Summary: When a young boy is caught stealing food, Mickey uncovers a disturbing case of child abuse that leads to a high-stakes rescue and a cliffside standoff that could cost lives.

Mickey Fox was running for Sheriff of Edgewater. Mickey Fox was a deputy that stepped up to the role after her boss was murdered. He had been murdered by a fellow cop and it was Mickey that got justice for him. However, she never sought out the sheriff role before.

She was fine with just being a deputy. Her being interim Sheriff now was a stop-gap until someone serious was voted in. Mickey decided to run for Sheriff because she does love this town and right now she needed help with funding.

There was the rotary club that helped finance the previous sheriff's campaign. Only they weren't happy with Mickey. There's been three burglaries in their neighborhood and no answers.

It got people wondering if Mickey really was ready for the job. She was! She just didn't know about the burglaries because her chief deputy didn't tell her. He didn't think it was important enough. The burglaries weren't actually that big of a deal. There was someone breaking in to steal food from the pantries.

All they were taking was food. Boone didn't think it warranted attention directly from a Sheriff. It turns out it did when it got her biggest donors upset with her. The Sheriff had someone keep an eye on the neighborhood. She then sought out her daughter in the meantime. Her daughter just got out of rehab. Again.

Skye has relapsed several times and now she was dating Brandon. Brandon who her mom arrested recently for selling narcotics. Mickey didn't like him around her daughter. She arrested him. Again for having narcotics.

Brandon claimed that her ex-husband was her lawyer. Skye's dad was Travis Fraley. Skye's questionable behavior should be better monitored and so Mickey blamed Travis. She thought if he wasn't so busy dating one of her deputies that maybe he'd stay on top of things.

Travis got Brandon out of the new charges that Mickey wanted to bring against him. She apparently didn't have probable cause to search him nor did she see him selling the drugs. The fact she found drugs didn't matter.

Brandon was let go. Mickey was upset that Travis was hiding the fact he was dating Cassidy. Cassidy was someone that Mickey once saved and now Cassidy was a deputy because of her. This felt like a betrayal. It just wasn't the only one. They later found out who was stealing food. It was a kid named Simon. Simon was stealing for his sister. They wouldn't let his sister eat. He attacked Boone and Mickey got him. Simon was taken by CPS. He wouldn't answer anymore questions. Mickey looked into his home life.

Simon's sister was his stepsister, Maddie. Maddie's mom died. Her dad remarried Simon's mom. Simon's mom hates Maddie. Maddie even mentioned something to a teacher and, before you know it, both kids were taken out of school to be homeschooled. The family welcomed another daughter as well. This stepmom from hell has been torturing Maddie ever since. Her dad just lets it happen because he was afraid of being alone. He turned a blind eye to this woman starving his child to the point her own son was stealing food just to make sure that Maddie ate something.

Mickey didn't have proof without Simon talking. She visited the house. She tried to see Maddie and the parents kicked her out. They said she wasn't free to search their home without a warrant. She eventually got that warrant when they faked paperwork from a judge to kidnap Simon back. The Sheriff's office searched the home after that. They didn't find the family. They did find Maddie. Maddie was locked up in her room in a small hiding space where her stepmom routinely put her. Maddie was being moved when she pushed her stepmom to escape.

Then Maddie became worried that her stepmom would be angry with her. She went back to the house. She hid in that hidden room hoping her stepmom would forgive her if she punished herself. Cassidy stayed behind until Maddie was ready to leave the room. Mickey went after the parents. They still had two small kids with them. They found them using John's hearing aides. They found them and got shot at. The couple then took off in their car with the kids. Mickey was talking to John. She offered to let him get the kids home before he and Carol were arrested.

Only Boone didn't follow her orders. He was running for Sheriff. He was the rotary club nominee. It's the real reason he didn't tell her about the burglaries. It's the reason he ordered a roadblock behind Mickey's back. John saw that and he thought Mickey lied to him. He then did something dangerous. He tried to drive his family off the cliff. The rocks stopped him. They were veering near the edge so Mickey acted fast. She got everyone out in time. This included John and Carol who were both arrested for attempted murder.

Mickey got the community to pitch in to help out with the kids now that their aunt was taking them in.

Mickey also let her dad move in with her. He was going legit. He was getting a license for selling pot. Mickey was hoping he would be a good influence on Skye. He ended up telling Skye where he hid some money in his beehives. She told her boyfriend. Her boyfriend stole six hundred bucks before running off after her grandpa fired warning shots. Skye confronted her boyfriend. She tried to get the money back and he already used it to buy drugs. Skye took it off him. She then handed it to her cousin Bode because she needed a sober companion. And unfortunately giving them to Bode which might have awaken his own struggles.

Skye's boyfriend later called her. He told her he was going to rehab. Skye visited his place to supposedly be happy for him and she found him stabbed to death. Now she claims she tried to save him. She claims she touched the knife trying to save him. It didn't look good for her because her DNA was all over the place. Mickey brought her daughter to the Sheriff's office to get her help. Boone was going to resign from her office now that she was a shoe-in for the job. Yet, Skye possibly killing someone might have killed Mickey's career.

