Summary:	A strange noblewoman arrives in a remote mountain village, claiming one of five youths is the reincarnation of an ancient power who once destroyed the world — and will do so again, if she's not able to discover which of them it is. But they all have less time than they think.

In the series premiere the lives of four young people are forever changed when a prophecy begins to unfold.

The Wheel of Time is exactly that. The wheel spins and history comes and goes. The One Power turns the wheel. Some people can draw from this power from the "Source" and channel it to magic. The True Source is divided into male and female halves called saidin and saidar. But the Dark One "tainted" the saidar, causing men with the ability to channel to go insane. There was one man who was able to defeat the dark one. And a prophecy that that man would be reborn that states the Dragon will both save and destroy the world.

The episode starts with Moiraine Damodred narrating a brief prologue. She says the world is broken. Many years ago, men who were born with great power believed they could change darkness. When they failed, the seas boiled, mountains were swallowed up out and city's burned. The women of the Aes Sedai were left to pick up the pieces.

These women remember one thing above all else. the man who broke the breaking of the world. they named him dragon. The Dragon is reborn, but the Aes Sedai do not know if the Dragon is a man or a woman. But the Dragon is coming of age and they must find them before the dark does.

Moiraine and her warder, Lan Mondragoran watch Liandrin Guirale a Red Ajah lead a hunt down of men. One of the men touched the power of the Source. Liandrin believes the magic is meant for women and the men who touch it make it filthy. The Red Ajah use the power to 'gentle' the man. Moiraine and Lan head for the Two Rivers.

The town in the middle of the Two Rivers is peaceful and far from any dangers of the world. It's here we meet four young people, all around the age of 20. Egwene Al'Vere, Rand al'Thor, Perrin Aybara, and Mat Cauthon lead simple lives in this small town. Egwene enters the Women's Circle and receives her braid. It's like a rite of passage and one that all deem honorable. She must also survive the river as her mentor, Nynaeve al'Meara pushes Egwene in.

Rand, Perrin, and Mat go about their day working and drinking together. Rand works as a shepherd with his father Tam al'Thor. As they walk, they hear wolves in the distance. Tam says something is pushing them down the mountain. He also tells Rand that he used to run in the woods to look for berries. He always saved a basket to give to Egwene.

Egwene and Rand are in love but she is conflicted. Egwene's mentor and wisdom of the town, Nynaeve asked Egwene to be her apprentice to become a wisdom. To do so means Egwene could never marry or have children.

Perrin is married to Laila. They both work as at the forge as blacksmiths. There seems to be some kind of tension, but we never really find out what. Laila also has a braid but did not attend Egwene's ceremony or the celebration. That concerns Perrin.

Mat is a gambler and not a very good one. He tries his best to bring home money to buy food for his two younger sisters. His parents are drunks and Mat often has to care for his sisters. The boys often meet for a drink and talk about things happening in the world. Currently there is a war in the south.

Things change for the town the night Moiraine and Lan arrive. Moiraine can feel that the reborn Dragon is in that town but she doesn't know who it is. She watches Rand, Egwene, Perrin and Mat closely. That same night a Fade, servant of the Dark One approaches the town.

The next day, Moiraine watches the four young people. Mat tries to make a deal with a visiting merchant. Rand and Perrin give him money to care for his sisters. Rand is also avoiding Egwene, but she catches up with him. She tells him that she decided to be Nynaeve's apprentice.

Moiraine takes an interest in Nynaeve. She finds the wisdom cleaning the sacred pool and asks about her past. Nynaeve wasn't born in this town. The old wisdom found her after her parents died. Moiraine asks how old she is. Nynaeve is only 25, but that not the right age for the Dragon reborn. Nynaeve resents the Aes Sedai. She says the wisdom who raised her tried to join the Aes Sedai and was turned away for being too poor. Afterward, Nynaeve finds Egwene and they hear a screeching noise in the wind. At the same time, Lan finds dead livestock, placed in a strange pattern in the woods.

Later that night Rand and his father return home. The town is gathering to light lanterns for their lost. They believe the candles will call the spirits of their loved ones home. Rand asks how long it takes for a spirit to return, but no one knows. Tam says no matter what happens, the wheel keeps turning. And they try again to do better than the last time. Afterward, they have a feast with music and dancing.

Moiraine watches from the woods. Lan finds her and says a Fade is close with an army of trollocs. They have to leave. But it's too late, the dancing stops when the trollocs attack the town. People scatter, but the trollocs surround the place. Bodies start flying and fires are started around the town. Mat and others end up in a house together. He quickly notices that his parents are there without his sisters. He goes back outside to find them.

Egwene and Nynaeve run around the village trying to help people but the damage is too severe. Several people die. A trolloc also attacks Rand's home. He and his father hit the trolloc, but it's hard to kill. Tam pulls out a sword with a crane embossed on the hilt. He fights the trolloc with skills that surprise Rand. The trolloc pushes Tam to the wall and stabs him. Rand comes up behind the trolloc and kills it. Tam tells Rand to leave, but he won't. He wants to take Tam to Nynaeve.

Nynaeve and Egwene are attacked when Moiraine saves them with her magic. She uses her magic to fight off the trollocs that are nearby. Lan keeps them from attacking her while she channels. The women of the village also take up weapons to fight off the trolloc around town. Perrin and Laila are attacked in their shop. They team up to kill the trolloc with the many weapons in the shop. Mat finds his sisters and takes them out of the town to stay safe.

Nynaeve and Egwene are moving people out of harm's way when a trolloc grabs Nynaeve and runs away. Perrin and Laila kill the trolloc but in the heat of the battle, Perrin accidentally stabs Laila, killing her.

More trollocs show up and one is able to hit Moiraine in the shoulder with a knife. She sees how many are left and pulls all of her strength from the source to conjure up the power to fight them. Lan continues to protect her. Moiraine pulls stones from a nearby building, throws them at the trollocs nearby. After she throws the final stone, the building collapses.

Rand and Tam arrive in the village after the Trollocs are defeated. The town is in shambles. There are so many injured and so many dead. Egwene and Rand are happy to see each other, but sad that Nynaeve is gone.

Matt returns with his sisters. They find their parents alive and okay. He sees Perrin carrying Laila to lay her among the dead. Moiraine helps Tam, who's been poisoned by the trolloc. Moiraine is able to pull the poison out and Tam is okay.

Rand is skeptical about Moiraine's appearance. The day after she arrives they are attacked. Moiraine says they are looking for the four of them. She tells them that the Dark One is waking, but there is one person who can stand against him. The Dragon is reborn and it's one of them.

Mat thinks it's crazy and the others are skeptical. They hear the screams of the Fade close by. More trollocs are coming. Moiraine says they all have to leave with her or the trollocs will destroy their home and everyone in the town. The only safe place is the White Tower with the other Aes Sedai.

The four young people say goodbye to their friends and family and leave with Moiraine and Lan. Moiraine narrates as they ride away, saying, "The Wheel of Time turns; and Ages come and pass, leaving memories that become legend. Legend fades to myth, and even myth is long forgotten when the Age that gave it birth comes again. In one Age, called the Third Age by some, a wind rose in the mountains of mist. The wind was not the beginning. There are neither beginnings nor endings to the turning of the Wheel of Time. But it was a beginning."

Shadow's Waiting

Guest Stars:	Abdul Salis (Eamon Valda), Stuart Graham (Geofram Bornhald), Krrish Patel (Young Boy), Pearce Quigley (Master Hightower), Vilma Frantová (Yellow Aes Sedai)
Summary:	Moiraine and Lan lead the four villagers to safety, unsure which is the one from the prophecy. But the friends are equally unsure about their rescuers, especially once they see how far Moiraine is willing to go for her mission — and how far astray Lan is willing to lead them.

With all of this magic, there are those who believe no one should have that much power. Meet the White Cloaks. The White Cloaks are made up men who hunt the Aes Sedai and kill them. One of these men, The Questioner Eamon Valda gloats over his latest capture. He tells her that sometimes brutality is the only part of mercy. This man collects Aes Sedai rings as trophies.

The trollocs follow Moiraine and the others away from their village. They come to a river where the only way across is by ferry. The ferryman is waiting for his son, but Moiraine pays him a lot of gold to cross immediately. They barely get halfway across when the trollocs appear. Trollocs are afraid of deep water, so they won't attempt to cross. The Fade rides to the front of the group and screams in frustration.

The ferryman wants to go back across to save his family but if he does the trollocs will be able to cross the river. Lan cuts the ferry loose and Moiraine uses her magic to make a whirlpool. The Ferryman says the White Cloaks are right, the Aes Sedai are monsters. He tries to catch up to the ferry and climbs aboard but the whirlpool swallows the ferry, killing the ferryman.

The group keeps riding, losing the trollocs for the time being. They stop to rest. Moiraine uses what power she has to give the horses strength. It's obvious that she's weakened by it. Rand and Mat begin to question if they could be the dragon; it seems far fetched. They are also bothered that Moiraine let the ferryman die.

Later that night Moiraine wakes Egwene. She asks her to recite the three oaths of the Aes Sedai; speak no word that is not true; make no weapon with which one person may kill another; and never use the one power as a weapon except in the last extreme defense of her life or the life of her warder or another Aes Eedai. They are bound by the one power and cannot break these oaths. Egwene asks why the ferryman had to die for them to get away. Moiraine says if she allowed him to take his ferry and return, the trollocs would have killed him and taken the ferry to follow them.

Moiraine says the power inside Egwene is the smallest part of her strength. Her strength is her mind and how she uses it. She will need that in the battles to come. Egwene calls it listening to the wind. Moiraine says it's the same power for women all over the world. They are lucky enough to be able to touch it. Egwene could become an Aes Sedai. She uses her necklace to show Egwene her power. Egwene felt her power in the test. Moiraine says Egwene doesn't listen to the wind. The wind listens to Egwene.

Egewne finds Rand and lays down next to him. He tells her he wants to be alone, so she leaves. She joins Perrin by the fire as he's looking at a scratch on his leg. He asks if she thinks they will ever go home. She says no.

Rand wakes up and starts coughing. He pulls a dead bat out of his mouth and sees a figure watching him in the woods. When he wakes up the next morning, he finds dead bats nearby. Perrin, Mat and Egwene saw them too. Mat saw someone snapping the bats' necks. Perrin says there was a man with eyes like embers in his dream. Moiraine tells them to let her know when they have these dreams.

Rand gets frustrated and questions Moiraine's intentions. Moiraine is annoyed by him and tells him to do as he will. Egwene is annoyed with Rand too. She points out that Moiraine is using her power to keep them strong and it's making her weak. She would leave Rand behind too after how he's acting. Rand says she already left him. Mat agrees with both of them. He doesn't trust Moiraine, but she can protect them.

Lan keeps an eye out for trollocs and finds White Cloaks instead. Moiraine gives him her ring to hide and tells the others not to speak unless spoken to. She also tells them not to mention the White Tower or the Aes Sedai.

They meet Geofram Bornhald who asks about their journey. Moiraine says they are on their way to White Bridge to stay with her sister. He warns her about the Aes Sedai heading to the war in the South. She's not interested in the war or the witches. Geofram decides to let them go, but Eamon Valda jingles his rings to indicate he'd like to speak to the strangers.

Eamon speaks as he examines Moiraine. Lan answers and lets it be known that he doesn't like the way Eamon is touching Moiraine. When Eamon grabs Moiraine's shoulder, she winces. She tells him that she was injured when monsters attacked the last village they stayed in. She shows them the wound and Geofram recognizes the wound as a trolloc wound. He says only the Aes Sedai can heal it. They let Moiraine and her group leave. Eamon says he will remember their faces if they meet again. Eamon decides to take his questioners south as Geofram takes his company to the village to assess the trollac attack.

As they ride away, Egwene asks Moiraine why she lied about healing her wound and her sister. Moiraine didn't lie. She can't heal herself and all Aes Sedai are her sisters. Mat starts singing a song and the others join in. Moiraine recognizes the song is about Monetheren. Monetheren is the former name of the Two Rivers. Long ago, the city was attacked by trollocs. They asked for help from their neighbors but no one came. Everyone in the city died except for a few children. They returned to their homes and held the land. Moiraine says the old blood runs deep in the villagers.

They stop to rest and Lan says he hasn't seen any sign of trollocs. They are close to the shadowed city. Moiraine says it's too dangerous for them to go there. Lan changes the subject and says the questioner is the one killing the Aes Sedai. Moiraine saw the rings that he held. She will remember his face too.

Rand and Egwene gather wood. She wants to talk, but he's pouting about her decision to become a wisdom. She says she can't be a wisdom anymore because Nynaeve is dead. Now they are being chased by monsters and he won't even look at her. She wants him to look at her and not hate her. He says he could never hate her.

Perrin gathers water and hears howling in the distance. His leg is hurting so he sits down to look at the wound. A pack of wolves approach and he stands to face them. The rest of the pack comes up behind him. They stare at him for a minute before the leader walks up to Perrin and licks his leg. Afterward, the wolves run away.

Egwene asks Lan about Moiraine's condition. He says she needs sleep as do they. They all sleep by the fire until Egwene is woken up. She looks around and sees the Fade looking at them. He screams and the others wake up. Lan tells everyone to run. He picks up Moiraine and puts her on Perrin's horse. He tells them to ride to the fallen city of Shadar Logoth. The trollocs follow them but eventually stop at the entrance to the city.

The city is empty. There's not even a bird or a bug. They take Moiraine inside and let her rest. Egwene says the city's name sounds like the old tongue. Lan says it was once a great city. During the trolloc war, they built a wall around the city with no gate. This was the city that was supposed to help Monetheren. When survivors came for help, no one answered their calls. When they finally got through the wall, the city was empty. It is said the evil grew in the city's heart and consumed everything alive. He tells them to not to touch anything and to only eat the food they brought with them.

Rand and Egwene look around the city. Mat gives Perrin a knife that Laila made for him. They all rest but something wakes up Mat. He goes outside and the horses are bothered by something. Mat sees a shadow of a person and follows it.

Mat finds a dagger and picks it up. At the same time, darkness takes over one of the horses and kills it. The other horses run away. Moiraine wakes up and realizes where they are. She says Lan has killed them all. The darkness moves all around the young ones. They are separated and have to run. Perrin and Egwene run to the top of the wall and have to jump into the sea to escape the darkness. Mat and Rand run the other way and are able to find a tunnel that leads them to a beach on the other side.large tree and use it to float to the mainland.

Lan picks up Moiraine and rides out of the city. Once outside the city, he stops and sit Moiraine down to rest. Someone comes from behind and holds a sword at his neck. When he turns to face them, he sees Nynaeve looking at him. She demands that he take her to her friends or she will kill him.

Summary:	Moiraine and Lan find help in an unexpected — and unwanted — quarter, as the separated villagers try to find their way back to each other, or at least to refuge. But they all soon learn how far the Dark One's reach extends.

The night the trollocs invaded Nynaeve's village, they dragged her to the woods. She witnessed one of the trollocs kill an injured trolloc and eat it. Nynaeve got up and ran to the sacred pool. The trolloc followed her to the pool where Nynaeve tricked the trolloc and killed it.

She caught up to Moiraine and Lan. Lan tells her that the Dark One is after her friends. He left them behind to protect Moiraine He asks Nynaeve to help Moiraine. Lan tries to disarm Moiraine and he has to knock her out to stop her from killing him.

Mat and Rand walk through the mountains and find a township. They go to the inn and order food. While there they meet a gleeman who steals their money. They have to work for a room at the inn. The barmaid, Dayna gives the work, but Mat isn't into it.

Egwene and Perrin encounter a pack of wolves. While they rest they decide to go to the White Tower. Perrin knows Rand would go there becasue he thinks Egwene would go there too. The wolves chase them towards a set of tracks. The wolves watch as the duo tries to find who made the tracks.

