She posted it, around 7:14am this morning," McGee says. Checking his watch, Tony says he left her place around 7. Ziva asks how long they have been dating. "We're not dating," Tony laughs, "last night was it." McGee says it must've been one helluva night because she cannot wait to tell all of her friends. "How many friends could she possibly have?" Tony asks. "2,412, she is very popular," Ziva replies. Tony pulls up Brenda's profile page and pulls up the photo of the two of them together. "Oh no. Can she post this without my permission?" Tony asks McGee while pointing at his screen. McGee says it depends on his privacy settings. "Well obviously I haven't got them set right. Will you get over here McGeek and make this go away please?" Tony begs. "Tony, you know, you're getting way to old for these one-night stands. Your biological clock is ticking," Ziva tells Tony. "Men don't have biological clocks. When I meet Miss Right, I'll be ready to settle down," Tony says as Gibbs walks up behind him. "Don't ever settle DiNozzo. Dead Lieutenant, Monroe University Hospital, let's go," Gibbs says. "Was he sick long?" McGee asks while grabbing his gun and badge. "Nope, never got admitted," Gibbs replies as he heads out.

At the crime scene, McGee gives Gibbs the information on the victim. The victim's name is Lieutenant Jeffrey Wilton Hutton. His parents are deceased and his next of kin is his sister. McGee is going to try and track down the sister. "So what exactly are you looking for in Miss Right?" Ziva asks Tony as she photographs him. Tony laughs and says, "Well aside from the obvious physical requirements, I don't know, I guess she'd be a, very independent woman, intelligent, successful, professional." Ziva turns to Tony and says she just has one question, "What would this woman possibly see in you?" she asks. Tony looks at Ziva for a minute then walks away.

Ducky walks up to Gibbs and tells him the car crash was not the cause of death. "What was?" Gibbs asks. "I haven't the faintest idea. I mean there were no contusions, no obvious signs of trauma. The poor Lieutenant, I doubt he was here to visit someone but he must have had an egregious ailment. He was in a helluva hurry to get himself to the hospital," Ducky says. "I figured that out myself Duck," Gibbs says, turns and walks towards McGee. McGee tells Gibbs that Lt. Hutton's sister's name is Dana Hutton. The name piques Tony's curiosity and before McGee can finish, Tony tells Gibbs Dana Hutton is a ZNN reporter. Gibbs calls Ziva over. McGee says he just off the phone with Dana's producer who claims Dana is working at home today. Clearly intrigued with the ZNN Reporter, Tony tells Gibbs he'd really like to interview her. "Sure, take Ziva," Gibbs says and walks away.

Tony and Ziva pull up outside Dana Hutton's home. Tony goes on about the pieces of news that Dana reported on. Ziva asks what she looks like. Tony gushes about how cute she is and how she looks better in a helmet. His phone rings as Ziva reminds him her brother just died and knocks on Dana's door. Tony looks at his cell phone and sees it's Brenda Bittner calling. "Guess she's seen I changed my dating status," Tony says. "Tony you cannot avoid her forever," Ziva says in frustration. Ziva knocks on the door a second time as Tony walks towards the window. Just as Ziva says she's not home, Tony looks in the french doors and sees the living room has been ransacked. "Looks like we got probably cause," Tony says as they draw their weapons and enter Dana's home. They search the main foyer, then head up to the second floor. As Ziva heads up one more flight of stairs, calling out for Dana, Tony walks over to the piano and picks up a photograph of Dana. Ziva comes down and says "It looks like she's not here." "Well, where is she," Tony asks while staring at the photo.

In the squadroom, Ziva and Tony tells Gibbs about Dana Huttons' home being ransacked. Ziva tells Gibbs that Metro is going over Dana's home and coordinate their investigation with NCIS and she's already put out a BOLO on Dana. "Dana Hutton, she'd be easy to spot, she's pretty well known," Tony says. "Do we assume her disappearance is related to her brother's death," Ziva asks. "We don't assume anything," Gibbs replies. Tony goes over the Huttons background. Jeffrey and Dana Hutton were military brats. Their father was a Marine combat helicopter pilot who died at the age of 42 in a training exercise. They were raised by their mother who died five years ago of pancreatic cancer, Ziva adds. Both Dana and Jeffrey were overachievers. Jeffrey played water polo and LaCrosse at the academy, did a tour at the Pacific, spent a year at the Pentagon before he was transferred to Navy Information Operations Command. "NIOC, secret stuff. Wonder what he was working on," Tony says. Looking at his watch, Gibbs says he'll know in three minutes because he's talking to Hutton's CO in MTAC. Gibbs sits down at his desk and Tony pulls up some photos of Dana on the big screen. "Dana, impressive woman. Won a piano competition when she was 13 year old. Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Georgetown before joining ZNN at the age of 22," Tony says. Ziva watches Tony as he talks about Dana. McGee walks in and tells Gibbs he found nothing at Jeffrey Hutton's residence and dropped off Hutton's laptop with Abby. Gibbs gets a phone call and says he's on his way. He stands up and says, "Let's go McGee." As they leave the squadroom, Tony remains staring at Dana Huttons' photo on the big screen.

Down in autopsy, Jimmy Palmer is sewing up Lt. Jeffrey Hutton's corpse. "Multiple organ failure but no apparent reason," Ducky says. "You seem perplexed Dr. Mallard," Palmer says. Ducky says he is, he was reviewing Lt. Hutton's physical, which was done only 1 week prior to his death, and Hutton was in perfect health. Palmer grabs a few sample jars of blood and tissue and is going to take them up to Abby. He wants to know of Ducky wants her to look for anything specific. Ducky says he has nothing specific to tell her, or Gibbs, when he comes calling, as he undoubtedly will.

In MTAC, Gibbs and McGee are chatting with Hutton's CO, Captain Austin Sears. Sears wants to know if Hutton's death was an accident. "I don't know, what can you tell me about him," Gibbs asks. Sears tells him Hutton was a good officer, hard working, smart, maybe to smart. Sears describes Hutton as a politician, he knew how to work the system and had a master plan, his career wasn't going to end in NIOC. "What was he working on?" Gibbs asks. "Classified project," Sears replies. Gibbs smirks and says, "We've got clearance." Sears says he can't let him know about the program unless he hears from SecNav himself. "I'll make the call," Gibbs says. "I suggest you have your Director do it," Sears says then makes the sign to end the call. "Gee what a sweet guy," McGee says. Gibbs asks if DiNozzo has a buddy at NIOC.

Tony and Ziva head over to the television station to talk to one of Dana Hutton's boss, Rex Carhartt. Once Rex learns of Dana's brother's death, he tells them an old mentor of Dana's was killed in an accident two weeks ago. Ziva asks if it was unusual for Dana to not come in. He tells them it is and she's been distracted lately as she's the executor of her friend's estate and had to get involved in the sale of the business - an old book store on Dupont Circle. Tony asks if Dana shouldn't be checking in with Rex because he's Dana's boss. "I'm not her boss, I'm her Segment Producer. She's the star, gets to choose her own assignments," Rex replies. With a smirk aimed at Tony, Ziva asks what Dana was working on right then. Dana was working on a story on private military companies but had started researching the old Soviet KGB. Rex told Dana it was yesterday's news. "But you couldn't talk her out of it," Tony says as he walks towards the stage where Dana films her show, then sits down in Dana's chair. Rex says when Dana's passionate about something, she could lose objectivity. Ziva asks Rex about Dana's personal life, but he says he wouldn't know, they were all about work. Tony inquires if Dana had a boyfriend and Rex says he doesn't know. With a flirtatious smile, and getting one in return, Ziva hands Rex her business card and tells him to call if Dana shows up or he hears from her. Tony gets up and tells Rex they'll find their own way out.

In Vance's office, he is sitting at his desk with Gibbs standing by the side of his desk. Across from Vance sits Alejandro Rivera, who is with the Justice Department in Mexico. Alejandro is in town to help set up an international law enforcement task force. "I'm sure you know our country is in the middle of a horrible drug war. We are desperate for help. It is imperative that our countries share techniques and intelligence," Alejandro tells Gibbs. "I'll do what I can do," Gibbs responds. Vance's phone rings, he answers it and tells the caller to send her in. To Gibbs' surprise, in walks M. Allison Hart. Allison greets Gibbs with a huge smile and a hello, but he just looks away. Vance informs Gibbs that the State Department has appointed Ms. Hart as Alejandro's legal counsel. With a chuckle, Gibbs says, "Of course they did." Alejandro says he met Allison in Mexico City and they worked well together. Allison says Alejandro was helpful to her in securing Colonel Bell's release from prison. "Maybe we shouldn't be cooperating Leon," Gibbs says. Allison and Vance smirk while Alejandro looks puzzled. Allison tells Alejandro, "Mr. Gibbs has a strange sense of humor." Gibbs notices a "Temp" NCIS badge clipped to Allison's dress. She tells him that she's going to be spending a lot of time on the project so Vance has kindly given her temporary employee status. Vance just grins but Gibbs does not look amused.

The elevator bell dings, as Palmer exits and then enters Abby's lab. "Abby, how are we doing on Lt. Hutton's tox screen?" he asks. "We? Get in line Palmer.," Abby says then tells him she's ruled out all common viruses, biological, agent, and drugs. She tells him to "go, scram, leave me alone" then vents how McGee is bugging her for the contents of Hutton's laptop. Poor Palmer looks confused as she tells him the laptop is a terabyte and asks if he knows how big that is. The elevator bell goes off again and Palmer is saved from responding when Tony walks in. "She's in a foul mood, again," Palmer tells Tony. "Palmer, I have guns in my ballistics lab and I know how to use them," Abby says. Looking at Palmer, Tony walks up and gives Abby a hug. Palmer looks confused, then Tony steps back and asks Abby about the finger prints lifted from Dana Hutton's condo. Calmly, but frustrated, Abby says she has gotten them but hasn't had a chance to look at them, she will call Tony when she has answers. Tony looks at Palmer, who smiles at the change in Abby's attitude. Suddenly Abby flings her hands in the air and demands both of them get out. When the duo reach the elevator, Palmer congratulate Tony and they do a round-about high five. "For what?" Tony asks. Palmer tells Tony for hooking up with Brenda Bittner, then wants to double date with Tony and his 'girlfriend.' as the elevator doors open, Tony steps in and smiling, Palmer asks Tony if they have plans for Saturday night.

Gibbs and Allison Hart come downstairs from Vance's office. Ziva sees them together and whispers for McGee to look. Allison tells Gibbs, "I'll see you tomorrow Mr. Gibbs. This is going to be fun, at least for me." Gibbs looks at Ziva and McGee then asks if they have anything. McGee had been running a check on Dana Hutton's credit cards but so far there has been no activity. Gibbs wants to know if Tony has made contact with his buddy from NIOC yet. Gibbs asks where Tony is and Ziva says, "I have no idea."

Upstairs in the conference room, Tony is watching footage of Dana Hutton interviewing author, Joshua Drewe, on the laptop. He then flips over to some more footage of her in Afghanistan.

Tony walks into the squadroom and Gibbs wants to know if Tony has spoken with his friend at NIOC. Tony says they've been playing phone tag. Gibbs just stares at Tony. Ziva tells Gibbs that ZNN is going to break the story on Dana Hutton's disappearance. "I'm surprised they held it this long," Gibbs says. Tony walks over to McGee, squats down by his desk and asks McGee to give him a number. "What number?" McGee asks. "Dana Hutton," Tony replies. "Give me the number please," McGee says. "I've been monitoring her cell phone Tony and it's not on," McGee tells him. "Give me the number or I'll Gibbs slap you," Tony threatens McGee. McGee gives in, writes the number down and hands it to Tony. Tony gets up and tells Gibbs that there is a bookstore Dana used to hang out at when she was a kid. "How do you know that?" Ziva demands to know. "It's called research, David" Tony replies. The owner of the bookstore was a friend of Dana's who died in a car accident and Dana is the executor of the estate, trying to sell the store. Tony thinks he should go and check it out. "Friend, killed accidentally. Brother, healthy, dies of unknown causes. She disappears. I think we're setting a record for coincidences," Gibbs replies, then gives Tony the thumb indicate he's to go ahead. Gibbs wants Ziva to get the details on the car accident.

Ducky heads into autopsy in the morning and turns the lights on. Palmer has Lt. Hutton face down on the examination table. "May I inquire as to what the Lieutenant is doing back on the table Mr. Palmer?" Ducky asks. Palmer stumbles over his words for an excuse, then finally asks if Ducky is upset. "Don't be silly, I admire your initiative," Ducky says. Palmer smiles from ear to ear. Removing his hat and coat, Ducky asks if Palmer found something. Palmer found a 1 inch mark on the Lieutenant's left shoulder in the x-ray films. He noticed a corresponding mark on the exterior of the skin so Ducky wants to find out what it is. Palmer tells Ducky he has prepared all the instruments for him. "No no, this is all yours Mr. Palmer," Ducky says while putting on his exam gloves. "Allow me to assist," Ducky adds while handing Palmer the scalpel. After making a small incision where the mark on the shoulder is, Palmer looks up to ask for the tweezers, just as Ducky hands them to him. Using the tweezers, Palmer reaches into the incision and pulls out a small round, silver ball. "What on earth is that?" Ducky asks.

Looking at the ball on her computer screen, Abby says, "It looks like a teeny tiny bowling ball." Abby doesn't know what it is and Palmer tells her he and Dr. Mallard are baffled to. "Okay, well, I will add this to my to-do list," Abby says dismissing Palmer. He just stands there and smiles until Abby hits the remote, blaring her music across the lab. Palmer grabs his ears then heads out the door just as the elevator bell rings, the doors open and Allison and Alejandro get off the elevator. Allison calls Abby's name a few times, then yells it when she realizes Abby can't hear over the music. Abby turns the music down, then grits her teeth and says, "Oh, Miss Hart." Allison begins to introduce Alejandro but Abby already knows who he is because she read it on the inter-office email. Alejandro tells Abby he's been looking forward to meeting her, she is a legend in forensic science. Abby is pleased and a little embarrassed. Allison was wondering if Abby could give Alejandro a quick tour of her lab. Abby tells him she would love to but she's just way to busy. "Mr. Rivera is on a very tight schedule, he's only going to be in Washington for one more day," Allison says sweetly. Abby glares at Allison and says, "Well maybe next time." Before an argument begins, Alejandro says he Abby is clearly busy and he appreciates her work ethic and wishes he had someone like her on his team. Abby shakes his hand, thanks him and does a little curtsy. She then glares at Allison who just smirks in return. As they leave her lab, Abby turns the volume of the music back up loud.

Tony walks up outside the bookstore and listens to a young man playing his saxophone for music in front of the store. He compliments the man's music, then tosses money into the case.

Maggie Reed, the Realtor selling the store, walks up and introduces herself to Tony. Walking inside, Maggie disables the alarm and says, "I hope your not insulted but you don't look like somebody who would be interested in buying a used book store." Tony tells her he's not, he's NCIS while he flashes his badge. She realizes he is there about Dana and tells him he heard about Dana's disappearance and her brother's death on the television that morning. Maggie wonders what is going on. She says she tried to call Dana a few times the day before. "How well do you know them?" Tony asks. Maggie says she didn't know Jeffrey but she was a patron of the book store and had seen Dana in the store over the years. The owner, Charley Basum, was like a father to Dana and she took his death very hard, Maggie tells Tony. Tony points to some photos of a man behind the counter and asks if that's Charlie. Maggie confirms it is. "I understand Dana is handling his estate," Tony says. Maggie says Dana approached her the previous week at Charlie's funeral and asked if she would help with the sale of Charlie's business. Charlie's will instructs that the proceeds from the sale go to a charity promoting literacy for children. "Is this place worth much?" Tony asks. Maggie tells him if he were a potential buyer she'd say yes, but to be honest, there's less than a year left on the lease and everyone's getting electronic readers, books are a dying business. Tony walks into the back room, points to the couch and says, "Dana used to curl up on this couch." "You know her?" Maggie asks. Tony evades the question and heads into the back room to check out the office. He discovers the safe is wide open. He asks Maggie if the safe is always open. Maggie has no idea and doesn't believe Charlie had much in value to lock up.

In MTAC, McGee and Gibbs hook up with Captain Sears again. "Captain, you hear from SecNav?" Gibbs asks. "Yes," Sears adds reluctantly. "So, what was Lt. Hutton working on?" Gibbs asks. Hutton was working on a report for a very select group of people, the Joint Chiefs. "About?????" Gibbs asks. "Private military companies. They got a lot of negative reaction to the Military's contracting out operations. The Lt. was putting it on paper that the Military cease and desist any such arrangements," Sears says. "I'll send you a report by courier," Sears says. "I appreciate it," Gibbs replies. "Now, what can you tell me about Lt. Hutton's death?" Sears asks. McGee whispers in Gibbs ear that they have to go. Sears does not look pleased when Gibbs says, "Got ta go Captain," signs to cut the transmission. McGee points out that Dana Hutton was working on a report on private military companies. "Add it to the list of coincidences," Gibbs says.

Gibbs walks into Abby's lab and she informs him that Lt. Hutton was murdered. "How?" Gibbs asks. They show Gibbs the small silver ball that was embedded in the Lieutenant's shoulder. "What is it?" Gibbs asks while putting on his glasses. "It's a spherical metal pellet," Ducky replies. Abby grabs Gibbs arm to bring him to the big screen and tells him it's 1.5 in in diameter and 2 holes were drilled into the ball. The ball was filled with Ricin, the deadliest toxin known to man. This is an old KGB weapon, Ducky tells Gibbs.

In Vance's office, Gibbs updates him on the cause of Lt. Hutton's death. "KGB? It's been SVR since '91," Vance says. "Well someone's been out there using one of their old tricks," Gibbs replies. Ducky rehashes the infamous umbrella murder of 1978 where Bulgarian dissident Georgi Markov was killed by a poison dart filled with ricin and injected into his system from an umbrella. "How long does it take ricin to kill Duck?" Gibbs asks. Ducky says three or four days, but Hutton wouldn't have known what was wrong with him and even if he'd made it to the hospital they could not have helped him. "There is no antidote," Ducky tells Gibbs and Vance. "Thank you Dr. Mallard," Vance says and dismisses Ducky. After Ducky leaves, Vance sits down and says to Gibbs, "Yesterday morning we were talking a simple car accident, now we're talking KGB assassination." He asks Gibbs if he has been able to connect Lt. Hutton's murder with the disappearance of his sister. Gibbs says, "Maybe. Se was preparing a piece on private military companies. Her brother was preparing a paper recommending to the Joint Chiefs our government cut off contracts with them." "I'll make some calls," Vance replies.

Gibbs is working in his basement when Allison walks downstairs. "It's one o'clock in the morning, what are you doing down here?" she asks Gibbs. "That's none of your business," Gibbs replies. "I thought you were going to start locking your front door," she says as she walks towards Gibbs. "Well if I did that I'd have no social life. What are you doing here M. Allison Hart?" Gibbs asks. "You didn't seem happy with my new status at NCIS," she replies. "Aw, and I thought I covered that so well," Gibbs sarcastically replies. She sits down on the sawhorse and asks him, "Are we, going to have a problem?" Gibbs finally looks at her and says, "It came from the top, I take orders." She smiles, looks at him and says, "Since when?" "You know what, I need to finish this. You never know when I may need to saw a lady in half," Gibbs says. "I heard you were looking for Dana Hutton," she tells him. "Is that why your here?" he asks. "No," she responds. Gibbs says Allison knew Dana was investigating private military companies like the one owned by her biggest client, Colonel Bell. "Don't go there Mr. Gibbs," she says. "He's the one who pays for your $500 shoes," Gibbs tells her. Allison replies, "I take offense, they cost $1200. I ask because Dana is a friend." Gibbs looks at her and asks, "How close?" Close, is all she'll say. When asked, she tells Gibbs the last time she saw Dana was a week ago. Dana wanted to talk because she'd just broken up with her Producer boyfriend. "And if you want any more out of me, your going to have to ply me with liquor," Allison says.

Tony heads into the ZNN television station and confronts Rex, poking him in the chest, sending him staggering back a few steps. Rex asks him why and Tony responds, "Because there are consequences for misleading federal agents." "What are you talking about?" Rex asks. "Why didn't you tell me you were involved with Dana?" Tony asks back. "I really didn't think it was relevant or any of your business," Rex says. Tony replies, "I'll determine what's relevant. How serious is it?" Rex felt it wasn't that serious because Dana is a Pro, she knows how to work it and use it like the best of them. Grinning, Tony asks, "She use you?" "Yeah, I let her, and enjoyed it. You know she was even more telling off screen..." Rex responds but doesn't get to finish as angrily, Tony grabs Rex by the jacket collar. "What the hell is the matter with you?" Rex asks. Tony just glares at him, lets go of Rex's jacket, then leaves.

Back at NCIS, McGee exits the elevator and Allison Hart is standing there talking on the phone. McGee continues into Abby's lab and watches Alejandro and Abby flirting. Alejandro offers to be Abby's host if she ever visits Mexico. Abby tells him she can't wait as Alejandro picks up Abby's hand and kisses it, then leaves. As he passes McGee, he wishes him a good morning and leaves the lab. McGee walks up to a beaming Abby and asks what that was all about. Abby tells him that Alejandro has invited her to Mexico to speak at a symposium. "Don't you love that word?" she says. "Alejandro?" he asks. "Symposium," Abby replies. "Your not going to go are you?" McGee asks. "Are you kidding? Why wouldn't I go," Abby replies. McGee bets that Alejandro just wants to find out how many tattoos Abby has. "Maybe I have a new one that your never going to see," Abby taunts. McGee finally asks why Abby called him down to her lab. Abby has cracked the encryption on Lieutenant Hutton's hard drive. Lt. Hutton was using his top secret clearance to access old FBI and CIA transcripts. The document Abby pulls up to show McGee is a debriefing of a KGB defector from 1985. "Year of the spy," McGee says. "Spies have their own year?" Abby asks. McGee explains that in 1985, more spies were arrested than any other years so the media dubbed it "Year of the Spy. Abby wonders if the Lt. was accessing secret transcripts as part of his work with NIOC but McGee says the CO, Sears, never mentioned it. "So, he was doing it on his own?" Abby asks.

In the squadroom, Ziva hands Gibbs the autopsy report and file on Charley Bascom. The report says Bascom's death was definitely an accident. A car driving in the opposite direction, blew a tire, crossed the center divider and hit Bascom head on. Bascom was pronounced dead at the scene. "What did you find?" Gibbs asks Ziva. Ziva pulls up information on Bascom on the big screen. Bascom was a naturalized citizen, who immigrated to the U.S. from Canada in 1963. His birth certificate indicates he was born in Hamilton, just outside of Toronto but he died at the age of 3 from Meningitis. Gibbs whispers, "Bogus papers." He hands the autopsy report to Ziva and tells her to get it to Ducky. Ziva turns around and asks Gibbs if he has talked to Tony that morning. "Late last night," Gibbs says as he leans over his computer keyboard. Ziva tells him that Tony went to ZNN that morning. When she doesn't continue, Gibbs looks at her and asks, "What?". She tells him Tony got physical with Dana's producer. "I think he may be obsessed with this woman," Ziva tells Gibbs.

Tony returns to Dana Hutton's home. He stands in the living room and stares at a framed photograph on the mantel. He calls Dana's cell phone and introduces himself, telling Dana they have been looking for her for two days. He sits down at the piano bench and continues leaving his message saying, "Please trust me. I know this is going to sound crazy but, I feel like I know you. You can call me at this number." He hangs up his phone and begins to play a few notes on the keys when he sees the figure of a woman walking through the open front door. When he hears a creak, Tony calls out, "Dana?" Ziva walks in, leans against the wall, "I'm surprised you did not call me Laura. Cop falls for a missing woman, 1944, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews" "You making a film reference, go figure," Tony replies. "Tony, this is a murder investigation, this is not a movie. Dana Hutton is missing and may be dead like her brother. She's not just going to walk in through that door and into your life," Ziva tells him.

Gibbs heads into autopsy to chat with Ducky about his findings on Charley Bascom. Ducky points to some photos he has spread out on the table and tells Gibbs his esteemed colleague did a thorough and well-documented autopsy on Bascom. Since the cause of death was blunt force trauma to the head, there were a lot of detailed photographs of Bascom's head. Ducky enlarged one photo and asks Gibbs if he notices anything unusual. "Yeah, it's pink," Gibbs replies. Bascom has what is called "pink tooth" - it's caused by the use of an arsenic compound. Ducky says that while Bascom may have emigrated from Canada, he'd stake his reputation that Bascom was born in the Soviet Union.

The team meets with Vance in MTAC and he debriefs them on some information. During the height of the Cold War, there was a legend of a man named Yuri, who was a Mole in the Washington area and operated as "The Banker." He funded KGB Ops in America. Some doubted his existence but most believe he was real and worked up a profile; Charles Bascom fits the profile perfectly. "Used bookstore would be a perfect front," Gibbs says. It's believed kept over $10 million U.S. in a slush fund and once the Berlin wall was torn down, the KGB was disbanded, they believe Bascom was forgotten about in the ensuing chaos, Vance tells them. "Charlie was Yuri when he was a spy. Kinda like Kevin Costner's landlord in the film "No Way Out", Tony says. "What does that make him Dana Hutton and her brother's handler?" McGee asks. Tony chuckles and says, "Are you suggesting Dana is a spy?" "Look I'm just saying, if I was currently writing a novel, I could not come up with a better cast of characters," McGee responds while Vance and Gibbs listen intently. "You got a navy officer, Lt. Hutton, with top secret clearance," McGee continues. Tony won't believe it so Ziva steps in and reminds Tony Dana is on a first-named basis with the President of the United States. "You two are both way off based," Tony argues. "If Chuck Bascom was Yuri, then what happened to the money after he died in the accident? Leon, maybe that's what this is all about," Gibbs says. Gibbs stands up and tells his team, "Come on, we're going to the bookstore." The team gets up quickly, except for Tony, he hesitates, the finally follows as Vance watches them leave.

At the bookstore, the team unpacks their gear and heads into the store. Tony thanks the Realtor, Maggie, for coming so quickly. She lets them in (doesn't unset the alarm this time) and asks if they've had any word from Dana. "No ma'am, but we'll let you know when we're through," Gibbs replies. Gibbs has McGee check out the vents when Tony's phone rings. Tony looks at his phone, then excuses himself to take the call outside. Gibbs tells Ziva to check behind the books. "There have to be thousands of them," Ziva says as Gibbs head off to look around. After a thorough search, McGee finds nothing in the vents, then asks Ziva where Tony is. "I have not seen him since he got the phone call," Ziva answers. "He's probably talking to his girl, Brenda Bittner," McGee remarks. Ziva laughs and then opens a cabinet to look in it. Gibbs is in the office, looking in the safe. He pulls out his knife and lifts the material on the bottom shelf of the safe and finds a microfiche. Gibbs tries to explain to McGee what it is "it's kinda of a 1070's things like the memory plug you put in the side of the computer". "Oh a flash drive," McGee says. "Yeah, yeah, one of those," Gibbs says.

That night, Tony is waiting by the water when Dana Hutton shows up. "I wasn't sure you were going to show," he tells her. "You were very convincing on the phone. So, um, you said you could hep me?" Dana replies. "Yeah. Where have you been?" Tony asks. "Hiding. I got a panicked phone call from my brother. He told me not to talk to anyone, he was on his way to the hospital but wouldn't say why. I heard on the news that he had died..." she says. Tony tells her her brother died of ricin poisoning, that he was injected with a pellet and probably didn't know it had happened. He tells her it's an old technique developed by the KGB during the cold war. Dana looks upset and leans over the side railing and Tony puts his hand on her back and asks, "Are you alright?" She looks at him, then his hand and Tony removes his hand. Dana asks if the doctors couldn't have helped him at all and Tony tells her that there is no antidote. She asks what else he knows. Tony tells her about Charley Bascom's "Yuri" identity. He realizes she already knew this. She tells him after Charley died, she had a locksmith open the safe. Inside she found Russian documents, codes and she was baffled and didn't understand why he had them. She confided in her brother what she had found. Jeffrey used his top secret clearance to research the documents and she started researching old KGB. "You could have just gone to the FBI," Tony says. Charley was like a father to her and she didn't want to expose him as Yuri until she was absolutely sure. "Was the money in the safe?" Tony asks. "No, but I know where it is" she replies.

Gibbs is waiting outside the bookstore when Tony pulls up with Dana Hutton. Gibbs helps her out of the car and greets her. "Tony actually found Dana Hutton," McGee says from inside the bookstore. "She is even better looking in person, huh?" Ziva replies. The trio enter the bookstore and Tony tells everyone the money is hiding in plain site. Charley converted the money into something he treasured even more, Dana tells them. Dana puts on gloves as she handles a leather bound, first edition of the works of William Shakespeare, published in 1623. In today's market, in auction it could fetch $6 million dollars. The other item is the complete, first edition, Gutenberg bible of 1456, covered with a "Dictionary" cover to disguise it's true 'identity'. It's printed on Vellum. According to the Internet, this book was stolen by the Nazi's in WWII and sold on the black market in the early 1990's for $2.5 million and is worth 10 times that now. Dana points out that many of those books in that particular case are of significant value. "Helluva story," Tony says and Ziva just looks at him. "Too bad it doesn't have a happy ending, Jeffrey's dead," Dana says. "Who killed your brother?" Gibbs asks. "I don't know. Probably the same person that killed me," Dana tells the shocked team as she reveals the same round marking on her right forearm. Tony just stares at her as she looks at him and tells him, "I had to find out what happened to Charley. Sometimes I just get into a story, I don't stop."

Gibbs walks into Vance's office. "You made us look good with the FBI, Fornell says he owes you dinner," Vance tells Gibbs. Vance drops the file on the table and tells Gibbs the Microfiche was Yuri's accounting ledger. It contains dates, names and the amount of every penny Yuri dispensed for the KGB from the day the bookstore opened business until the last payment made in 1991. Most of the people listed are dead, in prison or were called back to Russia and all of them would have known about the money, maybe one of them is the killer, Vance says. The FBI is picking up the remaining few KGB members. Gibbs hands back the folder and says, "Yeah, we'll there is one name on there I'm gonna pick up."

Gibbs and Ziva meet Maggie outside the bookstore. "Need to get in again huh?" Maggie asks them. "Actually we found everything we were looking for. Dana Hutton, the money, Yuri's files," Ziva tells a shocked Maggie. Gibbs tells Maggie that she could have gotten her money after Charley Bascom died but she got greedy. In Russian, he tells her she is under arrest for the murder of Lt. Jeffrey Hutton. In Russian, she tells Gibbs his Russian is very good. They handcuff her and take her away.

Tony walks down into Gibbs basement. "How'd it go?" Gibbs asks him. "Well, she went peacefully," Tony says while picking up a hook and playing with it. Gibbs looks at him and asks if he's okay. "Not really," Tony says and sits down. Gibbs pours nuts and bolts out of a jar and pours a drink. "I broke Rule #10, again. Never get personally involved on a case" Tony says. Gibbs hands Tony a drink, and he sips it. "Yeah, that's the rule I've always had the most trouble with," Gibbs tells Tony.

Summary: The NCIS has to find a serial killer, and their investigation leads them to a surprising revelation. Meanwhile, McGee tags along with Abby to the south of the border, where Abby has to make a speech.

up and pick something out if I were you," his grandfather replies. The man tells his grandson he can 'break' anything he wants for his birthday and to look around and let him know if something catches his eye. The young boy sees a car already in the compactor ready to go. "Oh boy grandpa," he says with a huge smile on his face. The grandfather figured he'd choose that one so he already has it 'locked and loaded' for compacting. He hands the boy a pair of safety glasses, then the control panel for the compactor. He tells his grandson the most important thing is he is not to tell his mother what he's doing. "What are you waiting for, so hit it," the grandfather tells him. The boy presses the button to begin crushing the car while his grandfather takes photos of him. "Does it hurt?" the boy asks. "No," his grandfather replies. "Are you sure?" the boy asks. "Yeah, it's a car it doesn't feel anything," the man responds. "Then why is it bleeding?" the boy asks. The man looks at the car and sees blood seeping out from the trunk, rushes to the boy and turns off the compactor.

The elevator at NCIS opens into the squadroom, Ziva is holding up a book on the "Bill of Rights" and reciting information for her upcoming citizenship test. "Yeah well you get a life to you little pipsqueak," Tony shouts angrily at his computer. "Speech. Clearly they did not have Tony in mind when writing that," Ziva says when she arrives at her desk. Tony gets frustrated when he's 'nexted' by another person in his online chat. "What's he doing?" Ziva asks. "Annoying me," McGee replies. "Besides that," she says. McGee explains that Tony is doing a random chat, it's a video website that connects you to random strangers. "Come on," Tony shouts as he's 'nexted' again. McGee explains that if the person doesn't like you, they hit next and move on.

"Let me guess, Tony keeps getting nexted? Ha, this I must see," Ziva says while McGee grins. Tony explains the longest he has gone is 10 seconds. Approaching his desk, Ziva says, "Well perhaps your not as interesting as you think you are." "This coming from the woman who reads the Bill of Rights for entertainment," Tony says. Then he tells her to back off and go away as she leans in to review his computer screen. A set of young girls pops on Tony's chat screen and he greets them. "Ew, your old, what are you like 40?" one of the girls says, then Tony gets 'nexted' again. "Why would you want to talk to complete strangers anyway?" Ziva asks. Tony feels like he needs to 'up' his game and do something like finger puppets, or a furry barnyard animal. He snaps his fingers, yells "I got it" then runs over to his filing cabinet and takes out a pair of silly joke glasses (black rimmed ones with bushy eyebrows and a fake nose). After putting them on he turns around and faces Gibbs. "Hi Gibbs. This isn't what it looks like," Tony tells an amused Gibbs. "Yeah," Gibbs says. "Just out of curiosity, how does this look?" Tony asks. After a moment's hesitation Gibbs replies, "Looks like we got a dead Marine, grab your gear, and a little self-respect, DiNozzo." Grinning from ear to ear, Ziva scoots to her desk to get her gear.

At the crime scene, Tony is taking photos of the body. He asks McGee if he brought his laptop.. "Yeah I did, why?" McGee asks. "I bet I'd last longer than 10 seconds in random chat with this guy as a backdrop," Tony says. The two men bicker because McGee wants Tony to stop and Tony won't.

Gibbs and Ziva interview the owner of the salvage yard. The man says he stripped the car himself the day before and the trunk was empty. Ziva asks about security cameras and the man's grandson tells them they have tons of them, but they aren't hooked up to anything. "Yeah, there just for show," the man tells them. Gibbs walks over to the boy, leans down, takes off his NCIS cap and puts it on the boy's head. "What's that for?" the boy asks. "For being brave and I also heard it's your birthday," Gibbs replies. "Yes," the boy answers.

By the car, Ducky inquires as to who the victim is. The victim's name is Marine Corporal Ray Collins. "Discarded in a junk yard like a piece of trash," Ducky says. "You know the word junk originally referred to mortical old rope of certain origin," Ducky tells Palmer. "Really?" Palmer replies. "Eventually it included any discarded item," Ducky continues. Palmer finds it fascinating until Gibbs steps up and says, "I'll tell you what's fascinating, time of death, Duck." Ducky tells Palmer they need to get the body to a more suitable work surface. Tony guesses that the killer dumped the body hoping the trash compactor will eliminate the evidence. McGee points out the man's cash and credit cards are missing so it's probably a mugging. Ducky pulls out the legs to find the feet cut off. "Well, I might agree with you if that were the only thing missing," Gibbs replies.

Back at NCIS, the team reviews the information they have on Corporal Ray Collins on the big screen. Corporal Collins has no family, single and no friends (the latter according to his CO). "His fitness eval was off the charts, but I'm guess that was when he had, feet," Tony says. Collins was serving in Afghanistan until he was court marshaled. "Charges?" Gibbs asks. "Everything," Ziva replies. "Larceny, drug dealing, assault," McGee tells Gibbs. "Might not have ended up doing time but he was definitely looking at a dishonorable discharge," Tony adds. The team is unable to trace Collins movements prior to his murder due to lack of credit card use and no cell phone and no ATM walk-by's either. Tony is pleased by what he found, the purchase of a Ducati motorcycle that Collins added to his Harley collection the month before. "Ray liked motorcycles," Gibbs says. "Motorcycles he shouldn't be able to afford on his pay," McGee adds. Ziva points out that with Collins reputation, there are dozens of people willing to kill him. "Talk to the guys in his Unit, see if you can find one that actually did," Gibbs says.

Abby is on her phone, pacing the lab. The Director's office has called and they want to see Abby right away. She wants the Director to wait five minutes because she had a break through on the case and Gibbs should be walking through her door any minute. Just as she says that, Gibbs walks in. As Vance's secretary is telling Abby the Director wants to see her right now, Abby tells her she has to go and hangs up. "Do you know something I don't know?" Abby asks Gibbs. "Probably not," Gibbs responds. Abby is fretting over why Vance wants to see her. "Do you know about the last time the Director wanted to see me?" Abby asks. "No," Gibbs says and shakes his head. Abby mumbles that seems how he doesn't know, there's no sense in mentioning it again. "Abs, you said you had a breakthrough?" Gibbs asks. After a moment of rambling and refocusing, Abby tells Gibbs that Ducky had found tissue underneath the victim's fingernails. She ran it through the database and didn't find a match on file. "That's not much of a breakthrough,"

Gibbs says. She tells him it's good because all military DNA is on file. "That means our killer isn't in the military," Gibbs says. Abby mumbles, "That rules out Director Vance." Gibbs gets her to refocus. She tells him that she is aware he was having problems tracking Collins move the night he was murdered but she was able to. She holds up Collins watch - which is a state of the art GPS runner's watch and it holds GPS data for 24 hours. Abby pulls up a blow-by-blow of the Collins move. He went for a run, then to eat, wander around for a bit, and wound up 'spending 2 hours standing on the street.' "Good work, get the address to Tony and Ziva. Good job," Gibbs says as he hands Abby a mini Caf-Pow. "What the bio-hazardous material is this?" Abby asks, holding up the Caf-Pow. "It's all they had," Gibbs shrugs. Abby thinks it's another bad omen and it doesn't bode well for her future. Gibbs walks up to Abby and tells her she shouldn't worry about it. "Why's that?" she asks. "Because I got your back. Always have had it," he replies as he leans and kisses her on the cheek then finishes with, "Always will."

In autopsy, Ducky says, "I cried because I had no shoes, then I met a man who had no feet. An old Persian proverb, a reminder to appreciate what we have because we can always have less." Palmer tries to imitate the cartoon character, Fred Flintstone and says, "Don't touch your balling balls before they hatch Fred." "Fred?" Ducky asks. Palmer fumbles to explain who Fred Flintstone is and is relieved when Gibbs walks in but continues to stumble over his words. Smiling, Ducky points at Palmer and says, "Yabba dabba do." Palmer laughs until he sees Gibbs face and stops. Gibbs wants to know what Ducky has for him. "A mess, and a troubling one," Ducky tells him. Ducky tells Gibbs that Collins was alive when his feet were cut off, but probably unconscious. Collins cause of death was that he bleed to death. The head trauma appears to have been caused from the car crusher with the exception of a blow to the jaw, caused by a wrench or piece of pipe. Someone knocked out Collins, then chopped of his feet. Ducky corrects Gibbs and says "Sawed them off actually for reasons I shall leave you to speculate." "Your right Duck, troubling," Gibbs says. Ducky tells Gibbs he hasn't shown him the troubling part yet. He has Palmer move the victims head and shows Gibbs a welt on the left hand side of Collins head, behind his ear. Ducky has no idea what caused it or how it came to be there.

Abby rushes into Director Vance's outer office. The secretary, Pamela Cook, starts to tell Abby why he wants to see her but Abby cuts her off. Abby's concerned that it's because she used government bandwidth for voice-over-IP phone calls, which were done for charity to help Save The Children because there are over 4 million deaths every year. Pamela says she doesn't think it's about that Abby says, "Then the infrastructure database that she loaned to Habitat for Humanity," Abby asks. Once again, the secretary tells her no so Abby asks that she keep that information between them. "He already knows," Pamela says. Pamela finally tells Abby that Alejandro Rivera, the Mexican justice department official, has requested for Abby to come down and speak at a symposium. "Yes, when do I leave," Abby asks. "I think today, but the Director doesn't want you going alone because Mexico's too dangerous these days, so he's sending an escort," Pamela replies. "God, I hope it's not McGee. I mean, he's never any fun to travel with anyways but lately he's been acting all squirrely with me, ever since Alejandro tried to undress me with his eyes," Abby says. McGee walks in, "Hi, the Director wanted to see me?" he asks Pamela. She smiles and looks down when Abby looks at her. "Hi," McGee says to Abby.

Ziva and Tony pull up at the address Abby gave them from Collins GPS. Tony and Ziva bicker about whether or not they are in the right location. "According to Abby's coordinates, in the truck," Ziva tells him. "I betcha Abby could last more than ten seconds in random chat," Tony tells her. "You are obsessed," Ziva replies. "You wouldn't understand," he says. She asks why. "Because, being irritating is second nature to you, Me, I'm charming," he replies. She balks at his comment then stops and takes a sniff as they get closer to the truck. "That's not charming," Tony says after he catches a whiff of the air as well. They rush to the truck and open it, looking inside. "That's a bloody table," Tony says. Ziva flashes her light higher and says Tony's name. He looks up and they both see several pairs of feet hanging from the inside of the truck.

Abby and McGee arrive in Benito Juarez, Mexico. Abby rushes out of the car the minute the door is opened and runs up the stairs. McGee calls for her to slow down and she stops to tell him she doesn't want to miss anything. "Like what, the burrito bar?" McGee asks. She asks him if he's going to be a party pooper the entire trip, then tells him to 'come on.' McGee whines about how the last time he was in Mexico, he was sick for an entire month. "It's called bottled water McGee. Maybe this time you won't be so cheap," Abby tells him. McGee shows Abby the photo of the feet that Tony sent him and believes it's a serial killer. McGee begins to chat with Abby when Alejandro spots them and comes up to greet Abby. McGee watches as the duo make small chat. Abby jokes that her arms are pretty tired. "Not too tired, I hope, your going to need them," Alejandro responds. "Uh, for what?" McGee asks. Alejandro tells her has a stack of cold cases and a class with eager students waiting for her to share her forensics with them. Abby realizes she's going to busy and Alejandro hopes that she's not to busy for... "Let's just say busy and leave it at that," McGee chimes in before Alejandro can finish. "Agent McGoo huh?" Alejandro asks him. "McGee," McGee replies. Alejandro informs them that there is only one room available at the Justice Department's headquarters. "Well then we'll check into a hotel," McGee offers. The reason for the symposium was due to the escalating violence from the drug wars, so Alejandro insists that Abby and McGee stay at Justice headquarters. Nearly Abby or McGee look thrilled at the thought.

NCIS In the evidence garage, Ducky and Palmer are bagging up the sets of feet hanging from the truck. "No regard for protocol. Human remains are to be processed in the autopsy garage," Ducky tells Palmer. Tony says, I'm gonna go out on a limb here and say, serial killer." "A limb, nice," Ziva says, not amused at Tony's choice of words. "Can I give you a hand?" Tony asks, "These are terrible jokes," he says as Gibbs exits the elevator. Gibbs comments that if Tony has time to joke around, he's found the killer. Tony says he's working on it and tells Gibbs there is no license plate on the truck and the VIN (Vehicle Identification Number) has been scratched off. Ziva says there are over 1,000 similar vehicles registered with the Maryland DMV (Department of Motor Vehicles) alone. "Well narrow it down," Tony says after receiving a look from Gibbs. Stepping down from the back of the truck, Ducky tells Gibbs that Collins was unconscious when his feet were cut off, so it's safe to assume the other victims were as well, what's left of them. Pointing to a grungy tub, Gibbs ask "and the rest of them?". Ziva says most likely they used sulfuric acid as it's strong enough to dissolve bones. "Corporal Collins body was dumped, the rest of them weren't, why?" Gibbs asks. I'd have to perform a psychological autopsy to answer that question," Ducky replies. Ducky feels they have the killer's trophies, which means the killer will want to kill again. "Think I got a lead on that. Autopsy Gremlin, scam (to Palmer)," Tony replies. Tony holds up one pair of feet which have tattoos on the ankles and tells them it's a motorcycle tattoo, therefore the killer is targeting bikers.

In the classroom in Mexico, Abby is excited about teaching the class. "Are you going to eat during my entire presentation?" she asks McGee as he's spooning food in his mouth. "I read that local yogurt is amazing for your stomach," McGee replies. Abby informs McGee that the yogurt he is eating is unpasteurized. "Is that bad?", he asks. "In Mexico? You might as well just shoot yourself now," she tells him just as the class arrives. Abby greets the class with many Mexican greetings, then introduces herself. As she starts to introduce McGee, he gets up and heads out of the classroom, sick. She explains to the class what McGee ate and that he's probably heading to throw up. She grabs the case of files on her desk and hands them out. When the class gets to view Abby's full outfit, they all stare and some giggle. Abby hands out the file on a 20 year old case for Pedro Hernandez. After she hands out he files, Abby heads back to the desk and asks if they have any questions. One woman raises her hand and says, "Who told you the Day of the Dead was in May?", which causes a lot of giggles in the class. "Your name is, let me guess, Natalia," Abby says. "You can read," Natalie says after she looks at her name tag. "I can read. I can also tell that you have cats," Abby says as she walks closer to Natalia. "Anyone could tell I have a cat," Natalia says as she pulls a cat hair off her sweater. "One is an orange tabby and two calicos. You're allergic to citrus. You went bowling last night. You're vitamin D deficient. Oh, and you're ovulating. Any more questions?" Abby says as she walks back to the desk. Abby refers back to the case and tells them due to the shotty police work there is almost no forensic evidence. "I hope you brought your walking shoes because we are going, in the field," Abby says enthusiastically.

Meanwhile, Ziva and Tony hit the "Country Girl Saloon" and head inside. "This is the last biker bar we are hitting today. I smell like monkey grease," Tony whines. "Somehow I think you won't mind this one," Ziva says as a woman at the bar stares at Tony. "Hello Kitty, Meow," Tony says to the woman as he removes his sunglasses. Tony asks Ziva if she'd like to take it, then decides he should. He calls for everyone's attention, introduces himself and says he'd like to ask them all some questions, as all the bikers and the ladies stop what they are doing and stare at Tony. He holds up Collins photo and tells them he's looking for information on him. As everyone goes back to what they were doing, Tony says, I've lost my mojo, it's like random chat only the real world."

"Perhaps it needs a woman's touch so...." Ziva says but she is cut off by the bartender/owner. "Not unless that woman's got a warrant," Velvet Road says. She asks Ziva if she has a warrant and Ziva says they don't but they would like to ask a few questions. "You know what I would like, you to leave," Velvet tells them while the crowd looks on. Tony tells everyone there is a serial killer on the loose, targeting bikers and wonders if it interests them. "The only that that interest me is you, leaving now," Velvet tells him.

Velvet shows Tony and Ziva the way out, then apologizes for her behavior. "Had to put on a show for the kiddies?" Tony asks. Velvet introduces herself and says she had to if she wanted to stay in business. Velvet tells them she doesn't know who Collins runs with, but she knows who he's been sleeping with. Velvet says Collins slept with everyone and probably slept with the wrong guy's girl. Ziva informs Velvet that Collins isn't the only person dead. Velvet isn't surprised because if you look at some guys the wrong way, they'll kill you. "You got any names?" Tony asks. Looking back and forth at Ziva and Tony, Velvet replies, "I got a whole bunch."

Back in Mexico, Abby has taken her class on a field trip to the location of the truck where Pedro Hernandez was shot. Amazingly after 20 years, the truck is still sitting in the same location. "There are many ways by which a cold case can be solved. Anyone?" Abby says. Natalia raises her hand but Abby ignores her and turns to McGee who tells them new evidence, new witnesses that come forward, alibis that fall through or new information that comes to light. "This new information usually comes from forensic evidence, which we're going to have to find out on our own because this case has virtually none," Abby tells the class. Abby reads off the information from the file. She says the evidence indicated that Pedro was gunned down at point-blank range in a gang style shooting and Pedro's vehicle was abandoned after the shooting so that's where she wants to start. Abby points out the shatter pattern on the driver's side window of the truck and says the bullet was traveling at a high-velocity and asks McGee the answer. "Some kind of long range weapon," McGee replies. As Abby begins to go on, they hear a truck roaring up the road and Abby wonders if they are expecting more students. "Those don't look like students," Natalia says as several men with loaded weapons vacate the truck. A woman gets out of the passenger side of the truck, walks up and tells them they are trespassing. "Actually we were just leaving," Abby replies. "No, your not," the woman replies.

The woman, Paloma Reynosa, tells the class to line up. The men aim the guns at them, which makes the class line up quicker. "It's probably good to start praying too," Paloma says. "Can we just slow down here for a second," McGee asks. "Sorry, I have lunch plans," Paloma replies. "Would it help you to know that I am a guest of your government," Abby tells them. McGee tells Abby to be quiet and Paloma says that instead of killing her, maybe she'll take her as a hostage instead, see how much they are worth. McGee introduces himself, flashes his badge, then asks her to let everyone else go because he is worth a lot of money. She checks out his badge, then says, "You a brave man Timothy McGee, do you know who I am?" She gives him her name and he realizes she's part of the Reynosa drug cartel. "The family business is what I prefer to call it," Paloma says. Paloma wants to know what NCIS is doing in Mexico. Abby explains why she is there. Paloma wants to know what an old truck can tell her about a cold case. Abby explains about the shotty police work and that Pedro was killed by a long range rifle. Paloma tells Abby she is correct. Pedro was killed by a sniper, up on the ridge, 100 meters from where they are standing. "How do you know that?" Abby asks. "Because the killer left behind a message," Paloma replies. McGee wants to know what message. Paloma lifts the chain from around her neck and pulls out a rifle bullet from within. She tosses it to Abby and tells her that maybe she'll have a better use for it than Paloma did. Abby reassures her that she will see what she can do. Paloma compliments Abby on her boots and then she and her men hop in the truck and leave.

In autopsy, Ducky and Palmer are going over the sets of feet. "Jealousy can sure drive people to do strange things," Palmer says. "As can anything born of deep rooted insecurity," Ducky replies. "If I chopped the feet off of every man who gave Breanna two looks, I'd be up to my ear in toe cheese," Palmer says as he walks towards Ducky with a set of feet. Ducky hands Palmer a sample. "What is that?" Palmer asks. "Toe cheese," Ducky replies. "I hope you got something more for me than toe cheese, Duck," Gibbs says as he walks in.

Summary: When a colleague's murder sends shockwaves through the team, Gibbs uncovers a surprising link to the crime.

4 DAYS EARLIER:

At the squadroom, Tony is watching the Annapolis Commencement coverage on ZNN News while McGee and Ziva are working at their desks. "Ah graduation, for many an alcohol induced purple haze." "Easy there Hendricks, it'll pass," McGee replies. Tony tells McGee that when he was on the Baltimore Police Department, every graduation they'd head down to the drunk tank and there would be 100 seniors throwing up on themselves. "Good times," Tony says. Ziva walks up, smiling and says, "Need I remind you that I too will be a graduate soon." "With a degree in what?" McGee asks. "English as a 10th Language," Tony replies. Ziva explains that her naturalization interview is that week, both written and oral exams. "It is how an alien becomes a citizen," she tells them. "Oh, I know what it means Ziva," Tony says. McGee asks if she's ready then asks her what the Fifth Amendment is. Ziva gives him the answer and Gibbs walks in and says, "Not bad, David, not bad at all." "DiNozzo, eighth letter of the alphabet," Gibbs asks. "G," Tony replies. "No, H for homicide got one on the beach in Annapolis, could be academy related," Gibbs says as he grabs his gear to head out. As the team grabs their gear to head out, Vance walks up and wants a moment with Gibbs. Vance tells Gibbs that every television station will be covering the Annapolis graduation so he wants the murder on the down-low until they know something. Smirking, Gibbs replies, "Keep what on the down-low, Director?"