Summary: Mickey investigates a harrowing missing persons case all while trying to protect her daughter, whose connection to a crime scene raises unsettling questions; Mickey's sister arrives to support her niece during this deeply emotional time.

Mickey's daughter got into some trouble again. It all began when she started dating another addict. Skye dated a guy she knew was trouble while she herself was fresh out of rehab. She's a drug addict. She's been in rehab on and off for so long that she knew what to expect.

She knew she should stay away from temptation. Yet, upsetting her mother was more important than doing the right thing. It's doubtful she even loved the guy and now she's the best suspect in his murder. Someone murdered Brandon.

Skye was covered in his blood. She said she went to his apartment to say goodbye. He allegedly told her he was heading back to rehab.

Skye then came in and saw him dead on the floor. Somehow her fingerprints got on the murder weapon. Somehow Brandon decided to go back to rehab right as he found a huge payday. Skye had revealed to him that her grandfather kept his money in his beehives. The same ones in the back of her mother's house because that's where her grandfather was now living.

Well, Brandon tried to rob those beehives. He got a lot of stings and was almost shot for his troubles. Skye left that part out of her retelling. The same way he used the six hundred dollars he stole to buy drugs. Skye took the drugs off him. She brought them to her cousin to flush because she wasn't strong enough to do it herself.

She had every reason to be angry with him. She also didn't call 911 when she found Brandon's body. She went straight to her mother the Sheriff. Her grandfather's first instinct was to help her get out of town. Mickey ended up bringing her to the police station instead.

Mickey was a law abiding citizen. Her daughter wasn't. It also didn't help when Brandon's family heard about the murder. They came rushing down to the Sheriff's office.

They heard that Skye was brought in and they wanted to speak to Boone. Not Mickey. Boone was leading the investigation. He and Cassidy also searched Brandon's apartment. They didn't find the knife. The one that Skye claimed she dropped almost instantly after pulling it out of Brandon. The knife disappeared. She has motive, means, and opportunity.

Brandon was stabbed in the back. He didn't fight his attacker. He was caught by surprise. By someone he trusted enough to turn his back towards them. Things didn't look good for Skye. It also didn't look good for Mickey because she would be attached to anything her daughter did.

Mickey got lucky in the sense that a new case came in. She was alerted about a kidnapping. These young men arrived to town to work on a farm. Possibly a weed farm. They were known as trimmigrants. There's this new crew in town and they drug people to force them to work on the farm.

They don't get paid. They can't leave. They were abused to stay in line. It was modern day slavery. There's a lot of activity in an area known as Deadwater of town. They don't like cops up there. They don't talk to cops down the mountain either. What helped Mickey was that her father was the patron saint of Edgewater's outlaws. He was a known drug dealer until weed became legal in their state. He's now gone legit. It's why his daughter even allowed him to move in with her. Wes wanted to be close to her again.

Wes heard about her going to Deadwater. He followed her up there. He came right in time. She brought Cassidy with her and Cass broke the one rule she set. She told her to not draw her gun no matter what. Cass broke that rule when the locals up there got too close.

Mickey was able to ease the tension. No one got shot. She found out who was dealing in the zombie drug and went to go talk to them. It was too late for that one. William Purdy had been murdered by the same man that abducted Ethan, Jay, and Seth.

Ethan got away by chewing through the yellow nylon cord used to tie them up. His friends were still at risk. Their abductors left on a trip and will be back by nightfall that day. Purdy had surveillance cameras. They identified the van used to abduct the teens as well as one of the men. It still wasn't enough to tell them where they were hiding. Ethan was very disoriented from being drugged. He remembered snowing and Santa Claus. It was July. Only there was a prescribed burn happening in two areas nearby.

Sharon showed Mickey where they were. Mickey split up the deputies into two teams to check both areas. Mickey was riding with Cassidy again and this time they brought along Sharon. They found the farm. It was a Christmas Tree farm converted into a drug farm. Ethan did see Santa.

He saw a Santa drawing. The house had been abandoned, but they found the men out in the woods with the two boys and were about to kill them when Mickey and Cass stopped them. They saved the boys. And they were reunited with their families.

They were forced to kill one of the kidnappers. The other two will face charges. Back at the station, Skye's situation looked horrible. Brandon recorded their conversation. He accused her of stealing his drugs just to use it. He threatened to tell her mother that she was using again if she didn't return it.

He recorded how angry Skye was with him. That along with a missing murder weapon made Skye look guilty of murder. Mickey finally let her ex-husband call a lawyer friend. Skye was allowed to leave thanks to having a lawyer only Brandon's troublemaking family now believes Skye killed Brandon.

They made a scene at the station. They waited outside of Mickey's house. They wanted to harm Skye and neither Mickey nor Wes can always watch her.

Summary: When a daring daylight robbery shakes the heart of Edgewater, Sheriff Mickey Fox must navigate rising tensions, personal entanglements and a town quick to judge.

The town was suspicious of Skye. Her story didn't make sense. The murder weapon was missing. Skye even quickly lawyered up. The whole town came to believe she killed Brandon and no one was angrier than the victims' brothers.

They claimed they wanted justice. What really they wanted revenge. They wanted to harm Skye. They've already begun stalking her. They thought and half the town thought that Mickey was covering up a murder that her daughter committed. The other half believed that Mickey shouldn't be Sheriff.