Lan tied Nynaeve to a tree while he nurses Moiraine. He carefully gives Nynaeve a drink of water. Nynaeve will only help if Moiraine takes her to her friends. Or Moiraine will die. Lan releases her and Nynaeve gathers herbs while he watches her. He wants to know how she found them. Nynaeve doesn't answer. She mixes medicine and puts it on Moiraine's wound. She says the poison in Moiraine's system is like nothing she's seen before. Lan leaves, making Nynaeve nervous to be alone with Moiraine.

Egwene and Perrin come upon a foggy area. Perrin is afraid something bad will happen to Egwene and offers to go in first. Egwene knows this is about Laila and says it's not his fault.

They will go in together. They encounter a group of people who ask if they know the song. A young man steps forward to tell them the answer. Their leaders are Ila and Raen. They take Perrin and Egwene to their village to feed them and provide warmth.

They are the Tuatha'an, the Traveling people. The young man's name is Aram. He teases them saying they are the ones who steal people's gold and children. He asks if they've heard of the tinkers. Ila says their fires are open to all for as long as they need them.

Dayna tells Rand that he's cut enough wood. She takes him to a room where they can sleep. She assumes the two men are together, but Rand says he could do better if he wanted a man. He shares a drink with her to thank her.

Lan rides to a cliff and looks around. Nynaeve checks Moiraine's wound. Lan returns and says he found what he was looking for and asks if Moiraine can ride.Nynaeve says the medicine will work for a few hours but she's not sure beyond that. Moiraine opens her eyes for a moment.

Later that night, Mat goes the gates of the town where a dead man lies in a cage. The gleeman, who's name is Thom Merrilin won't let Mat distrub the body. He's there to bury it. Mat says he needs money to get home. He has a family to take care of. Thom allows him to take what he wants off the body but Mat has to help bury the corpse.

Rand and Dayna keep talking. She tries to kiss him and he pulls away from her. She thinks she tried too hard and reminded him of Egwene. Rand is scared that she knows who Egwene is. He tries to get his sword, but Dayna is closer. She's waiting for Mat because she needs him too. Rand turns and starts banging on the door.

Mat and Thom bury the corpse. Mat says now that they are acquaintances he asks for his money back. Thom gives back the purse. He tells Mat to take care before leaving.

Mat keeps pushing. Dayna says the door is too heavy and he can't break through. Rand keeps pushing and eventually breaks down the door. He runs to the bar and sees Mat. They both run from Dayna. She runs through a shortcut through town to catch up with the two.

Dayna sees the five prospective Dragons in her dreams. She wants to take Mat and Rand to the dark one so people will remember her name. Rand asks if she'd let the Dark One kill them. Dayna says the Dark One doesn't want to kill them. She says the Aes Sedai want to kill them. The dark one want them to save the world. The wheel keeps turning and people keep getting hurt. The dragon has the chance to change everything and break the wheel to make it stop. She called one of the eyeless and it's on it's way. They can't outrun a fade.

Thom throws a dagger at Dayna, killing her. He heard everything. They need to leave, but Rand says they won't go with him. He's going east and fast. They agree to go. Rand retrieves his sword. Daya's blood gushes out and darkness swims through it.

Lan takes Moraine and Nynaeve to meet up with the Aes Sadei. Liandrin greets them. She says Moiraine is too late. The Aes Sedai are transporting a man sitting in a cage who claims to be the Dragon Reborn.

Summary:	Moiraine struggles with uncertainty while Lan struggles with their new companion. Rand wonders about Mat. Egwene and Perrin take their first steps down a different path. An incredible new power is unleashed on the world.

That man's name is Logain Ablar and he's been busy. Logain built an army simply by showing mercy to his would be enemies and influencing them to join him. He also hears two voices in his head; one male, one female. He tells his followers that the last dragon broke the world, but he plans to bind it.

Liandrin took Moiraine, Lan and Nynaeve to their camp. They put Logain in a cave and bound him with a shield. Moiraine is healed by Green Ajah Kerene. Kerene tells Moiraine all about Logain. He's very powerful and has thousands following him. Moiraine thinks Logain is a False Dragon. If he is or not, Kerene, Liandrian and another Green Ajah Alanna are the only ones powerful enough to shield him. And even then, they have to work in pairs.

Kerene takes Moiraine to look at Logain. He can't hear them. Liandrin says they took him while he slept in his camp and chased his army away. Kerene set wards around their camp to detect anyone approaching. Logain is as mad as any man who channels, but Liandrin says he's worse. He claims to be the Dragon Reborn and marched on the Tower. She wants to carry out his punishment immediately. Kerene says the Amyrlin Seat will decide his fate. Moiraine offers to help shield Logain, taking Liandrin's place for the time being. As soon as her shield is in place, she feels something hit her. Kerene says that's only half of Logain's power.

Lan practices his sword skills with his friend Stephin. Stephin informs Lan that the Amyrlin Seat is not fond of Moiraine. She threatened to bring Moiraine and Lan home. Lan doesn't respond and is a little distracted to see Nynaeve nearby. Stephin sees his Aes Sedai Kerene leave the cave and follows her to her tent.

Stephin wants to talk about Moiraine. Apparently she's somewhat of an outcast because she doesn't say much about what she's thinking. Lan is the same way. Next they discuss the Red Sedai. Stephin says Liandrin is gaining popularity among the Sedai. Kerene says she wouldn't cross the Amyrlin Seat, but Stephin isn't so sure. The Amyrlin Seat isn't with them. Their conversation ends with Kerene promising to get some rest.

Egwene wakes up on the road with the Tuatha'an. Perrin says he doesn't trust them. Egwene says they will leave if they need to. Aram interrupts them to let them know they are headed to Tar Valon, and invites them to come along. Ila signals that it's time to leave and the caravan leaves.

Thom Merrilin leads Rand and Mat through the woods. Rand questions why they are following him considering the first time the met Thom, he stole their money. Mat says they settled that. He's more interested to know who the fifth prospective dragon is.

Thom leads the boys to barn. Mat's horse is acting funny and he doesn't know why. Mat is very irritable too. A man steps out of the woods with an arrow pointed at the three men. Rand talks him down and says they just wanted to rest in their barn. The man looks to his wife, who's standing behind everyone with a bow and arrow. She agrees to let them stay if they clean the barn.

Moiraine and Alanna sit with Logain and talk about the Last Battle. Alanna says she chose to be green because she thought it was heroic. Green is destined to defend the world in the Last Battle, but Alanna didn't think she would see the battle in her lifetime. Moiraine isn't so sure the Last Battle is near. They've encountered False Dragons before.

Alanna says Logain's power is strongest she's ever seen. She thinks this age is coming to an end. They can't allow the Dragon to break the world again. Alanna wonders if the Dragon is supposed to stand with them in the Last Battle before they let the Red gentle him. Logain pushes back on their shield, causing the Aes Sedai to refocus on him.

Nynaeve watches the Aes Sedai and their warders from a top of a hill. Liandrin approaches her to chat. Nynaeve isn't in the mood to chat so she decides to control the conversation. She ask starts by asking about Moiraine. Liandrin tells Nyaeve what she thinks of Moiraine. She says the color blue fits her well because blues are nothing more than little spies that exaggerate their own importance. Nynaeve thinks the Red Ajah are just the same, but Liandrin says they protect the world from people who would misuse the one power; including other Aes Sedai.

Lan interrupts their conversation and Liandrin leaves. She invites Nynaeve to join the Red for dinner. After she leaves, Nynaeve calls Liandrin a snake and says all Aes Sedai are just like her. Lan says she will find out soon enough. The Aes Sedai will get Logain to the White Tower as quickly as they can. And if Nynaeve's friends aren't there, he will get the resources they need to find them. He invites her to join the Warder fire as long as she promises not to shove anyone into the fire.

While they walk, Perrin and Egwene find out more about the Tuatha'an. The Tuatha'an don't carry weapons because the follow the way of the leaf. They have sworn off violence and all instruments of violence. If they are attacked, they run or endure whatever comes. And if they die, they die. Ila says a leaf, in its time to the dirt that nourishes a tree that in its time grows the leaf again. Nothing is ever lasting and the Wheel returns all. Ila asks Perrin if he ever picked up a weapon and if so, was his life better or worse for picking it up.

Mat get sick while cleaning the barn. He leaves the barn to rest and encounters their host's young daughter. She reminds him of his sisters and asks her name. She can't say because he's a stranger. The little girl gives Mat her doll to give to his sisters. She says the doll watches over her while everyone sleeps. Mat refuses but she says the doll always wanted to see the world.

Thom and Rand are worried about Mat. Thom says he has all of the signs of channeling. He is knowledge about how the One Power works. He tells Rand about his nephew. He was once a sweet boy. Then his attitude changed and horses were afraid of him. They knew for sure he could channel when he threw a rock with his mind. Thom says the Aes Sedai found his nephew and gentled him. They cut him off from the One Power. After they did that, his nephew was different, almost depressed. He ended up killing himself.

Thom says he will stay with them for as long as he can to keep them safe, but they have to keep Mat away from the Aes Sedai. Rand observes that Thom knows a lot about the Dragon for begin a gleeman. Thom says he uses a silly name to make himself sound less frightening. Nothing is more dangerous than a man who knows the past and how the Wheel of Time works.

Nynaeve joins the warders for dinner. She doesn't quite understand their relationship with the Aes Sedai. She sees the warders as servants. Stephin says they can't explain it. It's a closer bond than husband and wife or parent and child. He tells her that Aes Sedai means 'servants of all' in the old tongue. They serve the world and the warders are proud to serve them. And tired. Alanna comes to the fire to collect her warders. Lan leaves to tend to Moiraine.

Lan can tell that Moiraine is concerned about the False Dragon. Logain is 10 years older than the Dragon is supposed to be, but he is powerful. Lan says the signs all point to the kids from the Two Rivers. He doesn't think the Dark One is after Logain. Moiraine says she's not sure the Dark One knows who the Dragon is any better than they do. She's a little upset that they lost the kids. Lan takes the blame for losing them but Moiraine says his losses are her losses too.

Tuatha'an stop for the night. They eat, drink and dance. Egwene joins them while Perrin watches. As she is dancing, she notices that Perrin disappears but she keeps dancing with Aram. She asks him about a song that the Tuatha'an keep mentioning. He says in the last age his people supposedly knew a song that brought harmony to the world. It was lost in the breaking. If they find it again, people will live in peace. He doesn't really believe in the song though. Egwene asks if he's sure that he hasn't already found it. Aram looks around at his people as they dance. They are happy and peaceful.

Perrin left to help secure a wheel on one of the wagons. Ila watches him and thanks him for honoring them with his skills. They talk about the way of the leaf again. Ila says those who know violence know it too well. There's only one way to end violence and it will only happen if everyone, everywhere stops. It will take time, but Ila believes it's possible. Perrin says she won't see it happen in her life time, but Ila doesn't do this for herself or her people.

Ila tells him about her daughter, Aram's mother. One day she came across some bandits. She didn't have anything of value except her life. When Ila found her, she could tell that the bandits killed her for sport. Ila wanted to hunt down the men but she didn't. It was her revenge. Perrin doesn't understand. Ila says peace is the best revenge against violence and life is the best revenge against death. She couldn't protect her daughter in this turn of the wheel, but one day the Wheel of Time will turn out her daughter's soul. Ila wants to forge a better world, so when her daughter returns so she can enjoy her life.

Egwene sits with Aram thinking about Rand. Aram asks if she lost him, but she knows Rand is still alive. Aram tells her about their life. They get to leave the wagons when they turn 20 to live in the world for a while. Most of them come home. The leaf doesn't fight the wind. Sometimes the wind blows away from the tree. They continue to star gaze together.

Rand and Mat turn in for the night. Rand tells Mat that no matter what happens, he will be there for him. Mat pretends to be asleep but he hears Rand. Rand has a dream about his friends. Perrin is killing someone with his blacksmith hammer. Mat is walking around with blood in his hand. Rand tries calling out to them but neither of them can hear him. Egwene calls out to Rand and he runs to her. Just before he reaches Egwene, a Fade with glowing eyes grabs her.

Thom wakes up Rand from his nightmare. Mat is missing, so they go to the family's cabin. They find the family dead. Mat is in the cabin and pulls out the shadow sword. Something dark crawls inside his mouth before he raises his sword in the air. He looks at the darkness and says that he sees someone. A Fade emerges from the darkness.

Thom tells Rand to run. He throws a dagger at the Fade, but the Fade moves too fast. Thom takes out more dangers and fights off the Fade while Rand grabs Mat and runs. They stumble over the body of the little girl before grabbing their horses and riding away. Mat drops the doll on the way out.

The next morning, Kerene sits with Liandrin shielding Logain. She tells Liandrin that she knows about her latest campaign. Liandrin wants to gentle Logain now instead of waiting for to get to the White Tower. They still have miles to go and she's not sure that they can hold Logain. If he were to break out, the Reds would have to gentle him anyway. Kerene says the White Tower stood for 3000 years because they don't do anything expedient; they do what is right. Their law applies to the Aes Sedai as much as it applies to others.

Nynaeve follows Lan into the woods. He is praying and she apologizes for interrupting. Lan is okay with the interruption, saying he only prays when he needs to. Nynaeve joins him with a prayer of her own. Lan is surprised that she knows the prayer in the old tongue. Nynaeve says she doesn't even know what it means. Its the last thing her parents said to her before they died. Lan says the prayer is the last thing the king of Monetheren said to his queen. He said, "we shall go into the land so our children can always hold us and we'll never be alone."

Nynaeve warms up to Lan saying he's not what she though he was. She calls him a lap dog on two legs. Lan laughs and says she's exactly what he thought she was. He starts to answer, but they hear men yelling in the distance. Something is wrong. In the cave, Kerene can feel her wards come down. Logain's army has arrived.

Lan and Nynaeve run back to the capsite. The Warders all come out to fight. The Aes Sedai stand with them. They hear arrows and Alanna stops them with her magic. In the cave, Liandrin is confident the men can't get through seven sets of wards. Logain pushes back harder than ever before, sending Liandrin and Kerene into the air. His army gets through all of the wards. Alanna turns the arrows on them so the Aes Sedai and the warders can get away. They run into the woods and Logain's army follows.

Logain burns his cage down. Moiraine walks in to talk to him. She asks why she should believe he is the Dragon Reborn. He says he can hear the whispers of a thousand dragons when he channels. They teach him how to do things better this time. He says the wheel spits out spirits again and again because it wants them to learn. Moiraine doesn't think the Wheel wants anything; its people who want things. Logain asks what Moiraine wants. She wants him to know that the voices in his head are the whispers of madness. And his power is trickle compared to the real Dragon Reborn.

Kerene and Liandrin wake up and the three of them try to shield Logain once more. He throws daggers of darkness at them. Kerene throws her shield to protect Moiraine and Liandrin, but the third dagger hits her in the chest. Kerene dies and Stephin can feel it.

Alanna sends everyone to the cave, while she and her warders hold off the army. She pulls all of her power from the earth and hits Logain's men, killing most of them. The others arrive at the cave. Stephin rushes at Logain and tries to hit him with two axes. Logain pushes back at full power, sending parts of the ax flying into the air and at the Aes Sedai.

One of the pieces of the axe slices Lan's throat as it flies past him. Others are hit with pieces of the ax, but Lan is the only one fatally hurt. Nynaeve runs to Lan. She gets really upset by his death and screams. At the same time she touches the source with her power. A light takes over the entire cave. Nynaeve heals Lan's cut and bringing him back to life.

Logain is in awe of Nynaeve's power and lets his guard down. Liandrin yells for the Aes Sedai to link up with her. Everyone uses as much power as they can to raise Logain in the air. Liandrin gentles him, pulling the One Power out of him. When it's all over, Logain lays on the ground crying. The others look at Nynaeve in shock of her power.

Summary:	Perrin and Egwene run into a familiar face. Mat and Rand see strange ones. Moiraine and Lan mourn their loss.