The team is on the beach, processing the crime scene. Tony is taking photos of the burnt body, which is in very large fire pit, beneath burnt wood and ash. "Helluva way to go," Tony

Gibbs is riding horseback down the beach in Mexico. He stops when he comes to a body lying face down on the beach. He dismounts, then kneels by the body. A man walks up behind him and says, "Welcome to Mexico Agent Gibbs." Gibbs goes for his gun and the man, who has a gun aimed at Gibbs' back, says, "Don't even think about it."

says. "Smells like mesquite," McGee replies while smelling the air. "Who are you, Bobby Flay?" Tony asks. McGee points out that certain woods burn differently than others and it's still green out there, that's why the wood is smoldering. Tony thinks it's perfect for making Smores and McGee says he never liked Smores. "What are you talking about? What's not to like? You got your chocolate, graham crackers, gooey marshmallows. What kind of Boy Scout are you?" Tony asks. "I'm a Webelos actually," McGee says. "Zip up Webelos, your inner geek is showing," Tony says as he looks at the zipper on McGee's pants.

Gibbs and Ziva are questioning Navy Ensign Philip Bosch. Bosch tells Gibbs that the fire was ready to go when they got there. He set it up the night before so that when they arrived, all he had to do was drop the match and light it. Ziva asks if he thinks someone came during the night and deliberately put the body underneath. "Had to have, ma'am," Bosch replies. Gibbs notices Bosch is pale and looking sluggish and asks if he's feeling alright. Bosch explains he was up all night celebrating and hasn't slept yet. Gibbs smiles and says, "Go get some sleep, we'll be in touch."

Ducky walks up and says, "Whenever a good Nor-wester blows, Christopher is certain to have sand between the toes." Ziva asks what Christopher is. "He's a creation of AA Milne, who also liked a good romp on the beach," Ducky says. Ducky looks at the remains and says that this one put up quite a fight. The nails were broken at the cuticle, the heat cooked off most of the flesh but not all of it as he looks at the flesh on one hand. Ducky points out that killers use a normal fire as a crematorium but it doesn't work because it doesn't generate the necessary temperature. He takes out a medical kit and syringe. "See that, it wasn't hot enough," McGee tells Tony. "Thank you Wee Willy Webelos," Tony sarcastically replies. Tony holds the kit while Ducky fills the syringe with fluid and asks McGee for his portable finger print kit. Ducky rehydrates the dehydrated digit with saline, which allows them to get the victim's identification. "It's like watering a mummy," Tony says. McGee runs the fingerprint on the scanner and gets a hit. When he is silent for a moment, Gibbs says, "Words McGee." "Boss, this is Special Agent Lara Macy," McGee tells the him.

In the squadroom, McGee looks up information on Macy, while Tony looks at her photo on the large screen, while holding his badge with a mourning band around the middle of it (this is done in memory of a fallen comrade). Macy was transferred out of the NCIS: LA office the previous June to a new assignment in Marseilles. "Supposed to feel safer on American soil," Tony says. Ziva points out it that it could have happened to any one of them, it's the risk they take. Gibbs comes in and tells them the Agency is on alert and the Director has ordered a threat assessment. "So now what?" Ziva asks. "We assess," Gibbs says. "Figure out who killed another female agent," Tony replies. McGee replies, "Up hold justice to the full extent of the law". Tony responds, "Or whatever it takes". Gibbs figures Macy is a Marine, Agent and a daughter so he wants to begin with the daughter part of her first. Macy's mother lives on a farm in Cumberland, Maryland so Gibbs tells them to call and let her know they are coming. Ziva's phone rings, she answers it, then hangs up. She tells Gibbs that one of the men in Macy's office in Marseilles is calling into MTAC. The team is puzzled wondering how that office knows already. Gibbs heads up to MTAC.

In MTAC, Gibbs and Vance chat with Special Agent Emil Mineoux, from Macy's office. Macy left four days prior for personal time. Vance informs Mineoux that Macy is dead. When asked, Gibbs says Macy was murdered. "On my watch Agent Mineoux so if you think this is case related, I'm going to need every document, every file that you can get your hands on," Vance tells Mineoux. Mineoux wonders who would want Macy dead. Gibbs tells him to check her apartment, phone records and mail. Mineoux tells them that Macy was staying at the Freemont Inn while she was in Norfolk. "It's a great loss for Director, the whole agency," Mineoux says. "You have no idea," Vance replies.

In autopsy, Ducky is talking to Macy's remains. Gibbs walks in and says, "You're talking to yourself again Ducky." Ducky tells him that on the contrary, Macy is enlightening him. He shows him the bone chip in Macy's neck. Ducky believes a serrated knife was pulled violently up and around her neck, practically severing it from the spinal cord. "Macy can hold her own? Professional hit?" Gibbs says. Ducky believes it looks like a professional did it. Ducky wonders why Macy was set ablaze in NCIS jurisdiction.

Gibbs heads out and up to Abby's lab and he asks what she has. "Questions, for you," Abby says calmly. "Case first," Gibbs says as he looks over the evidence brought in from Macy's hotel room. She points out people travel for business or pleasure and if Macy was traveling for pleasure, why didn't she stay at her mother's home in Maryland. All of the items Macy brought with her were work related items. Abby checked the last phone call coming in on Macy's phone. It was an incoming mad from a store bought, disposable cell phone. Macy made five phone calls since her arrival in Norfolk an all were to a Petty Officer Kaylen Burrows. Burrows is currently stationed on the USS Majestic. It was docked outside Marseilles until a few weeks ago, then made port in Norfolk at the same time Macy did. "Agency Macy followed Burrows back to the states, business," Gibbs says. "Not pleasure," Abby replies. "Gibbs, speaking of business, we need to talk, about stuff and things," Abby says. "Not now Abs," Gibbs replies. "Okay," Abby says as she watches Gibbs leave.

Gibbs heads down the hallway and runs into Allison Hart. "Hello, Mr. Gibbs," Allison says. Gibbs makes a comment about her wandering around and she reminds him she has a pass now. Gibbs walks up, looks at her badge and says, "Limited access. Your client, Colonel Bell, he'll be disappointed." She tells him it's not about Colonel Bell, she's on her way to see Abby because the Mexican government wants Pedro Hernandez's body back. "He's just a drug dealer," he says. "Maybe, but if you had an unsolved case, you'd want your evidence back to," she replies. "You better get to work," Gibbs says as he turns and begins to walk away. Allison invites Gibbs out for dinner, which he turns down, she then invites him out for a beer, which he also turns down. "If I didn't know any better Mr. Gibbs, I'd think you were avoiding me," she says. Gibbs just stares at her for a second, then rounds the corner without another word.

Tony and Ziva board the USS Majestic to talk to Petty Officer burrows. They enter the mess hall and Tony can't stop talking about the food. "We are not here to eat, Tony," Ziva says. "I mourn, I eat, I'm Italian," Tony replies. "Jews and Italians are similar that way," Ziva responds. Tony indicates where Burrows is, so the two NCIS agents approach her and sit down. When Tony makes the introductions, Burrows gets up to head back to work, but Tony puts his hand on her shoulder, indicating she needs to sit back down. Burrows claims she's running late and needs to get started on her watch. From across the room, two men watch what is going on at Burrows table. Tony starts asking about the Flan. "Can we stop talking about the Flan," Ziva says. "What are you anti-flan?" Tony asks. Tony looks at Burrows and asks if she will tell them what happened between her and Special Agent Macy in Marseilles?". "I don't know who that is," Burrows replies. Tony reminds her she spoke with Macy five times that week alone. The two men who were watching Burrows, approach her table and tell her it's time to go. "Haha, it's kinda cute how you guys all look out for each other. And you ate all your Flan, well done big boy," Tony says to the men. "This is a private conversation," Ziva tells them. "Well this is a US Naval vessel ma'am and we have responsibilities," one of the men says to Ziva. "And so do we. She'll meet you up on deck. Gentleman," Tony replies. The two men leave as Tony gets up to answer his cell phone. Abby calls to tell him she got into Macy's laptop and is able to view the files. Macy had started a case file but it was incomplete because the victim of the crime refused to testify and refused to cooperate at all. "Who was the victim exactly?" Tony asks. Abby tells him the victim was Kaylen Burrows. Tony swings around to look at Burrows, then asks Abby, "What was the crime?". "Rape," Abby replies.

Summary: Gibbs has to face his past once again as he goes to Mexico, where he is forced to make a big decision with great consequences.

Gibbs awakens on a patio in Mexico with a sack covering his head. His head is uncovered and Paloma Renosa asks Gibbs if he knows who she is, he does. "Tennessee Williams said 'We are all sentenced to solitary confinement inside our own skins for life.' Surrounded by men with guns, I think of this often, beautiful, sad but frank," Paloma says. "Do you consider yourself a frank man?" she asks. "He also said all cruel people describe themselves as paragons of frankness. I would expect nothing less from the man who murdered my father," Paloma says. She stares at Gibbs, who remains silent, then sips her scotch. "I see you chose your words carefully Agent Gibbs, that is good. Your life depends on them," she says as Gibbs swirls his drink around in the glass. "I don't usually drink scotch," Gibbs says as he raises his glass and drinks from it.

In the squadroom, Tony is holding a small American flag, head in his hands saying, "This can't be happening, it cannot be happening." Smiling, McGee walks over to the filing cabinet near Tony's desk. "How could they let you in?" Tony demands of Ziva. "I passed the exams. I will officially become a citizen of the United States of America," Ziva says as McGee winks at her. "I've never been more disappointed in my government," Tony says. "Hey, that is my government now," Ziva replies. "Not til Friday," Tony tells her. "I expect to see you there, and you too McGee," Ziva tells both men. "Ziva, of course I'm gonna be there. Everyone is going to be there, and uh, Gibbs I bet, when he's back from his...." McGee tells her. "Hey, let's call it a vacation," Tony says. "It is not the first time he has run off on his own," she says. "Hey, not the first time he's run off to Mexico," McGee adds. "Not the first time he's gone without telling us anything," Tony says. "Nothing new to see here," McGee says with a smile. Vance walks up and says, "Not a poker player among you. Terrible, terrible bluffs. We're all used to how Gibbs operates for better for worse, let's just stay focused on what we're good at without him." Tony looks at Vance and asks, "What would that be Director?" "If you don't know Agent DiNozzo, I'm not gonna tell you," Vance says. Vance heads upstairs and calls for McGee to go with him as he needs him. McGee follows Vance upstairs to MTAC. "That was a pretty tasty and cryptic bit of rejection right there. Did ya see that? The Director just slammed me" Tony tells Ziva. "I saw. Must be feeling like the redheaded stepchild," Ziva replies. "Now how would you get that Idiom right?" Tony asks her. "Because I'm an American now," Ziva says. "Not yet. I think I'm going to call my Congressman," Tony says as he picks up his phone.

Vance and McGee walk into MTAC. Vance inquires about McGee being friendly with Alejandro Rivera when he and Abby were in Mexico. "Well, in the broadest definition I suppose," McGee replies. Vance turns and looks at McGee and says, "We have an awkward situation brewing already, you want to complicate it further? I want all his information going through this office directly, not Ms. Hart. I've asked him to enlist the Federales in tracking down Colonel Bell and his men south of the border." "And Margaret Allison Hart, Esquire is under the employ of Colonel Bell. Alright, I won't let you down," McGee says. Vance turns around and asks the Tech to bring Alejandro online. Once Alejandro is live onscreen, Vance asks about Colonel Bell's plane. Alejandro explains that they found a partially dismembered body (no head or hands) not far from the massacre at the home of Mike Franks. Alejandro says they are already using methods taught to them by Abby. Vance has already run some of the fingerprint scans from the crime scene and several of the men are former Military and known associates of Colonel Bell. Alejandro says the other members are suspected associates of the Renosa cartel and they have a laundry list of charges against them. Vance is tasking an agent from the San Diego office to assist Alejandro on the ground and their navy transport will retrieve the evidence and bodies from Franks place. Alejandro feels that the American presence will help calm the violence because the cartel is afraid of nothing in Mexico. Vance leaves Alejandro to chat with McGee and leaves MTAC. McGee asks, "Was there any sign of Gibbs or Franks on that beach?" "No. Gibbs? He's in Mexico?" Alejandro asks.

At Paloma's residence, she sits with Gibbs on the patio and asks, "You solve crimes for a living. Is there such a thing as the perfect murder?" "Never seen one," Gibbs replies. "But how would it work?" she asks. "It's not the method it's the victim," he answers. "Get someone no one will miss," she says. "You don't need tips on how to kill me," he replies. "I am not opposed to killing or torture when it suits my needs that is part of my business. Colonel Bell wanted to prove that he was a better man than you. He and his men made for a useful ally but they were a means to an end, namely you," Paloma says. "I don't know what your after but you might as well put a bullet in my head right now because your not going to get anything," Gibbs replies. "It's never easy to turn someone, to change them. A Federal Agent in Washington D.C., you have value. I don't want your death, I want your life," she replies.

Gibbs and Paloma are inside her residence. Gibbs paces the living room, looking at the guard, Dean, before he sits down on the couch. "You gonna make me suffer? Throw the murder charge, force me to work with you. Thing about being a cop called burden of proof," Gibbs says. "You want evidence?" she asks and Gibbs nods. "An investigation performed by your own people that conclusively puts your signature on the crime," she replies. "Prove to me I'm guilty of a crime, bring it out in the open. I know something about convictions and I got em," Gibbs replies. Paloma smiles, then nods to the guard, who steps out of the room for a minute. "I don't care to put you on trial Gibbs, it may not suit my needs to kill you but it might be useful to kill everyone you ever met," she taunts. The guard returns and places a gray wrapped box on the table, then looks at Gibbs (who is looking at the guard's sidearm) and hands Paloma a rolled up rag. Paloma sits, rolls out the contents of the rag and says, "starting with your friend Mike" as an index finger rolls out of the rag. "Your former mother-in-law comes next," she says smiling. "Doing me favors now?" Gibbs replies sarcastically. "Then your coworkers, if I must, I promise to personally visit Pennsylvania and shoot your father in the head. That would complete the circle. You will start small, just make sure this package is delivered. How many more lies are your convictions worth?" she says.

Tony and Ziva walk into Vance's office as he is hanging up the phone. Vance has the duo taking a C-130 transport out of Pax River to Mexico. Vance wants Tony and Ziva to 'ride-along to Mexico' and return Hernandez's body to Mexico and escort the new bodies back to NCIS to ensure an unbroken chain of evidence. McGee walks in and Vance wants McGee to notify Alejandro that the airlift is enroute. McGee informs Vance that there is no word on Franks, but Alejandro thinks he might know Gibbs' location. "I never mentioned Gibbs to him. Who told him to look for Gibbs?" Vance says. "I may have mentioned it, was that not supposed to happen", McGee asks. Vance just looks at McGee, then heads to MTAC. "You want us to bring Gibbs back to Director?" Tony asks. Vance tells Tony that the transport will only be on the ground long enough to load and unload, a couple hours tops, and wonders if Tony will be able to locate and retrieve Gibbs in that period of time. As he's saying this, he flicks at his right eye. The door to MTAC buzzes and Vance and McGee step inside. Tony is beaming from ear to ear, "Did you see that?" he asks Ziva. Tony believes that Vance winked unless he was prepping his eye for the scanner. Ziva doesn't understand why it matters if Vance winked. "Because that's what he and Gibbs do. They have this whole 'wink wink nudge nudge' language. Vance can't greenlight an OP, he expects us to pick up the slack when we see it," Tony says as he imitates Vance's eye 'flick.' "You see slack?" she asks. "I don't know you see a wink?" Tony replies. At the same time, they both turn and look towards the closed MTAC door.

At Paloma's residence, the Federales arrive with Alejandro leading the way. Dean walks up to Paloma and whispers, "Company." "Very well," she replies. Alejandro looks angry and questions Paloma in Spanish. She tells him they were just having a drink. "Agent Gibbs, has this woman made threats against you? You want to file charges for abduction?" Alejandro asks. Gibbs looks at Paloma who tells him, "Remember my advice, choose your words, carefully." "Not against me personally," Gibbs tells Alejandro. "You are reaching," Paloma tells Alejandro. "So are you," he replies. Alejandro gives his men orders to vacate the premises and tells Gibbs to come with him. As Gibbs stands up, Paloma says, "Say Adios." Gibbs looks at her for a moment, then leaves with Alejandro. Getting into the SUV, Gibbs asks "How did you find me?". "I follow her moves very closely, she's never reckless, difficult, almost impossible to prosecute. I nearly had her when a private investigator came here from America digging into her father's death. She had the P.I. killed," Alejandro says as he drives off. "You had your task force investigate the cold case, Pedro Hernandez or is that just coincidence," Gibbs says. "The report Ms. Sciuto prepared? I have still not seen it. Paloma must have someone on the inside," Alejandro replies. "Yeah she hasn't seen it yet either," Gibbs says. "What happened to it? Someone must've stopped it. Ms. Sciuto?" Alejandro asks. "No," Gibbs replies. "Your certain?" Alejandro says. "Yeah I'm dead certain, I wouldn't allow it" Gibbs answers. "I believe this, that's all I needed to know," Alejandro says as he pulls up in front of Paloma's home. "Someone took a bullet for you Gibbs, but you will take the next one," Alejandro tells him as he gets out of the car. Dean opens the door for Gibbs and says, "Surprise" as he helps Gibbs out of the SUV. Paloma comes down and addresses Alejandro, "Well Hermano, does he have your precious report?" "Hermano, brother and sister. I guess she never had to turn you," Gibbs says.

Tony and Ziva are leaving NCIS. Ziva tells Tony about the oath she has to take to become a U.S. Citizen, she has to renounce all her ties to Israel. "Well you will still be you Ziva and I'll be there to hear it, I promise," Tony says. As they enter the elevator, Abby joins them, grabs both of their shoulders and says, "You guys are going to Mexico, what's the plan?". "What do you know Abs?" Tony asks. Abby pulls a Gibbs and shuts down the elevator. "Gibbs mentioned rule 40," Abby says. "When you think someone's out to get you they are," Tony replies. "I have never heard of rules in the 40's," Ziva says. "They don't come up very often," Tony tells her. "And that's a good thing," Abby says quietly. "How many times have I told Gibbs to write these things down," Ziva says in frustration. "You don't have to write them down, they are for daily use, most of the rules, but the 40's..." Tony says. "The 40's, the 40's are for emergency use only," Abby says. "If the 40's are in play, something unspeakably bad is going down," Tony says. "We have to get him back," a concerned Ziva says.

Alejandro looks at a photo of him, Paloma and their father when they were younger. He picks up a dish with an appetizer on it and offers it to Gibbs, who takes one. "Your sister wants to make me her pet. And you? what do you want? You want to put me on trial?" Gibbs asks Alejandro. "I cannot, without that report it will be her way or she kills everyone you love, there is no other option," Alejandro answers. Gibbs pops the food into his mouth, "I've had this before," he says as he leans back on the couch. "No way out, in that riddle. Guy trapped in this room no doors, no windows," Gibbs says. "And how did he get there?" Paloma asks. "Well it was built around him but there's nothing there except a mirror and a table. How's he get out? Here's a hint, it won't work in Spanish" Gibbs says. "Look in the mirror, see what you saw. Take the saw, cut the table in half. Two halves make a whole, climb out the hole. Most retarded riddle I've ever head," Dean says. "My father taught it to me. My dad, never an easy guy. Takes a man to make a man right?" Gibbs says. "Hermano," Paloma says as she sees her brother getting agitated. "When things get rough, I can still go talk to him," Gibbs continues. Alejandro takes Dean's gun out and aims it at Gibbs. "You know so much, Gibbs, well tell me this. How will this feel to me, what will it feel like to pull this trigger?", Alejandro asks. Paloma stands and says, "Alejandro, don't let him make you into a killer. You are more powerful in the government." Alejandro is agitated and says he is going to shoot Gibbs with his own gun. "You've never done this before. I have. I've killed men and woman in combat, in the line and in life. And some of those still haunt me, but I've never lost a night's sleep over your father. You want to know just what it feels like to be the hand of justice?" Gibbs stands and finishes, "then pull the damn trigger yourself and find out. Go on, do it." Gibbs stares down a crying Alejandro.

The C-130 carrying Ziva and Tony lands in Mexico. They grab their gear as the ramp at the back of the aircraft is lowered. "Alright we gotta move fast," Tony says. "And quietly" Ziva adds. "No authority, no jurisdiction, no time," Tony says. "We do not get back on this plane without Gibbs," Ziva says. "Agreed," Tony replies. As the ramp lowers, Gibbs walks up towards the plane and Tony and Ziva just stare at each other, then Gibbs.

Heading back to the U.S. on the cargo plane are Tony, Ziva, Gibbs along with the evidence and bodies from the shoot-out at Franks home in Mexico. Gibbs is sitting across from Tony and Ziva, eyes closed. Sensing they are staring at him, Gibbs opens his eyes. "You didn't find Franks?" Tony asks. "I said you didn't find Mike Franks?" Tony repeats. "I heard you," Gibbs answers. "So you just don't want to talk about it?" Tony asks as Ziva elbows him. Gibbs says the bartender told him Franks family left town the day before. "So, he knew something was coming. What else did you find out?" Tony says. "Federales got tired of me asking questions," Gibbs says. "Why didn't you just tell them you were with the Task Force?" Tony asks. "Angrily, Gibbs replies, "Because, I wasn't." "Still, I would've thought it would've taken the whole Mexican army to kick you out," Tony says. The pilot announces there is turbulence coming up, they are still a few hours from Andrews Air Force Base, so the passengers should hang on. The three of them adjust their positions a little. Gibbs says, "You get held up in customs, use my name." "Where are you gonna be?" Tony asks. "I left a mess I gotta clean up," Gibbs responds. Tony leans to Ziva and whispers, "That's 45, basically."

Back at NCIS, Tony walks into Vance's office. Vance hands McGee a battery from a black case and tells McGee that one is the right model. "You picked up an extra passenger," Vance says to Tony. "Yeah, funny that, Gibbs was just waiting for us at the airport," Tony answers. McGee says that Alejandro called them while they were in the air. "You mean your best buddy?" Tony replies. "He said he had to run Gibbs out of town. Tempers running high already the last thing he needed was another cowboy," Vance says. "Maybe he should have asked your permission before he went down there," Tony replies. "He doesn't need my permission," Vance says. "Well without it, he doesn't get your protection," Tony says. Vance looks at McGee and says, "Fit it for a GPS and a bug." McGee nods his head and leaves. Vance asks Tony where Gibbs is. "He went home to shower and change clothes. He got some Enchiladas and dust on his shirt." "When he gets in, tell him I'd like to see him," Vance says. Tony looks down at the black case in front of Vance.

Ducky is performing an autopsy on Colonel Bell's dismembered body. Across the room, Palmer is using a drill and crow bar to open one of the crates with a body and/or evidence in it from Mexico. Ducky removes a slug from the body and says, "Mr. Palmer do you think you could do that a little more quietly, I can hardly hear myself think." Palmer asks Ducky what he is thinking about but Ducky says his mind is a complete blank. "Has that ever happened to you before? Perhaps this will remind you of a time when....maybe you were just a lad and...." Palmer says as he walks towards Ducky. "What is it you are doing Mr. Palmer?" Ducky asks. "I thought maybe if I teed the ball up properly..." Palmer says. "I might find the fairway," Ducky finishes. Ducky tells Palmer it reminds him of a caddy on a golf course who kept giving him tips. When Ducky reached the 18th hole, the caddy gave him another tip and Ducky said he was going for it (he was 218 feet from the hole). Ducky takes the crowbar and demonstrates his shot and how he shouted obscenities at the man. Palmer assumes Ducky made the shot but he didn't. He overshot the hole by 15 yards and took a triple bogey. But Ducky learned a lesson, "Being correct does not excuse a violation of form." Ducky tells Palmer to take the slugs from Bells body up to Abby and then finish opening his crates as quietly as possible.

At home, a freshly showered and dressed Gibbs calls his father and asks him if there is anybody he can stay with for a few days.

Tony and Ziva go to see Abby to get a status update on the evidence. Abby is in the process of running the slugs that came from Bells body and doesn't expect to get a hit. Just as she says that, her computer beeps and registers a 'match found.' "Oh no, not again," Abby says. "What again?" Ziva asks. "Do you think there's any chance Gibbs went down to Mexico to kill Bell?" Abby asks. "What would you even think something like that?" Tony asks. Turning back to her PC, Abby pulls up the file and tells them the slugs came from Gibbs SIG Sauer.

At home, Gibbs is cleaning his SIG Sauer.

Back in autopsy, Tony says to Ducky, "What would you say if we told you that the slugs removed from Bell's torso came from Gibbs' gun." "I would say that someone is trying to present Gibbs as a murderer," Ducky replies. "When he clearly is not," Tony says. "Well as friend and colleague, I think the best of Jethro. I would like to believe that he did not kill this man, but as a scientist I know that he did not," Ducky tells Tony and Ziva. "How can you be certain?" Tony asks. "Well the fatal injury was to the head and I would speculate that there are defensive wounds to the hands. this dismemberment was intended to cloud not only the identity of the victim but also of his killer. Additionally, Gibbs has always told us not to believe in coincidence, so when I see this serrated pattern, so similar to the KBar nick on Agent Macy's neck," Ducky says. "It's the same knife," Palmer says. "It's the same killer," Ziva adds. Tony points out that Dean turned on Bell and now he's with the Cartel. "How did he get Gibbs' gun? Gibbs is always saying there is only one way to do that," Ziva says. Palmer looks at them inquisitively and Ducky fills him in, "Pry it from his dead cold hand."

Tony and Ziva are brainstorming in the squadroom. "Since Gibbs is not dead, we have to assume he met Dean, in Mexico," Ziva says. "That's why I'm busy here, tracking Dean," Tony says as he's sitting at his desk. "Tony, why would Gibbs ever let him walk away alive?" she asks. "I mean I'm tracing cell phones, emails, credit card transactions. This is McGeek work," Tony gripes. Ziva reminds him McGee is still in MTAC. "Chasing scraps of opportunity that Director Vance drops in front of him. He's like one of those fish that swims around inside a sharks mouth, picking stuff out of there teeth," Tony says. "Pilot," Ziva says. "Yeah pilot fish," he says. Ziva tells him the Pilot for Bells private jet and points to the transaction on Bells credit card statement. She also points out the timing on Bells private cell phone. "Dead men don't make phone calls. Someone else is using his phone, perhaps the elusive JPD," Tony says. Ziva says she's going to do that thing McGee does to make sure the cell phone is active. "Look at us, doing it without him," Tony brags. "Without who," Gibbs asks as he walks in. Tony fumbles over an explanation of what he meant by 'without him' then tells Gibbs that Director Vance wants to see him. Gibbs begins to head upstairs when Ziva notices Bell's phone is active and he's making a call. Gibbs phone begins to ring and when Ziva traces the call, she and Tony realize Dean is calling Gibbs. Gibbs opens his phone, then looks at Ziva and Tony, who are staring at him, then looks up at Vance who is standing at the top of the stairs.

In Vance's office, Gibbs phone keeps buzzing. "Do you need to get that?" Vance asks. Gibbs takes out his phone and says it's voice mail. "What are the chances it's a message from Lieutenant JP Dean? The man who murdered Agent Macy and possibly Colonel Bell, his own boss," Vance asks. "I don't know, I'll have to check," Gibbs says as he tosses his cell phone on Vance's desk. Vance takes Gibbs phone and plays with it. "I spent a lot of time in Los Angeles this year, getting that office up and running," Vance says. "I noticed," Gibbs says as he looks away from Vance. "Hetty Lange out there, she's got a friend at Warner Brothers, took us on an inside studio tour. A lot of old props, costumes all the way back to Casablanca," Vance says. "Should tell DiNozzo," Gibbs says with a grin. "When I started here, with our different philosophies, it took me a minute to figure out how we were going to get along Gibbs. I thought about Rick and Louie from Casablanca," Vance says. "What and I'm Rick?" Gibbs says with a smile. "Oh in so many ways. Problems me. I'm sick of being Louie. I'm sick of of having to look the other way while your sneaking around behind my back. That doesn't work for me," Vance says. "Well maybe I shouldn't work for you," Gibbs says. "You tell me what your into right now, that's an order," Vance says. "No," Gibbs replies. "Your benched," Vance says. "Took you long enough Leon," Gibbs says. Vance pushes his chair back, stands up and says, "You want to try me, come on," Vance says. "What stopped you day one?" Gibbs asks. "My job, my life does not revolve around you you egocentric son of a ," Vance angrily replies. "You sure make it sound like it does," Gibbs says. "One word and your done. You hate me because I can make that call," says Vance. "Right. Because my life revolves around you," Gibbs says with a smirk on his face. Someone knocks on the door and Vance angrily calls out, "What?". McGee sticks his head in to tell Vance that Bells jet has cleared Mexican airspace, Alejandro couldn't stop it and they filed a flight plan for Virginia. "How long?"

Vance asks McGee. "Five hours and since the entire case is headed here, Alejandro is going to follow on the next available flight," McGee tells him. "I'll be taking that," Gibbs says as he points to his cell phone, which is in Vance's hand. Vance tosses it down on the desk and Gibbs picks it up and walks out. McGee stares at Vance for a moment, then leaves, shutting the door behind him. Still standing at his desk, Vance reveals Gibbs' cell phone battery from his phone.

Gibbs walks into Abby's lab and sees a security guard. Abby introduces him as Darren, an armed security guard reassigned to guard her but she has no idea why. Gibbs nods his head at Darren, who takes the hint and leaves the two of them alone. "Except when I look at you, I know exactly why," Abby says. "Abby, I'm sorry," Gibbs says. "Gibbs why would you say that to me? It terrifies me when you break your own rules," Abby says. She is wagging her finger at Gibbs and explains to him that is something Mike Franks is never going to be able to do again. She confirms to Gibbs that the finger Paloma showed Gibbs belongs to Mike Franks, it's his right index finger. "He was alive when it was severed though?" Gibbs asks. "Ducky thinks so and it was shot off, for whatever it's worth," Abby says. "Gibbs, do they have him, do they have Mike?" Abby asks. Gibbs hugs Abby and kisses her cheek. "Can you at least tell me who they are?" she asks but Gibbs breaks off the embrace and leaves without a word. "I guess that's why super heroes have secret identities," she says.

In autopsy, Ducky shows M. Allison Hart one of the 'known' tattoos on Colonel Bell's body. "Despite his known reputation in this building, I considered Bell a good man," Allison tells Ducky. "Well I imagine you wouldn't have worked for him if you'd believe otherwise," Ducky replies. "Thank you Doctor, for that consideration," she says. "Forgive me, I forget sometimes, the effect this room has on some people," he says. "It does lend itself to a measure of introspection," she says. She looks at Ducky and says, "What is it you want to know Dr. Mallard?" "It was the Colonel who had an ax to grind with Gibbs, not you. You were carrying out orders," Ducky says. "It was a request, one I was free to decline," she replies. "But you were interested in learning more about Gibbs," he says. "Yes, I was," she replies. "And now your feeling that you backed the wrong man," Ducky continues. "Now, I'm remembering you have some sort of psychological degree," Allison says.

In the squadroom, McGee pulls up a satellite photo from Bells residence location on the big screen. He updates the team to let them know that Bells keeps a hangar at a small airfield near his home. "Alejandro sure Dean is on board?" Ziva asks. "Eyewitnesses confirm that Dean was traveling with at least four other men," McGee says. "Including the pilot and copilot," Tony says. "You three meet the plane. Grab Dean as soon as he steps off the plane and bring him back. Any questions?" Vance tells Ziva, Tony and McGee. While he's talking, Gibbs receives a text message from Dean "Am I safe?". "One, whose got lead?" Gibbs asks Vance. "Agent DiNozzo's got point," Vance replies.

Bells plane lands at the private airstrip. Tony says it's their bird and makes sure McGee and Ziva are in place. Ziva is on the rooftop with a sniper rifle and scope. The plane pulls up and the men began to exit the plane once the door opens. "You got a visual on our guy?" Tony asks Ziva. "Target acquired," Ziva says as she spots Dean through her scope. Tony tells Ziva to switch to night vision because it's going to get bright, so Ziva does. Tony and McGee turn on their headlights and Tony calls out, "NCIS put down your weapons. Jimmy Dean, you are under arrest." "Double crossing son of a....." Dean says as he goes for cover at the waiting car. A gunfight begins; Ziva takes out two of the men with Dean, McGee takes out a third man and Dean makes a break for it when he realizes he's alone. As Tony sees Dean out in the open, he fires off five rounds at Dean.

In the NCIS garage, Gibbs is using a crow bar to open one of the evidence crates. He opens a side panel and removes the package that Paloma wanted him to deliver. On top of the package is a note, which Gibbs opens and reads.

In autopsy, Dean's body is lying on the table with two noticeable gunshot wounds to the chest and one to the forehead. "What do you think Director?" Ducky asks. "Dean here killed Macy, killed Bell; played some part in the shootout between the Cartel and Bells men, maybe killed Mike Franks," Vance says as he looks at Dean's corpse. "Dead or alive, are his whereabouts still undetermined?" Ducky asks. Vance nods his head yes. "I did retrieve .45 caliber slugs from that shootout in Mexico," Ducky says. "That's Mike Franks weapon of choice," Vance says. "Yeah, I'm gonna go and double stack the drawers," Palmer says and walks away.

Gibbs is sitting on a bench in a park when Alejandro joins him. "I fly out to resolve the situation only to find it already resolved," Alejandro says. "You tell Dean he was in the clear. You tell him that your guy in D.C. is gonna take care of him," Gibbs says. "Turns out to be true. If you have bad intentions, Washington airspace sure becomes treacherous," Alejandro says. "All those bodies, Dean takes the fall, smart," Gibbs says. "Would you have told me otherwise?" Alejandro says. "Never underestimate your opponent," Gibbs says. "Should write that down, except you and I are on the same side," Alejandro says. "You hold the cards. You and Paloma have Franks so you have your delivery," Gibbs says as he nods his head towards the package. "You didn't open it?" Alejandro asks. "I didn't need to," Gibbs says as he picks up a piece of paper off the package and hands it to Alejandro. "We have to distrust each other as our only defense against betrayal," Alejandro reads from the paper. "My sister and her quotes," Alejandro says as he folds the paper and puts it in his pocket. "You guys have a way of making a man feel left out," Vance says as he walks up to Gibbs and Alejandro. Alejandro gets up, shakes Vance's hand and says, "Director Vance, just trying to soothe some fractured egos." "With Agent Gibbs, that could be dangerous. Always a politician huh?" Vance says. "You of all people would understand," Alejandro says. Vance points to the package on the bench and says, "That something from home?". "Yes, to sweeten any sour feelings," Alejandro says. Vance picks up the package and asks what it is. "Candy," Gibbs says. "Handmade," Alejandro says. Vance opens the package a little and smells it. "Well, I'll be on my way," Alejandro says and begins to walk off. He turns around and says, "Unless you have that report for me." "You should already have it. Ms Sciuto sent it straight to the Task Force," Vance replies. "Hmm...," Alejandro says and walks off. Vance pulls out a small recorder and replays part of Alejandro's conversation with Gibbs. "He's cagey, Alejandro. Doesn't give anything away," Vance says. Gibbs hands Vance his cell phone battery, "New battery." "Here ya go," Vance says as he hands Gibbs his old one. "You made it obvious that your hands were tied without saying," Vance says. "Well...couldn't. I knew this delivery was just a test, I figured I could buy time," Gibbs replies as he puts the battery back into his cell phone. "Put a lot of trust to that follow-your-lead, Gibbs," Vance says. "Every day Leon," Gibbs says. "You think Mike Franks is still alive?" Vance asks. "I think Mike Franks left that beach shootout in pieces. Alejandro's lying about something, I just don't know what," Gibbs says. "He showed his hand," Vance says. Both men stand up and begin to walk. "I've seen enemies with vendettas, Leon. Seen people lose their lives to them, people that matter," Gibbs says. "The worse enemies are the ones that hide in plain sight. The ones we can't arrest them. You know there's a story about Humphrey Bogart on that tour. Might be apocryphal but I hope it's true. So he finishes early, he walks across the street to a bar still wearing his costume and his makeup. Couple hours later the director realizes he needs Bogie for one more shot so he sends a production assistant, sends a kid to drag Bogie back onto the cafe set. The Director somehow gets him to the top of the stairs and says 'All I need you to do is look over here and nod'," Vance says. "That's it?" Gibbs asks. "That's it. Bogie nods and one take, he's done. It's in the movie. When Victor Laslo wants the bandleader to play "La Marseillaise, he looks to Rick for the okay. It's only the turning point for the entire character, where he actually makes a commitment, he joins the cause," Vance replies. "All he had to do was nod," Gibbs says. "And that started everything," Vance replies. "You didn't get a copy of Abby's report," Gibbs asks. "I never saw it. Decades old cold case in Mexico, that's not really my business is it?," Vance says. Gibbs smiles and looks away. "Gibbs, if something has to happen with Alejandro, you don't have to say a word," Vance says as Gibbs nods. The two men walk away with Vance humming the tune "La Marseillaise."

Summary: The members of the NCIS team find themselves to be the targets of Paloma Reynosa, who is out there trying to fulfill her vendetta against Gibbs.

Paloma enters Jackson Gibbs' store, and flips the sign to "Closed". Jackson tells her "You need to go", and she tells him that they have a lot to talk about. He tells her "From what I hear, you didn't come to talk." She says that he is just like his son, but Jackson corrects her: "No, he's just like me," and fires a warning shot. Paloma pulls her gun and aims, but then backs down. She strides out of the shop, meets two of her men, and curtly orders them to open fire on the store. They blanket the store in gunfire, and to the sound of sirens in the distance, they enter the store. The store is a mess – but Jackson is gone. (Credits) In Gibb's dining room, Jackson places breakfast in front of Gibbs, who protests with resignation that his dad doesn't have to make breakfast for him. Outside of the dining room window, we see guards/agents pacing back and forth watchfully. Jackson is making plans to run some errands, but to his disgruntlement, Gibbs tells him to make sure he takes the agents with him. Jackson declares that he has been living in Gibbs' house under lock and key for months, now, and the agents haven't had to do anything, but Gibbs reminds him that he's lucky he's not dead. Sr. retorts, "I'm lucky there was a storm cellar I could hide out in!" Jackson then tells Gibbs that he wants to go home – it's time, but Gibbs reiterates that it's not safe.

In the office, DiNozzo is replaying a tape of a shooting, where Franks is shot. "Rivera gives a signal, all hell breaks loose, he knew we were following him, we walked right into it..." Gibbs agrees, but tells DiNozzo to let it go. DiNozzo asks if there is any word from Franks, and is met by silence. DiNozzo quips, "Oh, that's right, 'observe and report.' It's hard to observe when you're being shot at. Do you think Vance is still angry with me?" At that moment, Vance asks, drily, "What do you think?" DiNozzo, startled, explains that they are still looking for Paloma, but with no luck. Vance tells Gibbs that SecNav is wondering why NCIS can't find one female drug lord, and Gibbs suggests that it is because she is back in Mexico. Vance tells them that the DEA wants to step in, but he wants to save face – however, despite Sr. Rivera's family ties (as Paloma's brother), the Mexican government seems to want to keep him in a position of authority. Vance asks for a status report. Ziva is in Miami, following up a Cuban tie-in, McGee is at the Canadian border. Vance observes that they need to get back to their workload, Paloma could be anywhere in the world, but Gibbs counters, "Yeah – or she could be just across the street." Vance gives Gibbs a look, and then hands him a piece of paper, gruffly explaining, "Dead reservist – check it." Gibbs glances at the paper and tells DiNozzo to "saddle up." DiNozzo is unenthusiastic – "We're not going to Arizona, are we?" he moans, but Gibbs tells him that they are going to West Virginia.

At an accident site, the DiNozzo, Jimmy, Ducky and Gibbs are surveying a helicopter crash in the pretty countryside and commenting on the Blue Ridge Mountains, with the Shenandoah River nearby. Ducky quips, "Thank God I'm a country lad!" but DiNozzo corrects him, "Country boy." The victim is a John McMann, who had called in a MAYDAY at 2 am, reporting mechanical trouble before landing the helicopter in the field. Ducky points out that the pilot died of a gunshot wound after getting out of the helicopter. Another victim lies nearby, also shot to death. A 9 mm and a 45 casing is found in the grass – did they shoot each other? Gibbs theorizes that the unidentified passenger hired McMann for a covert flight, but when McMann called the MAYDAY, he didn't want to be found by authorities and shot McMann, not expecting McMann to shoot back. But Jimmy asks, "Where are the guns?" Gibbs replays the helicopter cabin camera, and sees Paloma Reynosa as one of the other passengers. Ducky confirms that the time of death was about 9 hours previous. Immediately, Gibbs orders a blockage at the state line, and airports on alert, as well as to notify Vance.

In the office, DiNozzo is pointing out that West Virginia borders five states – "that's a lot of land to cover." Gibbs is impatient, asks DiNozzo if he is really giving him a geography lesson, and then tells DiNozzo to get Ziva back in D.C. and to let McGee know that the 'copter was headed north, towards Canada.

In MTAC, DiNozzo is talking to a stoic McGee, who is wearing a furry hat with ear covers, looks cold and is being nuzzled enthusiastically by a horse as he is trying to talk. DiNozzo makes quips about the Mounties and moose, and McGee snarls that he has been up there for two weeks – "it's September, and there's snow on the ground – can you at least give me a little compassion, here?"

DiNozzo is too busy laughing. Gibbs comes in as asks McGee why Paloma might be heading towards Canada. McGee tells them that the DEA and the Mounties narc. division shut down a border exchange the day before, and thought the product was from Mexico and had potential ties to the Reynosa cartel. McGee then pleads, "Can I come home, Boss – please?" Gibbs smiles slightly and comments, "Nice horse, Tim," as he strides out. DiNozzo gives McGee an unsympathetic grin.

In Autopsy, Ducky asks Jimmy if he has ever been to the Turks and Caicos islands. Jimmy says no, but he once went to the Keys, and had the most delicious Key Lime pie in a little shack on U.S 1: "I swear, the meringue had the appearance of nimbus clouds," he adds, dreamily. Ducky stares at him, and Jimmy stops his musings. Ducky goes on to say that when he was a boy, the Turks and Caicos were referred to as the British West Indies, and that he had never been in an area that had such unique insects. Jimmy motions to the bug bites on Esteban Lopez (the now-identified victim from the helicopter), and Ducky points out that by the variety of bug bites on Lopez's body, he might be able to track Lopez' – and Reynosa's – movements. Jimmy is incredulous that Ducky can tell the difference between insect bites, and Ducky assures him that yes, he can – there are 43 different kinds of mosquitos just in the Everglades, "and don't get me started on South Carolina!" He sends a sample of the stomach's contents up to Abby for analysis.

It's evening in the office, and DiNozzo is at his desk. He receives an instant message from his dad, "DiNozzo the 1st" that asks, "Junior, when can we discuss my situation?" DiNozzo shoots back a terse, "Not now, Dad," as a tanned Ziva enters the office. She greets DiNozzo cheerfully, and he smiles a welcome: "Well, hello, Little Miss Sunshine State – don't you look balmy?" Ziva doesn't know what "balmy" means, but assumes it's not a compliment. DiNozzo whines that while she was dancing the night away on South Beach, he had to handle Gibbs all by himself. Ziva protests that she was working the entire time, but DiNozzo asks her about her tan lines.

She claims not to have any tan lines, which DiNozzo interprets as not wearing a bathing suit as she tans... his face freezes in delighted contemplation. She admits that she laid out in the sun that morning before leaving, and as she walks over to his desk, he takes a deep, appreciative breath: "You smell like ocean – and shea butter..." Ziva tells him that a Dade County informant said that a Mexican drug shipment recently came in by boat, with ties to the Reynosa family – and that Alejandro Rivera even came to Miami for a political visit and a meeting with the mayor.

DiNozzo observes that "The Wonder Twins have been busy," to Ziva's puzzlement. DiNozzo tells her about the Wonders Twins on TV, brother-and-sister super-twins, and they go on to wonder if attempting to kill Gibb's dad was business, pleasure – or both.

That evening, Gibbs brings in a load of firewood, but he is distracted. Jackson tells him that he saw the agents checking their weapons more frequently, and figured something was up. Gibbs finishes laying and lighting the fire, and then tells his dad that Paloma was seen 300 miles away, but they don't know where she's headed. "Coming here, I'd imagine," comments Jackson, "your instincts were right—sorry I doubted you." Gibbs acknowledges the apology with a quiet, "it's rough on everybody, Dad." Jackson asks Gibbs to come back to Stillwater with him after all this is over and help him fix the store up, since it's all boarded up. Gibbs tells him that he has a job to do, and Jackson tells him that the job can wait. Gibbs smiles, but suddenly draws his gun, quietly pushes his dad aside and, alert, eases towards the back door. They hear a creak on the steps, and Gibbs takes aim at the door with his pistol. The door slowly opens, and Mike Franks walks in, carrying a suitcase. Gibbs relaxes, and as he holsters his gun, exclaims, "Don't you ever use the front door?" but Franks calmly tells him it wouldn't have been a surprise if he did. Jackson is astonished: "How did you get past the agents?!" Gibbs introduces Franks to his father. Franks asks if he minds if he makes himself at home, and Gibbs asks, "What took you so long, cowboy?"

In the basement, Gibbs is pouring Franks a drink. Franks holds up his hand – missing the index finger – and quips, "3 fingers for me, Probie." Gibbs rolls his eyes, and as he pours his own drink, he looks down at the workbench and mutters, "I thought you were dead." Franks gleefully retorts, "I got better!" Gibbs asks what happened after the gunfight, and Franks tells him that he was hurt pretty bad, and stayed in a convent south of La Paz. He observes, "You know – drinking wine and playing cards with the sisters – I've never been closer to God!" Gibbs shakes his head ruefully, and asks, "Before that – back in May?" Franks tells him that when he got Gibbs' message, he made sure the girls were safe and took on Bell's men. Grimly, he tells Gibbs, "They burnt my little piece of heaven to the ground – I got most of them, but," looking at his hand with the missing finger, "they only got a little piece of me!"

Gibbs thanks him for coming, but Franks said that it wasn't an option – Gibbs is in a heap of trouble, messin' with the wrong familia – there are some big guns after him, and "sweet little Paloma has a hornet up her skirt and her sights set on revenge – you think I'd miss that?" Gibbs reminds him that it's dangerous, but Franks tells him that you do what you have to do for family.

Smiling, Gibbs asks him "What rule is that?" and Franks laughs and tells him, "The unspoken one!"

In the lab, Abby is showing two studded collars to her bodyguard, Darren. "This one, or this one?" Gibbs asks her what Darren knows about collars, and Abby tells him that after guarding her for four months, she has come to value his quiet opinion. She tells Gibbs that, based on the findings in Lopez' stomach, "he and Paloma were eating their way through the South!" She has found traces of blue crab, salt pork and alligator, all local proteins, which suggest a track from Mississippi to around the Florida Panhandle. She then goes to explain the insect bites, ranging from a Virginia chigger to an Everglades mosquito bite and how they were able to help her track his movements for the last four months. As Abby pulls up a map, she comments, "Assuming they were together, Paloma has been on a mission!", showing a trail that leads around the southern coast of the United States. "Drug routes," observes Gibbs, and Abby agrees. As Gibbs begins to leave, Abby stops him and comments that, even though they need to arrest her, if she's in jail, she knows bad things about Gibbs, so they need a plan. Gibbs, with a kiss on her cheek, assures her that he has a plan.

McGee exits the elevator with a look of bliss on his face, exclaiming that he had missed the stained orange walls. DiNozzo greets him: "The Prodigal Probie returns!" McGee tells DiNozzo that he doesn't really miss something until it's gone, and DiNozzo asks if McGee, in a broad Canadian accent, "So you missed me, eh?" McGee comments that he missed other things, like "Breakfast-without beer." Ziva turns up her nose and exclaims, "I thought that was the Irish?!" DiNozzo quips, "Canadians, too!", and McGee observes that beer doesn't go with either eggs or oatmeal. Suddenly, he notices that Ziva is tanned, and Ziva retorts that he is very white.

Gibbs enters and pulls up the map, telling the team that Reynosa never left, she stayed to solidify her cartel pipeline. Ziva asks what she is doing now, and Gibbs says, plainly, "She's coming after me." DiNozzo takes a phone call from the DEA, and reports a dead drug dealer in Frederick, Maryland. Gibbs sends DiNozzo to Frederick, and tells him to take McGee and fill him in. Ziva calls the Maryland state police – "Paloma's getting closer – and she's not sight-seeing."

As Gibbs walks into Vance's office, Vance's secretary tries to pass through a phone call from "Director David." Vance tells her to tell him that he will call him back, and as Gibbs gazes at him, Vance tells him curtly, "It's 'need-to-know'." Gibbs looks off into the distance and mutters, "I know..." and Vance laughs, saying, "That's for sure!" They discuss Paloma's new pipeline, and wonder why she's setting it up now. Vance points out that the dead drug dealer in Frederick is probably Paloma sending Gibbs a message, but Gibbs objects: "It's nothing I don't already know." Vance goes on to say that he wants to move Gibbs and his father to a safehouse.

When Gibbs tells him that he's already in a "safe house", Vance tells him, "That's what I thought last year, with my wife," and reiterates he wants to take every precaution, "and bringing in Mike Franks doesn't count! I don't want Franks making things worse!"

he tells Gibbs as Gibbs leaves. Gibbs answer back, "They can't get any worse." "I hope you're right", Frank mutters at the closed door.

In Frederick, DiNozzo is teasing McGee for becoming more Canadian – McGee protests that it was only two weeks, but DiNozzo persists.

Taking pictures of the crime scene in a butcher shop, McGee reports that witnesses saw a Hispanic woman in her mid-30's leave the store after the gunshots. The victim is Charles Newberg, the co-owner of the butcher shop. McGee says that Newberg has a long rap sheet and had professed a desire to go straight, but the local police suspected the shop of being a drug distribution center.

DiNozzo suggests looking for the shop's truck as a possible get-away vehicle, and McGee issues a BOLO for the truck. DiNozzo notices a sign on the wall of the shop and quips to the trooper standing next to him, "$C'mon – $22 a pound for ribeye? THAT'S the real crime!"

In Gibbs' (boatless) workroom, Franks paces back and forth as Jackson patiently sands a dollhouse, and asks how long he has been working on it. Jackson replies, "Two months." Franks, in frustration, asks, "What's next – basket weaving?" Franks tells Jackson that they are old enough to know what is important, and that if this Reynosa woman wants trouble, "bring it on!" Jackson shakes his head. "I had my moment with Paloma Reynosa," he says, "and I'm not looking forward to the next one." Franks goes on to expostulate that they need to "grow some stones and take this senora down!" Gibbs hurries down the basement steps and tells his dad to ignore Franks, while muttering "Thanks, Franks." Defensively, Franks says that he has an opinion, and Jackson has a right to hear it. As Jackson is beginning to agree with Franks, Gibbs drily observes that it's hard to take someone seriously when they keep getting body parts blown off. Jackson entreats Gibbs: "Let's end this – not just for me, but for everyone."

In the office, Ziva is chuckling over an email. DiNozzo walks up and asks what is so funny, and Ziva says it is nothing, just an email from a friend. "A guy friend?" inquires DiNozzo, coming up and looking over her shoulder. She quickly exits out of the program and says, "Yes, my friend is a man." DiNozzo mutters, "Interesting... did you meet said 'man' in Miami?" Ziva looks at him incredulously as he answers the ringing phone. Suddenly, he has a serious look on his face, and tells the person on the other end to "send him up." Ziva, alert, asks what is up, but DiNozzo asks where Vance is. Vance magically appears, and DiNozzo tells him that someone is here to see him. Vance asks who, and DiNozzo nods to the elevator, where Alejandro Rivera is entering the office. Rivera walks up to Vance and says, "I think we should talk."

In his office, Vance tells Rivera that he has a lot of nerve, showing his face around NCIS. Rivera shrugs and declares that, legally, he has done nothing wrong. "What my sister does has no impact on my ability to represent the Mexican people." Vance looks at him and says, bluntly, "Your sister is a drug dealer and a murder – and I have reason to believe it runs in the family." Rivera protests that Vance's opinion is "unfounded", but Vance points out that Rivera's men fired on one of his agents. Rivera protests his innocence – "My men? I was in as much danger as Agent DiNozzo and Mr. Franks." Vance demands that Rivera get to the point, and Rivera tells him that his sister is there to set up a new pipeline from Mexico to the Canadian border, and he can give Vance details that will cripple her operation. "In exchange – for what?" asks Vance. Rivera says, "Extradition – let me take Paloma back to Mexico to be tried." Vance is skeptical, and points out that Paloma could have bribed her way across the border anytime in the last four months – why now? Rivera tells Vance that Mexico has realized the trouble that Paloma has caused, but Vance isn't buying it. Rivera shrugs. "Diplomacy – remember?" Vance tells Rivera that he has to discuss it with the State Department and the DEA. Dismissed, Rivera prepares to leave, surreptitiously slipping an electronic bug under the corner of the table. He tries to woo Vance to the idea – "so many lives, millions in drug money – international relationships are often built on compromise." Vance stares Rivera down: "Not my relationships," and pointedly opens the door.