She had the job locked down two days ago. Right up until her daughter ruined things for her. Skye has been trouble for a few years now and she doesn't seem to be stopping. She keeps making stupid decisions. She should've never gotten involved with a drug dealer in the first place.

She did it for easy access to drugs. It also the added bonus of ticking off her mom. Mickey arrested Brandon. She had a future of arresting Brandon if he lived. He was pure trouble. It's why Mickey didn't like the relationship and tried to get her daughter to break it off.

Mickey wasn't dumb. She knew a girl fresh out of rehab hooks up with a drug dealer purely for drugs. It sure wasn't Brandon's sparkling personality. He was dumb enough to use his own supply. Now, his family was harassing Skye. They parked in front of her house all hours.

They threw a brick through her window. They followed her into the diner. Mickey was going to get a restraining order against Brandon's brothers. She also asked her dad to keep an eye on Skye while she went to work. There was an armored truck robbery.

The security guard was maced with blue spray paint. He tried to fire back and he hit a pedestrian. It's a good thing he only got three shots off. The woman he was the one that owned that car yard. Her name is Heather. Heather did everything right.

She was head cheerleader back in high school and got straight A's. She still seemed bitter that it wasn't enough to get her out of Edgewater. Mickey went to school with her. Mickey was known as the girl from Deadwater. The wrong side of town. She was still popular and did just as well at school.

Heather didn't see the man in white overalls that robbed the armored truck. Nor did she see the others in white overalls. The thief played his robbery smart. He put out an ad online saying he would pay a hundred dollars an hour in return for people painting an empty storefront. Five men answered the ad. They were all given white overalls and a mask. They looked identical in the gear. There was one other guy that was the first to arrive. He was the sixth man and he didn't speak to anyone.

The other five were eventually caught. They were questioned. They all put the blame on the sixth man. They never saw his face. They couldn't identify him. It was just the only one that never talked. The men all ran off after they heard gunshots.

The same with a known felon shopping in the nearby 7Eleven. He was detained albeit temporarily. None of them looked good for this. Boone was working this case with Mickey and he found something. He was alerted about a car that got towed around the robbery. And it was registered to Franklin Motors. Tom and Heather Franklin owned it.

From there, Boone started asking around. He found out that the car lot was underwater. Tom and Heather Franklin were looking to sell it. They haven't gotten any buyers. Boone went to Mickey with what he had. She came to believe like him that a Franklin committed the robbery. He thought it was Tom. She thought it was Heather. She thought maybe the security guard did hit his target that day. She also noticed back at the hospital that Heather was sick of her husband as well as this town. She couldn't wait to get away.

They brought back the towed car. They waited to see who got in it. It was Tom. Mickey followed her and Boone wanted to arrest her. Mickey pointed out that she was already believed to be dirty. She couldn't afford to go cowboy on Tom. They had to have probable cause. Tom drove the car into their garage. Boone and Mickey then changed tactics. They turned the couple against each other. They implied the other was leaving town with the money and their lover. They both bought it. Tom even showed them where the money was.

They were in on it together. Both later got arrested. The felon that was arrested for being in the 7Eleven was released and it turns out he was DEA. He doesn't have a record. He's not a felon. He was also dating Mickey. Now, Mickey got Cass to stop her father from hurting Brandon's brothers. He did it his way over just relying on the restraining order and he got the job done without breaking the law.

And then Boone found evidence to get a warrant for Mickey's place. He didn't know then what he would find later. It turns out that Skye bought the knife used to kill Brandon. She told her mother that she bought it as a gift. Here was her mother protecting her, but Skye was still holding onto secrets.

Summary: When Skye becomes the prime suspect in a murder case, Mickey is forced to step down amid the investigation and launch her own off-the-books search for the truth; Mickey risks everything to try and clear her daughter's name.

Skye tells the truth in installments. She's never told the full story right off the bat. Her mother should have realized that and she didn't because Skye was her blindspot. She always wants to believe her. Skye waited until the last possible moment to reveal she bought the knife. The murder weapon in her boyfriend's homicide. She told her mother right before their home was searched. Mickey may be the sheriff, but it was the District Attorney that signed off on a warrant and he had her department going through her house for any possible evidence.

Mickey tried to get out ahead of that receipt for the knife. She told Boone about it. They found it and the District Attorney was running with this like it was crucial evidence. It wasn't. The knife itself was still in fact missing. Not that evidence stopped the District Attorney from pressing charges. He was eyeing the position of Attorney General in the next election and this could be his make it or break it case. He arrested the sheriff's daughter. He wouldn't let the deputies from her department handle the case anymore. His office was taking over.

Even Boone found himself ousted. Cassidy was also on the outs with Travis. He talked to her like she was just another deputy because she was ultimately the cop that arrested his daughter. Travis takes things like that personally. He'd probably mind that his ex-wife was now investigating this case too. Mickey couldn't go into work so she chose to use her paid leave. She planned on investigating Brandon's murder herself and one of the first things she did was talk to Brandon's mother. His mother would know his best.