The Aes Sedai lay their dead to rest, including their sister Kerene. A month later, they all arrive at the White Tower, with Logain. Moiraine asks Lan about Nynaeve, but the wisdom doesn't talk much. Lan says Nynaeve is worried about Stepin. It's not customary for a warder to out live their Aes Sedai. As for the four young people from the Twin Rivers, Moiraine says if they are at the White Tower or not, she will find them.

Rand and Mat are on the road after narrowly escaping a servant of the Dark One. Mat looks sick and he's very irritable. Rand recognizes the mountain they are approaching and as they get closer, he sees the White Tower. They find someplace to rest and wash up. Mat is looking really sick, but he says he's just tired. He can't get the image of the little girl out of his mind. Rand says the Fade killed that family at the farm, but Mat thinks he did. As for Thom, Mat is pretty sure he's dead too.

Moiraine and Lan take Nynaeve to a warder's room so she doesn't run into any of the Aes Sedai. Nynaeve really wants nothing to do with the Aes Sedai or their politics. Regardless, the sisters saw Nynaeve touch the One Power. As soon as news spread, they will want to make her a novice. Moiraine says the Tower's politics will eat her alive. Nynaeve thinks if she is as powerful as Moiraine thinks she is, then the Aes Sedai shouldn't underestimate her.

Lan leaves Moiraine to talk to Nynaeve. Moiraine says it's okay to be afraid. Touching the power makes you see how small you are compared to the One Power. Nynaeve will never be the same. Moiraine tells Nynaeve to stay in the room, not to speak to anyone and she will protect her. When she finds her friends, she will bring them to her.

The Tuatha'an continue to travel to the White Tower. Perrin sees their dogs feeding on dead carcasses and says it's hypocritical. Aram says it's in the law of nature to be violent. The Way of the Leaf is accepting that. Egwene catches up with Perrin, telling him they are close to the White Tower. They wonder if Mat and Rand are already there.

The caravan is stopped by Eamon Valda and the White Cloaks. Valda recognizes Perrin and Egwene. He demands that they go with him. Ila, Raen, and the entire caravan lock arms and stand in front of the cloaks to protect Egwene and Perrin. Aram leads Egwene and Perrin away from the caravan. Two White Cloaks catch up and knock out Aram. Perrin and Egwene hold each other as the riders circle them.

Rand explores in a room of books and meets Loial. Loial is a ogier, pronounced o-gear. Rand is startled by him because of his appearance and size. He even pulled his sword on Loial. Loial just laughs at him. He calls Rand something else. Rand says he's from the Twin Rivers so he's human, but Loial recognizes other traits in him.

Rand recognizes a book and gets sad thinking of the girl who used to read it. He tells Loial about the girl and they are interrupted by a commotion outside, Loial tells him that the Aes Sedai have come back from battle with a false dragon. Rand looks out the window and sees Mat roaming the streets. He says he has to go and Loial offers to go with him, but Loial also moves at a leisurely pace. Rand leaves and Loial laughs at how rushed humans are. He says they never fully prepare for what they are walking into.

Rand sees Mat sitting on a ledge. There are Aes Sedai everywhere and he rushes to sit with Mat. When the procession turns the corner, people start throwing food at the cage that Logain sits in. As he passes, Logain looks up at Mat and starts laughing. Mat is scared and asks Rand to never let him get like that. He doesn't care what the prophecy says, he doesn't want to be mad like that.

Stepin prepares for a ceremony with Lan and their friends Ihvon and Maksim. He tells them about the first time he met Kerene. He was a stupid, drunk kid looking for a fight and she just laughed at him. When she picked him to be her warder, he told her to reconsider. She just rolled her eyes at him. He carries her ring around his neck. Lan tries to console him, mentioning that he can look forward to serving another Aes Sedai. Stepin snaps at him saying it won't be easy to bond with another Aes Sedai.

Stepin leads the warders to a door. They stay behind the door while he goes through. He holds Kerene's ring in his hand before placing it in a giant bowl of fire. The ring immediately melts. Afterward, Lan goes to Moiraine. He kneels by her side with tears in his eyes.

The White Cloaks bathe Egwene, brush out her hair, and clean her nails. She is taken to Valda while he eats. The white cloaks tie her to a chair. Perrin is also brought in and tied up. Egwene tries to plead for their lives saying they are not who he thinks. Valda thinks Egwene is an Aes Sedai and Perrin is her warder. And if they aren't, there's still a reason the Light brought them before him … twice. Egwene insists that she cannot channel. Valda holds a knife to her throat and tells her to stop him. She can't but he's persistent. Valda enjoys killing Aes Sedai and collecting their rings. He goes as far as cutting Perrin's back so he bleeds. Perrin's eyes turn yellow when he does this.

Valda says humans are meant to be of this earth, to struggle and fight for everything humans have. The Creator never meant for humans to have access to so much power. He says the Aes Sedai make a mockery of human existence walking like gods amongst men. The idea that the One Power comes from anywhere but the dark is absurd. So Valda has been called to stamp it out woman, by woman. Valda tells Egwene to channel for him and he will let Perrin go but kill her. If she doesn't channel, he will kill Perrin and let her go. Valda leaves the tent to let them discuss who will die.

Stepin visits Nynaeve and asks her for tea to help him sleep. He's been drinking and says he starts to drift off and the pain goes away. That's all he has left of Kerene … the pain. He's not ready to let that go yet. Nynaeve says the pain will never go away. When Stephin exits, he leaves the door open and Nynaeve steps out of her room. In the hallway are several statues of warders.

Liandrin appears and tells Nynaeve a little bit about the statues. Nynaeve asks why Reds don't have warders. She assumes it's because the Reds hate men. Liandrin says women hold the One Power but the men still control much of the world. They are rarely kind to little girls who show a spark of being greater than men. Liandrin tells Nynaeve to enjoy her freedom and directs her to the garden.

Loial checks on Rand and lets him know that he has access to the White Tower grounds. He says he went there and found the woman Rand spoke of earlier. Nynaeve comes from behind Loial. He sees how sick Mat is and asks what happened. Mat is happy to see her. She asks to see his tongue and Mat lashes out at her. He quickly apologizes and she tells him to rest.

Rand thinks Mat can channel, but he hasn't seen it. He says Mat is losing himself though. He questions why they followed Moiraine and says he doesn't trust her. They all saw what Aes Sedai did to the False Dragon. Nynaeve says they don't need the Aes Sedai. She will heal Mat as much as she can. When Egwene and Perrin arrive, they will all leave together.

Nynaeve tells Rand about a time when Egwene was sick. She had a sickness that made her body bend backwards. The Wisdom didn't know what to do so she made a tea to help Egwene pass easier. Egwene refused the tea, so Nynaeve sat with her throughout the night. Egwene said she wasn't ready to die. The next morning, her fever broke and Egwene was okay. Nynaeve says Egwene is many things, but above all else, she's unbreakable.

Egwene tries to channel so Valda won't kill Perrin. Perrin tells her to stop and thinks he should be the one to die. He says it's what he deserves because he killed Laila. Perrin tells Egwene how Laila died. Egwene doesn't want him to die. Valda returns and neither of them say anything. He takes a knife walks toward Perrin, cutting his back again. Egwene says Laila's death was an accident. It may take his whole life to realize that but he will.

Wolves howl in the distance as Egwene reaches in deep and starts to channel. Valda is amused by her efforts to kill him with the small amount of power that she channeled. He walks towards her to kill her and Perrin snaps his ropes. Egwene sent part of her power to Perrin's ropes to burn them. Perrin's eyes turn yellow and he starts to growl. He walks to Valda, scaring the White Cloak and he drops his knife. Valda begs for the Light to protect him. Meanwhile Egwene uses her power to undo her ropes. She picks up the knife and stabs Valda in the back.

Perrin and Egwene run outside and it's chaos. A pack of wolves is killing the white Cloaks. Perrin and Egwene run toward the horses and a wolf jumps in front of them. The wolf barks at them, but Perrin knows the wolf won't hurt them. The wolf runs away, clearing the path to the horses.

Liandrin taunts Moiraine about Nynaeve. She says Nynaeve will become a novice and will need a mentor. Liandrin implies that she plans to recruit Nynaeve to become a Red. They both believe people should follow the rules. Moiraine laughs saying Nynaeve doesn't share Liandrin's contempt for men, so she should look for converts elsewhere.

Stepin makes an offering to ward off the forsaken. Lan checks in on him. Stepin says he's warding off the father of lies because he needs to see clearly. Lan offers to stay with Stepin until the morning.

Alanna plans to offer Stepin a place as her warder. His bond with Kerene was so strong though. Moiraine mentions that there is a way to release the bond. Alanna thinks she's talking about her bond with Lan. She says Moiraine and Lan have nothing to worry about.

Alanna tells Moiraine that Amyrlin Seat is returning to the White Tower and summons them to answer for Logain. She needs someone to blame. Moiraine isn't worried but Alanna says the Tower isn't like it was before she left. Moiraine is one of few sisters strong enough to challenge for the Amyrlin Seat. Liandrin is another and she's very influential. For someone who's barely in the Tower, Moiraine has two very powerful enemies. Alanna says one day Moiraine has to trust someone with her secrets.

Stepin makes tea for him and Lan that only Lan seems to be drinking. Stepin asks about Nynaeve, but there's not much to tell. He can see that she has fallen for Lan. Her first time touching the One Power was to save his life. Lan is aware, but thinks love is dangerous.

The next morning, Lan wakes up on Stepin's floor with a tea cup in his hand. Stepin is missing and he feels that something is wrong. Lan runs to find Stepin. He finds his friend sitting by the warder statues, dead. Stepin stabbed himself in the stomach and bled to death.

The warders hold Stepin's funeral. Lan is called forward to relief them of their grief. He kneels by Stephin's body. The others pound their chests. Lan looks at Moiraine and starts to cry. Lan beats his chest and screams in grief for his friend. Moiraine looks on with tears in her eyes as Lan lets out one last cry.

Summary:	Moiraine faces the consequences of her actions. Mat faces the darkness in himself. Egwene faces the most powerful woman in the world.

When we first meet Siuan Sanche, she is a young girl, going fishing with her father. She helps him untangle their fishing net by channeling the One Power. When they return, they find their house has been burned down. Siuan's father immediately sends her to the White Tower where she will be safe. She later becomes the Amyrlin Seat.

The Amyrlin Seat presides over the Aes Sedai sisters from the camp. They bring in Logain for his judgement first. Logain tries to intimidate the Amyrlin Seat with more attacks, but she knows he has no power. She sentences him to a life of servitude as an example to all other would-be false dragons. He begs her to kill him as they drag him away.

Next, the Amyrlin Seat addresses the sisters from the camp. She is upset that Logain wasn't given a fair trial. She questions Liandrin's decision to gentle Logain when she did. Alanna and Moiraine come to her defense, saying they would have all died with Kerene if Liandrin didn't act quickly. Regardless, the Amyrlin Seat says their laws weren't made to protect the Aes Sedai or keep them comfortable. They were made to protect people from the Aes Sedai. The Amyrlin Seat puts all the blame on Liandrin and she alone will be punished.

Liandrin makes a face and shifts the focus on Moiraine. She tells the Amyrlin Seat about Nynaeve and how powerful she is. She wonders how many more secrets Moiraine is hiding. Moiraine says she didn't know how powerful Nynaeve is. The Amyrlin Seat isn't saying anything and Liandrin accuses her of not being interested because she was once a Blue.

The Amyrlin Seat asks Moiraine about her travel and what her purpose is. Moiraine says she visited several places. Moiraine refuses to tell the Amyrlin Seat what her purpose is though. Even when the Amyrlin Seat tells her to kneel. The Amyrlin Seat accuses Moiraine of thinking she's better than everyone else because she was born noble. The White Tower is the Amyrlin Seat's world. She tells Moiraine to remember that when she bows and begs for mercy. The Amyrlin Seat says she will think on Moiraine's penance and make judgement the next day.

Alanna tells Moiraine to apologize to the Amyrlin Seat, but Moiraine doesn't think it would do any good. Liandrin approaches Moiraine to taunt her instead of thanking her for standing up for her. She warns Moiraine to complete her business because her reckoning is coming.

Lan and Loial Moiraine to Mat and Rand. Rand is apprehensive to talk to her. He tells her that Mat has been sick for about a month, but he hasn't channeled. Rand pulls his sword on Moiraine and Lan restrains him.

Mat realizes that Moiraine is there and tries to pull his shadow dagger on her. She restrains him with the One Power with one hand and hovers the dagger in the other hand. She recognizes the dagger and realizes that it from Shadar Logoth. Moiraine tells Lan and Rand to hold Mat down as she pulls the darkness out of Mat's mouth. The darkness travels up her arm, to her mouth, and then down to her other hand into the dagger. Lan secures the dagger as Mat begins to get some color back in his face.

Rand thanks Moiraine for helping Mat. Moiraine isn't sure if the darkness was making Mat sick. The darkness should have killed him sooner. She tells Rand to watch him. Mat and the Darkness were feeding off of each other. If he touches it again, he may be lost forever.

Nynaeve arrives with Lioal. Moiraine isn't happy that Nynaeve didn't tell her that Mat and Rand had arrived. She's even more upset that Nynaeve kept Mat's condition from her. Doing so could have killed Mat. Moiraine tells her to use her wisdom if she wants to be one.

Moiraine meets with another Blue sister, Maigan. Maigan says things are getting tense and the Amyrlin Seat needs their support. She plans to send a word of support for Moiraine. Maigan says she needs Moiraine in the tower permanently.

Moiraine gets a sign to find a yellow sister. The Yellow Sister is housing Egwene and Perrin. Egwene gives Moiraine the rings of her dead sisters. She says Valdar won't hurt the Aes Sedai again. Perrin is still hurt. Moiraine said she can heal his wounds, but Egwene says she can't heal his emotional wounds.

Egwene tells Moiraine about Perrin's eyes turning yellow and the wolves who attacked the White Cloaks. Moiraine tells Egwene to tell no one about Perrin. Right now, they both need to rest and heal. She will call for them the next day, but they can't say where they are going.

Later that night Moiraine gets a visit from Lan. She masked their bond and Lan is concerned because the tower isn't safe. She says she thought he needed a break. He can't protect her if he can't feel her. She asks him to protect their friends from the Two Rivers. Moiraine bids him goodnight and he orders her to be back before dawn. Lan says he will stand watch outside her room until she returns.

Moiraine channels the One Power to open a secret door in her room. The door leads to Siuan's room. Siuan scolds her for her display earlier that day. It puts their plans in danger. Siuan suggests that Moiraine is one of her favorites. She also suggests that she is lonely. Moiraine says they never have followed the rules. Siuan kisses Moiraine. They haven't seen each other in two years. Moiraine takes control of the situation and orders Siuan to get on her knees.

Later the two women talk about Moiraine's quest to find the Dragon. Moiraine found five young people who could possibly be the Dragon Reborn. But every culture has a story about the Dragon Reborn and how he or she will appear. It's hard to know which prophecy is right.

Moiraine wants to bring in other sisters, but Siuan says no. No one can know they are working together. Siuan says no matter who the dragon is, the prophecy says he or she will either defeat the Dark One or join him. Moiraine promises to kill the dragon before he or she joins the Dark One.

Siuan had a recurring dream about the Dark One at the Eye of the World. He's weak, barely clinging to his power but getting stronger everyday. They can destroy him if they strike now. She tells Moiraine to take all of her potential dragons. Moiraine reminds her that whoever stands between the dark one and the dragon will die. That's a risk they have to take.

Moiraine tells Siuan to sentence her to exile. Maigan ordered her to stay in the tower. Siuan is sad, thinking they'd have more time, but they always think that. Siuan says one day they will. In this life or the next.

The next morning, Lan takes Moiraine stroll through the halls of the White Tower when Liandrin stops them. She's been spying on Moiraine and knows about the young people from the Two Rivers. Liandrin threatens to tell the Amyrlin Seat about them. Moiraine says she knows about the man Liandrin meets secretly. She tells Liandrin to walk away or she will tell the Red sisters about that man.