The team is on the floor, gazing up at Vance's office, wondering what Vance and Rivera are talking about. DiNozzo mutters that he has a few things he'd like to say to Rivera, but Ziva points that they what DiNozzo would like to say would probably get him arrested. Gibbs joins them and watches Rivera come down the steps. McGee asks, incredulously, "Is Rivera – smiling?" Gibbs frowns and comments, "I saw a cat smile like, once." As Rivera passes the team, he pauses and greets Gibbs: "Agent Gibbs. What an unexpected surprise." Gibbs responds in kind: "How's your sister – Alejandro?" Rivera smiles and responds that, considering the stress of the situation, it's good to see Gibbs in such good spirits. At that moment, Abby walks into the office with a file. She looks up, sees Alejandro, and confronts him. "Senor Rivera. Well. What are you doing here?" Charmingly, Rivera smiles and says, "Abby – would you believe I came to see you?" Abby, flustered, stares at him and then says, "No." Rivera gently reminds her, "You know, I never did get that report." Abby tells him that she has sent it, multiple times, and Rivera muses that "Miss Hart was looking into the situation as well, but she's out of the country – but, I presume you have another print-out of your findings?" Abby says "No, there was just one." Rivera tells Abby that it's too bad how things turned out, and then goes on to tell her, "It's late, you should be going home – but be careful, the roads are dangerous." It sounds like a threat, and Gibbs reacts immediately, striding to stand in front of Abby and asking Rivera, incredulously, "What did you say?" Rivera innocently responds, "Nothing inappropriate, I hope?" Gibbs tells him that if he wants to threaten someone, Rivera can threaten him, not the people he works with. The whole team is bristling at the implied threat to Abby. Vance moves to flank Rivera, and Rivera glances at him, commenting, "Your team can be hotheaded and reactionary, Director – they aren't doing you any favors." Vance snarls, "Let me do you one – someone show Senor Rivera out, before he gets hurt." Rivera jerks his chin up. "By whom?" and Vance bites out, "by me."

Later that rainy, misty evening, Gibbs is walking Abby out to her car arm in arm, and Abby is bemoaning the fact that she ever went to Mexico, met Alejandro and finished that damn report. Gibbs observes mildly that Rivera is just trying to get inside her head, and Abby admits in frustration that he's inside her head, "and he's making himself right at home." Gibbs assures her that he's not going to let anything happen to her. Suddenly, Ducky runs up to them in the parking lot and shows them a small skeleton doll. Abby identifies it as a Mexican "Day of the Dead" doll, and Ducky tells them that it was tucked into his windshield. They (including Abby's bodyguard) look around the parking lot, and Abby spies one on her windshield, too. Ducky wonders if it is a message from "this afternoon's unwelcome guest," as Gibbs' phone rings. He answers it, and Paloma purrs, "Don't look forward to the day you stop suffering, because when you do, you'll know you're dead." Gibbs snaps back, "Got anymore Tennessee Williams for me, Pa-lo-ma?" Abby and Ducky exchange a startled look. Paloma continues, "You know how much I enjoy his work, Gibbs. I hope you enjoy mine." Gibbs snaps the phone shut, and then opens it quickly, calling McGee to trace the call. Abby asks Gibbs what is wrong, and Gibbs points to Darren and orders him to stay with Ducky and Abby. McGee locks onto the signal, and, alarmed, tells Gibbs, "It's right outside your house!" Gibbs starts to run, and tells McGee to tell the agents detailed to his dad. McGee tries to call, but the agents aren't picking up. Jumping into his car, he yells for McGee to send DiNozzo and Ziva "now!" and peels out of the parking lot at high speed.

Ducky and Abby share an alarmed look.

At his house, the front door is ominously open. Gibbs eases in, gun drawn, but no one is in the living room or kitchen. Gibbs hears a door squeak, and spins to point the gun at the basement door, but it's Jackson and Franks, who have been in the basement, unaware of anything happening. Suddenly, the back door flies open, and Ziva enters, gun drawn. Easing back, she reports that one guard is dead, and another is injured, the paramedics are on the way, and DiNozzo is putting out a BOLO on Paloma. Jackson asks, incredulously: "She was here?" Gibbs' eyes sweep the living room and find a "Day of the Dead" doll perched over the fireplace.

Jackson asks why she didn't finish the job, and Gibbs replies, "Because she's not done, yet."

Rivera is strolling out from dinner at Morgan's Steakhouse as Gibbs and Vance pull up, tires squealing, in front of the restaurant.

They leap out, and Vance is angry: "One of my agents is dead!" Rivera shrugs his innocence and says, "Well, I'm sorry," but Vance interrupts him: "Don't say you don't know anything about it!" Gibbs wants to know where Paloma is, but Rivera claims innocence, saying that if he knew, he wouldn't be trying to strike a deal. Gibbs gets into Rivera's face and declares, "You go after my father.

And then you go after my team. Does your sister want a fight? Because if she does, let's settle this right now – she's got one!"

Rivera is cool, and insists that he was merely having dinner as a guest of the United States. "Are you really threatening a representative of the Mexican government?" he inquires, as he pulls out his cell phone and dials a number. "Am I?" asks Gibbs, as Rivera says into the phone, "Mr. Ambassador, we have a situation..." Vance takes the phone from Rivera's hand, glances at the phone to see that it is, indeed, the ambassador's number, and then hands it back to Rivera, telling Gibbs, fatuously, "Gibbs, Senor Rivera must be tired." Gibbs protests, but Vance is firm, "No, we're done – for now." With a parting glare, Gibbs and Vance leave Rivera standing on the sidewalk. As they drive away, Rivera strolls across the street towards a car parked in an alley. Getting into the car, Paloma greets him and tells him, "It's time to avenge our father's death."

Back at Gibbs' house, Gibbs hands his dad a glass of milk, and as he sits down to wrap his badge in the black ribbon of mourning, Jackson tells him that he is sorry about his agents. Gibbs throws himself back on the sofa, looking at the ceiling for a moment, and then says, "Dad, I can stop this," he rises, and gives Jackson a long look, "but I'm going to need your help." Jackson meets Gibbs eyes steadily and responds, "Whatever it takes." Gibbs nods, and says, "Ok – let's go fishing."

Vance and DiNozzo enter the conference room, as Vance is telling DiNozzo that Gibbs has taken his father to the safe house at Church Creek. DiNozzo observes that it's isolated, and Vance warns DiNozzo to keep it quiet – no emails, no interoffice communication.

DiNozzo asks about a protection detail, and Vance tells him to assign one, but for now, Gibbs is with him. "Go and form your team," he tells DiNozzo, and DiNozzo leaves the office, with a fleeting "call" gesture as he closes the door.

Ziva and McGee are watching the computer and McGee observes that Alejandro is predictable – he is making an encrypted call to a cell phone on the move. "The same one Paloma used before?" Ziva asks, but McGee shakes his head and says that it's a different one.

Gazing at the screen, he tells Ziva to "call Gibbs and tell him 'the eagle has landed.'"

At home, Gibbs hands Jackson and Franks guns, and tells them it's time. Franks protests, telling Gibbs that Paloma won't stop until she gets what she's after. "Talking from personal experience?" Gibbs asks, needling Franks. Jackson wants to know what they are going to do when they get there and Gibbs tells him that they will wait. Franks asks him if he's sure it's going to work, and as Franks leaves, Gibbs mutters to himself, "No."

At the office, Vance calls Rivera, and tells him that he would like to discuss a "diplomatic compromise."

In the lab, Ducky and Abby are sharing a meal, and Ducky asks Abby if he ever told her about the first case he and Gibbs worked on together. Two sailors were out on a recreational skiff, and it capsized, leaving one sailor dead, and the other severely hypothermic. Abby asks if the other sailor drowned, and Ducky said no, that the surviving sailor stabbed him, claiming that it was more humane and convinced that his actions were justified. "Like Gibbs, twenty years ago," says Abby, softly. "What if this doesn't work?" she asks Ducky, worriedly. "What's going to happen to Gibbs?" Ducky tells her that in 1940, Winston Churchill sat in his bunker, "smoking one of those majestic cigars", waiting for news that the first German bombs were decimating London. "Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty," Churchill said, over the radio, "and so bear ourselves so that if the British empire and its Commonwealth lasts for a thousand years, men will still say 'this was their finest hour.'" "The hour is upon us, Abby," Ducky sighs, "all we can do is wait and see."

In his office, Rivera assures Vance that he is making a wise decision, that this kind of combined effort between the two countries send a powerful message to the international drug community. Vance is unconvinced: "One of my agents is dead, and your sister is going home. What kind of message is that?" Rivera assures him that it is for the greater good, but Vance is skeptical, telling him that there is nothing good about this. Suddenly, DiNozzo interrupts and hands Vance a slip of paper. Vance glances at it, slips the paper into a closed folder and snaps, "Details!" DiNozzo glances at Rivera, but tells Vance softly, "Unconfirmed." "Gibbs?" DiNozzo assures Vance,

"He's ok, he's going to spend the night in the safe house." Rivera inquires if everything is ok, but Vance puts him off, telling him that something has come up and they will have to continue later, and that the agent outside will show him out.

Rivera is agreeable, and Vance and DiNozzo leave the room. Quickly, Rivera removes the bug he had placed earlier, and he grabs the slip of paper. On it is written, "Paloma Reynosa Killed." Rivera is stunned.

In MTAC, McGee is at a computer, and Vance and DiNozzo enter at a run. "Anything?" snaps Vance? "He saw the note," McGee confirms, "and he keeps trying to call Paloma, but I'm blocking reception – no text messages, either." "He thinks she's not answering!" says Vance. "Right," confirms McGee. "Where is she now?" asks Vance, and McGee tells him that she is headed to the safe house in Church Creek.

On an isolated road, a car pulls off the road and parks next to some bushes. Rivera gets out – he is distraught, and clutching an AK-47 or similar machine gun. He takes a deep breath, and approaches the safe house. A light in the safe house is turned off as Rivera watches, confirming that someone is inside. Grimacing, he begins to fire into the house, blanketing the house in machine gun fire. Windows and shutters shatter. A moment later, a car comes peeling up behind him, and DiNozzo leaps from the car, yelling, "Drop your weapon!" while Ziva shouts, "On your knees!" Rivera drops to his knees, confused, but declares "I did it for my sister, to finish what she started!" Another car pulls up, and a man walks up. Throwing down the "Day of the Dead" doll by Rivera's head, Rivera looks up to see Gibbs standing there. Confused, he begins to babble, "But they said you were in there!" Gibbs says evenly, "No one said we were inside this safe house." Rivera accuses him of killing Paloma, but Gibbs just looks at him, and begins to walk toward the house. "But someone was in there!" Rivera insists. Standing in the door of the house, Franks is watching something inside. Gibbs sees Paloma lying on the floor, gasping, shot twice in the abdomen. Ziva leaves to call an ambulance and Rivera drops to his knees beside Paloma. They murmur to each other in Spanish. Paloma sees Gibbs, and quotes, "Will you walk into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly." She gasps. "Do you know that poem?" Gibbs gazes at her as she becomes quiet and dies, and then turns and walks out.

In Vance's office, Franks walks in and Vance hands him an airline ticket. "Leyla and Amira are waiting for you," he tells Franks. As Franks reaches for the ticket, Vance admonishes him, "Don't miss your flight." Franks smiles and thanks Vance: "Much obliged, Director," and leaves.

Back in Stillwater, Jackson is sweeping up debris from the floor of the store, and Gibbs is using a crowbar to remove the boards on the windows. Jackson thanks Gibbs for coming, and asks him if he can spare the time. Gibbs, concentrating on the boards, says, "You do what you have to for family." Jackson grins, and says, "Ain't that the truth," as he and Gibbs exchange an easy, intimate smile.

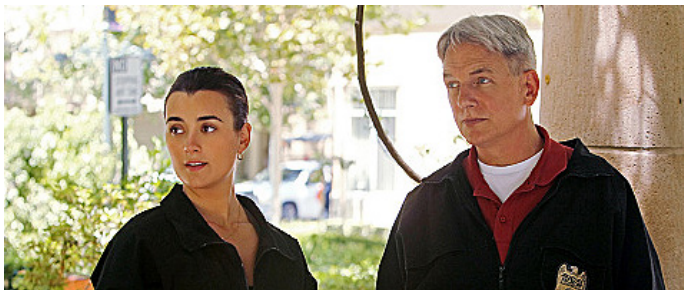

Vance is walking in a darkened warehouse full of hundreds of file boxes, holding Abby's report on the shooting of Pedro Hernandez.

He stops, places it in a box, and then carefully moves another box on top of it – the file is essentially "lost" in the files. As he is leaving, he receives a text message from Eli David: "I found him."

Summary: The NCIS team has to find a young girl that was kidnapped, but their investigation turns into something else when her grandfather gets way too involved.

In a middle-school classroom, an English teacher is starting a discussion on "Paradise Lost", but the class is bored – students surreptitiously texting, one boy is snoozing on his desk. The teacher turns and the cell phones are quickly stashed, but the boy continues snoozing, prompting the teacher to pull out an air horn and set it off near the boy. He jumps awake, to the giggles of the classroom. The teacher continues, but the all the students are suddenly falling asleep – or passing out. The teacher is dismayed, "C'mon, it's not that boring!" but suddenly he is affected, too, and falls to the floor as he stumbles towards the door. (Credits)

In the office, McGee is showing some two young men and a young woman around the office. DiNozzo wanders in and, spying the young people, asks Ziva if they are being replaced by younger models. Ziva sniffs, "I AM a younger model . . ." and tells DiNozzo that they are from Waverly University – Vance's new internship program. Tony quips, "It's not a good idea – it feeds McGee's need to have groupies!" He saunters over to the group and good-naturedly tells them not to get too comfortable – in fact, they really should be heading for the nearest exit! McGee introduces DiNozzo, and the female intern stares at his badge intently, and murmurs slowly, "mi- sa-ti-na" DiNozzo is taken aback, and the other interns explains that she just made an anagram of Tony's name, that's how she remembers things. Tony is unimpressed and tells her, in a bright voice, "That's VERY unattractive!" The third intern asks why they shouldn't get too comfortable, and Ziva comes up and tells them that Gibbs isn't fond of outsiders. Tony goes on to tell them. "He isn't going to like you. And frankly, you aren't going to like him, either." "Why not?" asks the female intern. Tony responds, "You see, I'm not going to answer that question. Because, if I do, he's going to walk up right behind me and make me regret it . . ." McGee tries to signal Gibbs' approach by raising his eyebrow, but DiNozzo charges ahead, warming to his topic: "Because that's the way he works. He slithers through the grass like a snake. He's not friendly. He's . . ." and winches as Gibbs smacks him upside the head with a file. "Done, DiNozzo?" asks Gibbs, and DiNozzo assures him that he was just thanking the interns for coming by. Gibbs replies, "Good – because they are staying – for the whoooole week." The team is astonished. Gibbs hands out assignment files to the interns: to the female, "Knox – autopsy. Seelus – forensics. Zuse, here." McGee eagerly offers to take charge of the intern, and Gibbs tells the team to gear up, there is some sort of gas leak at Quantico.

Walking down the school hall, DiNozzo reports to Gibbs that the principal has stated that the strongest chemical kept on school grounds is bleach, which rules out an accident. He also notes that the security cameras were turned off just before the attack. Gibbs smiles sourly and declares that to be convenient, and DiNozzo says that he will check footage for the last month to see if anything pops up. Gibbs tells DiNozzo to have McGee check the ventilation ducts. Surprised, Gibbs sees Ducky and his new intern coming in. "No body, Duck," he says, but Ducky explains that his new intern was very persuasive in wanting to see actual field work. Sarah bubbles over, "It's so exciting . . . it reminds me of the time that my grandmother took me to the Netherlands!" Ducky and Gibbs stare at her in wonderment – Ducky has met his match in random storytelling. Ducky and Sarah head off arm and arm as he encourages her to finish her story.

In the basement, DiNozzo and McGee examine a gas tank that has been rigged to empty into the ventilation ducts. McGee explains the procedure of taking photos before they remove the evidence, and his intern, Conrad, says ironically, "Here I thought I was going to be getting out of school this week, and now I'm right back in one!" McGee goes on to lecture about the need for detailed notes, but Conrad is casual: "When do we go home?" McGee asks him if anything is wrong, and DiNozzo adds, "Agent Conrad, you do realize that it is a crime to lie to a federal officer?" Conrad throws his arm out, encompassing the crime scene and tells them that he is a finance major – this sort of thing really isn't his speed. McGee asks him what he's doing there, and Conrad explains that after spending the summer on his father's yacht – "Yacht?" asks DiNozzo incredulously – he forgot to register for classes, and this was the only class that fulfilled his public affairs requirement. McGee asked him, "And being at NCIS was the only class?" "The only class that didn't meet on Fridays," nods Conrad. DiNozzo laughs as McGee grimaces.

While interviewing William Carmichael, the teacher, he asks why someone would do that. "A practical joke?" "Or an act of terrorism," responds Ziva, "or a diversion to acquire something of value here." Gibbs is wandering around the classroom. Gibbs asks if the building was always a school, but the teacher tells him that it was once an armory, and that everything has been long accounted for. Ziva confirms that everyone is there – 9 teachers, 105 students . . . but the teacher interrupts – there are 106 students. One is missing – and her bookbag is still hanging on her desk, with the name "Rebecca" on the side.

At the office, DiNozzo confirms that the missing student is Rebecca Mason, 13, who lives on base housing. Both parents are deployed on ships in the Gulf, and she is staying with her grandfather. Gibbs tells him to bring the grandfather in, but DiNozzo is already there – grandfather is on the way in, McGee is searching the basement, and Ziva is with the FBI coordinating a search at the house. Gibbs stares at him, and DiNozzo stops in confusion? "What – did I miss anything? Overstep my authority?" "No-o-o-" says Gibbs. "Then what's wrong?" Gibbs points at the picture of the pretty young girl on the screen. "That's not enough?" he inquires.

Mr. Mason is waiting in the conference room, gazing at Rebecca's cap. Gibbs enters, and he demands to know where his granddaughter is, and Gibbs assure him they will find her. Mason suggests that perhaps Becca got scared and ran off and hid somewhere, but Gibbs tells him that they suspect a kidnapping. Mason tells Gibbs that he doesn't understand how this could happen in the middle of a Marine base, with all the security. Gibbs shrugs. "Well, it makes it hard – not impossible," he says. Sitting down, Gibbs asks him why anyone would want to kidnap his granddaughter. Mason tells Gibbs that her mother just came into a lot of money. "How much?" asks Gibbs, and the grandfather replies, "We don't talk about that sort of thing in our family – but her father just bought a new pickup truck!" he said, shaking his head. Gibbs smiles slightly, and Mason goes on to tell Gibbs that he and Rebecca had planned to go fly-fishing that weekend. "How many 13 year old girls do you know would give up their weekend to go fly-fishing with their grandfather?" he asks proudly, and Gibbs smiles and agrees: "She sounds like a special girl," and Mason confirms it with a smile, "My world, Agent Gibbs – my world." Gibbs assures him that that won't change, but Mason tells Gibbs that he used to be an insurance actuary, and that the feds track record with child abductions isn't good. Mason's cell phone rings and, glancing at it, he tells Gibbs – "It's a satellite number – it's her dad. What do I tell him?" Gibbs tells him to tell her father that they are doing everything they can. Mason answers the phone, and Gibbs leaves him to talk in privacy.

In the lab, Abby is sternly telling her Seelus that he is not to touch her computer, her lab equipment, her MP3 player, her CaffPow, her desk, or "burp my Freddy Hippo without my express written consent." "Uh – how am I going to do anything?" inquires Seelus, but Abby goes on, prohibiting cameras or flash photography. He points out that he doesn't have a camera, but Abby interrupts, telling him that if she accidentally turns her back on him, he is to immediately move back to within her line of sight. Sarcastically, he asks, "Why don't I just wear bells?" but Abby, considering it, confirms that that is a really good idea. She goes on to say that they'll get it ironed out, but she's just had problems with people assigned to her lab. Reaching in a drawer, she hands him a necklace with bells on it. He looks at and declares that he isn't putting it on. They argue back and forth, and Seelus is saved from the bell by Gibbs, who strides in. Abby turns to him and demands, "Who are you, and what have you done with my Gibbs that doesn't like interns?!" Gibbs and Abby turn to gaze at the intern, who hurriedly moves to Abby's line of sight. She tells Gibbs that whoever moved the gas canister used gloves, so no fingerprints, but she was able to get an electrostatic impression of a boot print on the side of the canister, and she is trying to trace it. She then goes on to tell Gibbs that the canister contains one of the few chemicals that would have the ability to have such a widespread anesthetic reaction (glaring, she turns to the intern, who quickly moves to her line of sight), but that what's in the canister isn't one of them. In fact, she's never heard of the compound in the canister, and can't find any reference to it – which leads her and Gibbs to the same conclusion: The attacker was a chemist.

McGee is on the phone, extending the Amber Alert for Rebecca to a tri-state area, since they aren't sure how much of a lead they got. Conrad hands him a file and says, "Done," and McGee hands him another file and tells him to check for criminal records. Conrad protests that he saw McGee do it on the computer, and, to Ziva and DiNozzo's smiles, McGee tells him that he has to do it by hand to learn how to do the procedure properly. Conrad sighs and disappears behind the cubical, and DiNozzo smiles evilly and declares to McGee, "Now you understand – it feels good, doesn't it?" McGee gives him A Look, and as Gibbs comes in, DiNozzo tells him that there is no word on the BOLO for Rebecca, and that the FBI found nothing, but are set up in case there is a ransom call. Gibbs tells them that they are looking for someone with a chemistry background, and McGee offers to run Quantico visitor records against work experience, and Ziva will track down educational training. DiNozzo tells Gibbs that they are still trying to contact the girl's parents, and Gibbs is ready to chew DiNozzo out: "Trying?" he asks caustically, but DiNozzo tells Gibbs that the ship is on radio silence. Gibbs stares at DiNozzo for a moment, and realizes that the grandfather was lying to him. "Where is the grandfather?" Ziva tells him that Mr. Mason left to go home when Gibbs went down to see Abby. "Get him back here," he orders, and DiNozzo asks "what's up?" Gibbs tells them that Mr. Mason told him that he received a satellite call from the parents. "No way," declares DiNozzo, "and even if they did, it would be routed here through MTAC." Ziva breaks in to tell them that there is no answer at Mr. Mason's house – and at least the FBI should be answering. "McGee?" asks Gibbs, and McGee tells him that he is running a diagnostic on the phone line – the number has been forwarded to a Skype number, and it received a call 20 minute ago. McGee smiles and says that it's an internet call, and the calls are still cached – Gibbs is impatient, "What does that mean – can I HEAR it?" "Yes, we can hear it," confirms McGee. A computer-altered voice says, "If you want to see Rebecca alive, you will do exactly what we say." We hear Mr. Mason ask, "Is that you, Nick?" and then follow with "ok, I'm alone now, is Rebecca ok?" "Half a million dollars in cash. One hour. Alley at 59th and Osborne. Come alone or she dies." The team takes off – Conrad is left peering around the corner at the activity.

The team pulls up near the intersection, and Gibbs warns them that they are going in quietly. The team spreads out as Gibbs approaches the alley. McGee asks Gibbs why Mr. Mason didn't tell them that the kidnapper had called, and Gibbs tells him that he thinks that Mr. Mason didn't like their track record. McGee muses that Mr. Mason has a lot of guts, being over 60 and coming out on the meet alone. He then continues, "Actually, he's got guts being over 60 and having a Skype phone! Now that I think about it . . ." he says thoughtfully, "Not many guys his age . . ." Gibbs spies a pair of feet clad in work boots sticking out from the garbage – he draws closer, and see a man in khakis and a blue striped shirt lying dead behind the dumpster. "That's not Mason . . ." declares McGee unnecessarily.

At the office, they are staring at a picture of the dead man. His name is Eddie Lang – no chemistry background, but he does have a rap as a gun for hire. Ziva confirms that video surveillance shows him entering the base with bona fide credentials, and Abby has confirmed that the print she got off the gas cylinder matches his boot. Lang is a kidnapper – but is there more than one?

McGee comes in and tells the team that there are discrepancies in Mason's background – the actuary company where he said he worked is an empty shell company, his bank accounts reference accounts that don't exist, and on and on. "Nothing about this guy is real, boss," declares McGee. DiNozzo asks if he is a retired spook, but McGee says that no one has heard of him. Gibbs gets a call that Mason has called into MTAC, and he and McGee go to take the call. As they head upstairs, Conrad comments to Ziva, "I gotta say, you guys are good. You could be making a KILLING in the private sector!" DiNozzo looks at Conrad and then says, tightly, "And then who would be catching all the bad guys, Conrad?"

McGee notes that Mason is routing the telephone call through military satellites, somehow – untraceable, and he shouldn't even have access to those routes in the first place. Mason's first words are "It was self-defense." Gibbs tells him to come in and talk about it, and Mason replies, "We both know that's not going to happen." Gibbs accuses Mason of lying to him, and Mason apologizes, but explains that he didn't want NCIS to mess things up, so he went to the drop by himself. Mason is in a truck, with a computer open by his side. Gibbs asks, sarcastically, "Oh, yeah? How did that work out?" Mason tells him that he was lied to, also, and that Rebecca wasn't there as promised. He is calling Gibbs to warn him, "It's like Amateur Hour out there today," and Gibbs asks, "And you're the professional?" "I am what I am – bad luck for these guys," Mason replies. Gibbs encourages Mason to come him before he crosses a line he can't come back from. Mason is calm, but determined: "There's not a force on this planet that is going to stop me from finding my granddaughter. You have to work within the law. I am a bit more flexible." He hangs up. McGee notes, "He sounds serious," and Gibbs mutters, "No kidding."

Jimmy is entering autopsy and comes upon an astonishing sight: Ducky is conducting an autopsy, and is being observed by Sarah. Both are singing "Scotland the Brave" at the top of their lungs. Jimmy applauds as they come to the end, and they both turn to him in surprise. Ducky asks him how his dentist appointment went, and Jimmy says fine. Going to Sarah, he asks, "And who are you?" "Sarah Knox," she introduces herself, and Ducky explains she is an intern, whose ancestors are from a small coastal town north of Edinburgh. Jimmy is obviously jealous, "Scotland? That's great! Uh – when are you leaving?" he asks her. Sarah enthusiastically declares, "Hopefully never! The crime scene today was very exciting!" "Crime scene," repeats Jimmy. "You took her to a crime scene?" he asks Ducky. "Two," confirms Ducky, "she was very proficient." Sarah goes on to talk about how the dead have so much to tell us, and Gibbs enters, commenting wryly, "Well, I'm listening – what are they saying?" Ducky tells Gibbs that the cause of death was spinal shock by blunt force trauma to the cervical vertebrae. Jimmy not-so-gently moves Sarah away from the table as Gibbs circles to examine the body. "Mason broke his neck?" asks Gibbs, and Ducky goes on to describe other injuries to the body as the result of a fight – broken knuckles, torn ligaments, etc. They discuss that the body's wounds seem to be against a well-trained opponent. "If these are the result of a defensive struggle, I'd hate to see what he'd be like on the offense."

In the office, DiNozzo impatiently hangs up on a clairvoyant, who has called to say that she has seen Rebecca in the future, and tells Ziva that next time she has the crazy person tip hotline. He snaps over at Conrad, "You have anything good, Mini-Gee?" Conrad stammers that he had plans, but DiNozzo responds forcefully, "BUMMER!" Conrad folds silently. DiNozzo asks Ziva why he suddenly wants interns around, but Ziva doesn't know. They agree that there must be a reason. Ziva admits she has nothing on the dead kidnapper, but McGee comes in and tells them they found something in the car – a CD. He slips the CD into his computer, and they see a short video of Rebecca crying and pleading to be taken home, along with a newspaper showing today's date. Conrad is mesmerized – "That's really real," he says, and DiNozzo agrees solemnly: "As real as it gets." Suddenly, a virus alert goes off, and McGee tells them that there was a trojan virus on the DVD, and it's sending out a data packet over the internet to a phone number – theirs. The phone rings, and Gibbs puts it on speaker. A computer-altered voice declares that he is angry, because one of his men is dead. Gibbs asks him if his first call to NCIS was intercepted by a family member and the voice agrees, "Yes, the old man. We will deal with him later." and then goes on to tell Gibbs that the price is now $1 million, and they have 24 hours before it hangs up. McGee is frantically trying to trace the call, but was unable to – but routing is being pinged to a cell tower. In exasperation at the techno-speak, DiNozzo declares, "Can you at least pretend that you have a sex life?" but McGee explains that someone else is tracing the call. "Mason?" inquires Gibbs, and McGee points out that if they can trace the sniffer program, the kidnappers can, too.

At a trailer in a trailer park, Ziva and Gibbs arrive and call out to Mason. No answer, and the door lock is broken. Entering, they discover a gagged, dead and bloodied body, and Ziva surmises, "Looks like the kidnappers got here first – and Mason was waiting for them. This does not look like self-defense."

At the office, DiNozzo confirms that there is no trace of Mason. Jimmy meets Gibbs and tells him that Ducky found that the new John Doe had a lot of the same injuries as the previous victim, and that Abby found Mason's fingerprints all over the trailer. "We know," DiNozzo tells Jimmy impatiently. "Anything else I can do for you?" asks Jimmy. DiNozza points to "MTAC: Restricted Personnel" as Jimmy looks away and worriedly tells them, "It's getting a little crowded in Autopsy, I can read the writing on the wall . . .", but the door to MTAC is shut firmly in his face. In MTAC, Gibbs is talking to Rebecca's parents, Lisa and Nick. Nick tells Lisa to calm down, but she is upset and demands to know what NCIS is doing. Gibbs tells them that they are going to pay the $1 million, and Lisa tells them they don't have it – Nick finishes by saying that she only inherited half of that. Eyebrows go up. Nick goes on to ask, "Why did they double it? What did my father do now?" Cautiously, DiNozzo asks him why he said that, and Nick says that they had always known, growing up, that his dad wasn't an actuary, but they didn't know what was going on, but that there was a safe in his bedroom. DiNozzo dashes off to organize a search team. Lisa declares that they want their little girl back, and Gibbs assures her that they won't stop until they do. Lisa continues with a threat: If anything happens to Rebecca, Mason will be the least of Gibbs' worries.

Gibbs goes down to the evidence locker and is admitted. Outside the locker, Conrad is sweeping. Gibbs pulls an evidence box off the shelf, labeled "Approved for Destruction." As he takes the box to a table, the intern accidentally taps on the cage with his broom, and Gibbs turns around and stares at him. Conrad apologizes, and asks, "That's for the ransom, isn't it?" Gibbs continues to stare at him, and Conrad, taking the hint, mutters, "Let's just pretend I've never been born – instead of actually trying to learn something . . ." and starts to move away. Gibbs removes large stacks of bills from the box, and sighing, confirms that yes, it is for the ransom. Conrad is incredulous – "You can just do that? Just take the money like that?" "I can in two days," responds Gibbs laconically. Conrad thinks about this, and then tells Gibbs, earnestly, "You can get into a lot of trouble!" earning him A Look from Gibbs. "So why do it?" "It's my job," responds Gibbs. "Your job – is to stick your neck out?" Gibbs explains, replacing the box: "Building catches fire – most people run away. Some people . . . run in." Conrad observes, "It's not safe to run into a burning building," and Gibbs agrees. Using the retinal scanner, he calls the elevator and Conrad tells him that he knows he doesn't like interns on his team – what has changed? Gibbs shrugs and says, "I dunno – maybe, me?" and leaves.

McGee is combing through the contents of Mason's safe, exclaiming that he doesn't think he even has clearance to see the papers. Six hours to go before the kidnapper's deadline, and Gibbs want to find Mason. McGee explains that Mason has everything in the safe from classified Presidential itineraries to classified satellite codes. Jimmy wanders up and offers to be a sounding board, but Gibbs slaps his hand as he reaches for a file and he wanders away like a lost puppy. McGee will set up a snooper program on the satellite codes so they can track Mason if he tries to use them. Gibbs asks them if they are sure that Mason was on their side, and McGee says yes, but probably a long time ago. He quips that the kidnappers picked the wrong girl to kidnap – "It's like kidnapping Jason Bourne's granddaughter!" he exclaims. Abby's intern enters the office to let them know that Abby has found something. He is dressed in a white lab coat – and the bells are hanging around his neck. To his embarrassment, the team gaze at him in amusement. As Gibbs and the intern exit the elevator, his bells jangle. Gibbs stops for a moment, and the intern apologizes, but explains, "I'm sorry, but I'm more afraid of her than I am of you . . ." Gibbs enters the lab and sniffs, as Abby proudly declares "Mesquite grilled hamburgers, Gibbs!" He asks if she is flipping burgers or catching kidnappers. She gives her intern a signal, and he quickly sits, swiping a donut out of a box labeled, "For Parked Interns Only". She prompts him, "Michael!" and he races to the computer, bringing up a picture of a compound that Abby says is similar to the chemical in the cylinders, and was recently applied for patent. "Speak," she prompts the intern, and he tells Gibbs that the patent is for a sensory delivery system for billboards. Abby goes on to explain that billboards will not only entice drivers by sight, but now also viscerally by smell, and the chemical can take on an infinite variety of smells. "And the chemist?" inquires Gibbs with a smile. As Abby goes to her desk to get the name, the intern mutters with a grin to Gibbs, "She scary . . . but I like scary!" "Tim Greystone," she announces, "from Greystone Compounding Pharmacies!" Gibbs delivers the kiss on the cheek and leaves. She turns and the intern is right behind her, smiling. "Hi," he croons. "Oh, no!" exclaims Abby. "Don't go there!"

Outside the pharmacy, the team is trying to see inside, but they can't see anything. Ziva thinks it's doubtful that Rebecca would be kept in such a public space. Suddenly, DiNozzo and McGee spot Mason peering out from behind a crack in the curtains. The team enters at a run, McGee first, following by Ziva. Mason is standing over a body on the floor. McGee approaches him, but Mason delivers a flying kick and a headlock on McGee. Ziva runs to hold a gun on Mason, but finds herself flying through the air against the shelves. Gibbs calmly walks in and orders Mason to stop it. Mason releases McGee, and McGee tells him that he's under arrest for murder. Mason says that he didn't tell the man on the floor, and DiNozzo, skeptical, asks about the body at the trailer park. Mason tells them, "They aren't kidnappers. They are part of my team. Whoever did kill them is playing us all." In Interrogation, McGee and Conrad are observing Mason, who is eyeing the interrogation room with a practiced eye. "What's he looking for?" asks Conrad. "A way out," says McGee, but Conrad doesn't see how anyone could get out – it's escape-proof. McGee acknowledges that it's supposed to be, but if anyone could get out, it would be Mason. Gibbs enters Interrogation, and Mason tells him, bluntly, that they are wasting time. Gibbs asks who Mason is, but Mason is silent for a few beats. Gibbs observes, "NOW we're wasting time." Mason tells him that he isn't authorized to know, and Gibbs asks him who is authorized to tell him. Mason replies, "The President of the United States." Gibbs pulls out his cell phone, but Mason goes on to say, "The one buried in Simi Valley – out in California." (Note: Ronald Reagan) Gibbs is tired of playing games, and demands to be told what he needs to know.

Mason tells him that he and his team were part of an off-the-books experiment, a small group of operatives working within the law, but outside the chain of command. "We did the things that needed to be done – do you understand?" Gibbs asks how many, and Mason says eight, originally. The project was cancelled two decades ago, with three left. They returned to civilian life, given new backgrounds, and ordered never to be in contact with each other. "Orders you broke," observes Gibbs, and Mason explained that he broke orders when he went to his team for help with Rebecca's kidnapping. He then goes on to say that the sedative gas used at the school sounds exactly like a Greystone creation that they had used on operations to keep casualties to a minimum, but was sold on the black market later. He had hoped that Greystone could help him identify the buyer. Gibbs asks about the John Doe in the trailer, and Mason tells him that it was his comm. specialist, Ajax. Mason had retrieved a phone from the first kidnapper, and taken it to Ajax hoping that he could trace it. "Exactly like I was supposed to," he says, bitterly. Gibbs is beginning to understand – the kidnappers were after the team, not Mason's granddaughter. But who would want his team dead? Mason says, drily, "You're going to need a stenographer for that list – we got around." Mason is afraid that since the team is dead, his granddaughter might be, too. In observation, Conrad asks McGee worriedly – "Do you think she's dead?" McGee is unsure, and Abby walks in as Conrad asks, "So, what are you going to do?" Abby responds firmly, "We are going to do what we always do – catch the bad guys." She then asks McGee to let Gibbs know that she needs to see him immediately.

In the evidence garage, Abby and her assistant are peering at Mason's car engine, with DiNozzo observing. As Gibbs enters, DiNozzo laughingly tells Gibbs that while no one wants to comment on Mason, they do have a "request" to drop all the charges. "So drop 'em," commands Gibbs, to DiNozzo's surprise. DiNozzo scurries to make the arrangements. Gibbs asks Abby what she has found and she says, "Not me – my new Number 1!" as she gestures toward Michael. They have found a slight tear in the fuel line that didn't get there by accident, which would have caused the car to explode. They also found fingerprints, which would have been destroyed in the explosion.

The fingerprints belong to Walter Carmichael – the substitute teacher at Rebecca's school, who had been a member of Mason's team and handled long-term counter-espionage. He had been reporting as dying in Sri Lanka in 1987. After the attack on the school, he told the administration that he needed some time off to "recuperate", or, as DiNozzo notes, "to go kill off his former team members." But why? Revenge? Bounty hunting? McGee and a team are at his house now, but no sign of Rebecca, and unless they can figure out what is motivating him, they are going to have a hard time determining his next move. Gibbs decides to talk to Ducky.

In Autopsy, Ducky is deep into a book entitled "The History of Flagellation." Ducky tells Gibbs that he was expecting him, and hazards a guess as to his question: "You want to know if the girl is still alive." "No," retorts Gibbs, "I want to know how to get her back alive." Ducky has been going over Carmichael's records, but it's difficult, because prior to 1987, they were probably all falsified. Carmichael reinvented himself as a missionary in Cameroon for twelve years, then documents that he had worked in a hospice, then as a teacher – Ducky believes that Carmichael felt remorse for the killings he had committed while part of the team, and was trying to seek atonement in good works, but then got frustrated and decided on a more direct method. McGee had found several tools that pointed to the possibility that Carmichael was engaged several acts of atonement, such as a hair shirt and self-flagellation. Ducky goes on to say that the guilt became too much and he felt driven to remove the remaining members of the team. Gibbs wants to know how Rebecca fits in, but Ducky is not encouraging – apparently Carmichael now feels that he answers to a "higher power", and is capable of anything. Ziva hurries in with a cell phone in hand – Carmichael is on the phone and wants to talk. Ziva suggests that he knows that NCIS is holding Mason, and may want to trade Rebecca for Mason to get at Mason.

The unmarked car pulls up to a pretty, flower-lined city street. The team escorts a handcuffed Mason from the car. Gibbs, McGee and DiNozzo escort Mason to the meeting spot. Ziva is in position with a sniper rifle trained on the spot. "Well, we're here, where is he?" asks DiNozzo, and Mason grunts, "He's here." Carmichael, dressed as a homeless man, rises from the park bench and confronts the team. With guns trained on him, he tells them that if they shoot him, they will never find Rebecca. Carmichael tells Gibbs to release Mason to him and they will get in car and drive away, calling Gibbs in an hour with Rebecca's location. Gibbs asks about Mason, and Carmichael responds, "Oh, his fate is out of my hands – I am only an instrument of justice." Mason declares, "Your elevator never went to the top floor!" as he quietly slips his hands out of the loosely attached handcuffs. DiNozzo asks how they know that Rebecca is still alive. Suddenly, Mason grabs DiNozzo's gun and points it at Carmichael, saying that Rebecca is already dead. A scuffle ensues, Ziva shoots, and Mason falls to the ground. Gibbs races to the body to take a pulse as Carmichael smiles and begins to mutter Bible verses on avengement. Gibbs yells in frustration at Ziva, who is scrambling down the embankment – "Why did you take the shot?!" and Ziva screams back at him, "Mason was going to shoot!" Carmichael, satisfied, tells Gibbs that Rebecca is in the trunk. Ziva and Gibbs race to the car, Ziva quickly picks the trunk lock, and they find Rebecca bound and gagged, but safe. DiNozzo, gripping Carmichael, comments "Well, the girl's alive," and Carmichael affirms that "wanton collateral damage is one of our sins, she's an asset . . ." Suddenly, he trails off in horror, as Mason pushes himself off the sidewalk and asks, "So what am I – chopped liver?" Rebecca runs into her grandfather's embrace. Mason thanks Gibbs and tells him, "I could have used a guy like you on my team." Gibbs responds, "We can still use a guy like you." Carmichael is still stunned. "But . . . but . . ." Mason points to the "bullet wound" in his shirt. "Corn syrup," he says. Wildly, Carmichael looks at Ziva. "Blanks," she says.

In the office, McGee and Conrad observe the team returning, Carmichael in custody, and Jimmy clearing an unnecessary path for the group. Conrad looks at McGee and says, "That's it? A happy ending?" McGee peers over at the group and observes, "Not exactly. There's the happy ending," he notes to Conrad, as Rebecca flies across the room calling "Mom! Dad!!" and gets swept up in a bear hug from her parents, who have just arrived. "Feels nice, doesn't it?" asks McGee, and Conrad admits that he could get used to it – "but not the pay. But let's just say I was interested . . ." McGee hands him an application packet with the title "Student Internship Application," and tells him that it is an application for a full internship at NCIS. Gibbs continues from his desk, "It's all filled out – it just needs your signature." Conrad smiles in disbelief, and Gibbs offers him a pen.

Production Code: 165
Summary: The NCIS team has to work with the FBI when they learn that a female bomb tech is linked to a murder.

A half-dressed man tries to make plans for another rendezvous with his younger lover. They hear noises downstairs. Heather grabs a gun and goes downstairs. She shoots the intruder.

In the office, Tony tries to look natural for a photo shoot for the new NCIS recruiting brochure. He doesn't exactly turn out photogenic. Gibbs comes to announce the murder of the week: a Marine shot an intruder. The PR people snap away at Gibbs as the team leaves.

At the house, Ziva learns Heather is a bomb tech (think "Hurt Locker"). Her phone rings, she's on call. There's a bomb threat on the Navy base.

Tony comes downstairs, announcing that Heather's bed looked slept in on both sides and her toilet seat was up. The intruder's finger prints have been removed - from his hands, not the surfaces.

In the lab, Abby works on lifting the serial number off the intruder's gun. There's nothing on facial recognition. They listen to Heather's 911 call. She's very calm, saying she shot someone who broke into her house. They find a man's voice talking on the phone in the background, confirming Tony's theory.

They get background on Sgt Heather Dempsey, who filed a lawsuit against the board of ed in high school when they wouldn't let her play football. She's done two tours in Iraq and has never been married. She has a brother. They don't know who the guy was.

McGee tracks cell phone calls in the area.

Ron the PR guy tells Tony he needs the cover by tomorrow but doesn't have the shot. Tony and Ziva go to find Heather at the bomb threat on the base. Tony lets the PR people tag along.

In the morgue, Duckie tells Gibbs the intruder had a liver transplant 20 years ago.

On the ship, Heather watches the bomb-sniffing robot two decks down. Tony tells her they know she wasn't alone. Heather wants to go diffuse the bomb manually and tells her guys to get the robot out. She suits up.

The bomb is in a backpack, tangled on something. She untangles it. She ignores warnings and opens it. It doesn't explode but she sees it's on a timer – with 5 seconds left. She turns to leave. Then it explodes. She's stunned but OK.

McGee tells Gibbs the bomb was more flash than bang and Gibbs thinks it was someone wanting to make a statement.

McGee tells Gibbs he's eliminated every cell phone in the area that night but one. It's registered to the FBI.

Agent Fornell drops by Gibbs' as he irons. He brought lamb curry, which neither of them like. But he had a coupon. Gibbs asks about the cell phone. He takes one bite of the curry and throws it out. He gets cereal instead. Fornell tells Gibbs the guy is way up in the bureau, above both of them: Gary Tolan, executive assistant director of the criminal investigations division.

Fornell tries the curry. He'll be having cereal, too.

In the lab, Abby is stumped by the gun. Palmer comes for help with the body. He wants a computer search of the transplant list from 15 to 20 years ago.

Tony brings in Tolan to watch as Gibbs talks to Heather. She says she met Tolan that night as a speaking engagement and he told her he was married after she shot the guy. Tolan panicked and left.

Tolan tells Fornell he hopes no one will tell the bureau or his wife. He says he'll cooperate.

Abby reports her transplant results, narrowed down to one guy: Glover Reese. He spent 10 years in prison for attempted murder, where he got his transplant. His prints were found at the scene of two unsolved murders, both suspected to be contracts. He was a hit man.

Gibbs and Fornell go to Tolan's house. Fornell hasn't been able to reach him. His wife says he packed a bag and left a few hours ago, citing business. She has no idea where he is. She's a little concerned the FBI doesn't know where he is either.

Tony waits for Heather at her house, breaking the news that she shot a hit man. He tells her they might have to put her under protective custody. He wants to know what she saw in Tolan. She claims father complex.

The next day, Fornell brings in the cases Tolan supervised in the last five years. Police found an abandoned stolen car near Heather's house and it's in the lab. Fornell has been able to confirm Tolan didn't leave on FBI business.

Ron the PR guy brings in his handiwork, a giant cut out of Tony with a cheese-eating grin, holding up a badge.

Gibbs goes to check on the car. They found surveillance photos of Heather – she was the target. When McGee calls her, she turns off her cell phone.

They track her to Howard rehab center.

Gibbs tells Fornell that Heather was the target, which doesn't explain why Tolan bailed. Tony still thinks they're up to something.

At the rehab center, McGee and Ziva meet Heather's brother Judd, who's in a wheelchair after getting shot in the back. He says he got caught in the crossfire of a drug war in DC. He's paralyzed from the chest down. They caught the guy, Gene Abbott, and he was given immunity for testifying against the gang. Tolan approved his deal and relocation.

Tony busts out a "Body Heat" revenge reference.

McGee has been able to confirm by cell records that Tolan had been to Heather's before. Tony thinks Heather seduced Abbott's new name and identity out of Tolan. They think she plans to kill him.

They think Abbott could have hired the hit man after learning she was after him.

In MTAC, Gibbs goes to talk to Fornell, who has Tolan with him. He tells them Heather used him and he's resigning.

Gibbs and the team go to Abbott's new home on a farm in Maryland. Heather's truck is already there. They find her standing over him in the barn. He has a bomb strapped to his leg.

Gibbs and Ziva go in. There's a motion sensor on the bomb, which has been strapped to him for a couple days, Heather explains.

Taking his time, Gibbs doesn't think they need to call the bomb squad, since Heather is there. Gibbs wants to know if Abbott put out a contract on Heather. He admits it, saying it was self-defense. A neighbor saw her snooping and got her license.

Gibbs tells Heather she doesn't want to ruin her life for Abbott. She gives Gibbs the detonator and then tells them they can remove the bomb themselves – it's fake. She wanted Abbott to feel what her brother does every day.

Gibbs comes home to find Fornell cooking pasta puttanesca. He says he's trying to "curry favor." (Har har.) Abbott was charged with conspiracy to commit – not covered by his immunity. Gibbs isn't inclined to charge Heather and thinks no jury will convict.

The next day, Tony's in work early, waiting to see the final brochure. Ron tells him the director's happy with it. The director wanted the imagine of NCIS to be one of authority. He takes out the picture – it's Gibbs.

Summary: The team is involved in an international incident as they investigate the murder of an American petty officer whose body was found aboard a British ship.

A real estate agent is standing in front of a foreclosed bungalow with an exterminator, trying to get the house fixed up. The exterminator zeros in on a hot tub that is full of stagnant water as a major source of mosquitoes, and after testing the water, decides to pump the water out. As the water begins to lower, the body of a Navy officer becomes visible. (Credits).

In the office, Tony is sitting at Ziva's desk, trying to get access to her computer. Ziva walks in and is surprised and suspicious to see Tony at her desk. Tony gives the excuse that he's lost his contact, but Ziva reminds him that he doesn't wear glasses. "Maybe I started!" declares Tony, to which McGee replies, "And maybe you're lying?" Tony tells McGee to "butt out, McThirdWheel," as Ziva quickly zips through her computer, trying to figure out what Tony was doing. She discovers that he was trying to open her email. Tony says that there is no way she could know that, but Ziva tells him that McGee has installed a high-tech security program on her computer. McGee is grinning, and declares, "You got caught - redhanded!" and Ziva shows Tony a photo caught by the webcam of him sitting at her computer. She asks him why he wants to see her mail, and he admits that since she came back from Miami, she's been different, talking to "Miami Heat." She smirks and tells Tony, "He's just a friend. You're jealous!" Tony denies that he is jealous, but piously declares that he "is concerned about our national security." Ziva assures him that "Miami Heat" has a very high security level, to which Tony frowns. "Now you're just trying to make me feel inadequate." Gibbs strides in and says, "No, that's my job, DiNozzo," and tells the team that they have a dead petty officer. Ziva tells Tony that she is riding with Gibbs, and as Tony turns to Tim, McGee smirks, "Now who's the third wheel?" "Shut up!" exclaims Tony, following McGee to deliver a head-smack. McGee adroitly ducks, but as Tony swings, he feels a head-smack of his own, delivered by Gibbs.

At the crime scene, Tony quips, "This tub needs a new filter!" An AFIS scan of the victim's fingerprints show that he is Petty Officer 1st Class Edward Bick, stationed in Norfolk, assigned to the U.S.S. Lockwood. Gibbs laconically orders, "Fish 'em out." McGee is reluctant, pointing out that the hot tub could be considered a HAZMAT situation, and that he's red-tagged it as evidence for the mosquito larvae, and . . . Gibbs is unimpressed: "Get in the hot tub, Tim." McGee unenthusiastically prepares to follow orders, as Tony gets in a crack: "'Get in the hot tub, Tim' – I guess you've never heard that before, huh?" As McGee pulls on boots, he tells Tony that he used to study in the Jacuzzi on the roof of his dorm at school. Tony is unsurprised that McGee would use a hot tub to study. As McGee gingerly steps into the tub, he realizes that he is going to be raising the level of the water and it will go over into his boots, and points out the displacement problem. Gibbs is unsympathetic. "Swim, Tim." As McGee makes his way over to the body, the team winces in sympathy, and Tony quips that it reminds him of the "I Love Lucy" episode where they are squishing grapes in a large tub. He and Palmer laugh, but quickly quiet as Gibbs stares them down. They hurry to help pull the body from the tub. Ducky is unable to determine a time of death because the body has been in the water too long, and tells Gibbs they won't know a cause of death until he gets him back to Autopsy. Palmer notes that the body has a "through and through" (bullet exit wounds) and Ziva finds part of a round in a board, which indicates the approximate location of the shooter. No brass, so either the shooter retrieved their brass, or used a revolver. Ducky, as he examines the body, suggests that perhaps he died by drowning elsewhere. Palmer is puzzled: why shoot a dead man? Ducky then discovers that the victim's abdomen has been slit open, along with his stomach, and surmises that someone was looking for something in the sailor's stomach. Palmer is curious why they would bother zipping the victim's jacket back up, but Ziva offers that it probably made the body less messy to transport. It's a puzzle.

In the office, they review Bick's file, who was born in Concord, CA, assigned to the U.S.S. Lockwood, two tours in Afghanistan in the medical supply corps. Excellent service record, married to his high school sweetheart, Tara Bick. Tony quips, "She was a cheerleader. He was her 'tight end.'" Gibbs tells Tony and Ziva to interview the wife, but both start to protest being teamed together. Gibbs cuts them off and sends them on their way, and McGee starts to track Bick's last movements.