Brandon got mixed up with some bad people. He started keeping his mother at a distance the past year. Before that, he was a good kid with a normal childhood. She showed Mickey his car. Mickey quickly found the hidden compartment where Brandon hid his burner phone. The one he used for business. Mickey looked through the phone. She found Ricky's number. Ricky was Skye's cousin. Travis's nephew. Mickey called him over to her house and he came with his mom who was also curious what this was about.

When his mom learned that his cousin introduced him to her junkie boyfriend, she was livid. She couldn't believe that Skye would risk Ricky's sobriety. Ricky lost all of his privileges. He answered Mickey's questions. He didn't know who was calling Brandon. He just knew that Brandon owed the guy a lot of money and couldn't repay it. Ricky and his mom left after that. She was driving him straight back to rehab. She was also going to put a stop between him and Skye visiting each other if Skye was proving to be such a bad influence.

What Mickey didn't say was that Ricky's number was found on Brandon's work phone. Not his everyday phone. The work phone implied that Ricky was a customer of his and so it's a good thing he's going back to rehab. He clearly needs it. It also wasn't Skye's fault that he needed it. Mickey kept digging into the case. She talked to Travis. He stopped by the house. His concern was on Skye right now. He wanted her to look presentable at arraignment. He gathered her clothes and her favorite boots. He wanted her to feel safe.

Travis also told Mickey that they didn't get divorced because she was always the bad guy. They got divorced because she never asked for help with anything. Mickey decided to change that. She went to her boyfriend. The secret DEA Agent. She doesn't know his real name. Only that he was DEA. He was undercover and couldn't reveal anything about himself. He did run that phone number as a favor to her. It came back as unlisted. They couldn't force the cell company to reveal anything without a warrant. This was off the books investigation after all.

Mickey decided to keep it off the books. She broke into the evidence locker. She took a photo of the drugs she confiscated off of Brandon and she tracked down the dealer with Dawson's help. Boone saw her sneak in. He just pretended like he didn't. It came back as Adrian Smith's own brand. Smith was notoriously nasty. Mickey went over to his place and she decided to question him by herself. They got into a fight when Smith pulled a gun. It quickly turn into a fist fight with Smith winning until Dawson helped him.

Dawson broke cover to shoot Smith. He kept Mickey safe. He was going to get reassigned after this, but his unimpeachable record backed up Mickey and they found the real murder weapon. Smith was their killer. He's dead now. Mickey also has to deal with the fact that her father tried to confess to Brandon's murder. He even bought the duplicate knife from the same place where Skye bought Brandon's. It worked for all of five minutes until they checked the surveillance cameras at the store. Dawson's real name is Alec and now Mickey can't say she doesn't know him.

Skye also gave Brandon's lyric book to his mom to help.

Cass helped three people at the same time. She introduced an evicted father and son to a lonely elderly woman with a garage apartment. It turns out they could be the family that each other needs. And it helped Cass now that her relationship with Travis is on rocky ground.

Expecting Trouble

Season 1
Episode Number: 5
Season Episode: 5

Originally aired: Friday November 14, 2025

Guest Stars: Kevin Alejandro (Manny Perez), Susan Misner (Nora Boone), Caroline Rhea (Gina), Brian O'Neill (Mitchell Miller), David Patrick Kelly (Kurt), Emma Sofia Caymares (Val Fulton), Gianpaolo Venuta (Emmett), Monika Schurmann (Doctor), Craig Lauzon (Agent Chavez), Darnell Bartholomew (Deputy Kliff Owens), Michela Cannon (Jenna), Tyler Duke (Killer), Benjamin Liddell (Tourist Dad), Jason Gray (U.S. Marshal), Alexandra Palma (Molly)
Summary: A high-stakes transport mission puts Sheriff Mickey Fox and Deputy Boone on edge as they race against time to protect a vulnerable witness.

A protected witness was in danger. The US Marshalls were moving a protected witness out of Edgewater when their car blew up. Both Marshalls were nearly killed. Valerie Fulton was fine. She wasn't too near the blast and she still needed to make it to San Francisco to testify against Demir Boz.

Normally, they would just send out more Marshalls to escort Val only the closest office was miles away. She needed protection from Edgewater to there and so Mickey stepped up. She got Val's file.

She learned that Demir had killed Val's boyfriend right in front of her. It was miracle she was able to get away when she did.

It was believed that Demir had hired a hitman from the East Coast to take her out. It was going to be a long drive to the WitSec office. One has to forgive Val because she didn't think a sheriff and a deputy were enough to protect her or her baby. Val was pregnant.

Her family doesn't even know about the pregnancy. Val was cooped up and bored. She noticed the tension between Mickey and Boone. She wanted the tea. She was getting it during the drive when they noticed a car was following them.

Mickey managed to lose the car. Only it showed the hitman was smart. He knew his car would get stuck by trying to imitate Mickey on the back roads. He still managed to catch up to them later on. Val had needed a bathroom break. She was heavily pregnant. It happens and she couldn't exactly hold it in.

They made a pit stop. Val got to use the bathroom. They were coming out when Mickey saw things were off. She saw the cigarettes. The same cigarettes from the watch point at the safe house.

She got Val down before shots started to ring out. Their hitman tried to get her via a drive by shooting. He injure Val nor did he hurt anyone else. Val would've preferred it if they called backup.