Moiraine meets with Loial. She says the Wheel has presented them with a crisis and she needs his help. Afterward she takes Egwene to the Hall of the Tower. Lan walks in with Nynaeve, reuniting the wisdom with her apprentice. Moiraine takes them to the Amyrlin Seat.

When they go to the Amyrlin Seat's room, Nynaeve doesn't bow. Nynaeve wants to know what Siuan wants so she can leave. Siuan says she knows what it feels like to want something different than what this life gives you. They have been called to greatness. Their fate relies on Nynaeve and Egwene. Nynaeve says she wants no part of it. But the Wheel does not care what Nynaeve wants. The last battle is coming. What they want is meaningless. The only thing that matters is what they do. Egwene asks what they need to do

The time comes for Moiraine to face her judgment. Lan offers to wait outside of the Hall doors, but she tells him to make sure their friends are ready. When the Amyrlin Seat enters the Hall, Moiraine is kneeling in the middle of the Tower. Moiraine approaches the Amyrlin Seat and kisses her ring.

The Amyrlin sentences Moiraine to exile for being disobedient and intractable. She makes Moiraine swear fealty on a sacred oath rod. As Moiraine recites her oath, Siuan tries not to cry. Once it is done, the Amyrlin Seat instructs Moiraine to face her sisters and leave. As Moiraine walks past them, her sisters turn their backs on her. Alanna gives Moiraine a look of sadness before turning her back.

Moiraine leaves the city and rides to a structure that looks like a doorway. Loial arrives with Perrin and Egwene. Lan brings Nynaeve, Rand and Mat. The friends are reunited and happy to see each other. Moiraine and Lan say goodbye to their horses before letting all of the horses go. Loial says they will not survive the Ways.

Nynaeve told the others what the Amyrlin Seat said to her and Egwene. She says they won't follow Moiraine until they get some answers though. They all heard of the Ways, but aren't sure what it is. Loial says it's an ancient pathway out of time and space. And it's the fastest road to the Eye of the World. The Dark One is imprisoned at the Eye of the World. Of the five people from Twin Rivers, one of them will finish what they started in a previous life.

Moiraine didn't trust them when they left the Two Rivers. Now, if they turn back and don't try to stop the Dark One, the world will turn to darkness. When a new age comes, it will be built on the ashes of the people they love. Egwene asks what happens to those who are not the dragon. Moiraine hesitates and then says they don't know for certain until that moment comes.

Moiraine opens the door to the Ways. The path is dark so they need torches to see where they are going. Moiraine says there's no turning back now. What happens won't be under their control. The Wheel weaves as the Wheel wills. Everyone but Mat enters the doorway. As the door closes, the others yell for Mat to join them, but he won't move.

Summary:	Moiraine and her charges are diverted from their path by an unexpected encounter. This diversion, though, reveals many things — Moiraine's true goal, Lan's past, the fractures that have grown in the group, and the identity of the Dragon Reborn.

The episode starts out with the birth of a child, but it's not an easy birth. The mother is literally fighting in a battle while in labor. She easily fights off several soldiers, but one stabs her in her side. After she kills them all, she sits by a rock to give birth, only to find another sword in her face.

After the door to the Ways close, Rand and Nynaeve want to go back for Mat. Moiraine won't do it for two reasons. One, they can't channel the One Power in the Ways or they will call forth Machin Shin. And two, Mat made his choice. Nynaeve says they will go back and find him when it's over. Lan wonders if Mat is the Dragon Reborn. Moiraine says if he is, she doesn't want him anywhere near the Dark One. The darkness within Mat is too dangerous.

Loial knows the history of the Ways. Perrin finds a guiding stone, but someone tried to destroy it. There's enough writing for Loial to read it, but it will take some time. The others rest while he studies the stone. Lan informs Moiraine that something is following them.

Later that night, while everyone rests, Egwene hears someone whistle. She wakes up Rand and a flash of light reveals a trolloc in the Ways. Egwene puts up her hands in defense and accidentally channels the One Power top push the trolloc off the edge. Loial says she summoned Machin Shin, the black wind. Now that the One Power has been used, Machin Shin will speak to whoever is there. Moiraine tells them not to listen.

The Fal Dara is the closest gate. Loial leads them there, but they all start to hear Machin Shin speaking. Something attacks them, causing their torches to go out. They hear someone tell them that they are not who they think they are and that they are not as strong as they think. Nynaeve channels the One Power to ward off the darkness attacking them. Moiraine steps forward and opens a door to Fal Dara.

When they safely cross out of the Ways, Moiraine can see that they are shook up by what Machin Shin said to them. She tells them to put it out of their minds. The group walks to the city of Fal Dara. They are greeted by royal guards and address Lan as Dai Shan.

They take the group to Lord Agelwar. He thinks his sister called for the Aes Sedai, but Moiraine tells him the Dark One is moving his army through the Ways. She suggests Lord Agelwar to wall up the Fal Daran Way gate to protect his lands. Lord Agelwar invites Moiraine and her group to stay as long as they wish. Meanwhile, someone else walks through the Way gate.

Lord Agelwar's sister, Lady Amalisa leads Moiraine to her chambers. Amalisa trained with the Aes Sedai, but wasn't strong enough to become one of them. Amalisa wonders why she was in the Ways. Moiraine asks her to send a message to the White Tower. She wants them to find Mat. She instructs Amalisa to give the message specifically to the Red Ajah.

As they walk around Fal Dara, Rand is bothered by what Machin Shin said to him. Egwene tells him to forget about it. Perrin sees the traveller walk past him and recognizes him as Padan Fain, a peddler that was in the Twin Rivers when the trullocs attacked. Nynaeve tells him that Padan was killed by the trullocs, so Perrin lets it go.

They all go to a local tavern, the three friends talk while Nynaeve watches Moiraine closely. Moiraine is talking to a bartender known as Min Farshaw. Min sees visions when she looks at people. She sees Perrin's fangs and he has blood dripping from his mouth. She also sees Rand holding a baby. And she sees a white flame and a ring of gold around Nynaeve and Egwene. Min says all four are connected. And for Moiraine, Min sees the Amyrlin Seat dressed in full regalia. She tells Moiraine that the Amrylin Seat will be her downfall.

Moiraine comes clean about what to expect at the Eye of the World. She tried to figure out who the Dragon Reborn is before they made it there. Now she has to take all four, knowing three of them will die. Perrin suggests that Mat could be the Dragon Reborn. Nynaeve says Moiraine can't drag them to the Eye of the World against their will. Moiraine says she can't escape the fate of the Wheel. Moiraine tells them to decide and leaves with Lan.

The four friends discuss their options and it turns into an argument fast. Egwene believes they are protecting their home, but Nynaeve says she's being naive. The only reason Egwene believes the prophecy is because Moiraine told her about it. She said one of them is the Dragon Reborn. And Moiraine can't lie. But she can mislead. Rand and Nyneave don't trust anything Moiraine has to say.

Egwene says she isn't doing this because Moiraine said it. She wants to go to the Eye of the world because if there's a chance that Moiraine is right, it's worth it. Nynaeve is a wisdom. Egwene tells her to stop letting her pride keep her from doing what's right. Rand doesn't want to lose anyone else.

Perrin still wonders if none of them are the dragon. Egwene thinks it's absurd that Mat could be the Dragon Reborn. Rand accuses her of never thinking much of Mat. Egwene reminds him that Mat left them. Rand turns things around on Egwene because she left him. Perrin defends Egwene and the two men start arguing. Nynaeve yells at them to stop fighting over Egwene. She gets an awkward reaction from everyone. Rand thinks that Perrin is in love with Egwene. Perrin insists he only loved his wife. Nynaeve tries to apologize as Rand leaves the room.

Moiraine stands at the balcony as Lan reassures her that the four friends will join her. He can sense she's worried about more, but she doesn't want to talk about it. She feels like she took too much from Lan. He says before he met her, he had nothing to live or die for. She sends him into the city to say his goodbyes. Before he leaves, Moiraine says she likes Nynaeve.

Lan walks alone in the village and Nynaeve follows him. He stops a small home and is warmly greeted by everyone inside. Nynaeve watches from outside and smiles. She decides to leave but runs into Lan. He invites her in and introduces her to everyone. She sits down to eat while Lan talks to a young girl. An older man thanks her for keeping Lan safe and bringing him home. Later, Lan walks Nynaeve to her room and quickly says goodnight. He retreats to his room and she follows him. They finally give into their attraction to one another.

Rand is blowing off at a shooting range. Egwene finds him and wants him to apologize for saying she didn't care about Mat. Rand says he's scared that he will lose her. She promises that he won't. She believes they will all return. Rand tells her to go to the White Tower and become an Aes Sedai. And he will be her warder.

Nynaeve gets dressed and prepares to leave. First she asks Lan why the old man called him Dai Shan. Lan says it's a title for future kings of Malkier. The old man was one of his father's arms men. The night the blight destroyed his kingdom, the old man smuggled Lan out of Malkier and took him to Fal Dara. Lan is the only surviving member of the royal family from Malkier.

Nynaeve says she understands why Lan bonded hinself to Moiraine. He is a king without a kingdom and a boy without a family. Now he belongs to Moiraine. Lan says Moiraine doesn't own him. He compares it to how the kids from the Two Rivers own her. A wisdom never weds. Nynaeve starts to cry and Lan asks her to stay with him.

Rand lies awake with Egwene next to him. he thinks a lot about the night the trullocs attacked their home. His father Tam al'Thor was hurt badley. he started talking about finding a baby and taking it to safety. Rand goes back to the shooting range and thinks about his journey. In the Ways, it was Rand who channeled the One Power when he swung his arms around Egwene to protect her from the trulloc. And then Machin Sin told him that he is the Dragon Reborn.

Rand goes to see Min. He asks her to tell him that he's not the Dragon Reborn. She says it, but doesn't need it. Min isn't sure Rand is ready hear what she sees. She says the first vision she had was a man in an armor carrying Rand's blade. That man was Tam al'Thor. She saw Rand's mother give birth to him and the mother died. Tam took the child to the Two Rivers to raise him. She says the baby was something impossible. Rand asks what she sees now. She sees rainbows, carnivals, and three beautiful women. He asks if she sees the Eye of the world and if he makes it back. She gets up and walks away.

The next morning, Egwene, Perrin, and Nynaeve meet up in the wisdom's room. They question why Rand isn't there. Lan arrives to let them know that Mereine' is gone. Earlier, Rand went to Moiraine's room to let her know that he is the Dragon Reborn. By the time the others realize it, Rand and Moiraine are already at the blight.

Summary:	For twenty years, Moiraine has dreamed and worked towards this moment. But she can't stop the Dragon Reborn from seeing the appeal of the Dark.

3,000 years ago — Lews Therin Telamon, the Dragon Reborn, and Latra Posae Decume, the Tamrilyn seat as it was once called, argued about trying to cage the Dark One using both sides of the One Power together. Latra warned that the Dark One could touch the One Power and corrupt it for everyone, so she and the female Aes Sedai refused to help.

The present — Rand and Moiraine navigate through the Blight. Back at Fal Dara, Perrin tries to reason with a heartsick Egwene, who wants to go after Rand and Moiraine. He consoles her, and they agree not to follow them for fear of dying while they look.

Rand and Moiraine get closer to the Dark One's prison and pass the seven towers of Malkier, Lan's homeland that was taken by the Blight. Meanwhile, Lan broods about Moiraine leaving without him and Nynaeve tells him she can show him how to track her.

Astounded that Nynaeve would let him follow Moiraine without her, Lan as good as professes his love for her before taking off to find them. In Rand's dreams, the Dark One murders Moiraine and admits he's surprised Rand is the Dragon Reborn, but that he will fail regardless.

The Dark One taunts Rand about his father and about his heron-marked sword. Rand only wakes when he stabs himself in the stomach, and he tells Moiraine he doesn't believe anything the Dark One told him, but that they need a plan.

Moiraine has brought a Sa'angreal, a figure made of the One Power that will increase Rands channeling by one hundred percent. With it, he should be able to lock the Dark One back in his prison for another 3,000 years.

In Fal Dara, Min sees Nynaeve and soldiers in the Inn dying from a horrible poison. Before she can share the vision, a siren sounds in Fal Dara as Trollocs, Fades, and other Darkfriends head through the Blight towards the city.

At the Eye of the World, Rand realizes Moiraine is sacrificing herself by coming with him to defeat the Dark One but he can't convince her to stay behind. In the Blight, Lan spots the Malkier towers as he races to reach Rand and Moiraine.

Lady Amalisa and Lord Agelmar prepare to defend Fal Dara, and Lady Amalisa realizes Tamlins Gap and Fal Dara could fall against the Dark One's forces. They hope to hold long enough for their messengers to warn other cities and the White Tower.

Finally, Rand and Moiraine find the entrance of Shayol Ghul, and Rand has is faced with false memories of a life with Egwene and their child. The Dark One appears and uses Saidan to cut Moiraine off from the One Power, as Rand is trapped in his own mind.

Lord Agelmar and the male Shinerians ride out against the Dark One's forces while Lady Amalisa gathers all the women and children of Shinear to protect Fal Dara. Nynaeve and Egwene join Lady Amalisa and other women who can channel to stand at the front lines.

In his false dream, Rand is convinced his life with Egwene is real until the Dark One appears and tries to convince Rand to join him, learn from him. In the Dark One's prison, Moiraine holds a knife to his neck, and tells the Dark One she'll kill him if he doesn't choose the light.

As the Trollocs stab Lord Agelmar and make their way past the fortress, Padan Fain leads Fades inside the Palace of Fal Dara. Simultaneously, Lady Amalisa's men finish digging up the Horn of Valere, a fabled relic said to call back warriors of the past to fight for whoever blows it.

With Trollocs headed full speed their way, Lady Amalisa channels the One Power into Nynaeve, Egwene, and two other women. Connected, they channel enough power to blast through the Trollocs, stopping them. But Lady Amalisa cannot stop the power once it's started, and she and two other women burn out underneath so much channeling.

Still in his dream, the Dark One teaches Rand how to use Saidan, the male half of the One Power. Rand seems to be helping the Dark One, but at the last moment, he channels into the Sa'angreal and traps the Dark One back in his prison.

Perrin, who heard a noise and went to investigate, returns to the room with the horn and finds Padan Fain and Fades killing the Shineran soldiers and murdering Loial. Fain tells Perrin he came to the Two Rivers every year at Bel Tine to watch the five villagers for the Dark One.

At Shayol Gul, Rand tells Moiraine he won't go back to Fal Dara after feeling the madness in Saidan, that he can't put the people he loves at risk. He asks Moiraine to tell the others he died at Shayol Gul and leaves her behind.

Padan tells Perrin all five of them have a part to play and leaves Fal Dara with the Horn. When Lan finds Moiraine, she tells him the Dark One cut her off from the One Power. Egwene cries over a burned-out Nynaeve and heals her with the One Power almost purely by accident.

Alone, Rand looks down at the Blight before heading deeper into it and to the lands beyond. Meanwhile, Moiraine tells Lan that this battle wasn't the last, but the first.

On the Far Western Shore of the continent, a young girl hums a tune while digging in the sand. Soon, intricately carved ships appear on the horizon wielded by women who can use the One Power. Using it, the invaders create a tsunami wave that approaches the beach.

Summary:	Moiraine, Lan, Nynaeve, Egwene, Perrin, and Mat find themselves more alone than ever.

The episode picks up six months after season one ended. The bond between Moirane and Lan Mandragoran is strained while Egwene and Nynaeve struggle with learning the ways of the Aes Sedai.

After the first battle between Rand al'Thor and Ismael, the Dark One Ismael retreated to his people and told them about Rand. Padan Fain is among the Dark One's associates. The Dark One knows Rand is in fact the Dragon reborn, but Rand isn't powerful enough to be a threat. He thinks he may be able to use Rand for his purposes though.