Tara Bick is standing in the driveway, crying softly, telling Tony and Ziva that she and Bick were going to be starting a family. As they are talking, a car wheels into the driveway and a man wearing a Navy working uniform jumps out and dashes up to Tara, telling her that he jumped in the car as soon as he heard. "Jason!" she sobs, hugging him. He whispers that he is so sorry, and Tara introduces him to Tony and Ziva. He explains that he and Ed were stationed on the Lockwood together and they were "tight." He adds, "I knew something like this would happen," and goes on to explain that Ed had been acting nervous, really out of character. "Eddie was fearless," adds Tara. "Tell them!" Jason tells her that he can't, and Tara tells Tony that Eddie had been selected for a special duty assignment. "On the Lockwood?" asks Tony, but Jason says no, Eddie hadn't been on the Lockwood in two months. Tony is confused, because the duty roster shows that Bick signed in every day. Jason is skeptical: "Yeah? Well, don't believe everything you read," and goes on to speculate that whatever secret assignment Eddie was on, it probably got him killed. Tara adds that Eddie felt like he was being watched, and describes a noise that she heard outside her house three nights before, and found Eddie peeking out the windows, telling her that someone was watching the house. Ziva asks if she saw anyone, and Tara says no, but that she did hear a car drive off.

In Autopsy, Ducky tells Gibbs that Bick did, indeed, die by violent drowning, but not in the tub, due to the lack of algae in his lungs. He is still puzzled by the shooting of the body, though. Gibbs wanders over and, watching Palmer carefully slice off pieces of a lung, asks him what he is doing. Palmer tells him that Ducky noticed an irritation in the lining of the lung, and is taking samples to test for an allergic reaction. Ducky also shows Gibbs an indentation in the victim's head, caused by some sort of metal object. Spying something in the victim's mouth, Ducky extracts a small piece of paper – part of a $100 bill. But no money was found in his digestive tract, which adds to the puzzle.

In the lab, as Gibbs enters, Abby calls out frantically, "Gibbs, Gibbs!" Rushing into her office, he finds her on the floor, hunched over – she has a charley horse cramp in her leg. As he helps her up and massages her leg to ease the cramp, she begins to explain that she was on the floor because of a documentary on a contortionist she had watched the night before. Impatiently, Gibbs drags her chair to her computer keyboard and redirects her attention to the computer screen. She explains that the two bullet fragments were the same bullet, and shows how they had split apart. She then identifies the gun that was found, a Webley 38, a rare gun that is no longer made. The water in Bick's lungs showed high levels of marine fuel and lubricant used on Navy vessels, as well as oil dispersants. She confirms that both salt and fresh water was in his lungs, and tells Gibbs that wherever Bick drowned, it had both salt and fresh water – or at least condensation. She then goes on to identify the rust and substance found in the head wound as a cleanser used only on marine craft, and is not American-made. Gibbs hands her a well-earned Caff-Pow and runs out as she assures him that she is still trying to identify a possible weapon.

In the office, Ziva is flipping through a file drawer, and Tony is on the computer. "Apologize," she demands, suddenly, and Tony, not looking up, asks "What for?" "For being you," huffs Ziva. Tony, still intent on his computer screen, quips, "Sweetheart, if I had a dollar for every time I had done that, I'd be loaded." Ziva slams the file draw shut and turns to confront Tony. "You could have just asked to see my email," she informs him, but Tony, still looking down, retorts, unsmiling, "You knew I was curious – you could have just told me." Gibbs comes in and declares that someone better tell him something. Tony puts up . . . a blank screen. "We have nothing, Boss," sighs Tony, and McGee explains that Bick was working on a classified Navy project with the CIA, which NCIS hasn't been read into. Tony tells Gibbs that SecNav is going to have to give them access, and as Gibbs turns away, Abby races in, computer touchpad in hand, and explains that she has identified what hit Bick in the head, a particular steam control valve, made by Barrish Industries, out of Liverpool, who makes fittings for the British Royal Navy. McGee quickly finds that the only British Royal Navy vessel currently in Norfolk is the H.M.S. Sparrowhawk. Ziva and Tony realize that the murder probably happened on a British vessel – which is technically British soil. Tony wonders, "Do we even have the authority to investigate this, Boss?"

In Vance's office, Vance introduces Gibbs to Major Malloy, a handsome, young British Royal Marine. Gibbs shakes hands, and Vance explains that Malloy is the liaison between the U.S. and British navies while their ships are in American port. Gibbs is unimpressed and cuts to the meat of the issue: "We need access to your ship." Malloy glances at Vance, who confirms that he has already requested permission for NCIS to board the Sparrowhawk, however, Malloy adds that unfortunately, the Sparrowhawk's orders are to sail at 11:00. Gibbs points out that the ship is probably a crime scene, but when Malloy apologizes, Gibbs interrupts and points out that the Sparrowhawk entered the U.S. under the Status of Forces Agreement, which Vance confirms gives NCIS the authority to investigate a crime aboard a British ship in U.S. waters. Malloy adds a caveat, "With one exception: if the mission of the ship is deemed of a critical nature and cannot be disrupted. I'm terribly sorry, gentlemen," he adds, smiling, "but I'm afraid Her Majesty's vessel will be leaving in two hours." Gibbs and Vance exchange a long look, and as Gibbs turns to leave, he tells Malloy, "Good luck getting out of port," as he walks out the door. Malloy is offended, "Excuse me?" he exclaims, but Gibbs turns on his heel and storms back into the office. "You're sailing off with MY crime scene," he declares. Vance warns Gibbs, softly, "Gibbs . . ." as Malloy, affronted, declares, "You Yanks really are like John Wayne, aren't you?" Gibbs corrects him: "Gary Cooper!" Malloy instantly picks up the reference: "Sergeant York? Of course, how silly of me," he says mockingly. "You know, I heard you were a former Marine, Gibbs," he continues. "Always," corrects Gibbs, but Malloy goes on to point out that the U.S. Marines were modeled after their British counterparts and that they are allies. Gibbs is unimpressed, "Well, then, you better start acting like one," and explains that he's got a murderer on his hands, and he may be on Malloy's ship. Vance breaks the deadlock by calling SecNav, "before the two of you get into a saber duel in the parking lot."

Malloy follows Gibbs onto the floor, looking around and commenting, in very upper-crust British, "Charming facility." He spots Ziva and asks Gibbs if this is his team. Gibbs sighs and tosses out, "Everybody, this is Peter Malloy, Major, British Royal Marines." Ziva rises and, with a big smile, introduces herself as "Probationary Agent Ziva David," and Malloy correctly guesses, with great charm, that from her accent that she is from Tel Aviv and the Haifa coast. Impressed, Ziva confirms his guess, and returns one of her own, "North London?" which he confirms. Tony, stern-faced, comes up and introduces himself and receives a "Pleasure's all mine, mate," as Malloy comments that his brother's name is also Anthony and was best man at his wedding, "a previous marriage, of course," he adds in an aside directed at Ziva, who smiles and murmurs,

"Of course." McGee introduces himself, and Malloy half-jokingly declares that "Oh, an Irishman. Well, I promise not to hold that against you," which leaves the team speechless. Gibbs has had enough: "Are we through with our tea and crumpets? Malloy – beat it," he says, shooing Malloy away, but Vance interrupts that SecNav has granted NCIS permission to board the Sparrowhawk. Malloy says that he has to clear it with fleet command in London, and Gibbs snaps, "As long as it doesn't take any time!" Vance, seeing the hostility, declares Ziva to be "Switzerland", between the "U.S." and "England", nodding to Malloy and Gibbs. Tony interrupts to tell Gibbs that Abby needs to see him, leaving Malloy and Ziva smiling at each other uneasily.

In the lab, in front of a curtained off contraption, Abby shows Gibbs that the scrap of the $100 bill is coated in an ultraviolet florescent powder that would rub off on anyone touching it, and can only be seen under a black light. Abby ran the black light on Bick's stomach, and found that there was at least one $100 bill there at one point. She then tells Gibbs that the coating is also emitting a radio signal of some sort, detectable by a short-wave radio, and points out that if they knew the frequency, they would be able to track this cash – and anyone who touched it – for miles. However, there isn't enough in the sample to track, and when Gibbs wonders how to find it, Abby tells him that the CIA uses it as a tracking device.

At the Norfolk shipyard, Gibbs introduces himself to the Norfolk CIA agent, Miss Tennison, and asks her if she can identify the picture of Bick. She says no, and when he tells her his name is Bick, he was murdered, and that they think he was working with the CIA in Norfolk, she reminds him that the CIA doesn't work domestically. Gibbs emits a short laugh. "Really? What's all this, then?" he asks, gesturing at the busyness around them. Miss Tennison tells him that they are staging for an overseas operation. He asks if Bick worked for her, and she gives him the party line again, firmly, that they do not have operations inside the US, and if he was murdered, she has no knowledge of it. Gibbs shows her piece of the tagged $100 bill, and tells her that he thinks it was CIA money, and that whoever stole the CIA money, killed Bick. Tennison admits that there was an operation to deliver cash to warlords and tribal leaders in Helmand Province in Afghanistan, and points out that Helmund is under British control, but the mission was scrubbed the week before and the money never made it on the ship, so it is unlikely that Bick was killed for the cash. Tennison walks away as Gibbs receives a phone call from Tony: Malloy is at NATO headquarters, trying to obtain permission to set sail.

At NATO, Tony is scrutinizing Ziva until Ziva demands, "What?!" He smirks, "Oh, I'm just watching the pheromones oozing from your body." She glances down at her clothes and declares that she sees nothing, and Tony says, "That's because they are invisible. It's just a musky scent given off to attract the opposite sex," he continues, half-accusingly. Ziva declares that he is being ridiculous, but Tony maintains that it's true: "First your Miami Vice, and now your Prince Albert In A Can." He laughs. "Oh, they can't help it – you're just a walking Israeli love machine." Ziva spots Malloy hurrying over and observes that Malloy is charming, and Tony wonders, "What is it with chicks and Brits – Jagger, Bono, Beatles, Bond . . .?" Ziva misses the cultural reference and assures Tony that she is not into bondage before she greets Malloy. Malloy tells them Fleet Command have just requested that they leave immediately. Sarcastically, he adds, "Tell your Agent Gibbs that I AM sorry." As he walks away, Tony nods at Ziva, who hurries to intercept Malloy. Seductively, she asks, "Well, it takes a few minutes for a big ship to get underway. Couldn't we just have a quickie?" Malloy is stunned, and Tony grins at the pole-axed reaction.

On board the Sparrowhawk, Ziva and Tony enter the engine compartment, looking for the fitting. Tony complains that it is like looking for a needle in a haystack, and Ziva is confused: "Why would anyone leave a needle in a stack of hay, anyway?" Using the ship plans provided by Abby, they enter a room with standing water from dripping condensation. Spying the fitting, Tony photographs it quickly, but Malloy enters behind them, declaring that their departure has been moved up and they will have to leave. "What about our quickie?" asks Ziva, but Malloy, unsmiling, responds that a weather alert demands that they leave immediately. Tony tells Malloy that they have just found the crime scene, but Malloy is unsympathetic. "That's a pity. My men will have to deal with it from our end." Tony points that he has his orders, and Ziva asks what happens if they stay on board. Malloy points out that twelve miles out to sea, they are in international waters, where their jurisdiction ends. As Tony begins to call Gibbs, an alarm goes off. Malloy catches a passing sailor and asks what the trouble is, and is told that one of the turbines is malfunctioning. As they proceed down the corridor, Gibbs pops out through a hatch and observes, "Something wrong? It's a big ship – anything can go wrong . . ." Malloy storms off, Tony shows Gibbs the photo and Gibbs tells him to hurry back and gather more evidence. Tony observes it's lucky that the turbine is malfunctioning, and Gibbs tells Tony, "There's no such thing as luck," as he holds up a heavy-duty wrench with a mischievous grin.

Malloy and Gibbs confront each other and Gibbs demands to know if Malloy is accusing him of something. "Yes, sabotage!" declares Malloy, and Gibbs protests that that is a serious accusation. As they stare each other down, the captain comes up and says that it was a minor repair, the ship will be under sail in ten minutes, and for Gibbs to remove his people. Back in the engineering compartment, Tony and Ziva are splashing around looking for anything that might be a clue. As the engines roar to life, Tony takes a small black light out of his pocket and lights up the space, where the signs of the tagging powder are very visible. "Money talks," he observes, and takes a black-light photo.

Gibbs confronts Tennison again with the black-light photo and tells her that she lied to him, the money was on the ship. She disagrees strongly, confirming that the last mission was scrubbed but that the ship had been used before to track to targets they might want to eliminate – but not this time. Gibbs points out that the Sparrowhawk have never been to the Middle East. Tennison is exasperated: "We are the CIA, Agent Gibbs – we don't leave paper trails!" Gibbs tells Tennison that Bick swallowed the money just before he died just to prove that it was there. Tennison pulls Gibbs aside and tells him that she worked with Bick and that she liked him a lot. "You've got a funny way of showing it, babe," he tells her. She goes on to tell Gibbs that only three people knew about it – Bick, who was on board guarding it, herself, who just lost $3 million, and the "limey bastard who was in charge of coordinating the helicopter money drops to Helmund Province." "Malloy?" guesses Gibbs, which Tennison confirms it.

McGee calls Gibbs and tells him that he has surveillance tapes from the east gate of the Norfolk shipyard, and has found Malloy's car leaving the gate about 20 minutes after Bick was murdered. Gibbs asks for phone records, and McGee finds that Malloy made a phone call from his cell less than a quarter of a mile from where the body was dumped. Gibbs tells McGee to send Tony and Ziva to pick Malloy up, and when McGee asks if Malloy's already set sail, Gibbs tells him to get a helicopter, because the ship is still in American waters.

In Interrogation, Malloy is dipping a tea bag into a cup of hot water and observing that it's no wonder that American tea all tastes like paper. Gibbs carefully takes the cup away and leaves Malloy dangling a tea bag over the table, and helpfully provides a cup lid for him to dispose of the tea bag. Gibbs tells Malloy that Bick was there to guard $3 million in marked CIA money. Malloy shrugs and says that he is just a liaison officer who coordinates between Royal Navy, American and NATO forces. Gibbs asks him where the money is, and Malloy says that he has no idea. Gibbs shows him a picture of the Webley gun, and asks if he owns one. Malloy tells him that it is in his flat in London, and Gibbs whips out a photo of the building, along with an official-looking letter: "Ah, yes – the flat that is in foreclosure?" Malloy claims that he had some poor investments in Greece. Gibbs points out that it's a good plan, stealing money from a CIA slush fund that they would not report as missing. Malloy observes that it's an interesting conjecture, but Gibbs also brings out the cell phone evidence. Malloy maintains his innocence: "I didn't kill him and I didn't steal the money. So where is the money, Gibbs? Any DNA evidence?" He then demands to speak to the British consulate. Gibbs doesn't respond as he gathers the photos together into a neat pile. Malloy tells him that he has to press charges or else let him go, because he has no right to keep him. Gibbs merely smiles, and carefully picks up the coffee cup and the lid containing the tea bag.

In Abby's lab, Gibbs demands, "Talk to me, Abbs." Abby observes that "someone took a bite out of the crabapple tree today!" and tells Gibbs that she can't identify what caused the allergic reaction in Bick's lungs. She then tells Gibbs that she got Malloy's fingerprint from the teabag label, and ran it against British Navy databases, but found no matches – he is not a British naval officer. Further investigation shows, however, that Malloy is really Elston Harkin, a British secret service agent with MI-6.

Gibbs enters the office and demands to know where Malloy is, and Tony tells him that he walked out a while ago with a rep from the British consulate. Gibbs tells McGee to track the cell phone, but Malloy/Harkin has turned it off. He does a check, however, and discovers that numerous phone calls have originated from a hotel in D.C. called The Drake. Ziva and Tony follow Gibbs to the elevator, as McGee calls out that Malloy is in Room 238.

At the hotel, no one is there but a sweep of the room reveals traces of the tracking powder.

The money had been there, but is gone, along with Malloy.

Back at the office, massive alerts and a full-out search has begun to find Malloy, including a watch at the British embassy and consulate. Gibbs has nothing to add: "Good work." Tony mutters, "He complimented us. That's never a good sign." Vance confronts Gibbs and tells him congratulations, he's managed to annoy both his own government and one of their strongest allies. Gibbs is unimpressed, and tells Vance to call the CIA and tell them to track their money, but Vance tells Gibbs that Tennison has already complained about Gibbs, and points out that the CIA has no desire for the case to be solved and thus reveal what the CIA was doing. Ziva drily comments that paying criminals in the Middle East is hardly a state secret, but Vance points out that the cash was meant for people that the U.S. isn't supposed to be doing business with. Gibbs is annoyed: "Then let's get out of business with them and solve this case!" Vance argues that the CIA brought down the Taliban in 8 weeks in 2002, and deserves a little leeway. Gibbs reaches for the phone and starts dialing, while instructing Ziva to call a British consulate worker. The team is stunned when Vance hangs up Gibbs' phone, tells him, sternly, "You've done enough," and warns him to cool off before this becomes an international incident. Vance leaves, but Gibbs, quietly furious, bangs open his desk drawer and pulls out his gun. As he leaves, he tersely tells the team, "Find him."

At his house, Gibbs walks into the darkened living room, but stops suddenly. Malloy is seated casually on the living room sofa and, holding a beer bottle, observes that the label on the bottle says beer, but that it tastes more like "horse excrement." Gibbs grabs another beer out of the fridge and sits down, observing, "MI-6 knows my address – I'm flattered." Malloy tells Gibbs that he needs his help, to which Gibbs replies, "I'm not a lawyer." Malloy says that it's not Gibbs' law that he has trouble with, and then asks for pretzels. Gibbs deliberately removes his watch and sets it on the table, followed by his gun. Grimly, he tells Malloy, "You have ten seconds until I accidentally shoot you for trespassing." Malloy tells Gibbs that he has been set up. "I thought our MI-6 was good, but your CIA is very impressive." Malloy pulls out a wad of bills and lays them on the coffee table. "That's $10,000. It's for the beer. Keep the change." Gibbs gives him a level look, and then pulls a large metal nut from his pocket, taken from the Sparrowhawk. "And that's for the ship," he replies. Malloy tells him that there should be enough currency there for them to track the CIA frequency and lead them to the rest of the money, and to the person who is responsible. "What's in it for me?" asks Gibbs. "You get your killer," responds Malloy. But Gibbs is unconvinced. "What's in it for you?" "I don't get killed," Malloy replies succinctly.

Gibbs walks in and Tony tells him that a man fitting Malloy's description just bought a ticket to Glasgow. Malloy, coming out from behind Gibbs, says mildly, "It wasn't me," startling the team. Ziva exclaims, "Gibbs! Where did you find him?" and Gibbs explains that he didn't – Malloy found him. Gibbs pulls Malloy over and shoves him next to Ziva's desk and instructs her, "You watch him. You watch him like Syria, not Switzerland!" and hurries to Abby's lab as Tony and Ziva eye Malloy. Tony asks him, "So – you're a British person? Do you like Peter Sellers?" Malloy agrees that he does, and Tony asks him, "What's his best movie?" and Malloy, impatiently, answers "Strangelove." "Kubrick," muses Tony, "that's good. But that's not his best. That would be 'Being There'". Malloy, relaxing, counters with "Nice. Do you like 'What's New, Pussycat'?" Tony agrees that Sellers was terrific in that, and then asks Malloy if he likes Dudley Moore, to which Malloy admits that he prefers his earlier work with Peter Cook. Tony enthusiastically jumps up and exclaims, "Peter Cook?! Nobody knows about Peter Cook anymore! 'Beyond the Fringe'?" Malloy and Tony settle into an amicable discussion on films.

In the lab, Abby is waxing rhapsodic over her new electron microscope that she has named Ken. Explaining that pollen has its own particular DNA, has discovered a particular kind of pollen in Bick's lungs that is only found at Diego Garcia AFB in the Indian Ocean. Since Bick has never been to Diego Garcia, he must have been in close contact with someone who had, because pollen is almost impossible to get rid of and clings to clothing, etc. for a long time. Gibbs is delighted and Abby has earned a bear hug before he sprints off.

McGee is pulling up a map of Diego Garcia, and they spot an unidentified building from the satellite photos. McGee tells Gibbs that it is a Level 3 security facility, not on the basic facility map. A little more digging shows that the building is the CIA station. Gibbs wants to know who the most recent station chief at Diego Garcia was, and when McGee hesitates, reminding Gibbs that he would have to hack into the CIA computer, Vance comes up quietly behind Gibbs and says, "Do it, McGee," they discover that the most recent chief was Loretta Tennison. "I'll be damned," says Vance, and Gibbs says, "Time to go above her head, Leon," and Vance grimly agrees: "I'll be happy to."

In MTAC, McGee has hacked into the CIA computer, where the tracking software has been activated to track the money. They watch a map rendition of the tracking process, and discover that the money has been spent all over D.C. Vance wonders how she spent it in so many places, and Gibbs tells him, "She didn't – the Royal Navy did," and gets a manifest for the Sparrowhawk. McGee notes that over $1 million in cash was on the ship, payroll while they were at sea, since U.S. money is accepted at every port. Apparently, the CIA money was swapped with the ship's clean money – money laundering. Vance notes that Malloy did have access, so it's hard to be sure he wasn't involved with it, but that she probably still has the remaining $2 to switch with another ship. They begin to track Tennison's whereabouts. She has requisitioned a helicopter to intercept the U.S.S. Tripoli, and exchanged numerous phone calls with a Lt. Malcolm Dufresne onboard, who works in the ship's disbursement office. They note the time of her departure and arrival, and hurry off to intercept her.

At night, a helicopter is on approach to a ship at sea. Tennison steps onto the ship, carrying a large aluminum briefcase. She enters an office and addresses the sailor at the desk with his back to her: "Lt. Dufresne, I'm sorry I'm late." To her shock, Malloy turns to greet her: "I assume you'll want that in small bills?" he asks, mockingly. She is flustered, and pulls out a Webley gun. Malloy notices that it's an English gun, and accuses her of killing the sailor. She says, meaningfully cocking the pistol, that she killed Bick because he tried to stop her. "Don't make the same mistake he did." Malloy tells her that she is the one that just made a mistake, and Gibbs enters the compartment, places the barrel of his gun in the middle of her back, and tells her that she's under arrest. Ziva confiscates the gun as Tennison declares that the money had been going to drug smugglers and opium growers. "Do you think it really matters whose side we're on?" she demands of Gibbs, "I was probably saving lives by keeping the money!" Gibbs tells her, softly, "You didn't save Bicks." Tony takes Tennison away.

At the office, Ziva begins an email as Tony is leaving. Curious, he asks, "Emailing Senor South Beach?" "Perhaps," says Ziva, attention on the email. Tony jerks his chin and, with a bright smile, declares, "Well, I'm glad there's someone out there that makes you smile." Not looking up, Ziva chuckles and agrees, "Yes, there is!" Tony tries again: "Maybe I can meet him some day?" "Maybe," Ziva agrees, "one day." She hits send and the email is on its way. (The email reads "Dearest (), This week was unusually tough () thinking of you often. Now before your thoughts go to THAT place, ()you a secret has not been easy. There are people here I care () curiosity comes from a desire to protect me. Imagine anyone wanting to protect me from you . I hope you are safe and your assignment was successful. Write me when you are ()" Ziva begins to gather her things and when Tony, dying of curiosity, asks if she has a big date that night, and she says no, she is going home. Suddenly, she turns to him and says, "Tony, I have a question." "Shoot," he says eagerly. "If – and when – you meet my friend – and I emphasize 'if' – what will you say?" She regards Tony speculatively, and he eyes her warily before he laughs a little and answers: "'Be careful. Handle with care,'" and, with a slow smile, he finishes: "Contents – priceless." Ziva flashes him a smile and bids Tony goodnight, and with a grimace, he stays behind, "forgot my keys." As the elevator closes behind her, he casually strolls to her desk and then quickly tries to log on to her computer. A siren sounds, with flashing red letters declaring "SECURITY BREACH DETECTED." Frantically, he tries to turn the alarm off – with no success.

Production Code: 167
Summary: The team investigates the death of a radio DJ and a Naval Officer who were both killed live on air, and their job becomes more difficult by the discovery of various suspects.

Talk show host Adam Gator hosts Major Walter Daniels. Someone listens to the show and drives to the studio. They take a rifle out of the back of their car and go in the studio shooting. The radio broadcasts the host begging for his life, followed by shots.

Tony and McGee rave about baseball as the American pastime. Ziva doesn't really get it. Gibbs comes in to announce the three dead bodies of the week. At the station, the producer Vincent Clark, host and guest are all dead. Daniels is a special duty officer in the office of public affairs. He was there to talk about foreign military policy. Duckie calls Gator a "smart aleck" host. The host was shot three times, the other one each. Tony plays a tape from Gator introducing a call from someone making the next threat to national security – right before he was shot. Back at the office, they talk to Adam's wife, who says some half-assed extremist group who claimed to have a bomb was trying to recruit him. She says he was a patriot and would have called the police if he thought they were serious. She gives them his mail and his taped phone calls.

In the lab, Abby explains how she used acoustics to ID the rifle as a Remington hunting rifle.

McGee finds a letter with Benjamin Franklin's cartoon on it from a Matt L., sent to a post office box with no return address. He searches the postal system's database.

In the morgue, Duckie tells Gibbs there were traces of deer urine on the bullets.

Tony and McGee talk to Matt L., the postal carrier. He has proof he was elsewhere on a delivery when Gator was shot.

In the lab, Abby plays a tape from Gator's cell phone of Gator calling a man from a group called MAH "domestic terrorists" and telling him he's going to expose them on the air the next day. She traces the call to a fancy housing development called Royal Woods.

Tony says MAH comes from the slogan "Military at Home," meaning we should protect the homeland first. There are 35 houses in the development outside Arlington. They want to get voice samples from all the men who live there.

Tony goes door to door in Royal Woods, introducing himself as someone looking at buying a house there. One guy is in a hurry to leave and Tony stops him at his car.

Abby IDs the voice match, it's the car guy, Arthur Haskell, an investment banker. Abby finds that his wife was killed in a home invasion by a drug addict with a gun. Arthur and his 16 year old daughter witnessed the murder.

McGee finds a mention of a gift for Arthur's wife in his online calendar, which he figures is code since she's dead. He was emailing Dieter, a meth cooker from South Africa who makes explosives. They find Arthur is meeting with Dieter in two hours.

At the meet, Ziva tells McGee to go ahead and erase the last five years of her file. Tony and Gibbs stop Dieter as he pulls up. Ziva meets with Arthur, telling him Dieter is out of business. She introduces herself as Ziva David, Dieter's competition. She's herself from five years ago, assassin and rogue Mossad agent.

Arthur says he'll talk to her after he makes a few calls.

Tony interviews Dieter at NCIS, suppressing his cough. He loses his voice before the interview gets going. Gibbs steps in. Dieter tells him Arthur hired him to make explosives undetectable by dogs. He says Arthur has them already, but they don't detonate under 400 degrees Celsius. Arthur still needs the detonator.

Duckie checks out Tony and says he'll be fine, but shouldn't talk for 24 hours.

Ziva stops by Arthur's house. He opens up the deep freezer in his garage and shows her the bomb. She asks what the target is, but he asks how to pay her. Then he takes her out to the party – a backyard barbecue. Arthur's daughter Kristin yells at him for missing her soccer game. Ziva introduces herself to the neighbors, including Matt the mailman and Annie Nelson and her husband Zach. They ask how long she's been part of the cause. The rail about the government spending money overseas instead of on drugs and illiteracy and crime fighting back home.

At the office, McGee reports that Haskell is draining money from work accounts to funnel it through the Middle East to pay Ziva. The money has been raid flagged by Homeland Security – they're stealing money from Al Qaida.

The team raids the house – but they're too late. They fight Haskell bleeding and unconscious in his garage and the bomb is gone.

At the office, Ziva reports that Haskell has a concussion and just woke up. Kristin won't talk to him. Gibbs tells Ziva to talk to her. She says her dad took her to soccer practice the morning of the radio station shooting, but she says he should go to jail if he was working with terrorists. Kirsten mentions that her dad took a hunting trip last year with Zach Nelson. Cut to Gibbs bringing a rifle and deer urine into the interview room with Zach. McGee reports the bullet and pee match those at the station. But he claims not to know anything about Arthur being attacked. As they're cuffing Zach, Tony picks up the "pee" and swigs it down – chamomile tea. They hadn't searched his house yet - but will now.

Gibbs sits down with Arthur with Kristin watching from the observation room. Arthur says Matt the mailman beat him up because he and Zach got tired of waiting. He wanted to destroy the tower at Norfolk navy base as a symbol. Arthur says Matt was supposed to get the explosives on base in his mail truck.

McGee tells Gibbs that Matt called in sick but is scheduled to officiate a girl's softball game that afternoon. They check the roster – daughters of judges, senators or other high profile people.

At the softball diamond, Gibbs and the team pull up on Matt getting into his car. He wishes them luck finding the bomb. Ziva notices the gas grill has a lot of tanks on it. They yell at everyone to leave and Ziva sees the grill is chained shut. Ziva sees it's off the temperature scale, she runs away from it, tackling Tony to safety. He enjoys that she lands on top of him. Everyone is fine.

Later, Ziva doesn't understand why Matt would plant a bomb then stay to officiate the game. They explain it's the lure of baseball. She invites Gibbs to have a catch. Her dad taught her.

Summary: Abby becomes too fixated to solving the murder of a Naval Scientist, while the rest of the team worries about her. Meanwhile, Tony's newest fling brings trouble.

A woman walks anxiously down the street and into traffic, dodging cars. She doesn't look well and seems to think people are staring at her. She babbles about not letting people find her. At a crosswalk she doesn't wait for the light to change and runs out in front of a bus.

Tony comes in to work talking on the phone to a lady friend, whom he calls "a vixen." Her name is Ethel. They've talked about role playing in bed – she's keeping her desires a secret until Halloween.

Gibbs arrives to announce the body of the week: a dead Navy lieutenant.

At the scene, the victim is Clea Thorson, a chemical engineer. They heard from witnesses about her mumbling about running from someone.

Duckie arrives and notices scratches on her hands. Palmer looks at them and finds writing all over her arm – what look like scientific formulas. Her other arm is covered, too, as is her torso.

At the office they learn she was a sought after biochemist and worked for Gen 1 Bio Tech Inc in DC, for a man named Martin Stillwell. She was working on a research project until two weeks ago, when she was fired. She was single and her mom is flying in.

She made several recent deposits over $20,000 recently.

In the morgue, Abby snaps tons of pictures of the victim's formulas. She sees a pattern and goes to work on it.

Duckie shows Gibbs the victim's weird eye color. She was sick and she was in near organ failure from poison that'd been in her system for a while. Duckie is not sure what kind.

Upstairs, McGee plays a video of a man threatening to make Thorson's life "hell" if she leaves him. It's her boss, Martin Stillwell.

Tony and Ziva visit him. He says Clea was brilliant but wasn't a team player. Her research project was about helping the Navy go green, getting naval bases off the grid by 2020. They're joined by April Ferris, an engineer who worked with Clea for five years. Stillwell ends the interview.

Back at the office, Gibbs talks to Clea's mom. She says Clea was sending her money to keep "in case anything happened." Clea was bipolar but well-medicated until recently, her mom says.

In the lab, Abby compares the handwriting on each arm and says Clea wrote it herself and was ambidextrous. The writing is pieces of a chemical formula but it's coded. Abby is totally impressed.

She shows Gibbs some coordinates Clea wrote in her elbow.

The team heads to the address. They find pages and pages strung up everywhere with formula on them and the phrase "They're going to kill me" written hundreds of times.

They get Abby out to look it over.

There are security cameras everywhere.

Abby says the writing in the room is the second piece of the formula written on Clea's body. In her journal, Clea wrote that Stillwell was watching her.

Tony finds her medication and suggests maybe Thorson's paranoia was imagined. Abby finds that Thorson's hard drive has been erased remotely.

At the office, Tony recaps the green energy Stillwell's company was working on. There's nothing on the security camera footage except Clea working steadily in the two weeks after she was fired.

Ziva finds references to meetings with a "Mr. K" in Clea's journal.

In the morgue, Abby talks to Clea's dead body, calling her a "kindred spirit." She thinks they thought the same and promises she'll try to figure out what Clea was working on.

Duckie interrupts to make sure Abby is OK. He tells her to go home and get some rest.

In the morning, Abby is in a working frenzy in her lab trying to crack the formula's code. She found mention of Clea's college mentor and thinks they should find him.

Ziva looks at the surveillance footage and finds Clea stuck to a rigid schedule. Tony gets a text from Ethel that freaks him out. She wants him to dress up.

April Ferris comes by with things from Clea's locker. She says Clea wasn't afraid to stand up for herself. Her date book shows meetings with Mr. K, including one today.

Abby and McGee finish up two hours of bus riding around town because it was the path Clea took. McGee gets frustrated so Abby gets on the bus by herself.

Later, she finds Professor Rudner at a university – Clea's mentor. Clea was on her way to visit him when she died. Abby shows him Clea's formula, which he doesn't recognize. Clea mentioned Mr. K to him. He shows her a book they used to read from, Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." He gives it to her.

Ziva and Tony comes back from trying to find Mr. K, but he never showed. The café manager says Clea was there, but by herself. They have footage of Clea sitting in a booth talking to herself.

Abby comes back, all abuzz. She says the professor knew about Mr. K and they have to find him. Gibbs shouts at her to stop. He shows Abby the footage of Clea talking to herself. Abby says none of them understand.

Abby locks herself in her lab.

Gibbs goes to Duckie, who tells her he found tissue under Thorson's fingernails. He shows Gibbs the DNA results.

At Gen 1, Gibbs and Tony approach Stillwell in his car. He stumbles out, dead, looking just like Thorson did.

At the office, they learn Stillwell appears to have been poisoned like Thorson. They wonder if maybe Clea's formula is the key.

Gibbs brings Clea's mom to her workspace with Abby. Her mom cautions Abby not to get too wrapped up in Clea's delusions. She tells Abby to let Clea go.

Back in the lab, Abby reports progress to Gibbs. One of the formulas was for E coli and another was for photosynthesis. She's missing the last piece of the formula. Gibbs looks at the drawing and says it looks like a plant. Abby goes to the book "Leaves" of grass and shakes it. A memory card falls out. Abby looks at it and declares Clea a genius – she discovered a way to make fuel from bacteria, which would revolutionize green energy.

They find Avaxis on the screen. The systems director there is Rupert Kritzer, Mr. K. Gibbs meets with him and he admits he paid Clea under the table.

He worried about Clea's work getting back to Stillwell. He denies killing anyone. Gibbs doesn't believe him. He says Clea's formula just made him $2 billion and he was hiring her for another project.

In the lab, Duckie says Stillwell's throat was burned from swallowing ethanol with formaldehyde. They trace it to a patent filed by Stillwell's company.

Duckie says Thorson was poisoned by absorbing the poison through her skin over a period of weeks.

They go back to the footage of her workspace and find she's sick after showering.

McGee finds a canister hooked into her water supply.

The team arrives for April Ferris. Gibbs calls her a phony, saying Clea was the real deal. Ziva reads from Clea's journal in which she said she liked April and hoped they could be friends.

April says they have no idea what she had to put up with, people fawned over Clea. Gibbs arrests her.

Back at the office, Tony walks down the hall dressed like Tony from "Saturday Night Fever" in the white suit. He does a passable early John Travolta impression. He resolves to give Ethel what she wants.

In the lab, Abby decorates for Halloween. Gibbs drops by and Abby apologizes. He kisses her head and walks her out. She runs back to get Leaves of Grass.

Production Code: 169
Summary: The team is surprised when Gibbs asks Tony's father to join them in a murder investigation.

A Naval officer waits for someone, who's late. He calls the person and a phone rings in the distance. He follows it to a Dumpster where he finds the man dead inside.

Ziva comes in to work, super fired up that her US Passport came in the mail. She tries to share her joy with Tony, but he's surly because his dad called at 4:30 a.m. He hasn't called him back.

Gibbs comes in to announce the dead body of the week at the US Naval Academy in Annapolis. On the scene, the boys leave Ziva with Dumpster duty.

The man from the opening is Admiral Chase, he tells Gibbs he was waiting for Woody after getting an early morning call from him. Woody was being cryptic and told him to meet at the place they first met.

He hasn't seen Woody in two or three years. Gibbs asks Chase what his assignment is but Chase won't talk about it in the open. He says he'll be in touch.

Gibbs asks McGee to find out what Chase does at the Pentagon. A bit later, McGee reports that Chase is the deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Back at the office, it's learn about the victim time: Woody Iverson retired as a commander from the Navy 18 years ago to join Royce Global Group, a mining and shipping company. Billionaire owner Jonathan Royce hasn't been seen in public since his son died four years ago. His daughter Rachel lives on Long Island.

McGee reports that Iverson flew in from Geneva last night with three other passengers. McGee pauses before saying who they are. He shows the security footage.

Theo Gaston, a Swiss in charge of company security; Dan Mayfield, the COO who runs things; Woody and... Tony's dad.

Tony tries and fails to reach his dad. They track his dad's cell phone to a bus station.

Gibbs meets with Dan Mayfield and Theo Gaston. They were in town for a trade symposium. They don't know where Woody went after the airport. Mayfield says Woody left with Anthony DiNozzo Sr. Mayfield says DiNozzo and Royce go way back and DiNozzo just hitched a ride on the plane.

Tony finds his dad at the bus station. He tells his dad Woody was killed. Dad is excited to see Ziva again.

Back at NCIS in interrogation, Gibbs comes to talk to Tony Sr., who says he just met Woody at the airport. Tony Sr. says he didn't talk to Woody on the plane and he hasn't seen Royce in years. He played cards the whole way with Mayfield, who invited him to the trade summit to be polite. Tony Sr. takes exception to Gibbs' tone. Tony Sr. says he and Woody shared a cab, but Woody dropped him at the Adams House.

Watching from behind the glass, Tony knows his dad is lying – he never registered at the Adams House.

In Vance's office, Admiral Chase tells the director he's concerned Woody's death might have national security implications. He reports there was chatter among arms dealers about the trade summit. Vance tells Gibbs gaining access will be hard since it's civilian with a strict guest list.

Gibbs leaves abruptly. Downstairs, Tony Sr. is saying good bye and Jr. hustles him out. Gibbs stops him, saying they need him to get them into the reception.

Later, Tony Jr. tells Gibbs using his dad is a bad idea. And he really doesn't want his dad staying with him. Tony Sr. happily reports he booked the penthouse at the Adams House. Gibbs tells Tony Jr. they can expense it.

McGee finds what looks like a phone number with an LA area code in the notepad of Woody's phone.

Abby gets no match from the DNA Duckie found under the victim's fingernails. She broadens the search to international databases.

Abby checks Woody's coat and finds low level radiation. McGee finds the LA number is for a place that does colonics and herbal enemas.

Gibbs visits Tony Sr in the penthouse. He tells Sr. about Jr's concerns about involving him. "I think you're just enough of a con man to pull it off," Gibbs tells him.

Gibbs tells him he can cut the act, he knows he's broke. Sr. knows his son paid his hotel bill and flight to Monaco last year, making it look like a gift. Gibbs asks why all the games. Sr. says he's never lied to Jr.

Back at work, Tony Jr. is put out his dad avoided him for dinner.

McGee reports the LA area code wasn't a phone number. The 310 was the cab number, the seven digits were the DC cab company's number. Since Woody's pockets were rifled through, they wonder if what they were looking for was left in the cab. They're having the cab brought in.

Later, Abby goes over the cab. She finds a metal plaque with a serial number on it, MK 15. It's also mildly radioactive. They Google the serial number and find it belongs to a hydrogen bomb that went missing in 1956, when the plane carrying it disappeared. The bomb is 3.4 megatons, 100 times more powerful than the bomb dropped on Hiroshima.

In Vance's office, they show Admiral Chase the bomb plate. The nuclear material would have been active after years underwater.

Royce's group does a lot of underwater mining, they could have found it.

They don't want to spook Royce's people.

The team game plans for infiltrating the trade summit. Tony's really nervous about involving his dad. He says again it's a bad idea. Gibbs says an NCIS agent is going with him: Ziva.

Fred from accounting comes to tell Gibbs about the huge bill DiNozzo is wracking up.

Tony Jr. checks on his dad at the hotel, where he's being fitted for a new cashmere tuxedo – on NCIS. His dad mixes himself a martini, and Tony realizes his dad thinks he's James Bond.

He reminds his dad his job is just to get Ziva in so she can plant a bug.

Back at the office, Duckie reports Woody was strangled. Ziva has found a law suit filed by Rachel Royce against Dan Mayfield for keeping her dad from her.

Later that night, Tony and McGee watch surveillance .

Tony Sr. and Ziva and her giant spy camera broach enter the party.

In MTAC, they check satellite of Royce's ship in the Mediterranean. They think they're waiting for something big enough to pick the nuke off the ocean floor.

McGee and Tony run facial recognition of the party guests, including several arms dealers. They find Agah Bayar, a Turkish arms dealer on Interpol's watch list.

Bayar recognizes Ziva as Mossad head Eli David's daughter and tells Mayfield she's a federal agent. Bayar tells Mayfield he's interested in his proposition but not in spending the rest of his life in an American prison. He leaves.

Abby tells Gibbs the DNA is Theo Gaston, Royce's head of security. Gibbs radios Tony to get his dad out and tells Ziva to get an eye on Gaston. Tony Sr wants to stay and schmooze, but Ziva hustles him out – smack into Gaston, who recognizes her as Agent David and disables her camera.

Tony and McGee race in, while Ziva takes out Gaston and Tony Sr. punches out Mayfield.

Later, they know Mayfield knew about the bomb. He's claiming he told Gaston to follow Woody, not kill him.

Swiss police found Jonathan Royce comatose on life support in his chalet, kept alive only on Mayfield's orders so he could keep running things.

Fred from accounting shows up again to report Tony Sr. is out of control, running up $9,000 in expenses. Gibbs tells him to pay it, "he's worth every penny."

Tony Sr. comes to say good-bye sporting his new NCIS cap. He says kissy good byes with Abby and Ziva.

Tony Jr. goes back to the hotel with his dad and works up to asking about his dad being broke. Tony Sr says it's not a big deal, it's happened before. He tells Tony he filed for bankruptcy when Tony was in boarding school and recovered.

Tony Jr. remembers a fishing trip when they were like a normal father and son, but assumes his dad doesn't remember. Dad takes a picture from the trip out of his wallet. Sr. says from now on they'll talk.

Tony's going to take him to the train station, but dad tells him he ran into Donald Trump and is going to hitch a ride home in style.

Summary: The team has to protect Ziva's father when he attends the NCIS conference, which has Ziva confronting her past when a couple of unexpected surprises occur.

A young woman scans people's electronics as she walks down the street, grabbing their credit card info. She soon comes out of a store laden with bags – and is immediately stopped by Tony and McGee, who arrest her for espionage and terrorism.

Back at the office, McGee plays with her toy. Hillary Lange, 22, picked two dozen accounts in under an hour. She got caught because she picked the pocket of someone flagged on the terror watch list.

In Vance's office, he asks Gibbs if they can find the person. He also has three suspected smugglers shot off the coast of Florida, including a Navy officer.

Gibbs thinks Vance seems off. He has a conference with past NCIS agents and directors coming up to review old cases.

Out on the street, Tony watches while Ziva tries use Hillary's device to scan people's wallets and find the watch list person. Ziva doesn't think he'll be in the same spot he was yesterday where Hillary found him.

"Also can't be sure that Gibbs will be swilling coffee when we get back to the office, or you will fumble a simple American expression, or that McGee will sleep alone tonight, but people do tend to follow patterns," Tony points out.

Ziva gets a match. She follows the person she last scanned, a man in a sharp suit. Ziva and Tony follow him down an alley when Ziva feels they're being followed, she turns around and draws on a hot chick following them.

The guy they're following turns out to be Malachi, an Israeli she knows.

"Oh good, the Israelis are back," Tony says.

They spend a few minutes asking what's going on, as Tony meets the hot chick, Liat, and McGee realizes she's Ziva's replacement.

Gibbs arrives.

"Oh hey, boss. We were just having a pretty good time lying to each other, and I think that was about to boil off, actually," Tony says.

Gibbs orders them brought in for being in the country illegally.

Back at NCIS, Ziva escorts Liat to the bathroom. Ziva has studied on her and knows Liat won the marksmanship competition four times – Ziva won it six.

In the morgue, Duckie works on the three bodies from the Gul. The report says the Coast Guard approached, fired a warning and then shots broke out.

The Coast Guard reported another of the victims fired, but Duckie found no gun shot residue on his hands.

In the lab, Abby shows Gibbs the .9 mm and .20 mm slugs from the boat. She found no corresponding GSR – the smugglers never fired. The captain and crew were executed on the boat. The shooter fired at the cutter and went into the water with the crates – which are now empty. There are holes in the crates for breathing.

The crew was killed as a smokescreen and the people in the crates swam the last three miles at night.

Gibbs goes upstairs and asks Malachi and Liat about the three bodies. He wants to know who they were tracking.

Three members of a Palestinian terror network.

Malachi tells them Ziva's father, the head of Mossad, is coming to DC.

Gibbs is stopped outside by Mossad officer Amit Hadar (Arnold Vosloo), who asks to bring Gibbs to meet Eli David.

Cut to a bar, Gibbs having coffee and Eli David having nothing. Eli says he was summoned by Vance to review old case files. Gibbs points out that Eli isn't there for Ziva, he rubs it in. Gibbs says he could have teleconferenced.

He brings up a case in Amsterdam.

Gibbs says they'll provide security.

Malachi, Tony and Ziva review the Palestinian terror dudes, Karif Yasim, Ramsi Ashor and Abasi El Masri, the leader.

Ziva wants to know how the Palestinians knew Eli David was coming. The Mossad agents don't know.

Vance reviews old case files on video conference with past NCIS directors. They reach Leviathan.

Gibbs steps aside with former agent Riley McAlister, who's upset he forgot his flask.

Gibbs tells Vance the bodies from the Gulf were executed at close range. He asks if the Amsterdam case is up yet.

Vance asks about Ziva.

"Her father left her to die in a desert," Gibbs says. But he doesn't think it'll be a problem for Ziva.

Outside the Ambassador Hotel, Ziva and Liat look for points of attack. Tony chats up Malachi, who says it's nothing serious with Liat. Tony assumes that means they haven't slept together. "Of course we are sleeping together, it's just nothing serious," Malachi says.

Liat questions Ziva's loyalties.

In the garage, Ziva briefs Gibbs and they run a scenario in the garage, in which Ziva plays her dad and Gibbs is security. They get two shooters and Gibbs has his eyes on Liat when she shows him how she could have blasted Ziva from multiple angles.

At the office the next day, Tony accuses Ziva of being jealous of Liat. McGee says Hadar used to be in with the PRF and their intel guy was preoccupied with transports down the East Coast. Tony gets a call about a hijacked weapons transport.

Checking in with Vance, he thinks it's connected to the terrorist pursuit. Gibbs asks why Vance hasn't moved the conference. He thinks it's about pride.

In the office, McGee shows Gibbs about the super scary remote weapon that was stolen. Tony thinks he's found the stolen car from the hijacking.

Abby goes over it. In the trunk, he files a rigged refueling system. Their hair samples match the ones in the crates.

Abby tells Ziva she should see her dad. Ziva hasn't spoken to him since he left her for dead.

Gibbs visits Eli David and Hadar. Eli is stir crazy. So Gibbs escorts him on a stroll. McGee and Hadar observe the stroll from a surveillance van. Tony and Ziva watch from a roof. Liat goes to check out a suspicious car nearby. It has stolen plates but is empty. Malachi sees one of the terrorists.

Gibbs shoves Eli to safety and Liat takes out one of the terrorists. A second is about to fire in Gibbs' direction when Ziva grabs him and demands he tell her where the third man is.

Back at NCIS in interrogation, Gibbs talks to the terrorist, who says he won't talk. He says Eli David is awful and Gibbs doesn't disagree, but says he still won't allow murder.

The terrorist vows they'll get Eli.

Upstairs, Eli David is unalarmed, glad the terrorists were drawn out. Vance tells him people expect them to get into it over Amsterdam. Eli says Vance should want to know the truth.

Eli says if El Masri manages to get through or kill him he wouldn't want to go on anyway.

Down in the garage, father and daughter see each other again. He has nothing to say to her, saying he won't beg. He tells her he doesn't have the luxury of letting his feelings dictate his actions.

She thinks he has none.

The next day, the team surveys outside the hotel. McGee checks a laundry van and finds the remote gun inside. Malachi thinks it was too easy.

Ziva drives her dad, Hadar and Vance in and heads for the service entrance.

Walking in the kitchen, Ziva sees something and stops. She tells everyone to get back just when a remote controlled gun starts firing. Everyone hits the deck safely. She and Gibbs deal with the gun as Hadar gets Eli David in the car.

Outside, a man in a hotel employee uniform picks up a rocket launcher and aims at Eli's car. Ziva runs outside and fires at him, knocking him down. He gets back up, wearing a bullet proof vest. He fires as Tony and Ziva shoot again, killing him this time. The rocket goes off, but takes out a parked cab. Eli David's town car drives away.

Tony rushes in to the assembled former NCIS agents and summarizes: "Dead bad guy."

Gibbs radios Hadar, but can't raise him. We see Hadar lying in pile of ash and char, not moving.

"What's happened?" Ziva asks.

Summary: After an ambush changes the course of the their investigation, the NCIS team has to quickly find answers, and one team member flashes back to their very first NCIS assignment.

Gibbs tries to reach Eli David and Vance on the walkie talkie. Vance comes to on the floor of a blasted-up room and sees people on the floor around him.

Vance hears someone coming and grabs a nearby gun. But it's Gibbs.

Vance has a belly wound. "I can't believe that happened again," he says.

Vance is wheeled into the hospital with serious wounds. We flash back to a young Vance rocking out to Tupac in 1991 at the Naval War College in Rhode Island. He's stopped by Whitney Sharp, from the Naval Investigative Service.

She wants him for an operation.

In the hospital, Vance tells Gibbs to get protective detail for his wife. He tells Gibbs he's in charge. Eli David is missing. McGee points out that everyone from the Palestinian group is dead except for the guy they have in custody. McGee orders the conference relocated to NCIS.

At the crime scene, Ziva bickers with Liat.

Washington, DC, 1991 Whitney trains Leon. She gets him a passport and says he's going to Amsterdam tomorrow. The op is called Trident.

Back at NCIS, all the old agents roam.

The blood trail at the scene indicates Eli David was kidnapped. Karif Yasim, the Palestinian terrorist, is being transferred, but he couldn't have hit the safehouse.

Agent McAlister wanders out, and suggests to Gibbs that just because Eli is missing, it doesn't mean he was kidnapped. It could have been an inside job. He says it wouldn't be the first time Eli tried to kill Vance. He pulls out the Trident file, which is heavily redacted.

1991, Amsterdam

McAlister spies Vance on the street and calls him over. He tells him to try to stick out more to meet "The Russian."

Vance guesses the Russian bribes sailors for intel. McAlister shows Vance a picture of the Russian and tells him he'll find him. McAlister thinks the Cold War is going to fire up again and is the future of intelligence.

A man watches from a café as Vance burns the photo.

At the crime scene, they find the blood drops are spaced to indicate Eli was walking. Liat and Ziva argue over what it means.

List finds writing in sand and quickly brushes it out before calling Tony and Ziva over to see the partial message, which says "house."

Ziva looks at it and knows Liat erased something.

Gibbs talks to Yassim and quickly realizes he had nothing to do with the attack.

Whitney Sharp visits Duckie in the morgue. They have a history.

They're interrupted by Tony and Gibbs. Duckie shows them shrapnel from Hadar and says the blast had an upward trajectory, like an IED.

Back in Amsterdam, Vance struts around at a sailor. The man at the café chats up Vance. It's Eli David, smoking some weed mixed with hash.

Eli asks why a sailor on leave would want to keep his mind sharp. "The Russian will realize you are not what he wants, then his men will kill you," Eli tells him. "Go back to the boat, or you are a dead man."

In Abby's lab, she tells McGee the safe house was booby trapped with mines.

Back in Amsterdam, McAlister briefs Leon on Eli. Leon wonders if Eli knows more about the Russian than they do. McAlister assures him he's not that dangerous, but gives him a gun.

Malachi and Liat search a temple. Ziva interrupts them, asking Liat why she didn't trust her. She calls out for her dad. Liat objects. A girl fight breaks out.