Mickey and Boone told her there wouldn't be a point to it. Backup would take thirty minutes to reach them. They couldn't afford to sit that long with hitman breathing down their necks. Back at the Sheriff's office, things were unraveling. Mickey had left Cass in charge and Cass had promised to make it seem like Mickey never left. And then day turned out to be one from hell.

Someone set a fire in the women's bathroom at the station. Cass was running around putting out all sorts of fires before she had to call CalFire to deal with the actual one. There was one guy who claims he never got an incident report even though their files said they sent one to him two weeks ago.

His wife was the best suspect for starting that fire. She was very cagey. She also tried to sneak into their office. Cass was handling everything by herself. She didn't suspect this woman right away. Not when she had a Gen-z pot grower upset her laptop was being held at evidence.

Cass was dealing with someone recording her on their cell phones claiming police brutality. It made her miss the obvious things. Like that woman who didn't want her husband to get the incident report.

To the point she tried to break in and then start a fire when that didn't work. Cass only noticed this woman when she locked down the station. She tried to find the arsonist that way. The heat was off and everyone was taking off layers to deal with it. All except for Jenna. She wore a heavy hoodie that she refused to take off. Cass realized instantly her situation.

She arrested her right away. She did that as a means of getting her away from her husband. Jenna was experiencing domestic violence. She hid the incident report hoping she'd be allowed to go out and get it herself.

Her husband just hadn't trusted her. He went with her to the police station. He kept finding a ways to stop her from talking to the cops and she finally set that fire hoping to get arrested long enough to get away from her husband to ask for help. Cass should've noticed the signs right away.

Cass was once Jenna. She was so busy trying to be Mickey that she forgot what she brought to the job. Gina later told her that Mickey was the same way.

She was so busy trying to be Fred that she was a mess. It wasn't until she started being Mickey that she became a great cop. Mickey also realized how the hitman kept following them. Val had an illegal burner phone. She thought she was messaging her mother when she was messaging the hitman. Mickey and Boone lured the hitman to a motel via that phone. They captured him alive. And that's one more charge against Demir.

Boone also finally apologized for what he did. It took Val's nose self for him to realize that maybe he should have apologized rather than hand in his resignation. They were able to hand Val over to the Marshalls.

She'll be safe now. Mickey also returned home to approve of Cass's good day of work. She stopped a serial abuser. Now, Mickey didn't know her father had a heart event that he fixed with a cold shower because he doesn't have medical shower. She also didn't know that Skye held off on going back to college.

Mickey just asked her dad to stay on and Skye not to be in such a hurry to leave. They let her think that them staying was her idea. They then kept the rest a secret.

And Mickey tried to hire back Boone, but he set things in motion in Oakland and he was still keeping secrets because Mickey never knew that he was married.

Summary: When a body is discovered along the Eel River, Sheriff Mickey Fox and her team launch a homicide investigation that rattles the heart of Edgewater; Wes risks everything to uncover the truth about the murder.

Boone was married. He kept that to himself for the past two years. He rode with Mickey for two years and she never knew he was married and/or separated. Nora was a pediatric nurse. She stayed in Oakland. Even as Boone moved to Edgewater to continue his career. He was now going back to Oakland to be with her. Mickey didn't know the story behind them. She also wasn't the last one to know.

Boone hadn't shared with anyone that he was married. He kept that to himself. He was more private than Mickey was.

And they were throwing a goodbye party for him at Mickey's house because it's the best place to throw it.

Everyone else's place was too small. They just didn't tell Mickey about it until the day of the party. Mickey suddenly had to play host and on top of that she caught a murder case. She was investigating the murder of a beloved town staple.

His name was Bill Wambach. He was friends with everyone. He was even friends with Wes. Wes was devastated when he heard about Bill.

He drove straight to the scene and he yelled at the onlookers for taking photos of his corpse. He demanded that they show his friend some respect.

Bill was the man that showed Wes's daughters how to bait and clean their trout. He cleared his field when Skye's soccer team got flooded out of their practice area. He was Edgewater. He supposedly didn't have an enemy in the world. Only that wasn't true.

There were people that made an offer for his ranch. He turned it down. He refused to sell because he never wanted to leave Edgewater.

The offer was merely the start. It was followed by threatening calls in the middle of the night. Their shed burned down. Bill and his wife weren't alone in receiving these types of threats.

Some have had bullets left in their mailbox. They've all received offers followed by threats. They thought it was the cartel. Mickey didn't think that the cartel would be interested in places like their town.

It also doesn't help that no one reported these threats to the authorities. They tried to deal with it on their own. Wes hasn't been contacted so far and he said it was bound to happen soon.

He also mentioned that he'd be waiting for them if they tried to pull the same stunts as they did with everyone else.

Someone was buying up property from the ranches all the way to the illegal grows in Deadwater. It was a matter of time before they pushed everyone out. It's why Bill's wife wanted to take the offer. Bernice and Bill have been arguing about it a lot lately. Bernice couldn't wait to sell. She wanted to retire in style.

It was Bill that refused to move. Now, Bill was dead. He was shot four times in the back execution style. His wife didn't waste a minute before listing the property. She apparently had it in the works from before her husband died.