Moraine was exiled from Tar Valon, a city that houses the White Tower of the Aes Sedai. She and Lan are staying with friends in the countryside. Moraine keeps to herself and rarely confides in Lan. Their hosts are Aes Sedai and their warder, who try to smooth things over between Moraine and Lan. Moraine asked Lan to leave her, but he won't do it.

Moraine receives a visitor who wants to sell her special rocks that are supposed to be indestructible. A man named Bayle Domon sells her a heart stone, supposedly created by the One Power. And with it is a poem. Moraine is only interested in the poem. Bayle also tells her that there are men following him. She asks what they look like and he describes the Fade. Moraine tells him to get back to his ship quickly and sail away. After Bayle leaves, Lan tries to inquire about who he is, but Moraine doesn't want to say. Lan gets frustrated with Moraine and shows his anger for the first time.

Egwene and Nynaeve are living in the White Tower at Tar Valon, in service of the Aes Sedai. It's part of their novice training. Nynaeve really doesn't want to be there, but stays for Egwene.

She won't channel the One Power, no matter how much the Aes Sedai try to push her. Alanna is her teacher and tries to convince Nynaeve that she is more powerful that she knows. Alanna tells her that she has to stop being afraid of what she is and embrace her power. Nynaeve resists the Aes Sedai no matter what they say to her. She would rather spar with the warders.

Alanna reports to the Mistress of Novices Sheriam Bayanar. She speaks of Nynaeve's stubborness. The sisters know that Nynaeve is the strongest novice that they've seen in a thousand years. Liandrin impresses upon the sister that the world is falling apart. Nynaeve may need a new teacher... like Liandrin, but she is forbidden to teach. She asks Sheriam if she can jus talk to Nynaeve. Alanna thinks it's a bad idea, but Sheriam agrees to Liandrin's request.

he warders try to get through to Nynaeve as well. They ask why she came to the White Tower. She doesn't answer, but knows it's something she needs to find the answer too. she goes to talk to Egwene, who is with Alanna. Egwene is searching for some kind of approval from Alanna. Alanna doesn't give her much advice and Egwene decides to leave. Before she leaves, Alanna tells Egwene to relax and stop trying to be perfect.

Liandrian finds Nynaeve in the classroom and taunts her a little about her powers. She knows Nyanaeve won't channel so she pushes her with the One Power. Liandrin talks about warders and how they are useless. She mentions Lan's name and that makes Nynaeve angry. Nynaeve pushes back, but Liandrin is strong. She shields Nynaeve from the one power, causing her some pain. Liandrin says there is more than one way to become an Aes Sedai. She has to learn about power. Liandrin wants to see Nynaeve become so powerful that no one can take it away from her.

Perrin left with the Shienaran soldiers to hunt for the Horn of Velere and Paden Fain. They find a man named Elyas Machera who shows them a wreck. There are several dead laying around. With his wolf eyes, Perrin can see a little girl run away from the wreck. Elyas saw it too. They also find the body of a Shienaran soldier who they assume is a traitor. The leader of the company, Ingtar Shinowa, decides to bury the bodies and then camp there for the night.

Perrin asks Ingtar why he buries the traitor. He reminds Ingtar that the trailer opened the gates at Fal Dara and hundreds of Shienaran died. Ingtar says he could be angry, but it won't bring his men back. Perrin tells Ingtar about Paden Fain. Fain used to visit Two Rivers often. The village liked him. They fed him, shared ale with him and gave him a place to sleep. He led the Trollocs to the Two Rivers. There's a rage inside of Perrin. The closer they get to fiding Fain, the more it grows. He's afraid when he sees Fain, Perrin won't be able to stop himself from killing him. Ingtar suggest Fain had a reason for doing what he did. Perrin may not liek the answer, but it might be worth it to ask.

t's Bel Tine. Nynaeve forgot, but Egwren reminded her. Nynaeve finds Egwene and reads a letter from Perrin. The letter updates the girls on his travels. He say she thinks of his friends often and hopes next year they can celebrate Bel Tine together. Elsewhere in the tower, Liandrin reads the same letter to Mat Cauthon. She leaves out the part of the letter that Perrin says he hopes Mat can join them next year during Bel Tine. He says he's not a threat to them. He hasn't touched the dagger in six months. She wishes him a Merry Bel Tine and leaves.

One of the traditions of Bel Tine is for people to put lanterns out. Perrin puts on a a nearby river. He put his ring on the small boat, but changes his mind and wears it. Egwene cries for Rand, believing he is dead. Nynaeve puts out a lantern for Rand. Mat has been digging at the stones in his cell. He continues to do that after Liandrin leaves. And somewhere far away, Rand puts out a lantern of his own.

Lan prepares food for Moraine, knowing she won't join him for dinner. Their hosts tell Lan not to take Moraine's silence personally. He's been trying to hard to make her talk. His host suggests that Lan try listening instead. Lan takes the plate to Moraine's room, but she's not there. Moraine is at the stables, saddling a horse. She leaves, riding into the woods and runs into a Fade. The Fade scares the horse and the horse throws Moraine off.

Moraine gets up and runs out of the woods. She hides near a patch of rocks. The Fade follow her. She is able to kill one, but another appears and cuts her stomach. Lan arrives in time to save Moraine's life. He fights two more Fade and ends up injured next to Moraine. Their hosts appear to distract the Fade so their warder can kill it. Lan lays next to Moraine and asks her what she is hiding from him.

Summary:	The Two Rivers youths forge new relationships, while Lan tries to mend an old one.

Rand is living in Cairhien and works at a hospital for the mentally unstable. Most of the patients are men. He also has a 'close' relationship with the innkeeper Selene. He dreams about killing his friends and it scares him. Rand likes working with the patients and is very kind to them. He notices that one of the orderlies, Yann isn't so kind and plays with the patients for a laugh. He also gloats because his patients come from richer families and are allowed to go outside. Later that night, Rand watches Yann and follows him when he goes home. He attacks Yann and accidentally channels the One Power, which makes him severely hurt the orderly.

Rand retreats to his room and Selene is waiting for him. He tries to turn her away but she is persistent. After they make love, he tries to push her away, saying he doesn't want to hurt her. She says she can't be hurt and asks who he thinks of when they are together. He admits that he thinks about someone he wants to forget.

Moiraine and Lan prepare for a journey to the White Tower. She is still very secretive. They spend the evening with their host and Verin confronts Moiraine about the Fade attack. She figures out that Moiraine found the Dragon. Moiraine gets nervous, thinking Verin will tell the other Aes Sedai. Verin says she is loyal to the Dragon and doesn't agree with the sisters' plans for him. She believes they need the Dragon to heal the world. Moiraine isn't so sure, but Verin says they have no choice but to trust each other. Verin also volunteers to get books for Moiraine for her quest.

They join the others around a bonfire and another sister, Adeleas asks Moiraine and Lan how they met. They met on the road and they were suspicious of each other. When Lan meditated, Moiraine felt rage within him. She attempted to take his sword, so Lan tossed her in a pond. Adeleas assumes that's when Moiraine knew Lan was the one. A good warder can protect an Aes Sedai from a Trolloc but the right one can protect her from herself.

Perrin and the Sheinaran soldiers follow Elyas as he tracks Padan Fain. They find an abandoned house and Perrin has a vision of what happened there. He thinks Elyas is doing something to him and tells Elyas to leave him alone.There are signs that Paden Fain and his group were attacked. They find a dead Fade nailed to a wooden gate. Ingtar decides to leave and head to the nearest village. When they get there, Elyas decides to sleep outside. As Perrin walks into the inn, Elyas reminds him that the Sheinarans are not his pack.

Liandrin works really hard to convince Nynaeve to join the Red Ajah. She takes the novice to the Yellows healing chambers to observe their skills. And steal medicine. She basically tells Nynaeve that the world won't need Yellows with the Reds there to protect everyone. Liandrin also tells Nynaeve that she's taking over her training, but Nynaeve knows she's not allowed to. The Red Sister figured out a way to get around that. She tells Nynaeve to tell the Sisters that she's ready for the Arches, the trial that novices go through to become Accepted. Liandrin is allowed to train the Accepted. Later, Nynaeve searches for Liandrin and follows her through the busy town. She's alone and is being sneaky.

Alanna meets with Sheriam Wiata) to talk about Liandrin's interesting in training Nynaeve. She also suggests that the powerful novices and emergence of false Dragons is a sign. Alanna believes that they were sent to fight in the Last Battle. Sheriam doesn't see any issue with Liandrin's request, but she does have an issue when she sees Alanna's bags packed. Alanna plans to leave to help Moiraine.

Egwene meets her new neighbor Elayne. Elayne is the Daughter Heir of Andor and has been a novice for months but because she's a royal has lived secluded from the other novices. Egwene gives Elanye a tour of the Tower, but Elayne already knows where everything is. They run into Sheriam, who is annoyed with Elayne's maids. Sheriam asks Egwene where Nynaeve is. Egwene hasn't seen her all day. The Mistress of Novices ask her to send Nynaeve to her study when she returns.

Mat gets sweet cakes from Liandrin and continues digging through the wall. He breaks through and finds someone on the other side of the wall. The other person is Min Farshaw. The last time we saw her, she was running from Fal Dara. She helps Mat dig through the wall, making a big enough hole for her to crawl through.

Min has a bottle of wine that they share and she reveals how she got there. After leaving Fal Dara, Min's boat changed course to avoid a storm, landing in Tar Valon. A Red Sister recognized her and now she's in the cell. She says the Aes Sedai locked her up because she can see the future. Mat thinks that's lame and says he doesn't want to know his future. Min finds it interesting that he doesn't want to know. They hear voices coming so Min goes back to her cell. Before she crawls through, she looks back at Mat and sees a vision of him killing Rand.

Nynaeve discovers Liandrin visits an elderly man and gives him the medicine she stole. The novice reveals herself, upsetting Liandrin. She tells her that the medicine she stole won't help the man. Liandrin gets angry and slaps Nynaeve, screaming at her to leave. After the novice lives, Liandrin apologizes to the man, calling him her sweet boy.

Egwene goes to Elayne's room for a drink and complains, mainly about Nynaeve. According to Egwene, Nynaeve says she came to the tower to protect her friend, but she's not there when Egwene needs her the most. Egwene says she feels like the harder she tries, the further she falls behind. The less Nynaeve tries, the more she gets ahead. Elyane says Egwene is jealous, whether she knows it or not. Nynaeve is outside of Elayne's door, listening.

Nynaeve goes back to her room and Liandrin knocks on her door. The Red Sister tells the novice to follow her. They meet Sheriam and a Blue sister Leane Sharif under the Tower. Leane asks if Nynaeve is ready and if she has faced her fears. Liandrin says she is ready and has not yet faced her fears. They open the doors and motion for Nynaeve to enter. Inside of the room are three arches.

Moiraine finally talks to Lan, telling him that it's time for them to go their separate ways. Lan protests, but Moiraine's guilt is eating at her. She tells him about what happened at Fal Dara. She says they broke the seal that imprisoned Ishamael the Forsaken. The Forsaken are 3000 years old and the strongest channelers that have ever lived. Moiraine is scared and warns Lan about the power the Forsaken wield. Then she admits that Rand is alive. She didn't lie about him; Lan just assumed he was dead. Moraine said she did what she had to. She has to protect the Dragon. Her loyalty is to him and him alone.

Lan tries to uphold his oath to protect her, but she says without their bond, he cannot fulfill that oath. He still wants to be her warder, but she says he failed her when the Fade attacked her. Alanna and her warders show up to take Lan back to the White Tower. Moiraine says she will have Alanna take Lan's bond by force if he doesn't go with her. Lan is hurt but he lets her leave.

Perrin wakes up to Seanchan soldiers dragging him out of his room. He is able to fight them off with some help from Ingtar. The Sheinarans try to fight off the Seanchan soldiers, but are attacked by Dark Aes Sedai. The next morning, Perrin is placed with the rest of the Sheinarans and village residents. Seanchan soldiers carry a large pyramid structure with three people riding on top. Ishamael is one of them, standing next to Lady Suroth. She asks if they are ready. Ishamael looks at Perrin and says they have to be.

Back at Cairheien, Rand goes to work the next day and is reassigned to Yann's patients. He goes outside to mee the first one. It's Logain Ablar. Rand introduces himself and say they have a lot in common.

Summary:	Nynaeve faces her greatest fears. Rand seeks guidance on his powers from an unexpected source.

The ter'angreal arches are from before the breaking when women could create objects from the one power. They don't know why the arches were made, but these arches will bring a novice face to face with their greatest fears. The Aes Seda sisters give Nynaeve insights about how to navigate through the arches. Once she starts, she must complete all three arches or she will be put out of the tower, never to return. Her fears are her own and she decides if she wants to share them. There is a risk that once she enters, she may never return.

The Aes Sedai give novices three chances to go through the arches. If they do not accept the challenge, the novice is asked to leave the Tower and can never come back. Nynaeve must go through the arches for herself, not for anyone else. She will not have access to the One Power inside of the arches. And the way back will come only once in each arch.

The sisters open the arches. Nynaeve experiences three scenarios from the past, present and future. The first is in the Two Rivers and Nynaeve is a child. Her home is invaded by raiders and she gets the urge to fight. The way back appears and she remembers that she has to return. Upon her return, Liandrin pours water over Nynaeve, saying her sins and the sins against her are washed clean. Leane heals her wounds.

The second arch takes Nynaeve to the Two Rivers as a plague spreads through the village. Rand's father Tam Al'Thor is one of the sick. And Mat's mother, Natti Cauthon is the new wisdom but she doesn't know what she's doing. Nynaeve tries to help her, but gets yelled at for leaving everyone behind. Nynaeve returns to heal Tam with the One Power but nothing happens. She sits with him and he asks about Rand. She lies and says Rand is happy. He thanks her for protecting his son. The way back appears and she leaves, despite Tam's pleas for her to stay.

Nynaeve begs to go back to the Two Rivers to save everyone, forgetting that it's just her fear. The sisters remind her to keep her fears to herself. They open the third arch and something different happens. Nynaeve floats around and sees glimpses of Lan and an ax. She hears his voice as he tells her how remarkable she is. When she returns, Nynaeve has no recollection of what happened. She holds Lan's hair in her hand and gets scared. Leane says sometimes it's best that she doesn't remember.

Sheriam declares Nynaeve is an Accepted and hands her a ring. The Sisters are not at all concerned with her experience. Nynaeve refuses the ring saying she won't turn her back on the people she loves. Nyaneve leaves the room with a warning that she cannot return. But that doesn't stop her.

Egwene tries to stop Nynaeve from leaving, saying she needs her. Nynaeve knows she doesn't because Egwene doesn't need protection anymore. She says Aes Sedai means servant of all. Egwene will be a woman worthy of the title. When Nynaeve gets to the woods, she sees Lan. She runs to him and hugs him. She decides to go home to the Two Rivers and Lan offers to go with her. Lan kisses her and the way back appears behind her. She hears Sheriam's voice and turns around. The door is gone by the time she looks. Lan asks what's wrong and Nynaeve says she fears this is all a dream.

Back in the arch room, the sisters realize that Nynaeve is not coming back. Sheriam is angry, saying Alanna was right that Nynaeve wasn't ready. Liandrin is cool about the whole thing saying they've lost sisters before. But Nynaeve trusted Liandrin and now she's dead. After Sheriam leaves, Liandrin screams and throws the water across the room.

Logain recognizes Rand from Tar Valon. He saw him sitting on a ledge while Logain was paraded through the streets. He says Rand had a glow around it and it was the brightest he's ever seen. Rand asks him how to control the One Power. Logain asks for a bottle of Ghealdan wine and he will answer Rand.

Rand returns home as a messenger informs the village that the Queen is offering a large reward to anyone who brings the Horn of Valere to her. Selene listens nearby and Rand asks her if she knows where to find Ghealdan wine. She does, and makes him leave with her but doesn't say where they are going.