Back in Amsterdam, Leon cruises the red light district. He sees Eli talking to the Russian, telling him the American has orders to kill him.

Back in the temple, Ziva and Liat are krav maga-ing the crap out of each other. Finally, Eli David emerges and tells them to stop.

In NCIS, McGee hacks the interrogation feed so the team and the Mossad agents can watch Gibbs talking to Eli.

Eli says he and Vance are in it together, which is why they organized the conference. He says Eli wasn't told what his real role was in Amsterdam. Eli says he never knew the Russian's name.

In Amsterdam in the middle of the night, Eli visits Leon in his hotel room, telling him the Russian's hit team will be there by morning – because he told him where Leon was staying.

Eli says Leon never forgets anything, which is what saved him. "When we walked in that door, he had seen it before," Eli says.

Back to Amsterdam, with Vance and Eli making IEDs in his hotel room. Eli is fired up because Mossad told him he could kill the Russian's hit team.

Watching the feed, Abby thinks Eli's story means he knew how to build the IED. Malachi thinks Hadar is dead because of NCIS's incompetence.

Tony asks Duckie about Whitney Sharp. He says Vance was an odd choice for her because she had a preference for policemen.

Eli tells Gibbs that Leon got credit for helping eliminate the hit team in Amsterdam and the Russian vanished.

Back in the hotel room, Eli puts a piece of paper in the door and Leon turns on the shower. He watches as the hit team comes in. Eli and Vance take cover.

The door opens. The bombs are under the coffee table. The three man team comes in the room. With the paper out of place in the door, the circuit closes when the door shuts.

Vance wakes up in the hospital. Gibbs tells him Eli thinks the attack was one of theirs. Vance tells Gibbs someone at the conference must know. He tells him the secretary of the Navy signed off on the conference two years ago.

Gibbs reminds Leon of Rule # 9: Never go anywhere without a knife. He gives Vance a knife.

Vance tells Gibbs to go after whoever is responsible, even if they're from the early days of NCIS.

Gibbs interviews Whitney Sharp, asking why she chose Vance for Amsterdam. She said there were inconsistencies in Vance's story that made him easy to goad into the mission. She says McAlister would have protected Vance were it not for Eli. She says The Russian was a hit man, but she only knew about him from McAlister's mission plan. She remembers his name as something like Zurov. Gibbs suggests Anatoly Zukov, but he says he's long gone.

Flash back to years ago in Paris, Gibbs shooting the Russian.

McAlister visits Vance, who tells him he realized something while he was out. He thought he was chosen because he was special, but he now realizes he was chosen because no one would miss him when he got killed. McAlister says it would have been a great tragedy.

Vance says his death would have put McAlister's area of expertise back on the forefront. Instead, forward-thinkers like Jenny Shepherd and him got promoted. "You wanted me dead from day one," Vance says.

1999 Vance confronts McAlister about inconsistencies in his file and thinks McAlister is setting him up for another op. In the hospital, McAlister tells him he was never supposed to succeed. McAlister uses a key to open Vance's morphine drip and turn it all the way up. "For once, can't you just die right?" McAlister says, leaning over Vance.

Lying in his hospital bed, Vance stabs McAlister in the chest. Then he summons the nurse. Gibbs comes in from the hall. He checks that Vance's morphine is stopped.

Back to 1999, Gibbs coming in right after Vance talked to McAlister about his file. They meet. McAlister tells Gibbs about some assignment in Paris and asks if he's ever worked with Jenny Shepherd.

Later, Tony tells the Mossad agents they're sorry about Hadar.

Eli leaves a flag of Israel on his daughter's desk. They have a moment. He kisses her forehead.

Summary: When a Navy petty officer that was supposed to testify in an upcoming murder trial suddenly goes missing, the NCIS team gets help from the deputy district attorney to find the missing witness.

An alarm goes off at 8:00 and a young man wakes up. He wanders out of his bedroom and through a somewhat sterile house, and trips over a bat. He sees some left-over pizza on the coffee table and snags a slice. Opening the front door, he retrieves the newspaper, and is surprised when a DVD with "Play Me" written on it falls out. He pops it into the DVD player, and sees a video of someone walking up to his front door and the door being unlocked by a latex-gloved hand. The intruder walks through the house and seeing the young man lying asleep in bed, he places a knife against his neck. The young man gasps and grabs his neck in consternation. (Credits)

McGee and Ziva are walking into the office as McGee tells Ziva about a dream he had the night before – Gibbs speaking in an Israeli accent, Ziva sounding like Jimmy Palmer. Ziva is laughing, and as they turn the corner, they see Tony sitting at his desk, busily working. He greets them formally: "Agent McGee. Probationary Agent David. Good morning." McGee and Ziva stare at him a moment, and Ziva murmurs, "It looks like Tony," but McGee disagrees: "It doesn't sound like him – what are you up to, Tony?" Tony tells them he is catching up on old paperwork. Suspicious, Ziva whispers to McGee that she thinks they are being set up for something, and McGee tells her they should ignore him. Playing along, McGee tells Tony that if he's doing old paperwork, maybe he could do his Canadian expense report. To his surprise, Tony hands the completed report to him, with a terse explanation that he got in early and had some time to kill – and, by the way, McGee should sign the Get Well card for Vance. McGee is cautious: "The last time you did my expense report for me, you reclassified my meals as 'livestock feed'." Tony, not looking up, replies, "Well, that was childish." McGee agrees: "I was audited!" Tony calmly replies, "Well, that makes us even." Gibbs enters, followed by Deputy D.A. Gail Walsh, and tells them that they have a missing petty officer. Ziva is confused – there were no hits on the NCIC. McGee asks if the petty officer has been missing more than 30 days. The missing officer is the young man from the opening credits, Petty Officer Jerry Neisler, and Walsh tells them that he is the only witness in a capital murder trial. As Ziva reviews his file, Tony swoops in, quickly extracts a photo of the petty officer, and makes copies. Without thinking, McGee asks, "Does anyone know where he is?" Gibbs gives him A Look, and McGee quickly realizes, "That's what we're going to find out." Walsh explains that she's bringing in NCIS because her trial starts in two days, and without Neisler, the killer will walk. As they head out, Tony distributes copies of the Neisler's picture. Ziva eyes the picture, and then eyes Tony – his efficiency is unnerving.

At Neisler's house, they photograph the half-eaten pizza slice, the bat, and the DVD (which is empty). Walsh explains that she dropped him off at the safe house six days previously and he was supposed to check in every day. Neisler told her that he planned to go hunting with a friend who was headed back to Afghanistan, but disappear, and except for one gas charge on his credit card, there's been no sign of him. Upon investigation, the friend didn't know anything about the hunting trip. Ziva peers into the refrigerator and sees a dead turkey, still feathered, and comments that he obviously left in a hurry. Gibbs asks Walsh if Neisler's testimony put him at risk and she says that maybe if it were a Mafia trial, but in this case – no. Gibbs is puzzled – everywhere he turns, there's another aluminum bat propped against a counter, a chair, in the guest bedroom. McGee reports that the neighbors didn't know anyone was staying in the house. Tony, surveying the litter of take-out containers on the coffee table, suggests that they survey the local take-out places. "Good idea," says Gibbs, but Tony responds, "It was actually Agent McGee's suggestion." McGee looks at Tony incredulously.

In the bedroom, Walsh is chatting to Ziva: "Gibbs looks like a capable investigator." Ziva smiles and replies, "None better." And – Agent DiNozzo?" Ziva pauses for a moment, and answers, "He is also capable." She continues to photograph the bedroom. "And . . . single?" inquires Walsh. Ziva looks at her in surprise. "Excuse me?" Walsh explains that she noticed that Tony wasn't wearing a ring, and then suddenly apologizes. "Oh, I'm sorry – are you and he . . . ?" Ziva protests vehemently: "No! No! Our relationship is strictly professional – and barely that!" Walsh smiles like a cat with a dish of cream: "Well, then, you wouldn't mind if I . . . ?" Ziva reminds her that they are in the middle of an investigation, and she is in the middle of a trial, but Walsh shrugs and says that "I like to keep my options open. Did you know that the majority of people meet their spouses at work?" Ziva looks at her for a moment and then grimaces, "Not something that I have high hopes for."

Tony and McGee are gazing at the dead turkey in the refrigerator, and Tony says briskly, "OK, let's bag it." McGee is surprised again: "Is that all you're going to say?" Tony, stone-faced, asks, "What else am I supposed to say?" McGee retorts, "Oh, something like, 'What do turkeys eat at Christmas? Nothing, they are already stuffed!'" Tony frowns at McGee, and asks, "Are you feeling alright?" Tony says, with a straight face, "I'm feeling fine, why?" Ziva interrupts and shows them an empty shot-gun case – Neisler has taken his gun with him, wherever he has gone. Gibbs asks to see Walsh's case files, and she agrees readily. Batting her eyes, she asks Tony to accompany her back to her office to retrieve the files, "because they are heavy, and I need someone with strong arms." Gibbs rolls his eyes at the obvious come-on and smiles an aside, and McGee whispers to Ziva, "Goodbye, Mr. Professional!" To their shock, Tony refuses, "No, I better stay here. Agent McGee will help you." Walsh and McGee are taken aback, and Tony walks away, telling Gibbs: "Baseball bats and a shotgun – the petty officer was worried about something." Gibbs watches Tony walk away, and then turns to Ziva, McGee and Walsh – with identical looks of surprise on their face.

Back at the office, Tony and Ziva are giving Gibbs a briefing. Neisler was born and raised in Charlottesville, and served two tours in Iraq before being reassigned to the States. His record is "interesting" – despite good reports from his commanding officers, he was repeatedly transferred. "Doesn't play well with others?" inquires Gibbs, but Walsh disagrees, explaining that Neisler's parents were both psychologists, and he was an only child. "Which means what, exactly?" asks Ziva. Walsh tells her that she'd have to meet him to understand. Tony continues the briefing with a PowerPoint presentation detailing various reasons why Neisler may have lost contact. McGee and Ziva are dumbfounded and intrigued. First reason: Witnesses with a personal relationship to the accused are sometimes reluctant to testify. McGee interrupts. "Yeah – like . . . you know?"

waiting for the movie reference. Tony is silent. "Kinda like Robert DeNiro in 'Sleepers'?" Ziva agrees, but Tony remains silent, and then goes on to cue up "Number Two: Someone is threatening the witness." Walsh objects, and points out that he would have told her if there had been a problem, but Gibbs points out that maybe he can't. Exasperated, Walsh gestures to the files, and tells them that the killer's name is Samuel Hayes. As she explains that Hayes' wife is dead and his daughter is a ward of the state, Tony begins to move the boxes over to his desk, lifting them easily over Walsh's head. Tony and McGee watch with a frown, and Ziva whispers, "OK, this is getting really irritating." "He's making us look bad," McGee agrees, but is interrupted by Gibbs: "McGee, do you have anything?" McGee has nothing, but attempts to add to the list, "Of course, the disappearance may not have anything to do with the trial at all." At Gibbs' disbelieving stare, he trails off, ". . . or it does." Walsh asks Gibbs how he wants to split things up. She offers her resources to track down BOLAs and check hospitals. Gibbs tells her that NCIS will track his previous movements, starting with his hunting trip.

In Autopsy, Ducky and Jimmy are perched at the desk, with a small Christmas tree in the foreground. Ducky is reciting, "Etymology. Archeology. Sociology. Fluviomorphology." and explains to Jimmy that the latter is the study of the formation of river channels. Jimmy is underwhelmed, but Ducky enthusiastically charges ahead: "It's almost as fascinating as hymenopterology. Jimmy stumbles over "hymen", but Ducky explains that it is the study of insects – specifically, those with four diaphanous wings. Jimmy studies the list he is compiling, and then as he flips through numerous pages, tells Ducky that they may have to prune the list down and that Facebook has a limit as to the number of interests. Gibbs, walking in, asks, "Facebook?" Ducky agrees, and Gibbs, thinking for a moment, offers, "That's that thing that some people . . . do stuff with?" Ducky offers, "The term is 'social networking'," and then goes on to explain that if he wants to maintain his proficiency with psychological autopsies, he has to stay current with the latest cultural developments. Gibbs is bored: "How about staying current on this case, Duck?" Ducky deflects the pointed question: "I may be new to social networking, but the Mallards are masters at multi-tasking!" and rises to approach a table. With a flourish, Jimmy removes the cover of the corpse to reveal, among a flurry of feathers – the turkey, neatly autopsied. Unsurprisingly, the turkey died of a gunshot wound to the breast. But Ducky is intrigued by the yellow and tan tail feathers. He goes on to explain that the East Coast turkeys all have brown tail feathers, and that this turkey is a Rio Grande turkey, and are found almost exclusively in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas ("oh, Mr. Palmer, add ornithology to the list."). Palmer asks the obvious question: "So, where did Petty Officer Neisler get this one?" Ducky suggests a cross-country hunting trip, but Gibbs says that his commanding officer told him not to leave the state before the trial. Ducky suggests that if Gibbs wants to know where Neisler was, then he should figure out where the turkey came from. Jimmy, smiling, can't help himself: "Gobblegobblegobble!" Gibbs stares at him, but Ducky laughs.

In Abby's lab, Gibbs walks in to see Abby doing a somewhat jerky dance. In the background, Scott Joplin's ragtime song Maple Leaf Rag is playing. Abby asks Gibbs to guess what she is doing, and he guesses correctly: "The turkey trot?" She's impressed, and continues dancing, inviting him to join in. He looks at her, and she stops, then mischievously tells him, "Oh, I guess you're here to talk turkey, eh?" Abby tells him that she ran the turkey's DNA through a database of NWTFDNA – the National Wild Turkey Federation DNA records. "Turkey DNA?" asks Gibbs incredulous, and Abby agrees that it is a wonderful time to be alive. It turns out that if a state has a turkey overpopulation problem, they will catch and release to other states that need a boost. "They keep records?" asks an amazed Gibbs, and Abby confirms: "Good ones!" and goes on to tell Gibbs that there was a pre-Christmas release two weeks ago in Virginia, and with the DNA, she can pinpoint which hunting ground the turkey was released to. Gibbs identifies the area as two miles from the last hit on Neisler's credit card. Abby suggests that perhaps he has returned to familiar hunting grounds to hide out. At Gibbs walks out, Abby starts up the ragtime music and continues dancing.

Gibbs and Ziva arrive at the hunting grounds, and Ziva is startled as a hunter walks by with a large turkey thrown over his shoulder. She declares that she has seen enough dead turkeys, but Gibbs reminds her that she'll probably see another one Christmas Day. She tells Gibbs that she has plans to go skiing with her friend from Miami. "He said he lived in the French Alps for a while and that he misses the snow." Gibbs offers a skeptical "uh,huh," and then stops a hunter to ask if they recognize Neisler's photo. No hits. Ziva is getting impatient – this is the fourth park with no results. "Perhaps Abby is sending us on a wild . . ." she stops as a hunter walks by with a goose. "Never mind!" she declares. A hunter rises from a group and starts to walk away. Gibbs notices him just as the other hunters recognize him. They stop him with their guns pointed at him. He yells over at Gibbs, "I promise I won't testify!" and Gibbs tells the hunters that they'll take it from there. He shows his badge, and Neisler relaxes. "Oh, thank God – when I saw you flashing my photo – she's got the eyes of a killer, and you in that suit . . . figured I was dead." Gibbs pats him down, and Ziva asks him if someone is threatening him. He tells her that he received badly-worded emails telling him that they would kill him if he testified, so he thought he'd lay low until the trial, but they found him. He shows them the "Play Me" CD, and as Walsh calls, he warns Ziva not to answer it: "She was the only one who knew where I was – she has to be in on it!" "The D.A.?" asks Ziva with surprise. Gibbs answers the phone, and Walsh asks, "Any luck finding Jerry?" "Nah," answers Gibbs, looking at Neisler, "still haven't found him, yet."

In the office, McGee, Tony and Gibbs are reviewing the video, and McGee tells Gibbs that Abby has the original down in the lab, trying to identify who made it. Tony starts to comment, "The ol' knife to the neck . . . reminds me of . . ." but stops. McGee asks eagerly what it reminds him of. "What? An old fraternity prank? A 'Halloween' movie?" Tony doesn't meet McGee's eyes, but murmurs, "I know what you're doing." McGee, exasperated, declares, "And I know what you're doing." "What I am doing?" asks Tony tonelessly, and McGee snaps, "I don't know! But it's bugging me to such a degree that . . ." he stops suddenly as Gibbs thwacks him upside the head with a file, with the admonition, "I know what we're not doing." Tony continues as if nothing has happened: he has run a complete background check on the D.A. and nothing has jumped out. McGee points out that she could have told someone, but Ziva joins them and tells them that she has made discreet inquiries, and no one, not even Walsh's assistant, seems to know where Neisler was staying. McGee admits that he wasn't able to trace the emails, but the intent was clear. "To stop him from testifying," confirms Tony. McGee goes on to say that it obviously revolves around the case, and suggests splitting up the case files into three . . . Tony interrupts, diving into a succinct review of the pertinent facts of the case files. He has obviously already reviewed the files. Hayes, 41, is a former private investigator who spent years digging up dirt for bigwigs. "But, despite his somewhat grimy job, he was a family man, and had a reputation as a stand-up guy." Hayes started falling apart and drinking when his wife was killed in a car accident and his daughter became a state ward. Gibbs guesses: "He ended up on the street," and McGee agrees, stating that Hayes worked as muscle for whoever would hire him. Ziva adds that one evening, he mugged a brother and sister in an alley, shooting and killing the sister, and Neisler saw the whole thing. Gibbs tells Tony to find out who the killer worked for, Ziva will stay on the D.A., and McGee's job is to find the brother.

In the conference room, the brother, Matthew Gray, tells Gibbs that his sister had taken him out to Benihana's for his birthday – a family tradition. After their folks died, it wasn't the same, but his big sister had custody of him and tried to keep things normal. Gray goes on to explain that they took a shortcut home, and that this guy pulled a gun on them. "Katie didn't even hesitate – she jumped right in front." Gray pauses, and then looks away. "I don't remember what happened next – just the blood," he says slowly, as he looks at Gibbs. Gibbs asks him if he saw the killer, and Gray says that he couldn't be sure, "but made the mistake of telling the police that." Gibbs says mildly, "It's not a 'mistake' – you want the right guy to pay for this." Gray protests that they know who the right guy is, there was a witness. "Or at least, there was – the D.A. told me that he's missing." Gibbs is thinking. "Did she say anything else?" he asks Gray. Gray tells him that Walsh said that NCIS was looking for them, "but you have to look harder! That witness saw everything! My parents raised us to forgive and forget, but all I want right now is . . ." "Payback?" suggests Gibbs. "Justice," Gray responds firmly, and begs Gibbs to find Neisler.

In the lab, Abby is measuring Neisler's facial feature, and tells him that he has very symmetrical zygomatic arches (cheekbones). Neisler doesn't care, as long as it helps catch whoever is after him. Abby explains that precise measurements will help her figure out the size of the hand holding the knife to his throat, which will be useful if they find a suspect. "Hmm. Smart," muses Neisler. "I can understand why McGee was interested in you." Abby turns. "Excuse me?" she asks, and Neisler explains that McGee wasn't too happy when he had to leave Neisler alone in Abby's lab. He trails off, and comments offhandedly that he loves the song that is playing. Abby tries to explain that McGee was protective of her because they have had problems with visitors in her lab before. "Protective of what, your butt?" Neisler inquires, startling Abby. "He couldn't stop checking it out when your back was turned," he continues. "Really?" drawls Abby. Neisler continues, "But I can see why you'd want to keep things casual." Sighing, Abby asks, "Why is that?" Neisler explains, "What if he's 'the one'? You're obviously married to your work, it's too soon to meet 'the one'." Abruptly, Abby turns off the music, and tells Neisler they are done. We hear a door, and without turning, Abby tells Gibbs, "Gibbs, can you make him go away, please?" Gibbs sends Neisler out of the lab with an escort. Abby has reviewed the forensics from the murder trial, and all they have is gun shot residue on the alleged killer's shirt. "It means he fired a weapon," she concludes, and Gibbs finishes, "But not who he fired at." Abby nods in agreement, and points out that the case is going to hinge on Neisler's testimony, adding sarcastically, "and I'm sure he's got a lot to say." Tony enters with a file, and adds, "I've got someone else who might." He has the list of people the killer was working for: drug dealers, loan sharks – people who will be hoping that he beats a murder rap. Gibbs observes that if he's convicted, he could cop a plea by giving evidence in other crimes, and Tony agrees that it gives others a reason to shut Neisler up. Tony points out one person in particular – Smitty Brown – dealing in black market weapons, drugs, and who has been visiting Hayes in prison. "Pick him up," orders Gibbs, but Tony admits that he can't find him. "He disappeared the day that Jerry got the DVD." Gibbs tells Tony that he wants to talk to Hayes and Tony tells him that he has already made arrangements. "Good job!" Gibbs praises Tony, and begins to walk away, but then turns and adds " . . . again." "Thanks, Boss," says Tony, but Gibbs is puzzled. "Are you feeling ok, DiNozzo?" and Tony meets his gaze directly. "Never better," he declares. "Hmm," says Gibbs as he leaves. As Tony and Abby are left in the lab, Abby comes up to Tony and warns him, with a face, to stay away from Jerry. Tony looks at her sideways.

Gibbs enters the jail's interrogation cell to talk to Hayes. "What did I do now?" inquires Hayes. Gibbs shows him a picture of Brown and asks him if he knows him. Hayes says that he does: "I help with collections when people are behind with their payments." Gibbs asks him if he knows where he is, and Hayes asks, ironically, "Now, how would I know that?" Gibbs points out that Hayes has been his only visitor, but Hayes tells Gibbs that he can't help him. Gibbs asks him what they talked about, and Hayes gives him a smart-mouthed answer: "Keynesian economics. Paleolithic migrations. You know – light stuff." At Gibbs' stare, he mumbles, "I don't remember." Gibbs shows him a photo of the girl he is accused of killing, before and after the murder. "Do you remember this?" he inquires. "Did your old boss tell you that if you kept your mouth shut, he'd take care of your witness for you?" Sullenly, Hayes tells Gibbs, "I don't have to answer you." "Where is he?" Gibbs repeats. Hayes is uncooperative. "What are you going to do? The D.A. is already asking for the death penalty." "Yep, Gibbs agrees, inviting an argument "it's an airtight case." But Hayes isn't biting. He asks for the guard to return him to his cell, and leaves Gibbs.

Gibbs and Neisler enter Gibbs' house. Neisler looks around and asks he should take his shoes off. "Wish you wouldn't," answers Gibbs as he moves toward the kitchen. Neisler comments that he has never been in a safe house before, and asks what is for dinner. Gibbs tosses him a can. "Beans." Neisler glances at a small framed photo on the mantle – a old "Merry Christmas" photocard, with Gibbs, Shannon and Kelly. Neisler asks Gibbs about his meeting with Hayes, and Gibbs says that he thinks that Hayes knows something. "I saw him at a hearing," offers Neisler. "He seems like a sad, sorry guy." As Gibbs finishes opening the can of beans, Neisler adds, "Kinda reminds me of you." Gibbs looks up in surprise as Neisler continues, "Both alone. No family." Gibbs is annoyed. "Hey!" he interrupts, but Neisler keeps on with his observation, motioning toward the photo on the mantle. "It's the same – look at her. You can tell she had good taste. You think you could get away with this lumpy couch if she was still here? But it seems like you were trying to make some changes – some sort of home makeover? Finally cleaning out the magazines?" he inquires. Neisler is a man who doesn't seem to have a filter – anything that comes in his head comes out of his mouth. Annoyed, Gibbs tosses him blankets and tells him that there's a cot in the basement. Neisler asks if he can borrow the phone to call his commanding officer and that he had promised to tell him where he would be that evening. Gibbs stops in mid-stride and stare at Neisler. "You spoke to your C.O.?" Gibbs asks carefully, and Neisler agrees, saying, "Yeah, I called him this afternoon, I felt bad about not giving him a heads-up." Seeing a car pull up, Gibbs quickly moves to the window and orders Neisler down to the basement. Neisler scrambles as Gibbs stands by the window, peering out. He then sits down and waits – in a moment, Walsh flies through the front door, demanding to know where Neisler is. "He's in the basement," replies Gibbs calmly. Walsh declares that Gibbs has no right to withhold her witness from her case, and Gibbs corrects her. "It's our case. We need to talk. Sit down." Walsh refuses, telling Gibbs that he has done enough talking, and asks why he visited Hayes in jail. Rising, Gibbs tells her, slowly, that he doesn't need her permission, and then she tells him that there was an attempt on his life after Gibbs' meeting with Hayes. The trial has been postponed until Hayes recovers, which further jeopardizes Neisler's life. "You're not helping my case," she snaps. "You're going to ruin it!"

Walsh follows Gibbs into the office, demanding that he turn over Neisler. Gibbs tells her that that's not going to happen until he finds out who is trying to stop him from testifying. Ziva, McGee and Tony listen to the heated exchange as Walsh declares, "We want the same thing!" Gibbs is skeptical, and points out that Neisler said that Walsh was the only person who knew where he was. Walsh is outraged that Gibbs would think she is trying to sabotage her own trial, and suggests that whoever was trying to kill him probably followed him. There is a silence, and Gibbs glances at Ziva, inviting her to jump into the conversation. "We think we know who's after Jerry," says Ziva. "The accused murderer . . ." and Tony interrupts with a click of the briefing screen, "has been visited several times in prison by this man." Walsh asks who it is, and they identify him as Smitty Brown, a former employer who may be afraid that Walsh will talk if convicted. Walsh asks why he hasn't been picked up, and Gibbs admits that they cannot find him. She smiles, and tells him that she can probably help with that, since she has a large stable of informants on the street. Gibbs agrees, but is firm that Neisler stays at NCIS. Walsh storms out, and everyone looks at each other. McGee tells Gibbs that Abby has called and has new information. Ziva wonders if she should follow Walsh, but Gibbs decides no.

In Abby's lab, she is playing a video of two young men, where one is being dared to chug eggnog. She tells Gibbs that there were no clues on the DVD, but on the DVD's picture, there are two dead pixels, which had to come from a particular camera, and the chances of two camera have the exact same dead pixels was extremely rare. She then started scanning other video upload sites to find other videos with the same missing pixels, and discovered this particular eggnog video. She goes on to say that she found four videos that matched. She then measured the hands in the video, and compared them to the hand in Jerry's picture – and she found a match. The cameraman's name is Joe Casey. Gibbs tells her to send it up to McGee for a BOLO, but Abby tells him that Joe has been in the county morgue since this morning.

In Autopsy, McGee is giving Ducky the particulars. "Joe Casey, 23 years old, and already had a record for B&E, larceny and grand theft auto." McGee adds that they believe that Smitty Brown hired Casey to scare the witness, and then took him out when he was done. Jimmy and Ducky are examining the body, and Ducky tells McGee that the medical examiner believed that the death was an animal mauling. Ducky trails off in mid-thought, and Gibbs guesses, "But you don't?" After a moment of thought, Ducky turns back to the body, and points out things that puzzle him – the liver wasn't mauled so much as inflated to the point of exploding, and several of the organs seem to have freezer burn. Again, Ducky trails off, and Gibbs asks him why he is so distracted. Jimmy tells him that since Ducky's profile was posted on Facebook, he has had several emails from "lady friends." Ducky shrugs helplessly, and adds, "Well, some of them are quite provocative! I'm having difficulty concentrating!" McGee and Gibbs almost hide smiles, and Gibbs gently redirects: "Freezer burn?" Ducky confirms that the organs in the thoracic cavity had freezer burn, and he can't explain it, but Jimmy has noted that the man's tattoos were probably made within minutes before his death, since the puncture wounds are still fresh. "So, if you can find the parlour . . ." McGee finishes the thought, "Then someone might have seen something!" and dashes off to start searching. As Gibbs leaves, he tells Ducky, "Good work, Duck." Jimmy starts to protest, "Actually, I was the one . . ." but Gibbs stops him with A Look and Jimmy trails off. Jimmy turns to Ducky and repeats Gibbs: "Good work, Dr. Mallard." Ducky grins.

McGee and Ziva pull up in front of a store, as Ziva describes the area. Casey's body was found behind one building, and the tattoo parlor on the corner is the only tattoo parlor within a five-mile radius. McGee asks Ziva if she has copies of Casey's photos, and she says that yes, Tony had them waiting for her on her desk – and had also updated her BOLOs on Smitty Brown. She and McGee both roll their eyes in exasperation, and McGee comments that the joke is getting pretty old. Ziva observes that she doesn't think he is joking. McGee points out that Tony is a great investigator, but the closest he ever came to enjoying paperwork was renewing his Maxim subscription. Ziva agrees, and confides that that is why she is so concerned. McGee agrees, and tells Ziva that Tony gave him half of his French fries at lunch. Ziva earnestly tells McGee that one of them has to confront him, but McGee asks, "And tell him what – 'Why aren't you acting like a 14 year old anymore?'" Ziva corrects him: "Well, I was going to say at 12 year old – but YES!" Suddenly, a man walks out of the tattoo parlor. McGee stares at him, and then asks Ziva, "Is that Smitty?" Ziva, watching carefully, agrees that it is. McGee calls out, "Smitty!" Smitty stops and turns and asks, "Who wants to know?" McGee and Ziva flash their badges and McGee tells him, "I'll make you a list."

In Interrogation, Smitty asks if he gets a phone call. Gibbs is seated, with Tony standing stiffly behind him. Gibbs silently hands Smitty his keys with a knife attached, and Smitty gestures to a bag, telling Gibbs that he's going to want the bag, too. Gibbs places a picture of Casey on the table, along with a knife in a container. Tony inquires, "You gonna want that back, too? It's called a wasp knife, right? Used by hunters to take down big game? Injects compressed gas, freezing and exploding internal organs?" Gibbs tells him that they found it in Smitty's car, and Tony tells him, more succinctly, "it's a murder weapon." Smith tries to laugh, and tells Gibbs that he doesn't even know the guy, why should he try to kill him? Gibbs suggests that he was tying up loose ends, but Smitty says he doesn't have any loose ends. Tony, not moving, suggest that Smitty is afraid that if Hayes is convicted, he will turn Smitty in for a lighter sentence. Tony goes on to outline that Smitty hired Casey to intimidate the witness, and then killed him. Smitty tells them that they have it all wrong, but Tony keeps going relentlessly, saying that when he failed to get to Neisler, he tried to have Hayes killed in prison. Smitty tells them that he didn't try to kill anyone – instead, Casey tried to kill him. He says that he heard that someone was trying to mess with the witness from the Hayes trial, and he put the word on the street that he wanted to know who it was, and that was how he met Casey. "I don't know who he was working for, but it wasn't me," he declares. "I told him to lay off the witness, he made a move – it was self-defense. End of story." Tony is unbelieving: "You told him to back off?" Smitty explains that he doesn't want Hayes out of prison – he wants him in prison, because he needs someone inside the joint to help him with "a little side-business" he had going. His last dealer got executed, and Hayes had agreed to be his new guy. Gibbs wants to know what Hayes got out of it, and Smitty said that he made deposits on a life insurance policy. "Life insurance? For a guy headed for the death penalty?" asks Tony. Smitty tells him he doesn't know what the deal is, he just knows what the deal was – and he can prove it.

In the office, Neisler has gotten under Ziva's skin, and we hear him protesting, "Well, you and Tony are . . ." as Ziva cuts him off: "We are just friends! There is nothing different about him!" "Alright," agrees Neisler doubtfully, and Gibbs then shows Neisler the photo of Smith. "Do you recognize him?" Neisler glances at the screenshot of Smitty's license and says, "No." McGee reports that the rest of Smitty's story checks out – the inside guy in the prison that was dealing for him was recently executed, and that Smitty is, indeed, making the payments on the insurance, even to the point of calling to confirm that the policy will pay even if Hayes is executed. "Who is the beneficiary?" asks Gibbs, and Ziva turns to Tony, expecting him to jump into the report. Tony silently hands her the screen control and she stares at him for a moment open-mouthed before she recovers and, taking the remote control, pulls up a picture of Hayes and his family and confirms that the beneficiary is Hayes' daughter. Tony observes there are no leads on who tried to kill Hayes in prison, but Ducky interrupts and tells them that that's because no one tried to kill Hayes. He has just gotten off the phone with the prison doctor, who thinks that Hayes' wounds were self-inflicted, disguising a suicide attempt. McGee protests, "But if he got off, he was just going to walk," and Ziva agrees, "Yes – why try to kill himself?" Unexpectedly, Neisler, who has been absorbing the conversation, interjects, "Seems pretty obvious to me." They all stare at him, and he continues with his explanation: "I'm sure you would have figured it out eventually, but Hayes doesn't want to beat the murder rap. He's given up. He just wants to die and leave one last gift to his daughter. But, he thought I was missing, which meant that he'd go free – so he tried to kill himself." He sighs and shrugs. "Another sad guy." Gibbs turns and glares at Neisler. Ziva asks the next question: "So, who is trying to get this guy out of prison?" McGee is pecking away at his computer, and says that he has found the call log from Smitty's cell phone, with several calls from this number. It looks familiar. Gibbs identifies the number: "District Attorney Walsh." Tony adds, "The same District Attorney Walsh who didn't know who Smitty was?" They head out.

Walsh is pacing in the interrogation room alone, keeping up an indignant monologue. "You can't keep me here! I have a date in two hours!" From the observation room, Tony and Ziva are watching her, and Ziva turns off the intercom. Tony, wincing, thanks her, commenting that he was getting a headache. "Really?" asks Ziva incredulously. "This is usually your favorite part, getting to 'watch reality TV at work', as you call it!" Tony tells her solemnly, "People change, Ziva," but Ziva is having none of it. "Yes – but not that quickly." They exchange a look, and Ziva continues. "And yet, here we have this – new Tony, who arrives early, leaves late, turns down advances from beautiful women and has not made a single joke in –what? – the last two days!" "Are you sure?" asks Tony, and to Ziva's affirmative snort, he snatches the file back from her and says, "Well, we are in the middle of a case." "It's never stopped you before!" exclaims Ziva, and Tony fires back angrily, "Well, it's stopping me now. I'm sorry if you're losing sleep over it, but I can't be responsible for everyone's feelings!" Ziva stares at him in astonishment, and then asks gingerly, "Everyone? For example . . .?" "You. And McGee. And the friends of Bitners in the world!" he says in frustration. Ziva zeroes in on that, and repeats slowly, "Bitner – you mean . . .?" "Yeah, Bitner. The girl that posted online that we were in a committed relationship last year." Ziva thinks back, and comments, "Yes – but if I remember correctly, the only thing you were committed to was a one-night stand!" Tony tells Ziva that he has just found out that Bitner has checked herself into a facility for depression after wrapping her car around a tree. "Nice one, huh?" he adds in derision. Ziva is beginning to understand: "And you think you are responsible?" Tony denies it. "No, I barely knew the girl, I'm just saying . . ." Ziva tells Tony that she was obviously a troubled woman, and Tony agrees. "Well, it's clear now.", and Ziva goes on to say that Tony probably feels badly because it's his job to notice things and help people that are in trouble. Tony admits that he doesn't know why it's gotten under his skin, and comments "Maybe instead of having a midlife crisis, I'm having a midlife crazy." Angrily, Ziva grabs Tony and turns him to face her. "Look, you are not crazy. You are just . . . growing up." Tony studies her face as she continues. "And some lessons are more painful as we grow older, because the stakes are higher. You need to find balance!" Shaking her head, she raises her fists in frustration. "Yes, yes, yes, you need to treat people more respectfully, especially when it comes to matters . . . of the heart. But," she says, calming down, and smoothing the lapel of his jacket, "you need to be – who you are." Tony is taking in every word. He asks, "And who am I?" Ziva tells him, "You are Tony DiNozzo. The class clown. And that is why we love you," she says, her eyes falling for a moment, and then looking up into his face. They gaze at each other for a moment, and both are startled when Gibbs enters the interrogation room. Tony gives Ziva a slight smile, and they both turn to watch the interrogation.

Walsh is threatening Gibbs that she will have his badge, and Gibbs tells her that she lied to him, and confronts her with the evidence on Smitty's cell phone. She says she had a good reason and that she withheld her relationship with Smitty to protect her case. "Your relationship?" Gibbs demands incredulously. Walsh goes on to explain that Smitty was one of her office's informants, and things got a little . . . complicated. Gibbs rolls his eyes in disbelief, and Walsh is defensive. "What? He's a good looking guy!" He doesn't dignify her explanation with an answer, and she goes on to explain that if Hayes' defense team found out that she was sleeping with the subject of an investigation, they could argue that the entire chain of evidence had been tainted, and her case would be over. "Maybe," agrees Gibbs, "but maybe if you had said something earlier?" Walsh pleads with him not to tell the judge, but he tells her that he has to.

Tony and McGee are standing on the street, shivering. McGee comments that it's unbelievable, but after all this, the killer could still walk. Tony says, mildly, that they'll know after the hearing, and McGee begins a tentative approach: "Hey, look, Tony . . ." Tony sighs and says, "Not you, too, McGee?" and McGee asks if Ziva has already talked to him. Tony says she has, and then points out that the hearing seems to be over. Gibbs and Ziva join them, as Walsh walks away in the background. Ziva reports that the judge threw the case out, and that Hayes walks. McGee observes that they never got a chance to find out who was threatening Neisler, and then asks Gibbs how the brother took it. "He wasn't there," says Gibbs with a slight smile. McGee is surprised, because Gray has been to every hearing. Gibbs says, slowly, that he is surprised too, and the four of them exchange a look.

A snowy street, with a Santa sitting by a Salvation Army kettle ringing a bell. A taxi pulls up, and Hayes steps out onto the street, clutching a large manila envelope. As the taxi pulls away, Hayes tosses the envelope into the trash. It has a label: "Federal Inmate. Record of Discharge." As he turns to watch the Santa across the street, Gray walks up behind him, grabs his arm, and forces him into the alley. At gunpoint, he demands, "Do you have anything to say to me?" Hayes tells him, "They know what you did. You hired the guy that tried to stop my trial. They know what you did." Gibbs and Tony enter the alley behind them, guns drawn. Gibbs tells him that they found the wire transfer you used to pay him." Tony adds, "You wanted to scare Jerry out of testifying – we just don't know why. Why don't you put the gun down and explain it to us?" Gray is angry. "No. He has to pay for what he did!" Gibbs tells him that he was about to, the D.A. was asking for the death penalty, but Gray is unimpressed. "Do you know how long the average convicted killer spends on death row before being executed? Thirteen years! If it happens at all!" Gibbs and Tony are joined by Ziva and McGee, guns drawn. "That wasn't going to cut it," he finishes. McGee continues, "So, you got him out on the street, where you were going to get payback." Gray corrects him, "No, I'm going to get payback!" Gibbs tries to tell him that it's not worth throwing his life away, but he asks about his sister's life. "She was the only family I had left – and you took her!" he tells Hayes, beginning to sob. Hayes tells him "I can't give you her life back, ok? But maybe, I can give you yours?" Gray is scathing, and Hayes continues, "Look, I'd supply the bullets myself if I thought it would make you feel better, but it won't." Gray tells Hayes, "You don't know anything about me!" but Hayes tells him that he has spent more time thinking about Gray than he has anything else in his entire life. "And I'm clean now," he continues, "and I can barely remember what I did, but I understand it now. I took your sister's life. I wasted mine. Are you really going to let me ruin yours, as well?" Gibbs tells Gray to put his gun down, but still Gray refuses. "No way – you mean, he just goes free?" Hayes explains that it's just a matter of time before the new D.A. refiles the charges and he's back in court again. "And you know what? I'll just save everyone the trouble and I'll plead guilty. Hell, I'll even sign the confession right now, and maybe we can just pretend that this never happened." McGee tells him that he may have to settle for maybe some of it never happening. Gibbs tells them that he can talk to the D.A. There is a tangible relaxing in the group. Hayes holds out his hands as if to say, "what now?" and Ziva moves to take Gray's gun. Gray tells Gibbs, desperately, "I miss her so much." Gibbs stands silently as the snow falls. He understands.

At the office, McGee and Ziva exit the elevator, laughing. McGee has had another dream. "Please tell me I was not in it!" she exclaims, and McGee tells her that she wasn't, but her knives were. Suddenly, they bump into Palmer, who is obviously struggling to keep back tears. McGee asks in alarm, "Palmer?! What is it?!" and Palmer gestures over his shoulder and mutter "Jerry," as he dashes off, head bent. Neisler is following Gibbs up the stairs, and McGee observes, "Ah. Well, I told Palmer not to talk to him." Tony is at his desk, straightening files. Ziva asks why Neisler is still there, and Tony tells her that he wanted to thank Gibbs personally. Tony tells him that the D.A. will drop the witness intimidation charge against Gray in return for a guilty plea to the weapons charge, and he won't do any time. McGee and Ziva exchange a glance, and McGee mutters, "I think you're going to have to have another talk with him." "Um-hmm," agrees Ziva, giving Tony a narrow look. She turns and sits down at her desk, and begins to type. Tony sits silently with his hands crossed on his desk, watching her. As soon as she touches the keyboard, the keyboard explodes. McGee's workspace also starts exploding, with confetti, colored lights, and sound effects. Ziva is jumping in alarm, and on the briefing screen, amidst a snowfall of confetti, is a large "Happy Holidays" with the NCIS seal set between a snow covered Christmas tree and a snowman. The rest of the office is looking on in amazement. McGee and Ziva both turn to stare accusingly at Tony, and Tony half- turns with a hint of the old Tony smile to give a thumbs-up to Neisler, watching gleefully from the stairs. Ziva exclaims, "YOU!" and Tony responds, with a frown, "Too much?"

Summary: The NCIS team partners us with the Coast Guard Investigative Service when they have to investigate the murder of a marine on a dinner boat cruise.

Coast Guard IS Special Agent Abigail Borin suffers through a terrible first date aboard a dinner boat cruise. She excuses herself and heads to the bar to do shots.

A handsome first lieutenant Jeremy Nolan chats her up and offers to rescue her later.

Nolan leaves her and her date finds her, just in time for gun shots to ring out. Borin draws her gun and investigates.

She finds Nolan dead.

It's 2 a.m. on a Friday night and the NCIS team is at work. Tony tries to get information out of Ziva about her mystery Miami man. She's using comp time to take three days off soon. Comp time is news to Tony.

Gibbs announces it's body of the week time.

On the dinner cruise, the next morning, Gibbs says hello to Borin, who he worked with before. He brought her a change of clothes.

Nolan was having dinner with his sister and uncle. The passengers have been kept on the boat.

Ziva talks to Nolan's family. His uncle Wayne Grossman says Nolan got back from Afghanistan four days ago. His sister Kimberly gets a text that the paparazzi are waiting. McGee recognizes her.

They're the children of Jack Nolan, the family is worth millions.

Bolin comes back with coffee. She and McGee report on Nolan, who was cut out of the family fortune after he refused to take over the family business. Jack Nolan died six months ago. Kimberly was made famous by a leaked sex tape.

Nolan was a stellar Marine.

Ziva finishes up interviewing Borin's date. He thinks he and Borin were hitting it off.

No one has seen the gun or tested positive for GSR. People saw a man in a marine uniform argue with a waiter.

In the morgue, Duckie tracks the bullets' path through the victim. They were fired from a low angle from at least 20 feet away. Duckie says it would have taken a marksman.

Tony interviews surly Doug, the waiter Nolan argued with. He's an ex-Marine, who was discharged for hitting a superior officer. Tony needles him.

He says he told Nolan his joining up was a stunt. He was on the opposite side of the boat when the shots were fired.

In the lab, Abby shows Gibbs and Borin her 3D model of the shooting, which shows the shooter couldn't have been on the boat – but instead was on another boat nearby.

Upstairs, Borin is wracking her brain trying to remember a second boat, but she can't. They wonder how the shooter would have known Nolan would be on the deck at that time.

McGee finds an arrest from three days ago against Nolan for assault. His uncle Wayne, legal counsel for the family business, defended him.

Tony and Ziva go to the business and meet with a Tom Adams, the CFO, a young guy who's been with the company since his teens. He speaks well of Jeremy and says that he stood up to Devon Lodge, a punk who used to date Kimberly and smacked her around.

When Jeremy got back, he found Devon and hit him. The charges were dropped.

Back in Abby's lab, she and Borin are going through the pictures from the cruise. There's one that shows the mystery boat out the window, a sports fishing boat. Borin recognized the model and is already looking into registrations.

Tony and Ziva go look for Devon at a club and find him mauling Kimberly. He admits he hated Jeremy, but says the paparazzi were following him at the time of the murder. At the office, McGee has 390 boat registrations.

Abby comes up to say the blood from the crime scene was from two people.

Borin gets a call that the Coast Guard just pulled another body out of the river.

Borin visits Duckie in the morgue with the second victim. He was killed around the time Nolan was, with a .22 to the back of his head. He was wrapped in plastic and weighed down.

He had .9 mm shells in his pocket, the kind used to kill Nolan. They think he was hired to kill Nolan, and then was killed.

He's Kyle Dansby and he has a record, including as the suspect in two murders for hire. McGee's about to trace where he was dumped according to river currents, but Borin steps in. She says it was at National Harbor.

McGee looks for the sports boat registered there and finds one that belongs to Devon's family's company.

Ziva and Tony go back to the club and find a blonde straddling a sauced Devon. He swings at Tony and when his security steps in, Tony and Ziva dispatch with them handily.

Back at NCIS, Tony and Ziva say they couldn't corroborate his alibi and he's unaccounted for four hours the night of the murder.

McGee interrupts. He shows them a paparazzi video of Devon with a senator's 17-year-old daughter going into a hotel and coming out four hours earlier. He has an alibi, but Ziva arrests him for having sex with a minor.

McGee finds paperwork that shows Jack Nolan changed his will and Jeremy got the whole company. Jeremy was about to turn it into a non-profit.

In the lab, Abby is on a caf-pow tear. She tells Gibbs that Wayne Grossman once defended the hitman Dansby.

She found Adam's prints on the boat. And Kimberly is out her $300K board member job. They have circumstantial evidence only and need a confession.

Gibbs says they're going to break rule No. 1: Never put suspects together. He asks Borin for the key to a sports boat.

At Nolan Radar Systems, Gibbs tosses the boat key on the table for Wayne, Kimberly and Adams to see. They tell Adams his blood is on it. Wayne shuts Adams up and looks at the key.

Gibbs pours Kimberly a glass of water and tells her to pick it up. She doesn't move her arm. Gibbs pokes her. They pull back her jacket to show a bandage.

The bullet grazed her.

She says they threatened her into getting Jeremy out on the deck. They all turn on each other, with Wayne pointing out Adams took out Dansby.

Wayne takes out his phone and plays a recording of Adams and Kimberly conspiring. They're all under arrest.

Back at the office, Gibbs and Borin are perky as the team drags. She gets called to another murder and says good bye.

A captain waits to see someone. He's there about Nolan. He has Jeremy's revised will – he's a lawyer in the reserves and served with Jeremy. Kimberly was out of the will and Jeremy went forward with turning all the company's profits over to charity.

Tony counts up his comp time and sees he has three weeks – which he won't be taking so he doesn't get replaced.

Gibbs sends them all home.

Summary: A petty officer's recruitment session at a college fair comes to a fatal end, prompting the NCIS team, accompanied by Dr. Mallard's predecessor, to solve his murder.

A recruiter talks to a student at a high school job fair. When he packs up his stuff to leave, someone follows him to the stairwell – and shoves him down it. At the bottom, they finish him off with a work boot to the head.

In the office, Tony pretends not to notice that Ziva has been gone since Thursday. Then he 'fesses up, he knows she spent the weekend with her Miami mystery man. The lack of info is driving Tony nuts.

Dr. Walter Magnus arrives to see Ducky. He's content to wait down in autopsy, despite the fact that Tony warns him it's stinky. He knows the way down.

Gibbs arrives to announce the dead body of the week: Petty officer in a stairwell. Even Gibbs starts singing "The wheels on the bus go 'round and 'round...."

In the stairwell, McGee scans fingerprints and IDs petty officer Simon Craig, a 27-year-old who did two tours overseas and requested a transfer back.

His ID and cards are gone.

They wait for Ducky, but Dr. Magnus arrives instead. "Why people always get killed in the least accessible places? I once found a ship's cook chopped up and left in a deep fryer. The sailors nibbled on him in the calamari for days," Magnus says.

Gibbs remembers him from NCIS.

Back in autopsy, Ducky looks over the petty officer as Magnus checks the place out. He tells Ducky that his wife died almost 10 years ago and he and his daughter Jenny don't talk much.

In the office, McGee reports that Simon's parents died when he was a kid and his sister Nina raised him and runs the family's crabbing business.

Simon's boss is chief petty officer Jerome Carr and Tony's looking into rejected applicants.

Vance comes to see Gibbs. He's using a cane, but getting around. Vance busts Gibbs for not doing any paperwork while he was out. He's eager to prove he's back at full speed.

Tony and McGee visit Jerome Carr. He mentions one reject who hounded Simon, James Zinetti. He hands over his file, showing a tattooed thug.

In her lab, Abby babbles Magnus' ear off about changes in technology. "I haven't understood one thing you've said, but I'm all for it," Magnus says.

Gibbs arrives. Abby presents a boot print lifted from Craig's face, a Trailbreaker work boot. There was a wood tack in the boot's heel.

McGee and Tony go see Zinetti in his wood shop. He's working at his saw when they approach him. He whacks Tony in the gut with a piece of wood and grabs McGee and puts his head down to the saw when Tony draws on him and tells him to freeze.

Back at the office, Zinetti says he was in a college class last night and can prove it.

Ziva returns from her romantic rendezvous. They went skiing in Vermont, and he cooked for her.

"He is an experienced man who knows how to appreciate life," she says. His name is Ray. Ziva assures Tony that Ray is a good man.

Gibbs meets with Simon's sister, Nina. She says he loved his job – and he was gay. He was involved with a high school English teacher.

Tony and Ziva visit Glenn Block at school. He says they had been seeing each other for about a month – but he's in a committed relationship. He's married. His wife Penny threw him out, but he doesn't think she is capable of hurting anyone.

As they're leaving the school, Tony recognizes Paul Simmons as one of the teens who talked to Simon. They stop him and his dad, Lance. He didn't know Simon was dead, but says he was cool. Tony gives him his card. Paul's wearing work boots.

In autopsy, Ducky shows Gibbs deep bruises on Simon's legs – older injuries from days before his death. Ducky calls it a beating. There are signs of previous injuries.

Ducky wants Magnus to help out with the autopsy, but he says he needs air.

Ziva calls Gibbs to tell him Glenn Block's wife Penny was just arrested for DUI and there were Trailbreaker boots in her car.

Gibbs talks to her. She followed her husband to a motel. He produces her bank record with a large withdrawal.

He says they think she hired someone to beat Simon up. She says she hopes it hurt and was at a bar the night Simon was killed.

But Gibbs doesn't think she did it.

In the office, McGee confirms Penny was at a bar.

Of the kids Simon was recruiting, Paul was the last to see him. His mom is dead and his dad was recently laid off.

Vance summons Gibbs.

Ducky comes looking for Magnus.

Vance doesn't love that Gibbs is calling Simon's murder a hate crime.

Vance looks weary and Gibbs suggests he might need to take more time off.

Abby summons Ducky, saying Magnus needs him. He's sitting catatonic in Abby's chair. Ducky talks to him but gets only factoids about hippos. Magnus says he loves it "here at the zoo." Then he looks around and asks where he is.

Tony and Ziva visit Paul Simmon's dad, Lance. There are beer bottles strewn around. There's a table saw in his kitchen. He says they're doing renovations. Lance says Paul's not really interested in the Navy, because he can't take orders.

Paul comes home, but runs when they say they want to talk to him.

He gets in his car and starts to drive off, but Tony runs behind his car with his gun drawn.

Back at NCIS in the conference room, Paul tells Gibbs he got scared. He says he didn't hurt Simon. Gibbs reads Paul's school suspension record. He says the fights weren't his fault.

Paul admits he talked to Simon at the fair, but then he left. Lance interrupts and says he needs to talk to Gibbs privately.

Out in the hall, Lance stands up for his son. Gibbs asks Lance where he was and he admits he was passed out in his car, drunk. Gibbs tells him he should act like a father.

In autopsy, Ducky tells Magnus he called his daughter, Jenny. They're not estranged; he lives with her. Magnus admits he has been diagnosed with Alzheimer's and says the job was everything to him. He came to NCIS hoping it would all come back to him. He confesses that sometimes he can't remember who he was.