The sheriff office didn't know she listed the property secretly three weeks ago. They first pursued the cartel angle. There were a bunch of Bulgarians in town and they were buying up properties. Wes went to go speak with them. He was supposed to wear a wire.

Which he ditched the first chance he could. He knew those men were going to search him. He went in alone and he found out that the Bulgarians weren't interested in Bill's property. It wasn't the type of the land they wanted. And so all Wes got for his troubles was a beatdown.

The Bulgarians were a dead-end. They weren't behind the threats towards Bill and Bernice. It was when they ran out of that leads that Boone went back to the Bernice angle. He looked into it. He found out about her secretly putting the property up for sale.

He also thought it was a little fast that she now has openly on the market barely a day after her husband died. Mickey hadn't wanted to pursue the angle because Bernice was a family friend, but she had to after what Boone found. They went there and they found that someone had broken into the Wambachs' home.

Whoever it was had spray-painted a demand for them to sell. Bernice hid in the closet when the person broke in. She couldn't reach her phone and so she grabbed her husband's shotgun. She was sick of all the threatening messages. She just wanted peace.

She wanted to sell like Irv did. Irving McCall was the Wambachs' neighbor as well as friend. He was so close to Bill that Bill allowed him to use their aquifer whenever he needed it. Irv's property was dry like a bone. He needed water running from the Wambach property to grow anything on his own.

Mickey had asked her office to check out the water rights agreement. If Irv sold his property, he'd have to negotiate for the water rights. There was a written agreement in place and it was forged because Irv thought Bill's legal name was William.

It was actually Wilfred. Irv was caught in a lie so Mickey called her dad to find out if he had seen Irv and he was looking right at him because they were having lunch. Irv suspected something was off. He knocked out Wes and he went back to the riverbank where he dumped Bill's body.

Irv had taken Wes's gun after he knocked out. He eventually killed himself after he confessed to the murder. He was broke and so he killed a friend of forty years just so he could forge his signature. He just wasn't behind the threats. He was already with Wes when someone broke into Bernice's house.

He wasn't threatening the neighbors either. It also wasn't the Bulgarians because no way would they waste money to buy two track of land just hoping to buy something fertile. Someone was still threatening the town and Mickey had to keep investigating to find them.

Mickey even got the lowdown of Boone's marriage. He married his late partner's widow. The guy had a drinking problem that they both tried to help him with and nothing worked until he died. They got married as a reassurance. Not as some grand love story.

It was a friendship sort of love. It's also why Boone chose to stay in Edgewater rather than go back to Oakland. There was nothing in Oakland while Edgewater was where he had friends. Mickey hadn't held it against him that he came back and the two were soon gossiping about Cass breaking up with Travis.

Summary: While investigating a brutal assault at Edgewater High, Sheriff Mickey Fox uncovers a disturbing web of secrets, lies and abuse of power at the school.

Boone's marriage wasn't a marriage. They got married as friends. They were never in love. They might start developing feelings now that Nora was hanging out in Edgewater. She lives in Oakland. He lived in Edgewater. The marriage really was just friendship until they began spending more time together.

Nora came up initially to help Boone move back to Oakland and now that wasn't happening. He decided to stay. Only the door could be open on her deciding to stay with him if he plays it right.

The question was does he want to? They have history. She was once married to his best friend. The friend died, but that doesn't mean they can never pursue anything. It simply meant they needed time to heal.

They got that and now it's time to accept that their loved one is gone. Both of them being miserable wasn't going to bring him back. Boone needed a personal life. He hides in his work. Boone was back on the job tonight. He and Cassidy caught a divorcing couple. The husband tried stealing back the car that the judge rewarded his ex-wife.

It was a lot of yelling. There was a threat of arrest. It ultimately ended when the husband gave back the keys (both sets) to his now ex-wife. They had honeymooned in that car and things were currently acrimonious to say the least.

His ex said its what he deserved after he cheated on her. Mickey was off working an assault case. There was a teenage girl found behind the bleachers badly beaten up. She refused to say who did it. The same for everyone else at school until a video popped up online of the assault.

Seventeen year old Allison Duffy was badly beaten by her best friend, Darcey. What Mickey couldn't get was why Allison was covering it up. She found out about the video and it was enough to convict Darcey for battery.

The video mentioned a "he". They fought over a boy. Darcey dated the guy first. He's since moved onto Allison. The reason neither of them are naming this boy was because he wasn't a boy. This guy bought Allison a necklace. He bought Darcey a bracelet. They were both engraved with a poem of Shelley's. How many kids know Shelley's work?

How many can afford either pieces of jewelry that costs more six hundred dollars. High School kids couldn't afford that. Not in Edgewater. Mickey also remembered that Darcey said she has to see him everyday and she didn't want to get him in trouble. She could avoid a boy. She couldn't avoid a teacher. Mickey feared that a teacher was preying on these girls. The worst part was that Darcey's father thought it could be Mr. Diamond. He was Mickey's favorite teacher back in school. She idolized him because he made sure she graduated after getting knocked up.

Travis wasn't much help back then. He freaked out when he found out he was going to be a father. He was from a rich family and he knocked up a girl from the wrong side of the tracks in high school.

His parents demanded she'd terminate the pregnancy. When they went ahead with having Skye, his parents refused to talk to him for years. He was cut off and they worked things through. It helped that Travis had a new family with Mickey and Skye. Until Skye went to college. The two got divorced and they put aside their differences when Skye needed help.