Selene takes Rand to a Cairhieni Noble party. Everyone is curious about them, but it's just a game. Rand meets a woman who tells him that the hunt for the Horn of Valere isn't real. It's a tactic to lessen the population of the city. It's a purge to eradicate the poor so the rich don't have to spend money to feed them. Selene returns with the wine and Rand tells her about the hunt. She knows that already and reminds him that Cairhien is a political city. Everything anyone says or does is all part of a scheme. Rand leaves Selene at the party alone, despite her protests.

Rand runs to the hospital to give the wine to Logain. Logain can see that Rand is suppressing his urge to channel. He warns him that eventually the power will spill out when he least expects it. And there's nothing he can do about it. Rand is disappointed and calls Logain crazy.

Logain says there is no madness; that's just how the Aes Sedai justify their cruelty. They know only the Dragon can defeat the Dark One. Rand says Logain is not the Dragon. Logain claims to be a descendant of Lews Therin Telamon and still believes he is the Dragon. Rand realizes he made a mistake and starts to leave. Logain grabs him and commands Rand to get him out of the hospital. Rand says he can't help him because Logain is sick.

Sheriam tells Egwene that Nynaeve is dead. Egwene gets angry and wants to go into the arches to get her back. Downstairs, Liandrin releases Mat, saying Egwene needs him. He is skeptical of her intentions, but Liandrin has no purpose for releasing him. She finds him weak and uninteresting. She thinks wasted five months on him when she should have been there for the sister who just died.

Liandrin goes to the top of the tower to throw Nynaeve's ring into the fire. Egwene joins her, but only to yell at her for pushing Nynaeve too far. Liandrin threatens Egwene, telling her not to overstep if she wants to survive. But Liandrin doesn't know what Egwene is capable of.

Mat leaves his cell and finds Egwene crying on a bench. He looks at her for a minute but decides not to approach her. Instead he returns to his cell and reveals to Min that his door is open. She asks Mat why he hasn't left. He says he has nowhere to go. She is ready to leave with or without him so he follows her. Mat and Min steal food and horses for their journey. Min leaves to grab one more thing and leaves. She meets Liandrin and says Mat is going with her to a place of Liandrin's choosing. Liandrin says if Min succeeds, Moiraine won't have anything over either of them anymore.

The Seanchan force everyone to bow to Lady Suroth and swear an oath to her. While they display their power by killing one of the Sheinarans, Ishamael keeps his eyes on Perrin. Later that night, Perrin wakes up in the back of a carriage with Ishamael watching him. They are in a caravan headed to Falme. Ishamael is very interested in Perrin, knowing he's a wolf. Perrin asks who he is and Ishamael shows him the face of the Dark One. Perrin gets upset saying Rand killed him, or at least, that's what Moiraine said.

Wolves howl outside and the caravan stops. Ishamael says the more wolf that he is, the more Perrin belongs to him. He leaves the carriage and Elyas comes in. Elyas releases Perrin and sends him into the woods with another wolf.

Rand returns to his room to find Selene waiting for him. She is angry and tells him to never leave her like that again. They embrace passionately and the One Power starts swirling around Rand. Afterward, the One Power spills out of Rand, setting his room on fire. He and Selene get out of the inn and watch it burn from the street.

Egwene tries to open the arches to get Nynaeve back. Elayne stops her because it won't work. She tells Egwene that Nynave wouldn't want her to throw her life and her future away. Egwene allows Elayne to console her and they spend the night in the arch room.

Inside of the arches, Nynaeve lives a happy live in the Two Rivers with Lan and their daughter Elnore. Mat and Perrin live there as well and everything is calm. They are attacked by Trollocs that night. Mat, Perrin and Lan are all killed. Nynaeve channels the One Power to kill the Trollocs and holds Lan as he dies. Elnore sees the way back open up. Nynaeve picks up Elnore and runs to the door.

Nynaeve emerges back into the arches room but Elnore is gone. She screams in anguish, waking up Egwene and Elayne. Egwene holds and comforts her while Nynaeve cries.

Summary:	Moiraine searches for Rand while Nynaeve mourns her losses.

The woman who chatted with Rand at the Cairhieni Noble party was Lady Anvaere, Moiraine's younger sister. The morning after the party, Moiraine returns home. Anvaere is anxious to speak to Moiraine, but the Aes Sedai says she has too much to do.

Rand feels bad about burning down Selene's inn. She doesn't seem to be upset about it and blames burning candles for the fire. She says rebuilding gives her some time to get away and she invites Rand to go with her. Selene takes Rand up to a cabin on a cliff. This whole time, Selene talked about a former lover that she had a hard time getting over. Rand helps her remember what it feels like to be loved. The cabin reminds him of a place he can't go back to. But he likes it up there. And the Wheel never gives anyone what they want. Selene says if you want something, you have to take it.

Moiraine sets out to the hospital, hoping Rand would be there, but he didn't show up for work. She also went to see Logain. Logain is upset by her presence and blames her for his misery. Moiraine tries to ask about Rand, but has to make a deal to get answers. She says she will help Logain if he tells her about Rand.

Logain tells her where Rand is staying. And that the boy is as powerful as he was, but he's afraid of the power. Moiraine tells Logain to teach Rand everything about channeling. And if she is satisfied with Rand's progress, She will leave a knife with Logain. Moiraine heads to the village to look for Rand.

Nynaeve is still deeply affected by what happened in the arches. It's having an effect on her relationship with Egwene. Egwene tries her best to be there for Nynaeve but it's taking a toll on her. Elayne listens to Egwene's frustrations, but wonders why she's trying so hard to fix something she can't fix.

Nynaeve goes to the warder's training yard to look for Maksim and Ihvon, Alanna's warders but they are gone. Liandrin watches her from afar but gets a note that distracts her. The note is a report that there was an attack on the Western Shore. Liandrin goes to the Keeper of the Tower, Leane to make sure the Amyrlin Seat is aware. Leane doesn't take the report seriously and is awaiting a report from their sisters in the area. She doesn't tell Liandrian anything more. Liandrin reminds her that if the Amrylin Seat falls, Leane falls as well.

Alanna took Lan to her family home. There is lots of food and laughter, but it's clear that Alanna and her warders are concerned about Lan. They say when a warder loses his bond with his Aes Sedai, he gets depressed. Lan's bond wasn't broken, it was taken. But Alanna doesn't think Lan will do anything drastic. In fact, she suggests he become warder for a new Aes Sedai sister. In particular, Nynaeve. She knows that Nynaeve went through the arches and tells Lan that she will need a warder soon. Lan isn't interested in repeating his mistakes though.

Later, Lan tries to mediate, but is distracted. He took the poem from Moiraine before she released him. He takes the poem out of his satchel and reads it. Maksim catches him off guard to ask for help retrieving water. They talk about the effect that masking a bond has on a warder. Maksim actually asked Alanna to mask the bond except in a battle or in bed. Lan is actually getting used to it because he hasn't heard Moiraine for over six months.

Perrin is safe with the wolf pack. Elyas reveals that they are wolf brothers, but don't turn into wolves. They were able to find Perrin through a vision of a stag. Elyas says they've been watching Perrin for a while. It was those wolves that saved Perrin and Egwene from the White Cloaks. They can also see his dreams.

Perrin wonders why they didn't approach him sooner. Elyas says they don't go near women who can channel. The Aes Sedai don't trust what they can't explain. One of the wolves stays close to Perrin. Elyas says the wolf lost his mate too. They've seen Perrin's wife in his dreams. Perrin sees a vision of the wolf and calls the wolf Hopper.

Mat and Min stop at an inn and play games while they eat and drink. Min tells the bartender that they need a room and asks for the attic. Then she tells him that someone is joining her later and they will also ask for the attic. Min enters a nightmare while sleeping. First, the nightmare is her being forced to tell fortunes, but only seeing bad things happening. Ishamael appears and reveals he is a Forsaken. Min is scared and tries to get out of her deal. Liandrin promised to get rid of her visions, but an Aes Sedai cannot do that. Only darkness can take away that power. Min refuses to help because she doesn't want Mat to get hurt. Ishamael gives her instructions to take Mat to Cairhien but doesn't tell her what's there.

Liandrin finds Nynaeve in the arches room. Nynaeve is having a hard time letting go of what could have been. She was in the arches for about a day, but to her it was years. Liandrin empathizes with her by talking about her son. She hid her son in Tar Valon because she didn't want her enemies to use him against her. Liandrin also says it's not just the men who can channel who are cursed. The women who can channel are forced to watch their loved ones grow old and die.

Liandrin tells Nynaeve about the attack in the West. A group of Shienaran soldiers traveling with an olgier and a black smith from the Two Rivers were caught. Nynaeve runs to tell Egwene. She says she's going to help. Egwene insists on going with her friend. She feels like she let Rand down because she wasn't strong enough. And she never wants to let any of her friends down again.

Nynaeve and Egwene make their way down a tunnel under the Tower. Elayne follows them, curious as to where they are going. Liandrin shows up and Nynaeve takes responsibility for the novice's presence. Liandrin looks at Elayne and says she's a compilation. She channels the source and throws them all backward, knocking them out.

Lan and Ihvon meditate together and talk about the conversation that Lan keeps playing in his head. Moiraine said she never saw Lan as an equal and it bothers him. Ihvon laughs because they aren't supposed to be equal. He says the world sees their power, but warders see their weakness. Warders remind the Aes Sedai that they are not gods. Lan is surprised that Alanna would need a reminder that she's not a god. Ihvon says they all want the same thing. The triumph of light over dark … and dessert. He asks what Moiraine wants. That's the problem. Lan doesn't know anymore.

Moiraine goes home and finds Anvaere is waiting for her. Anvaere tells her about the struggle to keep their house intact when other family members tried to tear it down. She actually had someone spit in her face. Now her son is going to marry the queen. She will not let Moiraine destroy what she has built. Anvaere says this is not Moiraine's home anymore. If she wants to find Rand, Moiraine has to sit and have tea with Anvaere.

Rand and Selene sleep by a fire on top of the cliff when a Fade attacks. Rand uses the One Power to kill the Fade, and Selene gets scared. He sees the fear in her eyes and decides to leave. He says when the madness takes over, he will kill those he loves. Rand says he has to go far away from Selene. Selene warms to him when she learns that he loves her. He says she's the first woman to see him as a man. He doesn't want her to see him as a monster.

Maksim showed Alannna the poem and she got scared. After Lan goes to bed, they show Ihvon. Alanna says the poem is a prophecy about Lanfear, a Forsaken. Lanfear's seal is broken, meaning she is in this world. And she's with Rand.

Rand and Selene go to a nearby cabin to make love. Selene ties him to the bed and says she is a monster too. She starts to use her power and Moiraine stabs her in the back with Rand's sword. He gets angry that Moiraine killed his friend and throws her against the way. Moiraine explains who Selene really is. She's Lanfear, Daughter of the Night. The most dangerous of the Forsaken. Rand doesn't believe her at first, but lets Moiraine go and they run away. As they exit the door, Lanfear starts to blink her eyes.

Summary:	Moiraine and Rand flee for their lives. Egwene and Nynaeve encounter a new foe.

All eyes are on Falme as High Lady Suroth returns with the newly sworn Loial and Ingtar. But High Lord Turak is not happy with her. He doesn't approve of the attack on Atuan's Mill because it's too far from Falme. He punishes High Lady Suroth by cutting off her fingernails and barring her from the court's council until she is presentable. The guards take High Lady Suroth away. Ishamael stays behind to present High Lord Turak with a gift. Padan Fain sets a box in front of the High Lord and inside is the Horn of Valere. High Lord Turak says with the horn, the whole world will be theirs.

Later, High Lady Suroth blames him for her punishment, but she also needs him to kill High Lord Turak and take over. Ishamael says that will plunge them into a civil war. Suroth reminds him that he needs her army to win his war. He reminds her of why she turned to the dark and she apologizes. Ishamael assures her that they will in the Last Battle with the Dragon on their side. He also says he has a gift for her.

Rand and Moiraine continue to run away from Lanfear. Moiraine comes up with an idea to throw her off their trail. They appear to run away on horseback, but Lanfear is right behind them. Moiraine pays the horse owner to run her horses on the road to the White Tower while she and Rand go back to Cairhien. Unfortunately, Lanfear catches the owner and sews her mouth shut.

Rand is confused, so Moiraine has to explain that he didn't defeat the Dark One at the Eye of the World. That man was actually the Dark One's strongest lieutenant and the leader of the Forsaken, Ishamael. He released Lanfear and if he releases the other Forsaken, they will not win the Last Battle.

Moiraine and Rand cannot go to sleep. Lanfear was famous for two things: her cruelty and mastering the world of dreams. Moiraine says Lanfear can hurt Rand just as badly in the dream world as she can in the real world. They return to Cairhien and Rand meets Lady Anvaere, again and her son Barthanes. Barthanes is preparing for his wedding to the queen, which he fully expects Moiraine to attend.

Perrin decides to leave Elyas and the wolfpack behind, despite Elyas' protests. He wants to find Loial and Ingtar. He heads back toward Atuan's Mill and discovers that the White Cloaks have taken over the town. They chased out the Seanchan, but made things worse for the townspeople. Perrin meets Dain Bornhald, who saves him from an Aiel girl in a cage. Shortly after, he discovers Bornhald is a white cloak, traveling with Eamon Valda.

Valda is very interested in questioning the Aiel girl. Perrin decides to release the girl so she escapes Valda's "questioning." But the Bornhald catches them before they can run. Perrin and the girl, Aviendha have to fight their way out of Atuan's Mill. They kill the White Cloaks they encounter except one … Bornhald. Perrin spares his life.

Aviendha is from the Nine Valleys sept of the Tarrdad Aiel. They live in the Waste, but she calls it the Threefold Land. A shaping stone to make them, a testing ground to prove their worth and a punishment for the sin. She came to this realm to find their chief of chiefs. Now she will go where Perrin goes because he saved her life.

Verin arrives in Tar Valon and immediately starts asking about Egwene and Nynaeve. However, Liandrin took Egwene, Nynaeve and Elayne through the Waste to Falme. Nynaeve realizes she was being recruited for the Dark One. She vows never to turn to the dark, but Liandrin says even Nynaeve has a price.

Verin discovers the girls are gone and asks Sheriam about them. Sheriam checks her sign out book and discovers that the girls accompanied Elayne to Caemlyn. Upon further investigation, Verin discovers that Sheriam's entry, approving the girls trip, was made by compulsion. That means the Dark Ajah is real. Her next step is to find out which sisters left the Tower recently and to find out where they went.

Liandrin opens the gates to Falme and delivers the girls to High Lady Suroth. She is fully aware what will happen to the girls. High Lady Suroth will collar them and control them. Liandrin is disgusted with how women who can channel are treated. Suroth says they believe that those not born with the ability to channel should have the same opportunity. They train girls, known as the Sul'dam to use the One Power and collar them to control them. Suroth hopes one day to collar Liandrin. Liandrin hopes to one day see Suroth kneel before her.

Just before Liandrin goes back into the Waste, she wakes the girls and unties their bonds with the One Power. Nynaeve is still bound, so she can't use her powers. Elayne can and she creates a diversion, giving them a chance to run. The Sul'dam go after the girls and are able to capture Egwene.

Verin finds Liandrin who has proof she was in a village, looking for a man who can channel. Verin mentions that Egwene and Nynaeve are with Elayne in Caemlyn. Liandrin just happened to hear a rumor that a royal caravan was attacked near Caemlyn. She acts concerned, saying the girls are worth more than gold, but Verin knows Liandrin is lying.