McGee reports Paul's alibi: a pizza delivery receipt.

According to Simon's records, he never talked to Paul on the phone. McGee opens Simon's email and Gibbs tells him to search for "Don't Ask Don't Tell." They get hits.

They realize the fights at school were Paul defending himself. He didn't want to lie anymore, and Simon tried to help.

Gibbs talks to Paul, with a social worker present instead of his dad. He says no one else would listen to him. He says his dad thought he was crazy to want to enlist.

Lance comes home to find Paul and the agents. They arrest him. "All I wanted was to protect my son," Lance says.

He thought they were meeting up and it wasn't just "business."

Paul says Simon was helping him. Lance says he was just trying to be a good dad. Paul hugs him.

Later, Ducky checks on things in MTAC. He brings Magnus in. McGee plays a slideshow of Magnus' cases. Magnus watches the memories roll by and gets misty eyed.

Vance examines his scar and gets buzzed with a call from SecNav.

Paul meets with another Navy recruiter, with Gibbs watching over him.

Gibbs prepares his tools in his basement and gets to work on his next project.

Production Code: 175
Summary: The NCIS team has to locate the family and the murderer when a Marine is found beaten to death in his own backyard.

A young dog walker brings some dogs home and finds a neighbor's dog roaming free with blood on him. He pulls a "Timmy fell down the well!" and leads her back to his house, where his owner is lying beaten in the back yard.

At the office, McGee finds a box on his desk. He opens it and a full-sized inflatable hula doll pops up. Tony is amused, but denies responsibility.

The receipt has McGee's credit card info on it.

Gibbs arrives to announce the body of the week.

At the crime scene, Marine Sgt. Travis Wooten was a married 34 year old active reservist with a young son. His wife Georgia is also a reservist.

Wooten was beaten to death around 1 a.m. He put up a fight.

There are plates of food at the table, a bath tub full of water and blood in the bedroom. They're worried about his family.

Back at the office, Tony reports Travis and Georgia were high school sweethearts and enlisted together. Travis was an unremarkable marine stationed in Afghanistan. His wife outranked him and received awards.

Travis recently lost his job at an auto parts plant and has been hanging out at a pool hall, as recently as an hour before he died last night.

At Feeney's Billiards, Tony brags about his pool prowess. They meet Len Feeney, the owner. He remembers Travis was there the night before.

Feeney says he served in the Gulf war.

Feeney says he thought Travis was divorced but had a girlfriend, Jancy Gilroy. She was there last night, chewing him out.

McGee talks to her. She says they were going to get married. She thought Travis was divorced. She has scratches on her hands.

In the morgue, Duckie finds a plant named after William Penn on the victim. It emits an oil that wipes away anything near it.

He tells Gibbs there were 11 blows to his head and more to his back and chest. The attack lasted a while. They found a big splinter in his palm that could have been from the weapon used on him.

Duckie shows Gibbs a weird shaped bruise on Wooten's neck.

Wooten also has old scabs on his hand.

In the office, they've located Georgia Wooten and her son, leaving the state.

She coolly asks Gibbs to see her husband's body.

Down in the morgue, she wants Duckie to completely remove the sheet from his body. Then she tells them to take him. "I can't pay for a funeral right now," she says as she leaves.

Upstairs in the conference room, she tells Gibbs she and her son left for an amusement park at 11 pm last night. She got a hotel room. She says she told her CO, but Gibbs says the CO says she didn't request leave.

Gibbs asks about his girlfriend. She says Travis told her it was over. She can't believe her husband is gone. "I can't believe I get to raise my son alone," she says. Gibbs notices the "get to."

She takes her son and leaves.

Gibbs wants her emails and phone records.

McGee finds that his credit card and social security number have been stolen. There are $10,000 in charges.

In Abby's lab, she shows Gibbs three fake heads she's experimenting with weapons. A broom handle is close, but the weapon is smaller, like a nightstick. It was covered in a rare stain or varnish.

She thinks a neck wound was made by a metal chain or something. Gibbs thinks the killer had a lot of rage.

In the office, they report that Georgia's CO filed paperwork about her being gone without authorization. McGee found that Georgia led Marine Corp martial arts training programs.

They watch a video of her and notice she's bruised in it.

On the base, someone tells Tony and Ziva that Georgia Wooten got "overly aggressive" with a trainee, but it was no big deal. He says Georgia wasn't the same after her last tour in Afghanistan. He says she's been bothered lately, but it wasn't work related.

Back at the office, they have photos of Wooten from various hospitals over the years with bruises all over her body. She insisted her injuries were the result of boxing training at an off-base gym.

Down in the morgue, Gibbs tells Duckie the bruises on Wooten's knuckles were apparently from beating his wife. Duckie suggests Ziva talk with Georgia to try to get her to open up.

Ziva visits Georgia and tells her she knows what it feels like to be under the control of a man, and feeling that the way to survive is to just shut down. When she says she knows what it's like to want to seek revenge, Georgia denies she killed her husband shuts the door in Ziva's face.

In the office, they don't show any hotel charges on Georgia's card, but she made a lot of calls, including one to Travis and one to Len Feeney. She called him several times over the past few weeks.

Ziva and Tony go talk to Feeney again. He says her voice was shaking when she called. He knew about the abuse, but Georgia didn't want him to report Travis. She said she'd never kill the father of her child.

Feeney says Travis's girlfriend had no problem going after him.

In the office, Duckie reports they found finger nail polish that traced back to the nail salon where Travis's girlfriend works, but she hasn't shown up for two days and her bank accounts have been drained.

They find her and bring her in. She thinks they had something special, but he dumped her. She says she's pregnant and told him that night.

He told her about his wife and kid. She took a cab and left.

McGee confirms the cab later. Abby comes up to report the weird mark on Wooten's neck was from a vintage 1959 gold-plated watch.

Down in the morgue, Gibbs looks over the body. He calls McGee and asks him to pull up Georgia's training video. He watches it and sees her holding up a gold-plated watch.

Back on the base, Gibbs and Ziva go pick up Georgia.

In interrogation, Gibbs reads through all her ER records with photos. She insists she's not a victim. She says she could take the beatings, so Travis looked for new ways to hurt her. She says that night he found it when he threatened to take their kid.

She says she took their son and ran. She insists she didn't kill her husband.

McGee freaks out to Tony that he might have been a victim of a Russian identity theft ring. He reads through the charges, including comic book shops and erotica. Tony thinks the identity thief is a 14 year old kid.

In the lab, Abby announces she traced the varnish chip to a company in Ireland that is only used for pool cues.

Gibbs and Tony go back to Feeney's club.

They bring Georgia in. Feeney tells her he went to her house after he heard how upset she was. Travis attacked him, so he fought back, but couldn't stop. He tells Georgia he'd do anything for her.

Back in the office, Tony brings in a 12 year old: Tim McGee. McGee recognizes him as his landlady's kid, with access to her keys and his apartment.

When McGee tells the kid how much he cost him, the kid tells him, dude, relax, it's fraud and he's only liable for $50 of it. He tells McGee he's stuck in a rut and even eats the same take out every night.

The kid asks Tony if they can go to the arcade now. Tony invites McGee, who caves under the pressure.

McGee tells the kid he owes him $50. "Talk to my mom, bro," the kid says.

Production Code: 176
Summary: The team has to investigate the death of a naval commander found shot to his death on a navy vessel, while undergoing mandatory psych evaluations.

A Naval vessel gets new orders to monitor North Korean activity off the coast. Commander Reynolds doesn't come to the bridge. They find him dead and bloodied in his stateroom.

At NCIS, Dr. Rachel Cranston (Wendy Makkena) reminds Director Vance that his team is overdue for their psych evaluations. She wants to follow them around. She asks who she should start with.

Cut to Tony counting his winnings from a trifecta bet at Pimlico. He's explaining how the horses spoke to him with a series of neighs and whinnies when Vance and Cranston come down the stairs behind him.

In walks Gibbs with the body of the week: dead commander Vincent Reynolds of the USS Colonial. Gibbs doesn't argue with her tagging along.

On the Colonial, Tony tries to explain his horse whispering to Cranston, saying it's his responsibility to lighten the mood.

In the stateroom, they snap photos. Duckie announces the victim was shot at close range. The slug is in the mattress and the shell casing is on the floor. It's a type used by Koreans and Russians.

The captain says there is a group of international journalists on board. McGee checks his smart phone and finds the news is out.

Vance gets an earful from Sec Nav. The ship is on lockdown. They're trying to figure who leaked the story. There are two English reporters, two French and one South Korean. Men Ho Kwan was the only one not with an escort at the time of the shooting.

Vance tells Gibbs that until Cranston is done they're not technically cleared to work in the field. He reminds Gibbs that their record might not be enough.

Victim rundown: Reynolds was 18 months from retirement and was single with no kids. He's friends with Admiral Wayne Hargrove, who's aboard the USS Blueridge.

Gibbs reminds the team that Vance wants them to talk to Cranston. She picks Ziva.

Back on the Colonial, Tony talks to the Korean journalist Kwan, who is not happy at being singled out. Tony tells him he looks nervous.

When Kwan walks away, Petty officer Oliver tells Tony that she saw Kwan arguing with Reynolds last night.

Ziva reluctantly talks to Cranston, angry to be away from work. Cranston asks her about juggling her responsibilities to country and her job.

Flash back to Ziva arguing with her dad and him saying he doesn't know where her loyalties lie. He tells her he expects her loyalty to him – and only him.

Cranston brings up Kate Todd, who Ziva replaced.

Flash back to Ziva sitting at Kate's desk, trying to fit in.

Cranston asks Ziva about men and says her choices in them in the past have influenced her work.

Flash to Ziva insisting to Tony that her boyfriend Michael Rifkin is not a Mossad operative. Then her taking it out on Tony when he shot Michael.

Cranston asks Ziva what she's looking for. "I want something permanent. Something that can't be taken away," Ziva says.

In MTAC Gibbs talks to Hargrove, who says he and his wife Nancy thought of Reynolds like family. But he wasn't good at politics and tended to speak his mind too freely. Hargrove says Reynolds definitely would have pushed back against an aggressive journalist.

Back on the ship, Gibbs and Tony asks Kwan for an alibi. He doesn't want to give one but finally says he was sending encrypted emails through a sub – to North Korea. He says they can arrest him for espionage, but he's not a murderer.

Cranston tries to buttonhole Gibbs, by suggesting he has a problem with professional women. Cranston follows Gibbs to Abby in the lab.

She says the weapon was older, a TT 30. She has found 28 dealers who had versions of the gun and is narrowing.

Down in the morgue, Tony complains that Cranston is judging him.

Duckie says the gun was held against Reynolds' chest. He had fractures on his hands. Duckie thinks the gunshot angle should have been higher.

Cranston joins them and Tony leaves. She tells Duckie he's the least of her concern since he seems balanced.

He tells her there are times he feels melancholy. Flash back to him talking to Kate's corpse.

Upstairs, Abby found one name linked to the gun, a seaman named Marcus Leonard. Gibbs suggests he take Cranston with him.

She asks him about working without Tony. McGee admits it's nice sometimes.

She recites his impressive resume, but suggests "something feels stunted." She asks if he'd like to be in a committed relationship.

Flashback to McGee's bad history with women.

At Leonard's house, McGee breaks in. Cranston follows him. Leonard is supposed to be at sea.

They find a room chockfull of guns of every shape and size.

Ziva talks to Leonard on the ship about his beef with Reynolds. Leonard says Reynolds plays favorites. He says he gave his TT 30 to a friend in Ohio.

Tony tries to get something from the vending machine and fails. Cranston observes. Flash back to Tony turning down his own team in Spain. He says we make decisions and live with them.

McGee reports that the victim's brother Peter said Vincent was in a long term relationship with a woman named Nancy. Gibbs wants to talk to Admiral Hargrove's wife.

Cranston visits Abby, who confesses she doesn't want to learn things about herself she might hate. Cranston tells her she works too hard. She asks if she hangs out with her female coworkers. Flashback to Ziva going for a weekend with Kate. She says misses Kate.

Cranston suggests she befriend people on the team, and suggests McGee.

Flashback to McGee realizing he slept in and did other things in a coffin at Abby's.

Abby's computer gets a match to the residue on Reynolds' hands: tape adhesive.

Gibbs meets with Nancy Hargrove in a park. She plays coy at first, then says they saw each other for over 20 years. She doesn't think her husband knew. They only get together when Hargrove was away.

Gibbs mentions how Reynolds didn't have anything in his life except the Navy.

Cranston joins Vance in the parking lot, asking if he's spoken to anyone about his recent shooting. Flashback to Vance being told he was never supposed to succeed as director.

Cranston thinks the attack on his life terrified him and now he's second-guessing himself. Gibbs calls for Vance. "Are you sure?" Vance says.

Back on the ship, Gibbs has a list of people he wants to talk to. Tony says he's breaking rule No. 1.

Gibbs and Oliver meet with petty officers Oliver and Howard, who found Reynolds' body. Gibbs tells them Reynolds' father was in WWII and Korea, he carried a gun given to him by a Russian officer. He had it with him on board.

The only DNA on the tape was Reynolds' own. They mention again that Reynolds was near retirement and was about to lose the only thing that mattered to him.

Gibbs suggests Howard and Oliver found him with the gun taped to his hand. They admit they staged the scene. Oliver says Reynolds was a man of honor and deserves to be buried like one.

In the morgue, Tony stands over Reynolds. Cranston asks what he sees. Tony sees a man who dedicated himself to his job his whole life and had nothing to show for it.

She asks how it makes him feel. "Afraid," he says.

She says people know he's a good agent.

Flash back to Tony angry at Kate for not following his lead.

Cranston suggests Kate was hard on him because she knew what he was capable of. She says it's too bad she didn't get a chance to tell him.

"I think I just realized who you are, Rachel," Tony says.

Cut to Gibbs finding a woman asleep on the floor behind her desk. And flashback to him finding Kate there. This time it's Cranston and he brings her coffee.

She reminds him he hasn't talked to her. He says there's no point, he's not changing.

Then he says when she was lying there, she looked just like her sister.

Flashback to Gibbs finding Kate in the pilot and offering her a job. Then getting shot on the beach.

Gibbs asks Cranston if she found what she was looking for. She's glad to meet the people closest to Kate when she died. She doesn't think she has closure just yet.

Gibbs takes Cranston to his basement. He tells her to stand in a spot, then tells her she's standing where the man who killed her sister died – where Ziva shot her own brother. That, he says, is closure. "The rest is just memories," he says.

Flash back to Kate calling her sister to complain about Gibbs. Rachel missed the funeral.

Cranston has a story for Gibbs: A man walks into a bar. The bartender takes out a shotgun and shoots, just missing the man. The man says thank you and leaves a tip. Why the thank you and why the tip? "The guy had the hiccups," Gibbs says.

She says it's all about responses, and if we keep things bottled up, even the harshest response seems appropriate.

Vance reads her report, saying of the team in clinical terms, "they're a disaster." But they do what they have to, when they have to. She warns him eventually it might catch up to him.

Production Code: 177
Summary: When a marine dies to save the life of a Belgravian prime minister from an assassination attempt, the NCIS team is put on the job of protecting the minister's daughter that is currently studying in the USA while investigating the death of the marine.

Tony sits in the back of an ambulance, with a scratch on his head. Vance shows up, angry as hell. Tony and McGee are soaking wet. A car is crashed nearby. He tells Ziva it's an FBI crime scene now. "If this isn't rectified in 48 hours, I want DiNozzo and McGee's badges on my desk," he tells Gibbs .

Three Days Earlier In "Belgravia," a crowd awaits the Belgravia defense minister, Andor Gorgorva, who is meeting with the US Secretary of State about a proposed treaty. A man listens to a news report about the meeting and assembles a suicide bomber's vest. Another man prepares him for his mission.

After the meeting, the suicide bomber waits in the crowd as the defense minister comes out. A man in uniform spies the bomber and thinks he looks suspicious. He yells at him to stop. The man runs, then turns. He detonates his bomb, but not near anyone but the guard.

In the office, McGee and Ziva come to get Tony for the blood drive. He tries to think of a reason to get out of it.

Gibbs and Vance talk to Deputy Director Donna Wolfson in MTAC. The Belgravian authorities and state department think a local dissident group is behind the marine guard's death. NCIS will provide security to the defense minister's 24-year-old daughter Adriana Gorgova, a graduate student at John Hamilton University in DC.

Tony tries to talk her up to McGee.

Ziva and McGee go to find her. A woman walks out. She looks nothing like her nerdfied picture. She's not happy to have a protective detail. A slacker dude named Judd says hi to her. She shoes him off and then tells Ziva and McGee that very few people know who her dad is and she wants to keep it that way.

Back at NCIS, her reads her the riot act, saying she has to accept NCIS's help. She intends to keep her regular schedule, including bikini wax.

Gibbs talks to someone in Belgravia in MTAC, trying to follow up on the marine guard's death. Vance tells Gibbs to back off and stick to protection detail.

In Adriana's apartment, she freaks out when her computer crashes. McGee gives it a look and fixes it. Tony and Gibbs come to take over. When McGee leaves, she calls him "Timmy" and checks that he'll be back in the morning.

Duckie comes to work with Palmer and finds a body on his slab – it's Gibbs catching a nap. Duckie is awaiting info on Jennings, the guard. He was embalmed. Gibbs wants info on the bomb to ID the bomber.

Ziva and McGee follow Adriana to visit with her Prof Flemming. She assures them he's harmless, but they come in. It's the man who suited up the suicide bomber.

Ziva texts Ray. She asks McGee how much longer he thinks their team will be together. He thinks he might want to lead his own team someday.

Adriana's friend Judd comes by to wait outside the professor's office. He says he does odd jobs at a machine shop in exchange for a place to live.

Abby comes by to harangue Tony about not giving blood yet. He finally admits that ever since he was in the hospital, he's been afraid of needles.

At Adriana's apartment, Ziva asks about her dad. Adriana doesn't agree with his politics. Ziva can relate to a dad who's first love is his country.

Adriana changes for her run. Tony's all suited up to go with her. Adriana asks if McGee is seeing anyone.

In the lab, Duckie and Palmer pluck a gazillion pieces of shrapnel out of Jennings and send them to Abby.

On their run, Adriana flirts with McGee.

Back at her apartment, Adriana sends Tony for food. She goes to get in the shower then yells to McGee for help. He comes to find a bulb is out. She kisses him, but he says he can't. He gets a stepladder to change the light while she goes for bulbs in the kitchen. When there's a knock at the door, she answers before he can stop her.

Two masked men with guns take her away. McGee calls Tony and they get in a car to follow. But they have to swerve to avoid a bicyclist and end up crashed into a fire hydrant. They lose her.

Cut to Vance chewing out Gibbs, threatening to take badges. The kidnapers have called Gorgova, demanding he not sign the treaty. The signing ceremony has been put on hold.

McGee tells Gibbs he takes responsibility and offers to resign. Gibbs asks if he broke protocol and when McGee says he didn't, Gibbs says they're all part of a team.

Back at NCIS, Abby does a Chinese good luck chant for Tony and McGee. Gibbs has no doubt that Vance could make them retire.

Abby has reports on the bomb. The tiny pieces match the bomb signature of another US bomb maker, Joe Don Wynn. He was nabbed by ATF two weeks ago.

Back from their FBI interviews, McGee and Tony are running on two nights without sleep. Gibbs wonders aloud if the FBI might have missed anything in Adriana's apartment.

Tony, McGee and Ziva go check it out. Tony just happens to have a leftover FBI crime scene sign to get through.

Gibbs meets with Joe Don Wynn, the bomber. After some threatening, Wynn says an American approached him. He tracked him down, he's a professor at John Hamilton named Flemming.

Inside Adriana's apartment, McGee finds something was stuck in the electrical plug to trip the breaker. Tony says he changed in there before the run and the lights were working. Adriana was the only other one in there. McGee wonders how should would have tipped off her kidnapers.

Tony cites the gun in the toilet in "The Godfather" and finds a cell phone in hers.

Back at NCIS, they find Flemming was in Belgravia recently. They think the kidnapping is a hoax. They track the toilet cell phone to a warehouse. They find a car with a John Hamilton faculty parking sticker. They find one of the kidnapper's masks inside. And a dead prof. Flemming in the trunk.

Gibbs reports the Embassy just received a ransom demand for $10 million.

Vance and Gibbs report to Wolfson and Gorgova in MTAC. He can believe his daughter would be involved with her kidnapping over politics, but she had a trust fund with plenty of money. Gibbs explains it may have started that way, but changed.

Wolfson chides Vance to make his agents stay out of it after their "screw up."

When the conference is over, Gibbs asks why Vance assumes they screwed up. He says if Adriana was in on it, no one could have prevented it.

In the lab, Abby finds a text on Adriana's phone from a minute before she was kidnapped. It said "NOW." It's registered to Judd.

Cut to Adriana bound and gagged at Judd's place. He's offering her food when flash bangs fly in the window. The team busts in. Judd runs, but they catch him.

Adriana says she just wanted to stop her father from signing the treaty. She didn't know Flemming was behind the assassination attempt.

Back at NCIS, the defense treaty has been signed. Adriana is going home with her dad, free because of diplomatic immunity.

Abby brings the Red Cross nurse up Tony. She's super hot, so he's willing to give it a shot.

From above, Gibbs gets the stink eye from Vance.

Summary: The NCIS team has to find a ruthless murderer after the dismembered fingertips and teeth of a murdered Marine are found in a pickpocket's stolen purse.

A pick pocket works the crowd at an outdoor mall, coming away with a wallet and Chanel purse. A police officer stops him and asks to see inside the purse. He drops it. Finger tips roll out.

At NCIS, Gibbs gets angry at his computer. He whacks it with a bat. McGee works on it.

Tony and Ziva arrive and McGee says his horoscope advised him to avoid relationships.

Gibbs arrives to report pieces of a dead marine, Corporal Zach Armstrong. There are also teeth. The pick pocket grabbed the purse off someone at a hot dog cart.

McGee reports the county coroner has a body found tied to a tree, missing his fingers and teeth.

Back at the lab, the DNA confirms the body is Armstrong. He was shot in the head after he was dead. His records say he's 5'6" but the body is over 6 foot.

Almost every bone in his body was dislocated. He was tied up and stretched to death.

Back upstairs, they find he was a decorated soldier, set to go to Afghanistan. He captured two high profile terrorists while in Iraq.

Witnesses saw him arguing with a woman outside a movie theater the night before he was killed.

Blake Martin (Jason Beghe) from Fiber Key security drops by, doing private security for the Pentagon. He's investigating several computer breeches from NCIS. Vance assigned McGee (the hacker) to help him.

McGee gets an alert that Armstrong's credit card has been used. They go to a laser tag facility. The gamers know him as "McGeeminator".

They find the Max who used the card. It's Maxine (Beth Riesgraf), Armstrong's ex-girlfriend. She says she dumped him a week or so ago when she found out he was cheating. She took the card because he owed her money. She seems surprised to learn he's dead. She says he gave her an envelope to hold on to while he was in Afghanistan.

Ziva encourages McGee to go with Max to get the envelope, even though he protests he's supposed to be avoiding relationships.

In the lab, Abby has started a defense fund for McGee. She traced the knock-off Chanel purse to a factory in Indonesia. Duckie found patchouli in the scratches on Armstrong's face.

McGee escorts Max home and they dork talk about gaming. She heard the "avoiding relationships" line to Ziva and assures McGee he's not her type. She hands over the envelope.

He notices her super deluxo computer and then recognizes her gaming handle as holding the high score on every on-line game he plays.

"You're awesome," he tells her.

She admits he is her type.

He composes himself and says he should go. But then shots come in through the window and he grabs her and covers her on the floor. She suggests he stay.

Later, Ziva and Gibbs check out the scene. Ziva teases McGee that Max is his girlfriend. They can't legally open Armstrong's envelope because it's sealed.

Some of Max's neighbors saw a strange car in the area.

Gibbs sends McGee back to NCIS to run the partial plate.

Blake Martin chats up McGee making him extremely nervous. Martin was a former force recon Marine but now just does security.

Abby has matched the bullets from Max's house to the one in Armstrong. Armstrong's will was in the envelope, leaving $1 million to his mom and $5 million to various charities – except that he's broke.

Martin suggests maybe Armstrong hid his money and they should use a forensic account.

McGee gets a hit on the partial plate: Lisa Bock, a martial arts teacher assigned to anger management classes.

Tony and Ziva crash Lisa's yoga class.

She calls Maxine a "man-stealing piece of-" and says they both dated Armstrong. He gave her a fake will when he left for Afghanistan. She knew it was fake because she found a bunch of copies when she went through his desk. He kept them to make women think he was rich, the same reason kept a bunch of fake Chanel purses.

Lisa smells like patchouli and says she might have hit him when they broke up. She was teaching a class when Max's apartment was shot up.

Lisa says Armstrong was on a million dating sites and they should check them out.

McGee and Abby go through Armstrong's computer and find an eavesdropping program installed two days ago before he was killed.

It's only monitoring game ports, but he has no games.

McGee and Gibbs talk to Max about her gaming. She admits she might have used his card to buy games. She realizes someone was trying to bug her.

Two days ago she was playing a game and broke her record, but she hit a "kill screen" and the game crashed.

She said it was weird and looked like encrypted data. She has screen shots.

She remembers the time – Armstrong's computer was bugged one minute later. "So Armstrong is dead because she won a video game?" Gibbs asks.

McGee shows Gibbs the "kill screen" Maxine stumbled on while playing Fear Tower.

Ziva talked to the head of L9 games, who make the game. Reed Synder was the lead programmer. He disappeared two days ago.

They find records of several large wire transfers to Synder, including one from Agah Bayar – an arms dealer.

Gibbs interviews Bayar, who says he commissioned Synder to create a video game to showcase some of his "more exotic merchandise."

He shows Bayar the kill screen shots. Bayar offers to help decipher it. He says he was in Vera Cruz with the governor two days ago. The State Department confirms his alibi.

In the office, they find Snyder is suspected of hacking the Pentagon. They think Snyder is putting secret codes in video games and selling the decryption keys. Hitting the kill screen accidentally exposed them.

Gibbs visits Duckie in the lab for a psych profile of Snyder. He left a manifesto calling for a revolution against computer society. He liked to play WWII board games – on the side of the Axis.

Ziva joins them and reports Snyder recently purchased a home in Morocco. They also got a hit on his car.

Tony and McGee head to the location, an abandoned sort-of power plant. Tony asks McGee if he's going to ask Maxine out and encourages him to go for it. They find Snyder. Dead.

Back in the morgue, Duckie finds Snyder has been dead since before Armstrong was killed. His fingertips were also cut off.

Abby has decoded the kill screen code. He was selling his hacking program. If the game was downloaded on to enough computers they could be harnessed to hack the most protected servers.

Gibbs goes to call the Pentagon, but McGee thinks someone there might already know.

He questions Martin, and accuses him of knowing about the leaks out of NCIS a long time before reporting them.

Being there now would allow him to follow the Armstrong investigation. Snyder's hacks made him look bad, and he worried he's lose his private security contract, so they think he killed Snyder and then Armstrong when the kill screen was triggered.

They tell him they found his finger print on the hot dog cart.

Martin says no one could get enough evidence to get Snyder and he wasn't willing to wait.

They have his confession, and admit they didn't have his finger print.

Abby summons them to the lab.

She found an insurance policy in Snyder's program – if he didn't enter a code every week his hacking program would launch. And it has launched and is already attacking Pentagon servers with the unwitting help of 15 million gamer's computers.

McGee says if they can find the mainframe, he might be able to shut it down.

They head back to where Snyder's body was found.

McGee guides Tony, Ziva and Gibbs from MTAC. With less than three minutes left, they bust through a wall and trigger a security system.

Gibbs flips on a camera and McGee guides him through the abandoned plant. McGee realizes it's like a giant video game – sort of like Gibbs is Pac-Man going through the maze.

Something explodes, but it's just dust and Gibbs is fine. The clock is under one minute.

Gibbs reaches Snyder's mainframe and McGee tries to slowly guide him through how to shut down the computer.

He hears shots.

Gibbs blasted the computer.

McGee runs into Maxine as she's leaving NCIS. Tony finished up her debriefing. She thanks McGee for his message, and says eight o'clock works great for her. She thanks him and kisses him on the cheek as she leaves.

Tony informs McGee that he has a date for laser tag with her. McGee says thanks and means it. Gibbs tries to get his computer to work but ends up yelling at it. McGee runs to help. "Don't shoot!"

Summary: When the NCIS team learns of a shocking murder of one of their former investigative assistants, they soon find out that the victim has been selling information on how to rob a warehouse full of expensive possessions. Meanwhile, a new special agent is added to the team.

A young couple is kissing on the roof of a parking garage. Interrupted, they decide to rejoin a party, and as they are walking through the garage, the boy slips on a puddle. Curious, they first think it's an oil slick, but then realize it's blood – there's a body under a nearby car. (CREDITS)

McGee turns off the monitors, announcing it's time to "hit the showers." Ziva protests, misunderstanding the idiom. Sniffing McGee, she tells him that he smells fine. Tony, walking by, attributes it to McGee's cologne. Ziva realizes that it's an expression. Ziva asks Tony if he showered that day – he says no, he's like Brad Pitt, and only showers three times a week. (Under his breath, McGee mutters, "You should.") As they walk to the elevators, they see maintenance men moving desks around, and McGee says that Vance wasn't kidding about there being changes. Ziva says softly, "We're going to lose some people," as the elevator doors opens, and Gibbs comes back with, "We already have – NCIS investigative assistant found dead in a garage. Grab your gear." As the garage door closes, Gibbs waves his hand in front of his face and grimaces, "Somebody stinks!"

Victim is Oliver Froman, a temporary worker from NCIS' Procurement Fraud Division, hired a few months ago and recently let go. Ziva asks if Terry Thomas is still the supervisor at the Fraud Squad, which McGee confirms. They grimace. Ducky won't let them move the body quite yet, since Jimmy is under the car trying to determine liver temperature. Jimmy gets stuck, and McGee attempts to open the car with the key found at the scene; however, the key doesn't seem to belong to that car. After the car is jacked up, Ziva carefully extracts a fiber from under the car, as Jimmy tells Tony that he showers about 18-19 times a week. McGee is surprised he has any skin left. Ducky tells them that the death was massive blood loss from multiple stab wounds, about two hours previously. As Gibbs and McGee wander off to find the victim's car, Tony asks Ziva how often she showers. "After just about any conversation with you, Tony." Jimmy and McGee snicker. Gibbs and McGee find the victim's car, packed with belongings – "looks like he lost his job and hit the road," observes Gibbs. However, the trunk is full of tagged items seized from NCIS. "This guy was looting the office!" exclaims McGee. Terry Thomas is helping move Froman's belongings to the team's office – he stutters badly as he explains that Froman understood he was a temporary hire. Thomas goes on to explain that the seized items were being prepared for auction for the Leona Phelps case. Gibbs has brief questions and then dismisses him abruptly, to which Thomas observes that "He would be terrible at customer service!"

In Autopsy, Tony likens Froman's death to "Psycho", the movie, where the disgruntled employee steals from the office on the way out of town and is killed. Ducky observes that the movie was based on a serial killer named Ed Gein, who liked to give gifts of smoked venison to neighbors – after he was arrested, police discovered that the venison was actually parts of human bodies stored in the smokehouse. Jimmy is appalled. Ducky theorizes that the murderer was experienced, because they use upward stabs instead of downward stabs.

Vance is surprised that Gibbs knocks on his door before entering. "Trying to stay on your good side," explains Gibbs. They discuss that the seized items were taken from a case concerning Phelps, who had run the Armed Forces Credit Union until she went into the private sector and created a "financial house of cards", was investigated and caught by NCIS. Vance reminds Gibbs that the billions that she invested has yet to be found and is appealing her case. "Nothing disrupts that prosecution," he warns Gibbs. As Gibbs begins to leave, he asks, "Do any of these personnel decisions affect my team?" Vance growls, "I'll let you know."

A slim blonde in black leather enters the office, chatting on her cell phone that the "Home Office looks exactly the same as ours . . ." Tony and Ziva are mulling over Froman's history, wondering where he was headed. The blonde's voice carries over the cubicles, catching Tony's attention briefly. Ziva observes that phone logs don't show any calls to family and that he didn't call ahead. The blonde interjects, "Not if you want to surprise them." Tony wonders if he has a criminal record, and the blonde interjects again, "You can't have a criminal record and work for us." Ziva stares her down. "And you? You work for us?" The blonde introduces herself as E. J. Barrett. Tony and Ziva introduce themselves. E.J. begins to rearrange her desk to suit herself as Tony and Ziva edge away to talk to Abby. Ziva is a little put off by E.J.'s interruption, and Tony pulls her away.

Abby has identified the fragment Ziva found as leather – "Leather. It's skin. It's flesh, it's tanned, stretched, processed, dyed dead flesh." McGee is trying to ignore her, as she launches into a description of various leathers. Abby tells McGee that she is trying to get the DNA of the leather, because there were no fingerprints at the scene, suggesting that the killer wore gloves.

Tony and Ziva are arguing – she is annoyed that E.J. butted into the conversation uninvited, and maintains that there is an expectation of privacy in the office. Tony excuses her, "She was just chatting over the hedge." "It IS over the edge!" exclaims Ziva, misunderstanding. As they meet McGee and Abby, Tony asks what they are discussing. "Tanning hides," replies Abby, "And you?" "The same," gripes Ziva menacingly. McGee recovers information from Froman's computer that show the location of the warehouse where things seized in the Phelps case were stored, guard schedules and security codes. None of the information was found on Froman, suggesting that Froman sold the information to someone else, and was killed instead of being paid. Tony observes, "There's going to be a heist!"

In the office, the team is reviewing the Phelps case, noting that the seized items would bring $75 million at auction. Gibbs decides to visit Phelps in prison, ("Camp Cupcake"), but as he is leaving, E.J. offers an observation: "Schemer like her was probably involved." Tony introduces them: "E.J. – L.J., or Gibbs. She's new," he tells Gibbs as Gibbs barely nods in her direction as he walks out. "He's old," he offers E.J., who says that she wouldn't put it past Phelps to rob herself. "You've met her?" asks Tony, and E.J. tells him that her team was responsible for bringing her down when they brought her to Vance's attention. "You have a team?" says Ziva disbelievingly. "I'm the team leader," E.J. corrects her, "With two other agents. We're transferring here from Rota, Spain." Tony blinks – that was the office Jenny had offered him when Gibbs came back from retirement several years ago.

At the warehouse, Tony observes that it "looks like Xanadu" with all the crates lined up. The guard says that none of paintings have ever come to life and jump out at them. Tony asks him, "Are you referring to the Olivia Newton-John movie?" "Aren't you?" asks the guard. "Xanadu –

Citizen Kane's house?" "Oh – that's a little embarrassing," answers the guard uncomfortably. Spying a sled, Ziva asks the guard, "How would you know if anyone took Rosebud out to go sledding?" "Nice!" says Tony approvingly, and the guard declares that no one unauthorized has been in. Tony reverently picks up a pair of tagged sunglasses. "These are Steve McQueen's sunglasses from The Thomas Crown Affair!" he exclaims, trying them on. "Now, that was a heist!" agrees the guard. Ziva tells the guard that they are going to check things over, in case the security had been leaked. Tony tells Ziva that the sunglasses sold the year before for $70,000 at auction. Tony then tells Ziva that he had turned down to transfer to Europe. Ziva tells him that she had heard that Jenny had offered him a team, and is surprised when Tony tells her that it was the Rota office.

At the prison, Phelps tells Gibbs that they had better be watching her things, and ungraciously kicking an errant volleyball back to the players, declares that if she has to play another volleyball game, she's going to kill someone. Gibbs tells her that it would get her "another nice room in super-max." Phelps is thoroughly unpleasant. She comments that she thought money was supposed to buy justice. "Well, it can't buy class," interjects McGee, and Phelps turns a glare onto Gibbs. "Am I talking to you, or your acid-tongued little errand boy?" she inquires caustically. While interviewing her, Gibbs tells her that her belongings have been relocated and is surprised that Phelps doesn't seem to know that. Gibbs hands her a list of her belongings and asks her who might want to steal it, but she abruptly leaves, telling him that she is late for the pastry class that Martha Stewart started when she was there.

Back at the office, McGee is still aghast at Phelps's coldness. He has a stack of DVDs, testimony from victims that they are going to review. Tony and Ziva have tightened security at the warehouse, and are in the surveillance truck watching the guard playing invisible baseball in the warehouse. Ziva keeps offering food to Tony until he asks her why, and she tells him that his blood sugar is low – "or else, something else is bothering you." Tony glares at her and, snatching an apple from her, takes a deliberate bite.

Back at the office, Gibbs is reviewing the testimony DVDs when E.J. peers over the wall. "Need anything, Barrett?" he inquires. "Nope. Do you need anything, Gibbs?" He doesn't answer, and she leaves, as he stares thoughtfully at his desk.

Back at the warehouse, one of the newly-installed motion detectors is tripped. Ziva and Tony rush in, only to find Gibbs in the warehouse. He tells them that nothing is missing – it's already been taken, and that Phelps eye went straight to a particular page in the inventory. One possibility is a desk that had belonged to William Faulkner. "I love his writing!" enthuses Ziva in awe. "Total genius!" agrees Tony. Ziva waxes rhapsodic: "It was worth learning English just for The Sound and the Fury!" Gibbs discovers that the desk has been jimmed – and the secret compartment is empty.

Ziva tries to maneuver the Faulkner desk into Abby's office so she can examine it. Abby hasn't had any luck identifying the leather, other than it was a Holstein calf, and when Ziva asks her about what is on the monitor, she tells her that it's something for Barrett. They move the desk into the evidence garage for Abby to examine.

In Interrogation, Gibbs has had Phelps brought in, and tells her that the secret compartment in the desk was empty. "I was robbed!" she says mockingly. Gibbs asks her if she would like to file a claim. "We'll need to know what was in there," he says archly. Barrett is watching from the observation room as Tony walks in. He stops short, seeing her, and then asks her what her read of the interview is. She says that "Phelps hates feeling like a prisoner, so Gibbs salts the wound, keeps her emotional, he stays cerebral." Tony congratulates her off-handedly, commenting that "that's how you get the captain's 'C' on your jersey." Barrett asks him if he's a jock, and he admits to basketball and some other stuff. "Varsity?" she asks. "Team captain," he admits. "I was a cheerleader, myself," she tells him, "but I never got past J.V." She then leaves for a meeting with Vance, but as she leaves, she tells Tony, "She'll want to deal." Sure enough, Phelps tells Gibbs that she knows who stole it, but she wants him to do something for her.

In Vance's office, he tells Barrett that as soon as they have found everything about the victim, he wants them to come back with her. Gibbs walks in without knocking and, slamming the door behind him, stands silently. Vance dismisses Barrett. As Barrett leaves, Vance glances down and closes a file. Gibbs tells him that Phelps will give them the name of the killer if she can have house arrest instead of prison. Vance refuses – no deals – until Gibbs tells him, "This one's a steal."

McGee is reviewing large heists in the past few years, using some colorful language to describe a casino heist, much to Tony's amusement – McGee is describing it lyrically as if he were Thom E. Gemcity. They narrow it down to one man, just as Gibbs comes in and tells them that he's made a deal to release Phelps from prison. He takes Ziva with him and McGee and Tony exchange startled looks. Phelps exits the jail dressed in a chinchilla jacket, complimenting Gibbs on his fast work. Phelps gives them the name of Otto Brock – the same guy McGee had identified, a cellmate of one of the guys who did a two-year stretch for the casino heist. McGee tells Gibbs that Brock is dead – Virginia State Police found his body a few hours earlier. Gibbs turns to Phelps, who gives him a knowing smile.

In Autopsy, Ducky is examining Otto Brock's body, recovered from a trashed hotel room, and tells Tony that Otto was killed the same way as Froman – same knife, same wounds. McGee and Tony pace around Autopsy as they put together a likely scenario involving disgruntled thieves, until Tony declares, "There just one question we have to answer on this heist: What would Steve McQueen do?"

Gibbs drives Phelps to her estate, and Ziva comments that it doesn't seem fair that she gets to go home after giving them the name of a dead man. Phelps ignores her, and tells Gibbs that "you ought to muzzle your pups, Gibbs – they all seem to have a problem with barking." Gibbs shrugs: "Well, this one's problem is definitely her bite." Phelps maintains that there was nothing she could have done in jail, and when Ziva tells her it didn't look so bad, Phelps sniffs, "You've obviously never had your freedom taken away." Ziva laughs shortly and tells Gibbs, "A real gift for reading people, this one." Gibbs discreetly lifts something silvery off the porch and puts it in an evidence bag as Ziva snaps a monitor anklet on Phelps.

Back in the office, McGee and Tony are still trying to figure out the heist, and consider the idea that the casino thieves stashed their money with Phelps, only to have it disappear. Abby has figured out what was in the desk at some point – Phelps' leather bound bookkeeping ledger, probably with records of secret accounts.

At Phelps' house, she opens a secret panel and withdraws the leather-bound ledger and a bottle of brandy. Taking it to the fireplace, she is suddenly accosted by Otto's partner, who is bitter at losing the money and not finding the ledger. He wants the ledger and tells her that he also wants her blood – and shows her a knife. Phelps flees out the door, tripping the alarm. Gibbs and Ziva are waiting outside, as Tony calls to tell them that the DNA on the gum wrapper matches Ruleo Medilla, one of the thieves. Phelps runs to their car, chased by Medilla. Ziva grabs her and Gibbs chases him – car chase! Forced off the road, Medilla runs to attack Gibbs, who shows him a gun. Medilla gives up.

At the office, Tony is complimenting Gibbs on the car chase and compares him to Sam Peckinpah. "You'd have made a great director, Boss!" Tony tells him. "Yeah, well, I've already got one of those," mutters Gibbs, eyeing Vance walking to his office. Tony asks Gibbs if he's noticed that the new girl likes to shower at the office before she goes home. Gibbs gives him a half-hearted head-slap as he turns to leave, and while Tony is deep in thought, he misses Gibbs' comment. As the elevator door closes, Gibbs asks, "Hey! Did you hear me?"

In the locker room, E.J. is showering. Tony enters and tells her that he was offered her job and turned it down. She says, "Thank you?" asks for a towel, and then asks why. He tells her that he wanted this team, "here in D.C., the varsity." E.J. asks him how Gibbs felt about it, and he tells her that Gibbs gave it to him, and that he was pretty good at it. "The previous director, Director Shephard, saw something in me," he comments. E.J. emerges from the shower with the towel wrapped around her. "Smart woman," she says, moving closer to Tony and looking up at him. A beat, and then Tony smiles and tells E.J., "There are rules against this." "No, there aren't," answers E.J. as she moves closer.

Summary: Gibbs is confused about Vance's order to cross-examine a teenage boy accused of killing his own father, a retired Marine.

Two guys from the parking enforcement bureau pull up on a car parked in a neighborhood. The young one wants to just knock on the guy's door to ask him to move his car. He rings the bell – and sees a man hacked up with an axe inside.

Tony, Ziva and McGee arrive at work to see boxes of files near their desks. Ziva fishes out Tony for info on Agent Barrett. He knows she and her team are out of town for a few weeks.

The boxes contain Metro PD files. Gibbs comes but doesn't announce the body of the week.

Then Vance does. The body has been in the morgue for two weeks.

Gibbs visits Vance. The victim is retired Marine Col. Neal Peyton, a 25 year vet. He was struck seven times with an axe. Metro turned the case over to the U.S. Attorney, who's an old friend of Vance's. They're taking it. Metro had a circumstantial case. They have a suspect but need a confession.

Vance mentions his US. Attny friend is up for a judgeship. Gibbs thinks they're being used for politics, but Vance says it's about catching a murderer.

The team reviews the files. Metro questioned the suspect for 20 hours and got nowhere. Gibbs and Tony go interview the suspect – a polite teenage boy.

Gibbs plays good cop, Tony takes bad, telling Nick he had means, opportunity and motive. "I'm sure you'll get just as far as the police did, which is not very," Nick says calmly.

As Tony explains they know Nick has access to the house and axe in the garage, Gibbs interjects asking the kid about his skateboarding.

Tony moves on to motive, which Metro didn't prove. Gibbs fiddles with his watch while Tony asks where he was his dad died. He says he didn't do it, he loved his dad.

Tony tells him they'll prove he did it.

In the morgue, Duckie says there were a lot of blows to the victim's head, a sign of personal rage. Ziva says Nick is 18, although he looks 12.

In the garage, Abby recreates the entire living room crime scene. The victim's tablet computer was next to the body. Nick's fingerprints were everywhere, but he lives there. Abby says his tox screen at the time of the murder showed he was on a cocktail of pills.

Ziva and McGee talk to a Dr. Ellen Gracie at a rehab facility. She says Nick was there three times for addiction to pills but never finished the program. She says Nick is strong willed, but doesn't think he's capable of murder. She can't give details about his complicated relationship with his dad.

In interrogation, Gibbs plays home movies for Nick. Nick won't even look at his dad.

Vance arrives with Nick's unsealed juvenile records. There were three violent altercations between the two. His dad tried to send him to military school, but none would take him. He thinks Nick hated his dad.

Later, Gibbs shuts off the home movies. Nick has fallen asleep. Gibbs wakes him up and asks why he hated his dad.

"This isn't gonna work," Nick says, because he didn't kill his dad.

Back in the office, McGee snoops around EJ Barrett's desk. He finds it locked.

Ziva reports Donna Peyton left two years ago without a trace.

They wonder if his dad isn't the first parent Nick killed.

McGee and Ziva talk to a neighbor, Mark Stafford, who says Nick was a nightmare. He saw Nick come home at 8:30 p.m. the night of the murder. He says Nick was high and drove his car on the sidewalk then dropped his fast food on his lawn.

He saw Nick go into the house and heard him start arguing with his dad about drugs and money.

Nick's car was gone when he came back at 10 p.m. Stafford's teenage daughter died last year of an overdose.

Gibbs rejoins Nick with a bag of fast food. Nick says he's vegan. They show him footage of him in the drive-thru, where the woman who helped him said he was high.

Nick says he saw Casablanca that night, but Tony busts him for not knowing a scene. They ask him how often he blacks out. Gibbs asks Nick if he can say for certain that he didn't kill his dad. Nick says no.

Vance pressures Gibbs to go hard at Nick. He gives him three hours to make Nick talk or he's going in himself.

Gibbs visits Duckie, who's reading Nick's Metro interview transcripts.

Duckie says the original cause of death was wrong. He fitted the skull bones back together and found a hole – not from an axe.

Duckie says Nick might have been framed.

In the lab, Abby shows Gibbs the contents of the colonel's tablet. He had an email account that only one other person knew about: Dr. Ellen Gracie, the rehab doc. There are steamy emails from her. She got a call from a gas station phone two blocks from the time scene 10 minutes after the murder.

Ziva and McGee revisit Gracie. She says Nick didn't know about her relationship with his dad. She says Nick called her that night and left a message. She plays it for them. He's crying and panicked, asking where she is. He says, "he's dead."

Vance goes in to talk to Nick carrying an axe. Gibbs reminds him he's bringing down a kid, not a tree.

In interrogation, Vance says his dad must have been ashamed of him. Nick says his dad loved him. Vance says his dad put him in rehab to get rid of him. Vance says Nick's dad thought he was a failure. Nick starts to cry and asks where Gibbs is. They play Nick's voice mail. He says he just left the house and there's blood everywhere. "Oh god, what have I done?" he says.

Vance continues to berate Nick as he cries. Vance says his dad blamed him for his mom leaving and for ruining his life and then he gave up on Nick.

Nick asks how Vance would know that. Gibbs is shocked watching when Vance then says that Nick's dad told him. He was a friend of Vance's.

Nick says his dad only cared about the Corps.

Vance puts a picture of the colonel on the table and whacks it with the axe. He asks Nick if that's what it felt like to kill his dad.

Nick says yes. He says he killed him and he's glad he's dead.

Vance talks to Gibbs, who says there's a problem: He doesn't believe him.

The team watches the confession but doesn't see what Gibbs does. Vance comes for an explanation. Up in Vance's office, Vance claims knowing the victim wasn't a conflict of interest. Gibbs says Nick didn't hate his father, he was scared of him. Before Vance went in with an axe, Nick couldn't even look at a picture of his dad.

"The first time he ever faced his father was in that room, and he did it because you did it for him," Gibbs says.

Gibbs says Vance swinging an axe at a scared kid could look like coercion to a jury. Vance is about to call the U.S. attorney but Gibbs says he's going to go have a talk.

Cut to Gibbs on a park bench with Nick, chowing down a hotdog. Gibbs reminds him about being a vegan. "You're either a bad liar, or a bad vegan," Gibbs says.

Nick says he doesn't remember enough to prove he didn't do it and they've showed him enough to prove he did. He remembers seeing his dad's body. Gibbs says that's because Nick was there but was high and ran.

Gibbs asks about his mom. He thinks she left because of him because he stole her pills. Nick says he went to rehab because his dad made him and his girlfriend was there and he missed her. She brought pills in and they'd sneak out and get high.

His girlfriend Megan died six months ago at the clinic of an overdose. She lived next door.

Gibbs interviews the neighbor, Mark Stafford, pointing out how Megan was at the top of her class before she started dating Nick.

Gibbs shows him pictures from his yard of stacks of chopped wood. He claims he doesn't know where his axe is.

He says he was yelling at Nick that night and his dad came out to defend him. He says Nick should have been in jail.

Stafford says his daughter is dead because the colonel was a lousy father.

"You made him pay for it," Gibbs says.

He asks for a lawyer. Then he says he saw Nick's mom at the house last night.

They find six calls to the house yesterday from a prepaid cell.

Cut to Nick meeting his mom in a café. She hugs him and says she missed him. She says she left because she didn't think she could be a good mom. He asks if she's back on her meds. She says no.

He asks when she came back. She says two weeks ago. She says she went by the house to see him, but found the colonel. She says they fought and she picked something up, but didn't think she hit him that hard. She got an axe from next door so they wouldn't think Nick did it.

He shows her the wire he's wearing. Gibbs comes in. Nick tells his mom he loves her and leaves.

At the office, the team packs up the case files. Gibbs gives Vance a meaningful look. Vance gets a call from EJ.

Production Code: 181
Summary: When a Navy Commander found murdered leaves behind a message written in blood, the NCIS team links it to a manuscript that may hold a threat to the national security.

A couple goes on a drive in the forest. The wife pulls over to take a picture of a deer. When they get out they see a body in the grass.

At the office, Tony goes through Gibbs' mail. He thinks he sees the same wedding invitation that was on his desk last week.

Tony asks Ziva about her boyfriend Ray, they ask McGee about his gamer babe and there are insinuations about Tony's shower time.

Gibbs comes to announce the body of the week: A dead Lt. Commander.

Gibbs sees the wedding invitation on his desk and immediately pitches it in the recycle bin.

The victim is Commander Casey with the Defense Intelligence Agency. He was shot around 11 p.m. Ziva finds a blood trail. It leads to writing in blood on a rock: "Birdsong."

Gibbs talks in MTAC with an admiral who says "birdsong" means nothing to him.

In the morgue, Duckie tells Gibbs that Casey was shot with disintegrating copper rounds.

Upstairs, the team tries to dig into Patrick Casey's life but a lot of it is classified. A waiter from the restaurant that Casey's car was outside says he was there with a woman, but it was platonic. They shook hands after.

McGee finds references to a manuscript on DIA servers called "Operation Birdsong" from Capital Crossroads Press, a publishing house run by Madeline DuMont.

Tony steps into the women's shower fully clothed – to read the wedding invitation sent to Gibbs. Ziva asks if Tony has seen Agent Barrett. Tony wonders why Ziva would ask in the shower (where he and Barrett supposedly hooked up).

McGee and Gibbs meet with Madeline DuMont. She tells them DIA confiscated her manuscript for "Operation Birdsong." She mentions they sent Admiral Hindley to get it. It's about corruption and weapons sales. She says the author is anonymous.

She points out that to force her to disclose the author they'd need to take the manuscript to court – and they don't have it.

They show her a photo of dead Casey. She says he was one of two people sent an advance copy at the author's request.

Ziva and Tony go visit the other person, Agent Elizabeth Archer. The front door to her house is open when they get there. She's dead inside.