They were friends. They just couldn't help bickering. It doesn't help that she was Sheriff and Travis was a defense lawyer. The school hired him to ensure their interests. They didn't want a predator there either. They also didn't want the whole school going down because of one guy. Darcey's father thought it was Mr. Diamond.

He was wrong. Mickey knew he was wrong and she felt bad about questioning him because he really was one of the good teachers that went the extra mile. He didn't do this.

The person that did was the guidance counselor or as the girls liked to call him, Gary. Gary wasn't that much older than them. He was young, handsome, and could afford to splurge on them.

Gary was also a predator. He targeted both girls who came from single parent households. The ones who needed the extra attention. Who also couldn't afford a college application. These girls have bright futures and they were about to throw it all way over a predator. Mickey convinced them to let her test his supposed loyalty to them. And she was right that he didn't actually about those girls.

They saw that. They pressed charges. The guidance counselor was facing time in jail. He might face more time if others come forward with a claim. One never knows how quickly he began his schtick at that high school.

Boone and Cass meanwhile got called back to the divorcing couple. This time the husband was threatening to set the car on fire. The deputies tried to stop him. It was the wife's words that set him off and so he set fire to the car. He ended up catching fire himself. The guy later died from the burns he suffered. It had just been Cass at his bedside.

His ex-wife told Boone that there was no such thing as complicated. You either love someone or you don't. It made Boone realize that he loves Nora. He finally pursued things tonight.

Mickey and Travis also forgave each other for a lot of things that happened in their pasts. Mickey even apologized to her favorite teacher. Which was fine because he told her that Travis went to prom without her.

And Skye was helping her grandpa go legit by filling out the forms for his weed growing business.

Summary: As cannabis growers in Edgewater scramble to pay their taxes in cash, a violent robbery leaves a man in critical condition and exposes the vulnerability of the legal cannabis trade; Mickey navigates a tense meal with her stepsister.

Boone finally took the step with Nora. They started a romantic relationship. They were enjoying a serene date by the lake when they overheard gunshots nearby and Boone grabbed his weapon to go check it out. There was a couple of legal weed growers that got robbed. They were moving their cash to pay their taxes.

The growers still needed to pay taxes like everyone else. It's just that in their case there was no bank willing to extend them credit. They therefore have to pay their taxes all in cash. It set off a rise in paying for armed security. It also set off a trend of robberies and that's what happened here.

They were heavily armed. They were still overwhelmed by suppressing fire. They left a bodyguard dead and another fighting for his life at the start of tonight. Mickey was quickly called to the scene.

She suspected that these people weren't done. Boone ended up agreeing with her because people don't leave the casino when they're up. They made off with two hundred grand in all cash. They were going to hit the other transports. It was tax season. There was going to be millions being moved all up and down the back roads.

The state legalized cannabis. The federal government hasn't yet. Still, there were people like the Millers that want to do things the right away. They didn't want to be outlaws like Jay Miller's father.

They played by the rules. They get a license to grow their supply. They pay their taxes or at least tried to do so before they got robbed but the government doesn't care. They want their money. They were threatening to pull the growing license if they didn't get it. Mickey's father heard about what happened. And he went to his daughter's office.

There was no using having a daughter as sheriff if he couldn't demand answers. There were a bunch of growers scared in the lobby of Mickey's station. They wanted to know if it was safe. They heard about the second robbery. There was a second convoy that got hit moving their tax money. Mickey's theory proved true.

These people were trying to do everything right. The second convoy didn't even hire bodyguards. They took off on the spur of the moment without telling anyone and still got hit. Mickey came up with another theory about why.

She thought maybe there were trackers under the cars. That way the thieves didn't need to be told about movements. They initially thought one of the bodyguards had betrayed his employers.

Only he hadn't. His brother being recently released from prison had nothing to do with it. He also hadn't fired his weapon because he froze. Its also why he washed out of the police academy. Mickey remembered he washed out on the weapons training. He froze then. He was still freezing now. He later admitted he actually dropped his gun during the robbery.

Here's another thing. He was still with the deputies when the second convoy got hit. He was cleared and they soon found the tracker in the first victims' car. It was hidden in the car seat.

The second set of victims also have young children. They all share the same babysitter. Her name is Grace. She frequently works the mountain. She was friends with these people. She claimed she could never hurt them. She simply made the mistake of dating the wrong guy. She started dating Daniel Weiss a few weeks ago.

She sometimes met up with him at the park with a few of the kids she babysits. The Sherrif asked her to prove she wasn't responsible. She had to help them arrest Danny and she did.

Unfortunately, they underestimated Grace. She did what they told her to and then she escaped. She planned everything. She put the trackers in the baby seats. It was all her idea from the start and Danny confessed when he was caught. Neither he nor his boys had the money they stole. Grace had the money. She tried fleeing with said money.

Not until she was on the road. It had looked like she was going to get away. She just didn't count on Mickey. Mickey put a tracker in Grace's bag because she knew for a fact that people without kids don't know anything about car seats. It takes experience to know better.