Anvaere asks Moiraine what kind of trouble she's in, knowing Moiraine won't tell her. All Moiraine says is that Rand needs protection and she's not sure she can give it to him. And there's a chance that Anvaere and Barthanes will get caught in the middle. Anvaere reminds Moiraine of some advice she gave her. She said if something is upsetting you, or making you afraid, ask yourself a simple question. Is it true? Does Moiraine know without any doubt that Rand needs her protection. That advice gives Moiraine an idea.

layne and Nynaeve go into the city. High Lady Suroth sends her soldiers out to find them. Elayne wants to lay low, but Nynaeve is ready to run back to the gates to find Egwene. While they bicker, someone grabs them. He takes them to a safe place and is later revealed to be a warder for a Yellow Aes Sedai named Ryma.

Lanfear visits Ishamael in his dreams while she waits for Rand to go to sleep. They talk about how Rand found out who Lanfear is. Whether or not Lanfear will betray Ishamael. And why their master woke him first. It's because Ishamael actually believes in the dark. He believes the only way to stop the suffering is to break the wheel.

Ishamael asks about Rand. Lanfear says Rand is softer than his predecessor. He takes no pride in his birthright and rejects his own power. Lanfear knows Ishamael has Egwene and Nynaeve. He plans to use them, Mat and Perrin against Rand to force him to join the Dark. He ask what Rand will do when he sees that his friends are lost. Lanfear says he will break.

Ishamael is awakened and summoned by High Lord Turak. Turak is suspicious of Ishamael, but the Horn of Valere puts Isamael in the High Lord's favor. Turak says Ishamael can ask one thing of him. Ishamael asks that he receive High Lady Suroth's gift in good faith. High Lady Suroth arrives before High Lord Turak, with Egwene. Suroth describes Egwene as a novice with more power than they've seen for a very long time. They collar Egwene to tame her. Suroth raises her hand and the one power is drawn from the collar, hurting Egwene and making her kneel.

Moiraine tells Rand that they are staying in Cairhien. She says Rand and Lanfear spent a lot of time together. If Lanfear was going to hurt him, she would have done it by now. Moiraine wants to know what Lanfear wants with Rand. Rand thinks she wants to be with him. And he says some of what happened between them was real.

Moiraine tells him more about Lanfear. Lanfear was in love with the Dragon Reborn and he loved her, before he met his wife. She turned to the dark after he broke her heart, swearing her allegiance to get the Dragon back. Moiraine asks Rand to go to sleep and let Lanfear enter his dreams. She asks him to pretend to be in love with her, but she won't force him to do it. If he does, she will stay in the room. If he appears to be in pain, she will wake him up. Rand lays in bed and quickly falls asleep. In his dreams he is in the desert, tied to a wheel. Lanfear sits before him on a throne. She finally got him.

Summary:	Rand makes a risky alliance and Egwene gathers her strength to confront the horror of her circumstances.

Egwene begins her damane training as Lanfear continues to seduce Rand.

The Sul'dam collar the damane, women who channel to control them. The damane are paired up with a woman who commands her. First they have to break them into submission. Egwene's Sul'dam is named Renna. Renna warns Egwene that she will hurt her as long as Egwene resists. The collar not only prevents Egwene from escaping, but also prevents her from hurting Renna. Renna starts with a simple command. Pour water into a cup. Egwene has trouble just grabbing the pitcher of water. Renna says as long as Egwene thinks of the pitcher as a weapon, she will not touch it.

Last week, Lanfear visited Rand's dream. He is tied to a wheel and she sits in front of him. She wants him to trust her, but Rand is finding it hard to trust anyone, including Moiraine. Lanfear says he's repeating history by pushing away his friends. That just makes it easier for Ishamael to turn them to the dark. She says Ishamael wants to control Rand. Lanfear questions why he trusts Moiraine. She says it's no coincidence that Rand ended up in Cairhien. Rand makes Lanfear a deal. He will trust her if she tells him where Ishamael is and what his plans are. Lanfear wants to tell him, but on one condition. Leave Moiraine.

Rand does as she says and leaves Moiraine's home. Moiraine is anxious to know what Rand found out, but Rand doesn't tell her anything. Instead he asks why she moved Logain to Cairhien. Moiraine moved him there so Logain could train Rand. Rand leaves, realizing that Moiraine is trying to control the situation.

Nynaeve and Elyane were able to escape the Sul'dam. Now the Sul'dam are searching throughout Falme for them. A Yellow Aes Sedai, Ryma and her warder Basan found the girls and questioned why they fled the tower. Nynaeve and Elayne tell them about Liandrin's betrayal. They realize she broke all of Aes Sedai's oaths. That means the Black Ajah is real and the Aes Sedai are in great danger. Ryma finds a boat to transport Nynaeve and Elayne back to the Tower, but they say they won't go without Egwene. Ryma thinks it's important that someone tells the Amyrlin Seat about Liandrin Sedai, but the girls still decline. The Yellow Aes Sedai pulls out an a'dam and cuff. She says if they want to help Egwene, they need to figure out how to open the a'dam.

Liandrin sits her son, Aludran when Lanfear arrives. She finds Liandrin a contradiction. On one hand, Liandrin hates men. But on the other hand, she will do anything to protect her son. And that makes her weak. She says this is no life for the man and kills him. Mainly because Liandrin won't kill her son. Also because Liandrin swore her oaths to the Dark, not Ishamael. She can't take back the oath, but there are many paths to walk through it.

High Lady Suroth has a party and forces Loial to sing a sacred tree song. He sings, while Suroth's guest laugh at him. A tree in the room begins to grow. Suroth sees that her guests are all listening intently. She claps to stop his singing and put the attention back onto her. She dismisses Loial and Ingtar from the room.

Ingtar discovers the horn is in the High Lord Turak's room of curiosities. The room isn't guarded so he thinks they should be able to retrieve it easily. Loial is also concerned about saving Egwene, but Ingtar says she is more heavily guarded. The damane are located in a place called the kennels. Loial says no matter what happens, they will find a way to save her.

Mat and Min arrive in Cairhien. While she sleeps, Ishamael visits Min in her dreams. He tells her that Rand is in Cairhien. He says he will take away her curse if she makes sure that Mat leaves with Rand. Min realizes that Ishamael saw her vision of Mat killing Rand.

Ishamael visits Rand in his dream. In the dream, all of Rand's friends are dead. He has blood on his hands, indicating that he killed them. He knows that the men who channel can go mad and kill those they love most. Ishamael says this is what will happen. Lanfear arrives and chases Ishamael away. She realized she didn't give Rand a reason to trust her. She gives him the gift of a dream. She says he can see and talk to anyone he wants. They transport to Egwene's dreams. Rand calls out to her and she is too shocked to speak. He reaches out to touch Egwene's face and Lanfear ends the dream. Rand gets upset and wants to know where Egwene is. Lanfear says Ishamael has her. Rand says he will do anything to help Egwene.

Egwene wakes up, for real this time. She hears other damanes crying in pain. Even though she knows it was a dream, she can't shake the feeling that Rand was really there. While she pulls herself back together, she hears someone talking to her. The prisoner next door recites rules that the Damane must follow.

Alanna Sedai and her warders Ihvon and Maksim found the poem in Lan's pack. They are on the way to the Tower, but stop at Temples of the Forsaken to rest. Lan asks where the Amyrlin Seat is and Alanna says she is traveling back to the Tower as well. Later, Lan sneaks away, but is quickly discovered by the warders. Ihvon and Maksim accuse Lan of being a dark friend, sworn to Lanfear. The wards prepare to fight and Alanna stops Lan. She wants to know why he asked about the Amyrlin Seat. He says he needs to talk to her about Moiraine.He admits that they found the Dragon Reborn.

Moiraine tries to write a letter to the Amyrlin Seat but has a hard time telling her the truth. Barthanes brings her food and she treats him badly. After he leaves, Anvaere confronts Moiraine about her ungracious attitude. Moiraine is running on no sleep and acts coldly about hurting her nephew. Anvaere tells her to leave and never return. Moiraine gets upset and reminds Anvaere that she is the younger sister. Anvaere and Barthanes are in the house because of Moiraine's good grace. Anvaere calls her cold and uncaring, just like their mother.

The Amyrlin Seat, Siuan Sanche rides in her carriage, writing letters. She hears a commotion outside of the carriage and hears horses riding up. Her driver tells someone to halt, but they don't slow down. Lan is one of the riders. Siuan invites him into her carriage to talk.

Rand visits Logain and asks him to train him in everything he used to fight the Aes Sedai. At first Logain declines, but then Rand says this is his only chance to save the world. Logain tells him to embrace the One Power. Rand channels. The One Power slowly gets more powerful until Rand falls to the ground and throws up. Rand thinks there's not enough time to learn how to fight. Logain says with the amount of power that Rand has, he can fight anyone he wants. Rand returns to the villiage and is reunited with Mat. Mat asks about Egwene, Nynaeve and Perrin. Rand only says it's complicated. They go to a tavern for a drink.

Elayne examines the a'dam and confirms that there is no seam or latch to open the collar. Nynaeve asks how Ryma got it. Ryma says she and three other sisters arrived to investigate the rumors of strange beasts and channelers kept as slaves. They didn't realize how bad things were until they got to Falme. They were only able to get the a'dam because of the sacrifice of their sisters. Two of Ryma's sisters and their warders gave their lives. A third sister was captured and collared. That sister was a Sitter of the Blue Ajah. Later, Nynaeve tries to convince Elayne to return to Tar Valon. She is the Daughter Heir after all. Elayne says she's staying because Egwene is her friend. She's never had a real friend.

The Amyrlin Seat, Siuan Sanche rides in her carriage, writing letters. She hears a commotion outside of the carriage and hears horses riding up. Her driver tells someone to halt, but they don't slow down. Lan is one of the riders. Siuan invites him into her carriage to talk.

Egwene continues to try and remove the a'dam, despite Renna's warnings. Renna says an Aes Sedai created the a'dam. She believes the Aes Sedai curve a damane's power but the Sul'dam teach the damane to use their full power. Renna activates Egwene's powers and says it feels better when they are connected. She demonstrates by having Egwenen concentrate on slowly setting a tree on fire. Then she tells Egwene to pour the water. Egwene still can't touch the pitcher and Renna beats her up because of it.

Rand fills Mat in on what happened at Far Dara. He says he left everyone behind, letting them believe he's dead. Rand thinks everyone is safer without him around, but Mat disagrees. Rand says Ishamael has Egwene and he intends to save her. Mat wants to go with him, but first he has to say goodbye to Min.

Mat finds Min drinking alone in her room. She tells Mat not to go with Rand because he will kill his friend. Mat realizes that Min saw a vision of his future. And she set him up. He gets upset because he thought they were friends. Min says they are and that's why she's telling him all of this. If he loves Rand, he won't go with him.

Moiraine sends her letter to the Amylin Seat and then apologizes to Barthanes for how she treated him. Anvaere interrupts because the Amyrlin Seat has arrived in Cairhien. And she is demanding an audience with Moiraine. Meanwhile, Liandrin is the first to approach Siuan, but she is quickly dismissed.

Rand waits for Mat by the gates of the city, but he doesn't show. Mat is hiding in a nearby tent, contemplating what Min said. Rand starts to leave, but encounters Lan, Maksim and Ihvon. Lan apologizes, saying he can't let Rand leave.

Elayne and Ryma channel the One Power to find an opening to the a'dam. Ryma invites Nyneave to join them, but warns her not to use too much power. Nynaeve uses a large surge of power and says the a'dam is alive. It needs to be healed and the only way to do that is to collar a woman. There is a knock at the door and everyone panics. Ryma volunteers to meet the Seanchan, telling the girls to remain quiet. Ryma and Basan meet the Sul'dam with their damanes. There are four sets of Sul'dam around her. Ryma is able to avenge two of her sisters' lives, but is shot by an arrow. That's when things go south. Basan is killed and Ryma is collared.

Renna tries once more to make Egwene pick up the pitcher and pour her some water. Egwene still can't touch it. Renna hands Egwene on a hook by the collar. The collar starts to choke her. Renna waits until Egwene is almost passed out before she removes her from the hook. Renna tells Egwene to pour the water one more time. Egwene slowly approaches the pitcher, expecting to be hit with pain. She is able to grab the pitcher and pour the water in Renna's cup. Renna is satisfied and leaves the cell. Egwene screams and cries when the woman next door tells her not to cry. She says Egwene lasted longer that she did. And she is a Sitter of the Blue Ajah. That Sitter is Maigan.

Summary:	A familiar face foils Moiraine and Rand's plans.

Moiraine comes face to face with Siuan, the Amyrlin Seat in Cairhien. Siuan is upset that Moiraine didn't tell her that she was stilled or that she found the Dragon Reborn. She wants to meet Rand to see for herself. Elsewhere Lan prepares Rand to meet the Amyrlin Seat. Rand is more annoyed than nervous. When he meets the Amyrlin Seat, she is more interested to know if he can control his power. He can't and that disappoints her. Rand figures out real quick that the Amyrlin Seat already made up her mind about him. She shields him. She plans to proclaim him as the Dragon Reborn to show that he is under the control of the Aes Sedai.

Moiraine faces Lan and blames him for messing up her plans for Rand. He in turn asks one question. Since being stilled, has Moiraine ever thought about killing herself. She gets angry and says the thought never crossed her mind. She only concerned with protecting Rand. Moiraine says Lan put them all in jeopardy by telling Siuan about the boy. Lan raises his voice and says she can't do this by herself. She will need to trust someone at some point. If it's not him, he thought she would trust Siuan.

Moiraine checks on Rand and find him shielded by the Amyrlin Seat. She tells Siuan to release Rand, but Siuan is disappointed with Moiraine. She says Moirain was supposed to find the Dragon Reborn and protect him. She can't do that if she's stilled. They have to change their plans and that includes declaring Rand the Dragon Reborn the next day. She has 14 sisters with her to show that he is under the Aes Sedai control and will prepare him for what's to come.

Lanfear takes Mat to Falme as a gift for Ishamael. Ishamael doesn't toy with Mat but instead offers him tea. He says the tea will show Mat who he truely is. He will see his past lives and his true self from his soul. Mat drinks the tea and sees his mother. His mother tells Mat not to be like 'him.' Mat looks in a mirror and sees himself as a killer. He turns into his mother and someone hold him. He looks up to see his own face smiling back at him and screams.

Ishamael returns and comforts Mat who is mumbling. The Forsaken One says they keep leaving these lives, trying again and again ... for what? The Wheel turns and people hurt. Even with the freedom of death, they just come back again and again. All Ishamael wants is to close his eyes one day and never have to open them again. Mat asks how.

Nynaeve and Elayne are getting familiar with the city. Nynaeve wants to storm the castle to rescue Egwene, but Elayne says they will do things her way now by first finding Loial. Nynaeve finds Loial and asks about Perrin. He confirms that Perrin escaped and immediately bows when he sees Elayne. Loial informs them that Egwene is being held in the kennels. No one but the Sul'dam can get near the place though. Seanchan soldiers walk by, so they have to part. Nynaeve promises they will get Loial out of Falme.

Egwene continues her training with Renna. The Sul'dam take their damanes to the desert to display their full power. This training exercise is more for the Sul'dam's benefit than it is for the damane. They have to learn to use the damane's power. Renna warns Egwene not to embarrass her. The damanes are powerful. When it's Egwene's turn, Renna encourages her to shine brighter than the others. She instructs her to create an explosion of air. When Egwene release her power, the explosion literally blows away the other Sul'dam. The impact is so powerful, the people in the city hear and feel it.

Verin asked the librarian Yasicca to find an Oiger map of Cairhien in the royal library. The other sisters watch her closely as they all gather in the courtyard near the Damodred home. Ihvon states that he doesn't trust Verin. He sees Verin's warder Tomas walk away and volunteers to follow him. At first, Alanna says no, but Maksim agrees with Ihvon and she agrees. Maksim is more worried about the whereabouts of Liandrin who is nowhere to be found.