Later, Agent Fornell of the FBI is on the scene. He explains Archer was an expert in foreign intelligence stings. She was strangled with the same rope that was used to bind Casey's hands. But there are no defensive wounds, which Duckie finds odd. Fornell says she was loaned out to the DIA for covert ops last year. She looks like the waiter's description of the woman who ate with Casey. Her husband Derrick is a paramedic.

Fornell asks Gibbs if he got an invitation to Diane's wedding. Tony goes bug-eyed then walks away. Gibbs says he got three. McGee finds ash in the fire.

Fornell points out to Gibbs that with Diane married there's no more alimony.

Later, they talk to Derrick Archer, who doesn't really know what she did. He remembers "Operation Birdsong" on his wife's bedside table the last few days.

At work, Fornell remembers Diane's wedding day. Gibbs scoffs and Fornell insists he must have a good memory of her. "She caught her finger in a car door once," Gibbs says.

They bring the charred book remains to Abby.

She ran the ammo through the weapon's database but found nothing – which means it's a prototype. The Flint was developed by Praeger on a DOD contract. The rest of the records were classified by the DIA.

Upstairs, McGee reports that DuMont feared for her life and just hopped a plane to Argentina. McGee calls her again for the author's name.

Gibbs and Fornell meet with First Lt. Sam Keeler, the author. Gibbs asks who he's hiding from. He says he's been staying with friends. They show him the victims' photos.

Keeler tells them he, Casey and Archer worked an anti-terrorism task force in Cypress. They took terrorists down by staging sales of black market weapons, a prototype the DOD rejected. The Flint. He says he still has an original on his computer hard drive in a storage locker.

Tony, Ziva and McGee go to the storage locker, arguing over whether Diane was wife two or three. They round the corner and see the admiral and two marines opening the locker. As they open the door, it explodes out at them.

Back at NCIS, Gibbs tells Keeler three DIA agents are in the hospital. Gibbs asks Keeler why he was discharged from the Marines early.

Keeler says the op was a waste of resources. 500 Flint rifles went missing. He was the fall guy. Casey later sent him field reports that said insurgents were using those weapons. The superior chalked it up to accidents happening.

In the lab, Abby and McGee work on the computer fragments. The manuscript backs up what Keeler said. They found a pattern Keeler didn't see. In the past year, almost all the weapon's trafficking has been picked up by a dealer named Jinn, who no one has ever seen.

Tony finds a manuscript fragment that mentions someone clearing their throat as pressure mounts.

Gibbs and Fornell go to see Admiral Hindley. He got a text sending him to the storage locker last night.

He says he can tell them where "she" is.

Cut to Alexis Ross, a college girl in interrogation. Fornell and Gibbs confront her with the name of the hitman she paid to bomb the admiral. They found names and routing numbers for terrorists on her computer. She's Jinn. She sighs and doesn't take Gibbs seriously. She says she's been studying for days.

Abby comes in and announces Ross was an arms dealer and did bomb the admiral but she didn't kill Archer and Casey – she only got the manuscript yesterday.

Back at NCIS, Gibbs tells Keeler he read his book and noticed the dedication page: "For E.A. with love and thanks for the happiest days of my life." He admits to his affair with Elizabeth Archer. He's wearing the necklace he gave her that she gave back.

Abby calls Gibbs down to report she found muscle relaxor in Archer's blood, which is why she couldn't fight back. It has so many side effects that it's only used in emergency medicine.

Fornell and Gibbs visit Derrick Archer, the paramedic. His partner admits Archer told him to take a few hours the night of his wife's murder. They point out he could have seen the dedication page in the book on her nightstand.

He says he confronted her, but she denied it. He followed her to her dinner with Casey and drew the wrong conclusion. They tell him he killed the wrong guy.

The night of Diane's rehearsal dinner the team waits to see if he'll go.

Cut to Gibbs woodworking in his basement. Fornell comes for him in a tux, then decides he doesn't want to go either. The new guy is with Homeland Security.

Gibbs announces pizza is on the way. The doorbell rings and Fornell goes to get it. Fornell announces he just gave away the bride. Gibbs tells him he has a beautiful daughter.

Summary: Much to Gibbs' displeasure, the NCIS team has to investigate a death of a seaman with a lead from Agent E.J. Barrett, leaving the rest of the team concerned that Gibbs may be leaving NCIS yet again. Meanwhile, Ziva introduces her new boyfriend to the team.

At a loud bar, a guy finishes chugging his beer and splashes all over a blonde. He tries to apologize, but makes it worse. A while later, security helps him out the door. He's walking down the street when he sees a talking baby doll in an alley. Just sitting there, saying "Play with me, please play with me."

He bends down to investigate when someone grabs him and slits his throat from behind.

Ziva comes in to work, talking to Ray on the phone, all glow-y. She's meeting Ray in New York next weekend and they're going to the opera. Tony asks why they haven't met him.

Gibbs announces the body of the week: a dead naval officer in Virginia.

The victim is wrapped in plastic in a field. His ankles are bound. Duckie cuts open the plastic wrap. The man is in a dress uniform. He's clean, with no defensive wounds. He's been dead about five days.

McGee runs his prints and finds he's seaman Derrick Balfour – but he's wearing an officer's uniform. There's a Metro card in his pocket from after he was killed. His eyes were positioned to look toward DC.

At the office they find he was scheduled to ship out for his second tour in Afghanistan in a few weeks. He has an old drunk and disorderly charge, but cleaned up. Ziva learns about his clubbing.

Ziva turns around to find her boyfriend Ray Cruz standing there. She introduces him and they learn he's CIA. Tony instantly doesn't like him.

In the morgue, Duckie tells Gibbs that Balfour died from his throat being slit. There's no trace evidence. His fingernails were manicured and cleaned. He had traces of cleanser on him. Duckie thinks it might be someone in law enforcement.

Vance drops in. Gibbs bristles at the meddling but plays it cool.

Upstairs, Tony and Ray chat in the men's room. Tony is proud of his "C-I-Ray" nickname for him. Ray announces he's in love with Ziva.

He says he wants Ziva's friends to be his friends. He mentions she has said Tony is like a brother to her. Tony doesn't seem thrilled with the characterization.

Ray gets a text. Back in the office, he tells Ziva he has to see an old associate.

They find charges on Balfour's card after he was killed. Someone is staying in Balfour's apartment.

Tony and Gibbs go to the apartment. The super opens the door. They find a neatly made up, empty apartment. There's an out of place chair upside down outside the fridge, which is completely empty. In the freezer, they find a flower in the ice cube tray.

E.J. Barrett strolls in, saying a killer has killed three dead navy men in nine months. She's been tracking him since Rota, Spain. The killer leaves things. She claims the case.

Back at the office, angry Gibbs barges in on Vance, asking why Vance didn't tell him. They're calling him the Port to Port Killer. The victims are always wrapped in plastic and cleaned. At the last body in Guam, he left a peanut at the scene.

Vance reiterates that EJ has the lead.

At work, Tony gives EJ grief for just showing up at the crime scene. He says she should have mentioned it last night when she was at his place wearing his Elvis Costello t-shirt. She suggests they end things since they're on the same case. He agrees. Then invites her over to dinner that night. She offers to bring wine.

The flower left in the freezer was rare. The weapon was surgical. The cleaner was iodine-based and only sold to hospitals.

Abby is having a hard time adjusting to Barrett, mostly because she hates change. Gibbs hugs her and assures her nothing will change.

Later that night, over a candle light dinner in the break room, Ziva rants about EJ, saying she doesn't trust her. Ray says he has something to tell Ziva, but they're interrupted when she gets a text message. He says it can wait.

Later, EJ briefs the team on the suspect profile from her side of the room. She suggests they come over. Tony starts to, but Gibbs says they're fine where they are. A line is drawn in the sand.

The suspect is wealthy and entitled. He's killed in Japan, Guam, Spain and now US. They think he's multi-lingual.

EJ thinks the killer isn't going anywhere. Gibbs asks if it's a hunch. She challenges him, saying she thinks the killer is smart and high-achieving. But Gibbs disagrees.

McGee finds an old email to Balfour from a rich kid med school drop-out named Bruce Leitner. He's been to all three of the countries where murders occurred recently. He has an apartment in Georgetown.

EJ talks to Leitner in interrogation – for about 15 seconds before Gibbs joins her and tells her she's in his chair.

She stands. Gibbs steps over her questions. Leitner admits he hated Balfour. Gibbs shows him the autopsy photo. He doesn't let Leitner answer EJ's questions. Leitner says Balfour made a move on his girlfriend.

EJ tries to ask him questions but Gibbs takes her out of the room.

In the hallway he lectures her on the right way to run an investigation. She wants to prove Leitner was in all four cities at the time of the murders, but he thinks they should tie him to Balfour's and go from there. Abby calls him.

EJ follows him to the lab. Leitner got a DUI a while back and had blood drawn. He had a rare virus that traced back to a Spanish fishing village, which proves he was in Spain at the time of the Rota murder. Barrett gloats.

In the elevator, Tony stops it to tell her not to tangle with Gibbs. She points out Gibbs isn't on Vance's good side at the moment.

Then she mentions the case might take a while to wrap up. She says she could get used to the office. She's cozying up to him when the doors open and Ziva and Ray see them.

EJ says hi to Ray. Ziva asks how they know each other. He's the CIA liaison on the Port to Port Killer case and has been the whole time. Ziva is pissed.

In the park, he says it was need to know info and he wasn't allowed to tell her. Ziva is really angry and doesn't believe he's being honest with her and is using her. He says he loves her, but she doesn't believe him.

Finally, he tells her Leitner isn't the guy –he's a mule for the Syrian government that they've been tracking for 16 months.

Ziva storms off.

At the office, she immediately tells Gibbs that Leitner isn't the guy. That's enough for Gibbs. He announces it but EJ is skeptical.

They look at the crime scene photos. The uniform Balfour is in has the wrong medals. Gibbs wants to look into airline hubs.

He orders EJ to stay put.

In MTAC they find Esprit airline goes to all the murder cities. Six employees have naval records and one was in the murder cities when the crimes took place – Nathan Finney, a retired F18 pilot. He has an address outside of Alexandria.

Gibbs, the team and EJ head to Finney's house. It's empty. But there's a bouquet of the rare flower on the back porch on top of a large freezer. There's a body inside.

It's Finney. In autopsy, Duckie finds he's been dead about six weeks.

Vance reads both EJ and Gibbs the riot act, demanding results.

Outside his office, Gibbs asks if she's sleeping with Tony. She says it's not against policy. He says it's against his policy. He doesn't trust her and tells her to leave his team alone.

Ziva drinks alone at a bar. Tony joins her. (It's a club soda.) She insists she's fine, but Tony insists on company.

Tony reminds her that Ray has a sworn duty to protect what he knows and Ray cares about her. She says he lied and it's over.

She asks Tony about EJ. He says he understands her.

The bartender brings Tony a drink, saying a guy in a booth ordered it for him. They look and no one's there. Tony looks in the glass and sees an eye ball frozen in an ice cube.

Production Code: 183
Summary: When a Pentagon security camera catches a petty officer committing a murder, the NCIS team has to track them down. Meanwhile, Gibbs reveals that Agent Barrett will be taking over the Port-to-Port murder case with her own team.

A custodian is coming in to work at the Pentagon. He's met by another worker at his office door – she had lost her wallet and he had found it in the copy room. He retrieves it for her, and they leave to grab some coffee, not noticing the body of a young woman in uniform with the nameplate "Ross," lying in a corner. (CREDITS)

In the office, Ziva, McGee and Tony are looking at a picture of the eyeball that was floating in Tony's gin and tonic. "A real eye-opener," Tony deadpans, "I thought I needed a drink before – I really needed one after." The eyeball is in Autopsy, being examined by Ducky. They see Gibbs entering the office, followed by Barrett, with a grim look on his face. Gibbs announces that Barrett's team is taking over the investigation for the Port-To-Port case. "Her 'team'?" inquires Ziva, having seen no one else on Barrett's team. Barrett tells them that Agents Cade and Levin are enroute, and she would appreciate "a warm welcome – they're top notch agents, maybe you could pick up a few pointers." That comment doesn't go over well with Gibb's team. McGee asks Gibbs what they should be doing. "Dead lieutenant. D-Ring. Pentagon. Let's go," Gibbs answers laconically, but as he leaves, he shoots Barrett a look of distaste, which she answers with a broad smile.

At the Pentagon, Jimmy is examining the body under Ducky's supervision – Ross has shattered C4 and C5 vertebra, suggesting that her neck was broken efficiently, possibly martial arts skills, between 2 and 3:00 the day before. Gibbs is interviewing Ross's boss, Captain Painter, who last saw her Friday as she was leaving for a doctor's appointment, and was going to come in over the weekend to work. They work in record-keeping, a joint DOD command center. McGee and Tony have been looking at video tapes, and found one at 2: 13 Sunday afternoon. As they watch, Ross meets Petty Officer Donner in the hall. The brief conversation seems to turn angry, and as she storms away, Donner strikes her neck from behind, catches her as she collapses, and then drags her body into the custodial office. He walks out briskly, right into the camera that catches his face and ID.

Back at the office, Ziva is sorting through files. As she passes Barrett's desk, she pauses to glance over the divider. Barrett looks up at her briskly: "Do you need something, David?" Ziva says no, and going to McGee's desk, tells McGee that she's not sure how she feels about "that" woman. Tony and Gibbs enter the office, and as they report on the whereabouts of Donner and his wife, Gibbs notices Ziva and Tony's gazes wander to Barrett. Tony wonders "What is she doing with that geek Steve from IT?" "I have no idea," says Ziva dismissively, and reports that Donner's wife is named Kelsey, a security guard at the Indian Head Naval Support Facility. Ross graduated from Annapolis, and shares an apartment with a roommate, who is waiting to be interviewed. McGee and Tony go to interview the roommate, Ziva follows Gibbs. Reluctantly, Ross' roommate tells them that the man Ross was seeing was married, but doesn't remember the name Eric Donner, and doesn't recognize a photo of him. Gibbs and Ziva interview Kelsey Donner, who doesn't know where her husband is, and is used to him being away unexpectedly.

In the office, Tony notices boxes and clothing on a desk, and realizes that some of Barrett's team has arrived. He tries on the unknown agent's NCIS baseball-style cap, but it is far too big for him. McGee warns him not to "mess with their stuff," but intrigued, Tony holds up the sizeable jacket. "Omigosh, this is gi-normous!" he exclaims. Tony is enjoying himself. "Do you think this guy is The Hulk, or what? I'm an enormous Big Dumbo!" he declares, but Barrett, walking up accompanied by a tall, broad-shouldered guy, overhears him and tells him, "The Big Dumbo has an IQ of 160." As the new guy takes back his jacket, he says in a deep voice, "You're DiNozzo, right? I was warned about you." Barrett tells Tony, "He doesn't like it when people wear his hat." The new agent glares at Tony.

In Autopsy, Ducky is on the phone. As Gibbs walks him, Ducky subtly lets him know that he is on the phone with Barrett – the eyeball was from a male who had had Lasix surgery, and Abby is working on the DNA. As he hangs up, Gibbs asks about Ross. Ducky hasn't started the autopsy, yet, but reports that Ross was eight to ten weeks pregnant.

On stake-out in front of Donner's house, Ziva asks Tony if Gibbs said anything to him about Agent Barrett, "you know – about dating?" "Nope," Tony answers after a short pause. Ziva considers her next question: "Are you sure he knows?" "He's Gibbs – he knows everything. He did read her the riot act, though," Tony adds. Ziva suggests that Tony talks to Gibbs about it. Tony asks a question of his own: "What about you and CIA Ray?" Ziva declares that it is over, and Tony asks if she has talked to him. "Well, he has left messages, and texted and emailed – but I have not read them." They are interrupted by the arrival of a car. A man in uniform gets out of the car – it is not Eric Donner, but he is greeted with a hug by Kelsey Donner and enters the house. Tony and Ziva race to identify him: He starts to send photos to "McAbby" for facial recognition, and she runs the license plate of the car. At the lab, Abby is nervously pacing back and forth in a pretty floral dress as the facial recognition software runs – she's late to be somewhere. They get a hit: Commander Nelson Tunney. Abby calls Tony with the name – but he has lost the race, since Ziva found out first. Tunney was Donner's former CO in the Special Warfare unit. As they hang up, the "gi-normous" agent appears casually in the lab doorway and asks Abby, "I thought you were going to meet me in the squad room?" "Oh, hi! Simon! Sorry, something came up!" says Abby brightly. "Are we still on for tonight?" Simon asks, "Yes, yes, yes! Just let me get my coat." She quickly ducks into her office as McGee, taking in the conversation, stares at Simon Cade incredulously. "Hey, McGee," Cade greets him.

At the Pentagon, Captain Painter asks if Donner has been found, and Gibbs says no, but that Donner and Ross probably had a sexual relationship – she was dating a married man and was pregnant. Painter is shocked, and pulls Gibbs aside, telling him that he, Painter, is the married man that Lauren was seeing, and the baby is probably his. In the office, Ziva and Tony are escorting Tunney to the conference room, and pass Cade and Barrett. Barrett takes a sniff at Tony. "I told you I didn't like your old cologne," she says with a grimace. "This one is way worse." "It's not me, it's the Commander," says Tony. "Oh," says Barrett. As she turns to walk away, she stops. "Hey, how long did you and Ziva work last night?" she asks him. Tony just looks at her, and then motions to the room, telling her that he has to get in there. She walks away. Tunney reports that he last saw Donner at a sports bar the previous week when he got back from Iraq. He says that Donner can't get back in the unit – he can't pass the physical. When Tony asks when he last saw Mrs. Donner, he realizes that they already know, and says that she was upset by NCIS's visit, called him, and he stopped by to console her.

Abby is watching the video tape of Donner and Ross's encounter carefully, trying to figure out what they are saying. McGee wanders in, and "casually" asks how the night before went with Special Agent Cade. "Oh, he is great!" enthuses Abby, telling him they went to an Indian restaurant "and he spoke Hindi with the waiter" and went to a club in Georgetown "and he had a conversation in Swahili with the cab driver!" "So, he's a linguist?" inquires McGee. "Yeah, he's very, very, very smart – and endearing – he's a jock, too – he played football in college." McGee isn't liking what he's hearing, but he asks where Cade played football. "Yale – he's all Ivy League," answers Abby, still studying the video. "Well," says McGee jealously, "I hope you didn't show him all your tattoos!" Abby turns to him. "You're jealous!" she smiles. McGee doesn't answer, but leans in to study the video, too, as Abby grins.

Tony, Ziva and Gibbs are perusing Donner's cell phone and email records – nothing since a text message the previous Saturday. As they review it, Cade greets another man who is dragging a suitcase into the office – Special Agent Gayne Levin. He hands Cade a flash drive that has some pictures of the murder of a British sailor with some similarities to the Port-to-Port killer, and Barrett introduces him to "the neighbors." Barrett tells Cade to "put it up on the big screen," and Tony mutters under his breath, "As if she had a big screen." To their astonishment, a jumbo TV rises from the divider on the other side of Barrett's team's area, and Barrett explains that "Steve in IT hooked me up!" "Cool, huh?" says Cade. Gibbs tells Tony and Ziva that the Virginia State Police have found Donner dead.

Ducky is puzzled – Donner is dead in a car that has run off the road and down an embankment, but there is no apparent trauma to the body. And, according to the lack of rigor mortis and other signs, the body has been dead for about 4 days. "That's not possible," objects Gibbs, "we have video of him killing Lt. Ross at the Pentagon two days ago." But Ducky is certain: "Jethro – this man could not have been there." In Autopsy, Ducky assures Gibbs that Donner has been dead at least four days from a heart attack. Gibbs asks if they sure the body is Donner's, but Jimmy tells him that the prints, dental records and the DNA all match, and he has burn scars consistent with a shipboard injury two years ago. In addition, Donner died elsewhere, and was put in the car. Barrett walks in and commiserates on his "messy" case, but Gibbs turns and leaves. Barrett tells Ducky she wants a crash course on the eye. Ducky refers her to Jimmy, whose father was a research ophthalmologist.

Ziva talks to Kelsey Donner, who is upset to be told that first her husband was a murderer, and that now it looks like he died two days beforehand. When Gibbs joins them, she insists that there's been a mistake, because she received text messages from Donner Friday and Saturday. She doesn't know why he was in Fairfax County – but Gibbs suggests that whoever moved his body probably sent her the text messages. She asks if it's possible he rejoined his old unit, but Gibbs says that Tunney has said no. Kelsey mentions that Tunney risked his life to pull Donner from a fire, and they stayed in contact.

McGee is comparing the photo from Autopsy to the photo in the video – either the facial recognition software is wrong, at 95% accuracy, or Ducky is. Gibbs joins them, and McGee explains that they have retraced all of Donner's footsteps through surveillance tapes, up until he enters a restricted area without cameras just before his confrontation with Ross. Tony's attention wanders to Barrett as McGee says that Tony has a call in to Captain Painter. Gibbs asks Tony what Painter said, but Tony's attention is elsewhere until Ziva smacks him and hisses at him. He turns – and is caught short. Gibbs walks away as the team grimaces at the lapse, and Tony braces for the headslap that never comes.

At the Pentagon, Painter explains that the room contains high level documents from the joint DOD command – no photography or cameras are allowed on documents so sensitive, they are not on electronic databases. McGee wonders if they can determine what file Donner accessed – Painter smiles ironically and leads them into the huge file room, showing them "70 years and 70,000 files to go through," to McGee and Ziva's dismay.

Gibbs is in his basement carving on a woodworking project. Tony clatters down the steps and Gibbs glances up, but doesn't respond to Tony's casual "hey." Tony grabs two jelly glasses and the bourbon, and putting the glasses on the worktable, he asks Gibbs what he's working on. "Wood," Gibbs replies. Tony realizes that Gibbs isn't going to make this easy for him. He grabs a chair as Gibbs inquires, "What's the occasion?" "I thought we could talk," says Tony. "So – talk," says Gibbs shortly. He tells Gibbs that he looks up to him and he's been a great teacher for the last ten years. "You have a point, DiNozzo?" asks Gibbs, never raising his eyes from his carving. Talking a deep swig of bourbon, he tells Gibbs, "I always thought the head slaps were a sign of affection. Today, in the squad room, I was expecting one – and I didn't get it." Gibbs doesn't respond. "Are you pissed at me?" Tony asks. "Rule Number 12," mutters Gibbs. "Never date a co-worker," finishes Tony. He sighs, and then laughs. "I know. But she's pretty great, though. EJ and I have a lot in common. She's easy to be with, y'know? It's nice to have somebody to talk to." No answer from Gibbs. Tony's hands are clasped nervously in front of him as he reminds Gibbs that NCIS doesn't have a policy against dating co-workers, and technically, since they aren't on the same team . . . Gibbs finally looks up and looks Tony in the eye: "My team. My rules." The phone rings, but Gibbs glances at it and tosses it away. "Sleeping with Barrett is a bad idea," he tells Tony. Tony is uncowed: "No offense, but my personal life is my business." Gibbs tells him that it's going to affect his work, and when Tony denies it, he points out that it already has. "I know what you're thinking – that I've lost focus, taken my eye off the ball," Tony starts to say, but Gibbs stops him with four words: "I depend on you." Tony doesn't have an answer, but his phone rings, too – it's Abby. "It must be important," he tells Gibbs, handing him the phone.

Gibbs comes into the Abby's office and demands that she turns the music down. Abby is holding a vial of white powder that she is analyzing for Ducky, but puts it down to show Gibbs what Lt. Ross was saying before she was killed. "How do you know?" asks Gibbs. "Because I read lips – did you forget?" she tells him. She walks him through Ross and Donner's casual greeting, pointing out that Donner is uneasy. After enhancing the video, Abby discovers that Donner says, "Where are you going?" "To call Security – you're not Eric, who are you?" Ross knew that the man wasn't Petty Officer Donner.

In the break room the next morning, Tony is microwaving a pastry. Ziva joins him and asks if he and Gibbs talked. "Tried to – it didn't go well," admits Tony. "What did he say?" "He gave me a scolding – it was like talking to my father – he tells me not to do something, and it makes me want to do it more." Ziva asks how they left it, and Tony admits that he doesn't know. "Gibbs and I have hit a rough patch," he admits, but his glance follows Barrett as she walks across the break room, throwing a smile in his direction. "Well, you're going to have to make some choices," Ziva tells him as she sees the directly of his gaze. "Glad I'm not you." Barrett joins Tony and asks if he was on a stake out again the night before. "No," answers Tony shortly. "Two nights in a row I don't hear from you," she muses, and he explains that there was something he had to do, and that they are going to have to cool it around the office. "You mean around Gibbs," she correct him. "He intimidates you," she tells Tony. "Let's just say – he presents a challenge. He sees what he shouldn't see, and hears what he shouldn't hear. He's like Alex Baldwin in 'The Shadow' – and 'The Shadow' always knows." Barrett shrugs. "You're scared of him." "Yep." "I'm not." "You should be."

Ducky and Abby have been up all night, but have a theory based on residue found in Donner's ear: Someone made a life-cast of Donner's face, but Ross was tipped off by his voice.

In the office, the team discusses how special ops might have someone who knows how to make masks like that, and Cade asks if they are investigating Tunney. He remembers seeing Tunney's picture in a file where Tunney and his unit was under investigation for the murder of a local tribal leader killed in Afghanistan. Tunney denied he was in the area. "You remembered the face?" Tony asks incredulously. Levin tells them that Cade has a photographic memory. "Of course he does," sighs Tony. Gibbs thanks Tunney, sends Tony and McGee off to investigate who in Naval Special Warfare makes masks, and he and Ziva go to find Tunney.

McGee asks Tony if Abby said anything about Cade. "She seems fascinated by him," he tells Tony, but Tony is dismissive, suggesting that McGee's nose is out of joint because he's no longer "the smartest kid in the class." Tony agrees that it was easier before they came, and when McGee asks why, Tony casually admits that Gibbs is giving him grief for sleeping with Barrett. "You're sleeping with Special Agent Barrett?" McGee demands. "Catch up, Tim – the whole Navy Yard knows about it," says Tony.

They meet with Miles Hogan, who is surprised they got clearance to visit his office so quickly. They enter his lab, and see an entire workshop devoted to mask creation. They admire his work, and show him a picture of Donner, suggesting that it may be a mask. Hogan laughs, and asks if it's a joke, and then shows them the mold he made the mask from – "I worked 36 hours straight on it last weekend – thank God for CaffPow!" He admits that Donner was dead when he made the mask, and when Tony asks him if he doesn't think that's strange, Hogan tells him that "a lot of what I do around here is strange." He tells them that Tunney commanded the mask to be made, he made the cast on Donner's face at Tunney's apartment, and gave Tunney the mask on Sunday morning.

As they get on the elevator, an older man gets off. The elevator door closes, and Tony takes a sniff – it's the cologne that Tunney was wearing when they interviewed him. They realize that Tunney was wearing another mask and was escaping. Gibbs drives up and the team splits up to search for him. As Ziva peers around a corner, Tunney comes up behind her and tries to put the same move on her that he did on Ross. But Ziva is far better at defense, and reaches up to grab the mask. They struggle, and the rest of the team rush to her, Gibbs drawing a gun, pointing it at Tunney, and daring him: "Give me an excuse."

The team finds the report Tunney was interested in – he has switched out the op report on the murder of the tribal leader with a report of his own that puts him 100 miles away from the murder. Donner had agreed to do it, but he died before he could do it, so Tunney had the mask made so that he could switch the incriminating report himself.

Barrett has a theory on the eyeball, and Jimmy brings it up to the office. As they are watched intently by the entire team, Jimmy grasps the eyeball in a pair of forceps and holds the blue-eyed eyeball up to the retinal scanner by MTAC's door. To everyone's shock, the door opens . . .

Summary: When Tony's former partner Danny Price is found murdered and linked to the Port-to-Port serial killer, Tony flashes back to his days as a detective in Baltimore and recounts his first meeting with Gibbs.

A man microwaves himself dinner but is jumpy when he hears a dog bark outside. He reaches for his gun and checks out the window. Reassured, he sits down to his TV dinner and a beer. He takes a swig but is immediately concerned. He sniffs the beer then tries to stand. He wobbles. He reaches for his gun and tries to crawl but collapses.

Someone comes in and stands over him. With gloves on, they pour more beer down the mans throat until he stops breathing. Death by brewski.

Tony comes in to work super agitated about having lost his cell phone. He tears through his desk, but comes up empty.

Gibbs arrives with a report from McGee written in tech speak about the eyeball from the Port to Port Killer opening MTAC. They still dont know who it belonged to. Tony offers that Barrett and her team left for Hawaii last night following a new lead.

Gibbs lend Tony his phone, so Tony takes the call about the body of the week.

They arrive to find the victim shrouded in plastic wrap. Gibbs tells them not to call Barrett. The victim is in a three star admirals uniform. They unwrap his body first and find a fortune cookie. They cut open the plastic to his head. Duckie estimates he died about 12 hours ago, right around when Barrett left town. They remove the plastic and Tony freezes. Its his old partner.

Later Duckie talks to the victim Danny Price in the morgue. The body was cleaned and given a manicure like the others and killed with the same knife. He was also sedated. Tony volunteers they worked homicide in Baltimore together. He was a reservist. Duckie offers that he had cirrhosis, indicative of a drinking problem. Tony says he was asked to retire after Tony left for NCIS. He has a tattoo of a scorpion on his forearm.

Flashback to Baltimore 2001, Danny showing off his fresh tattoo. Tony makes a movie reference and laughs around with the hookers. The major announces Tony is the winner of the stationhouse pool championship. He wins a Mighty Mouse stapler. They work on the Franklin murder. Their suspect is Joey Peanuts.

Gibbs visits Abby in the lab. She tells him what the fortune in the cookie said: Keep your friends close but your enemies closer. She traced it back to Dau Huang Fortune Cookie Company and can tell it was put in at the factory, which means the killer had access.

They wonder what the fortune means. Gibbs knew Danny, too.

Danny and Tony stakeout Joey Peanuts. They're eating Chinese. Danny gives him a fortune about love, telling him he was brave to ask out his high school music teacher. He lectures Tony on dressing like a slob, but Tony doesn't care because he plans to be married before he has to dress nice. They see Joey with another guy and get out to approach him. Both men take off running. Tony follows the other guy and tackles him. The guy punches him but Tony sits on him and draws his gun, telling him to freeze. It's Gibbs.

Ziva and McGee go to the fortune cookie company. Dao Huang is a Russian guy, who points out China is next to Russia and his parents emigrated there. He sees his company's logo on the cookie, but says it isn't one of his sayings. It's a forgery. He says it could have been made from one of the trays taken in the robbery a few weeks ago, along with the safe.

Back in Baltimore, Tony confirms Gibbs is NCIS. Gibbs claims he was undercover and let Tony catch him. Gibbs got a tip someone was using a Navy payroll office to launder money. Tony ruined the sting, but he points out Gibbs was supposed to notify Baltimore PD what he was doing. Tony realizes Gibbs wanted to get busted to gain street cred. I don't like being played but, well played, Tony tells him.

Ziva recaps the robbery at the bakery, which was five weeks ago. There was no evidence left behind. There was a report a junkie did it.

Gibbs asks Tony if he's OK. This has nothing to do with that, ancient history, Tony says cryptically. He says he is concerned that Abby is right that the killer is targeting their friends. We protect them by catching the killer, same as you did before, Gibbs tells him.

Danny and Tony interview Joey Peanuts, who claims he doesn't know the victim. His prints were at the scene. Finally Joey admits he was in his car a week ago picking up a duffel bag with $50,000 of dirty money. He claims he's just a courier, his boss does the laundering. Joey says the victim was mad about the size of the vig and threatened to kill his boss if he didn't get a refund. They think his boss killed Franklin first.

Ziva proclaims the junkie a dead end. Duckie comes up to say there was a minor error in one of his reports five weeks ago. Palmer transcribed the knot type as a constrictor instead of a double constrictor. This matters because Danny was tied with the single constrictor. We have a copy cat, Jethro, and one who has access to our internal records, Duckie says.

McGee is running a check to see how they were hacked. Gibbs tells the team to re-run everything, maybe this killer isn't as careful.

Tony comes in and announces he found his phone. He lets slip that he left it at EJs. But there was a message from Danny from two days ago. He says he's been thinking about things and isn't the only one who saw what he wanted to. He says they need to talk.

Cut to Tony and Danny watching Joey Peanuts wait to hand off cash to his boss.

Danny asks about the engagement ring he found in Tony's jacket. Tony confesses he asked Wendy to marry him and she said yes; he's taking the ring to get resized. They see Joey's boss arrive, he looks like a military man. Tony wonders why anyone would want to be a navy cop.

Ziva is analyzing tax receipts to find people who bought three or more of the items the Port to Port killer did. Gibbs scans the faces and picks out Peter Sears, who he saw at the crime scene. They find him in the photos. He's a computer tech. Gibbs cites Rule 35: Always watch the watchers.

Back at the department, Tony and Danny play Joey's tape for the Major, in which the suspect says he took care of their problem permanently. They didn't pick him up because Gibbs wanted to trail him.

Gibbs calls, the suspect is Lt. Ian Floyd, he works in the payroll office. He tells them the weapon was a P 99, he had the evidence transferred. Gibbs dodges a call from a wife, but answers the one from the divorce lawyer. Tony is impressed at the speed of the ballistics report. NCIS Agent Chris Pacci gives Gibbs the personnel file he requested on Di Nozzo. He says his ulcer is acting up and jokes that it's going to be the death of him.

The team busts in on Peter Sears, who is psyched to be getting arrested. There's a body wrapped in plastic on his floor. It's a mannequin.

Back at NCIS, Tony lays out all the Port to Port paraphernalia Sears had. Sears freaks out. Im the worst loser on the entire planet. I havent even started yet and I got arrested, he moans. He says he hasnt done anything yet.

They check his alibi, hes a part time birthday clown and was working when Danny was killed.

McGee reports two guys were just arrested in Ohio and claim they have info on the fortune cookie bakery robbery. And he found EJ issued an update to local LEOs that included the constrictor knot info. He stole the report while doing tech work at a police station. The copycat is someone who had access to that report.

Tony chases Lt. Flynn down an alley and almost catches up when Flynn draws a gun. After some banter, Danny pops out with a gun and disarms Flynn. So thats how its gonna be? Flynn says.

Tony pays a visit to Dannys place. Theres a picture of Danny, Tony and the major. McGee calls Tony, who says hes following a hunch.

McGee reports they caught the bakery robbery, but he was in Dayton when Danny was killed, so hes not the copycat. Tony plays the voicemail from Danny again, in which he says hes been thinking about things, old friends, TV dinners.

Flash back to Tony paying a visit to Danny as he sits down to a TV dinner. Tony says hes spent the last two days trying to pretend to didnt see betrayal in Flynns eyes when Danny arrested him. Tony pulled Dannys phone records and found tons of calls to Flynn over the last two months.

Tony accuses him of being a dirty cop. Danny admits he was sending potential clients to Floyd, and if they laundered money he got a kick-back. He claims he had no idea Floyd was involved in their murder. He asks what Tonys going to do, then gets up and throws away his TV dinner.

Im going to take a walk, I guess if youre still here when I get back Ill have my answer, Danny says as he leaves out the back.

Tony whirls around to the open front door behind him. Gibbs walks in. He had a hunch.

Back in the present, Tony hears Danny say in his message that there are things I messed up, things right in front of my face I should have seen. But Im not the only one who saw what he wanted to. We need to talk, better late than never.

Again, Tony whirls around to find Gibbs in the front door. Tony says he always wondered why Floyd didnt turn Danny in. Theres only one reason to be afraid of sending a dirty cop to jail, Gibbs says. (if) theres another one you cant, Tony concludes.

There was a silent partner Danny didnt know about, but learned about recently. He thinks Danny was looking for redemption.

Tony pays a visit to his old department to a round of applause. The Major greets Tony warmly, but he starts out telling him he got the fortune cookie trays from the evidence locker. Tony says Danny figured out Floyd wasnt the killer and as going to turn him in. The Major knew Tony wouldnt drop it so he tried to distract him with the Port to Port killer.

Back at NCIS, Duckie and Abby tell Gibbs that she didnt send Duckie the email about the typo in the report, but someone wanted them to know there was a copycat. They think the email was from the real killer.

As the team goes off to check it out, Tony remembers visiting NCIS with greased hair, shades and a leather jacket in jeans.

Gibbs shows Tony around and he explains hes leaving Danny alone, but also cant go back to Baltimore. He says hes not sure he wants to be a cop anymore and earns a Gibbs head slap. Gibbs cites Rule No. 5 is: You dont waste good, and tells Tony hes good.

Gibbs takes him to Human Resources: Agent Application Division. Tony walks in to see a smokin hot babe at the desk. So much for his fiancée.

Summary: The NCIS team has to chase every possible lead when the latest victim of the Port-to-Port killer turns out to be someone with personal ties to the team.

It's evening, and the rain is streaming down on blood-spattered Gibbs as he stands in the street, watching in disbelief as Jimmy and Ducky secure a body bag. It's quiet – people are upset, but doing their job. Tony trots up to Gibbs, clutching an umbrella and, with a concerned look on his face, reports finding five shell casings, and that any blood trail has been washed away by the rain. In a daze, Gibbs glances at Tony long enough to acknowledge the report, but Tony is called away by McGee. Vance is observing the proceedings from inside a car. Ducky and Jimmy carefully load the body bag into the back of the truck, and Gibbs comes closer to the back of the van. A voice behind Gibbs grabs his attention: "Better catch me up, Probie, I'm lost." Gibbs turns and stares at Mike Franks. Still stunned, Gibbs replies, "So am I," and then turns to close the door of the truck. (CREDITS)

In Autopsy, Gibbs stands over the dripping wet body bag, shaking his head. "I don't understand," he whispers. "It makes no sense." Mike walks to the other side of the table and says, "Tell me. Start from the beginning." A few quick flashes flip through Gibb's mind – Mike walking up his basement steps, Vance's grim face. He then begins the narrative: "Yesterday was beautiful . . ."

Flashback to yesterday: Tony enters the office carrying an umbrella, to general derision – it is a lovely sunny day, with no rain in sight. Tony is working from information from an app on his phone, and is suddenly suspicious that McGee may have played with the settings. "But that would be too clever," Tony dismisses the idea, and McGee smiles and goes back to reading his Amazing Spiderman comic book. Ziva walks over and, turning Tony's head to look at the window, asks him if he is going to believe what he reads – or the evidence that is right in front of him. Gibbs strolls in, and the team perks up – the comic book is stashed, Ziva returns to her desk, and Tony makes the pronouncement that it will rain later. "No, it's not," disagrees Gibbs, glancing out the window. Mike is sitting next to Gibbs' desk. "Ain't this usually where you tell them where the body is and off you go?" Sure enough, McGee inquires, "No case?" and Gibbs tells them, casually, that there is a case – it's just not theirs. On the other side of the divider, Barrett's team swings into action. Mike, looking over the divider, comments: "Damn – where did they come from?" The team overhears Barrett filling her team in on the details – a body in Virginia, dead several weeks, identified as an NCIS agent. Hearing that, the team looks at each other incredulously. Mike asks Gibbs, "You aren't just going to let that go, are you?" and Gibbs, after staring thoughtfully out into space for a moment, suddenly grabs his gun out of his desk and snaps, "What are you waiting for? It's an NCIS Special Agent." Relieved, the team leaps up and grabs their gear.

The local police fill Barrett in on the details – white male, mid thirties, no ID, throat cleanly cut. Cade reports that a fingerprint scan confirms that it is NCIS Special Agent Earl Stark, on annual leave from Norfolk. Barrett is thinking it over – no plastic wrap, no ties, no souvenir – and then turns, startled, when Gibbs' team appears at the scene. Gibbs remains in the car as McGee and Ziva begin to canvas the area under Barrett's instructions. Barrett and Tony begin to walk away to examine the body. Mike asks Gibbs, "Who's the new chickie?" and Gibbs tells him that it's "Vance's new golden girl." "Her and DiNozzo making sheet music?" Mike inquires with a leer, and to Gibbs' nod, Mike grins. "Puh-leeze – he's taking a page from your song book!" At Gibbs' chuckle, Mike continues, "Like you'd pass up a duet with a lady like that, who outranks him, to boot!" Gibbs tells Mike that Barrett outranks him, too – she has the lead on the hunt for a serial killer. Mike frowns. "This body his?"

Barrett has the same question. She tells Tony that the Port-to-Port killer's M.O. has been evolving, and describes the near-miss in Hawaii that has been attributed to the P2P killer. The victim was a Sgt. Jericho, who had been recently transferred from Norfolk to Pearl Harbor – the attempt on his life cut him up a bit, but he survived, because of the intervention of someone else who ended up losing his own eyeball. "Did you tell the Good Samaritan that we are holding on to his eyeball for him?" inquires Tony, but Barrett admits that he was gone by the time they got to the hospital to interview Jericho. "A failure for the P2P – first sign that the guy is human," quips Tony optimistically, but Barrett, gazing down at Stark's mutilated body, sighs and says, "He's not human, Tony." They examine the body, and note the knife slash at the neck, and Barrett declares that the Port-to-Port killer is back in town – and targeting NCIS.

Back in the present: Gibbs is still standing by the body bag in Autopsy. Ducky is at his desk, quietly shuffling papers, and Gibbs asks him what is on his mind – "you're awfully quiet over there, Duck." Ducky tells him that he is thinking about a mute swan, and goes on to tell Gibbs that the Cygnas olor legend is that the swan is silent up until its death, when it sings one last, beautiful song. "When does the swan know when he is about to die?" asks Gibbs. "Some animals just know," shrugs Ducky, "when the end is near." Mike walks up beside Gibbs. "True," he says, and tells a story about an old stray dog that hung around his place in Mexico until one day, the dog walks out on the beach, dug a hole, curled up in it, and died. Gibbs looks up at Ducky: "I thought you and Palmer were going to get to work?" he asks him, but Ducky tells him there's no hurry – they can wait. Ducky leaves Gibbs standing by the body bag, and Mike reminds Gibbs that they are all animals.

Flashback to the previous day: Gibbs enters Vance's office and stands before his desk. Vance hangs up the phone, and tells Gibbs that Barrett's team is trying to sort out a discrepancy in security logs – Stark has been dead about 20 days, but security logs show him going in and out of their building several times. "This building?" confirms Gibbs, slightly incredulous. Vance goes on to tell him that he wants Gibbs to support Barrett on the case, to which Gibbs agrees in his best "team player" mode. Vance gives him the file on the Pearl Harbor incident and asks Gibbs to follow up. In the office, Barrett's team is reviewing the victims, and one of them suggests that the P2P killer was the one who was actually accessing the building. Cade gets to work pulling up security camera footage corresponding with Stark's post-mortem access times. Gibbs' team is sitting quietly, reviewing files and documents from the Pearl Harbor episode. Mike, watching them, comments in disgust, "They're reading?" Gibbs admits that waiting for them to finish reading the report is excruciating, and Mike snaps, "Skip this part!" Suddenly, the team is speed-reading through the documents and then gathers to report their findings. Jericho was attacked from behind when he stopped to examine a toy bear playing a drum. He had knife wounds on his hands and neck, but before he lost consciousness, he saw a bald man come into view. Screams brought passersby, and the bald man was treated at the hospital for the loss of an eyeball. However, the name the hospital had, Gavin O'Ryan, doesn't appear in any databank that they can find. McGee goes off to get Abby's help in pinpointing Gavin O'Ryan, Tony begins some "old fashioned" detective work, and Ziva announces that she is going to follow Barrett to try to overhear details of her investigation. They scurry off, and Gibbs, smiling, says as an aside to Mike, "If only, eh?" Smiling, he begins to leave, and Mike asks him what the most interesting part was. "The teddy bear – that was new," answers Gibbs. Gibbs retrieves the evidence box from Balfour's murder and is flipping through it when he is rejoined by the team – there is no trace of a Gavin O'Ryan, which suggests multiple passports. The bald man had a slight British accent . . . and it's beginning to sound like someone they know. After a few phone calls, Tony discovers that their suspect is in town, and he and Gibbs go to confront him. At a hot dog stand, Tony walks up behind a bald man and inquires dryly, "Gavin? Gavin O'Ryan?" Trent Kort turns around – with a surgical eye patch on his left eye

Kort tells them that the CIA has been keeping an eye on the investigation, possibly through Ziva's boyfriend, Ray Cruz, because the killer's name is Lt. Jonas Cobb. (As an aside, he tells Tony that his eyeball opened MTAC because he got angry at Tony one time for slamming the door in his face, and he wanted to make the point that the CIA could go anywhere they wanted.) Kort asks Gibbs why Barrett is leading the investigation, and Gibbs prevaricates, pronouncing Barrett to be a "qualified" agent. Kort is not fooled – he points out that Barrett doesn't have a history of questioning authority, either, and then, in an apparent swift change of subject, asks Gibbs if he ever read the Vance file that Kort gave him a while back. Gibbs doesn't answer. At that point, Gibbs pulls out his cell phone and calls Mike Franks in Mexico – and we realize that the Mike we have been seeing trading quips with Gibbs up to now has only been in Gibbs' mind. Gibbs asks Franks how quickly he can get to D.C. – "there's something that I need you to bring."

In the present, Gibbs is still standing uncertainly by the table holding the body bag.

Yesterday: As Gibbs enters the office, Barrett reports excitedly that Stark's murder had been captured on a witness's cell phone. As they watch the video, Stark stoops down to examine a teddy bear playing a drum, and is attacked from behind, with a faint glimpse of a profile. The same man appears on NCIS security cameras, accessing the building as Stark. Cade is going to take the pics down to Abby for possible identification, and Gibbs' team is unnerved out by the idea of the P2P killer walking around their office. Gibbs remembers a day when his eyeglasses went missing, and realizes that the P2P killer has been studying them. "Know thy enemy," he quotes. "Mike" asks him, "Did you ever think about keeping your mouth shut?" and Gibbs smiles as he gets Barrett's attention – he knows the identity of the P2P killer. Barrett and Gibbs visit Vance to discuss the CIA's involvement, and when Vance comments that he wouldn't be inclined to take anything Trent Kort says at face value, Gibbs laughs quietly, and points out that Kort's missing eyeball is confirmation. Vance dryly inquires if they should stuff the eyeball back in and see if it fits, like Cinderella's glass slipper, and Gibbs grins and volunteers. Vance explains to Barrett that he and Gibbs have "a bit of history with this particular operative," and Barrett, misunderstanding, thinks that it will be easier to work with Kort. Vance and Gibbs laugh again – "Nothing is ever easy with Trent Kort," says Vance. Tony interrupts the meeting to report that the CIA is uncooperative with regards to Jonas Cobb, claiming that the matter is classified.

Present day: Gibbs is still standing beside the body bag, with echoes of a conversation going through his head: Mike telling him that he's on the plane, and didn't bother to pack, only checked the box and his piece.

Flashback to early that morning: Gibbs is getting ready to leave for work. "Mike" is seated on the sofa, with his arms crossed, and inquires if Gibbs is planning to shave "that ugly mug" or if he is just measuring the weight of his conscience. A knock on the door reveals Mike Franks, holding a banker's box. Coughing, Mike demands a drink, but Gibbs protests that it's 6 o'clock in the morning. "So, throw a Cheerio in it," gripes Mike, but Gibbs tells him that he's on his way into the office, and Mike can go with him. The banker's box is placed on a side table, and before they leave, Mike tells Gibbs that he is leaving Decker's insurance policy with Gibbs when he goes. "That box of goodies has kept me in Vance's good standing for almost three years," he continues with a grin, "I hope it does the same for you." "I hope I don't need it," declares Gibbs as they walk out the door.

In the present: Gibbs slumps against the table holding the body bag, shaking his head. "You already know what comes next, Mike," he whispers, but Mike's gravelly voice urges him to "think it through again – that's why you're staring at a body bag looking for answers."

Earlier that morning, as Gibbs and Mike walk into the office, Mike is greeting enthusiastically by Abby, who gives him a quick run-down of the search for the P2P killer. Glancing around at Barrett's team, he mutters, "Who are these people?" and Abby brightly answers, "Oh! These are the new guys! Gibbs didn't tell you?" He and Gibbs exchange a look, and Mike shrugs it off. "A man of few words," he tells Abby and he continues into the office. Ziva blows Mike a kiss in greeting, and Tony shakes his head, commenting that Mike's missing finger makes for a weird handshake. McGee and Tony report that they can't track the witness's emails but they think it's a woman – she's afraid that the P2P killer will target her, next. Barrett is in MTAC with Kort and Vance – Gibbs and Mike go to join them. Vance is very welcoming, introducing Mike to Barrett and Kort as an "NCIS legend." Kort objects to Mike's presence, but Vance tells him that having Kort uncomfortable is a good enough reason to keep Mike there. "I'll take this to my grave!" winks Mike to Kort. Kort goes on to describe a program called "Operation Frankenstein", a program to recruit and develop CIA assassins within the existing military structure. Cobb was a standout in the program, and "graduated" when he killed an Al-Qaeda operative. The mission was a success, but the murder affected Cobb adversely – he didn't rejoin his unit, became difficult to manage, and suddenly bodies began popping up. Meanwhile McGee has located the originating address of the emails to Stark, and Barrett and her team go to pick up the witness. Gibbs gives the team a copy of the "Operation Frankenstein" report, and asks them to have Ducky do a psych profile.

In Gibbs's basement that evening, Gibbs and Mike are reviewing NCIS covert operation files, and Mike mutters that it's probably not a good idea to light up down there, between the fumes of bourbon and the sawdust. Mike observes that Gibbs trusted Vance. "Still do," affirms Gibbs, but Mike goes on to observe that "things haven't been right between you," and Gibbs admits that lately, he's right. Mike doesn't think it's anything that Gibbs has done, but Vance pushing Gibbs away, and bringing in Barrett – even Vance and Kort seem to have something cooking. "Tough to miss," agrees Gibbs. Mike, rising, motions to the files and comments, "Well, I hope these old ghosts tell you what you need to hear." Gibbs wryly admits that they do – and he sees them, too. Mike tells Gibbs that they make their own ghosts – not only by killing people, but with the memories they make. "We fill the spaces we live in with them, that's why I've always tried to make sure that wherever I live, the longer I live there, the spaces get filled with memories – of nekkid women!" Gibbs and Mike laugh, and Mike offers a toast: "To more good memories!" Coughing, Mike finishes his drink, and heads upstairs.

In the present: Gibbs slowly unzips the body bag . . .

Earlier in the evening, Mike steps outside and lights up a cigarette. His attention is fixed by a movement across the street, and as the rain begins to fall, he ventures out into the street, watching carefully. "Ain't you smart enough to get out of the rain?" he shouts a challenge, "Me, neither. My name is Mike Franks, and I figure I've got one more good fight left in me. Ya want it?" and out of the darkness, Jonas Cobb rushes at him. They struggle; Mike gets off a few shots, but is stabbed by Cobb, who quickly limps away. Hearing the gunshot amid the thunder, Gibbs flies outside, frantically gathering Mike in his arms, and, realizing that he is dead, sighs, "Aw, Mike . . ."

And as Gibbs unzips body bag, we see Mike Franks' still body.

Jimmy and Ducky begin the autopsy, and as Jimmy takes photos, Gibbs walks up. "We can call you, after we finish the autopsy," offers Jimmy hesitantly, but Ducky is gruff: "Leave him be, Mr. Palmer." Tony and Ziva enter autopsy and confirm that the prints on the scalpel left in Mike's chest belong to Jonas Cobb, but there's no trace of him or Mike's gun in a twenty square-block area. Ziva reports five shell casings, and Gibbs confirms that he heard five shots. Glancing at the autopsy table, Ziva begins to stumble through her report and grows silent, with a stricken look on her face. Tony manfully plows through the report – they found a blood- stained slug in a nearby parked car, so the assumption is that Cobb is injured. Gibbs smiles slightly and turns to look at Franks. "Mike's swan song," he says softly, and Ziva excuses herself. Gibbs motions to Tony to follow her, and then, turning to Ducky, says, "It's a myth, isn't it?" and Ducky agrees that the myth of the mute swan isn't true. "Perfect," sighs Gibbs, finally turning away and leaving.