Everyone caught up with Grace before she could fully leave Edgewater. She was arrested. They got the money back and Wes passed the hat with some illegal growers to help the Millers with their medical bills. They were able to pay taxes. And will be able to keep their license thanks to Mickey and Wes.

Mickey also was forced to apologize to a few people. She apologized for favoring Cass. She even apologized to Sharon her sister because Sharon told her to date the deputy that was interested and Mickey said why don't you date him. Sharon was still freshly widowed. It hurt to be reminded she was now single. So, Mickey apologized and Sharon forgave.

Boone soon realized he had to lie to Nora about the job because she wasn't ready dating a deputy again.

And her father created somewhat of a cartel of both legal as well as illegal growers so that they protect each other even as they became outlaws — he broke his promise to his girls when doing so.

Summary: A father and son flee a secluded ranch run by one of Edgewater's most powerful families; Mickey investigates disturbing allegations of abuse and uncovers dangerous secrets, which leads to a tense standoff and confrontation.

Mickey was tough. She's handled a lot. She was even a sheriff. She just couldn't handle a squirrel. There were like rats with furrier tails and they freaked her out. She ended up calling Travis for help. He got rid of the squirrel. The two of them hugged to celebrate when things took a turn.

The hug became something more. They slept together. Skye was on a camping trip so there was no chance of confusing each other. All they did was confuse each other. Travis thought them sleeping together was more than it was and Mickey had to inform him otherwise.

They were divorced. They were staying divorced. Tonight was an one off. Mickey also had to go into work and she was playing hooky just to play house with her ex-husband.

She kicked him out. She tried to do it nicely. He didn't get the hint. She was then forced to be blunt. She told him what happened didn't change things and she soon went to work like nothing really did happen. Her deputies caught a kid who streamed his car chase that ultimately turned into a car crash. The guy ran off. He tried to hide in a princess castle playhouse. And Hank tore the thing up to drag him out.

Luckily, Cass was there. Cass promised to rebuild the playhouse. She and Hank were marching their suspect back to the car when Mickey showed up with Boone. They were closing down the road. They were maintaining the scene and two people snuck into the back of their car. Their names was Peters Sanders and his son, David.

They were running from the Barlows. The Barlows were some of the oldest families that came together to start a commune you could say in Edgewater. It was currently run by the patriarch Enoch Barlow.

Enoch wasn't a problem at first. Peter claimed he gave him purpose. He had nowhere to go and no money. Enoch giving him the job on the ranch changed his life. Peter stayed there. He married Enoch's daughter, Ruth.

They had David. Things were going well for a long time. They didn't change until Enoch's wife died and suddenly the patriarch became paranoid. He began to believe they were going to be targeted. He went from prepper to a doomsday cult pretty fast after his wife died. He now wakes up David at all hours of the time to train with a gun.

David is seven. He was a kid. He deserved a childhood. He shouldn't have to believe he has to be prepared to kill people for trespassing on their land. The men and boys were all armed.

Their property was lined by an electrified fence. There was no escaping the place for people who wanted to leave. They were free to sell their food at the food market every month. It was the only time they were allowed to leave the compound. They didn't even get to hold onto the money they made because Enoch controls it.

Peter was worried about his son. He knew growing up in that environment was toxic. He was worried that David would be indoctrinated like the other kids and so he ran to the police for help. It was a first for Mickey. Mickey had been warned about the Barlows by the previous sheriff. He advised to stay clear of them.

Now, she was getting involved. Ruth came to the station looking for her husband and son. She was concerned at first. She soon got angry once she realized that Peter ran away to safety with their son.

Ruth demanded the return of her son. She said Peter kidnapped him. So, Mickey was honest with her. She said that there was to be investigation of the conditions on the ranch and that she would make an initial assessment on whether or not David returned there.

She wasn't lying. She literally went to the ranch with Boone where she found some concerning things. There were teenagers with guns everywhere. The fence kept people in just as much kept people out. They had enough fertilizer to make a bomb to level the whole town.

The kids weren't being given an education. They were instead forced to listen to Enoch's tapes about people in uniforms couldn't be trusted. The government was out to get them and needed to be overthrown. It was asking for death because there wasn't enough of them to actually take on the government. They were full sovereign citizens.

Mickey ruled that David shouldn't be returned right away. It was going to go before a judge later on and the judge will rule who should get custody of David.

In the meantime, David was going to stay at a safehouse with his dad. Neither his mom nor his grandfather were going to be given his location because they have a temporary protective order. Mickey faced Enoch Barlow. He helped her once.

She went tubing on the river nearby. She had landed on his property with a twisted ankle and he helped her because he used to be a combat medic in the first Gulf War. It was because it was her now all grown up that Enoch said he would follow the process.

Enoch was a man of his word. He was all about following the rules until the IRS showed up. They arrested him with the help of the FBI and it was all a confirmation of Enoch's worst fears.

He essentially told Mickey that she reaps what she sowed as he was being arrested. The feds have been watching him for months. They were building a weapons case. They merely used the IRS for tax evasion because Enoch leaving the compound was the perfect opportunity for them. The agents didn't care about the blowback on Edgewater or Mickey's office.

Enoch's people eventually came for him and they shot him the whole building.

They even shot Travis who returned to the station to finally fight for his relationship with Mickey.