Perrin, Hopper and Aviendha come across two of Aviendha's people. They have just buried one of their own. Aviendha uses sign language to talk to her people. They take off their packs and weapons and stand away from Perrin and Hopper. Without warning, the two Aiels start beating up Aviendha. Perrin starts to jump in, but they tell him to stay back. Later, Perrin asks Aviendha about the fight. She explains that the woman who was buried was killed because of her. She had to atone for it and make things right. The other Aiel stops and stares. There is water in the middle of the desert and they are all confused. On the other side of the water is Falme.

Rand and Moiraine are taken to a cell in the palace. Leane Sedai shields Rand from the One Power. Moiraine found out that Rand was leaving when Lan found him. She asks where he was going. He tells her that Ishamael has Egwene in Falme. He knows that the Forsaken want him to go there. They want everyone to know who he is before they kill him. But! If they need him in Falme, they wouldn't like that he's being held prisoner by the Amyrlin Seat. Rand enters the dream world to ask Lanfear for help. She already knows he's being held captive and that Moiraine is with him. She plays with him, telling him to ask Moiraine to help. He plays back saying maybe he will, both of them knowing Lanfear will help him escape the Aes Sedai. Immediately after, Lanfear shows up in Cairhien, setting the village on fire.

Liandrin disappeared into the Damodred home to have tea with Anvaere and Barthanes. Anvaere thinks she's waiting for Moiraine, but she's not. She stares at Barthanes as he asks his mother to leave the room. He says he needs to speak with Liandrin on royal business. After she leaves, Liandrin reveals she is there to deliver an order from their master. The Dark One orders Barthanes to remove Moiraine from the board ... immediately. And if his mother suspects anything, remove her too. Anvaere is in a secret room and hears everything.

Later, Barthanes goes to a cell in the palace to kill Moiraine. He is led to an empty cell and Anvaere appears. She closes the cell door on him before he can get out. Barthanes says he only turned to the Dark One to raise their family status. He tries to tell his mother that Moiraine doesn't care about her. She will leave and never give another thought about Anvaere. Anvaere says she knows that, but Moiraine understands two things. The difference between right and wrong. And how hard it is to do what is right. Barthanes begs her to not tell the Queen, but she already has. Anvaere leaves and soldiers arrive to guard the door.

Lan visits Logain in the hospital. He offers Logain a key to his cell if he answers a question.

What does Logain see when he looks at Moiraine? He says he sees thousands of strands weaved around her, tied into a knot, but nothing is channeled through the strands. Lan starts to leave, but fails to give Logain the key. He says Logain will be taken to the Tower, where the Brown sisters will study him.

Nynaeve and Elayne track down a Sul'dam. Nynaeve stops the Sul'dam and shows her the cuff on her arm. Before the Sul'dam can say anything, Nynaeve puts the a'dam on her. Elayne then hits the Sul'dam over the head, knocking her out.

Renna comes to Egwene to wash her arms. She says she knows why Egwene fights back. It's because no one told her why the Seanchan are there. The Seanchan Empress has one charge — to unite every person on the planet under the light. The Last Battle is coming and they can only fight if they stand together. Egwene quietly tells Renna that she will kill her.

While Lanfear burns the city, Verin runs to Rand's cell to replace Leane. As soon as Leane leaves, Verin lets go of her shield, releasing Rand. She leads them to the courtyard where Tomas is waiting. Verin says there is a waygate near the city. She gives them the Oiger map of the city to find it. Moiraine plans to go to Falme to Toman Head, where the Dragon Reborn is prophesied to reveal himself. They meet Lan in the courtyard and he leads them to the waygate.

The Amrylin Seat and her trusted sisters link up to put out the fires around Cairhien by making it rain. Leane Sedai arrives to help, revealing Verin's betrayal and Rand's escape. The Amyrlin Seat says the boy must not be allowed to leave the city and leaves to find them.

Lan tells Moiraine that she is still connected to the One Power. He asks Rand to look at her with the One Power. Rand sees a knot tied around her. Lan says Rand has to cut it. Rand channels, creating a sword. The knot is located on Moiraine's chest. He cuts the knot and Moiraine immediately feels the One Power. She thanks them both and Lan apologizes for taking so long to do his duty.

Lan and Rand watch Moiraine open the waygate. They don't see the Amyrlin Seat walk up behind them and throw a shield on Rand. Siuan is angry, thinking that Moiraine lied to her about being stilled. She orders Moiraine to close the gate. Moiraine won't do it, so Siuan forces her but using the oath Moiraine swore on the oathrod to obey the Amyrlin Seat. Moiraine closes the gate and is upset that Siuan would use her oath against her.

Lanfear arrives and tosses Siuan to the side, hurting her badly. Lan moves to defend Moiraine and he is also tossed to the side. Lanfer moves to attack Moiraine and Rand stops her. He says Lanfear won't touch the Aes Sedai if she wants his help. Lanfear says he grows to be more like Lews every day. Lanfear opens the gate. Siuan watches from the ground, calling out to Moiraine. Lan also calls to Moiraine and the four of them enter the waygate.

Summary:	Fate leads Rand and the others to an inevitable showdown with their most formidable enemies yet.

The episode starts with a flashback. 3000 years ago, the day that Lews Therin put Ishamael in his prison. Ishamael wanted to break the wheel so he wouldn't have to live his life again. Lews had other ideas about the wheel and sealed all of the Forsaken in their prisons. All Ishamael wanted was to die, but Lews won't kill him. And the wheel keeps turning.

We knew we were headed into a battle in the finale. But we didn't know the White Cloaks would be the first to strike. Led by Geofram Borhald, the White Cloaks' objective is to take out the damane at the tower. Only Dain is concerned with the prophecy about Falme and the Dragon Reborn. In Falme's greatest time of need, the Dragon will return. Above the watcher shall the Dragon be proclaimed, bannered across the sky in fire. Geofram says prophecies are just lies of dead witches.

Lanfear leads the group to a waygate. She pushes only Moiraine and Lan through the gate, telling Moiraine to throw up the banner when the time comes. Rand is upset with her, but she knows a faster way to Falme. He has no choice but to trust her. Once in Falme, Lanfear informs Ishamael that Rand is in Falme. He gets upset because he's not ready. They need Rand to choose them, but Ishamael needs more time to prepare. Lanfear also told Rand she would help him kill Ishamael, revealing her betrayal. They sit quietly together, looking at five large, round sculptures in the room.

Nynaeve and Elayne use the a'dam and cuff to get answers about Egwene's whereabouts. Their damane is Seta. She tells them that the damane wil be moved to the top of the tower to fight the White Cloaks. She is also seriously embarrassed that she was collared and begs Nynaeve not to make her go to the tower. Nyneave seems to enjoy the power of the cuff. She says she can feel Seta in her mind. She says it's like a bundle of sensations and all she has to do is push. Nynaeve makes Seta lead them to the tower, through all of the fighting going on in the streets.

High Lady Suroth sends the damane to the tower. Renna warns Egwene not to disobey her or she will lose her tongue. Egwene immediately disobeys before they even leave her cell. Renna cuts off her braid instead.

Ishamael changes up his plans. He sends Paden Fain to turn Mat to the Dark with the ruby hilted dagger from Shadar Logoth. Mat says he won't touch it. Paden leaves him in the room alone to tempt him into touching the dagger, releasing his darkness. Mat is clever though. Mat tears a piece of the bed frame and moves the dagger to the floor. Then he takes a piece of cloth and wraps it around the dagger and pole, making a spear. All the while, never touching the dagger. Then he uses the dagger to burn the lock on the door and escape. Paden is waiting for him, but gets scared when he realizes Mat didn't touch the dagger. He runs away as Mat fights off the Seanchan.

Lan and Moiraine end up on the beach near Falme. They make up and Moiraine lets Lan back in, strengthening their bond. They discuss the Forsaken. Moiraine says Lanfear, Ishamael and Lews Therin were inseparable before the War of Power. They were best friends. Lan thinks it sounds a lot like the kids from the Two Rivers. They come to realize that Lanfear sent them there for a reason.

Perrin with the Aiel, Aviendha, Bain and Chiad make their way to Falme. They see smoke approaching and know the day is going to be long. Perrin tells Hopper to stay behind because the city isn't safe. Perrin finds Loial and Ingtar as the fight reaches them. Loial has the Horn of Valere and he wants to find Egwene. Ingtar tries to fight off the Seanchan so the others can get away and ends up getting killed.

Rand sees Egwene being led to the tower and follows her. Egwene and the other damane are positioned at the edge of the tower so they can see their targets. Renna gets annoyed that Egwene won't attack. Egwene sees the White Cloaks and targets their position. She stops when she sees the White Cloaks helping the injured. Renna get angry and pulls Egwene to the center of the roof to punish her in front of the other Sul'dam.

Rand runs into High Lord Turak and his guards. He is greatly outnumbered but channels the One Power to kill them all at once. Rand enters the tower and makes his way to the top. Meanwhile Lanfear finds Bayle Domon he is stealing gold from the market. She tells him that she has six cuendillars, fully intact. She asks Domon to take them to the sea and dump them in the deepest part. They make plans to meet up later that night.

High Lady Suroth is eager to get involved in the battle. She informs Ishamael that Turak is dead. He sends her to her boat, with the strongest damane they have. He tells her to wait beneath the tower for his signal.

Nynaeve, Elyane and Seta walk through the city towards the tower. They get to the stairs that lead to the tower and something hits the tower. The white cloaks start attacking the tower with large boulders. One of them hits the top of the tower where Renna is about to punish Egwene. Geofram orders their archers to attack and rally the townspeople to fight with them.Seta leads Nynaeve and Elayne up the stairs, but a white cloak kills Seta. The bond with Nynaeve is disconnected and her cuff falls off. The archer shoots again and hits Elayne in the leg.

Egwene wakes up from the attack and sees a lot of Sul'dam and damanes are dead. Maigan Sedai is one of them. Her a'dam fell off her neck when she died and lies next to Egwene. Renna climbs out of the rubble and faces Egwene. Renna blames Egwene for the Sul'dam's demise on the tower and starts to hurt Egwene. When she stops the pain, Egwene stands up quickly, placing the a'dam on Renna's neck. Renna laughs and calls her stupid, saying the a'dam only works on women who can channel. Egwene knows that. The a'dam collars Renna.

Egwene figured out that the Sul'dam were able to see the damane's weave, meaning they were born with power too, but weaker. Renna tries to hit Egwene, but the cuff stops her and she falls to the ground in pain. Egwene reminds her of the first rule. She cannot hurt her Sul'dam. Egwene says the only way Renna is getting out of the collar is if she lets her out. First Renna has to release Egwene.

Egwene throws Renna against a pillar and chokes her. Renna says Egwene is still her damane. She will feel what Renna feels. If Renna dies, Egween will die too. Egwene chokes her until Renna removes her cuff, releasing the a'dam from Egwene's neck. Renna tries to plead for her life, but Egwene chokes her to death. She falls to the ground, exhausted and Rand walks up behind her, calling to her.

Perrin leads Loial and the Aiel through the city. He stops because he senses someone coming. Mat runs out of the smoke and straight into Perrin's arms. The Seanchan are right behind Mat so they have to run. Perrin, Mat and Loial get to the tower. They know Egwene is up there. Mat tells Perin that Rand will be there too. Loial says they have to get the horn to Rand, but they can't open the box. Mat takes the dagger and uses it to burn the box open. He takes out the horn as the Seanchan arrive. Perrin and Loial fight them off so Mat can run to Rand.

Egwene is shocked to see Rand. He apologizes for not telling her. Ishamael appears and they go on the defensive. The Forsaken One throws Egwene to the side as the High Lady Suroth's damanes throw a shield on Rand from below the tower. She tells her damane to hold the shield until they see the signal and then they will gentle the Dragon.

Ishamael tries to convince Rand that they've done this before. Rand says he is not Lew Therin though. So Ishamael blames Rand for Egwene's situation, saying he abandoned her and made her a killer. And if Rand keeps fighting, he will turn all of his friends to the Dark, just like he did in his last life.

In the city below, the White Cloaks start to fight alongside Perrin and Loial until Eamon Valda sees Perrin. He attacks Perrin, determined to find out what he is. Hopper runs in and attacks Valda, but Geoform hits the wolf with an ax, killing him. The fight moves without Perrin as he sees Hopper's spirit leave his body. Perrin gets angry, picks up an ax and runs toward the fight. He finds the White Cloak commander and Perrin swings his ax into Geoform's chest.

Mat is stopped by a troupe of Seanchan. He looks at the horn and decides to blow it. Time slows down for everyone but Mat. The Heroes of the Horn appear behind Mat. He says he remembers that he is a Hero of the Horn. One of them is a Sheinaran, Uno, the one who died at Atuan's Mill. They all raise their weapons as Mat yells something in another language. The fight begins and the Heroes are much faster and stronger than the Seanchan. Mat flies through them, becoming an amazing fighter all of a sudden.

Dain sees Perrin kill his father and rushes at him. Loial pulls Perrin out of the fight. Uno jumps down from the Tower and throws Dain back. The White Cloaks grab Dain and drag him away. Perrin and Loial are shocked. Uno tells them not to be surprised that he's a Hero of the Horn and hands Perrin a shield. Loial tells him to run to Rand as Uno fights off the Seanchan.

Nynaeve has to push the arrow through Elayne's leg to get it out. Elayne tells Nynaeve to leave her behind, but Nynaeve isn't sure she can channel. Egwene will need her when they get to her.

Ishamael asks Rand to join them and Rand refuses, saying he will never serve the Dark One. While Ishamael tries to convince Rand that he is exactly like Lews Therin, Mat sneaks up behind him. Mat throws his spear at Ishamael and the Forsaken One disappears. The dagger hits Rand in the stomach. Mat rushes to him, apologizing for hurting his friend. Ishamael starts to channel and steps toward Rand, but Egwene blocks his attack with a powerful shield. Ishamael is surprised that he can't penetrate her shield so he keeps throwing fireballs at her.

Moiraine can see the shield coming from the boats, but is unsure who it is shielding. She thinks it's Rand and wants to attack the ship to break it. Lan warns her that the people on the boat could be innocent. Moiraine says she will let a thousand people die if it means Rand will live. They hear the Seanchan running toward them. Lan prepares to Moiraine while she channels the One Power.

Egwene is getting weak when Perrin shows up with his shield. He protects her while she protects Rand. Elayne sits next to Rand and starts to heal his wound, leaving a strange scar behind. After Rand is healed, Mat tells him to do something, but he can't because he's still shielded.

Moiraine channels all of her power and throws it at the ships in the water, hitting the damanes first. The shield is lifted and Rand stands up. He takes his sword and walks toward Ishamael, stabbing him in the heart. Ishamael falls to the ground. He says it's beautiful and asks if Lews sees it. Rand asks what he sees. Ishamael turns to ash and says he sees nothing. Moiraine destroys every boat in the water except for a few that retreat. Moiraine recites the prophecy and raises the banner of fire in the form of a dragon. The dragon of fire flies around the tower, stopping at the top. The people of Falme begin cheering and the bells toll.

Rand walks to the edge of the tower and looks down, proclaiming himself the Dragon Reborn. The Aiels look up at him and Aviendha calls Rand, Car'a'carn, chief. The Heroes of the Horn disappear. Lanfear stands with the people, smiling. Egwene, Perrin, Mat, and Nynaeve stand next to Rand on top of the tower.

After the celebration, Lanfear returns to Ishamael's room for the cuendillars. She finds them all broken and Moghedien sitting in the middle of the room, whispering, "softly, softly, in the shadows." Moghedien says Ishamael released all of them because he had suspicions that Lanfear would betray him. Lanfear asks where the others are and tries to attack, but Moghedien is quicker.

Moghedien says Lanfear and Ishamael were always too close to the Dragon. But the rest of them aren't. She reminds Lanfear of how she thought Moghedien was too cautious and afraid. Lanfear warns her that she doesn't want to fight her. Moghedien says it's not a fight, but a warning. She tells Lanfear to stay away from Rand. He's theirs now. All five of them are theirs. Moghedien tightens her web on Lanfear before disappearing and releasing her.