In the elevator, Ziva is wiping away tears. "There is always another monster," she says softly. Tony agrees, and Ziva goes on: "We still pursue them, but we just keep making targets of ourselves." Tony gazes at her, and points out, "Better us than someone who didn't sign up for it." Ziva looks up at Tony with tear-filled eyes. "I don't think I can take anymore," she says quietly, and then, leaning into Tony's shoulder, begins to cry. The elevator opens, and McGee and Abby are standing in the hall, Abby crying in McGee's arms. They stare at each other for a moment, and holding his arm open, Tony says quietly, "Bring it in." The four of them stand close together, with their arms around each other, heads bowed.

Gibbs and Ducky discuss Cobb's psychological profile, and how his first kill for the CIA freed him from the rules of civilization and turned him into a beast. Gibbs is confused why Cobb was stalking him, but Ducky points out that he was probably only observing him, but ended up being goaded by Mike.

In Vance's office, Gibbs comes to stand beside Vance standing in the window, staring out at the rain. He tells him that he studies him because sometimes, "I can't understand why you make the God-awful decisions that you do." Vance tells him that he feels the same way about Gibbs. "Except, you aren't responsible for my actions, Gibbs, and I am for yours." Gibbs protests that he should have been on this case from the beginning. Vance tells him that he's sorry about Franks, "but you called him in, figuring that I would see him and would bend." "You always do," confirms Gibbs. Vance exclaims that there is nothing on him, and if he had to step back from their friendship, it was because he had to in order to do his job. Gibbs isn't buying it. "Maybe when bodies were popping up over Europe, but when they started showing up in my backyard, you promoted that . . . that . . . rookie over me?" he says, getting to the heart of his anger. "It wasn't my decision," Vance tells him. A light bulb goes off: "Promotions – he hates 'em," mutters Gibbs, suddenly side-tracked. "He thinks we (he and Cobb) have that in common. He stole a souvenir from my desk. He was at my house." They realize that Cobb has baited Barrett with the videotape – Cobb taped himself, and has drawn Barrett and her team into a trap. Vance quickly calls Barrett to tell her that Cobb is armed and is probably anticipating her arrival. She and her team carefully explore the darkened building, and Cade and Levin stumble into a room whose wall is covered with pictures of Barrett and her team. As they leave to rejoin Barrett, a shot rings out and Levin jerks, cries out, and falls. Vance and Gibbs hear the gunshot, and then another as Cade runs up to Levin and is also shot. Vance yells into the speakerphone, asking Barrett for her status. She takes a shot at a fleeing shadow, and then tells Vance and Cade and Levin are down, and, helping Cade drag himself out of the way, she tells Vance she is going after Cobb. Vance tells her to wait for backup, but she disregards his instructions, carefully easing down the corridor, hugging the wall. Suddenly, a toy bear starts beating its drum. Startled, her attention is diverted to the bear for a moment – and suddenly, Cobb bursts through the drywall and attacks Barrett. They struggle, and the last frame shows Barrett on the ground, Cobb forcing her gun hand down then inexorably moving his own gun under her chin. Advertisement

Summary: When the Port-to-Port killer is finally revealed, the entire NCIS team finds themselves in grave danger.

Gibbs and Tony inspect the hallway where we last saw EJ grappling with P2P.

They find the wall of photos and then EJs team member Cade, who is badly hurt. Levin didnt make it. Tony wants to go find EJ, but Gibbs tells him to stay with Cade.

Gibbs goes to the parking lot, gun drawn. He peers into a car. He sees plastic wrap peeking out of the trunk. EJ is wrapped up inside. He rolls her over. Shes still breathing.

Back at NCIS, EJ is in shock. Cade is in surgery, someones notifying Levins family in Chicago. Duckie and Palmer are with his body.

P2P keyed a phone number into the side of the car EJ was found in. Its a secure blocked government line. Ziva looks at it and recognizes it as Rays cell phone number. Gibbs tells her to find him and warn him.

Vance reads up on Operation Frankenstein, the CIA op that created P2P, also known as Jonas Cobb.

In the bathroom, EJ furiously tries to get rid of the ink that P2P drew across her neck instead of slitting it. She doesnt understand why he let her leave. She blames herself for her team getting hurt. She wonders if all this would have happened if anyone but her had been on the case. Tony tries to reassure her and cautions her not to let P2P get in her head.

Gibbs visits Duckie in the morgue. He thinks Cobb used Franks gun on Levin. Cobbs trying to punish people who turned him into Frankenstein.

EJ comes down. She wants a moment to pay her respects. They leave her alone with his body. She holds Levins hand, then examines his wrist. She takes out a knife and makes a tiny slit. She squeezes a tiny electronic pellet out from under his skin and puts it in a small plastic specimen jar. She takes it.

Ziva cant reach Ray. P2P knows hes on the case and shes worried about him.

Secretary of the Navy Phillip Davenport (Jude Ciccolella) comes to NCIS and barks at Vance that it better be important. Gibbs says with an agent wounded and another dead, nothings more important.

McGees waiting for Ziva in her lab. She spent the night at the hospital at Cades bedside. McGee picks that moment to be jealous and ask if theyre more than friends. She announces its time to go home. He wants to go with her to protect her.

Ziva tries to reassure EJ that theres no rhyme or reason to agents dying on the job. EJ says its her fault but Ziva says it was just Levins time.

Tony calls Ziva with info from Agent Kort on a DC hotel where Ray is staying. EJ wants to go with her, but Ziva says shes going to get her boyfriend and hell be staying with her instead of a safehouse.

At the hotel, Ziva knocks on the door. She walks in when it opens and instead of seeing Ray, Cobb is waiting for her. He knocks her out.

Sec-Nav Davenport tells Vance to deal with the situation and then asks if hes up to it. Vance says since Eli David was here and since he got here, things have been different. He says things have gone wrong. Vance takes out file marked confidential. Davenport doesnt want to talk about Frankenstein but Vance flips a switch and assures him the room is secure.

Gibbs looks at an old letter from Mike down in his basement. In it, he says hes only got a few months left with his lungs. Gibbs works on a flower inlay on a piece of wood.

Gibbs gets a call from Tony.

Back at NCIS, Tony tells Gibbs about Ziva going to Rays hotel room. Hes unconcerned until he sees Ray is standing there. He hasnt checked in yet. They cant reach Ziva. EJ tries to blame herself, but Gibbs nips her martyr routine in the bud. Ray assures them Kort didnt mislead them.

Gibbs learns Kort, or Agent Eyepatch as Tony calls him, is already in the building.

Vance, Kort and Davenport meet in Vances office. Kort reminds Vance that Operation Frankenstein was his idea when he was in the War College. Vance says it was flawed from the beginning and should have been aborted. Davenport defends the idea. Vance blames Kort for pushing Cobb too far.

Vance says its not Gibbs and Barretts fault. For once the weight does not fall on the bottom of the pyramid. This operation was your call, accept it, Vance tells Davenport.

Gibbs storms up to the office and tries to bust in like always, but its locked down tight. Instead he takes the secretarys phone and calls in.

He tells them that Ziva is missing based on info from Kort. If she gets hurt, you answer to me, Gibbs says. Kort asks Vance if Gibbs is threatening him.

If she isnt, I am, Vance says.

At the hotel, Tony cant hide his concern. EJ says everyone is worried. Its just different for some of us, he says.

EJ wonders what that means when suddenly Cobb strolls through the hotel room door, with his arms raised. He gets down on his knees and surrenders.

Back at NCIS, EJ thinks Cobb is playing them. Tony cites Rule 16: If someone thinks they have the upper hand, break it.

Gibbs joins Cobb, who snorts with derision. He thinks Gibbs is acting proud. Gibbs says theres nothing to be proud about since Cobb gave himself up. Cobb says his work was almost done. He mentions Samson, who he says EJ wrote about in her psych profile of him.

Cobb tells Gibbs about a boy whose father was a captain in the navy, who had a horse named Samson who needed to be put down. Instead of calling the vet, the captain shot the horse to teach a lesson.

Gibbs asks where Ziva is. Now what kind of lesson would you learn if my actions were humane? Cobb says.

You failed as a navy officer, you were an embarrassment to the CIA, a disappointment to your dad and you want to teach me a lesson? Gibbs says.

Tony demands information from Ray. He says Frankenstein was a legitimate CIA operation, but there was a similar program for the private sector. Kort skimmed money off the top. Ray suggests Cobb would only give himself up so easily if there was something specific he wanted at NCIS.

Tony confronts Kort, who says he has no idea how high this goes. Certain people had a lot to gain from this project, Kort says. He tries to get Tony to think four moves ahead like P2P.

Abby finds that the blood on Cobbs hands is Zivas. There was concrete dust from where Cade and Levin were shot. She also found sheet metal rust and homeopathic oils that help with muscle aches in people. What if they werent people? Gibbs says.

McGee confirms the oils are used on liniments for horses. McGee finds a record of the Cobb family farm. Gibbs tells EJ she cant go, people upstairs want her benched. He tells her he knows the Sec-Nav is her uncle and has from day one. She insists she got where she is on her own. He doesnt think so.

At the Cobb farm, they find the house deserted. They inspect the barn, with a stall marked Samson. Theres a toy monkey clapping.

They find Ziva tied up in the next stall. Shes got a cut on her head but is OK. She quickly tells them her kidnapping was a distraction, Cobb needed to get them all out and get into NCIS. Davenport and Vance have security. But Gibbs points out his niece EJ doesn't. This is news to Tony.

Back at NCIS, an agent leads Cobb onto an elevator with EJ and Palmer, who couldnt be more nervous. EJ asks Palmer about his news. Hes getting married in the spring.

When they get off the elevator, Cobb knocks out the agent holding him with a head butt, kicks EJ to the floor and jumps over his cuffs so his hands are in front. He puts them around Palmers throat and tells EJ its round two, theyre going for a drive in the ME van.

The team is back upstairs and tracking the ME van. Tony is still smarting that EJ didnt tell him about her uncle.

Ziva defends keeping quiet about powerful relatives, something she understands having a father whos the head of Mosad.

Up in Vances office, Davenport questions the plan. Gibbs thinks that Cobb had the chance once to hurt EJ and didnt. Hes showing them how humane he can be, Vance says. They found a note saying theyll be waiting at home.

Its the building where Frankenstein took place, where Cade and Levin were shot.

Davenport tells Vance certain private jobs were taken as political favors that neither the CIA nor Navy officially authorized. Kort handled them.

Davenport announces hes submitting his resignation as soon as this is over. Lets take care of this son of a bitch, he announces.

Davenport walks into the Frankenstein building alone, wearing a bullet proof vest. He finds Cobb waterboarding his three captives. He says hes training them. His third student is Kort. Cobb knocks him out.

Cobb holds his gun to EJs neck, saying shes a good agent. Cobb waits for the other agents. Vance and Gibbs come in. I thought I was being trained to do what was right, Cobb says.

Davenport says they can talk about things and he wants to help.

Gibbs looks toward the ground and Palmer gets the signal. He waits.

Liar, Cobb says. EJ and Palmer both duck and Vance, Gibbs and Davenport fire. Cobb is blasted out through the window. He falls several stories and lands on a car below, toast.

EJ packs up her things at work. Cade has been reassigned to Washington state, to spend time with his family while he heals. McGee tries to appear sad to see him leave.

EJ tells Tony shes quitting, too. You can have Rota if you want, she tells him. I think Ill stay put, no sense walking away from a good thing, he says. Is that a compliment, DiNozzo? Gibbs asks. No sir, boss, sorry. Never, Tony says.

EJ announces shes thinking about sticking around DC. Tony suggests maybe theyll bump into each other. She says its possible, but seems to mean see you tonight.

Gibbs tells her to come back any time.

Ziva opens a jewelry box from Ray. It's empty. He tells her to consider it a promise. He says he has to work outside the country for a while. She doesnt want him to go, but he says he has to.

Is this good bye? she asks. For now. How do I know? You gave me an empty box. I gave you a promise, he says.

Ray gets a text: Kort in Tel Aviv. Handle ASAP. He tells her its nothing.

Gibbs serves as a pallbearer for Mike Franks at his military funeral at Arlington. Everyone is there.

Hes buried in a fine, handcrafted wood coffin. We recognize the wood details that Gibbs has been working on all season. Franks knew hed need it and must have asked in the letter.

Vance talks to the new Secretary of the Navy, Clayton Jarvis (Matt Craven). Theyre old pals. Jarvis mentions DiNozzo, saying hes spoken to him twice already.

Tony joins them. Jarvis gives Tony clearance to discuss a black op, saying no one else needs to know. Vance is concerned but Jarvis barrels on. He says an agent in NCIS is selling top secret intel and they need to be dealt with.

Jarvis gives Tony the file. He looks at it and is stunned and concerned, but then regains his straight face. Thats who youre handling, Jarvis says. Any questions?

Production Code: 189
Summary: After spending months tracking down his target, Tony is left with the blood of an NCIS agent on his hands and it's up to Gibbs to help him put the pieces of the puzzle together.

Previously on: Ray tells Ziva he has to go overseas, Gibbs says good-bye to his mentor Mike, the Sec Nav resigns and DiNozzo gets put on a special case investigating a mole in NCIS.

Kate's psychiatrist sister, Dr. Rachel Cranston, comes to see Gibbs at the hospital. Someone has been shot in the chest and has a concussion. Gibbs wants her to talk to him about whatever happened. Gibbs opens the door, it's Tony.

Gibbs confirms Tony was shot in the chest, but it hit the vest. Tony's making jokes about it. Tony fired two shots and there was a lot of blood, but no body. She asks him who he shot.

Gibbs comes in. He holds up a badge with blood on it. It's not Tony's. "You shot another NCIS agent?" Cranston asks. Tony says he can't remember any of it.

Tony remembers he had orders from the Sec Nav. Gibbs hasn't heard from the rest of the team yet, it's the middle of the night. The shrink thinks he'll get his memory back. Tony says he was following orders, but Gibbs says they weren't from him.

Dr. Cranston asks about his assignment.

Flash back to late May, Tony on the golf course with the Secretary of the Navy Clayton Jarvis. He doesn't want the rest of the team's help, just Tony. "You saw the photo, who know who the problem is. Make it happen," Jarvis says.

Tony explains no one suspected his mission at first. Ziva emails Ray on his assignment, even though he can't write back. Gibbs gives Ziva her official NCIS badge, she's no longer a probationary agent. Ziva thinks they should all go out. Tony says he'll take a rain check.

Gibbs visits Tony on the shooting range, warning him if Jarvis needs his help to keep his eyes open. Tony says he became a cop because he thought it would make the lines of good and evil clear. Gibbs asks what's on his mind, but Tony nonchalantly says he's just doing his job.

Dr. Cranston clarifies that when Tony was told to "handle" something it could mean killing someone. Tony says it started with a photo, but he can't remember of whom. He remembers he destroyed it.

Flash back to May. Ziva heard he was given a new assignment. She's going to Central America soon to meet an old friend, a woman. Ziva wants her advice.

Ziva tells Tony she doesn't need to know what he's up to but NCIS has been through a lot. She says "we" need some time. She tells him to look out for himself.

Gibbs visits Duckie, who is aggravated by something he found in the autopsy of Levin, the member of Barrett's team who was killed in last season's finale. He found a small cut made after Levin died. He checked security footage and found EJ Barrett digging something out of his wrist. It was a small microchip. Gibbs thinks the timing of DiNozzo's mission could explain it.

Gibbs confronts Vance about DiNozzo's orders. He wonders again if Jarvis can be trusted.

Abby, Ziva and McGee examine security footage of Tony with his secret picture, trying to figure out what they see. McGee just hopes Tony's target isn't anyone they know.

Gibbs confronts Jarvis at a state function, where he tells Gibbs he can have DiNozzo back after the mission. As they're talking outside a country club a Navy officer named Felix Wright pulls up in a car, stumbles out bloody and collapses at Jarvis' feet. Dead.

Duckie finds an incision just like the one Levin had. Gibbs mentions that fact to Jarvis, who tells them not to talk about Wright's death with anyone. Vance tells Gibbs to look into their connection quietly.

Tony wasn't at the scene because he was working on his assignment. Tony tells Dr. Cranston he had to follow Barrett, but she was hard to find. He tracked her to a tropical island, where she told him she was going to meet a friend. She says they'll talk about it when she gets back. He tells her people are looking for her. She says the microchip isn't hers to give back. He says he can help if she'll let him but she's not sure she can trust him.

Back at NCIS, McGee finds that both Levin and Wright used to be in the office of naval intel, working for the director of special operations, Sean Latham. He leads an armada of surveillance vehicles calls the "watcher fleet."

Back at the hospital, FBI agent Casey Stratton (Scott Wolf) asks Gibbs about Tony's shooting, but he's not talking.

Barrett tells Tony she promised Levin she'd get the microchip to the right person. She claims not to know what's on it, but Tony doesn't believe her. She says she was going to meet Felix Wright. Just then they're shot at. They get in the car and race off.

Hearing the story, Dr. Cranston thinks it means EJ was the traitor, but Tony says EJ needed his help. Dr. Cranston asks Tony why he keeps getting involved with dysfunction women.

Abby has done some microchip research and finds they were implanted around the same time and emitted low frequency waves, like garage door openers.

At NCIS, Gibbs is called in to meet with Jarvis and Latham, the director of the Watchers group. He confirms Levin and Wright worked for him as part of a group called "Phantom Eight," a group that tried to stop acts of terrorism before they happened. The microchip let them into the secure Watcher database. They're worried Barrett is trying to sell it.

Gibbs comes home and finds Tony and EJ waiting for him. They relax around dinner and finally EJ turns over the microchip, saying again she doesn't know what it does. She wants to know who to give it to.

Tony says he's worried about Barrett's team member Cade, who was close with Levin. Gibbs tells her to reach out to him.

In the hospital, Cranston and Tony are talking when FBI agent Stratton barges in, all smiles and friendship. He pretends like Gibbs said he could talk to Tony. Tony doesn't seem to know him as Stratton takes the temperature in the room, then he excuses himself.

September Tony returns to work and to questions from the team. Abby interrupts with a video from Cade. He's in trouble.

Gibbs comes in to Tony's hospital room, saying he talked to his FBI pal Fornell, but he didn't know anything about Stratton. Gibbs tells Tony there were two other types of blood found at the scene. Gibbs asks Tony who he was handling.

Flash back to Tony meeting with Jarvis on the golf course again. He asks for permission to speak candidly. "This mission blows," Tony says. He cites Rule No. 6: "If you feel like you're being played, you probably are."

Tony wants off the assignment because people close to him are getting hurt. He says if Jarvis doesn't take him off, he'll quit. Jarvis tells Tony he owns him. Tony walks off and Jarvis sits down to drinks with Sean Latham, the Watchers guy. He's not impressed with how Jarvis is handling Tony.

In the hospital room, Tony tells Gibbs that EJ was blindsided.

Flashback to the alley and EJ walking alone. She sees someone in the shadows. It's Cade. He tells her life's been difference since he got shot, since he can't work.

Tony comes out of the shadows with his gun drawn on Cade, telling Cade to 'fess up. Tony accuses him of taking Wright's chip. Cade says he only came because EJ texted him. She didn't. They realize they all got the same text message luring them there.

Suddenly shots ring out. Cade is hit first, then EJ. Tony is able to get his gun out before he is hit, too.

Cade's body was found by Metro PD. The badge was his, but Tony's bullets in his body were post mortem. Someone else killed him and planted his badge on Tony. They're still looking for EJ.

Gibbs says the photo was always Cade. Tony remembers he needed EJ to bring Cade in. They were all used after EJ took the microchip.

Dr. Cranston gently prods Tony, reminding him he saw the shooter in the alley. Tony thinks back and realizes he saw Stratton.

Gibbs puts Cade's badge and bullet casing on Vance's desk, reporting to Stratton and Latham. They know Gibbs is still at risk, but they have no idea who Agent Stratton is.

Out on a ship at sea, Latham uses his own microchip to get into a secret room. He has two others. He turns and congratulates Stratton, telling him Jarvis is none the wiser. He tells Stratton to find EJ. Stratton promises he will. Latham opens up video conferencing and asks who would like to start the bidding on the microchips.

Gibbs digs deep into Mike Frank's old records and finds a file on the Phantom Eight. There's a photo of them including Levin, Wright... and Stratton.

Production Code: 187
Summary: The NCIS team investigates the death of a young Marine that came to his homecoming party with a stab wound.

A teenager named Nathan serves booze to guests at a surprise party. The guest of honor walks in the house. Then he drops dead.

McGee and Ziva try to get Tony to stop moping by giving him presents. Ziva gives him two tickets to female mud wrestling. McGee got him the same thing. Gibbs comes in with the body of the week. He's Private First Class Thomas Hill, he just returned from Afghanistan. He was about to be the Grand Marshall in a Homecoming parade. Duckie announces the victim was stabbed. Ziva and McGee follow the trail of blood to a cell phone in the street, but before they can get to it, a street cleaner runs it over.

Cut to Tony unloading piles of dirt from the cleaner in the basement and Ziva and McGee sifting through it. Private Hill was in foster care as a child and was adopted by a Marine family. They couldn't find anyone to say anything bad about him.

They meet with his family. His step-sister Lindsay, who's been with the family for two years, blames herself for not meeting him after work. His dad mentions they almost lost their house last year. His mom says something was bothering him a few days after he came home.

In the lab, Abby looks at the cell phone from the street sweeper. Pfc. Hill's blood is on it, but Abby has to crack its code. Abby found Hill spent the last three days trying to hack into the Virginia state database. GPS shows six months ago the laptop was off a remote trail in the woods.

McGee and Tony head to the coordinates, where Tony pays McGee $200 to dig. Homecoming has made Tony feel guilty about boarding school, when he strung a kid up by his tighty whities.

McGee digs until he finds a lockbox, which he picks open. They find about $50,000 in cash.

Gibbs visits the morgue, where Duckie reports Hill was injected with a sedative against his will before he was killed.

At the Homecoming parade, McGee and Ziva meet Nathan, Lindsay's not quite boyfriend. Ziva as Mr. and Mrs. McCormick if he ever showed interest in computer hacking or had a lot of cash. Mr. McCormick objects to the questions and ends the interview. The parents leave, but the remaining teenagers heckle McGee.

Back at the office, Tony is trying to track down "Stinky John," the kid he strung up by his undies. McGee volunteers to help find him.

At the big screen, Tony reports that the McCormicks were six months behind on rent, but recently paid it all off in cash. Ziva found two syringes near the crime scene. Abby got prints off them. They belong to Curtis Beane, who's been on parole for years.

They visit his job, Second Chance Tacos. His boss says he hasn't seen him in two days and is worried about him. The restaurant employs all ex-cons. The manager promises Curtis wouldn't have done it.

Abby has cracked the phone but there's no address book on it. She found surveillance photos of Lindsay. Hill wasn't the killer's target.

Gibbs and Ziva meet with Lindsay and the McCormicks, telling them they thought someone wanted to kidnap Lindsay. The McCormicks say the bank reduced their mortgage. Lindsay's birth parents live with an anti-technology commune in Pennsylvania. She got beat up by her parents a lot and ran away. She doesn't know where they are now.

Around the screen, Tony thinks Hill and Curtis were in cahoots on something and Hill took more than his fair share so Curtis tried to kidnap Lindsay.

McGee reports to Tony that he found his old nemesis John, but he's getting on a plane to leave the country tomorrow.

Gibbs stands guard at the McCormick's. The parents are asleep, but Lindsay brings him coffee. There's a noise outside and Mr. McCormick goes to the door with Gibbs. He drags in Nathan. He sees the file on Curtis and recognizes him as someone who flagged him down for directions, but then panicked and ran.

Tony calls to report Curtis Beane just showed up at work. At the restaurant, Curtis is up on the roof, saying he can't go back to prison. He starts to tip over the ledge, but they grab him. They find a needle sticking out of his arm.

Back at the office, McGee thinks it means it's an open and shut case.

Ziva examined the supposed bank letter and determined it was a forgery. She found the file on the laptop, which didn't leave the state when Hill was overseas. Ziva ran Lindsay's DNA – it matches the blood on the second syringe. Abby also got a rough estimate of her age – she's 27, not 17.

They find multiple fake names and records for her. She lives with foster families for two years then bails when she's supposed to turn 18. They wonder if it's why Hill was trying to access the Virginia database.

Tony goes to talk to his old classmate John. He's tall, good-looking and getting into a Town Car. Tony stumbles through an apology. John is surprised that Tony is the one who's sorry.

Gibbs interviews "Lindsay," and shows her the needle. She maintains her lie. Gibbs is about to arrest her when she says that she was waiting for Tommy when someone stuck her with a needle. Tommy told her to run and she did, then woke up in a field half an hour later. He shows her the old yearbook photos under different names, but she says they must be fake.

In the morgue, Duckie thinks Lindsay believes her story. The signature on the forged bank letter is in her handwriting; she paid off the bank.

Her medical file shows lots of old scars, which prove her had a rough past of some kind. Gibbs notices one that looks like a grid. Cut to the taco boss taking a taco out of the deep fryer with a metal holder with a grid pattern.

Gibbs shows him a photo of Lindsay and Pfc Hill. He says he doesn't recognize either of them. But state records show she's his niece and he got custody when she was 11, after her parents died in a car crash. He tries to run, but they grab him.

He says she stole Curtis' money years ago and then just randomly ran into her and wanted his money back. The store owner says Curtis operated a robbery ring with guys from the shop, but they know the manager was really the leader.

Gibbs and Tony take "Lindsay" back to the McCormicks before taking her to the mental hospital for an evaluation. She sees the McCormicks and is afraid to talk to them, but Gibbs urges her to. The McCormicks tell her nothing has changed between them.

Tony tells Gibbs about his own apology. Apparently Lindsay wasn't the only one reinventing her past; John strung Tony up. Tony says he's been telling the story that way for years and doesn't know when he flip-flopped it.

Gibbs assures him he doesn't have to tell McGee, but Tony thinks he should.

Summary: The line between McGee's personal and professional life is blurred when NCIS uncovers a connection between his grandmother and the murder of a Navy lieutenant.

A guy talks to his wife on the phone, making excuses for not coming home last night. He walks around frantically in a park, then sits on a bench and makes another call. "I'm starting to really lose it here. I can't keep lying to my wife, it's killing me. We need to end this," he says. As he tells the person on the other end where to meet him, a gloved hand holding a gun sneaks out from behind a tree and shoots him dead.

Tony comes to work, irritated with his dad for over-doing his birthday plans and making Tony foot the bill. McGee remembers his dad assessing a special card he made for him one year and giving it back, saying he could do better. His dad was a crusty navy admiral who believed in tough love.

Gibbs comes for the body of the week, a dead navy officer downtown. He was shot in the head. He's Lt. Paul Booth. Ziva found a badge with his name on it. His fingerprints are burned off. Tony finds McGee's business card on the victim.

Back at the office, McGee can't place him, but the victim had his eight-year-old business card. Booth served two tours overseas and had a good record. He taught math at a university, but recently cut his schedule down to one class a week. The employee badge he had was for Telis Research. McGee hacks in and finds Booth was an analyst and reported to the company VP John Westfal (Sam McMurray).

Gibbs talks to Mrs. Booth, who is very pregnant. She tells Gibbs Paul was anxious when they spoke. At first she thought it was an affair, but a few weeks ago he came home late and she saw a car parked across the street watching him. She saw the man again the last two nights.

Ziva and Tony visit Westfal at Telis. Booth's wife didn't know he worked there. Westfal won't tell them what Booth was working on.

Down in the morgue, Palmer's phone keeps ringing. The wedding planning is making them crazy.

Duckie reports that Booth was shot from 20 feet away. His fingertips had chemical burns.

Bank records show Booth's records were all cashed out and put in a trust for his wife. He filed a police report a week ago saying someone tried to run him off the road. The morning he died he called Westfal, his wife and an unlisted number. McGee traces it to Penelope Langston and freaks out. He runs out of the office.

Tony and McGee and go meet Penelope (Lily Tomlin), his grandmother. She knows Booth is dead.

Booth was a student of hers, but they stayed in touch. She says he was having trouble at work, but didn't know he was working at Telis. She knows it's a military think tank. She tells McGee not to make connections where there are none.

They leave and McGee is sure she's lying, the way she deflected reminded him of his dad. They want to figure out what she's hiding.

In the lab, Abby plays with a copy machine from Booth's basement. His fingerprints were singed by the old copier. He must have made 4,000 copies.

In the office, McGee finds that Penny never taught Booth. She retired before he started. Tony puts Andrew Pike, rival of Telis founder Max Elswood, on the big screen. He was fired in the 70s. McGee finds a bunch of emails from Westfal, including one telling Booth the Annex Principle is privileged information and he'd better come clean before things get out of control.

Gibbs and McGee go to talk with Westfal about the Annex Principle, which is highly classified. Westfal says Booth was stealing files – close to 4,000 pages of privileged documents. He admitted he gave them to a woman who was a "close friend." Max looks at the wall and sees a picture of his grandmother with Telis founder Max Elswood.

McGee goes to talk to Penny, who says she made a promise to Paul that she'd keep his family safe. She says she can't tell him. She walks away from him in a parking lot and is nearly run over by a car. McGee pulls her out of the way before she's hit.

Back at the office, McGee's trying to track down the car, which was a rental. McGee tells Gibbs that once Penny is committed to a cause, there's no swaying her.

Tony gets a call from a reporter named Michael, asking about Booth's murder and mentioning the Annex Principle. He says he's been meeting with Penny about it.

Gibbs talks to Penny, who still won't talk. Gibbs accuses her of knowing about the murder and McGee interrupts. Gibbs takes him out into the hall and tells him they need to know what's going on.

McGee goes to talk to her alone. He knows she worked as an analyst for the Telis group, then quit. She published a paper and Max Elswood asked her to work on the Annex Principle in 1968. She says they lied to her, that she was creating a weapon. She says they were about to go to print when the Vietnam War ended and they thought the Annex Principle was shelved. Booth learned she was one of the last living members of the original group. They were trying to finish what she started. McGee tells her how much she means to him.

The team talks to Andrew Pike in MTAC. He's in Bali. Penny told them Andrew threatened to make Telis pay for stealing his idea. Elswood wanted to market the Annex Principle, but Andrew left 39 years ago. He says the project is a threat to their way of life. McGee hacks into Telis' secret files and searches old files for the Anax Principle. He pulls up footage of a caterpillar. It was a hybrid bug and robot, a genetically engineered plague.

Penny and McGee go to meet Michael in a parking garage. She walks toward a parked car with the files, but no one gets out. The car speeds off and they see the reporter lying dead on the ground.

Back at the office, they think the killer is after Penny. McGee pulls up the original Anax group and finds it included Westfal. Penny says Westfal was power hungry. They find Westfal signed for the rental car that tried to run Penny over.

Gibbs talks to Westfal, who says it's a forgery. He says he admired Booth for the risks he took.

In the lab, Abby reports they found a super strong carbon fiber on the victims. She traced it to a Vietnam-era gun used by the Army.

McGee finds Ellswood and another guy served in the Army, but the other guy is way too young to have used the gun. Ellswood supposedly died in a plane crash 20 years ago, but his body wasn't found.

McGee checks on Penny but finds she left.

Cut to Penny trimming her bonsai tree and hearing a rustling. A man in a fedora and sunglasses steps out. It's Max.

He accuses Penny of trying to destroy his legacy. He has a gun. But Gibbs and the team are there before he can draw it.

Back at the office, Penny tells embarrassing McGee stories. She preps for her ride home. She says Gibbs reminds her of his dad; he loves McGee but doesn't know how to show it. She urges him to take the first step and call him. He says it's been seven years. Penny's ride home arrives, cocktails with Duckie.

She urges McGee to call his dad. She and Duckie leave. McGee picks up the phone and calls his dad.

Production Code: 190
Summary: When a contract killer murders a Navy Lieutenant Commander, the NCIS has to find out the motive behind it, and Abby learns valuable information about the case after going through a series of kidney donation tests.

A reporter interviews people about a $14 billion appropriation for a new class of aircraft carrier. One woman says she'd have to ask her husband (seriously?), and so the reporter tries to ask a man nearby with a camera. He turns skittish and runs away into the street right into the path of an oncoming van. He's pancaked. The camera pans down and we see he had a gun.

At the office, Abby is excited she just got matched to give a kidney to an 18-year-old she doesn't know. Detective Sportelli arrives to brag to Gibbs that he caught The Cooler, the hitman suspected in at least six contract killings. He's Paul Arliss and he's been living quietly in suburbia. He's the one who got hit by the van. He lived.

Ballistics tied the weapon he was carrying to four killings. They found notes and photos in his car parked nearby. His next target was going to be a naval Lt. commander named Jeffrey Brett, a Top Gun pilot. He got shot down on a mission over Iraq and survived for two weeks eating bugs until he was rescued.

He has one daughter and is currently assigned as a legislative fellow to the House Armed Services committee.

Gibbs and Ziva visit him and he can't think of anyone who would want him dead. He doesn't want to go into protective custody and miss the vote on the aircraft carriers, then he looks at Ziva and reconsiders.

Abby visits Duckie after meeting with the transplant coordinator. There were two people who volunteered to donate, her and her brother. But not the one she knows about. They were a 99.99% DNA match. She and her little brother Luka are both totally surprised. Both of her parents are dead, so she can't ask them.

McGee and Tony go to the hospital to visit The Cooler. Tony thinks he has the inside track and wants to talk to him, but they arrive and Sportelli tells them he's dead.

McGee looks up Arliss, who was salesman of the year for a manufacturing company. He has found no connection between Brett and the hitman.

Ziva accompanies Brett on the capitol. A guy named Nick comes up to talk to Brett, but reaches into his pocket and catches Ziva's attention, so she grabs his arm and pins him. Brett explains he's just a lobbyist, and he wants to meet with him later.

At Arliss's house, Tony paces off the inside and outside of the garage and finds a few feet missing. It's hollow behind the tool rack. They find the way to open in and find a bunch of rifles and a laptop inside. Sportelli lets them take the computer.

In the lab, Abby calls her old aunt as McGee works on the laptop. Abby's aunt barely remembers her.

The day before Arliss was hit by the truck, he got a $25,000 wire transfer from the account of George Kaplan.

Brett comes in to NCIS, talking to his 8-year-old daughter, Tilly, who he mentions has special needs. Brett doesn't recognize the name Kaplan. He calls his ex-wife to suggest she take their daughter out of town.

Tony, Gibbs and McGee visit Kaplan's tiny low rent apartment. There are no clothes in the apartment and no food in the fridge. The landlady hasn't seen him since he rented the apartment. His business manager sends a check every month.

Ziva and Brett leave the Capitol, he holds the door open for her and ushers her through. He shuts the door behind her, locking her out. He waves good bye.

Back at the office, Ziva knows Brett has to be back at work for an 11 a.m. conference call. They find no license for George Kaplan, but Tony finds his business manager is Drew Turner and there's $1.1 million in his brokerage account. McGee searches the Internet and finds Kaplan filed state and federal tax returns, prepared by Turner.

Tony and McGee visit Drew Turner, who turns out to be a hot woman. She gets a call as they're waiting and assures her nervous client she'll be there in about 10 minutes. She works out of her home.

She says George is about 58 and she hasn't talked to him since last tax season. She says she'll meet them at NCIS after she meets with her client. Tony flirts shamelessly.

Gibbs and Ziva confront Brett, who says he ditched last night to meet a woman. He says he can take care of himself. Gibbs tells Ziva to follow him again.

Back in the lab, Abby searches male birth records for Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. She hasn't run the prints from Kaplan's apartment yet and forgot to tell Tony and McGee that Drew Turner never showed up.

Tony confirms that the broker got the money transfer OK from Turner, which means she lied about not having spoken to Arliss recently.

They tracked a $500,000 withdrawal to a gambling website from Kaplan's brokerage account made before the other wire transfer. Turner is authorized to transfer on the account.

Tony and McGee return to her home office. She doesn't answer the door. Tony peers through the mail slot and sees why: she's hanging by her neck inside.

Down in the morgue, Duckie says the hanging was staged. She was choked to death.

Upstairs, McGee wonders if there really is a Kaplan.

Gibbs suggests McGee help distract Abby look for her brother.

Ziva and Gibbs run the name Drew Turner by Lt. Cmdr. Brett, but he doesn't know it. He agrees to stay in protective custody.

Abby compares the Kaplan and Turner signatures on the brokerage account and is able to confirm they were made by two different people. Tony comes down, excited to announce the funds in the brokerage account came from the Broussard Bank in Geneva.

Nick the lobbyist busts in on Brett, worried they're about to lose a vote. Ziva excuses herself. Brett tells Nick about the threat, but says it'll go away in a few days.

Tony gives the rundown on George Kaplan's account, with four transfers totalling $1.4 million.

Abby comes up with three fingerprints from the brokerage account signature card: a clerk, Drew and Brett. More importantly, Bretts signature matches the George Kaplan signature.

Now they wonder if he put a hit on himself and/or killed Drew Turner.

Tony finally has an epiphany that George Kaplan is the name of the guy who never existed in North by Northwest.

They figure Drew Turner had to be in on setting up the fake account. Tony calls Ziva and she listens in Bretts office as Tony tells her that Brett is Kaplan.

McGee got the name of the man whos DNA matches Abbys and Gibbs says hell take care of it.

He brings it to Abby. His names Kyle Davis. She wants to meet him. Gibbs offers to go but she says she needs to go alone.

Gibbs gets the name of the company that wired the money to Brett/Kaplan, a military contractor, the same one who would benefit from the bill hes trying to get passed.

They find matching weekly credit card receipts to a bar, where Drew and Brett must have met. She laundered his kickbacks.

Abby visits the address McGee found, its a pet rescue. Kyle looks just like her. He admires Abbys dog collar and says they have a pit bull terrier that has one just like it. He invites her to meet it.

Ziva escorts Brett to interrogation, where they find Nick the lobbyist finishing up with Tony and Gibbs.

Brett confesses, saying Drew had a gambling problem and was using George Kaplans money to pay off her debts. He knew it was her as soon as they said Kaplan took out a hit on him since shes the only other one who knew the name.

He says he was putting the money away for his daughters future needs. He asks for a lawyer.

Theres a knock on Gibbs door late at night, interrupting his tea and reading. Its Abby. She says Kyle seems really nice but she didnt tell him since he's giving a kidney the next day.

She couldnt reconcile her loving, wonderful parents ever giving up a child. But she realized they could have adopted a child: her.

She shows Gibbs her locket with a strand of her moms hair. She ran the DNA and it didnt match hers. She feels like Little Orphan Abby. Gibbs tells her her parents are still her parents. Familys more than just DNA. She wants to know why they didnt tell her she was adopted. Gibbs hugs her and says she doesnt have to do it alone, she has a family that will help her through it.

Production Code: 191
Summary: While investigating the murder of a coast guard officer aboard an abandoned cargo vessel, the NCIS team finds a Lebanese family seeking refuge in the US. Meanwhile, Tony and McGee attempt to find the perfect woman for Gibbs.

The Coast Guard approaches a stalled vessel at sea. They board with guns drawn and find it's a smuggling ship. They wonder about the cargo and inspect. They're looking when shots ring out and one officer is hit.

The team gathers on Monday, complaining about Gibbs working too much and calling them all on the weekend. Tony thinks Gibbs needs a new woman. Officer Borin (Diane Neal) comes in to announce the body of the week. There's a dead Coast Guard petty officer on a ship, towed into Norfolk.

Tony thinks they should set Borin up with Gibbs.

At the ship, one of the guard described what happened. Gibbs and Borin ask the same questions. They found nothing on the ship when they searched except counterfeit cosmetics.

Ziva thinks the crew got off the ship on the missing life boat. Borin shoots down Tony's love connection plans, but she offers to set him up with one of her friends.

They found three shells on the ship. Duckie's explaining when he hears a repeated tapping. It's a Morse code SOS coming from below on the ship. They follow the noise to an air vent. They pop it off and find people inside. The man says he and his family are from Lebanon and want asylum.

Gibbs fields an inquiry from Vance, who tells him not to let the stowaways on US soil. Lebanon is an ally and they don't want to have to investigate any allegations of mistreatment.

Gibbs talks to the father, Farid, who says the crew locked them away when they approached the coast. He says "they" threatened to kill his family back home.

Tony talks to the grown son, Rafiq, in the hull. He's angry and combative. The younger son, Hakim, is a university student.

Ziva talks to the mom, Mariam (Shohreh Aghdashloo). She asks why they aren't being allowed off the ship. Ziva has food brought in. She asks Ziva if she has children. Ziva says she had a sister, mother and brother but they were all killed.

Back at the office, Tony and McGee look into Borin's friends online, narrowing it to three.

They still haven't found the lifeboat.

In the morgue, Borin is suspicious of the stowaway family. Duckie says the rounds were fired from American-made guns sold to Lebanon in 2009.

Gibbs arrives in Abby's lab to find tree air fresheners hanging everywhere. She announces she has the grossest evidence chain ever: poop.

She looked into the feces DNA to determine there were four unique poop profiles. The family members were the only people to use the facilities in the last week. "Which means not only is our family lying to us, one of them in the shooter," she concludes.

Vance and Gibbs visit with a woman from an organization who helps settle Muslims. The Secretary of the Navy Clayton Jarvis joins them. She says she's filing an injunction then going to the media tomorrow.

Borin consults on Tony's efforts to find a date for Gibbs from among her friends. They switch back to the case when he arrives. The Bawali family also had a daughter, but she was killed in a US bombing raid of Hezbollah.

Ziva returns to the boat and confronts Mariam. She says they paid the crew out of Beirut and they set the course then left in lifeboats. She says she didn't mean to shoot the Coast Guard officer, she thought he was a pirate. Her story doesn't match the evidence. Mariam says she doesn't know who shot him.

Borin and Gibbs tell the sons they can prove their mom shot the officer. The older one, Rafiq, charges Borin but is restrained. The younger one is calm and polite and says whatever their mother says is the truth.

In the lab, Abby and McGee find a photo recognition hit for the father Farid, who is wanted by another name for a bombing of a coffee shop for US servicemen 27 years ago.

They can't reach Tony and Gibbs below deck, but they call Ziva. Tony is talking to Farid, who says he is doing his family's laundry on the stove. It smells like a floral explosion. Ziva goes downstairs to warn Tony and Farid suspects something is up and runs, knocking a laundry pot over so it splashes on Tony.

They race through the ship after him. Ziva draws on him and tells him to freeze before he jumps over. They arrest him.

Back at NCIS, Vance is angry Gibbs took Farid off the ship. Jarvis backs Gibbs up.

In the office, Borin finds Farid was in the Lebanese army. McGee think he's found the girl for Gibbs, but it disappointed to learn she's a natural red head.

Tony comes in, reeking of laundry detergent. Borin gives him a hand trying to remove it from his pants bottom. Vance sends Ziva back to the ship. The ship is being refueled to take the family back to Lebanon.

Gibbs talks to Farid, who denies his past.

Ziva talks to Mariam again on the boat. She doesn't believe Farid was a terrorist.

Back at NCIS, Borin threatens to send Farid's family to Guantanamo. He says his son Rafiq killed the officer.

Abby examines Tony's pants and announces the smell isn't laundry detergent. She cuts out a piece.

Ziva is talking to Mariam when they hear noises in the hall and the door to the room they are in is thrown shut and locked. Ziva sees a Coast Guard officer down in the hallway.

Abby calls Gibbs, who's in the car with Borin, McGee and Tony. She says they're driving into a trap, a massive terrorist plot. The residue on Tony's pants was pure Glycerin, distilled from perfumed soap. Mixed with other ingredients on the ship they form a detonator for the 30,000 gallons of fuel they just put in the ship.

It's docked near enough ships with enough weapons to take out half the Norfolk naval base. Ziva crawls out an air vent and lets Mariam out. The officer is OK.

Gibbs and the team arrive. They find Raffiq, the angrier son, tied up and chained below deck. Hakim, the educated calmer one, attacked him and tied him up. Rafiq tells his mother Hakim did it. They hear a noise coming from the engine room below. Mariam tells Ziva she understands she can't turn a blind eye to her family anymore. She follows Borin and Gibbs below deck, where they find Hakim about to ignite the detonator.

Hakim says her father shot the officer so they would bring the ship in to port. He wants continue with his plan to avenge his sister. His mother tells him he's not the only one who hurts and she still tried to teach him understanding.

Gibbs and Ziva keep their guns aimed at him while Mariam tries to talk him down. Finally, he relents and puts down the detonator, crying.

Ziva accompanies Mariam off the boat, where sets foot for the first time on US land.

Later, Jarvis says Lebanon wants the US to try Farid for his old terrorist actions, and Hakim is giving information on their contacts. Rafiq and Mariam have been granted temporary Visas.

Vance isn't happy about how things were handled. He tells Jarvis he thinks he's having trouble letting go of bad habits. Jarvis says he's fine, but Vance says he can come to him any time.

The team surveys the profile of Dustyn Kenner, the woman they think is perfect for Gibbs. Gibbs comes in and asks what "Dusty" is doing up there. He dated her. He says she's perfect and there's nothing more boring than perfect. He tells them to go home and keep their phones on.

Borin lingers and asks Gibbs if he's lonely. He says no. Borin is called away.

Gibbs pauses to tell Ziva that some times people do the right things for the wrong reasons. She him her mother never told her what kind of a man her father was. He says she was just being a mom. She asks if he's lonely. He says you're never alone when you have kids, then kisses her on the forehead good night.

Summary: The NCIS team investigates the death of a Navy lieutenant that died of over-hydration, which soon turns into a murder investigation. Meanwhile, Gibbs meets Ducky's new lady.

A trucker chats with somebody on his CB as he drives down the road. Suddenly he sees a man stumbling in the road in front of him. He slams on his brakes but he's too late and clips the man. He gets out to check on him. The man is gasping for breath and can't speak. He keels over, a trail of water trickling from his mouth.

The team comes in to work having been summoned by a pre-dawn wake-up call from Gibbs. Duckie arrives with coffee, very chipper for the morning hour. Tony thinks Duckie's dating Tony's grandmother Penelope, but McGee says it's a woman named Mary and Ziva adds she met him on-line. Gibbs announces the body of the week: A reservist versus semi.

At the scene, they pepper Duckie with questions. She's Dr. Mary Courtney, in health services. They've had three lunches and tonight she's cooking him paella at her place. "Ah, paella, named of course, for Paellus, the Aztec God of sex after sixty," Tony offers. The victim is Lt. Jason Sims, 44, from Fairfax. Witness says he was driving drunk and pulled off the side of the road. The truck stopped his watch at 4:19 a.m. He had no cell phone and seemed to be headed to a call box. Duckie and Palmer notice adhesive on both of his wrists.

In the morgue, Duckie slices the victim's head open. His skin is loose. Abby reports his blood alcohol was .05, not very drunk. Duckie weighs his brain and reports it's a pound too heavy. He had water intoxication.

Up in the office, Tony sucks up to the mailroom clerk. Ziva calls him out for attempting to cultivate office gossip sources.

On to the big screen. Jason was divorced with two kids and owns a mailbox franchise. He left work at 4:30p after arguing with his wife on the phone. Tony finds a police report about a fight between Sims and Phillip Ekerley, who works in a gunshop.

In the morgue, Duckie points a bump on Sims' head, not from the pavement.

Mary (Cheryl Ladd) calls Duckie. He meets her outside. She came bearing pastries. Gibbs walks by from the coffee cart and Duckie introduces him.

Tony talks to Phillip Ekerley, who says Sims owed him $500 for a mailbox Ekerley had. Sims kept his deposit and tried to bully Ekerley into leaving it alone.

Palmer and Abby gossip in the lab. She wants to know about Mary. Duckie shares his pastries.

Abby reports the other head wound was from hours earlier from a bat or pipe. He was also drugged with three hits of Ecstasy. It would lead to insatiable thirst.

Upstairs, McGee finds that Sims called his wife from Ekerley's gun shop last night. Surveillance shows Sims giving Ekerley a box.

After dinner at Mary's, Duckie explains how Sims was killed. Then he segues to putting the moves on Mary. He notices a picture of her mom and asks about her dad, but they dance instead.

Gibbs, McGee and Tony intercept Ekerley outside his gun shop. He's carrying another box: it has grenades inside.

Back at NCIS, he admits he saw Sims. Ekerley was using Sims to transport the grenades. He says Sims asked for more money and was worried about losing his kids. Sims invited him to join him for a drink.

At the bar, the bartender says Sims stayed til about 10:30p and was trying to pick women up. Apparently he had a reputation. The young blonde bartender ducks out at mention of the word Ecstasy and they catch her with a baggie full.

Back at NCIs, she denies ever talking to Sims. Gibbs tells her they can compare her E to the E found in Sims.

Down in the lab, Abby busts McGee for blabbing her Duckie gossip.

Abby found the mud on Sims SUV and trace it to a park.

Palmer tries to get info from Duckie about Mary, but Duckie guesses Palmer just wants to talk about his own upcoming marriage.

Ziva and McGee check toll booth footage leading into the park. They find him on tape and head to the park.

McGee's allergic to something in the park. They find a car partially submerged in the wetlands. It's registered to Sam Alcott. Tony finds his body nearby, duct taped to a tree with a water bottle nearby. He's been there awhile, they think he's the first victim. McGee says the words "serial killer."

Back in the morgue, they find the same blunt force trauma and water logged body. Duckie thinks the first killing went according to plan, but Sims got free, ruining the plan.

Mary calls and Duckie ignores the call, resolved to keep his personal and private life separate.

Upstairs, they find Sam's wife Jolene is a reservist and they're separated because he cheated. They find he was at a bar three nights ago and left alone. Two dead cheaters with military ties.

Abby reports the waitress' E was weak and the stuff Sims was doped with was 100 pure. Gibbs gives her the news and asks who sells the pure stuff. She gives them the name Randy.

McGee and Tony visit a drug rehab, where Randy Jonas is a patient. The security guard won't let them see him. He's been in for a week.

Duckie arrives at Mary's house where she's making baskets for kids at a homeless shelter. She asks about his day. He goes on about the sick diabolical "sadistic bastard" who killed two men. She gets still and stares at him. Then she throws her wine glass at him, telling him he's being ungrateful, because "someone" clearly went to a lot of trouble to show him something he hadn't seen before. Duckie realizes she's the killer.

Back at the office, they notice both men went to counseling with their wives. It was at different centers, but both part of the same outreach program for veterans, the same branch that oversees the rehab the drug dealer is in. They have footage of Alcott paying the toll to get into the park.

They check earlier frames to see if they followed someone.

Both facilities are supervised by the same administrators, including Mary. Gibbs recognizes her photo.

Back with the killer, Mary tells Duckie that she wouldn't go to the trouble for just anyone. She fiddles with scissors as she tells him she realized they had to be military so he'd see them. She says they killed themselves by drinking all the water. She says getting them to follow her out of the bar was the easy part. Duckie notices flashlights out front and stalls for time. She says her father was tricky, a real smooth talker. He tries to talk her down and asks for the scissors.

Gibbs busts in and he grabs them from her. She runs into the bathroom. Duckie tries to talk to her. They hear a crash and kick open the door to find she's slit her wrists. He tells her love can cloud our vision. "I only wanted you to stay," she says.

Later, Gibbs pours Duckie bourbon in the dark in the morgue. Ziva joins them and reports Mary is being transferred to a psych ward. She leaves the men alone. Duckie wonders how he missed the fact he was dating someone psychotic. Gibbs offers to take him home, but Duckie asks for a moment alone. He checks his computer. An online introduction from his dating site pops up. He closes the laptop.

Summary: When the husband of Gibbs' and Fornell's ex-wife is kidnapped, the NCIS team partners up with the FBI to investigate.

A man drives through a fast food place and is busted when his wife calls. She reads him the riot act about his cholesterol as he pulls up to the window. The guy in the drive-through gives him reason to worry about his health as he shoots him with a dart in the neck.

At the office, Tony counts the hairs he found in his shower that morning. He checks his shower drain every morning and there have never been more than five. This morning, he found 15. McGee mocks him until Tony points out that his hair is thinning too. As they both examine their hairlines in their reflections, Ziva says,

"At least you're not going gray." Enter the silver fox, Gibbs.

He's not there to announce the body of the week. There isn't one.

Instead, he meets Agent Fornell outside at the coffee cart. They both got calls from a woman. She joins them and addresses each of them as "Agent." She needs their help. Her husband Victor didn't come home last night and she wants them to look into it. "We are not your personal buddy cop investigative service," Fornell says. She agrees, they're just her ex-husbands.

Victor is a paper pusher for the department of Homeland Security. Diane knows he stopped at a fast food joint. She says it's not like it was with them, she and Victor have a good relationship. Gibbs finds his team listening at the door. They find he went to Beltway Burgers last night. There are bodies at the restaurant.
